We have been looking at reducing liability and insurance requirements, which was mentioned by some Members, by making them proportionate to the risks associated with the contract. CPD now sets modest levels of professional indemnity insurance for architects and engineers, and it limits their liability. We promote prompt payment and fair conditions of contract for construction subcontractors by putting monitoring and reporting arrangements in place in main contracts. Those measures will be further enhanced as CPD rolls out project bank accounts.

The changes are being applied across government, and the benefits are beginning to be felt. Since the new procedures were introduced for low-value procurements, CPD has reduced the time taken to tender and award contracts. We will continue to monitor the impacts to ensure that benefits are achieved for SMEs and social economy enterprises.

Contrary to perceptions, local businesses win the majority of public procurement contracts in Northern Ireland. Of course, not every business wins every contract that it tenders for. We need to distinguish between legitimate criticisms and those voiced by people who have not won contracts. In 2011-12, 78.5% of all supplies and services contracts awarded by centres of procurement expertise went to businesses based in Northern Ireland. For construction contracts, the figure was significantly higher at 96%. Some 80% of all contracts awarded by COPEs in 2011-12 were awarded to SMEs, and 60% of all contracts were awarded to businesses with fewer than 50 employees. Those are pretty impressive statistics. The figures are on a par with those in Scotland and Wales, where it is only 60%, and are substantially ahead of the position in England, where it has been reported that, in 2012-13, only 10.5% of direct spend was with SMEs. Northern Ireland firms are also doing better when it comes to getting work in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. In the past weeks, I have met firms that are building harbours, airports or rapid transit systems elsewhere in the United Kingdom. That shows that the work that we do here and that we procure through the public sector in Northern Ireland can benefit our companies, as and when they bid for work across the water or down South, where Northern Ireland firms tend to do much better than those in the Republic of Ireland when bidding for work in Northern Ireland.

That brings me to the next area of criticism, which is that everyone else is better at public procurement than we are in Northern Ireland. The motion refers specifically to what is being done in the other devolved regions. Northern Ireland has been at the forefront of public procurement developments in the UK. The structures set up by the Executive in 2002 to deliver public procurement have now been followed, to varying degrees, by the other devolved Administrations. The strategic approach adopted by the Executive has been endorsed by public procurement reviews in Scotland and Wales, which have recommended similar governance arrangements. Likewise, Northern Ireland has been in the vanguard with measures to promote SME participation and deliver community benefits from public procurement. We have led the way in the construction sector, where CPD has worked very closely with the construction industry to implement key initiatives. CPD is spearheading work on project bank accounts, which will be an important mechanism to speed up and protect payments to key subcontractors on relevant contracts. That is in advance of anything being done in the other devolved regions. Indeed, representatives from the Scottish Government have been in contact with CPD to learn more about what we do here in Northern Ireland.

3.45 pm

The Welsh Government recently established its National Procurement Service to coordinate the purchasing of common goods and services across the public sector. Given that Northern Ireland already has structures in place to enable collaboration, CPD assisted Wales in the establishment of that new service.

In Northern Ireland, a revised strategy for collaboration across those bodies, subject to public procurement policy, was approved by the procurement board in June. Following on from that, CPD intends to publish a pipeline of forthcoming collaborative arrangements early in 2014. Supplier information sessions will also be held well in advance of any collaborative procurement competitions. That will allow suppliers to discuss directly with buyers the forthcoming opportunities.

Members may also be aware that the Cabinet Office recently launched a consultation on the creation of an SME-friendly single market for public procurement. The consultation considers changes in three areas: pre-qualification, transparency, and payment and financial practices. We will look in more detail at the proposed reforms, but a preliminary analysis indicates that, in the main, those measures are already in place in Northern Ireland. I assure the Assembly that there is no major initiative being taken forward by the Cabinet Office or the other devolved Administrations that is not being addressed here in Northern Ireland.

I turn now to the criticism that the Government are not open for business when it comes to fostering innovative approaches through procurement. On the contrary, we recognise that the buying power of the public sector has a major role to play in stimulating companies to develop new innovative solutions. Those developments will allow companies to secure a competitive advantage in the marketplace.

We have seen some examples in Northern Ireland of the small business research initiative, which was referred to by Mr Ross, being used to help firms to develop solutions to particular problems. I am pleased to say that Northern Ireland was the first devolved Administration to run an SBRI competition — for mobile phone apps for the Northern Ireland Tourist Board — and that we have a major project under way to develop a sustainable solution for the disposal of poultry litter. However, one or two projects is not enough. I want to see many more projects coming forward. The Executive have now put in place funding for a team of innovative procurement executives, including one in CPD. Those officials will work with Departments and companies to increase the number of SBRI competitions run by public bodies. I will look to my Executive colleagues to help to reinforce this in their Department.

The last area of criticism that I want to touch on is the management of infrastructure investment. Given its importance to the economy of Northern Ireland, we need to ensure that we have efficient and effective systems in place for the delivery of that investment. Although procurement is a key part of that process, the delivery of infrastructure is about much more than that. That is why my officials have been working with the Strategic Investment Board to commission a review of the whole delivery system. The aim of that review is to produce proposals that will ensure that the commissioning, planning, procurement and delivery of major infrastructure result in value-for-money projects.

Before I close, I want to address the amendment. My Department has looked in detail at whether the payment of a living wage to a contractor's employees could be made a condition of public contracts. However, it concluded that any requirement to pay employees at a level above the national minimum wage would contravene European legislation. That is in accordance with advice that the Scottish Government received directly from the European Commission. Contracting authorities can encourage contractors to pay a living wage, but that cannot be taken into account when awarding contracts. Although I have some sympathy with the points that the Member made, there would be incredible difficulties in implementing that measure.

SMEs and SEEs are the lifeblood of our local economy. Over the years, my Department, with the endorsement of the procurement board, has taken forward a range of actions to support them. In implementing the programme, it has worked closely with industry, business and social economy representatives, and I am grateful for their constructive engagement. My Department will continue to focus on removing barriers to SME participation, simplifying the procurement process and standardising our engagement with suppliers.

This has been a useful debate, certainly when I was here. I thank Members for their questions and views on this key area of activity for the Executive. I will echo my predecessor's view and say that I, too, have an open door. If anybody has issues with procurement, please feel free to bring them to me. If there are things that we can do to resolve those problems, we will.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Before I call Mr Steven Agnew to wind on the amendment, I apologise for having interrupted him and thank him for facilitating me in calling the Minister to respond to the debate.

Mr Agnew: I appreciate the apology and accept it wholeheartedly.

We talk a lot in the Chamber about social issues and social problems. We talk about their symptoms, but we very rarely talk about the structural causes of some of them. In-work poverty is a huge issue in our society, and, indeed, the number of people on low pay has increased throughout the past 30 years as a proportion of our working population. That is something that needs to be addressed structurally. It cannot simply be fixed by government programmes, which, in some cases, ask the community and voluntary sector to mop up some of the problems that our economic policies have created.

We have to tackle those structural issues, and although we have some restrictions in Northern Ireland with the availability of economic levers, I believe that, in public procurement, there is a real opportunity to use public resources not just to create employment but to go further and guarantee a basic living wage for all those employed through government contracts.

The other issue related to that, and which continues, is the inequality between the genders in pay rates. I mentioned in my opening remarks that the majority of those in low pay — something like two thirds of those working below the living wage — are women. Again, that is a social issue that we could help to begin to address through a policy such as this. We need to grasp the structural issues that lock poverty and inequality within our economic system and start to reverse some of those harms. [Interruption.]

I will briefly address some of the comments that have been made. Mr Weir described this as well-intentioned but unworkable. However, we see, in England, that this is being worked by no less than the Greater London Authority. While the debate stood suspended, I saw a comment on Twitter that my proposal was somehow “economically illiterate”. Last I heard, the London city economy was doing OK. It has not collapsed due to the living wage. Just as we had with the minimum wage, there will be a certain amount of scaremongering. However, I understand that both the Labour Party and the Conservative Party are making noises that this is something that they would implement. For Northern Ireland to make a first step to move our economy onto that footing may well help to prepare us for the changes that lie ahead.

I could not understand Mr Weir’s point about competitive disadvantage to local businesses. In fact, this provision would have completely the opposite effect. By requiring a living wage to be paid by those who engage in government contracts, we would help local businesses, which tend to pay more than some foreign companies that can access cheaper labour. So, it would do the opposite of creating competitive disadvantage; it would tackle some of the competitive disadvantages that we face.

Ms Cochrane called it “aspirational”. Again, I would say that it is a worthy aspiration, but it is something that authorities in England have taken on. It does not have to be an aspiration; it can be achieved. She also raised the point, and I think that it is a valid one, about whether this would make it more difficult for SMEs. I propose — and, again, this is being done by local authorities in England — that, as with regional contracts with the Treasury, benefits to the Treasury could be reinvested in Northern Ireland to support SMEs and to enable them to tender for government contracts.

I will just mention briefly the Minister’s comments that the advice to the Scottish Government was that it was unworkable. I am not sure what their exact proposals were, but I point to the Greater London Authority and to the answers received by my colleague in the European Parliament, Jean Lambert, from the European Commission, which very clearly state that, within certain conditions, this type of public procurement policy is legal and within EU law.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Agnew: I am happy to provide those to the Minister, and I hope that this is something that he and his Department will explore further.

Mr Cree: It gives me great pleasure to be able to make a winding-up speech for what has been an important debate today. Indeed, it is the first debate on the economy in the new Assembly term.

As MLAs, we should all have a particular interest in the topic, due to its significance to an economic recovery. Public procurement, if taken correctly, can help to positively address the unemployment that is so prevalent, particularly among our young people aged between 18 and 24. It can help to address the high levels of economic inactivity in the economy, and it can help our struggling construction sector through investment in infrastructure. The Ulster Unionist Party has, of course, been vocal in its support for increased infrastructure, particularly through the provision of sufficient funding to the Minister for Regional Development to advance road projects such as the A26. I was told to mention that.

Many Members outlined the scale of public procurement in financial terms. It amounts to £3 billion per annum, when local councils are included. That is a very high figure, and it is important that we ensure delivery in the most effective way.

Before giving some consideration to what other Members said, I want to raise a few issues, the first of which is subcontracting. The motion mentions specific “criticisms of the current system”. All too often, I find that the practice of subcontracting comes under that banner. Those in the constituency of North Antrim were all too aware of that recently, with the news that Ballymena-based Patton had gone into administration. Patton Group Ltd was a family-run business that was established some 100 years ago and that employed over 300 members of staff. The effect of that company going into administration was felt by banks, suppliers and contractors across that constituency and, indeed, the whole of Northern Ireland. A group of subcontractors who said that they were owed about £17 million by Patton asked the Executive for a rescue package to help them. That was not possible. That is an area that we must get to grips with, because there must be sufficient protection for those subcontractors.

Project bank accounts were introduced in January of this year, and government construction contracts were awarded by the Central Procurement Directorate on behalf of Departments. The Minister already referred to those. The intention of that new payment method is to help to safeguard subcontractor payments in many government construction contracts. That is a welcome move, but its success can be judged only over time, and it must be evaluated and, if necessary, improved upon.

Clearly, there is also more work to be done to understand the methods and procedures best designed to prevent poor performing suppliers and to ensure compliance to procurement.

I will move now to the social economy. Similar to other Members, I want to consider access to the public procurement market for the social economy. Social enterprises, such as Bryson Charitable Group, undertake some excellent work and reinvest profits back into the community. It must be remembered that the social economy can flourish during economic hardship by reaching those who are most in need and bringing about positive social change. That is something that we should get behind and support as much as possible. We should be an enabling government for that sector.

Due to the fact that public procurement is the spending of public money, I believe that it must achieve more than the purchasing of a service and, as such, should require tendering organisations to demonstrate how that spend can maximise local social impact. On that note, Northern Ireland is currently the only region of the UK that will not be covered by the recently introduced Public Services (Social Value) Act 2012, as Scotland will be introducing its own version. I believe that the Executive should be looking at our own version of that legislation, which places a duty on public bodies to consider social value ahead of procurement.

It has also been said to me that many procurement exercises are driven primarily by price competition. That often results in a race to the bottom, and, by providing marginal profit level, it increases the risk of failure, as seen in the Housing Executive maintenance contracts. We must guard against such an approach to public procurement and get that balance right. The case remains that the public procurement process is frequently lengthy and excessively costly. That has a consequence of significantly reducing the level of competition, with many social enterprises finding the cost of bidding to be prohibitive.

Lastly, on the area of social enterprise, pre-qualification criteria are important and must be appropriate. In particular, they must not act as a barrier or lockout to social enterprises or, for that matter, SMEs.

4.00 pm

I will now deal quickly with the review of public administration. With the review imminent, we must ensure that there is consistency in practice across Departments. It is the case that some councils do procurement better than others. The introduction of a new council model should present an opportunity to standardise approaches across the board to a sufficiently high level.

I will quickly summarise some of the issues raised by other Members. I was pleased to listen to the Minister. He contributed significantly to the debate and was very impressive on his first outing. I hope that that keeps up, Minister. I appreciate the DUP's support for our motion.

Mrs Overend made it clear that we need more in-depth statistics to give a proper outline of our performance. She reiterated that the Ulster Unionist Party is unapologetically pro-indigenous business in its approach to public procurement.

Sinn Féin has been vocal on this matter in the past through its chairmanship of the Committee for Finance and Personnel and in motions in the Chamber. It is apparently behind increased access for the social economy, and we can certainly agree on that point. However, I was rather amused by Mr Flanagan's comment that civil servants could do much of the work themselves. I look forward to work being done in that particular theatre.

The SDLP, I believe, was supportive, as was the Alliance Party. I congratulate Judith Cochrane for highlighting the importance of productivity in the whole exercise. That is a very important issue, which had in fact been overlooked up to that point.

Mr Agnew made his points in his usual fashion. All that I will say is that he continues to demonstrate a lack of business experience. I am afraid that we cannot support his amendment.

I call on all Members to support the Ulster Unionist motion, which places SMEs and the social economy at the heart of our thinking and holds the Minister of Finance and Personnel to account in his plans for public sector reform.

Question, That the amendment be made, put and negatived.

Main Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That this Assembly notes that the procurement of goods, services and infrastructure projects is a key driver of the economy; further notes the ongoing work in other devolved regions in this area; and calls on the Minister of Finance and Personnel to take action to address the criticisms of the current system and to ensure that there is sufficient access for small and medium-sized enterprises, as well as the social economy, to public procurement opportunities.

Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Further Provisions and Support for Victims) Bill: Second Stage

Debate [suspended on 23 September 2013] resumed on motion:

That the Second Stage of the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Further Provisions and Support for Victims) Bill [NIA 26/11-15] be agreed. — [Lord Morrow.]

Mr Deputy Speaker: We now continue with the Second Stage of the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Further Provisions and Support for Victims) Bill. I call the Minister of Justice, Mr David Ford, to respond to yesterday's debate.

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I am grateful for this opportunity to contribute and respond to the points that were made in the debate, to set out the work that is being done by my Department and to explain my position on aspects of the Bill. The debate is on the principles of the Bill, but I will need to examine the potential effects of some clauses.

There is no doubt that there is significant public concern about the horrendous crime of human trafficking. That concern features in letters and e-mails that I have received, in lobbying from NGOs and faith groups, in invitations to speak and in requests for meetings. I am assured that there is total unanimity in the House, which is representative of our society, that we wish to do all that we can to put an end to trafficking.

Members from all sides have spoken as one in condemnation of the perpetrators of that crime and of the determination to drive it from our shores. I agree that our legislation should afford no foothold whatsoever for these criminals, and actions in the Department of Justice since devolution demonstrate that.

However, that should come as no surprise.

In the early 1790s, Liverpool and Bristol were developing as slave ports, rich on the proceeds of the triangle of trade that involved taking slaves from Africa to the Americas. Belfast stood against that and did not allow slave vessels into its port. Our stance against trafficking today is in the tradition of those who became the United Irishmen and of Wilberforce, whose campaign ended legal slavery in Britain.

(Mr Principal Deputy Speaker [Mr Mitchel McLaughlin] in the Chair)

Therefore, as a point of principle, we stand united, all of us in this House. Human trafficking — in other words, slavery — is an abomination in any of the forms it takes. It devastates the lives of individuals and families, seeking to reduce human beings to mere commodities. I am wholly committed, as are the many officials in my Department who play a part in the fight against this crime, to ensure that the steps we take to eradicate the crime, to punish the perpetrators and to protect and care for the victims are as robust as possible. I reject claims by some Members that my officials are opposed to doing all we can to fight trafficking.

At times yesterday, some unionist Members criticised me for not doing enough, while others appeared to suggest that the Bill was needed because the next Minister of Justice might reverse my good work. I am not sure if that was supposed to be a compliment. However, in my time as Minister, I have already taken significant steps to make sure that effective anti-trafficking measures are operating across Northern Ireland.

The hidden nature of human trafficking is such that it requires a concerted, joined-up response if we are to tackle it effectively. I recognise and acknowledge the role of others in helping to stamp out trafficking. That is why I have established an engagement group that brings together civil society organisations, alongside government, because together we are stronger. Similarly, the Organised Crime Task Force provides a forum where statutory bodies can come together with law enforcement agencies to share best practice and to provide a coordinated, joined-up response to human trafficking. There is a specific subgroup for human trafficking, which is led by the police. Furthermore, the issue of human trafficking features at North/South meetings of the Intergovernmental Agreement (IGA) at both ministerial and official level, and at trilaterals with both the Irish and Scottish Governments. Indeed, I probably have never met Alan Shatter when we did not discuss the topic of human trafficking.

Members will recall that in May of this year, I published the first human trafficking action plan for Northern Ireland, which set out a challenging programme of work that my Department is taking forward in partnership with others. That plan has identified a number of priority areas for action that we have focused on, covering all aspects of trafficking and not just the sex trade. I believe that good progress is being made.

Clearly, prevention is a key element of our strategic response to human trafficking, and considerable work has already been taken forward to raise awareness of the issue. In particular, the Department of Justice has provided support to general public campaigns, such as Blue Blindfold and the Crimestoppers forced labour campaign, which ran earlier this year.

Last month, I also launched an educational resource pack on human trafficking that will allow teachers in Northern Ireland to explore the issue with the young people in their care; to raise awareness; promote active citizenship; and, crucially, to help young people to develop the tools and awareness to keep them safe and to make healthy choices in their own lives. The significant attendance in this Building in August of students and teachers vividly demonstrated the level of public concern and commitment around the issue of trafficking.

I hope to build further on that work with schools and colleges. My Department has invited schools to mark EU anti-trafficking day next month by hosting local events across Northern Ireland to raise awareness of human trafficking. I will visit some of those events, alongside the Minister of Education and the Minister for Employment and Learning. This is just one aspect of the work that my Department is doing with its NGO partners on the human trafficking engagement group to raise awareness, tackle demand and enhance protection for those at risk.

Despite these efforts, we know that there have been cases of human trafficking into Northern Ireland. Since April this year, 13 potential victims have been recovered here and referred into the National Referral Mechanism (NRM). Although the level of referrals from Northern Ireland is lower than in neighbouring jurisdictions, it is unacceptable for any individual to be trafficked, exploited and subjected to such an inhumane crime.

I fully acknowledge my responsibilities in supporting victims of human trafficking, and I am committed to ensuring that they are afforded the protections and interventions that they need. Part of that is about ensuring that victims are informed about their rights and entitlements and are encouraged to seek help. So, earlier this month, I launched a multilingual information leaflet on victims' rights.

Members will also be aware that my Department funds support for potential adult victims of human trafficking during the recovery and reflection period of the NRM process. Prior to the introduction of the Bill, I had signalled my intention to put this support on a statutory footing, and work had commenced to that effect. Therefore, I fully agree with Lord Morrow's intent in clause 10 of the Bill, which would place a similar statutory requirement on the Department with regard to providing support for potential adult victims of human trafficking. However, I question whether primary legislation is the most appropriate vehicle for legislating for this support, particularly given the evolving nature of human trafficking. My assessment is that secondary legislation may provide a more flexible vehicle with which to respond swiftly to the evolving needs of trafficking victims.

Committee Stage will provide a valuable forum within which to debate that issue, and I welcome Lord Morrow's willingness to discuss the details.

On the issue of compensation that is covered in clause 11, guidance has been issued to staff in the Compensation Services on handling claims from trafficking victims, and the contract for support services includes steering victims to advice on securing compensation. My officials are working through the responses to the consultation on funding money damages claims, taking account of the European directive. I am happy to discuss this with Lord Morrow, as I am happy to be in the lead on progressive legislation in these islands.

I also welcome the focus on the needs of victims that clauses 13 and 14 bring to bear. Members will recall that I stated my belief that the arrangements in operation in Northern Ireland are compliant with our requirements under the EU directive. They will also recall that I had previously indicated a reluctance to legislate along similar lines to clause 14, lest that should inadvertently create a hierarchy of victims. Nonetheless, I have watched developments in our neighbouring jurisdictions with interest, and I am aware that the Trafficking People for Exploitation Regulations 2013 made similar provision in respect of England and Wales.

I am anxious to ensure that there is no perception that victims of human trafficking in Northern Ireland are afforded less protection than in other neighbouring jurisdictions. For that reason, I asked my officials to work towards legislating for these measures. Naturally, that work has paused pending the outcome of this Bill. This is another area for discussion with the proposer of the Bill and the Committee.

I share Lord Morrow's concern that those who traffic human beings should be subject to the full force of the law. To this end, training has been identified as a priority by the Organised Crime Task Force. Although I recognise that responsibility for training rests with individual law enforcement agencies, through the Organised Crime Task Force, my Department has been conducting a training needs analysis. That will mean that effective training of the front line professionals who are responsible for investigating, prosecuting or who may come into contact with victims can be taken forward in a coordinated way and that, where there are gaps, those are identified and filled. Last year, I also opened a joint training event for police and social workers, which showed the benefits of that working together.

Members will also recall that, through the Criminal Justice Act 2013, which received Royal Assent in April of this year, we have also created new human trafficking offences. To deal with trafficking in the UK and by British citizens elsewhere, I have ensured that human trafficking offences are now triable only in the Crown Court, rather than the Magistrates' Court, and that they will attract a maximum sentence of 14 years. I believe that that shows the seriousness with which the Department treats this offence. It also means that, if the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) believes that the sentence for any trafficking offence is too lenient, he will be able to refer it to the Court of Appeal.

I recognise that there is more to be done and that we cannot afford to be complacent, but I wholeheartedly refute the charge that my Department has adopted a minimalist approach to this issue and to implementing the EU directive on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings and protecting its victims. That simply is not the case, and the evidence does not support any such claim.

The offences that we created in the Criminal Justice Act 2013 already go further than legislation in England and Wales in implementing the discretionary extra-jurisdictional elements that are set out in article 10 of the directive. Similarly, the support that is provided to potential adult victims by my Department during the 45-day recovery and reflection period goes much further than the minimum 30-day period required under the directive, and may be extended, as required, on a case-by-case basis. As I indicated, I had already signalled my intention to bring forward secondary legislation to put that support onto a statutory footing, which, again, goes beyond the requirements of the directive. As such, I challenge the grounds on which Lord Morrow and others criticised my Department's approach as being a minimalist one.

Indeed, it became rather boring yesterday to hear the constant repetition from the DUP prepared scripts of allegations of a minimalist approach when that is simply not the case. In fairness to Lord Morrow, he had an analysis, one which I do not entirely agree with, and was prepared to acknowledge good work by the Department of Justice. Too many others in the DUP and the UUP just revealed their ignorance.

I made it clear that I am wholly supportive of the motivation and sentiment behind the Bill. However, on a number of occasions, I also argued that many of the provisions of the Bill are covered under existing legislative or administrative provision. That remains my assessment. However, as I acknowledged, the debate surrounding the introduction of the Bill has undoubtedly added to the significant public interest. That is a positive outcome in that it has helped to raise awareness of this issue, to remind people across Northern Ireland to be vigilant and to equip them with the knowledge that they need to recognise and respond to signs of trafficking when they see them.

4.15 pm

Whilst I have some concerns, which I have expressed, about the appropriateness of bringing forward legislation that simply replicates arrangements that are already working well, I recognise that there may also be some advantages, not least in focusing people's awareness of the issues and in sending a strong signal to perpetrators that human trafficking will not be tolerated in Northern Ireland. Proposed legislation in England and Wales will also largely consolidate existing legislation. On that point, let me return to clause 2. I shall spare the blushes of the Member who claimed yesterday — the Member is not in his place — that this clause will mean that the consent of a victim is no longer relevant. That is simply wrong. Consent is not relevant under the current law, and clause 2 is one of those consolidation measures.

Nonetheless, I do have concerns about some of the provisions set out in the Bill and their impact. I have articulated those in detail on a number of occasions, and I am aware that there will be opportunities to explore those in depth at Committee Stage and Consideration Stage. However, I believe that it is my duty to draw the Assembly's attention to a number of those concerns now.

The Bill makes it very clear that one of the central tenets of Lord Morrow's strategy to counter trafficking is the proposal to make it a criminal offence to purchase sexual services from any person, not just from a prostitute subjected to force, as is already the case. The reasons for the proposal were lucidly and carefully explained by the Bill's proposer. He advocated an economic model to underpin his conclusions that criminalisation of the buyer of sex will lead to a reduction in demand for paid sex, and that the fall will force the traffickers to look elsewhere for a destination for their illegal activities.

At this point, I want to make one thing perfectly clear. I have said on numerous occasions, and I meant it, that I will consider the merits of any proposal to halt the crime of human trafficking. I do not need to repeat again my determination to take all possible steps to stop this practice. I share that desire equally with Lord Morrow, and with many other key players from the statutory and voluntary sectors. The only thing that separates us, at this juncture, is the method that we believe will make the most difference.

I have indeed looked carefully at what clause 6 proposes. However, in my judgment, at this stage, there is insufficient evidence to show that criminalising the purchase of sexual services is the best way to proceed in order to reach the shared objective of reducing the numbers trafficked into forced prostitution. At this point, I am concerned about the possibility of unwelcome implications: for example, an increase in problems for vulnerable women involved in prostitution; possible costs in justice terms to the flow of information to the police on trafficked victims; inability to enforce; an increase in crime; and a threat to the safety of those in prostitution.

Let me say again that I am determined to take all necessary action to tackle traffickers. For example, I have already announced that I will bring forward legislation to increase from six months to three years —

Mr Wells: Will the Member give way?

Mr Ford: — the statutory time limit for bringing prosecutions for the offence of buying sex from a prostitute subjected to force.

I will give way.

Mr Wells: The one thing that I hope he cannot accuse me of doing yesterday was speaking from a prepared script. Unfortunately, that is, perhaps, one of my failings. I find it very difficult to speak from a prepared script.

He will note that, during my contribution and those of Lord Morrow, Mr Givan and many others, we referred to the experience of Sweden where there is very clear evidence that making it illegal to purchase sex has resulted in a halving of the number of men doing that in Sweden, making Sweden a very cold house for prostitution and trafficking. Based on that experience, other legislators, such as those in Norway and Iceland, have introduced similar legislation. Those countries are liberal democracies, and you would not expect them to do that, but that has been their experience. Is he prepared to accept that he could be wrong in this? The Committee is going to examine in detail the situation in Sweden. In fact, we are going to Sweden at the invitation of Dr Ekberg to see the situation on the ground. Is he prepared to look at that and review the information from the police authorities and his counterpart in Sweden, and will he be prepared to change his mind?

Mr Ford: I am not sure how many of the points in that speech to respond to. On the key issue, I am making it clear that I do not believe that we have the evidence at this stage. As ever, I approach matters with an open mind and am prepared to consider the evidence. I believe in evidence-based policy making, and I look to see the evidence, and the evidence is not entirely clear in my mind at this stage. Therefore, at this stage, I am not prepared to support a proposal that might not work and that might take risks with the lives and well-being of other vulnerable individuals. None of us knows for sure whether that would happen. However, there is a wide range of opinion and I cannot rule out the concerns of those who think that it may. Nor can I ignore what many of the key stakeholders across the statutory and voluntary sectors are saying. As Justice Minister, I have an obligation to listen to Mr Wells and others, and to consider what all the relevant agencies say to me. The police are not persuaded that this measure will help them to confront traffickers. The prosecution service sees difficulties in successfully evidencing cases. Many of the key voluntary groups also have reservations, which were spelled out to me in meetings over the summer. As Justice Minister, I cannot ignore those voices either.

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to the Minister for giving way. The only advantage of the Bill that the Minister has highlighted so far is that it raises public awareness. Is that enough to let the Bill proceed?

Mr Ford: Raising public awareness and consolidating legislation is seen as beneficial in at least one other jurisdiction in the UK, so it is an issue that has to be taken account of. If we were to do a clause-by-clause analysis, the Member may find that, although I have significant reservations about a number of clauses, I have no reservations that could not be dealt with by a Committee Stage amendment to a majority of them. Of course, one and a half clauses are the responsibility of the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

A look at the evidence base presented by Lord Morrow, and just enunciated by Mr Wells, shows that the proposal relies solely on evidence garnered from Sweden. However, there is a danger that the proponents of the Bill are mixing up two distinct and wholly different required outcomes: first, a reduction in human trafficking; and, secondly, the elimination of prostitution. Let us remember that Sweden introduced its laws to eliminate prostitution as a gender equality measure, not as a challenge to human trafficking.

In comments from, I think, Mr Wilson, in an exchange with one of his colleagues, the suggestion was that the current level of prostitution in Sweden, despite its claimed successes, is about the same as what is supposed to be the statistic in Ireland. That raises questions about effectiveness and that is why we need to get the proper evidence. I am wholly supportive of the aim of reducing trafficking, but I disagree at this stage on how we can achieve that.

On eliminating prostitution, there has not been proper consultation and informed debate. I can confidently say that, in the three and a half years since the devolution of justice, I can recall no issues raised with the Department by any body or elected representative, reporting public concerns with the failure of the criminal law to manage and regulate prostitution. In other words, eliminating prostitution has never been the topic of a public policy debate until now.

The plain truth is that none of us knows for sure what the consequences would be in Northern Ireland of criminalising paying for sexual services. Some have argued that they do know, because prostitution and its framework is effectively the same in all European countries and beyond. I do not accept that, nor do I think that the Assembly would want to accept legislative change without examining the basis in this jurisdiction for making that change. Is that not what devolution is supposed to be for?

My officials recently gave evidence to the Justice Committee on the Department's position on the Bill. They were asked why the Department had taken no action until now to gather information on prostitution, so let me deal with that.

I published a research paper in 2011 about factors contributing to women becoming involved in prostitution and looking at best practice as we dealt with those issues. That paper contributed to the Department's strategy to manage women offenders and those vulnerable to offending behaviour.

Much work has also been done to address the collection of data about human trafficking. There has not, however, until now, been a policy debate about the elimination of prostitution. There has not, therefore, until now, been a pressing need to obtain the data on the basis of which to take such decisions. That is why I announced my intention to commission further detailed research into prostitution in Northern Ireland. We need that research to provide a more credible evidence base on which to take decisions about the criminal law on prostitution.

We need to be able to make informed decisions on the basis of not just the extent but the nature of prostitution in Northern Ireland, and we need to collect all relevant points of view. If that takes a bit more time, surely that is time worth spending to ensure that we take the right path.

Mr B McCrea: I am grateful to the Minister for giving way. I am also grateful that he will undertake research, which is to be welcomed.

Will the research that his Department undertakes forensically examine lessons from the Swedish model? Will it be able to analyse whether there is some basis to support it?

Mr Ford: I assure the Member that we will look in the widest possible way at prostitution as it applies to Northern Ireland and at lessons from elsewhere. I offered to share the precise details of that with the Justice Committee as they are developed. I will also happily write to the Member about it at that time.

Mr Givan: I thank the Minister for giving way. First, will he answer a question on an issue that many of us struggle to understand, which is why the research was commissioned only in the summertime, around August, when the private Member's Bill had been published a year previously. Could the Minister not have started that research, if he felt that it was necessary, at that point? Secondly, while I am on my feet, perhaps he could answer this question: does he regard prostitution as a valid form of work? Either you do and you then support the fact that those who are involved in that work have a higher mortality rate and worse health outcomes than the rest of the population, or you do not. That principle would then determine whether you support clause 6.

Mr Ford: The Member talks about the Bill having been around for over a year; my understanding is that we had only a draft, which has changed substantially over the past year. It was only when the Bill formally became a published Bill in the Assembly that we were entirely sure of the contents that would be presented to the Assembly.

As to whether prostitution is a valid career choice — I think that that was the term used — and, therefore, clause 6 depends on one's attitude to that, I do not think that that is an accurate way of representing the arguments. One could well feel that one would wish to see prostitution eliminated but not necessarily believe that this specific proposal for criminalising the purchase at this point is the best way to proceed. That is why we need proper evidence. If that evidence takes a bit more time, surely it is worth spending that time to ensure that we get the right legislation and we get Northern Ireland on the right path. Although some Members have suggested otherwise in the debate, I believe that there will be more opportunities for legislation in this Assembly mandate if that is the way in which the Assembly wishes to go.

Mr McNarry: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Ford: Yes.

Mr McNarry: I just want to take the Minister up to see how we could pursue the thought lines that he is developing on research. Is it possible that research is being sought to position, some time early in the agenda, legalising what is commonly known as prostitution? Will he want legislation included for that in the debate and research?

Mr Ford: As I said, the purpose of the research is to establish the extent and nature of prostitution in Northern Ireland; it is not to put out any proposals. It is to establish what the situation is. We can then develop proposals on whether legislation is appropriate or necessary and how we would go about it. I have this funny notion that you commission research because you want to find out what is happening, not because you have a preconceived outcome. I know that that might be unusual for some people, but that is the way in which we try to operate in the DOJ. That is why I believe that, at this stage, clause 6 should not stand part of the Bill.

I want to discuss other significant concerns that I have about the proposals concerning trafficking issues in the Bill. Clause 8 would provide blanket immunity from prosecution for victims of human trafficking where they have been compelled to commit a criminal act. I recognise the intent behind that proposal, and I share Lord Morrow's concern that victims of human trafficking should not be unfairly penalised. The EU directive makes it clear that authorities should have discretion not to prosecute in cases in which there is evidence that a victim of human trafficking has committed an offence as a direct result of having been trafficked and coerced. I am satisfied that the arrangements in Northern Ireland under which prosecutors have the discretion not to prosecute when that is considered to be in the public interest are consistent with that requirement. In offering blanket immunity from prosecution for all victims of human trafficking, clause 8 goes well beyond the requirements of the directive. I do not believe that it is a proportionate response. It would impede the Director of Public Prosecutions' ability to discharge his statutory obligations under the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002.

4.30 pm

I have concerns that the clause could disadvantage other victims of crime and have the unintended effect of creating a hierarchy of victims, whereby trafficking victims who have carried out offences are immune from prosecution, regardless of the seriousness of their crimes or of the views and needs of any victims of their crime. Consider, for example, a trafficked victim who may have risen to a position of power or trust in a crime group and, in turn, become involved in trafficking and exploiting other victims. Clearly, such cases need to be considered in light of their specific circumstances and the seriousness of the offences committed. Under existing arrangements, prosecutors are obliged to apply the test for prosecution, including whether prosecution would be in the public interest. In doing so, they are able to consider the specific circumstances of each case, including whether any mitigating factors exist.

I must say that that was all brought home to me by the play 'Diablo', written by Patricia Downey and performed by the Spanner in the Works Theatre Company, and its five characters. The play was a very powerful statement when my wife and I saw it at the Lyric Theatre; it was even more powerful when we saw it performed in a terraced house in Rathgar Street off the Lisburn Road, possibly because I lived just down Rathgar Street as a student. Of the five characters, one was clearly 100% guilty, as he was, effectively, the mafia godfather; two — a woman who was there in domestic servitude and whose kidney had been forcibly removed and a girl who was brought in and subjected to rape and sexual exploitation — were clearly victims; but the other two characters were Belfast people who had started off as victims but had become complicit in the work of the gang. It is a test to be applied in each individual case: the balance between their victimhood and their responsibility for other crimes. That is why I do not accept that there should be blanket immunity. Clause 8 goes too far and would remove the scope that prosecutors need to exercise discretion in the public interest. That is the kind of issue that, I think, needs to be teased out at Committee Stage.

I am also concerned that clause 4 and the statutory aggravating factors provided for in clause 3 could fetter the discretion of judges, who, I believe, are best placed to consider the broad scope of circumstances in a specific case. That is particularly important when a difficult or unprecedented case comes along. Sentencing guidance, which is already in place for cases of trafficking for sexual exploitation, provides a more appropriate vehicle than primary legislation to respond flexibly to case law as it emerges.

Even though clause 4 provides a not-quite-mandatory minimum, I remain concerned that it appears to fetter the discretion of judges. It also appears from comments passed yesterday that some Members do not recognise the significance of the work being led by the Lord Chief Justice on sentencing guidelines or the significance of the judgement given by the former Recorder of Belfast in the case of Pis. The Lord Chief Justice has also indicated that guidance will be given by a senior judge on other types of trafficking such as labour exploitation. Such guidance can be refined and strengthened in a way that is simply not possible for primary legislation. In particular, I consider it unacceptable that the clause would apply equally to children and adults. I trust that Members will agree that the extension of a compulsory minimum sentence to children is inappropriate and runs counter to the "best interests of the child" principle set out in article 3 of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, which commits us to using custody for children only as a last resort and for the shortest possible time. Children should not be subject to the same sentencing regime as adults, and the current sentencing framework for children offers sufficient options for the judiciary.

I also want to touch on the proposal for a Northern Ireland rapporteur in clause 16. I fully recognise the need for accountability and welcome the role of the many mechanisms already in place to achieve it, such as the interdepartmental ministerial group (IDMG), GRETA, CJINI and, of course, informally, through the Department's engagement group. The Assembly will need to give careful consideration to whether the proposal for a Northern Ireland rapporteur, as set out in clause 16, is the best way to enhance the existing arrangements. I have particular concerns that, under the clause, the rapporteur might not be aligned to the national rapporteur structure, and I am not yet convinced that it would add value to the existing arrangements.

The EU directive places an obligation that there shall be a national rapporteur. The functions of the national rapporteur are currently performed by the interdepartmental ministerial group, on which I sit. I believe that I can legitimately claim to be the only Minister who has attended every meeting of the IDMG. It is a body that, by bringing together a number of Whitehall Departments with the three devolved Administrations, should be able to recognise what is happening across the UK. Members will recall that, when the ministerial body was being established, I consistently argued in favour of an independent element to fulfil the rapporteur function. Unfortunately, yesterday, despite the fact that I corrected him, one Member continued to read a prepared script saying that that was not my position.

Most recently, at its last meeting, the IDMG was extended to include independent NGO representation. That is a positive step forward, but I also note with interest the Home Secretary's announcement that, as part of the forthcoming modern slavery Bill and subject to consultation, she intends to establish a UK-wide anti-slavery commissioner who would also act as the national rapporteur. It is probably a point of agreement between Lord Morrow and me that referring to a commissioner who may act as a rapporteur is something of a fig leaf to cover the embarrassment in the Home Office that it originally refused an independent rapporteur.

Mr Wells: Will the Member give way?

Mr Ford: I will give way.

Mr Wells: The Member has been, quite rightly, critical of those who read from a prepared speech in yesterday's debate. Is he, by any chance, reading from a prepared speech this afternoon?

Mr Ford: I am indeed, as is customary in ministerial responses. If the Member wants to see the version of it that consisted of mostly illegible scribbles that I made yesterday, he is welcome to it. It is possibly the key advantage of having had a night's break that I was able to tidy up my remarks a little bit. I suspect that the difference between myself and the Member whom I referred to is that, if I had got something wrong in the prepared speech, I would have had the ability to change what I was saying; unfortunately, yesterday afternoon, even after I corrected a Member about my commitment to an independent national rapporteur, he continued to read a script criticising me for opposing it. That is the problem with prepared speeches. However, I should have acknowledged earlier that that is at least one fault that I will never accuse Jim Wells of. Sometimes, as he said himself, he has difficulty with a prepared script, but he never has problems when he is holding forth without one.

The proposal for an independent national rapporteur has many advantages, not least because a national rapporteur will be able to look across the range of relevant agencies and not just the devolved ones. However, the arguments for a commissioner or rapporteur need to be considered properly in the Assembly when the Home Secretary's plans become clearer. My officials will continue to liaise with the Home Office on that matter, and, as the Home Office develops its thinking, I am happy to discuss with Lord Morrow or the Justice Committee how to align the good work in Northern Ireland with wider UK proposals.

As I have made clear, I welcome the focus on human trafficking in Northern Ireland, and the Bill has added to that focus. However, my significant concerns about the potential negative impact of some aspects of the Bill remain. It is my responsibility as Minister of Justice to highlight those concerns to ensure that Members are able to make informed decisions in the best interests of this society. I have outlined some of those key concerns today, and there are other points that, I believe, will require detailed scrutiny, including wider engagement with other stakeholders, when the Bill goes before the Justice Committee. I have listened as others have spoken of the need for the Committee to examine the details of the Bill closely, and I welcome that commitment.

A few days ago, I had a constructive and positive meeting with Lord Morrow. We agreed on the need to fight the dreadful crime of human trafficking. We agreed on some aspects of the Bill and disagreed to various degrees on other aspects. However, with a commitment on all sides to get the best possible legislation for Northern Ireland to fight the crime of human trafficking and conscious of the need to mitigate the risk of any negative repercussions, I am content for the Bill to go forward to Committee Stage.

Lord Morrow: I am sure that most Members will recall my closing remark at the start of the debate yesterday that we are in for a very interesting debate. We may have failed on other things, but we did not fail in that category: it has been a very interesting debate. I recognise where the Minister is on the issue. He is not where I am, or maybe I am not where he is. Maybe one day he will be where I am, but I suspect that the day will never come when I will be where he is. However, we will wait to see what happens as we go through the debate.

I am pleased to have the opportunity to close on the debate, and I want to make it clear from the start that I make no apology for saying that I speak from a prepared script. It seems that that will now be criminalised in the Assembly. You cannot go home and prepare and come in with a prepared script. That is wrong. That is the domain of a Minister who has oceans of resource behind him. The whole Department is flung at the individual Member, but the Minister can come in with a prepared script and get on with it. I was a Minister at one time, too. I valued the fact that I had plenty of resources behind me when I was in Social Development, and very good resources they were too. Officials did not leave you offside very often. They send their Ministers in well prepared, and they have their team in the Box to consult. If someone asks an awkward question, they will soon slip in a very dignified answer. That is how the system works. However, when it comes to the individual MLA, he or she is totally exposed. They stand alone, and they have no resources in the Box that they can turn to. That is something that the Assembly may want to look at in due time, and I am sure that I will get support for that from some quarters.

Let us deal now with the issues that are before us today. I thank all those who spoke yesterday, whether they spoke well or ill, whether they spoke in favour of what I was saying or were totally and diametrically opposed to it. Nevertheless, I listened diligently to what was said, particularly to those who were contrary to me. I am pleased that all the major parties — I was going to say "with one exception", but it is not a major party — said that the Bill merited being returned to the Committee for further scrutiny. Some said that there was no merit in it whatsoever. They said that they were total democrats and said, "Kick it out, throw it in the bin and do not let it go any further". That is democracy. We will come to that particular individual a little later and identify who he is. I do not think that anybody is in any doubt about who I am speaking about, because I see that his face is already red and he is in no doubt about whom I am speaking.

I will consider some arguments that Members raised yesterday. I will go through them clause by clause before making a few further comments on specific speeches. I will do that simply because it would be impossible to attribute what every individual said, bearing in mind that I do not have the resources of the Department and have to make the best of it from the notes that I have made in my little black book.

First, I will address clause 2. It was argued that existing legislation makes no specific reference to victim consent and thus consent is already irrelevant when it comes to human trafficking and slavery offences under existing international legislation, regardless of any specific circumstances. The Minister's argument is not quite clear. It does not follow that, since there is no reference to consent, it is already considered irrelevant. That was not the view taken in the 2013 Anti-Trafficking Monitoring Group (ATMG) report. It states:

"The UK has restricted its interpretation of the international trafficking definition by requiring only the establishment of the "act" and "purpose", excluding the need for ascertaining the means element which operates to explicitly negate the supposed consent of the trafficked person to their exploitation ... However, it is common for both the prosecution and defence to draw on the trafficked person's consent to their trafficking in such trials to substantiate their case."

The ATMG also quotes the GRETA report, saying:

"the British authorities have stated that all the means under the Convention are inherent in trafficking without being articulated in the legislation. By establishing how a trafficker exploits the vulnerability of a victim through force, threats or deception, this would also cover fraud, abuse of power, coercion or abduction, all of which are means acknowledged in case precedent.' Unfortunately, as the concepts of deception or other forms of coercion do not appear in this offence's equation, this may result in the misunderstanding of trafficking as a crime by CJS actors and a lay jury."

Clause 2 answers those criticisms by clearly establishing those missing factors in our law, thereby ensuring that there can be no doubt that consent produced by coercion or deception is irrelevant to whether a crime of trafficking or slavery has taken place.

4.45 pm

It was argued that clause 3 is wrong because it is not consistent with judicial discretion. First, there is a precedent for placing aggravating factors in legislation, and that is found in section 4 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. We already do it.

Secondly, what is not acceptable is fettering judicial discretion after you define the law, not defining the law in the first place. Then it was argued that guidance on aggravating factors already exists, making the clause unnecessary. I disagree on two counts with those who argued that. First, it is important to note that current sentencing guidelines apply only for trafficking for sexual exploitation, not for trafficking for forced labour or for the slavery offence in the Coroners and Justice Act 2009. Consequently, further action is required, and I believe that my Bill provides that.

Secondly, if you read the factors led down by Judge Burgess in R v Matyas Pis, you will find that the factors referred to in the judgement at paragraph 25 are mainly different from those listed in clause 3. The only overlapping factor is number 9 in the list, which relates to threats against the victim or members of the victim's family. Consequently, what is proposed here differs from the guidance and is seeking to achieve a different goal. Moreover, guidance is not binding, and therefore it will not necessarily be applied consistently. That results in a lack of clarity and transparency about the offence and the sentences that it attracts. GRETA has argued strongly that consistency and transparency are vital for victims and has called on us to make our offences clearer for them. We cannot deliver that clarity through guidance, but we can through the Bill and clause 3.

On clause 4, it was effectively argued that mandatory minimum sentence clauses are unpopular with judges and not in accordance with our legal traditions, and, as such, are an unnecessary step. I do not deny that a statutory minimum sentence is unusual in Northern Ireland law. However, it does exist. For example, article 70 of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 2004 has a minimum sentence for the unauthorised possession of certain prohibited weapons and the purchase, possession or acquisition of a handgun.

To my mind, the crimes involved in human trafficking and slavery are suitable for a minimum sentence to be laid down in law. Clause 4 will send a strong signal that our society deems those crimes to be serious offences. It is also worth noting that in exceptional circumstances a judge can set a lower sentence. Although I struggle to think of a case in which a sentence lower than two years would be appropriate for those who commit such heinous crimes, the clause provides flexibility to enable such exceptional cases to be dealt with appropriately. Having a minimum sentence sends a very strong message about the unacceptability of trafficking, concentrating the minds of anyone tempted to get involved in that heinous crime.

On clause 5, some have argued that forced begging is already an offence. I know that, technically, the current law has been interpreted as covering forced begging, but nowhere is that expressly stated in statute. My objective is to make that fact absolutely transparent in legislation.

I want to respond to a number of comments made about clause 6. Yesterday, the clause got a fair airing in this House, and there was much concentration on it, just as there has been much concentration on it in the media. That is regrettable, but that is how things are. I want to state, as I did yesterday, that my Bill is not a single clause Bill; rather, it has 19 clauses. Regrettably, however, there has been a lot of concentration around clause 6.

Some who commented yesterday said that the Bill unhelpfully conflates prostitution and human trafficking. They said that they are not the same thing and that they need to be dealt with in different ways. It is important to say that that view is rejected by many groups and individuals from a broad cross section of our society. The figures that we heard yesterday for those who have been rescued from trafficking illustrate that the vast majority of victims who have been rescued were victims of sexual exploitation. Those are irrefutable facts. Given that, on the basis of the numbers of victims rescued, demand for paid sex is the principle driver for trafficking to Northern Ireland. The production of a Bill to address trafficking in Northern Ireland would be seriously lacking without a means to address demand for the principal driver for trafficking.

Furthermore, it is said that clause 6 will push human trafficking underground and produce a more dangerous environment for those working in the sex industry. That argument is commonly made by opponents of clause 6. Although I understand where they are coming from, I do not accept that to be the case. The evidence from Sweden indicates that prostitution has not — I emphasise “has not” — gone underground. Kajsa Wahlberg, the Swedish national rapporteur on human trafficking and detective inspector of the national police board, speaking at the European conference on human trafficking in December 2009, said:

“In Sweden there is relatively little prostitution. The perception that this is because prostitution has gone underground is not true. Prostitution cannot go underground because the buyers need to be able to find the women. Prior to the law prohibiting the purchase of sexual services the pimps could easily send the women out looking for buyers. Nowadays they have to advertise and make arrangements which means that the risk of getting caught increases.”

Those who were at the Justice Committee two weeks ago and heard Gunilla Ekberg speak on the subject will have seen that argument thoroughly trashed and demolished.

Thirdly, it was highlighted that most people in prostitution have not been trafficked. That statement is true; I do not contest it, but I make two points. First, the national referral mechanism figures make it absolutely clear that the single biggest driver for trafficking to Northern Ireland is the demand for paid sex. Although many people in prostitution have not been trafficked, most people trafficked to Northern Ireland are trafficked for sexual exploitation. I hope that I have made my position very clear on that, because there have been deliberate attempts to misrepresent me, to take me to a position that I never was at and to attribute comments to me that I have never made.

Secondly, my Bill is not just a human trafficking Bill; it is a human trafficking and exploitation Bill. The fact that clause 6 deals with people who may not have been trafficked is no more of a problem than the fact that other parts of the Bill address slavery offences where there is no element of trafficking. In both regards, the clauses are phrased in that way on purpose.

Some say that they do not think that prostitution is exploitative. I encourage them to look at the statistics. I do not doubt that some people say that they are in prostitution of their own free will. However, the evidence demonstrates that they are a very privileged minority. We have a choice of whether to frame our law out of regard for the vulnerable majority or the privileged minority. I am here for the former. I will not be moving from that position, irrespective of what the Assembly does with this Bill. That is the Assembly's choice, and it will then give an account to the electorate at another time.

Fourthly, we heard from a number of quarters that we need more local research into prostitution after which we can proceed further. We have heard that again during today. I want to make it clear that I have absolutely no problem whatsoever with research being conducted into the nature of prostitution in Northern Ireland. However, it must be recognised that literally hundreds of studies have been conducted into the area of prostitution in the United Kingdom, the Republic of Ireland and across Europe. A mountain of studies has been done and is sitting on the shelves waiting to be looked at. To my mind, the results of such local research will not differ hugely from what has been found in the Republic of Ireland and in the UK. There is not something in the Irish Sea that suddenly makes prostitution hugely different in Northern Ireland from the rest of the United Kingdom.

The decision by the Minister to announce two weeks before this debate that his Department will conduct research was an obvious attempt by the Department of Justice to send clause 6 into the long grass. It is something that you would expect to find in ‘Yes, Minister’. The Minister knew over a year ago that I was introducing this Bill. Why did he not order research at that time or even after I brought the Bill to the House for its First Reading? It is also worth noting that who the Department decides to choose to conduct this research will have a huge bearing on the results. As Gunilla Ekberg noted at the Committee for Justice two weeks ago, if the researcher conducting the research believes that prostitution is a valid form of work, they will come to a vastly different conclusion than they would if they believed that prostitution is inherently exploitative. I hope that the Department is cognisant of this reality when it brings this research forward.

Fifthly, some Members made the point that this Bill does not do enough to help people to leave prostitution. This is an area that I hope will be considered in Committee. To my mind, it is important that men and women who are working in prostitution, often due to circumstances beyond their control, are given adequate support to leave. I will, of course, listen carefully to any suggestions that Members may have. When I met Rachel Moran, who spent some years in prostitution, she made that point very clearly. She said that it is important that an exit strategy is provided. She made that point well, and I listened intently to what she had to say, and I have it noted.

Mr Wells: Will the Member give way?

Lord Morrow: Who is speaking?

Mr Wells: Will the Member give way?

Lord Morrow: I had inwardly decided not to give way to anyone, but, maybe, Jim, I will give way to you just for a moment.

Mr Wells: Thank you very much. I congratulate the Member on his birthday today. I will not give away which birthday it is, but I am sure that he will make very good use of his bus pass from today onwards.

Will the Member agree that he will listen to the Committee's view on this? I raised the issue that that is perhaps one of the parts of his Bill on which I felt further consideration is required. Will he listen to suggestions from the Committee about how he can provide an exit strategy for women who often have no other option in life, who have had a dreadful hand in life, who maybe have been abused as children and been brought up in poverty and deprivation? If we can offer these women an opportunity to retrain for residential care and support or something else, that would be attractive to them. We would help them to get out of this awful trade.

5.00 pm

Lord Morrow: I thank the Member in part for what he has said, but he reminded me about bus passes, and if I had known he was going to say that, I would not have given way. [Laughter.] However, I note the point that he has made, and I think it is very relevant. I am certain that, when the Bill goes to the Committee, that is one area that its members will concentrate their minds on. I thank him for the point that he makes.

Sixthly, the point was made that the contention that the current law on buying sex from someone who is coerced is not working is based on a failure to understand that the current offence of paying for sex with someone subject to force is a strict liability offence. Let me make it absolutely clear that I completely understand that it is a strict liability offence. However, that fact does not address the central problem, which pertains to making the offence work. That problem specifically relates to proving that the person who was purchased was coerced, not what the buyer knew or did not know, which is entirely irrelevant, because it is a strict liability offence. The current law clearly does not work, because proving that the bought person was coerced is very difficult.

Mr Ford: Will the Member give way?

Lord Morrow: OK, but this is the last person I am giving way to. OK, Minister.

Mr Ford: I am grateful to the Member. On a simple point, I think it is perhaps the case that the principal difficulty at the moment is not proving the coercion but proving the coercion within the current six-month time limit.

Lord Morrow: I note the point that the Minister has made, and I suspect that it is true.

Seventhly, it was suggested that increasing the time bar to three years will make the current article 64A offence effective. Although raising the time bar would be good, I do not believe that it would deliver the solution that we need. It will still remain a caveated offence, as in Finland, and the evidence is clear that such offences — ie, making it an offence to buy sex from someone who has been exploited — while sounding attractive, do not work in practice.

If we want to challenge trafficking, we will not do so through caveated offences. Proving coercion is very difficult, and the number of prosecutions in Finland is limited. Here in Northern Ireland, as has been detailed at length, they are non-existent. No phone calls have been intercepted between traffickers saying, "Do not bother sending women to Finland, because it is illegal to buy sex from trafficked people". Traffickers continue to send women to Finland in large numbers. However, in Sweden, where they have simply made paying for sex an offence, they have a workable offence, with approximately 3,000 convictions. In that context, phone calls between traffickers have been intercepted in which they say, "Do not bother sending women to Sweden; there is no point. The legal environment is too hostile".

Whatever way you look at the current law, it does not work. I am proposing a solution, which I hope the Assembly will, in time, embrace.

It was argued that clause 7 is unworkable because the Department of Justice does not have direct responsibility for many of the organisations that provide training. It is also unprecedented in legislation. The clause gives the Minister wide options as to how to deliver on the training requirements set out in the clause. He could decide to use regulations to set out a curriculum, minimum standards and what investigative tools should be used, in a similar way to the power to make regulations on training for police forces in England and Wales in section 97 of Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001. I hope that the Department will be imaginative on what is needed to meet article 18(3) of the European directive, which states:

"Member States shall promote regular training for officials likely to come into contact with victims or potential victims of trafficking in human beings, including front-line police officers, aimed at enabling them to identify and deal with victims and potential victims of trafficking in human beings."

Article 9(3) states:

"Member States shall take the necessary measures to ensure that persons, units or services responsible for investigating or prosecuting the offences referred to in Articles 2 and 3 are trained accordingly."

I am open to considering relevant amendments at a later stage.

With regard to clause 8, some Members stated that the PSNI does not provide blanket immunity from prosecution for any victims and that all cases must be considered on their merits. Consequently, some suggested that the clause is inappropriate. However, I am advised by counsel that there is a key distinction between providing victims of trafficking with immunity from prosecution; and providing victims of trafficking with immunity for crimes committed under the duress of their traffickers. Let me be quite clear that clause 8 is about addressing the latter, not the former. In the Anti-Trafficking Monitoring Group report 2013 it is argued that:

"It remains the case in the UK that trafficked children are prosecuted for crimes they are forced to commit while being exploited and under the control of their traffickers, while their traffickers go unpunished."

Consequently, an issue remains to be addressed. Moreover, to those who say that this is not policy, I say that the whole point of clause 8 is that we can make it policy if we change the law, which is what I propose we do.

Some argued that clause 11 is unnecessary because the compensation procedure is already clear. I disagree with that perspective. I am deeply concerned by the barriers that remain to compensation for victims. In Northern Ireland, only two victims have successfully claimed compensation, but over 90 have been identified. In 2013, the Anti-Trafficking Monitoring Group said that:

"the current compensation avenues are ineffective in securing compensation for trafficked persons and do not fulfil the spirit of the requirement for compensation in the Convention or Directive."

Clearly, we have a real problem here, and I believe that clause 11 will help to rectify it.

It was suggested that clause 15 is unnecessary because we already have an action plan and that, if it were placed in statute, we risk it becoming redundant at a later stage.

I will make two points regarding that. First, the action plan that the Minister has introduced, although a good thing, does not cover what the clause covers. The clause requires the Department to publish an action plan that considers human trafficking as well as forced labour without trafficking. The Department's plan considers only human trafficking. Secondly, I am concerned that, although the current Minister may intend to continue to publish an annual action plan, a potential successor may not share his views. Consequently, I am minded to put this in statute. Although we might trust the present Minister to do it, we may not trust the next one. Who knows?

Some suggested that clause 16 is unnecessary because of the UK Government's announcement of the establishment of a modern slavery commissioner. I am delighted that the British Government have begun to see the light on this issue. It may well be the case that it would be a distinct advantage to have a national rapporteur, which is, effectively, what the modern slavery commissioner would be, for the whole UK. However, I listened with great interest to what Alban Maginness said about the virtues of a Northern Ireland-specific rapporteur. I look forward to discussing that matter further with him in the future.

In any event, the British Government have not published any legislation or announced when such a commissioner would be introduced. Neither have they confirmed that the commissioner's remit would cover the whole of the United Kingdom. Consequently, I believe that we need to maintain the clause until more information is available. To my mind, it is crucial, as a Member who spoke previously noted, that the relevant agencies that operate in Northern Ireland can be scrutinised by an independent body to ensure that they remain effective.

Before I finish, I want to consider two speeches that were made yesterday. One of those speeches was made by Basil McCrea. If ever there was a guy who is all over the place, it is him. I would not like to have him playing at centre half in any team of mine. He would roam all over the place and leave the defence wide open. You would be down five or six goals within the first 10 or 15 minutes, and you would have lost the game. I would respond to all his points, but it would take me all night, and I know that the House has had a tough couple of days. However, I do want to say one or two things.

Mr McCrea spent a great deal of time looking at the cases of R v Matyas Pis and R v Rong Chen. The key point is that, despite the large number of people trafficked, there have been only two cases. Mr McCrea got very excited about the judgements in those two cases, suggesting that they should restrain us in some way. However, the point about those judgements is that they were interpreting, and not making, the law. We are considering changing the law, which is our prerogative.

Mr McCrea went on to suggest that, because there have been two convictions in respect of one offence in the R v Matyas Pis and R v Rong Chen cases, another statute, that pertaining to paying for sex, is working, even though it has secured no convictions at all. How does any Member conclude that something is working when it does not get any convictions? A senior retired police officer said to me one time, "If you are getting so low a conviction rate or no convictions, it is legal." Convictions are not happening. I ask Basil McCrea to stop and think about what he said yesterday. He might just come to a different conclusion. He is comparing apples with pears, and apples and pears are not the same.

Mr McCrea is right to say that there is academic literature for and against criminalising prostitution. I never disputed that fact; I accept that that literature is out there. The conclusions reached in the literature depend to a large degree on how researchers view prostitution and, as we talked about earlier, whether they see it as sexual exploitation or a valid job. Gunilla Ekberg made the point powerfully at the Committee the week before last — someone else made it here yesterday — that not many school curriculums have prostitution as a career. I am not aware of any. If someone can point one out to me, I will give way to them.

Mr McCrea suggested that Westminster got it right on paying for sex. The whole point is that Westminster did not get it right; it just did not. The offence is unworkable because proving coercion is so difficult. I am proposing legislation that is framed in response to the bad experience in Westminster; it is not good experience but bad experience. We are learning from their lessons.

Mr McCrea says that the judiciary is against the Bill. The judiciary has not said anything, and, if it has, it has not said it to me. I have not heard that from the judiciary, but he tells us that it said that. The judiciary has commented only on interpreting the law as it stands, Mr McCrea. It is misinformation to say that the judiciary oppose the Bill. The Minister spoke today about instances when he feels that he has been misquoted. I am trying not to do that. Mr McCrea, maybe you would have the grace to do the same thing and stop misquoting. I listened to you on a television programme last night, and, quite frankly, I did not know where you were coming from. I do not know where you got the information that you pumped out.

5.15 pm

As I mentioned earlier, our law does contain minimum sentences. The 2004 firearms legislation is already in place, yet the independence of the judiciary is fully intact — the legislation does not interfere with it. Mr McCrea said that I had not consulted women in prostitution, and yet at least three victims were here yesterday speaking in favour of clause 6. If you look at the list of respondents —

Mr B McCrea: Will the Member give way?

Lord Morrow: No. Hold on. You had your chance.

Mr B McCrea: So you dish it out but when it comes to —

Lord Morrow: No. Hold on a moment. You were all over the place yesterday and you accused me —

Mr B McCrea: You asked about —

Lord Morrow: No. Hold on. You accused me of many things. I never opened my mouth. You learn the habit.

Mr McCrea said that I had not consulted women in prostitution, and yet there were at least three victims here yesterday speaking in favour of clause 6, and I want him to understand that. If you look at the list of respondents to my consultation, you will find that sex worker organisations participated. It is just misinformation — something that you practise 100% — to suggest otherwise. My consultation was open to anyone to respond, even you. I did not consciously exclude anyone. Individuals who described themselves as sex workers did respond to my consultation, and I want to make that clear.

Mr McCrea was profoundly selective in his comments about the Swedish approach. Interestingly, he did not acknowledge that the major review of Swedish law in 2010 was conducted by the country's most senior judge. Mr McCrea seems to be fond of judges, but this judge found very clearly in favour of the legislation. Basil McCrea seems to be happy with Northern Ireland following behind the rest of the United Kingdom in this area of law. I thought that he was a man who was ambitious for Northern Ireland to be a world-leading nation right across our society, but obviously not. He seems perfectly happy for us to follow others. I, however, believe that we should lead the way.

I also want to respond to a few specific points made by Anna Lo. She said that displacement was a problem. Similar arguments were made against the great William Wilberforce when he fought slavery. I think that Jim Wells likened to me to a Wilberforce — what a compliment. People said that if slavery was banned, it would just carry on in other countries. Wilberforce could have given up and said that, because he could change only UK law, the trade would simply go elsewhere and, consequently, his legislation was not worth it. He did not; he led the way and the world followed.

I must also come to Anna Lo's point that my Bill would divert resources from trafficking. Indeed? Even if you accept that clause 6 has nothing to do with trafficking — obviously, I do not, for reasons that I have made plain — this is a 19-clause Bill. If, between yesterday and today, I get nothing else across, I hope that I get that message across. This is not a single-clause Bill; it has 19 clauses. One must still recognise that the other 18 clauses would help to address trafficking, according to Ms Lo's definition, and result in new resources being made available. I understand that decisions must be made on resources, but I strongly believe that such issues can be effectively resolved.

In closing, I want to thank all Members who expressed support for my Bill. No doubt, there are things that can and will be improved as it passes through its various stages. However, I hope that Members will have heard in this debate the reason why I believe that it is so necessary. We have a real opportunity to lead the way in the United Kingdom. We can have world-leading legislation in this area, and in this small country, which will help some of the most vulnerable men, women and children who come to our Province and live within our shores. The issue that we are considering today and considered yesterday is bigger than partisan politics. I hope that Members from all sides will unite to back these measures. I am delighted that the indications seem to be very clear that the House is of an opinion that the Bill merits going to the next stage and being referred to the Committee. Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker.

Resolved:

That the Second Stage of the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Further Provisions and Support for Victims) Bill [NIA 26/11-15] be agreed.

Common Funding Formula

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour and 30 minutes for this debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes to propose and 10 minutes to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who speak will have five minutes.

Mr Storey: I beg to move

That this Assembly notes the current proposals by the Minister of Education to revise the common funding formula; further notes, with grave concern, the apparent disproportionate impact of the proposals on controlled schools; and calls on the Minister to establish, as a matter of urgency, a controlled schools body to properly represent the views of this sector in the consultation.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Members who are leaving the Chamber should do so quietly, and those who have not taken their seats should do so quietly.

Mr Storey: Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I welcome the opportunity for the Assembly to debate what is a very serious issue. I am, however, very disappointed that the Minister of Education and his Department have stooped to what can only be described as a very low level of social engineering when it comes to the distribution of funding for our schools.

It would be fair to say that no other issue has generated as much anger and opposition in the education sectors at this time as this particular matter has done. It makes the blunders over computer-based assessments and levels of progression and other departmental blunders pale into insignificance. The issue of how our schools are funded has become increasingly important, especially as the budgets have come under increasing pressure from reductions that our schools already face. However, I must say that I never cease to be amazed at the way in which the Minister and his Department are able to find large amounts of money at the drop of a hat for some particular pet project from a budget that we are told is not large enough to meet the needs of the system. It is even more astounding to hear departmental officials give the Committee for Education reasons why millions of pounds have been wasted on the initiatives that I mentioned.

As the Minister said in his speech to the House on 11 June 2013 when he announced the review, the common funding formula is the latest version of an attempt by the Department to fund schools based on the principles of objectivity, equality and transparency. He also stressed the importance of a formula that supports the Department's policies.

Members on this side of the House were generally supportive of the review, albeit with reservations. Although based on my experience over the past two mandates of listening to officials at the Education Committee trying to explain their policies and their business plans, I fear that the principles of objectivity, equality and transparency are uneasy bedfellows with many of the Department's policies.

However, from my party's perspective, the Salisbury review, when it was published, represented a missed opportunity to have a real and meaningful look at how we fund our schools. I said at that time that the Salisbury review of the funding of our schools was a missed opportunity to really tackle these funding problems, many of which were compounded by the introduction of a single formula in the first place. If implemented, the only outcome would be another review in five or seven years' time to undo the problems created by this review. I fear that that is where we could be heading.

Indeed, when Sir Bob and his team came to the Education Committee, many Committee members from a number of parties expressed concerns at the proposal. It would appear from the mailbag and from the discussions that I have had with other colleagues that there is widespread fear and concern across the system about the proposed outworking of the current proposals.

It is to that issue that I wish to turn my attention. The core of the Minister's proposals is that most money should be directed to those who are most in need. Indeed, like motherhood and apple pie, this is a concept against which it is difficult to argue. However, it is the manner in which the Minister and his Department have applied this concept that causes me most concern.

Last week in the Assembly, we debated free school meals. I do not wish to propose a rehearsing of the arguments of that debate, suffice to say that, as a party, we are committed to ensuring that those who are in need should receive appropriate support through the benefits system to help them to deal with the difficult financial and economic circumstances that they and their families face on an ongoing basis.

5.30 pm

We are not ashamed or embarrassed to champion the cause of resources for working-class Protestant areas neglected by direct rule Ministers, the Minister currently holding the portfolio and the Department of Education, and to seek acknowledgement that there was a considerable degree of underinvestment and educational underachievement. If the Minister tries to redress that using a real and evidence-based approach, he will find support from this side of the House. However, as the Bristol report shows, the use of free school meals as a proxy measure for educational disadvantage is an unreliable mechanism, and I believe that it is not the real purpose of the current proposals.

On the proposals, one matter that even the Committee felt strongly about was the need, in any consultation, for everyone to see clearly the outworking of the proposals for schools. That has proved extremely helpful, and the analysis of the financial outworking of the primary sector is indeed illuminating, as I believe that it shows the real thrust of the proposals.

Let us look, then, at the proposals in their reality. Let Members across the House, in all constituencies, understand that 670 primary schools in Northern Ireland will lose millions of pounds as a result of the proposals. Only a small number of schools will benefit from increased funding, while the vast majority must endure a decrease. Of the five education and library boards, only the Belfast Board would see an increase. That needs to be taken seriously. It is a very serious issue for every Member. That means that 80% of schools will lose.

I will quote from the representative of the Northern Ireland Primary Principals' Action Group, who is not someone with an agenda other than a concern for Northern Ireland primary schools:

"This divisive, unfair policy will create a new form of inequality where the minority of pupils are educated in small classes with wonderful resources and plentiful support staff, whilst the majority sit in large classes with scant resources and no support staff."

This is not the policy of 'Putting Pupils First'; rather, it is a new policy of putting some pupils first.

When you look at the proposals by sector, the situation is even more worrying. Put simply, 85% of controlled primary schools will lose, while only 15% will gain. In the maintained sector, and be clear, Members, that this is not a case of this party making a sectarian attack on any sector, but these are facts that cannot be disputed: the maintained sector will lose 76% of its funding, while 24% will gain. There is a 9% difference between the two sectors. That is despite the Audit Office report identifying the controlled sector as having particular problems with educational underachievement, an issue that the House has debated on a number of occasions.

Therefore, the thrust of the proposals appears to be a movement of funding from the controlled to the maintained sector. That will impact not only on funding but on job opportunities for those who teach in the controlled sector, or indeed in any other sector, were they able to gain admittance and overcome some of the current hurdles for education employment. Were my party to bring forward proposals such as these, which have such a differential impact on one community, there would be uproar from those on the Benches opposite, calls for an equality impact assessment and accusations of sectarian politics, yet we are told that these proposals are in keeping with objectivity, equality and transparency and in support of the Department's policies.

We certainly have transparency, because the public, principals, parents and boards of governors can now see that the warm words on educational disadvantage and equality mean very little when it comes to putting them into practice.

The real thrust of the education policy is now being seen and displayed. Perhaps the Minister can therefore explain to the Assembly his rationale for not bringing forward an equality impact assessment on this formula. Do not tell us that the figures are only indicative, that they do not mean anything, and that this debate is being used as a sectarian scaremongering tactic. Minister, no one believes that that is the case.

In conclusion, the challenge —

Mr Dunne: I thank the Member for giving way. Does the Member agree that many primary schools have worked their way back from budget deficits through stringent budgeting, and are now going to be hit again up to 35% —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Sorry. The Member's time is up. I call Mr Sean Rogers. Sorry, I call Pat Sheehan.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. In the debate last week on free school meals, which was described as a warm-up event for this debate, I predicted that there would not be a knockout blow. I want to change that view. After listening to the previous Member who spoke, I do not think that there will even be a glove laid.

If this debate is about anything, it is about underachievement in our education system. There are numerous reasons for that underachievement. There is the learning environment at home and whether children have books at home and whether their parents have qualifications. We could also look at poor leadership and poor teaching in schools. However, the single most important predictor of academic performance is socio-economic background. Evidence and research show that socio-economic disadvantage has a stronger impact on educational outcomes than even religion or gender. Students from disadvantaged backgrounds perform less well in transfer tests, in GCSEs, and in accessing third-level education. That is a fact. So, how do we reverse that trend? First, we definitely do not do it by sectarianising the issue as some parties will try to do here today. Members from those parties should hang their heads in shame.

It should come as no surprise that the party opposite is going to try to sectarianise this issue. We witnessed the First Minister's intemperate outburst yesterday in relation to the selling of land to republicans, as if that was some sort of crime.

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Sheehan: No. Not on that issue.

We know that many on the opposite Benches were cheerleaders for the sectarian thugs during the flag protests earlier this year, and, of course, we listened to the ambivalence —

Mr Storey: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. Can you have the Hansard record checked to see the allegations that are being made by the Member opposite? He is making allegations, which I assume are directed towards me as an individual. Can you have the record checked to see how that stacks up with reality? I have no criminal convictions or terrorist convictions, unlike the Member.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I am not certain that that was what the Member said but I think that we should check Hansard and report back.

I remind Members that they should ensure that the debate is delivered in a temperate manner, that Members who speak are allowed to be heard and that remarks are made through the Chair at all times.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Just to finish the point that I was making about the sectarianism, we listened to the ambivalence of many of the Members opposite regarding the violence during the summer, particularly on the thuggish attack on Belfast's first citizen. Will anyone on the opposite Benches, even now, get up on their hind legs and unequivocally condemn that attack?

What we have in this motion is a subtext that says, "The Fenians are going to get the funding when it should be going to Protestant schools."

Mr Storey: Seventy-six percent are Catholic schools.

Mr Sheehan: That is not true.

Mr Storey: It is true.

Mr Sheehan: That is not true; it is a lie —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Remarks should be made through the Chair.

Mr Sheehan: — that ought not to be peddled by anyone in this Chamber.

In the debate last week on free school meals, I said that funding is not directed at schools or sectors. It follows the child.

The independent review led by Bob Salisbury recommended that funding should be directed where it is most needed. Given the clear link between socio-economic disadvantage and educational underachievement, it is simple logic that should determine where funding is directed. We should always put the children first. Many of those children are from disadvantaged working-class unionist backgrounds. They will benefit from proposals to revise the common funding formula, and perhaps some of the Members opposite might like to acknowledge that fact.

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for giving way. Just so that it is clearly on the record, the 317 schools in the maintained sector will lose £2,469 million. That is 76% of schools in the maintained sector. You explain to them why your Minister is doing a raid on their bank. That is not a sectarian point; that is the truth.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat. We all know that there is not a bottomless pit of money. It has to be shared out, and it has to go where it is most needed. [Interruption.] Why did you not mention that in your motion instead of focusing on the controlled schools? Because you wanted to make a sectarian point. Your protestations of concern for boys from working-class Protestant backgrounds ring hollow here today.

As we know, the indicator used for deprivation is free school meals. It is not by any means perfect, but it ensures that the funding goes to the individual. As I said, it does not go to sectors and it does not go to schools. I have yet to hear anyone from the opposite Benches offer any sort of plausible alternative as an indicator for deprivation.

Moving on to the issue of a sectoral body for the controlled sector, I have no difficulty in supporting that proposal. However, it is the party opposite that has held up the establishment of such a body by blocking the introduction of the Education and Skills Authority.

I am opposing the motion on the basis that it does not put children first.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call Mr Sean Rogers.

Mr Humphrey: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I would appreciate it if you would have a look, in the Hansard report, at the contribution of the previous Member who spoke. He shouted across to these Benches, "That's a lie". I do not think that that is parliamentary language, and it should not be used in the House. It is something that you need to look at as Principal Deputy Speaker.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Speaker has addressed that issue before. We take the standard of good temper and moderate language, and I think that Members should remind themselves of that, but those issues will be noted.

I call Mr Rogers.

Mr Poots: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. How appropriate is it to use words like "Fenian" in the House? I would anticipate that, if I were to call Members on the other side of the House Fenian, there would be a howl of protest. I think that we need to ensure that our language is moderated and temperate, as people outside are looking in on this.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I thank you for that comment, because I think that it reinforces my own. Members should remind themselves of good temper and moderate language, deal with the arguments and address their remarks through the Chair at all times.

Finally, I call Mr Sean Rogers.

Mr Rogers: I welcome the opportunity to speak on the motion. The SDLP wants to express its concerns about the proposed revision to the common funding formula. Although the motion focuses on the effects on controlled schools, it affects all sectors. In my constituency, rural schools will be negatively impacted on from Rathfriland High to St Colmcille's, Crossgar. In fact, I was hard pushed to find a primary school that was not worse off as a result of these proposals.

The impact that those changes will have on small primary schools could result in an average loss of £24,500 for each school, which, in essence, means losing a teacher.

5.45 pm

That is a significant reduction to school budgets, and it will have a direct impact on their ability to deliver the high standards of education that they want to provide for their pupils. There will be more classes of over 30 pupils. With respect to a departmental official who told us last week that being in a class of 30 did not have a negative impact on a child's ability to learn, has the Department lost contact with what actually happens in the classroom? Ask any teacher or parent. When did those officials last get into the shoes of our children or teachers?

The SDLP is calling on the Minister of Education to urgently find another mechanism to support strategically important primary and post-primary schools in the North. Last week, I visited St Mary's High School, Brollagh, a strategically important small school in County Fermanagh that is in danger of closing. If that school closes, children will have to travel for an hour or more on a bus or buses to Enniskillen. It was Clontarf yesterday and Brollagh today. Where next?

I am sure that the Minister was well-briefed on the hundreds of parents who attended the public meeting. The people of Brollagh have clear plans for the development of their school. The Department and CCMS must listen to the community, pause the process and allow for a local solution.

It is of the utmost importance that the basis on which the Department allocates funding is transparent, fair and reflects and supports the Department's core strategic objectives, and takes full account of the needs of children.

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for giving way. To clarify the point about need, we want to ensure that need is directed towards pupils who have need. Does the Member agree that if we use solely the blunt instrument of free school meals, we could have children in our schools who have a free meal but whose educational needs are being neglected?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Rogers: I agree with the Member and will come to that in a few moments. The SDLP asks the Minister how he believes that funding cuts to small schools could possibly be viewed as a supportive gesture to help schools to deliver the set curriculum, or is it about speeding up the close small schools process? We have grave concerns about the reduction in funding under this formula.

The Minister has said that he was not satisfied that the current scheme adequately supported the Department's key policy objectives, particularly in relation to social need. We in the SDLP fully support the idea of tackling social deprivation but our analysis must be based on sound information. I am not convinced that the Salisbury recommendations are taking full account of the needs of all children. The report is built on shifting sand. Free school meals uptake is not an accurate measure of the level of deprivation in our communities. What about the working poor whose children cannot afford school meals?

The proposed change to the common funding formula will not accurately address social need or improve delivery of the Department of Education's key policy objectives. Rather, the proposals will result in greater disadvantage among small schools. I am only too well aware of the finite nature of the resources available for education services. However, increased budgetary restrictions on schools will result only in more expensive problems in school maintenance and future provision.

I know that there are challenges in running a small, effective school, but it can be done with fewer than 105 children in a primary school and fewer than 500 in a secondary school. There are many good examples of that. Did Lord Salisbury visit any of those schools?

The consultation process was carried out over the school holiday period and at the most hectic time, at the beginning of a school principal's year. I also take issue with the on-line consultation for children with the title 'Putting Pupils First'. To me, that is carefully crafted to get the right results. It is manipulative. Take, for example, question 1:

"Do you think that the Minister should give extra money to schools to help children from families with less money, who may not do so well at school?"

Of course, the answer is yes, but what if that means that your school will lose out?

I declare an interest as the chair of a board of governors of a school that will get £4,500 less. That will mean £45 less per pupil in my school. You start to get a different answer if you look at all the facts. The proposed change to the common funding formula will not maximise value for money and raise education standards. Another mechanism has to be found that supports strategically important primary and post-primary schools.

Mr Kinahan: I, too, welcome the debate. I am sad that I have only five minutes, because there is so much to say. However, I am very pleased that the Chair of the Committee has taken up the UUP points on rural and small schools in expanding the motion. I also welcome the chance to speak because I was quite appalled by the attitude that was shown by the consultation being issued in July, just after the schools had gone on their summer break. There was no chance for people to really think about it, look at the detail and work on it until they came back in September. At times, it seems as though the Department really does not care about its schools, teachers or pupils.

The Ulster Unionist Party supports the motion and agrees wholeheartedly with its expression of grave concern over the disproportionate impact that the common funding formula is likely to have on controlled schools. However, we are equally concerned that we seem to be turning the fight into a sectarian battle, a class battle, and even an urban versus rural battle, because we now see division in almost every area between sectors, teachers and parents, just as we see happening over flags and parades. Of course we need a sectoral body for controlled schools. We need it now. However, we also need a recognised voluntary sector body and a similar body with proper power to run schools in the integrated sector. Most importantly, we need a drive towards shared education and a system that puts all schools on an equal footing as we move towards a shared society.

I am concerned that the motion refers only to controlled schools because the common funding formula affects so many other areas. I hope that the DUP will now join with the UUP to block, once and for all, all that this Sinn Féin Minister does, especially these imbalanced cuts.

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for giving way. I want to clarify that the reason why we have focused on the controlled sector is that it has not been well served by the boards. The voluntary grammar schools have the Governing Bodies Association (GBA), and the integrated sector has the Northern Ireland Council for Integrated Education (NICIE). Therefore, every other school group has a sectoral body. The one sector that is left out every time — bottom of the pile and bottom of the pitch — is the controlled sector. I have to say that those days are over.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Kinahan: I see where the Member is coming from, and I understand that. However, I feel that we need proper sectoral bodies and control in the other sectors so that there is an equal playing field.

I want to read a section from a headmaster's speech that was made recently. I think that it illustrates how schools feel about the Department, the Minister and all of us in deciding the future of the education system. He said:

"I sometimes say that I wish that people who sit behind desks and have big ideas would stop trying to improve things because, often, they only succeed in making things worse. What makes the difference is not this initiative or that initiative, this centralised body or that, this commissioner or that — it is good, talented, committed, well-qualified, well-trained, well-motivated teachers doing an excellent job in the classroom, motivating, inspiring and igniting young minds. That is what improves things."

He went on to say:

"My plea is for funding to enable schools to take responsibility for themselves; to have the freedom from bureaucratic interference and centralised strait-jacketing; to find local, common-sense solutions to local problems; to get jobs done instead of spending time simply ticking boxes and complying with unnecessary and burdensome time-wasting regulations thought up by people who haven't been in school since 30 years ago or more."

That is probably not fair on many people. However, I think that Members would find that many principals, if not all, are very much in agreement with the sentiment behind that statement.

Immediately after we saw the proposed changes to the common funding formula, I contacted every single school by e-mail. The replies that I received state that the changes will mean cuts to the number of classroom assistants, special-needs teachers, reading-therapy teachers, main teachers and/or, at the same time, bigger class sizes. Is that really what the Minister wants: a mass of people losing their jobs and class sizes getting much bigger?

I will touch on another lack of logic that goes through the system. I know of two schools with the same number of pupils. One receives £573,000 and the other £806,000, yet they are similar schools with a similar number of pupils who receive free school meals. We need this to be worked out all the way through so that we know what happens with every school. We all know that we need to put funds into disadvantaged schools, and we do not disagree with the idea of targeting social need, but we must not rob one school to pay for another. We must not rob Peter to pay Paul.

As I mentioned this morning, there is the social investment fund, and whether it is £100 million — I have spoken to Minister Bell since — or £40 million, there are funds to address deprivation. We should look for funds from elsewhere as well as for savings. We should also get the Department to prove that it can be the most efficient Department instead of the worst.

Minister, my biggest concern is that we never ever —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Kinahan: — seem to have an agreed way forward. If we had an agreed way forward and all worked together, you would not have these blockages, and we would not have these arguments.

Mr Lunn: I am sure that everybody is in the same boat as me in being lobbied heavily about the issue, almost exclusively by the concerned principals or governors of controlled primary schools. There is obviously a reason for that: they, along with a number of people from maintained primary schools, are the ones who stand to lose. Every one of them who has been in touch with me has made the point that they do not argue with the need for more resources to be targeted towards disadvantaged schools and areas. They absolutely agree with that. Their problem is that money is being taken from them. It is, if you like, the Robin Hood-type principle of taking from the rich to give to the poor. However, in this case, the rich are not actually rich, and their budgets are already under extreme pressure. Take the example of one school that has a budget of about £1.1 million but stands to lose about £30,000. That does not sound like much until you realise what it entails and that they are already stretched to the limit. So I wonder whether this is the way to go.

I want to talk briefly about free school meals as the criterion for establishing which schools are disadvantaged and which are not. I will make the same point as others: it is a blunt instrument and is not perfect. We have had the Salisbury report, a report from the University of Bristol and, I think, one from the University of Bath, and all have made the point that it is not perfect, but not one of them has come up with an alternative. In the absence of nothing better being suggested, either from inside or outside the House, it seems to me as if the only criterion to use —

I can see that you want to intervene.

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for giving way. We dance around the issue, but is it not the case that there are alternatives: intervention and teachers offering one-to-one tuition? Professor Tony Gallagher, who has been across this in relation to educational issues many times, has clearly said that there are alternatives. In dealing with underachievement, surely the best alternative is to have teachers in our schools rather than on the dole, which is what this proposal would do.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Lunn: Thanks.

I have a great deal of respect for Tony Gallagher, and I do not often disagree with what he says, but he has not come up with an alternative; nobody has. Somewhere down the line, there may be a better system, but we will park that for the time being.

The motion:

It is not a disproportionate impact. It is because of the fact that there are more deprived schools in Catholic/nationalist areas than in what you would call loyalist/Protestant areas. That is just a fact, so the percentages are bound to work out in the way that the Chairman detailed. To me, it is a question of whether you want to direct resources towards deprived areas, irrespective of which sector the school happens to belong to: in other words — to put it bluntly — working-class areas.

We have had a lot of discussion in the House over the years about the needs of working-class Protestant boys. That has been referred to today, and no doubt we will come back to it. That category really needs attention, and it will get attention if these proposals go through. That said, I am not keen on the proposals as they stand because I think that we are putting the cart before the horse.

I have a fundamental problem with all this. The education system needs a proper structure. Others may disagree, but, to me, that starts with the Education and Skills Authority, which we have delayed for far too long. That body then needs to look at the ongoing and everlasting problem of area-based planning.

We are trying to target resources at schools that may or may not be there in the future. We need to get the structure right and sort out area planning so that we can see which schools are — I will not say “left”. However, there will be a reduction in the number of schools. Let us look at the problem at that point, when we know exactly what we are dealing with. We have reasonably efficient schools to deal with, probably slightly bigger schools than we are looking at now. There is a sequence to the process that we seem to be missing.

6.00 pm

I will go back to free school meals and Michael Gove's proposal — sorry, Nick Clegg's proposal — the other day that all P1 to P3 pupils in England get a free school meal. That is to be offered to us as well, but I gather that it will not be offered in such a way that it is compulsory to use the money in that way. In fact, the Minister of Education may well have to fight a battle to extract the money from the Department of Finance and Personnel. However, if he can get that money, a better approach would surely be targeting it at the needs of disadvantaged schools rather than trying to take money out of the stretched budgets of schools that really cannot afford to give it up. Everybody around the House, let us face it, is absolutely in favour of disadvantaged schools getting more attention. It is an absolute priority.

Mr Wilson: I am glad to take part in the debate. When I look at the figures presented to us, it occurs to me that the Minister is engaging in a smash-and-grab raid on schools in east Antrim. Of its 31 primary schools, 30 will lose money, to the tune of up to £250,000 each year. That is not the result of re-prioritising resources. I understand the concept that, if you want to put more money into one area, you have to find it from somewhere else. I am not convinced that educational problems and disadvantage can be dealt with simply by throwing money at them.

Since I was first elected to Belfast City Council, we have had initiative after initiative in working-class areas of Belfast to try to raise educational standards. Money has been thrown at that since the 1970s, and we still have the same problem. So whether additional money is the answer has still to be ascertained. Indeed, the Salisbury report indicated that there needed to be a rationale and clear, conclusive evidence that money spent in that way would have that effect.

We are witnessing the effect of the Minister's financial incompetence. Let us look at the facts: Northern Ireland schools receive a lower percentage of the total education budget than schools anywhere else in the United Kingdom — some 20% less than is normally the case for aggregated schools budgets in other parts of the UK. Even the Salisbury report recognised that and said that the Minister should look again at the central initiatives undertaken by the Department with a view to saving on administration and saving time for schools. What indication have we had from the Minister that, before he started raiding other schools, he started looking at some of the centralisation and central initiatives in his Department? There is about £90 million wrapped up in those.

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Will the Member give way?

Mr Wilson: The Minister will have plenty of time in a minute, but I will give way.

Mr O'Dowd: The Member talks about the Salisbury report and the £90 million of initiatives that my Department funds. Where does the Member think that the £90 million ends up? It does not end up in the administration of my Department; it ends up in schools, which is where it belongs.

Mr Wilson: That was the whole point of the report. Maybe he should read the report before coming here to respond to the debate. The whole point was that those initiatives took money away through their administration.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair)

Read the report. The report makes it quite clear that the Minister should look at those initiatives because money was wasted in their administration. The report states that the number of initiatives should be restricted in order to "minimise administrative costs": does that go to schools? I do not think that it does. It will also minimise:

"effort both at centre and within schools."

That effort absorbs time and resources that could have gone to children.

The second uncomfortable fact for the Minister is that, over this period, he has used money and has been given additional money that, if he needed to put extra money into schools, should have allowed him to avoid taking it from the schools that he is taking it from at present. He came to me when I was Finance Minister and pleaded poverty, and over three years, we gave him additional money. He said that he needed assurance of that money, and over those three years, he had an additional £100 million to go into the schools budget. Indeed, in June, he announced that he had money for teacher redundancy — £20 million — that he did not spend. Did he give it back as a reduced requirement? No, he absorbed it. He alone among Ministers has resisted any budgetary changes because he does not want the incompetence in his Department and the administration of his budget to be exposed. That is why budget reforms have been held up in this House.

Let us get to the point here: when schools lose their budgets, and when 31 schools in east Antrim, primary schools in the maintained and the controlled sector, lose money in their budget as a result of the new common formula funding, it is not because it was necessary to redirect it to areas of social disadvantage. It is because there is a Minister who has not been able to get to grips with spending in his Department. He has not even listened to what the professionals who he appointed have said about spending in his Department, and therefore, he has to smash and grab to raid money from schools. That has an impact on children.

As I said and the Salisbury report said as well, throwing money at schools will not necessarily deal with social disadvantage. However, if you are going to throw money at schools, you should make sure that you do not take it from those who are already spending it on what it was meant to be used for. Look instead at how the Department is run and what efficiencies there might be. A bit more transparency from the Minister about his savings delivery plans and a bit more transparency about his budget may have enabled the Committee to identify where he wasted money —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Wilson: It may then have been able to ensure that schools were not affected in the way that they have been here.

Ms Boyle: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I welcome the opportunity to speak in the debate. The core of the review of the common funding formula was to guarantee the addressing of social need and underachievement and to improve the quality of our teaching in order to have a revised system that would be fit for purpose.

Extensive research and evidence given to the panel by all of the stakeholders that took part in the review — and that was made up of over 400 written submissions and evidence from over 130 varied stakeholder groups that the panel met ranging from schools management, educationalists and community groups — reflected the need for reform. The independent review looked at the apparent links between social deprivation and educational underachievement and at ways to close that gap by considering how the financial management framework is used within a school's budget and how that review could create a system that was fair and transparent. In Robert Salisbury's words, it will create a "more logical outcome" for schools with funding going to meet pupil need.

The review's recommendations called for increased funding for socio-economic deprivation, weighted towards schools with significant disadvantage. I welcome an opportunity to hear from the Minister on the common funding formula overall, but particularly on the rebalancing of funds for children in care, Traveller children and special needs schools, and how the impact of the recent special educational needs review will formulate management of funding to such schools. Given that the long-term core funding needs to be directed to those who are most in need, the current formula gives low levels of additional funding for pupils from socially disadvantaged backgrounds who are likely to require further additional support.

The motion calls for the establishment of the sectoral body to represent the controlled sector. A clause in the ESA Bill allows for the creation of such a body. I ask Members on the opposite Benches to tell the House why they continually fail to progress on ESA.

To conclude, reviewing the common funding formula is needed to benefit all schools, all sectors and all pupils. It lays down —

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way?

Ms Boyle: I am just about to finish. It lays down a foundation for changes that will benefit all pupils. I oppose the motion.

Mr Newton: I support the motion. This morning on BBC's 'Good Morning Ulster', your common funding formula was described as "robbing Peter to pay Paul". Trevor Lunn and I must be talking to the same people, because it was put to me that, again, this was acting in a Robin Hood-type manner, except there are no rich schools from which to steal to give to the poor.

Minister, you, and everyone in this Chamber, regard education as important. You like to think that there is a desire to tackle underachievement as a way out of poverty and of increasing social mobility. A sound education is key to that mobility, but this initiative can be perceived only as somehow tinkering around the edges of the problem. It cannot be seen as a solution in any way to the problem when you take from one and give to another, but the one that you are taking from is not rich in the first place.

It is the law that all children should attend school, and we are fortunate to have that in Northern Ireland. There is a common curriculum, teachers are trained to a high standard and they are professional in their approach. All the evidence confirms that children who are well prepared at primary-school level benefit when they move to secondary-school level. However, there is lots of evidence that children coming from varying baselines will not achieve the best educational experience at secondary-school level. Children, therefore, have different experiences of their schooldays, and some benefit more than others. Some have a positive experience and some have a negative experience.

On the other hand, those children who have a negative experience are ill-prepared to move to second-level education, and the teacher who receives those children who are underachieving at primary level will have a major job trying to help them to achieve their educational or vocational outcomes.

As Mr Rogers, I think, said, the Minister needs to walk in the shoes of the teachers who are trying to address those issues. It is generally those children who come from the poorest and most socially deprived areas who are likely to achieve the lowest academic outcomes. Will the Minister's common funding formula address those issues, or will it just disadvantage others who he has taken the money from and who also need support to achieve?

The Assembly needs to send out a clear message about the future of our children and the need to address social inequalities and underachievement. There are many different approaches across the UK to tackling this cycle of disadvantage and underachievement. It remains a major social problem and restricts the life chances of many of our children at school. Gaining a better understanding of how to achieve success at school and the potential to move up and out of deprivation remains a challenge that our society and this Assembly face.

Many factors impact on our young people's ability to succeed and achieve their full potential. Many interventions have taken place in inner cities and large housing estates across the UK. That does not mean that we should not have interventions, but we have seen the reaction of school principals. We saw the reaction of schools and the attitude of school principals last week when there was a suggestion of giving free school meals to pupils. A principal from east Belfast made the point that he was not consulted about what would make a difference in his school. The approach to school meals remains, as he perceives it, a top-down one rather than a bottom-up one.

6.15 pm

The Minister needs to think again.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Newton: You cannot disadvantage some pupils by taking away from them and giving to others in isolation in the hope —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Newton: — that that will achieve the objectives that we all want to see for the less well-off pupils in our society.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I will be speaking against the motion this evening. Indeed, I speak against the entire insidious context in which the DUP and the Ulster Unionists have framed their discourse on the subject over the past few weeks. To approach today's debate through the toxic lens of community background is woefully inaccurate and highly dangerous. The dire consequence of poverty respects no boundary when confronted with the colour of a pupil's uniform or the confines of any particular education sector. Unfortunately, for too many of our young people, poverty is poverty. It continues to be a fundamental catalyst in high levels of educational underachievement across all communities, be they Catholic, Protestant or none of the above.

To break the link between social disadvantage and educational underachievement would be a remarkable feat for any Department of Education throughout the world. To do so with the limited resources made available to this Assembly would be an astonishing achievement that would not merely make an unprecedented impact on the educational attainment of our young people but would help to create a more equitable society. To realise such an aspiration, we must first set ourselves the task of ensuring that every child, regardless of his or her educational need, is afforded the greatest chance of success. The existing model of funding fails to maximise opportunity for all pupils. It fails to target sufficiently educational underachievement and to address adequately children with additional educational needs, such as children in care.

Mr Givan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Hazzard: No. I want to get through this today. We have heard enough from the Benches opposite.

When we have a situation in which only 34% of children entitled to free school meals are achieving five good GCSEs, compared with 68% of children who are not, we know that something must be done to remedy such a problem. The Chair talked about the:

"blunt instrument of free school meals".

Free school meals is actually quite a specific instrument, in that it targets individual need. The use of the term "blunt" needs to be modified. He also talked about the Bristol report. He gave half the story. The Bristol report states that the English criteria are not wide enough when it comes to income. Our criteria here are wider, so that backs up the use of free school meals.

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Hazzard: I want to get through my speech this evening.

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way on that point?

Mr Hazzard: Yes.

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for giving way. If it is not as blunt an instrument as he is trying to make it out to be, can he explain to the House, on the basis of the money that we have invested in free school meals — this follows on from the point that Sammy Wilson made — where the evidence is that we have increased the outcomes? We still have one in four pupils leaving primary school not having attained adequate levels of numeracy and literacy. Where is the evidence that it works in Northern Ireland?

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Hazzard: Not a problem. In the past five years, we have seen a 10% increase in the educational achievement of children entitled to free school meals. The Chair has never given an adequate explanation of why that is. My guess is that he knows exactly why that is. We will leave that issue there.

A focus on putting our pupils first, coupled with a determination to address the fundamental issue of educational achievement in our most disadvantaged communities, appears to be at the very heart of the proposed changes to the funding formula. It goes without saying that nobody wants to see schools losing out on funding. I stress that the review proposals are still out for consultation. I encourage everybody to participate in the process, especially those schools that feel that they may lose out. However, there needs to be a realisation that limited resources have to be targeted at those in greatest need if we are to finally address the reality of educational underachievement.

I noticed that most of the DUP Members who spoke did not get around to the controlled schools body part of the motion. The DUP calls for the establishment of a sectoral body to represent controlled schools, although the wording in the motion conveniently ignores the fact that such legislative provision is indeed contained in the Education Bill, alongside the provision of the education and skills authority. Indeed, if the DUP were not so busy stalling the progression of the Bill, we could have had a controlled sectoral body in place today. Instead, it placates a small number of elitist schools that feel that they should not be accountable for the public money that they spend.

So, if the Members opposite want to look for a scapegoat to blame for the fact that a controlled sectoral body is still not in place, I suggest that they take their heads out of the sand and face reality. Despite the rhetoric from the Benches opposite, Minister O'Dowd has already facilitated the creation of the controlled sector working group and has committed significant resources to assist in its work to date in advance of the body being formally established in the months to come, hopefully. The DUP needs to realise that it will not come into being until ESA does, so I reiterate my call for the Members opposite to move beyond the narrow ground of sectarian grandstanding and start to tackle the real issues.

It is the real issues that I want to finish on. We have heard the call for alternatives, but we have not been given a single alternative, not from the DUP, not from Danny Kinahan and the Ulster Unionist Party and not from the SDLP. [Interruption.]

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Member will take his seat. We are discussing schools, where you are not allowed to shout across the classroom, so we will apply the same standards here. Continue.

Mr Hazzard: This morning, I was delighted to hear on the radio the Chair finally recognise that we need to address social disadvantage. However, in this debate, the Chair ran away from the issue by not providing an alternative. That is what we need to look to now.

I want to pick up on a point that Danny Kinahan from the Ulster Unionist Party made, and it sums up the position of that party, if it knows the position itself. Danny Kinahan today called for the DUP to join with the UUP in blocking everything that the Minister does. I ask Mr Kinahan: how does that help the children that need help? How will this improve the life chances of our young people? How will this help to tackle social inequality if the UUP and the DUP block everything that the Minister does? The naysayers opposite seem intent on modifying Einstein's theory of insanity.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Hazzard: They want us to do the same thing over and over and then they do not seem overly bothered when nothing ever changes. I oppose the motion.

Mr Beggs: I declare an interest as a governor of Glynn Primary School and that my dad is a member of the North Eastern Education and Library Board.

The Ulster Unionist Party believes that the current common funding scheme is in need of reform. It is too complex, and the right areas are not being appropriately targeted. Therefore, we welcome the comprehensive review that Lord Salisbury undertook during the second half of last year, and it was not particularly surprising that the review reported that the current funding model was not working particularly well.

The challenge was always going to be about what was going to replace it, but, unfortunately, this is where the wheels have fallen off the wagon, and the Minister is currently trying to drive through proposals without appropriate consideration of their adverse effect. I know that the Minister has made an effort to try to consult the schools and to try to involve young people, and we have to welcome that attempt, but I have heard concern about the nature of some of the questions that were made and also the aspect of issuing a consultation to schools just before the summer break. Clearly, that was bad timing.

Nevertheless, it was not so much the manner of the consultation but the funding proposals that have emerged that give greatest concern. What is surprising is the scale of the losers. It is definitely in the order of four out of five schools in many areas that are losing money, ranging from a few hundred pounds to tens of thousands. In my constituency, numerous schools are losing five-figure sums. Larne High School is losing £23,000; Whiteabbey Primary School, more than £20,000; Greenisland Primary School, almost £20,000; Carrickfergus Model, £13,000; Carrickfergus Central, £12,000; Eden Primary School, £10,000; Victoria Primary School, £15,000; Whitehead Primary School, £10,000; and St Anthony's in Larne, £17,000. There are also a number of other schools that may not be losing five-figure sums but are having a very significant proportion of their budget —

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Beggs: Yes.

Mr Storey: I appreciate the Member confirming that his father is a member of the North Eastern Education and Library Board. Will he ensure that, when the board comes to respond to this issue, he will use his vote to ensure that this proposal does not go any further?

Mr Beggs: I thank the Member for his intervention, but my father is an independent man who makes up his own mind, and I am not on the education and library board; he is. I do not understand the question.

I will return to the proposals. It was going to be very stark because the vast majority of primary schools in my constituency were losing money. That is very strange, given the proposal that additional moneys should be going to a review of the early years. I notice from the figures that nursery schools tend to be receiving some additional moneys, but virtually every primary school in my constituency was losing money.

Will the Minister also advise whether he is proposing that playgroups, which have been out of kilter with nursery schools in recent years, should have additional moneys? There does not seem to be much mention of them, or I have certainly not picked that up, but it is important that the early years are addressed. His proposal to take a considerable amount of money, particularly from the primary school sector, is surely the wrong direction and one that we should not be going in.

I firmly believe that it is appropriate to address educational underachievement, and those early years are vital. Free school meals provide one important measurement that identifies a risk of underachievement, but there is the issue of at least 8,000 pupils identified by the Audit Office who have not been registered for free school meals. Is there a danger of being over-reliant on that issue alone and not looking at the effect that that measurement will have on a range of other schools? The outworking of the proposals is going against the flow of what many have been pushing for, which is early years investment, particularly in primary schools.

It would also help if the Minister would advise how his own savings plans are going. As others said, not enough funds are ending up in the classroom. Has he been looking at the bureaucracy within his own organisations? Will we release our teachers to allow them to teach more, rather than having excessive paperwork and policy sitting on shelves behind them that consumes their time and efforts? We need to allow teachers to teach. We need to free them from the bureaucracy. Of course, when you create all that bureaucracy, you also need a bureaucrat to read it, and that is another cost, so you can have too much bureaucracy in the system. Let us get more money to the coalface — our classrooms. Then, of course, there is the £15 million that has been spent on the new Education and Skills Authority to date, even though it does not officially exist. Minister, cut waste, not schools' budgets.

Like many people, I welcome the additional £10 million that has been made available to schools, but I would like clarification. Is that a one-off top-up, or is it recurrent funding? Schools certainly need to know. We all need to know. Another area that, no doubt, is of concern to many is the voluntary schools grant, maintained integrated schools and the issue of VAT. There seems to be a lack of clarity in the figures that have been presented. Is that with or without the VAT, or is there an additional hidden cut that is still to come? We need clarity on that issue.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Beggs: Surely, if schools are operating in a tax-efficient manner, that should be encouraged and supported, not penalised. I will support the motion.

Mr McCallister: Like others, I am somewhat disappointed with the tone of the debate, although it was probably fairly predictable. It was disappointing that, in the main motion, the DUP chose to pick a sector, and I think that has been reflected in the tone of the debate, which is unfortunate. The main focus of the debate goes to the failure at the heart of our government. We have a coalition Government here, yet we have no agreement on how we deal with those issues or how we make changes to the funding formula. We are effectively being asked to have a pupil premium on the cheap by robbing Peter to pay Paul, or by Robin Hood — whatever analogy you want to use. We should not move forward with this unless we identify the money. That is the problem.

I do not think I have heard many dissenting voices against the idea of targeting need. I am certainly one of those voices that say that we should target need and we should direct resources to the most disadvantaged, but I do not think that taking them away from some areas is the right way to do it.

6.30 pm

Mr Givan: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCallister: Certainly.

Mr Givan: I agree entirely with what the Member is saying about targeting disadvantage, but I am sure that he, like me, fails to understand why, in my constituency, the disadvantaged are the ones who are being robbed. Primary schools in my constituency are having money taken away and the two top-performing grammar schools in Northern Ireland, in my constituency, are going to be better off as a result of the changes that the Minister wants to put through.

Mr McCallister: If you look through the list, you will find those bizarre outworkings in many other constituencies. I, like Mr Rogers, represent a large rural constituency. I look around and see the profound effect that this would have on my constituency. The difficulty is that we are using a very blunt instrument, effectively only one measure, to say what that would be. I know that Mr Hazzard does not like the term "blunt instrument" when it refers to free school meals, but I am afraid that it is a very blunt instrument to do what the Minister wants to do, if we are serious about tackling disadvantage. It also has a profound effect on the rural/urban mix. It will drive some of our smaller rural schools to closure.

Look at some of the amounts being taken out. Mr Lunn talked about a school losing £30,000. That is the equivalent of one teacher and possibly more. That is the effect that it is going to have. You should not go down the road of this policy without securing the resources. That is the problem. I think —

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCallister: Briefly.

Mr Storey: It is not an issue of securing resources. The Department has money literally coming out of its ears. It is about the way in which it spends the money. That is the issue. There is no transparency with the Minister or the Department.

Mr McCallister: I hate to sound like a broken record, but you are in government with them. It is a coalition Government. The difficulty we have with this is that one of the Minister's coalition partners is attacking him and another is suggesting that they should block all the policies of the Government.

Mr McCallister: I think that, if you recall, I wanted to take them into opposition. It was not my fault that they did not want to go.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. Mr McCallister, will you resume your seat? I discourage this dialogue across the Chamber.

Mr McCallister: Absolutely. I am probably as surprised as you are, Deputy Speaker, that the Chair of the Education Committee would behave in such a manner.

This is where we get to when we do our politics like this. We end up with a system that has deadlock. We are now into the second Education and Skills Authority Bill. I served a stint with my colleague Mr McCrea on the Education Committee during the first ESA Bill. We are now doing the second one. We were assured, over two years ago, that it would be quite a fast track process. That was clearly wrong. There is no agreement at the heart of government. Policies of this size and magnitude, with the impact that they have on individual schools and, hence, individual pupils, should not be carried forward by one Department in such a manner. They should be government policy —

Mr A Maginness: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCallister: I do not have time, Mr Maginness.

They should be government policy driven forward properly, agreed from the heart of government and be in the Programme for Government. If we cannot find the money, we should not be proceeding with the policy.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member will bring his remarks to a close.

Mr McCallister: We need better and more efficient government. Locate the money before you make the policy changes.

Mr O'Dowd: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Tá mé buíoch deis a bheith agam freagra a thabhairt ar na pointí a rinneadh le linn na díospóireachta seo. I am grateful for the opportunity to respond to the points that have been made during the debate; well, most of the points made during the debate.

The motion deals with two issues: the impact on one sector of my proposals for changes to how schools are funded, and the establishment of a sectoral representative body for that sector. It is worth noting that the proposers have avoided the substance of their own motion. Their motion deals with the needs of only one sector. Those who propose to support the motion need to read it, rather than just listen to what is said from the Benches.

Mr Storey: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will give way later. Regardless of what has been said since, it is disappointing that the proposers of the motion chose to focus on just one sector. For that reason, I will not support the motion.

My response, like my policies, will focus on the needs of all our children and young people, regardless of where they go to school or the sector in which they are educated. It is that focus on putting pupils first and a determination to address the particular issues of educational underachievement in our most disadvantaged communities that caused me to commission a review of how we fund our schools. That review, led by Sir Bob Salisbury, took time to examine specifically, and in some depth, the relationship between social deprivation and educational attainment. The review, in common with a huge body of national and international research, recognises that pupils from socially deprived backgrounds have greater obstacles to overcome and that good schools, well supported, can assist in breaking that link.

The review reiterated the need to ensure better targeting of resources to help schools provide support for young people from disadvantaged backgrounds. That support must be designed to address the level of educational underachievement, which, despite recent improvements, is still too high.

I want to clarify for the record that the figures that Mr Storey gave on underachievement at primary school level are not correct. We do not have one in four pupils leaving primary school with lower than expected outcomes. The figure is closer to one in six, which is still too high, but it is improving. The record needs to be corrected on that matter.

Mr Storey: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: Yes.

Mr Storey: I will clarify for the Minister the reason why the controlled sector was mentioned. The reason why it was mentioned, as he well knows, is that it is the only sector that ends up with nobody to represent it and give it a voice. Every other sector is represented. Since April, the Minister has failed to ensure that the controlled sector is represented in area planning, yet the Catholic sector has two representatives at the table. That is not equality.

Mr O'Dowd: Let me digress slightly. Over three decades, the education and library boards were dominated by unionist councillors. I served on a council that refused to nominate a nationalist councillor to the education and library boards. Are you suggesting that unionist politicians were not representing the controlled sector in the time that they spent on those boards? If you are suggesting that, I agree with you. They were and continue to be interested in only a small minority of schools.

Mr Newton: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will not; no.

As for the second part of your motion, there would be a fully functioning controlled sectoral support body, funded to the tune of £100,000 a year and perhaps more — sorry; it would be closer to £1 million a year — but the ESA Bill is blocked. The ESA Bill is not blocked because of an issue concerning the needs of the Protestant working class. The ESA Bill is blocked on an issue concerning the needs of a small minority of schools. It continues to be blocked on that basis. So the crocodile tears —

Mr Storey: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. It is clear that the Minister is misrepresenting the reasons why ESA has not been implemented. I will give him one reason, namely ownership of the controlled sector. That is nothing to do with a small group of unrepresentative, elitist schools like the one that Mr Hazzard went to.

Mr Deputy Speaker: That is not a point of order. I appeal to Members please to exercise a little bit more discipline and listen to the Minister.

Mr O'Dowd: I assume that, since it was not a point of order, I will be allocated the time that it took away from my address. What he said is news to me. That is not mentioned in the heads of agreement, although I know that agreements do not mean very much to those on that side of the Chamber. This new issue that Mr Storey has brought to my attention tonight is not mentioned in the heads of agreement. The only aspect of the heads of agreement that has been implemented was implemented by me. I implemented the controlled sectoral support body. I brought it together, funded it, made sure that it was working, and supported it.

I assure the Member that it has funding until December this year. However, if the ESA Bill has not moved on by then, it will be very hard to convince me to fund it beyond that point.

Mr Storey: Are you threatening now? Back to the old tactics?

Mr O'Dowd: There is —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. Minister, it might be helpful if you were to address your remarks through the Chair as well. That would discourage Members from engaging directly with you. We will try that out and see how it goes.

Mr O'Dowd: Fair enough, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I apologise for that.

Mr Kennedy: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. This relates to a point of accuracy. The Minister said that it was his view that unionist councillors or elected representatives formed the majority of a great many education boards throughout Northern Ireland, but that was never the case —

Mr Deputy Speaker: I am sorry, Mr Kennedy —

Mr Kennedy: That was never the case. Education boards comprised the entire community.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Mr Kennedy will resume his seat, please. On your own admission, you accept that that is not a point of order. Minister, continue.

Mr O'Dowd: The Salisbury report recommended that:

“More funding should be directly targeted at pupils from socially-disadvantaged backgrounds”

— and that that funding:

“should be weighted towards schools with significant concentrations of disadvantage.”

I make no apology for wanting to target more funds towards the schools that serve our most disadvantaged communities. We cannot grow as a society and an economy if we are prepared to tolerate a situation in which children from poor families have, after 12 years' compulsory schooling, half the chance of their better-off counterparts of reaching the levels of attainment that we all want. That is 34% compared with 68% — half the chance.

Mr Wilson commented on the Salisbury report. I welcome the fact that he has taken time out of his leadership tour to come to the Chamber today to involve himself in the debate, but I want to correct him on a few matters. Sir Bob recommended that I examine the initiatives valuing up to £90 million, and I am on record as having said that I accept that recommendation and intend to do something about it; I will do that. However, the savings involved will be minimal. Many of those initiatives are also directed towards socially disadvantaged communities.

Mr Wilson claimed that I have been less than studious or effective in managing my budget. The Member will know that I was one of the Ministers who never had to return money during any of the monitoring rounds.

Mr Wilson: That is because you ignored the monitoring rounds.

Mr O'Dowd: I did not ignore the monitoring rounds. I spent the money that was allocated to me on education. That is what I was tasked to do as Minister.

The Member referred to the savings delivery plan, which he believed in some way would manufacture new money. I told my officials that it was a paper-shuffling exercise in which I would not allow them to become involved. I do not see it as the role of any Department to shuffle papers from one Department to another. I did not get involved in politics to do that.

As to how we move forward with funding, I presented proposals — they are only proposals — but now that I have seen the increase in the delegated schools budget over the next two years, I intend to put in £30 million to increase the targeting of social need as part of those proposals.

The figures that I am citing from different schools are accurate and based on this year's budget. Next year's budget increases by almost £16 million. I suspect that there will still be winners and losers in that scenario, but the aggregated schools budget next year increases by that sum. It is difficult to forecast the funding of individual schools at this stage. You do not know how many pupils will be there, how many will be entitled to free school meals, how many will need care and so on. However, we have given schools last year's figures and said that if we were to implement based on this budget, this is what would happen, but there is an additional £16 million in next year's budget.

In my comments on looked-after children, I mentioned that we are all acutely aware of the vulnerability of these young people and the importance of ensuring that they get the maximum support possible from the schools that they attend. My proposals would deliver a significant recognition of the complex educational needs of that group of young people, which the motion criticises.

My proposals are only proposals. They are out for consultation. Mr Rogers urged me to find an alternative. I put the question back to him: come to me with an alternative. I put that question to all parties in the Chamber. The consultation is ongoing, so come to me with an alternative. I assure Members that those alternatives will be given due credence as long as they target social need. That is the key.

6.45 pm

As my colleague Mr Hazzard said, Mr Kinahan said that he wants the DUP —

Mr Beggs: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will not give way, because I am short of time.

Mr Kinahan challenged the Democratic Unionist Party to join his party in blocking everything that a Sinn Féin Minister does. I suggest that Mr Kinahan, if he thinks that he can move that agenda forward, would have to get up a lot earlier in the morning. As my colleague said, it is a very negative presentation. Mr Kinahan, too, can come forward with proposals on the way forward.

Mr Kinahan: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will not, no.

The consultation is a genuine attempt to hear from our schools, pupils and elected representatives on the way forward. Of course, it is quite easy to get up and criticise, and say that it should not be this way. Let us hear how you would like us to tackle social deprivation and its impact on schools.

Returning to the motion, I assure Members that I will base my decisions on need, not on creed. The evidence is that children from poor families are at greater risk of underachievement. I will target those children for extra support because they are at risk, regardless of where they go to school.

I have covered many of the points in the debate. Free school meals are a targeted source of support for schools; they are not a blunt instrument. Again, Mr Hazzard raised that point. We know exactly which children require support, and we can identify them — right down to the individual child. I think, therefore, that it is important that we use free school meals.

I move now to the way forward. During the debate, and in the media during the day, it was suggested a number of times that we use funding from the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM). Mr Kinahan came forward with that suggestion. I am happy to support Mr Kinahan and work with him in that regard. He mentioned his concern that we would be using SIF instead of the common funding formula. I believe that SIF money, although delayed, is an essential part of tackling social disadvantage in our communities, and I have no doubt that that money will find its way into communities. However, if the view of the Assembly is that we require further funding for the aggregated schools budget, let us work in common cause on that.

I totally reject suggestions that I have improperly managed or not been transparent about my budget. The Education Committee has a copy of my Department's savings delivery plan. My officials and I have been available to the Department of Education to discuss my budget. I redirected around £90 million over a couple of years, and that money was set aside for redundancies. The money referred to by Mr Wilson, which was a direct result of interventions from the Finance Minister, the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister and me, allowed us to stabilise the education budget. It allowed us to ensure that there were not as many redundancies as once planned. I took the proper decision to use that money to secure posts and jobs in education, and I do not apologise for that either.

The idea that there is money swilling about in the Department of Education is utter nonsense. Compared with the same stage of the previous mandate, the education budget is down £300 million for resources. That was standing still — down £300 million. That does not take into account inflation, rising costs, wage increases etc. With the intervention from the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister and the Finance Minister, we are now around £150 million down from where we were at the end of the previous mandate. It was tight in the previous mandate, so it remains tight. I am using my budget as effectively and efficiently as I possibly can, but I assure Members of this: you need to get out of your head any notion that there is money swilling about the Department of Education. There are still very, very difficult times ahead for education, but, if Members wish to join me in lobbying for further funds for education, I will happily join them in doing that.

Mr Craig: It is with regret that I find myself coming to the debate. The proposals for primary schools are a smash-and-grab, and even those for the secondary school sector are very, very flawed. I will come on to that later.

All politics is local, and I have heard many Members focus in on their own particular circumstances this afternoon. It is no different for us in Lagan Valley, as my colleagues know by the amount of phone calls, e-mails and personal grief that we have all taken on this issue. I will give a prime example of what is happening here. Pond Park Primary School has had £27,883 taken out of its budget. Does anyone want to tell me how that is going to be funded? I know the answer; it means a redundancy. It is as straightforward as that. That school is not sitting with tons of money in excess.

The same goes for Riverdale Primary School, Meadow Bridge Primary School and Downshire Primary School. Downshire Primary School is another nice new school; it is an amalgamation that was agreed years ago. It has lost £30,455 from its budget; that money is gone. It is quite clear that that school can barely take the capacity in its new school building. What is going to happen there? If another teacher goes it will result in larger classes. How does that help those who are in that situation?

I do not want to play the sectarian card that our friend Pat suggested we were playing here today. Not a bit of it.

Mr Storey: It was shameful.

Mr Craig: I heard that and you are quite right; he is no friend of mine and no friend of ours.

Let us take a look at it. In my constituency, we have only three maintained schools. Ballymacward Primary School has had £5,500 taken from its budget. Bingo; it is gone and there is no improvement there. St Aloysius Primary School has had £3,500 taken from its budget; it is gone.

However, the most interesting one of all is St Colman's Primary School in Lisburn. I had the pleasure of attending the opening of that new school only a few months ago. I found it fascinating, because as I sat there as one who had helped to get that new school build, I was lobbied by the principal afterwards, who told me that it was too small and that they needed another classroom. They had converted their library into a classroom because the school is bunged out. What are these proposals going to do for that school?

Oh, but they can look forward to piles more funding. Sorry; they have had £44,000 trailed out of their budget.

I would ask the Minister to go and explain this situation to the man who officially opened that school.

Mr Storey: I wonder who that was?

Mr Craig: It was the deputy First Minister, Martin McGuinness. The Minister should explain to him why the school that he was so proud to open is now left in practical bankruptcy. That is where these proposals lead to. There is nothing sectarian about that.

Mr O'Dowd: Will the Member give way?

Mr Craig: The Member will give way, yes.

Mr O'Dowd: As the debate has gone on, Members opposite have shown a growing concern for the maintained sector, and I welcome that. Why did you not include it in your motion? Members are being asked to vote not on what you said but on what is in your motion.

Mr Storey: I already explained it.

Mr Craig: I will explain it again. The only sector that has no supporting mechanism is the controlled sector. That is why we are highlighting that fact. That is the only reason it is there; there is nothing sectarian about it.

However, I will say this, Minister: I want to nail the free school meals myth. It is a myth. I am tempted to call it something else, but I would be ruled out of order. I have in my hand a list of the 35 worst-performing schools in Northern Ireland. When we take the free school meals criteria and look at what the Minister is proposing under this funding formula, one would think that the worst-performing schools would surely do better and would get more money in the secondary sector. Actually, the worst performing school in the Province — I will not name it — is minus £17,500.

Mr Storey: What sector is it in?

Mr Craig: It is in the maintained sector. The second worst-performing school in the Province, again in the maintained sector, is minus £2,500. I do not want to go on, because I do not want to be accused of being involved in a sectarian headcount, but there are controlled and maintained schools on this list. Of the 20 worst-performing schools in Northern Ireland, six are losing money under this wonderful formula. How does that help those schools in their very difficult situation?

Members around the House have said time and time again how blunt this whole equation for free school meals is. There is a prime example of how blunt it actually is.

Mr Givan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Craig: The Member is more than happy to.

Mr Givan: I appreciate the Member giving way. I declare an interest as a governor of Ballymacash Primary School and Pond Park Primary School. Ballymacash targets children from loyalist estates such as Rathvarna, and Killowen, of which the Member is a governor, also takes children from that area. Largymore Primary School in Lisburn takes children from the Hillhall loyalist estate. The Member will know that, under these proposals, all those schools are losing money. The Member will know that many of those kids go on to the secondary schools —

Laurel Hill, Lisnagarvey, Forthill Integrated — yet, under these proposals, it is the grammar schools in Lisburn that are better off as opposed to the secondary schools. The system is flawed under these proposals.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. I remind Members that interventions are to be short, succinct and to the point.

Mr Craig: I thank the Member for that detailed intervention. It was very pointed and true. If the free school meals criterion and this new funding are going to help all these schools, where is the evidence for that?

The thing that strikes me, and I have always been proud of this fact, is that the two top-performing schools in the Province are in the constituency that I and my colleague represent. I make no bones about it — Friends and Wallace are known across the Province for their academic performances. You would think that, under this formula, there would be some penalty for them and that they are going to lose out. No. I have sat and worked the figures out. The two schools between them are going to get an additional £120,000. Well done; I congratulate those schools for getting that additional money under this formula. However, it is certainly not targeting the disadvantaged. It is certainly not targeting those who are underachieving, is it? There is something fundamentally flawed with the way that this system is working.

Mr Storey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Craig: Yes.

Mr Storey: Would the Member agree with me that an area of our education system that is being totally ignored is the increasing number of children who are on the special needs register? Does he further agree that there is absolutely nothing in these proposals that in any way addresses the increasing number of children on the special needs register and that it could be used as a means of directing funds to children who are in need?

Mr O'Dowd: Send me the proposal.

Mr Craig: In fact, had that criterion been used, we would have seen a much more sensible spread of the funding around these lower-performing schools. That is something that I plead with the Minister to look at.

I need to comment on another thing that a number of Members pointed out. I will not go through the list, but it concerns the timing of the consultation. I have had the primary principals' association on with me today complaining about this. The exercise was done in late June. Schools were going on their usual summer holiday, and, for two months, there were few staff members in the schools, which were actually closed. I ask the Minister to extend that consultation. Even the Minister —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Will the Member bring his remarks to a close, please?

Mr Craig: — is bound to have seen from the debate that there are huge, fundamental problems in here. Give the schools the time to respond properly to you, Minister.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Support for Office Staff

Mr Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes in which to propose and 10 minutes to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who wish to speak will have five minutes.

Before I call Mr Robinson, I want to say to the people in the Public Gallery that the public are always welcome in the Chamber, but there should be no noise and no applause. Let me make that quite clear. But, yes, you are very welcome.

7.15 pm

Mr G Robinson: I beg to move

That this Assembly supports the staff of Driver and Vehicle Agency offices in Northern Ireland; calls on the Westminster Government and the Northern Ireland Executive to take the necessary steps to retain the existing jobs and services; and further calls for new investment by the Department for Transport in equipment and technology.

At the outset, I must state that it is an all-party and non-political motion. Contrary to what some people appear to think, given a personal and hurtful attack on me in a recent e-mail that was circulated to 108 MLAs about my capabilities to lead on this debate, I want to assure the House that I am still 100% in support of the retention of all Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) jobs in Northern Ireland. Of that, there is no doubt.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Mr G Robinson: In fact, I have numerous items of correspondence from Ministers and others in support of my commitment to DVA jobs in Northern Ireland and, in particular, at the Coleraine County Hall centre in my constituency. I also welcome the fact that it is a cross-party motion to support the jobs and services that are currently in Coleraine and the other Northern Ireland offices. I look forward to a unanimous outcome to the debate.

Recently, Swansea MP, Siân James, told a Coleraine newspaper that the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) service in Swansea is under severe pressure and that the quality of service to Northern Ireland customers would suffer if operations were transferred there. She also told Coleraine media that there was a possibility of an increase in identify fraud and that scams have been uncovered by regionally based staff — yet another benefit to retaining services in Northern Ireland and proof of the quality of the staff. Now, I might be mistaken, but most MPs I know are fighting to get work for their constituencies, not saying that there is no scope for expansion due to already existing pressures, as is the case according to Siân James. However, those comments lend great weight to the campaign by local representatives who believe that jobs must stay in Coleraine and the other offices in Northern Ireland. At this stage, I want to commend all the councillors, MPs and everyone who has put their shoulders to the wheel and nailed their colours to the mast. Along with me, I think that they are doing a very good job.

Recent years have seen the north-west hit severely with job losses. We cannot, therefore, afford to lose any more.

The loss of more jobs cannot be justified, especially as performance targets are regularly exceeded by the DVA. In the past five years, 98.7 % of transactions have been completed within the timescale. That is outstanding professional service from all staff.

There is also a proposal for more online business to take place. Although I am not opposed to online business, it has to be remembered that over 60% of DVA customers are over 44 years of age. That is the age group that has the least confidence or desire to use computers. Will we really agree to a system that sees the majority of customers who live in Northern Ireland having to use a worse service because they are not confident in using computers? Personally, I think that it is hard to beat the face-to-face contact that is currently available.

The DVA office in Coleraine currently processes 100% of 66,000 refund applications within five working days. DVLA staff in Swansea will process only 95% of Northern Ireland refund applications that are received by post within 30 working days. That is an unsatisfactorily low standard of customer service.

I wholly endorse the statement from staff that the new proposals, if implemented, will see a great deterioration of that service. That is not acceptable. At a recent public meeting, it was revealed that £1.65 million has been spent on overtime at the Swansea office since local office closures began on the mainland. That further proves that the Swansea office cannot cope at present and would probably collapse entirely under the strain if the Northern Ireland operations were transferred there.

Add the additional unemployment created in Northern Ireland, and it paints a depressing picture of poorer service and more people out of work. The majority of jobs would be lost at the Coleraine centre, which is in an area that has seen many jobs lost due to the recession. Indeed, 1.25% of the entire workforce in the Coleraine area would become unemployed if the plans go ahead. It is an area of the UK that already has above-average unemployment and below-average wages. That, of course, does not include the job losses in the wider economy in Northern Ireland that would happen as a result of the loss of at least £20 million from our economy. The cost to the public purse in benefits would be immense.

There is no financial sense or justification for these proposals. At present, there is a very high satisfaction rate with DVA services among car dealers, who appreciate the speedy and easy service provided by the local offices. That would be lost under the proposals, with dealerships and customers greatly disadvantaged. Again, there would be a loss of service to the public and, in this case, to business. Let us say no to change for change's sake.

The proposals also go against the published wishes of all UK parties to see government jobs spread across all areas. I must also question why there is a long history of underfunding for the Northern Ireland DVA. That underfunding could be seen as a precursor to removing the service altogether. I am proud to say that, despite that, the Coleraine office has provided a service that, in performance terms, has outstripped that of the DVLA in the rest of the United Kingdom. I applaud the Northern Ireland staff for their magnificent achievements despite that underfunding.

I believe that, with proper funding, the Northern Ireland DVA could have the best equipment to do the required jobs and take some of the pressure off the Swansea centre. The staff are more than capable, and, indeed, there would be the possibility of creating more employment, rather than destroying it. It is my understanding that the Coleraine office carries out work for the DVLA Swansea office anyway. Indeed, I would support DVA operations being devolved so that the current situation could not happen again. That means that all aspects of the DVA would be under Assembly control. Remember that all other aspects of the DVA are already under Department of the Environment (DOE) control, so we might as well have control over all functions for the benefit of the people of Northern Ireland. We can lead the way for the rest of the United Kingdom because we have a skilled and willing workforce that can be expanded and take the strain off Swansea.

I believe that it is a scandalous failure that Stephen Hammond MP, who is charged with overseeing the current proposals, has failed to visit the Coleraine site, but, as I suggested at the recent public meeting, perhaps the union and the staff should go to see him, hosted by some of our MPs. I have to admit to receiving very disappointing responses from him to my correspondence. That, of course, mirrors the behaviour of the Secretary of State, who seems to have shown little interest in the protection of these public sector jobs.

Mr Campbell: I thank the Member for giving way. I confirm that we have just received confirmation from Minister Stephen Hammond that a meeting, which the Member alluded to, will take place in a few weeks and will include representatives of the workforce, local Members of Parliament and other interested bodies.

Mr G Robinson: I thank my colleague for that information. That shows, as I said a bit earlier, that if we all work together, we can, hopefully, get somewhere on this issue.

Compare the attitude of the Secretary of State and Minister Hammond with the positive attitude of the previous and current Environment Ministers and local MPs. There can be no doubt about their commitment to the retention of, among others, the Coleraine office.

Northern Ireland has always maintained its own vehicle register. I understand that that has proven to be a great asset for the police and has directly led to a drop in tax evasion, from 10% in 1996 to 0.7% in 2012. That is highly commendable. It is proof positive of the quality of the service and the staff — it is the staff I want to emphasise — in DVA Northern Ireland. Online services cannot replace that kind of professional service to businesses, the police or public customers. With proper investment in the DVA service, I would be confident that Northern Ireland can continue to lead the way in the United Kingdom and, indeed, relieve the undoubted stress that the Swansea operation is experiencing, all while still doing the highly efficient job that it has done over many years.

I am sure that other Members, in their contributions, will make relevant points that I may have missed due to time constraints, but at this stage I urge all Members to support the cross-party motion and to protect these much-needed jobs and the skills set of our local dedicated and loyal DVA staff in Coleraine and throughout Northern Ireland.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Order.

Ms Lo (The Chairperson of the Committee for the Environment): On behalf of the Environment Committee, I support the motion and commend the Members for tabling it. The potential closure of the vehicle licensing office in Coleraine and the consequent job losses have concerned the Committee since it first became aware of plans to transfer that function to Swansea. The Committee is not opposed to the modernisation and improvement of the current system, as some of the proposed changes could result in a more convenient online service for customers in Northern Ireland, but members believe that that can be implemented by the existing experienced staff in Coleraine.

The Committee has fully supported the Minister and his predecessor in their efforts to ensure that the public sector here does not suffer savage job cuts at a time when rebuilding the economy is the top priority for the Northern Ireland Executive. We were encouraged when the Minister managed to obtain agreement from the Department for Transport to carry out an additional public consultation, and we hope that the responses received will influence the final decision of the DVLA. The Committee has also written directly to the Department for Transport to request that its officials brief us on the rationale behind the proposed closures and at the same time provide us with an opportunity to feed back our views. We are hopeful that that can be arranged soon.

I will add a few words as the Alliance Party Member for South Belfast. I very much support the motion. As Chair of the Environment Committee, I have kept a close eye on developments around the Driver and Vehicle Agency. I welcome the consultation secured by the previous Environment Minister and await with interest the analysis of the responses. The list of benefits to Northern Ireland customers outlined in the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) consultation is impressive. However, I can see no reason why that cannot be delivered from the office in Coleraine, which has functioned so well for so many years. Investment in the IT infrastructure for the DVA to do that is long overdue.

IT systems here have not received investment from the UK for many years as integration was being considered. Although the benefits to the customer are good, the closure of the offices in Coleraine and across the country are not good for Northern Ireland in any way. Coleraine is an unemployment hotspot. That office is an important asset for the town, and we must do all that we can to protect it. The impact on Northern Ireland would be to remove up to £22 million per annum from our economy. It is a shame that, in 2010, when the DVLA first made the proposals to relocate the system, greater attempts were not made to secure the posts and technology for Coleraine.

Although being able to undertake certain vehicle-licensing tasks online or via an automated telephone line is beneficial, some of the plan may mean a step back for the Northern Ireland customer.

Under DVLA's proposals, for example, refunds of vehicle excise duty will go to Swansea. The DVLA target is to complete 95% of refunds within 30 working days. The target for refund applications at the DVA in Coleraine is to process 95%, the same percentage, but within five working days — what a difference.

7.30 pm

The Department for Transport has not considered proposals such as transferring work from Swansea to Coleraine. I hope that, following consultation, that option will be considered —

Mr Speaker: The Member's time is almost gone.

Ms Lo: — and that my fellow MLAs would support it.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Ba mhaith liom cúpla focal a rá. I apologise that, being from Armagh, I might not be able to articulate certain points as well as other Members, but I have some sympathy for the people in these jobs. A couple of years ago, when I was on the Environment Committee, we had the opportunity to go to Coleraine to look at the work done there. The alarming thing in all this is that we are talking about 300-plus jobs and livelihoods, as well as the impact on mortgages and everything else. The Chair spoke about modern technology and looking at new ways forward. She is correct, but, in today's economic situation, we need to look at protecting and providing secure jobs.

Mr Clarke: Will the Member give way?

Mr Boylan: Yes, certainly.

Mr Clarke: I agree with what the Member says about supporting jobs. That is why so many people are in the Chamber tonight listening to the tenor of the debate. However, I go back to what the Member for East Londonderry said previously about how the service has been stripped over the years. He referred to the motor trade, and it is on record that I have been involved in the motor trade for many years. While England has enjoyed the retention of registration plates, that is one of the things that we have not had in Northern Ireland. They have been stripping the service received in Northern Ireland, and what they propose now is a continuation of that stripping. Given what the Member for South Belfast said about the percentage of refunds processed, we have been disadvantaged and are being treated as second-class citizens. I am not trying to take away from the main points made by Members from Coleraine about employment.

Mr Speaker: Interventions should not be statements. The Member has an added minute.

Mr Boylan: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I take the point that you made in your intervention, but the important thing today is to look at securing those jobs.

I took some valuable points from an earlier briefing, although I missed some of it. I heard that the service has been stripped back and run down over many years, and that is the problem. I know that previous Ministers have tried to support the DVA, but, in this case, it is a reserved matter. Every day in the Chamber, we talk about supporting and creating jobs. Tonight, in this debate, there is an opportunity for us to take this process forward and see exactly what we can do.

I want to pick up on a few points about the impact of this. Earlier, someone asked what the point was of transferring jobs from the North of Ireland to Swansea. There is no point in losing 300-plus jobs here and creating them over there. We have heard from people across the water that Swansea cannot cope. Let us protect and support what is here now.

The Chair of the Environment Committee mentioned a loss to the local economy of £22 million. However, it is not just that; there are other jobs in the North. Other areas will lose out; not just those around Coleraine.

There is talk of moving some of the services to post offices, but those would then need to be upgraded, so why not look instead at upgrading the IT systems in this area?

My final point in support of the motion is that maybe the Finance Minister should look at devolving this matter so that we can run it from here. Perhaps Members will support that suggestion.

Mr Rogers: I welcome the opportunity to engage in this important debate. I was delighted to meet some of the workers earlier today. I see the debate as seeking two specific outcomes. The first is the retention of the existing functions, jobs and services at DVA in County Hall, Coleraine and the local office network, which is spread throughout Northern Ireland. The second is new meaningful investment in DVLA by the Department for Transport into hardware, IT development and services, and for the development of alternative and new methods of service delivery.

Other Members have talked about the potential job losses. Like them, I am deeply concerned about the major job losses for Coleraine and right around the North. In Downpatrick in my constituency, it could mean eight people losing their job. Those jobs must be secured in Northern Ireland. I do not accept the argument that, to deliver electronic services for motorists here, they have to be managed from Wales.

Since the start of the closure programme earlier this year affecting regional local vehicle licensing and registration offices, Swansea, in the four months of April, May, June and July, has spent over £1.65 million on overtime payments. That is totally indefensible. Clearly, DVLA, the staff and IT systems in Swansea are unable to cope with the growing workload that is now being expected of them. What chance have they of coping if the large volume of work from Northern Ireland is transferred there? That is from a Government agency already suffering from customer satisfaction standards that are well below those enjoyed by DVLA here.

The Northern Ireland motorist has stated repeatedly and unambiguously that the DVLA has performed magnificently in delivering all its services. In recent years, the customer satisfaction level for transactions with the Driver and Vehicle Agency has been consistently measured at between 98.7% and 100%. That covers all sorts of transactions. That is an incredible performance for an organisation that the paymasters in Swansea and the Department for Transport claim could be better if uprooted and dragged off to Swansea. DVLA locally outperforms all other Government agencies in customer satisfaction. Indeed, DVLA is only one of 25 holders of the customer service excellence awards in Northern Ireland.

I commend my party colleague John Dallat, who has been consistent in his approach to this issue, and the previous Minister of the Environment and the present one. Other people talked about the Northern Ireland public. The Northern Ireland public deserve the highest quality service. If I am to re-register my car, I can take my documents to Downpatrick and the whole process takes just a few hours. What will the new process take? Weeks? Maybe it will take months, which is what we heard earlier. That is if my documents do not get mislaid or lost in the post. If I sell my car and wish to cash in my tax disc, that can be processed within two weeks if I write off to Coleraine. How long will it take if it goes to Swansea? It might take two months. Those are only two examples of how we would be accepting an inferior service.

Mr D Bradley: I thank the Member for giving way. He has certainly clearly outlined some of the losses to the public here in Northern Ireland. There are other losses. The service staff here have developed very good relationships with licensing and registration in Shannon and an Garda Síochána. They play a vital role in reducing car crime and improving road safety figures. If the service is moved to Swansea, that will be lost to us. It is a very significant part of the service, and it should be retained here.

Mr Speaker: Once again, I remind Members that those who have the Floor give the Floor and take the intervention, but then interventions should not become statements in the House. Interventions should be sharp and to the point, and then we should move on.

Mr Rogers: I thank the Member for his intervention. It was a very worthwhile point, but a little long-winded.

Mr Speaker: The Member has a minute added to his time as well.

Mr Rogers: The all-party support that the workers have attracted is indication of the esteem in which they are held. However, it is much more than that; it is a clear message that every Member of the House has had enough. Our patience is exhausted with the haemorrhaging of public service jobs in Northern Ireland to shore up political support for a coalition Government who have a clear intention of destroying the public sector and dressing it up as efficiency savings. Thankfully, our MPs at Westminster are engaging in the campaign. I sincerely believe that they are working on it together, just as we are here in Stormont. These jobs are too important for this region, and we must do all in our power to ensure that they are retained in their rightful place.

Mr Elliott: I apologise on behalf of my colleague Robin Swann, who was to speak. Unfortunately, he has had to go to England with his young child, so we wish them well in the coming days.

This is a very important issue. We listened to the Members who spoke earlier highlight the numbers of employees in Northern Ireland who are involved in this matter. Although Coleraine is a big area of employment, we also have other centres in Armagh, Belfast, Ballymena, Downpatrick, Enniskillen, Londonderry and Omagh. The significance to the economy cannot be underestimated. I think that there is widespread and total support in the House, and I commend the previous Minister of the Environment, Mr Attwood, and the current Minister on their support for the continuance of these jobs and this service in Northern Ireland. I am led to believe that there is a manned telephone service for the people of Northern Ireland, but it does not seem to be very widely advertised or publicised. When he is up, I would like the Minister to give us some indication of whether that telephone service has been advertised in Northern Ireland and how widely it has been made available to the public.

To me, no convincing argument has been made about moving these jobs or this service entirely to Swansea. However, I could make a very convincing argument to keep them here. That argument is based on the face-to-face and direct contact that there is Northern Ireland. How many of you have tried to contact some of the consumer advice lines, or some of the statutory agency advice lines, or, indeed, some of the big business advice lines to try to get some assistance? I would say that there a few of you. I know of one body for which there is an MLA helpline, but, one day, I tried to go through the ordinary consumer line to see what it was like. Let me tell you, it was an absolute nightmare. I spent 49 minutes on the phone trying to get someone to talk to, and I was quite impressed by the message that I kept receiving every minute:

"Your phone call is important to us. Please do not hang up."

I do not want to have that same service from Swansea whenever I try to phone about my driving licence or my tax disc.

A group of businesses in this community have lobbied me on this matter. They are car dealer businesses, and they feel that it is very important that they have that face-to-face contact. They have numerous problems on a weekly basis. Sometimes those are very minor problems, and they can get them sorted very quickly. I do not think that that has been taken into full consideration. They can have that face-to-face, direct contact — that personal contact, if you want. You do not have to phone the helpline number and wait for 40 minutes to get speaking to a human being instead of a machine. What is this society coming to if we cannot get that direct contact? Whether it is an advantage or a disadvantage, at least there are now MLAs in every constituency who most of our constituents can get speaking to. I think that that is helpful, because quite often in today's society, we do not do enough of that face-to-face and direct contact.

I appeal to the current Minister of the Environment to please keep up this battle and this fight. Do not let this go by the wayside, because, if we do, we will regret for years to come that we do not have this direct contact. Those 300-plus jobs are very important to the economy here, but much more than that is the importance to the wider business community and the individual face-to-face direct contact, which we will lose forever and a day. I fully support the motion, and I am fully behind —

7.45 pm

Mr McGlone: I thank the Member for giving way. I, too, support and endorse everything that he said there. What I find very useful is the ability to tax the car by telephone, but we need more resources dedicated to it at certain times of the month when almost everybody is trying to do it. That, too, is something that could be rectified in the Department. I find it a great facility to use. Once you ring through, it is very easy to call up the details of your vehicle.

Mr Elliott: Thank you very much, Mr McGlone. That is an internal management issue that could be improved as well.

I say this to the entire House: let us get behind the motion, let us get behind those jobs, and let us retain this service in Northern Ireland for the people of Northern Ireland.

Mr Campbell: I support the motion, as I hope everyone will. As has been stated by a number of Members, this is not just about job retention in the Coleraine/north Antrim area. There are over 200 jobs in that part of Northern Ireland, but there are another 100 jobs scattered right across the rest of the country. I am sure that those who are with us today from the DVA, and from the rest of the workforce, will be heartened to know that there is such support for the retention of not just the jobs but the services. That is what many hundreds of thousands of people want to know. They want to know that they are going to a high quality of service retained, and a number of Members mentioned that.

The proposer of the motion, Mr Robinson, used a very interesting stat, which is that over 60% of DVA customers are over 44 years of age. We all know that, the further up the age range that you go, the less likely people are to be computer literate and to do business on the internet. When almost two thirds of your customers are in an age range that makes them less likely to be adaptable to internet usage, you have to take that into account when providing your service. Investment is required. Given the fantastic turnaround time that exists at the moment, further investment is needed, not a diminution and elimination of the service.

I want to deal with some of the issues in the few minutes I have. This issue has not just arisen in the past few years. Back in 2005, there was an initial attempt at closure. I raised the matter then in the House of Commons, and my question for written answer was responded to by the then Minister, Dr Stephen Ladyman. After elaborating on what was going to happen between Coleraine and Swansea — that the services were going to be retained — he then said:

"However, service to NI customers will continue to be delivered from Coleraine and NI local offices."

That was on 4 July 2005.

I then followed that up throughout the rest of 2005 and 2006 with further questions to try to ensure that that was the case. In 2007, when the matter was still rumbling on, I raised it again at the Northern Ireland Grand Committee. In 2008, I sponsored a debate in Westminster Hall in the Houses of Parliament about the HMRC staff that are also based in County Hall in Coleraine, but, because I knew that the DVLA was still a live issue, I raised it as well at that debate to ensure that, in the words of one late Member, it had not gone away, you know.

Mr Clarke: Will the Member give way?

Mr Campbell: Yes.

Mr Clarke: I see the case that the Member has outlined, but is he cynical that there is a different approach from the Westminster Government as to what their intention really is here, and there has been for some time?

Mr Campbell: Yes, I thank the Member for that.

Mr Speaker: The Member has a minute added on to his time.

Mr Campbell: I am glad to hear that.

It is not just a cynical approach. I think that people are looking at it as a cost-cutting measure. That is why we need to concentrate on the level of service that exists.

The issue rumbled on into last year, when I raised it again with the then Under-Secretary of State for Transport, Mike Penning — who is now the Minister of State for Northern Ireland — and, again, reassurances were given.

The most crucial reference that I want to use is this: in March this year, at Northern Ireland Questions in Westminster, I raised the issue with the Secretary of State. She was very much aware of the importance of the issue. She was in Coleraine last week; and I have discussed the matter with the transport Minister. This is her quote from six months ago:

“It is important that he takes into account the views of Northern Ireland before he makes his decision.”

Well, if it is important that he takes into account the views of Northern Ireland, he is going to get them tonight. He is going to get them and he is going to get them unanimously. Hopefully, without exception, the opinion from Northern Ireland will be: retain the jobs; retain the services.

I alluded in an intervention to Mr Robinson's speech that the issue is going to develop in the next few weeks at Westminster. We now have a meeting agreed with Minister Hammond. Hopefully, we will be able to drive the point home. I understand that a DVD has been prepared to give him the message not just orally but visually, so that he gets the message very loud and very clear.

In conclusion, it is heartening to see unanimity around the Chamber. All too often, the press zone in on issues that we disagree upon. Here is an issue that we agree upon. It is a matter that generates all-party support. It would not be a good idea for a Minister of one party with an MLA, and local councillors from the same party, to go off on a solo run at County Hall. Hopefully, that will not happen in the future.

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I add my support to the motion. I thank Members for staying to this late hour to discuss the issue. It is not often that we get such a good turnout for a motion at this time of the evening. It is important to have cross-party support.

I add apologies from my party colleague Cathal Ó hOisín, who cannot be with us this evening but remains fully supportive of the workers based in Coleraine and elsewhere.

The Tory Minister involved, Mr Hammond, said in recent months that it was essentially a good thing for the North to lose the jobs because there was less chance that driver and vehicle licensing services would be biased to a particular religious group. That was an absolutely extraordinary statement to make. In other words, we should be thankful for losing these jobs. I think that all sides of the debate and all sides of the House were bewildered by those comments from the Minister and the Department. Each and every one of the workers involved provides an excellent service to the entire community and has 100% support from the House in upholding their integrity. Those comments need to be put on the record.

The question has to be asked, however: why are Ministers in the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) and the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI) working day in and day out to create hundreds of job through investment and inward investment? The Ministers are building up the blocks of a skilled workforce in full-time employment, then a London Minister comes along and knocks them all down and throws in a comment that I would say was quite ignorant, putting salt in the wound of many of those workers who are worrying about how they are going to feed their families in six months to a year's time.

This is a classic Civil Service trick of winding down and neglecting a service for, some would say, some 15 years. The Minister of the Environment needs to ask why that has been the case. Coleraine has sought funding for years to develop services, such as the telephone relicensing that other Members have referred to. Again and again, head office said no, no, no; no further funding and no improvements to services. So, it does appear that this has been a policy of deliberately running down the local service to bring us to a position where jobs would be transferred to Swansea. Despite all that, the DVA provides a world-class service, superior in many ways to Swansea, which is currently under some pressure, as Members alluded to.

Tom Elliott referred to a local service with local knowledge. I have been in contact with the service on many an occasion and have spoken to people who I actually know from the Ballymoney district.

It is worth reminding ourselves that this is not only about Coleraine. It affects people in Limavady, Ballymoney, Ballycastle, Ballymena and elsewhere.

The other part of the Civil Service trick concerns the consultation. The consultation was carried out in eight weeks over the summer, when people are on holidays etc. That is a classic trick to try to catch out the politicians and workers, and it will not be stood for.

The elephant in the room is that this should not be the call of a Tory Minister in London. It should not be the call of McLoughlin or Hammond. This decision should be made by local politicians who know the importance of the service provided, the importance of the decentralisation of public sector jobs — in this case to west of the Bann in Coleraine — and the cost to the local economy in services and jobs.

I appreciate the work that the Minister has done in the relatively short time that he has been in post. However, he needs not only to push for these jobs to be secured in the short term but to engage in talks with the Minister of Finance and Personnel and other Executive Ministers to secure support for the transfer of all DVA responsibilities to the Executive. That is how we can secure these jobs in the longer term and address the matter of the DVA being starved of the finance that is urgently needed to improve the service.

I add my support to that of the Members who have spoken. This is not only about jobs; it is about families and about parents putting food on the table and keeping a roof over people's heads. These jobs will be on the line over the next six months. We need to put our shoulder to the wheel and defend those jobs.

Mr McQuillan: As a representative of East Londonderry, where the Coleraine DVA office is situated, I support the motion. The closure of that office would represent a major blow to not only Coleraine but the whole local community.

For many years, the Coleraine DVA office has provided a high level of service to the population of not only Northern Ireland but the UK as a whole. Any closure would represent a failure to recognise the dedication and work ethic of the staff based there.

I have to say that I was saddened, disappointed and angered by the language used in the consultation document, which implied that the staff based there are biased on religious grounds. The comment was an insult in itself, but further insult was added when it was used as a reason to close the regional office. Perhaps any accusation of bias should be thrown at those responsible for including such a statement in the Government document. The comments fuelled further the upset of the staff and local community amid the news that their jobs were on the line. I am pleased that the mainland Minister responsible has apologised and ruled the comment out of order.

Any decision to close the office would have a devastating impact on the local community. The office employs over 300 people, which represents 15% of the local workforce. To put it in context, that is equivalent to the loss of 12,000 jobs on the UK mainland. It is well known that there are limited job opportunities out there, with the Northern Ireland economy heavily dependent on the public sector. The private sector economy in the Coleraine area could not absorb a workforce of over 300 people.

Those looking for work have to look elsewhere and outside of town, which could take them and their families out of the community. I fear that the job losses could result in families not only moving away from the area but losing their homes if they are unable to secure alternative work.

Today, we aspire to a healthy society. Such a decision has health implications, as poor health and well-being are directly linked to unemployment. The Minister must think about the stress caused by the current situation, in which staff and families are waiting to see what will happen.

Local business would suffer from a loss of trade, as local traders are dependent on the public investment in local people and the jobs that that creates. The loss of these jobs will remove a large proportion of revenue from the local economy. The impact will be devastating, as local shopkeepers and businesses in general are struggling in the current climate. Coleraine has suffered a 9.2% decline in jobs, owing to the downturn in the economy over the last few years.

In January 2013, the unemployment benefit claimant count in Coleraine was 2,045, which was an increase of 144% on the January 2008 figure. Between 2001 and 2011, the number of those employed in manufacturing fell by 38%. The construction sector has also suffered a dramatic 42% decline in the last four years. Vacancy rates in our town centre have increased by 100% in the past year. Where will this all end? I am in favour of retaining this office. With people's livelihoods in the balance, I support the motion and urge every Member of the House to do so.

8.00 pm

Mr Storey: Like other Members, when it comes to this stage in the debate, one is always in the invidious position where most of the salient points have been made. However, that will not stop me trying to make some others.

There is an old saying that, when you make change, there should always be a compelling argument for it. In none of the documentation that we have seen to date has there been any compelling argument as to why these jobs should be relocated to Swansea. Indeed, the counterargument has been made. I have to commend all those people, many of whom are in the Public Gallery tonight, who have made an outstanding case to prove that the best place for this service to be provided is not in Swansea. That is not to be disrespectful to those who are employed in Swansea or to that location; but the best thing is for these jobs to be retained in Northern Ireland.

Look at the customer satisfaction survey that was carried out. If we were trying to defend the indefensible, or we had statistics that proved that this service was failing to meet its targets or the requirements of the public, then it would be difficult to counter the decision. However, that is not the case. I commend those in the office in Coleraine, many of them are from my own constituency of North Antrim and travel to work in Coleraine, as another Member for North Antrim has already said.

Let us look at a number of other issues that are pertinent. Some comment has been made already about the scurrilous attack that was made on staff in Coleraine. I am glad that that has been apologised for. However, surely, on the basis of that alone, the Minister is now not only duty-bound to apologise but to withdraw this consultation and ensure that such a scurrilous attack on the staff in Coleraine and in Northern Ireland is never again registered.

Mr Clarke: Will the Member give way?

Mr Storey: Yes.

Mr Clarke: Would that be going far enough? Given that the Minister has made those comments, is he in a position to preside over a decision, now or in the future, on this service?

Mr Speaker: The Member can have another minute.

Mr Storey: The Member makes a very valid point. We have already seen in the past that Ministers who make a comment that predetermines or prejudices an outcome of a supposed consultation process are unable to continue it. For that reason and for others, this process is now not only fundamentally flawed but was discredited at the public meeting organised in Coleraine.

I commend all the parties which have lent their support to this. It is not often that, in this House, unanimity breaks out. It is an unusual thing, so people in the public gallery might see something that has not been seen for some time in Northern Ireland: their public representatives speaking with one voice. So I commend the current Minister, the previous Minister from the SDLP who worked on this issue and other Members. It is only right and proper that we also mention a Member who, unfortunately, cannot be here this evening but who has lent his support to this campaign. I refer to Mr McClarty, who has signed the motion. Our thoughts and prayers continue to be with him as he recovers, and we trust that soon he can be back amongst us. So, unanimity is a given.

I must say to Members of the House that we can have unanimity, a motion and opposition, but we need to ensure that we continue to drive this case forward. I welcome the comments made by the MP for the area, Mr Campbell, and the efforts that have been made by our colleagues at Westminster to ensure that this matter has been raised not only in the past number of weeks but as far back as 2005.

I would like to mention a particular group that contacted me. I would be failing in my duty if I did not place this on public record and convey my appreciation and thanks to the staff at Coleraine for it. The Cloughmills Vintage Club contacted me and named particular individuals in the Coleraine office — which I will not do — and made it abundantly clear that they get an outstanding service. There are some Members who will know that vehicles from as far back as 1952 can be traced by a chassis check. I have to say that the vintage club in Clough Mills is very concerned that the service that it has received, as has been mentioned by my colleague Mr Clarke and others, will not be delivered from Swansea.

I have to make a final comment, going back to my original remarks, and it is this: if you are going to make a change, you have to make a compelling argument for that change. No such argument has been made. Therefore, Mr Speaker, in light of the motion, which I was glad to have been of some help in putting together for the debate tonight, I trust that the House will send out a very clear and unequivocal message to the Government that these jobs should remain in Northern Ireland. I commend the staff and everybody involved in the campaign.

Mr Allister: I, too, happily join in supporting the motion. However, I would be happier if we did not have to debate it, because there should not be a threat to these jobs. That has to be the starting point. However, for a variety of reasons, there is a threat.

I think that the resolve around the House to resist the job losses is all to the good, indeed necessary, not just to save the 200 or 300 jobs in or about Coleraine and Ballymoney, but to save what are strategically vital jobs in an area of the Province where we seldom see new job creation. How long has it been since into Coleraine or Ballymoney we have had an injection of jobs of any quantity? Yet, here, at a stroke, we have a proposition that we should be robbed of jobs in circumstances in which there is no justifiable reason and where the service, for which things have been made very difficult by dint of a lack of investment, has been performing to an exceptional degree and has built into it a local, caring dimension such that the traders who go there to tax cars and other vehicles are amongst those most complimentary about the service provided.

Very often, you meet people who, when they are dealing with officialdom, complain vehemently about bureaucracy, needless delays, and all of that. I do not hear that about the DVA office. What I hear, in contrast, is a recognition of the people who work there — real people who care about other real people and who will go the second mile to help them. No disrespect —

Mr I McCrea: Will the Member give way?

Mr Allister: Yes; I will give way.

Mr I McCrea: I think that this has been said on a number of occasions by various Members, but will the Member agree with me that Northern Ireland people are different from people in the rest of the United Kingdom in that we are a kind race and provide a kind voice on the other end of a phone? Does he agree that it makes a difference when you have a difficulty if there is somebody on the other end of the phone who understands your problem and wants to help?

Mr Allister: Yes. It can also be a help, on occasions, if they understand the accent.

Mr Speaker: The Member has an added minute on to his time.

Mr Allister: To have injected into that situation the slur on the workers that there was a sectarian issue that needed to be rooted out by rooting out the jobs was, as has been said, wholly scurrilous. It is right that all scurrilous remarks should be apologised for. It is right that those who make scurrilous innuendoes and assertions should apologise for them. Not all do.

I trust that the Minister, who has apologised somewhat, will be a big enough man for that; not all are.

Another part of the motion is important. The second limb of the motion calls for new investment by the Department for Transport in equipment and technology. That is part of the reason why this service is being put in jeopardy: the absence of technology. My message is that it is not enough to save the jobs; we need to underwrite them with the support of new investment. I trust that that most assuredly will and must happen. It will have to be the second part of the campaign, which must not be forgotten. When the campaign is successful in saving the jobs, it cannot be left there. It has to be carried on to underwriting the jobs through proper investment.

I commend the staff and the union for the excellent campaign that they have run, along with politicians of various ilks. It is right to acknowledge the outgoing and the new Minister of the Environment in particular for their efforts. Frankly, the issue is more important than worrying about whether someone turned up for a photograph without the involvement of others.

My name is not on the motion; no one asked me to sign it, but I am not griping about it. It is a bigger, more important issue. I commend the SDLP Ministers for the manner in which they have addressed the issue. There is a burden on them to deliver, and I trust that they will deliver and that we can all rejoice in that.

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): I welcome the motion and the cross-party support that it has received. There is no doubt that the resounding opposition that has been expressed today by all Members sends a very clear signal to the British Government about the importance that the Assembly places on having our public services delivered locally and to the high standard to which we have become accustomed from vehicle licensing staff.

Let me take this opportunity to praise the staff in all the vehicle licensing offices, not only in Coleraine but across the North. Those staff have continued to deliver an exemplary service to the public despite the threat of losing their jobs, which has not just arisen over the past few months but has, unfortunately and regrettably, been the case on and off for almost 10 years.

I visited my local vehicle licensing office in Derry a few weeks ago and was struck by the dedication of staff who diligently helped customers to ensure that a high-quality service was provided. I went to Coleraine, where I talked to staff and heard at first hand their concerns not only about the potential loss of their jobs and the impact that that might have on their families but about their genuine concerns that customers here will receive a much lower standard of service if the work is taken to Swansea.

Like many in the House, I welcome the availability of greater access to the vehicle licensing services that the DVLA is now proposing. Indeed, I would ask why it is only now that these enhanced services are being made available to citizens in the North when they have been available for almost 10 years in Britain. There has been almost a decade of neglect and underinvestment in vehicle licensing services here by the DVLA. That explains, Mr Elliott, why the telephone service is not advertised. That is because the DVLA refused to invest in it despite demand from the public for that service. It is another in a long line of examples of DVLA underinvestment.

However, despite having access to online services for almost 10 years, almost half of all vehicle licensing transactions in Britain are still conducted over the counter. Not everyone has access to the internet, nor do they necessarily have the confidence and experience to go online to pay for their motor tax. Some people need assistance to complete the necessary forms, which is why they prefer to interact on a face-to-face basis with staff in local licensing offices. That is their choice, and it should not be taken away. Without access to expert staff, some customers will, undoubtedly, be left confused, and there will be more or bigger errors. There will be lost revenue and delays in processing, which not only inconvenience customers but potentially threaten the viability of small local businesses. Small car dealers and traders rely on the quick turnaround of licensing transactions. They currently receive this service at their local licensing offices, which allows them to continue to trade in these difficult economic times.

8.15 pm

The ongoing closure of local offices in Britain has already resulted in backlogs of up to six weeks for some transactions, and the situation in Scotland has been labelled a "shambles" by the chief executive of the Scottish Motor Trade Association. That is not the sort of service that we want here. The Department for Transport and DVLA in Swansea attempted to bulldoze ahead with their centralisation plans, without any meaningful engagement or consultation with the public or political representatives here. However, thanks to the relentless efforts of my predecessor, Alex Attwood, they reluctantly conceded the need for a public consultation before they reached a decision on the future of vehicle licensing.

Unfortunately, the consultation process was deeply flawed. It was launched at the beginning of our holiday period in July and lasted for the minimum period of eight weeks. It was completely one-sided, amounting to little more than an announcement of the DVLA centralisation plan, without any proper consideration or evaluation of other options. It dismissed the impact on the local economy and on the lives of DVA staff, and it outrageously slurred the reputation of the agency's hard-working staff by suggesting that taking this work to Wales would avoid any risk of services being delivered in a biased, sectarian manner. I protested to Stephen Hammond in the strongest possible terms about that offensive and totally unfounded accusation, and I acknowledge his public apology in the House of Commons to DVA staff.

Not only would DVLA's proposals for centralisation lead to a poorer standard of service for the public, they would be catastrophic for our local economy. The proposal to centralise all residual work in Swansea would result in the closure of all motor tax offices in the North, with a direct loss of over 300 jobs in the public sector. When you apply the multiplier effect, as the loss of these jobs would undoubtedly impact on businesses in the private sector, the local economy would be set to lose over 500 jobs. That is the equivalent of about 20,000 jobs being lost in Britain. The annual loss to the local economy would be over £11 million in wages and over £22 million in gross value added.

As many highlighted today, the impact on Coleraine would be devastating, with 235 public sector jobs being lost in an area that depends heavily on public sector employment and in which unemployment has doubled since 2006. The impact on Coleraine would be 18 times greater than on any location in Britain where a vehicle licensing office is being closed. However, let us not forget the seven other locations that have local licensing offices — Belfast, Downpatrick, Armagh, Omagh, Enniskillen, Derry and Ballymena. The economic impact of the DVLA centralisation proposals would have a profound effect right across the North. The economic impact here is totally disproportionate. The DVLA proposals fail to take account of the local economic, social and political context, and they fly in the face of commitments by the British Government in the recent economic pact to assist the Executive in growing the local economy.

As for how vehicle licensing should be delivered here, there are other options that the DVLA could and should have considered but has chosen to ignore.

Mr Storey: I thank the Minister for giving way. My intervention is on that point. It also ties in with the motion that we are debating, which we are quite confident will be approved. The motion calls on:

"the Westminster Government and the Northern Ireland Executive to take the necessary steps".

Will he assure the House tonight that, as the Minister respondent, he will take that back to the Executive and that it will be a priority? He has outlined the steps that could be taken. Will that be endorsed not only by Hansard in this debate but by the Executive?

Mr Durkan: I can certainly give the House that assurance. In fact, I can tell the House that I raised this issue on Thursday at my first Executive meeting. This is a priority for me, and I believe that it is also a priority for the Executive.

There is no reason why the availability of alternative ways of licensing vehicles should lead to the closure of local offices. There is no reason for moving the work to Swansea. There is no reason why the staff in DVA could not continue to provide vehicle licensing services to those customers who prefer to renew their licences over the counter. Indeed, with the exemplary track record of customer service and high satisfaction levels, there is no reason why the British Government should not consider moving additional work here to support our local economy.

I agree with the comments of Laurence Robertson MP, the Chair of the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee. He said that the DVLA proposal is another example of how centralisation proposals by GB Departments always act against the interests of Northern Ireland and how Northern Ireland is never considered as a suitable base for UK-wide business.

I have written, once again, to Stephen Hammond in response to the DVLA consultation. I have set out clearly a robust and comprehensive case against the centralisation proposals and the loss of local services and jobs, which is based on evidence and facts. In that, I relied heavily on an independent economic impact assessment commissioned from Oxford Economics. That independent assessment confirmed the devastating impact that the cuts would have in the North. I assure you that I will continue to drive this case. I have demanded a meeting with Mr Hammond and arrangements are being made for that.

I found the intervention from Mr Bradley on the role of DVA staff in helping to tackle car crime very interesting. Even more interesting would be an extension of that point to include its role and work with its counterparts in the South and police forces in both jurisdictions to tackle terrorism and share sensitive information about car ownership and movements on both sides of the border. I will seek further support on that point from the Justice Minister to strengthen our argument to retain these vital services.

It is imperative that Mr Hammond takes account of the local context here before he reaches a decision on the future of vehicle licensing. I have also arranged to meet the Secretary of State about the issue.

I know that many Members have responded equally strongly to the DVLA proposals, and I know that I can count on continuing support here and at Westminster. Again, I will call on my Executive colleagues to do everything possible with me to ensure that the centralisation plans are abandoned and replaced by sensible and sustainable proposals that safeguard the quality of services provided to motorists here, that provide motorists with genuine choice, that safeguard jobs and that protect our economy.

Mr Dallat: At the outset, I want to wish David McClarty every health in the future. I also want to wish Robin Swann success with his baby. Both Members have been unstinting in their support, and they deserve our praise.

I was very happy to draft this motion with Mervyn Storey for circulation to the other parties. I just wish that we had more opportunities for doing work like this. Today, Mr Speaker, is a good day for the Assembly, and I know that you, as Speaker, will be extremely proud that, at this late hour of the night, the Public Gallery is packed with people who have come here united and emphasising to each and every one of us the absolute need for unity. That is because, at the end of the day, we have a tremendous opponent to confront.

Today's contributions are very important. However, several Members emphasised that this is only the beginning. It is the beginning of a campaign. Yes, the consultation is over. Several Members referred to the highly offensive remarks that were made in the consultation paper. I want to say, very briefly, that those remarks were offensive, deeply hurtful and, very importantly, an illustration of just how badly informed the author of that document was. The document is not just offensive; it is totally discredited by the very fact that anybody would accuse the workers in Coleraine of bias.

There are, of course, many other myths in the document. They have told us that, to deliver electronic services for the motorist, the system must be managed in Wales. Again, like the bias comment, that is totally untrue and not necessary. In fact, the workers here could tell you that the very opposite is the truth. Let me explain for a moment. Newfangled technology — the internet — means that the DVLA IT system in Swansea can be easily accessed by a secure network connection from the DVA in Northern Ireland. If that is possible, surely it is also possible the other way.

I am pleased that our Minister, Mark Durkan, has raised this issue at an Executive meeting. That is because we need to expand our campaign to the Executive. I think that Mervyn Storey mentioned that as well.

Mr Elliott: I thank the Member for giving way. Very briefly, I think that this matter needs to go beyond the Executive. It might be useful, although it is not part of the motion, if, because the entire House is agreed, we ask for a cross-party delegation to support the Minister with the UK Minister.

Mr Dallat: I am wondering whether Tom has seen my speech, because I was coming to that. Of course, that is the natural progression to what should happen, and I believe that it is already in process. I emphasise that, when that delegation goes to London, it must be as cross-community as the unity that is shown here today.

Mark Durkan came to Coleraine, and I take full responsibility for that. He was on a half-day visit to his constituency, and I was given total freedom to choose the places he might go to. Every Member knows how that works. I make no apology for not only taking Mark H Durkan to County Hall to meet the workers but for taking him to the council offices where he met all the political parties and was hosted by the mayor. So, let us get that out of the road. That is the only wee tiff that we will have.

The First Minister and deputy First Minister are travelling the world looking for jobs. One of the workers quite rightly said to me, "Is it not a bit daft that those men were over in New York while the British Government are planning to rob 300 jobs from Coleraine?". I know that you could laugh at it, but it is plain crazy.

Let me return to the debate and to the logical arguments that have been made. The centralisation programme has started. It has already run up almost £2 million, and it will run up a great deal more. That is because it is a sham. Coleraine deals with 170,000 customers, so God bless Swansea if that descends on them on top of what is already there. It is a nonsense. The author of this discredited consultation document said that the move is about improving the service. However, could any Member tell me of any public service in Northern Ireland or anywhere else that consistently records a performance target of 98.7% to 100% across all services delivered?

I make my point.

8.30 pm

It is useful to mention the online service again. For 15 years, there has been no investment in Coleraine. For the past seven years, Brendan Magee, the previous chief executive, made at least seven business proposals to modernise Coleraine. Is Swansea now telling us, "Well, you did not modernise, so we will close you."?

Mr Speaker, I am heartened. When I was reflecting on this last night, and perhaps some people do not remember this, I was thinking of the shipyard workers in Gdańsk who could not take any more. They united and transformed democracy in that whole eastern part of Europe. "Solidarity" is a word that we do not use enough in here, and we need to use it more. I have heard Mark H use it consistently and frequently in recent times in relation to the workers at Coleraine.

We should make the word "solidarity" our motto, because it is the DVA workers today, but will it be Castle Court tomorrow? Where else will that right-wing coalition descend on? One contributor rightly pointed out that centralisation is bad news for Northern Ireland because we always seem to be on the losing end of it.

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to the Member for giving way so that I can put on record my support and wish them well in their cross-party delegation. A cross-party delegation will be key for the Minister, showing that solidarity and a forward programme of how you can not only keep the service but build on and improve it, and support extra jobs and work coming to Coleraine.

Mr Dallat: I thank Mr McCallister very much for his contribution, and we welcome his support.

Across the Chamber, our patience is exhausted, and for perhaps the first time in our life we will stand shoulder to shoulder. Never before have I seen so many MLAs go out to the front of this Building as I did this afternoon to greet those workers. I felt emotional about that, because this place sometimes has an image of spending too much time on motions that are perhaps not relevant. I hope that people outside will see what happened here today.

A little bit of history was made, but it is only beginning, and we cannot rest on our laurels. I am glad that the Minister is meeting the Secretary of State. I will not create any problems by saying any nasty things about the Secretary of State, other than to remind her that she has a role far more important than being a colleague of Stephen Hammond. She is, after all, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. She has a responsibility for the political welfare of this part.

Perhaps the Minister will remind her that this Assembly, for all its criticism, is trying to build a political and economic foundation that will give stability. We all know that it is economic instability that creates the opportunities for people who have another way of approaching our problems.

Since this Assembly came into being, we have faced many challenges. This is one that we will win — and we will win it together as long as, from this day forward, we show solidarity with those people who, at this late hour, are here to hear this debate.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That this Assembly supports the staff of Driver and Vehicle Agency offices in Northern Ireland; calls on the Westminster Government and the Northern Ireland Executive to take the necessary steps to retain the existing jobs and services; and further calls for new investment by the Department for Transport in equipment and technology.

Mr Storey: On a point of order, Mr Speaker. There is a stunned silence over the Assembly. However, my point of order is on another issue. I just want to correct a comment that I made during the previous debate on education for the Hansard record. I think that I may have said that there was a net loss. There was a net gain to the maintained sector of some £2,469 million. I trust that that figure will be recorded in Hansard. I apologise to the House if inaccurate information was given earlier.

Mr Speaker: The Member has put it on the record.

Motion made:

That the Assembly do now adjourn. — [Mr Speaker.]

Adjournment

Death of Kirk Watters: Historical Enquiries Team Report

Mr Speaker: The proposer of the topic will have 15 minutes. All other speakers will have approximately eight minutes. I ask Members who are leaving the Chamber to do so in an orderly fashion.

Mr Douglas: I will wait till we get this crowd out.

Mr Speaker: Order, Members.

Mr Douglas: Thank you, Mr Speaker. It is with some sadness that I bring before the House this evening the tragic circumstances of the death of Kirk Watters, a young man who was just 19 years old when he was shot and killed in disputed circumstances in Belvoir Street off the Newtownards Road in 1974.

Two other young men were also shot in the same incident that night, when members of the Royal Military Police, during a disturbance in the area, claimed that they had identified four gunmen and opened fire from the back of their Land Rover. Kirk's friend, Gary Reid, also died from his injuries a couple of weeks later. Right from the outset, I want to be clear that this is not about being anti-police or anti-army: it is about the record of a young man who was killed in tragic circumstances. I want to outline some of the discrepancies of some of the reporting at the time.

A couple of years ago, two members of the Historical Enquiries Team (HET) contacted Kirk's sister Margaret and her husband Herbie. They are here tonight in the Gallery. I am delighted to see them. They were informed that the HET was carrying out a reinvestigation into Kirk's untimely death. He was a young man in the prime of his life, a former shipyard worker and soldier with the Royal Engineers. As the report stated, at the time:

"Kirk was, clearly held in high regard by his commanders, who believed that he had a promising career ahead of him in the armed forces."

Unfortunately, due to the death of his grandmother and his grandfather's illness, Kirk had to leave the army to look after his grandfather.

As you will appreciate, Mr Speaker, that encounter with the HET opened up all the family's hurt, anguish and wounds of some nearly 40 years ago. I believe that we in the Assembly have a moral obligation to help the Watters family to bring closure to that sad chapter in their lives. That report undoubtedly raises a number of serious questions.

Let us turn to the HET's findings. The report calls into question aspects of the original testimony of soldier A and soldier B regarding the circumstances that led to Mr Watters' death. It states that:

"There are aspects of the evidence given by the RMP witnesses that simply cannot be true and there are strong indicators to suggest that Soldiers A and B fabricated large parts of their respective accounts."

The report goes on to state:

"On a specific level, there are aspects of this investigation which have not been fully explained by the RMP officers, and on some issues their statements are at variance with the evidence offered by Reserve police officers and other witnesses at the scene."

Finally, it states:

"It now seems incredible"

— what a word to use in a report —

"that even though there was evidence that cast doubt on the accounts of the RMP personnel, they were not effectively challenged to explain the contradictory evidence that the investigation had uncovered."

The original investigation into Kirk's death was carried out by RUC Detective Inspector Hamilton, who, at the time, stated:

"There is therefore very little evidence to substantiate the claims of soldiers A and B that they were justified in opening fire."

Before Inspector Hamilton forwarded his report to his chief superintendent, he stated:

"that criminal charges should be brought against soldiers A and B."

However, at the time, the chief superintendent and the Chief Constable's office stated that, on balance, despite the evidence, no criminal charges should be brought. The DPP agreed, and the case was marked, "no prosecution". No one has ever been charged with any offence, and no record exists of internal army disciplinary action against soldier A or soldier B.

I want to be very clear: the family is not interested in retribution. They are a forgiving, committed Christian family. In light of the HET revelations, I went with the family to meet Jeffrey Donaldson MP, who wrote to the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the Rt Hon Andrew Robathan MP. Let me just quote his response. He said:

"I am grateful to Mrs Bowes for allowing my officials sight of the Historical Enquiries Team report on the death of her brother Kirk Watters so that we can make an informed decision on the family's request for an apology."

That is what the request was about: purely an apology to bring closure.

On pages 60 to 61, the report states:

"it was impossible to establish whether soldier A, soldier B or another person was responsible for Kirk's death."

That is because Kirk was shot in the back. The bullet went right through his heart, and they were never able to find it.

The Minister then goes on to say:

"If we were to apologise that would imply an acceptance that Mr Watters was killed by shots fired by a member of the army, and it is far from being established that this was the case. While I would like to extend every sympathy to Mrs Bowes and her family"

for their loss, I am afraid, therefore, that I am not able to offer the requested apology."

In light of this family's experience, their hurt and all the wounds that have been opened up, one could easily expect to find an aggrieved family, full of anger and seeking revenge — nothing could be further from the truth. The family do not seek a high-profile inquiry that would seek to live out the case in the full glare of the media for all to see. The family simply seek an acknowledgement that their loved one was wrongly killed. They seek recognition that no forensic evidence — the report is very clear about this — was found to link Kirk to the discharge of any weapons and that there was no evidence of shots being fired at the military, and an acceptance that Kirk was an innocent victim in the wrong place at the wrong time.

To conclude, although tonight's debate cannot bring Kirk Watters back, it does at least afford the family an opportunity to hear that the Assembly — the seat of Government — listens to families of victims and shows compassion and concern for the Watters family, who still suffer from the legacy of the past.

I hope that the Minister of Justice, who was unable to attend tonight because he believes that this is an operational matter, will meet the family in the not-too-distant future to hear their story and to acknowledge their pain, suffering and loss.

Mr Maskey: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. First of all, I thank Sammy Douglas for raising this matter tonight. I, again, place it on the record that I have not had the opportunity to speak to the family and loved ones of Kirk Watters.

Therefore, I want to be very measured and sympathetic in my remarks, which I will keep brief.

8.45 pm

Sammy Douglas outlined the very tragic circumstances in which this death occurred. The fact that it happened in 1974 is a stark and sad reminder to the House that the conflict that we have gone through cast, and continues to cast, a long shadow over many families. Sammy very eloquently and passionately articulated the way in which the family do not want what he described as retribution but want some form of acknowledgement or closure and some type of apology. That strikes me as a family that would be, dare I say it — I use my words wisely — easily pleased if they were to get some acknowledgement. In other words, they would find some comfort in an acknowledgment that their son was not guilty of any wrongdoing at the time of his death. That does not appear to be an awful lot to ask. I dare say that virtually all Members of this House have, at some point, engaged with families who have been bereaved during our conflict. Many have engaged with the HET, other inquiries and so on, and we can only sympathise with this family for the continuing trauma that they will go through in reliving those very tragic events from 1974.

It is regrettable that the Minister is not here, because although it is, as he described it, an operational matter — the HET has a responsibility to the Chief Constable and so on — he could, nevertheless, have considered it right to be here to hear the case and, perhaps, speak to the family. We all understand the demarcation of those matters. The Minister of Justice here does not have any responsibility for the running of the police or the judiciary per se, but we all have a role. I hope that the family can at least take some comfort from the fact that all the parties will give support to Sammy's Adjournment topic tonight to give the family some support. We will all deal with the Minister on this matter, and perhaps the MoD as well, to try to ensure that the family's very reasonable requests are met to allow them to get the closure that they so desperately seek.

Sammy Douglas has put on the record well that there was really no evidence at the time to back up the assertions that were made. As I said, I do not intend to go into any more detail on that, but suffice to say that this is another family bereaved during our conflict who have had a long shadow cast over their lives. At this stage, almost 40 years on, it is important that we all do as much as we can to help the family to get some type of comfort and closure. I thank the Member for raising the matter and commend the family for their stoicism over the past decades.

Mr Attwood: I welcome the fact that this debate has been brought to the Chamber tonight, because it is important in itself and in its timing, in that it is a week after the first visit to this part of the world of Richard Haass and Meghan O'Sullivan. I convey to the family condolences this late, 40 years after the death of their son, because pain is not determined by time; it stretches across the decades. I was not familiar with and did not know about this case until it was put on the Order Paper and only know about it from speaking to the proposer of the Adjournment debate, but, nonetheless, I have a sense that this family have great dignity, great resilience and great determination to secure for them closure in the circumstances of the case.

I agree with something the proposer said: in this case, as with all cases of victims and survivors, the needs of the victims and survivors and what they seek must have primacy. If we stand with victims and survivors, we will stand on the right side of how to deal with our past, be it by way of apology in this case or by way of other mechanisms in other cases.

As Sammy Douglas said, we have a moral obligation to bring closure to this family, just as we have an ethical obligation to deal with the past in a comprehensive and decisive way, not least given the Haass discussions. There is a need to fulfil that moral obligation and to deal with the past on an ethical basis. In this case, the family are looking for an apology, but we also have to acknowledge that other victims and survivors will look for something other than an apology; they will look for truth, accountability and justice.

On the back of this debate, and taking the Haass process into account, we have to base our moral obligation on whether the outcome of the Haass process will give victims and survivors the full menu of options when it comes to acknowledgement, truth and accountability. If, on the far side of the Haass discussions, we have not been able to secure that for all victims and survivors, including the family of Kirk Watters, then, to borrow the words of Sammy Douglas, we will have failed in our moral obligation and we will not have dealt with the past on an ethical basis.

In supporting this request from the family, I also support the requests of all the other families who seek acknowledgement, truth, accountability and apology. This Assembly and the parties in the Haass process should judge themselves and be judged on whether we produce those options to fulfil the wishes of all families.

I acknowledge what Sammy Douglas said about the fabrication of accounts. Other Members of this House, including Mr Maskey, will corroborate this: I do not know how many times I have read testimony about how there was fabrication of accounts. If this debate has some wider significance beyond that which it has for the family of Kirk Watters, it is that we must acknowledge on this occasion that there have been claims that seem to be well grounded that members of the security forces fabricated accounts about the use of force and lethal force. There are many other examples of fabrication of accounts about the use of force and lethal force by members of state and security forces. If this debate is to have significance beyond that which it has for the family, it is for all of us to acknowledge that, just as there was fabrication in this case, there was fabrication in many other cases. The recognition that there was fabrication in many other cases provides a liberation of thinking and ambition when it comes to dealing with the past.

I also acknowledge that, at some stage in the investigation into the death of Kirk Watters, a decision was made that there should be no prosecution. How different our society would have been if wiser decisions had been made in the early 1970s on prosecutions for the illegitimate use of state force. In my view, the story of the past 30 or 40 years would have been different as a consequence.

Inasmuch as this particular case involved the use of state force and lethal force at least in disputed and, in my view, unjustified circumstances, let us recognise that, if we are to deal comprehensively with the past, there must be accountability. That accountability, in this case, may be by way of an apology, but there also needs to be accountability not just for state use of force but the use of force by terror organisations that inflicted enormous grief and pain on so many in our society. Either we deal with this comprehensively across the range of organisations, state and illegal, or we will not be able to deal with it at all.

Mr Copeland: I also congratulate Sammy on securing the debate. I echo Mr Alex Maskey's sadness that the Justice Minister is unable to be here.

It is late in the day, and we are all tired. Many of us have been here for eight, 10 or 12 hours. However, we must balance that against the 40 years that this family have waited for the opportunity to seek justice — if that is the right word. We are dragging ourselves slowly from the past to the future. There is a school of thought that argues that a lot of things that happened in the past should be left in the past. On some occasions, those who continually seek justice are accused of living in the past. The truth is that this family, and, I have no doubt, many others, have the past living in them. That presents all of us with a particular set of difficulties.

As many of you know, I am a former commissioned officer in the Ulster Defence Regiment. That presents me with difficulties in accepting that, in the past, things might have been done that should not have been done. I have some knowledge of the events because they happened around the start of my service. I have read a good number of HET reports, ranging from the La Mon atrocity — if that is the right word — to the murder of Tommy Herron. On occasions, I find myself shaking my head and wondering how decisions that were taken at the time could ever have been taken, and, more importantly, how they were ever held up to the test of history and not found wanting. This case is no exception.

I understand that the weapon involved was a 9 millimetre Sterling sub-machine gun, which was not the standard infantry weapon of the day. That was the 7-62 millimetre self-loading rifle (SLR), which was capable of firing single shots repeatedly at aimed targets. A Sterling is a very inaccurate weapon. The magazine holds 28 rounds. It is my understanding, if the actuality of the reports that I have received is correct, that the magazine was changed. That indicates the firing of approximately 32 rounds. It is impossible to fire 32 rounds from a Sterling sub-machine gun and calculate or count them as aimed shots. That in itself calls into question the recognition that was given to the yellow card, which governed the circumstances under which all members of the security forces, but, most particularly, those involved in the military, could use lethal force.

The search for justice — if, again, that is the right word — is fraught with tears. One of the heaviest responsibilities that lies on us in the Chamber is not to use the past as a weapon of political debate to batter one other with but to try to begin to understand that terrible things happened. The biggest responsibility for all of us is to make sure that they do not happen again. We need to look, honestly and objectively, at the cases around which there are question marks so that such families might find some honest closure.

As I said, looking at the evidence available now, I can conclude only that this case was not best handled at the time and that there are questions that need to be answered. Above all, even after 40 years, Mr Watters was a citizen. He is entitled to the respect of a citizen, and he, his memory and his family's memory are entitled to honesty and truth. Trying, for whatever reason, to brush the issues under the carpet will do nothing to ensure that the events of the past are not repeated. It places upon all of us a very heavy duty, and it is a duty that I think we are coming to the point of being mature enough to deal with properly. No words spoken by me or in this Chamber can ever take away the events of that awful night, but they can alter perceptions and, perhaps, give this family, at long last, some peace.

9.00 pm

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Member who secured the Adjournment debate for having the courage to bring this sensitive issue to the Assembly. I also thank Members for the mature way in which they handled the debate this evening. Hopefully, that will, further to recent days, provide some encouragement to you, Mr Speaker.

I found reviewing this case a humbling and challenging experience, both as an Assembly Member working to understand how we best deal with an extremely traumatic and violent past and as a very close friend of the sister of Kirk Watters, Margaret. She is a woman whom I know to be filled with dignity, faith and, as Sammy Douglas said, forgiveness. She has held herself admirably throughout the process of the HET review of her brother's death.

The HET has received significant criticism in recent times, and, indeed, in my opinion, it is a limited way to deal with the past. However, it has clear objectives: to bring a measure of resolution to families of victims who died during the Troubles; to re-examine Troubles-related deaths to ensure that investigations satisfy PSNI standards; to command the wider confidence of the community; and to ensure that reports make no moral or political judgement about the victims.

In reviewing the report, I found that it established the circumstances around the death of Kirk Watters. He was 19 years old and a former soldier, an apprentice tradesman with the Royal Engineers. He was also a carer for his father. When Kirk was discharged, his commanding officer stated that, without doubt, his outstanding characteristics were leadership and supervision. The report also found that Kirk was a member of the UDA and that the inquest into Kirk's death returned an open verdict, which meant that no one had been held responsible.

The HET review of the investigation considered 54 witness statements, 19 depositions, a post-mortem, an inquest report, forensic RUC reports, public prosecution reports, intelligence and photo maps. The post-mortem found that Kirk had been shot in the back. Forensics found no firearms discharge on Kirk's hands and no evidence of bullet marks in the area from which the shots that killed Kirk were fired or on the Royal Military Police Land Rover involved in the shooting. The report also found that there had been a state of disorder and tension in the area and that numerous arms finds had occurred there in recent times. The report found that the RUC detective inspector and investigating officer clearly recommended that soldier B be charged with a criminal offence in relation to the death of another man killed at the same time and in the same area as Kirk Watters but that the chief superintendent, for some reason, overruled that. Although soldier B had used excessive force that also resulted in the death of Kirk Watters, the chief superintendent ruled that he was justified in opening fire and should not be subject to criminal charges. For some reason, the Chief Constable also accepted this ruling, as did the Director of Public Prosecutions, and no charge or disciplinary action was brought.

The HET report, however, found that although the original police investigation had been initially of a good standard, there were flaws in the follow-up investigation, particularly on the part of the Royal Military Police. In particular, it found that junior staff had interviewed more senior RMP staff involved in the shooting and that the failure to address significant discrepancies between the RUC and RMP statements had compromised the investigation. It is also, therefore, of concern to me that, despite the HET ruling that the original investigation failed to adequately challenge the soldiers' witness statements, the HET review then decided that there was:

"little value in tracing soldier B to account for discrepancies in the statement".

I think that that is something that can be looked at again.

As has been mentioned, the conclusions of the report clearly stated that there had been a breach of the yellow card guidelines for firearm usage, which might have amounted to a criminal offence; that there was fabrication of statements, and potentially lies, designed to conceal the truth in order to protect personnel from prosecution; and that, although it is impossible to establish whether soldier A, soldier B or another person was responsible for the death of Kirk Watters, it is highly likely that Kirk was shot after soldier B fired a burst of automatic fire at Belvoir Street.

I know that Kirk's sister is grateful for the clear understanding that the report has provided, not least in comparison to other, less evidence-based accounts, but there are questions and limitations that remain, including, as I said, why the HET review has not traced soldier B, and, indeed, the limitation of the little power that it has to compel witnesses. Despite the RMP failings in the original investigation and the high likelihood that Kirk Watters was shot dead by a burst of automatic gunfire, there has been little recognition from the MoD in relation to that. I agree with other Members that that is something that needs to be looked at.

The report also has significance to the wider challenge of how we best deal with the past. As has been mentioned, this is another review in relation to actions of the state, and if we want a comprehensive mechanism, other non-state actors need to be held accountable for their actions as well. We also need to look at how any process can actually compel witnesses to give statements or information in addition to the existing information that we have to work with. It does, however, give an insight into the complexity of victimhood and the horrendous context of fear, tension and unprecedented public disorder that existed at that time.

My party and I believe that if we are to build a better future, we need to address that traumatic past in a more comprehensive manner. The Eames/Bradley report was a good basis from which we could start. It recommended a legacy commission with powers of investigation, information recovery, thematic inquiry and storytelling as a way to get closer to truth, accountability, acknowledgement and reconciliation. The Haass process presents an opportunity for the political parties to step up to the mark to try to put that type of comprehensive mechanism, which so far has eluded us, into place.

I know that the family of Kirk Watters believe that the HET process has provided them with a degree of information, but I agree that we have a responsibility and moral obligation to improve on that process and to make sure that that opportunity and process extends to as many people as possible to ensure that truth, accountability and reconciliation are achieved across our society, that no one is held captive by the past and, indeed, that it is never allowed to happen again.

Mr Newton: I thank my party colleague for bringing forward this Adjournment debate on the death of Kirk Watters. Like others, I want to be very measured, but I also want to be very factual, and, with your permission, I would like to refer extensively to the HET report on the matter.

I think that it is regrettable that Minister Ford is not here. I do not understand how this is an operational matter, since the HET report has been concluded. I just do not understand that. The HET was established to assist in bringing a measure of resolution to those families of victims whose deaths are attributable to what we call the Troubles between 1969 and the signing of the Belfast Agreement. It is required to do so in a way that commands the confidence of the wider community.

On reading the report, I can see the difficulties, and I can see what I imagine is the hurt, which has been referred to, that has been caused to the relatives of Kirk Watters. It is nearly unbelievable. The report states that, at the time when Mr Watters was shot dead, a constable, Constable Arbuthnot, heard no gunfire other than that fired by the Royal Military Police. He did not see the bullets striking the wall, as claimed by the RMP, and he did not hear the whistle blast or see gunmen. Another reserve constable who was in the same vehicle stated that he heard two low velocity shots just before the RMP opened fire, but the civilian witnesses do not substantiate the claims that other persons were firing weapons. However, partisanship, the report says, might be a factor.

Mr Douglas: Will the Member give way?

Mr Newton: I will give way.

Mr Douglas: Does the Member agree that, as Mr Lyttle said, that time was a very traumatic experience for everybody because of the tensions? As it said in the report, a lot of young people in the area actually joined paramilitary organisations. I know that it has been alluded to that Kirk Watters was a member of the UDA, and it states in the report that he was a member of the young UDA. It also says:

“There are no intelligence reports to suggest that Kirk had previously come to the attention of the security forces, or that they were aware of his connection to the UDA prior to his death.”

Do you agree that that suggests that the report exonerates Kirk Watters and states clearly that the security forces had no evidence that he was involved in any activity, particularly where gunfire is concerned?

Mr Newton: I thank the Member for his intervention. That does become quite clear later in the report.

The report states that the scene and the Land Rover were examined by a Constable McCrum from SOCO. All the strike marks that were found indicated only firing from the Newtownards Road direction, and he found no strike marks on the Land Rover. That was the same Land Rover on which strike marks were found four days later. There is, therefore, the report says:

“little evidence to substantiate the claims of Soldiers A and B that they were justified in opening fire.”

Although we are dealing only with Kirk Watters, the report goes on to further indicate:

“The entire circumstances surrounding the death of two youths and the injury of one more is very unsavoury.”

The evidence of the civilians in the area is clearly that there was no gunfire except that from the RMP vehicle. The evidence of Reserve Constable Porter is that soldier B ran out of ammunition. The report says that that evidence:

“would lead one to think he had, on this occasion, lost his nerve and either accidentally, or on purpose, discharged automatic fire to his left hand side in Belvoir Street, which resulted in this terrible tragedy. There is no ballistic evidence to show that shots were discharged from Soldier ‘A’s’ weapon, as both weapons had been cleaned before reaching DIFS.”

The report specifically says:

“there are aspects of this investigation which have not been fully explained by the RMP officers, and on some issues their statements are at variance with the evidence offered by the Reserve police officers and other witnesses at the scene.”

That is RUC Reserve police officers.

The report goes on:

“In these situations it is always difficult to balance the weight that one ought to attach to the latter category of witness since he may be biased, or indeed he may give an accurate account of what he himself perceived at some interval subsequent to the incident.”

9.15 pm

The report continues:

“The HET has examined the original investigation carried out by the RUC and acknowledges the difficulty of comparing modern investigative processes and techniques with those which were current during the time of the ‘The Troubles’.”

That is really saying that, had we had the knowledge that we have today, this case might not have been just so difficult.

This question has to be asked on behalf of Kirk Watters’s family: did the RMP personnel adhere to the rules of engagement? Those rules are never to use force more than the minimum necessary to enable you to carry out your duties; to try always first to handle the situation by means other than opening fire; and, if you have to fire, to fire only aimed shots. If the magazine was empty, that may well indicate that that was not the case.

The report also states:

“There are aspects of the evidence given by the RMP witnesses that simply cannot be true and there are strong indicators to suggest that Soldiers A and B fabricated large parts of their respective accounts.”

Given the circumstances and the content of the report, you can understand the family’s feelings, concerns, hurt and, indeed, hope that something else might come out of this. I am not sure that we can offer them anything except what has been said this evening in the Chamber, where there has been a great deal of empathy with their position. Maybe, just maybe, the Haass talks will allow us to take another step forward.

Adjourned at 9.16 pm.

Narrow Water Bridge Order (Northern Ireland) 2013 and Newry River (Diversion of Navigable Watercourse and Extinguishment of Public Rights of Navigation) Order (Northern Ireland) 2013: Decision to Proceed to Make Bridge Orders

Published at 4.00 pm on Tuesday 9 July 2013

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development):

A project to construct a bridge at Narrow Water in Warrenpoint is being taken forward by Louth County Council in partnership with Newry and Mourne District Council. My Department's role is exclusively in relation to the Bridge Orders and it has no direct involvement in delivering this scheme.

The draft Narrow Water Bridge Order (Northern Ireland) 2013 and the draft Newry River (Diversion of Navigable Watercourse and Extinguishment of Public Rights of Navigation) Order (Northern Ireland) 2013, are required to deal with the impact of the Narrow Water Bridge proposal on the Newry River, which is a public navigable waterway, as far as it relates to Northern Ireland. These orders will detail the position, dimensions and operating procedures for the bridge and the reasonable requirements for and amendments to navigation rights that need to be put in place to ensure the safety of the travelling public.

Notice of the draft Orders was published in the local Press during weeks commencing 22 and 29 April 2013 and the consultation period ended on 4 June 2013, with a total of 17 letters of objection being received. The majority of the objections were from the local mussel fishermen or those representing or supporting the fishermen.

The main reasons for objections from the mussel fishermen were the loss of navigation rights and the loss of some fishing grounds, arising from the construction of the proposed bridge in navigable waters, the proposed vessel protection systems and proposed extinguishment and diversion of navigation rights; and the restriction of fishing activities resulting from the proposed bridge operating procedures.

Following the submission of objections, Louth County Council has had a series of meetings with some of the objectors, aimed at finding an agreed resolution to the objections. My officials have been fully engaged with the Council throughout this process.

A key issue for me in this process has been the question of whether or not a public inquiry is necessary before I move to a decision on the Bridge Orders. I should emphasise that such a step is only required where I conclude that such a process might add greater substance or clarity to the information available to inform my final decision. In the context of the fact that the original objections were clearly outlined and well articulated, and the additional dialogue between Louth Council and objectors, I concluded that such a step was not necessary.

In addition, I have disclosed the objections to both the Minister for the Environment and the Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development and consulted with them on issues that could be said to fall within their competence. Neither Minister has indicated any reason why I should not proceed to make the Orders. The Agriculture Minister also specifically indicated her view that there was no need for a public inquiry.

After carefully considering all objections, the further engagement with Louth Council (following their further meetings with objectors), and the input of my two Executive colleagues, I feel that there are no outstanding issues from my Department's perspective, which would indicate that the orders should not be made. On this basis, it is now my intention to make the necessary Bridge Orders in relation to the Narrow Water Bridge project.

Environment

High-volume Hydraulic Fracturing

Published at 6.00 pm on Tuesday 16 July 2013

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): The Department of Environment's fundamental aim is to protect and improve the environment, promote well being, and deliver a strong and effective local government to support a thriving economy.

Within my Department the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) seeks to safeguard the quality of the environment as a whole through effective regulation of activities that have the potential to impact on the environment. High volume hydraulic fracturing (fracking) is considered by the Agency to be such an activity.

As members will be aware, an Australian based company, Tamboran Resources, secured a Petroleum Licence from DETI to explore for shale gas reserves within the Northern Ireland section of the Lough Allen Basin, which is a cross border Basin shared with the Republic of Ireland.

I am informed that Tamboran are proposing to use an unconventional gas extraction technique known as High Volume Hydraulic Fracturing, or fracking for short.

I hope that no-one will or would adopt an approach that if gas exists in this form underground, for example in Fermanagh, that it should be extracted. The right approach is to ask: do we want to extract shale gas? Do we need to extract shale gas? Can it be done safely? Would it be done responsibly? These are the fundamental questions against which to judge fracking and to judge ourselves. A rush to fracking is ill judged. Indeed my approach is to be highly precautionary.

Fracking has generated much concern within NI, and around the world, over its potential impact upon the environment, particularly in relation to water quality, air emission issues, seismic impacts, matters of public and personal health and environmental impact to name but a few.

In response to these concerns I directed DOE and NIEA to supplement its knowledge of this process through reviewing and engaging with emerging research, studying case studies from other parts of the world and liaising with counterparts in other Environment Agencies in Britain and Ireland, and other countries where fracking is currently proposed or taking place. My responsibility as a Minister is to do so I have been doing so and that has to be the approach in the future.

Specifically:

- DOE/NIEA represents NI at the European level on the EU Technical Working Group on Unconventional Fossil Fuels and on an Interest group of the Network of Heads of European Environmental Protection Agencies;
- At UK level DOE/NIEA represents NI on the Unconventional Gas Regulators Group which includes relevant regulators from throughout the UK;
- On a cross border level, DOE/NIEA meets regularly with the Republic of Ireland's Environmental Protection Agency and are co-funding and co-leading a major research programme. A consultation on the proposed Terms of Reference has been completed which attracted a huge scale of responses.

- DOE also participate on a NI Shale Gas Regulators Forum consisting of representatives from government departments and agencies with a potential regulatory role in relation to fracking activities. This forum, which has been formally established following a meeting between the DETI Minister, and myself will enable cross cutting issues, such as the impact of potential seismic activity on well integrity, to be discussed and assessed by the relevant regulators i.e. Geological Survey of Northern Ireland, NIEA and the Health and Safety Executive. It needs to be clearly understood that this forum is to consider the multiple issues around fracking, is not in any way to indicate support from DOE and does not compromise the authority of DOE/NIEA when it comes to planning habitats and all the relevant assessments.

I have also visited the United States, in March 2012 and March this year, where I received presentations and briefings from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Research and Development, and Office of Air and Radiation on the issue of hydraulic fracturing.

These presentations and briefings highlighted the work that the US EPA is doing, and its planned work, in relation to the environmental impact of hydraulic fracturing. In particular I was briefed on the US EPA's ongoing research programme on the potential impact of shale gas extraction on drinking water supplies, and also their work on potential technological and regulatory controls on gas emissions.

A senior official from NIEA accompanied me on my visit in March 2012 in order to establish relevant contacts with technical staff in the U.S. EPA and has maintained this relationship to ensure that on an ongoing basis we can benefit from the work of the U.S EPA in this area. I have to say that my sense as of the March 2013 meeting compared with the meeting a year earlier was that the precautionary approach was one clearly in evidence.

Due to the increasing level of interest and concern in relation to fracking, new studies, reports and assessments are continually being added to the body of literature on this subject, and my Department's review of available evidence will, by necessity, remain ongoing.

As studies, reports and assessments are completed, a broader evidence base will emerge which will aid decision making on the issue. It is my firm view that when it comes to assessments on fracking in relation to health, environment, water, air and other emissions(etc) and , when it comes to decisions (if any are to be made) it is only when the full scientific and research picture is complete that decisions could be made. To do otherwise given the scale of ongoing research and science is to decide in a vacuum that does not aid good decision making. This is the right, best and only way to proceed. That is why I have an enhanced precautionary approach on this issue.

The environmental regulation of fracking will be subject to the requirements and environmental standards set out in the relevant European Directives which apply in both jurisdictions. The Environmental Impact Assessment Directive will play a central role and is non-negotiable in the decision making process as it will ensure that the environmental implications of this project are taken into account before final decisions are taken and it will involve the public in the decision making process, making it more transparent. This will ensure consistent standards are applied to regulating such an activity, should any approvals be given in the future in either NI or close to the border in the Republic of Ireland. This consistency is imperative as the environment knows no borders. I have always said that all appropriate planning and environmental standards will be strictly applied on the issue of fracking. As Planning and Environment Minister this approach will not be compromised.

On a personal level, I am acutely aware of the concern and anxiety these proposals are creating. I have therefore adopted an open door policy in terms of meeting public representatives, community groups and concerned individuals and I will continue to meet with people or groups that can contribute to this issue.

I wish to reassure people, particularly in Fermanagh, that no decisions have been taken by my Department in relation to permitting fracking. Indeed no planning applications or applications for environmental permissions have yet been received.

As I outlined earlier, in terms of the current exploration process, it is my understanding that the development company may rely on certain permitted development rights (PDR), not requiring planning permission, for limited activity such as drilling boreholes or carrying out seismic surveys for a period of up to four months. Let me be clear if the exploration works themselves are considered to require Environmental Impact Assessment, the current legislation makes it clear that in such circumstances permitted development rights do not apply. Should the development company seek to rely on PDR, I will assess if Environment Impact Assessment (EIA) is required. In any case, I am taking further legal advice if even drilling one borehole requires EIA. I will be clear and direct on this issue. I will tell people, in particular the community if a PDR entitlement exists or not.

That said, Permitted development rights are subject to conditions including pre-commencement notification to the Department giving details of locations, target minerals, details of plant, operations and timescales. All operations proposed within an Area of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI) or a site of archaeological interest is specifically excluded from these rights. My Department also has powers to restrict these permitted development rights where it is deemed that the works would adversely impact on local amenity.

I will ensure that all requirements in this regard are strictly honoured. I must again stress that they do not in any way extend to the extraction of shale gas, which constitutes development requiring planning permission.

I would like to reinforce to the elected members, and to the people of Fermanagh, that any proposals submitted to my Department by Tamboran, be it to drill for core samples, drill an exploratory well or set up office accommodation, they will be robustly assessed against the existing legislative and planning policy framework and, as I have said, any assessment has to be and can only be on the far side of research and science.

I wish to explain a number of matters further. Given the nature of Tamboran's proposals, if a full planning application involving the intention to use a high volume hydraulic fracturing technique is received the Department would have to carefully consider whether it should be deemed a major planning application under Article 31, of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. Article 31 allows my Department to deal with such applications under special procedures which allow for a much greater level of scrutiny of the application and the resulting decision. For example, the Article 31 process allows for a public inquiry if my Department considers it necessary. The need for a public inquiry will normally emerge through the processing of a planning application where issues raised by consultees or public representation are technical and complex and cannot be satisfactorily resolved through the normal planning process. I believe there will be significant demands for a public inquiry, should such a planning application be received.

However, as Minister, I cannot pre-judge the issue and I will instruct my Department to consider all relevant matters, if a planning application is received in relation to both Article 31 and the option of a Public Inquiry. I would note that another energy proposal – the application for a North South Interconnector - was deemed Article 31 and is proceeding by way of a Public Inquiry.

I have met with Tamboran senior management to reinforce and directly so to them that there are stringent legislative, procedural and policy requirements that apply to fracking and to confirm to Tamboran that my Department will robustly assess any proposals presented, against these stringent requirements and my firm view on the issues of science and research.

As I have outlined in this statement, my Department is proactively engaging on an international, European, UK and Ireland and local level to ensure that should a planning application or an application for an environmental permission be received, my Officials within DOE Planning and NIEA, will be best placed to assess the proposals and enable me to make decisions based on knowledge gained from around the world but set within the context of our unique landscape and environment, which is particularly the case in County Fermanagh.

I am making this statement as Environment Minister and Minister responsible for planning. The scale, wonder and beauty of our natural, built, archaeological and Christian heritage is unsurpassed on this island. It is part of the character of our lives and a big part of the economic future of this part of the island. This is a further factor that must be fully assessed as the issues develop.

Review of the Operation of PPS 21 'Sustainable Development in the Countryside'

Published at 6.00 pm on Tuesday 16 July 2013

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): There has been a long history to planning policy for development in the countryside. PPS21 was published in final form on 1 June 2010 following work undertaken by an Executive Subcommittee on Rural Planning Policy and was endorsed by the Executive at that time. It superseded Draft PPS21 which had been published with immediate effect in November 2008, replacing draft PPS14, a very restrictive policy introduced under Direct Rule.

Whilst the publication of PPS21 some 3 years ago brought a higher level of certainty to rural planning policy in Northern Ireland following a long-drawn-out period of uncertainty, valid concerns have been raised over its practical implementation on the ground.

Early into my role as Environment Minister, several MLA's made representations to me regarding concerns that some people were not getting the same opportunity to build in rural areas compared with other parts of Northern Ireland. These concerns centred on whether the policy was being applied consistently across area planning offices; and whether some area offices were applying the policy more strictly than others. It would be wrong if the policy was not being implemented fairly in all cases.

I listened to these concerns and gave a commitment to undertake a review of the operation of the policy. This Statement is an account of my approach to this work, my interventions and my findings to date.

The operational review has been a real time assessment of what is going on in planning offices in terms of the application and consistent interpretation of PPS21. It has been focused on how the policy is being applied in practice. Its aim has been two-fold:

- firstly, informed by experiences and perceptions of all those involved in sustainable development in the countryside, to take appropriate steps necessary to ensure everyone is treated consistently; and
- secondly, to ensure appropriate flexibility on the operation of PPS21 in line with its content and substance.

When I announced the review I made it clear that it would not be a fundamental review of rural planning policy. Furthermore it was never my intent that it should recommend fundamental changes to the existing policy framework of PPS21. To do so would have required an approach outwith an operational review and would not, at an early phase of PPS21, have been appropriate.

In undertaking my review I have held discussions on the operation of the policy with a number of key stakeholders: MLAs, Planning Forum members; former members of the Independent Working Group established to examine the issue of non-farming rural dwellers; and rural stakeholders representing farming and environmental interests.

I have also taken on board the views of planning staff and of applicants and agents who are most familiar with the actual operation of the policy on the ground. I have considered planning statistics on the number of approvals of single and replacement dwellings since the policy was published.

In particular, I took considerable time to examine a range of specific cases in order to satisfy myself that the Department's approach to the assessment of such proposals was based, not just on proper application of individual policies, but also that it had regard to the overarching aims and objectives of PPS21. This includes, managing growth to achieve sustainable development that meets the essential needs of a vibrant rural community; and facilitating the development necessary to achieve a sustainable rural economy, including appropriate farm diversification and other economic activity.

Non farming rural dwellers

Special provision for non-farming rural dwellers remains a matter of continued interest, and was also highlighted during the review. In recognition of this, I met former members of the Independent Working Group on non-farming rural dwellers to hear first hand their expert perspectives on this matter.

These experts reiterated to me that advice previously provided to the Executive Sub-committee that the term 'non-farming rural dweller' is difficult to interpret and define and should not therefore be used to create a special category of planning policy.

I am reassured that PPS21 already provided significant opportunities for non-farming rural dwellers to live in the countryside through policy provisions including replacement dwellings; the conversion and reuse of non-residential buildings as dwellings; new dwellings within an existing cluster or ribbon of buildings; development within Dispersed Rural Communities; and a dwelling to meet compelling personal and domestic circumstances.

Consistency and flexibility were important issues to emerge from the review. Of particular concern were the policies in respect of 6 key areas: dwellings on farms; replacement dwellings; the conversion and re-use of existing buildings new dwellings in existing clusters; developments within gap sites and development in support of the rural economy. I will deal with each of these in turn.

1. Dwellings on Farms

Through the review I have advanced an approach to promote greater flexibility in relation to the requirements for clustering and visual linkage in respect of siting new dwellings on farms.

I took particular note of the concerns raised regarding the health and safety implications of clustering new dwellings with existing farm buildings which was raised by the UFU and others through the review.

I have impressed upon officials the need for greater regard to be given to the practicalities of requiring new dwellings to be clustered with an established group of buildings on the farm. For example, I do not expect applicants to be required to access new dwellings through busy working farmyards where an acceptable access can be achieved without detriment to integration.

It is also important to note that Policy CTY10 'Dwellings on Farms' already contains important health and safety safeguards which permit an alternative site away from a group of buildings on the farm where this health and safety implications can be demonstrated. CTY10 and, for example, the practicality issue referred to above, and together with consistency in interpretation have produced less issues over recent times than was the case two years ago.

2. Replacement Dwellings

I have explored the application of Policy CTY 3 'Replacement Dwellings' with a view to identifying additional flexibility, especially in regard to the assessment of whether the dwelling to be replaced meets the essential characteristics of a dwelling. One example, where a more flexible approach has been taken relates to a proposal for a replacement dwelling in Armagh area. The structure had long ago been a dwelling however there was no roof and while the 4 walls were intact they were not 100% complete. The structure was also completely overgrown with vegetation internally and externally.

Prior to the review there would have been concerns that the structure did not qualify for replacement in accordance with Policy CTY3 as the four walls were not substantially intact. Following staff training provided as part of the review process, the application was re-assessed and a greater degree of flexibility was applied. The Department concluded that on balance the application was acceptable and approval was granted.

This demonstrates the value of the operational review. Interrogation of policy, application in real time, training and peer review leading to the right outcome.

3. Conversion and Reuse

Similarly, I have identified scope for more flexibility in the type of building that may be suitable for conversion to a dwelling or other use, where this would not adversely affect the character or appearance of the locality.

Policy CTY 4 – 'The Conversion and Reuse of Existing Buildings' permits proposals for the sympathetic conversion, with adaptation if necessary, of a suitable building for a variety of uses, including use as a dwelling.

My review highlighted that some Area Planning Offices had been adopting a much stricter interpretation of the policy that required the building to be converted to exhibit some special architectural features. However, this is not a requirement of the policy which states only that the conversion should maintain or enhance existing form, character and architectural features.

While the policy gives a range of examples of buildings which may be appropriate for conversion, such as former school houses and traditional barns, this list is not to be regarded as exhaustive and does not rule out the conversion of other buildings if they are of sound construction and can be converted in line with the policy criteria. This message has been communicated to staff through training and the process of peer review. Again, a positive outcome of an operational review.

4. Dwellings within Existing Clusters

Through the review I have identified the potential for some additional flexibility in how the policy in respect of new dwellings in existing clusters is being applied.

Policy CTY2a 'New Dwellings in Existing Clusters' provides for a dwelling at an existing cluster of development subject to identified criteria, including a requirement that the cluster is associated with a focal point such as a social/community building/facility, or is located at a cross roads.

The policy does not provide an exhaustive list of what will be regarded as a focal point and in the absence of a community building or facility applicants are free to present other evidence of a focal point within the cluster. This may be some other entity or association that serves as a hub or gathering point in the community.

Through the review, I have communicated to officials the need for appropriate flexibility. This will not mean, cluster approval here, there and everywhere. But approvals will be more consistent between DPO's and more accommodating consistent with the intention of the policy.

5. Ribbon Development

There were also issues raised with respect to development opportunities within gap sites. I have identified the need for additional flexibility in how such sites are defined for the purposes of CTY 8 'Ribbon Development', which allows for up to two dwellings within an otherwise substantial and continuously built up frontage.

One example, where I identified a greater need for flexibility was a proposal for a dwelling and a garage in one area which had initially been recommended for refusal. I met with the applicant who identified examples which they considered to have set a precedent. I asked my officials to consider how the application of the policy may be reviewed in light of the examples provided. After further assessment officials unanimously agreed that the application should be allowed.

Furthermore, when applying the policy officials have been reminded of the need to take account of extant permissions when assessing whether a suitable infill opportunity exists.

6. Development in support of the rural economy

Through the review I have also been promoting greater opportunity and flexibility to support rural business.

For example, an application was received for a dwelling in association with an existing business in one area. The proposal was originally recommended for refusal. However the local Council referred the matter to my Private Office. Given the nature of the business and the fact that the owner was retiring, a family member was taking over and lived a considerable distance away, I asked officials to reconsider their initial opinion. Permission was subsequently granted.

In addition to the areas I have outlined above, other steps I have taken to ensure consistency and flexibility generally include the following:

Staff Training

At my request, the Department rolled out training for all planning officers on the implementation of PPS21. The training was rolled out to approximately 150 staff. The purpose of the training was to focus on those areas of PPS21 which give rise to different interpretations and to apply a common approach to ensure consistent application of policy across all Area Planning Offices.

The training covered each of the policies in detail. It provided examples of proposals which are acceptable and those which are unacceptable when considered in the context of the relevant policy. It also identified areas where there may be scope for more flexibility within the content and substance of the policy.

Peer Review

I have also initiated a process of peer review of applications already decided under PPS21. The purpose of this is to share best practice and increase consistency between Area Offices. Applications are discussed at the monthly Development Management Working Group and an agreed position is confirmed by the Group. Lessons learned from this peer review approach can be incorporated into the ongoing training programme and issued as further advice as necessary.

Rural Design Guide

I also published the Rural Design Guide 'Building on Tradition'. This supplementary planning guidance to PPS21 clarifies and exemplifies the requirements of the policy and has proved to be of great assistance to planning staff in the consistent interpretation and application of PPS21, as well as helping applicants and others understand its policy requirements. I would commend this guidance to all those with an interest in development in the countryside.

Review of Occupancy Conditions

As part of the review I have looked closely at the practice of attaching personal occupancy conditions to rural dwellings approved on the basis of site specific personal and domestic circumstances which has in some cases created difficulties for applicants in securing mortgage finance. Recently, I drafted and issued a new 'letter of comfort' which I have advised the Council for Mortgage Lenders should conclude the problems the CML or its members were creating around this issue.

Wider actions to support the countryside

Other measures which seek to support rural areas and their communities include:

- PPS16 'Tourism' which I published in June facilitates appropriate tourism, including development in the countryside. It makes provision in the countryside for tourist amenity proposals that are not suited to an urban or village location. Similarly, it allows for tourist amenity proposals that need to be located close to existing tourist attractions in the countryside. PPS 16 also removes the much criticised tourist needs tests which had applied for tourist accommodation proposals in the countryside making it easier for developers to make sure that their proposals accord with planning policy.
- PPS4 'Planning and Economic Development' sets out the circumstances in which permission will be granted for economic development in the open countryside. It allows for redevelopment of existing employment sites in the rural area including for tourism and it allows for expansion of existing employment sites. It allows for small scale economic development on suitable sites on the periphery of existing settlements where there are no alternatives within the settlement.

- Permitted Development Rights: The Agriculture industry represents a vital part of the Northern Ireland economy and therefore the elimination of unnecessary red tape to enable the agriculture sector to thrive in an increasingly competitive and challenging economic climate is imperative. With the continuing rise in energy and fuel bills the new PD rights introduced on 30th April 2013 for non domestic micro-generation including solar panels, ground and water source heat pumps and biomass boiler housing and fuel stores, provide farmers with opportunities to benefit from renewable energy technologies to help make savings and reduce running costs in the longer term.

Furthermore, legislative proposals to revise existing PD rights by increasing the size limitation from 300m<sup>2</sup> to 500m<sup>2</sup> for agricultural buildings and introduce new PD rights for anaerobic digestion plant on an agricultural unit were agreed by the Environment Committee on 4th July and will come into operation in August 2013.

- Improved Processing Timescales - Over the last two years there has been a huge effort made to speed up the planning process which has positively impacted on processing times for rural applications. Performance in 2012/13 has significantly improved across all categories of development. Over the most recent year, the average processing times for Major, Intermediate and Minor categories of planning application reduced by four, two and three weeks respectively compared to 2011/12. In addition, the first year Programme for Government target to process 60% of Large Scale Investment Applications within six months was also met with 72% of all such applications being processed within this timescale. Some of these large scale investment applications were in rural areas and Departmental targets were also met for processing Intermediate and Minor applications.
- Renewable Energy: Renewables is another key economic driver for Northern Ireland, particularly rural areas. A key target is the reduction in the number of live planning applications for renewable energy projects. The number of decisions issued against renewable energy applications increased by a very significant 90%, from 401 in 2011/12 to 762 in 2012/13. Almost nine in ten (89%) of renewable energy applications were approved.

The Department has worked creatively and collectively with key stakeholders to the planning process to ensure timely processing of planning applications and to discuss any areas of concern. For example, a sub group of the Planning forum has been established to focus on renewable energy applications. This group is looking at a range of measures to improve decision making for renewable energy project applications.

- Agrifood Sector: Agri food is a key economic driver for Northern Ireland but particularly the rural areas. As a result of the recent announcement by the major UK supermarkets to source more of their produce from the UK, it is anticipated that the Department is likely to receive several hundred planning applications in the near future for poultry buildings across the Province. In order to respond to this demand the Department has established a small multidisciplinary team in the South Antrim Area Planning office and is developing appropriate level of expertise within the team. It will also work closely with the industry and all other stakeholders collectively to ensure that the applications are progressed in a fast and predictable manner to maximise this opportunity.

- Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS) - Members will also be aware that I intend to bring forward a single Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS) in time for the transfer of planning functions to councils in 2015. The statement will consolidate existing policy provisions, including provisions in relation to rural planning, into a shorter, more concise statement of planning policy. The statement will be subject to public and Assembly consultation.

All these measures are intended to create a positive framework that allows communities to prosper and thrive but which also protects the countryside from excessive or inappropriate developments.

Planning Statistics suggest interventions have begun to pay dividends. Most significantly the approval rate for single and replacement dwellings in rural areas has improved from 74% in 2010/11 to 88% in 2012/13. I believe that this can be attributed to the implementation of a number of measures such as the role out of training for staff, the 'peer review' of applications at a monthly management meeting, and the publication of the rural design guide.

In total there have been 8,575 applications for new single and replacement dwellings in rural areas approved since the implementation of PPS21. This represents an approval rate of 83% across this almost 3 year period.

Looking forward I believe that the process of planning and local government reform provides a great opportunity for a stronger local dimension to rural planning policy when the majority of planning powers transfer to local Councils. Post transfer the new Local Authorities will be responsible for bringing forward their own development plans with bespoke policies that are more finely tailored to local circumstances in the area, in line with prevailing regional planning policy.

In summary, this operational review into PPS21 has both identified and addressed how there can be more consistency, opportunity and flexibility in the application of PPS 21 policies.

I believe that my interventions are bearing fruit. PPS 21 is working much more effectively now and I remain more satisfied that it is fundamentally the right policy and enjoys widespread support.

My own experience is that the volume of concerns raised to me personally on the operation of the policy is much reduced. Nevertheless, I will continue to keep under close scrutiny the operation of PPS21 in order to ensure that it is properly and consistently applied going forward. This is an update on the operational review. The review is a real time, real life mechanism. It will continue. The issue of a fundamental review, in my view, does not arise, certainly at this time.

Waste Crime: The Threat of Criminality and Organised Crime

Published at 6.00 pm on Tuesday 16 July 2013

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): I wish to bring further details to the attention of the Assembly of a major case of environmental crime in the Derry area. When I brought this matter to public attention in June, I had consulted the Speaker and agreed that I should do a written statement to the Assembly as the better way to proceed. Given the range and nature of the issues involved, I believe it is now timely to provide that further update, having already provided a lengthy private briefing to the Environment Committee.

Successful economies in the 21st century will be ones in which natural resources are used for maximum economic and social benefit. This will mean that levels of waste will be continually reduced. Eventually, 'waste' will become an obsolete concept, even if this seems beyond our imagination and ambition.

Until that happens, any residual waste that is still produced will be re-used, recycled or properly disposed of. This is required of us in ethical terms, European terms and domestic terms.

As part of pursuing these aims, environmental crime, whether it is in the guise of waste dumping, fuel laundering or other types, must be eliminated in Northern Ireland, on this island and beyond.

This type of environmental crime undermines legitimate business operators in the waste and other sectors, impinges on our overall economic development and, creates major threats to our unique and precious natural environment.

This is why I have taken decisive steps against environmental crime early in June.

On Wednesday the 5th of June, the Department of Environment (DoE) revoked the licence granted to an operator of a major waste facility in the North West. This followed an unprecedented investigation into allegations of large scale criminal offending involving the disposal of waste.

Following receipt of intelligence last year, I instructed the environmental police within the Department of Environment - the Environmental Crime Unit - to undertake a full scale investigation (known as "Operation Sycamore") into activities at the Derry site. This has been painstaking work with the aim of maximizing the chances of dealing a big blow to serious criminality and a big blow to environmental vandalism.

The scale of the unlawful waste activity is immense and dates back at least until 2009. It is sophisticated in its deception. Material was mangled and shredded to hide its original sourcing, with illegal landfills being top filled with soil and clay to deceive and hide illegal waste.

Not just tens but some hundreds of thousands of tons of waste were illegally deposited in a number of areas of land in the Mobouy area, just outside Derry. The scale of this is clearly well organized – the scale of this means it involves organized crime.

“Operation Sycamore” has to date resulted in the arrest of two individuals in connection with alleged offences and further arrests are expected as the operation continues. A number of individuals, businesses and land folios are the subject of the investigation. Appropriate enforcement notices were served in June, as detailed below.

First, the operator of the waste management facility is now required, over a period of two months, to deliver all remaining waste at the site to a legal landfill site for disposal.

Second, and separately, other notices were served on the landowners of land used for the disposal of waste requiring them to take action to prevent environmental damage by removing polluting liquid from the waste for disposal elsewhere.

Third, further notices were served on certain operators requiring those operators to take action to prevent further damage (that is to say damage which is environmental damage or damage where there are reasonable grounds to believe that the damage is or will become environmental damage) under the Environmental Liability (Prevention and Remediation) Regulations (NI) 2009. These notices require action to be taken to collect and legally dispose of liquid within the infilled waste to stop it causing harm to the environment. It is expected that this legislation will be used further to require additional measures to be taken to prevent environmental damage and also to carry out works to remove and remediate the sites.

I believe that the scale of last month’s disclosure requires fundamental intervention by government and others. As a result, I have taken a series of further measures beyond the legal interventions detailed above to address the current situation, including:

1. The creation of a “Waste Crime Taskforce” to co-ordinate and escalate work to address organized waste crime, in a comprehensive, unambiguous manner this is to put the spotlight on this crime like never before and to address the issue like never before.
2. Further support for the ECU in continuing to develop evidence against all involved in the criminality in this case and in other cases. I made a dedicated bid for additional resources in ‘June Monitoring’ in this respect. The Finance Minister supported this bid, agreed £1.5 million, monies to be used to, in this financial year, to upgrade the work of the ECU and other enforcement activities of the DOE.
3. An immediate review of other waste sites in Northern Ireland, concentrating on a “TOP 25” of locations where risk may exist, based upon current information, intelligence, past record and ongoing enforcement issues. This work involves the ECU and Waste arms of DOE: NIEA
4. Contact and communication in June with Councils and other businesses which used the Derry site, to ensure Councils activated their alternative waste collection arrangements and critically, to require Councils to provide proof of the waste trail in relation to Council collected waste, and to demonstrate that councils have exercised due diligence around the management of waste contracts.

5. Intensive assessment of ground water, water course and river water quality to determine any water quality impact arising from the illegal waste sites. Past assessment of the River Faughan, for example, indicates, currently, no raised levels of pollution. These assessments are extensive, thorough and should help ensure the early detection of water risks, if they should arise.

I directed the new Chief Executive of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to prioritise these actions and ensure that the Agency’s resources and efforts are marshalled for a major effort to tackle environmental crime.

This effort must ensure that all those involved in the ‘waste chain’, including businesses that generate waste, councils and businesses who collect it, businesses who transport it and businesses who treat, recycle and dispose of it, must fully and properly discharge their waste responsibilities.

6. I also commissioned an Expert Review to be conducted by Chris Mills, the former Director of the Welsh Environment Agency. This work began immediately after the announcement. The work is ongoing.

Mr Mills has extensive experience in environmental protection and in his seven years as Director of the Welsh Environment Agency, he had responsibility for all aspects of the regulation of waste.

Under his leadership, the Welsh Environment Agency closed down over 270 illegal waste sites and pioneered the application of the proceeds of Crime Act 2002 to combat waste crime. To date, 14 Confiscation Orders totalling 14.7 million pounds have been successfully served on offenders. Environment Agency Wales also recently completed a successful campaign to clear over 300,000 illegally dumped tyres.

Mr Mills review will support the DoE’s on-going work to create a waste sector in Northern Ireland that complies with the law, protects the environment and underpins resource efficiency by conducting a review into:

- what transpired in relation to the waste facility at the Campsie site and to identify any failures that might have occurred in the regulation of this site, in respect of any sectors of central government.
- the external factors leading to the extensive illegal waste dumping at the Campsie site;
- the lessons this incident provides for the future development and administration of waste management, resource efficiency and enforcement programmes.

The Expert Reviewer will provide a report to the Minister for the Environment and the Chief Executive of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency no later than Thursday 31 October 2013. In addition the reviewer should provide monthly updates and, if at any stage considers an issue to be of high significance, should advise the Minister and the Chief Executive. Whilst the report should focus on the incident in question, it is expected that it will be put into the context of the structures and arrangements for the management and disposal of waste in Northern Ireland.

I wish to emphasise that Mr Mills, my Permanent Secretary and other senior staff all know and have been directed that the approach must be “robust and fearless”

Any operation which we can identify and against which there is evidence will be isolated and robust action will follow. In the interrogation of what DOE did around this facility and generally, every stone will be turned.

7. I also can confirm that other appropriate assessments of the waste management facility and adjacent lands are ongoing with the relevant agencies to mitigate risk and damage problems, be it fly infestation, fire risk or other matters.

I wish to confirm that a large number of streams of work are ongoing in relation to the North – West: the purpose is singular to address decisively the immediate and longer term issues that have been identified. The Environment Committee will be regularly updated, both in general and when otherwise needed, as events unfold, as they will.

Last month’s revelations about waste dumping in the North West indicate the scale of waste crime and the threat it poses – in environmental damage, illegality, criminality and loss of revenue to the state.

The set of actions I have just outlined represent a wide ranging strategy to put waste crime front and centre in relation to criminality in Northern Ireland.

As I say, all of this requires a comprehensive response. This is why, in a separate streams of work, I have spoken with the Justice Minister, David Ford and senior PSNI in recent times to press home the need for the fullest, comprehensive, co-ordinated and decisive response to the threat. The threat of waste crime and the organised criminality involved means that the crime and assets agencies must treat this threat as a priority. Since early June, the levels of engagement and joint effort have grown significantly between the relevant organisations. This is needed, and more is needed.

The focussed and extensive actions by my Department are critical for success in eliminating environmental crime, but on their own they are not enough. A co-ordinated and powerful response from all agencies is needed and this is a further urgent element of work that I have said we need to take forward together. I shall be working to achieve this wider approach, essential to address the threat of organised crime.

In conclusion, let me re-emphasise what I have been saying over recent weeks. I have been speaking of the threat of organized criminality on the island. The volume of fuel laundering in recent months and the volume of unlawful disposal of waste revealed last month has been the reason.

Dental Hospital Inquiry Report

Published at 12.00 noon on 22 July 2013

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): I wish to make a statement to the Assembly to advise members of the full publication of the report of the statutory inquiry into the oral medicine service at the Royal Victoria Hospital’s dental hospital and the associated action plan, coordinated by my Department, to address the recommendations of that report.

On 28 June 2011, when I made my statement to the Assembly on the findings of the statutory inquiry into the oral medicine service at the Royal Victoria Hospital’s dental hospital and how these would be addressed, I placed the executive summary of the report, including all 45 recommendations, in the Assembly Library. I was unable at that time to provide the full report as it contained issues that were subject to regulatory processes that were not complete.

The Inquiry has now submitted a final version of its report to me and I am placing on my Department’s website to-day a copy of the full Dental Hospital Inquiry Report and the associated DHSSPS Action Plan to address the recommendations of the report. Most of the 42 action points in the plan have already either been completed in full or in part. Only a small number have yet to be fully implemented. It is envisaged that all the actions should be completed or on-going by September 2014.

I wish to extend my gratitude to Mr Brian Fee QC, and his team for the comprehensive report they provided to me. This highlights that there were serious deficiencies in the quality of care provided by the Oral Medicine Department of the Dental Hospital and Belfast HSC Trust to the patients recalled, which did impact adversely on the health of some. This should not have happened and I want to ensure that it never happens again.

I hope that implementation of the Action Plan will help address the concerns that this incident has raised and that it improves public confidence in the Belfast Dental Hospital that lessons have been learnt and services are now managed in such a way to ensure patient safety and the best possible quality of services.

Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland 2011-21

Published at 9.30 am on Wednesday 24 July 2013

Mr P Robinson (The First Minister) and Mr M McGuinness (The deputy First Minister): This statement is to update the Assembly on progress with the Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland 2011-21.

We launched the latest iteration of the Executive's Investment Strategy in October last year, covering the years 2011-21. This Strategy builds on the record level of investment delivered by the Executive since 2008, which has seen new roads, schools, hospitals, and other infrastructure assets delivered right across the region. It underlines our continued determination to secure the physical infrastructure we need to help deliver first-class public services, to regenerate our communities and to help our economy return to growth. The Strategy is informed by, and helps to support, our Programme for Government objectives and targets. It plays an important role too in delivering the infrastructure we need to support our Economic Strategy – building on the high quality jobs we have already attracted here by making this region a more competitive and attractive destination for inward investment. Delivering the Investment Strategy is also helping to support jobs in the hard-pressed construction industry – with the majority of contracts being won by local companies using local labour and materials.

The Investment Strategy covers a 10-year time frame, but is sufficiently flexible to respond to developments in policy and the wider economic context. For example, our recent statement on Together: Building a United Community commits us to invest substantial capital funds in shared education campuses, regeneration of urban villages and shared neighbourhood developments.

One of the benefits of the Investment Strategy is that it allows us to look back and assess our progress.

In the financial year 2012/13, some £1.3 billion was invested in capital infrastructure projects across the region, including approximately:

- £250 million under the Networks pillar;
- £130 million under the Skills pillar;
- £325million under the Health pillar;
- £240 million under the Social pillar;
- £175 million under the Environment pillar;
- £100 million under the Productive Pillar;
- £80 million under the Justice pillar.

During 2012/13 and the current financial year a number of important capital projects or programmes were completed. These included:

Networks:

- New park and ride facilities at Millbrook near Larne and at Antrim and Ballymoney Stations.
- Completion of delivery of new trains and a new Train Care Maintenance and Stabling facility at Adelaide.

- Track Safety improvements work on the Coleraine to Derry-Londonderry Line and Phase One of the track renewal project.
- Completion of the upgrade of Portadown Railway Station.
- 87 new Goldliner coaches entered service, which has resulted in improved services and a 6% increase in Goldline passenger journeys.
- Major improvements on the A32 at Shannaragh were completed in March 2013 and at Cherrymount Link in June 2013. Both schemes will significantly improve traffic flow and journey times.

Skills

- Delivery of new and refurbished schools, including St Mary's Primary School, Newcastle, Torbank Special School, Dundonald, Bangor Grammar School, Magherafelt Primary and Nursery School, St Columba's Primary School, Straw, and Lagan College, Belfast and progress is being made with 18 more new build capital schools projects. Arvalee Special School which has been destroyed by arson has been accommodated on temporary classrooms and will have priority for a new school on the Lisanelly site.

Health

- The opening of the £276 million South West Acute Hospital in Enniskillen on time and to budget and completion of the Grangewood Mental Health and Crisis Unit, a new 30 bed acute mental health inpatient unit in Derry-Londonderry.
- Opening of the Northern Ireland Molecular Pathology Lab (NI-MPL) and Northern Ireland Biobank (NIB), in association with Queen's University Belfast.
- The new Emergency Department at Antrim Area Hospital was official opened last week. In addition, Northern Ireland's First Sexual Assault Referral Centre was completed on the Antrim Area Hospital Site by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in partnership with the Police Service of Northern Ireland.
- Substantial completion of three further capital developments representing an aggregate investment in the Health and Social Care Estate of circa £160million.

Social

- In excess of £160 million was invested in social housing. Schemes completed during the year include: Ballymacoss Hill, Lisburn (£12.5m), Tesco Site, Broadway (£7.5m), and Bligh's Lane, Derry-Londonderry (£6m). A further 40 social housing schemes completed during the year.
- Opening of the Olympic size swimming pool in Bangor.
- The completion of 'The Venue', Ebrington marked a milestone in the transformation of the site and in Derry-Londonderry's preparations for the City of Culture 2013 and associated events programme.
- The Metropolitan Arts Centre (MAC) in Belfast's Cathedral Quarter was officially opened in April 2012.

Environment

- Upgrade to or replacement of waste water treatment facilities at Carnmoney, Keady, Tullygarley and Brockagh Terrace and construction of a new pumping station for the Newtownards area.
- Other environmental measures such as flood alleviation and waste management.

Productive

- Opening of the Giant's Causeway Visitor Centre and a further £6million investment in improving the region's tourism offering.
- Almost £2 million was invested in the Walled City Programme and Lighting in preparation for hosting the inaugural City of Culture.
- Over £35 million of enterprise support was offered to Invest NI clients.
- Over £30 million investment in the Rural Development and Primary Industries including significant processing and marketing, fisheries and woodland grants and the completion of a £2.5million new dairy unit and office block at Greenmount College, Antrim.

Justice

- Investment of £30million in new police vehicles.

The Strategy also gives structure and direction to the ongoing delivery of projects and the Executive is on track to invest more than £5 billion in infrastructure projects during the current budget period to March 2015. Since the publication of the Strategy we have benefitted from additional allocations of capital and borrowing flexibility. As a result we are now in a better position to deliver the £8 billion of capital investment that was originally set out in the Strategy for the period beyond 2014/15 and will aim to go further, improving on this. Recent agreements as set out in the joint document 'Building a Prosperous and United Community' and in the Chancellor's recent Spending Round 2013 announcement will allow us to further review our infrastructure investment plans to ensure that the maximum possible capital is spent.

A significant number of projects are also currently in the process of being delivered or are in the pipeline, for example:

- Regional Sports stadia at Ravenhill, Casement Park and Windsor Park.
- New build schools projects plus the new shared campus projects at Lisanelly.
- Significant road improvement schemes.
- Ongoing regeneration work at Maze Long Kesh and Ebrington.
- The Bank Square regeneration project in Belfast and planning for the major Royal Exchange scheme.
- Significant investment in social housing.
- Health and care centres in Banbridge and Ballymena, plus two revenue funded primary healthcare hubs in Newry and Lisburn.
- A new Royal Maternity Hospital and new Regional Children's Hospital and work at Omagh Local Hospital and the Northwest Radiotherapy Unit.

- In 2012/13 investment of £160 million in water and waste water was delivered and a similar level of investment is expected in 2013/14.
- A new Community Safety College at Desertcreat and the Forensic Science Laboratory Services Accommodation project.
- A new accommodation block at Maghaberry prison.

The Strategy also allows us to plan ahead so that projects are progressed at the correct rate to take advantage of capital funding when it is available. This planning is dynamic to allow us to respond to changes in priorities and policies, unavoidable delays in certain projects and changes in the level of capital funding available.

Since the launch of the Investment Strategy the Executive has been able to announce a number of additional capital projects. In January 2013 the Education Minister announced that he was making an additional £220 million available to advance planning for a further 22 primary and post-primary new build schools. The intention is that these projects will be ready to make full use of any additional capital funding available in the next budget period. The Executive also committed to part-funding a new gas infrastructure in the West with an input of some £32.5 million – potentially leveraging a total investment of some £200 million.

Effective investment is not just about quantity. In times when budgets are tight it is even more important that we make good investment decisions that provide the maximum possible benefit for every pound spent. To this end, world-class collaborative research is ongoing between the Strategic Investment Board and Queens University on new strategic infrastructure planning models. These tools will help to ensure we deliver the right assets in the right place by providing the best information possible to inform investment decisions. It is innovation like this that will set our Investment Strategy apart – an intelligent strategy driven by evidence of what works best.

We are also continuing to examine models that will allow us to accelerate investment in infrastructure by using revenue funds in addition to capital funds. These revenue funded approaches can be used where they are affordable, offer value for money and do not undermine the future delivery of frontline services. The Minister for Health, Social Services and Public Safety recently announced two revenue funded projects to deliver integrated primary healthcare hubs for the people of Lisburn and Newry. The acceleration of these projects will allow some of the important changes set out in Transforming Your Care to take place.

All of this investment not only allows us to deliver high-class and efficient public services but supports the re-balancing of our economy by creating the physical and educational environment which supports expansion of our own businesses and attracts inward investment. Investment in infrastructure and other public works delivered by the Executive is estimated to support some 30,000 jobs per year, more through the filtering of wages out into the wider economy and many more through creating the right environment to grow and attract businesses."

The Executive values the support of the business community and is working with sector representatives to ensure that small and medium size enterprises across the region are helped to bid for public works. To ensure that everyone has the chance to contribute, departments now publish comprehensive up-to-date information on all planned capital works funded under the Investment Strategy. This information is freely available on the Executive's Investment Strategy website, www.isni.gov.uk.

We are determined to maximise the impact on jobs of every pound invested in order to speed up economic recovery and when it is appropriate, departments will seek to bring forward investment in those public works that are more labour intensive in preference to schemes that would deliver a lower employment impact.

A modern, user-focused infrastructure is critical to our future success. Improving quality of life and job opportunities for our people requires continued investment in essential infrastructure – and we are pleased to report progress so far to this Assembly and look forward to the increased investment which we can deliver as a result of recent economic announcements.

Appointment of a Speech and Language Therapist to the Youth Justice Agency

Published at 12:00 noon on Thursday 12 September 2013

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The Youth Justice Agency has been involved in an ongoing programme of work with the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists (RCSLT) to develop support mechanisms for young people with speech, language and communication issues within the youth justice system.

A key element of this programme has been the successful piloting within the Agency's Lisburn Area Office and Woodlands Juvenile Justice Centre of an e-learning tool which had been developed by the RCSLT. An evaluation of the six month pilot published by the RCSLT in April 2013 found that 79 of the 147 (54%) young people who were assessed were identified as having communication needs. The RCSLT and the Youth Justice Agency have recognised the need for this to be addressed through the provision of speech and language therapy.

In response to this clearly identified need, I have authorised the appointment of a dedicated Speech & Language Therapist resource for the Youth Justice Agency based at Woodlands Juvenile Justice Centre. This temporary post will be funded by the Youth Justice Agency although the appointee will be recruited and managed via a secondment arrangement with the South Eastern Health & Social Care Trust. It is hoped to have this service up and running by the end of this calendar year.

This appointment will help to ensure that young people within the youth justice system who have speech, language and communication issues will have those needs identified at an early stage and will be offered specialised support to help them better understand their surroundings and engage more effectively in programmes to address their offending behaviour.

Bright Start: The Executive's Programme for Affordable and Integrated Childcare (A Strategic Framework and Key First Actions)

Published at 10:00 am on Wednesday 25 September 2013

Mr P Robinson (The First Minister) and Mr M McGuinness (The deputy First Minister): At the start of December last year, we launched a three-month public consultation on the Childcare Strategy. We received dozens of written submissions from a range of individuals, groups and organisations, and from our own Assembly Committee. We also heard the opinions of the people who attended the public events organised by us and the events organised by the main childcare stakeholders. We have heard from people in rural areas, and those in towns and cities. We have heard the opinions of childcare providers and specialists; the views of parents; and the views of the children themselves.

Consultation has made us all the more aware that many people cannot access the type of childcare they want. It has made it clear to us that many people here need more information about the types of childcare available if they are to find the form of care that meets their needs and the needs of their children. Finally, consultation has brought home to us the extent to which many people here struggle to meet the costs of childcare.

Based on the emerging priorities from the consultation process, Bright Start has been developed, including a range of key early actions to help us deliver our vision for childcare.

Bright Start sets out the strategic direction of the Childcare Strategy and lists a number of key first actions that will be put in place to address the main priorities identified during public consultation, including:

- a shortage of childcare provision, notably in rural areas and for the key age group 4-14;
- support for children with disabilities;
- a lack of information on childcare provision;
- the high cost of childcare services; and
- the need for clear, departmental accountability for the Childcare Strategy.

Bright Start states that the long-term vision of the Childcare Strategy is to create a joined-up sustainable service, supporting development needs and positive changes for children. These key first actions attempt to address the provision of childcare services and the cost, quality and accessibility of those services.

The performance of these actions will be monitored and this process will allow further engagement to take place with key stakeholders to enable us to publish the final Childcare Strategy in 2014.

The key first actions are as follows:

We will create or sustain some 6,000 new affordable school-age childcare places – childcare for the 4-14 age group. We will achieve this through a combination of new provision and support for existing childcare providers.

Across the region, we will pilot a new approach to wrap-around care in the schools estate based on initial funding to create a minimum of 2,000 places. This could potentially rise to 3,000 places dependent on demand. We will also support the expansion and creation of 3,000 affordable places within a social enterprise model in areas in the 25% most deprived wards.

To address further the needs of rural areas, we will support, on a phased basis, a Rural Childminder Start-Up Package creating up to an additional 1,000 childminder places in rural areas. We will reinforce the above programme through supporting locally based transport schemes in rural areas, servicing networks of childminders in rural locations.

We will fund two further phases of the DHSSPS-led pilot – Improving Outcomes for Disabled Children – already underway through the Childcare Fund – which provides small capital grants enabling registered childcare settings to adapt to cater for children with a disability reinforced by training provision.

We will implement a range of improvements to the Family Support Website (www.familysupportni.gov.uk) to enhance it as a central source of information on childcare and providers operating at local levels.

We will develop a social media application (App) to provide better search functionality, more information channels and ultimately better and more accessible information at the touch of a button for parents.

Within the framework of the Executive's position on advertising, we will seek to promote both of the above through a publicity campaign which will also explain the benefits of registered childcare and the risks of unregistered childcare so that parents can make informed choices.

Again, within the framework of the Executive's position on advertising, we will seek to promote the financial assistance available to the many parents who find the costs of childcare a challenge, with the explicit aim of increasing uptake. This may involve an awareness-raising campaign and associated practical advice for the two forms of financial assistance currently available through the tax and benefits system to help parents with the affordability of childcare.

We will support a training programme to improve and enhance skill across the workforce.

We will work with other programmes to ensure good quality training of unemployed people as a pathway to work in childcare.

We will seek to align and promote existing initiatives to enhance the skill base and support continuing professional development in the childcare sector.

We will support initiatives to encourage greater diversity in the childcare workforce – with particular reference to males and individuals from ethnic minority communities.

We will establish a Childcare Strategy Management Forum that will meet quarterly to scrutinise and review how the early actions are being implemented. Departments with a policy interest in childcare – OFMDFM, DE, DHSSPS, DSD and DEL – will participate on the Management Forum. Local and stakeholder opinion will be represented through the Childcare Partnerships.

Conscious of public demand that a single department take the lead for childcare policy, we will agree a department that can fulfil this role and chair the Management Forum.

These first actions have been developed in line with priorities that have emerged through responses to the consultation document Towards a Childcare Strategy issued in December 2012. The consultation process sought views from the public, the childcare sector, parents and children in relation to childcare needs, priorities and issues. Views were obtained via a range of consultations, public meetings, workshops and written responses from stakeholders.

The first actions have also been informed by research reports and studies undertaken by the childcare sector in recent years and OFMDFM commissioned research involving parental and childcare provider surveys to statistically analyse childcare needs and parental preferences and to provide a robust evidence base to prioritise and target actions in specific thematic areas.

The first actions build on what already exists (by way of capacity, interventions and physical facilities) and aim to better join-up and improve this provision. We envisage that these actions will be implemented together, as a package, in order to maximise their impact on the accessibility, quality and affordability of childcare provision.

Some of the first actions are pilot projects designed to further refine and test uptake by parents, with a view to potential expansion thereafter. Other actions are designed to improve information in relation to childcare in order to improve parental choice and accessibility of childcare and therefore are permanent interventions.

Childcare is a critical enabler to help parents into work, move families out of poverty and help to break the cycle of inter-generational deprivation. Good quality childcare, which provides positive experiences and promotes children's opportunities to develop, is also potentially a building block for a stable and prosperous future for individuals, for families and for communities.

We are delighted, therefore, to be able to launch today Bright Start: the Executive's Programme for Affordable and Integrated Childcare (A Strategic Framework and Key First Actions)

Child Exploitation in Northern Ireland

Published at 4.00 pm on Wednesday 25 September 2013

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): A range of actions have been taken by my Department and the HSC sector to strengthen our protection of children and young people. In 2012, I established the Safeguarding Board for NI to support and promote effective interagency co-operation in safeguarding children. The SBNI had identified child sexual exploitation and developed an action plan to address this.

I have initiated two joint roundtable meetings with the Minister of Justice and key stakeholders this year to discuss our shared commitment to improving the lives of young people in NI through better supports for families, earlier interventions when difficulties first emerge and partnership working between the police and social services in tackling all forms of child abuse, including child sexual exploitation.

This commitment is reflected in a number of developments including the co-located team currently investigating child sexual exploitation and the investment of my Department, along with other Departments, to an Early Intervention Fund. I have also made additional investment into specialist services such as the establishment of the Sexual Assault Regional Centre which opened this year as well as the extension of existing services targeted specifically at children and young people including Children and Adolescent Services and Drug and Alcohol services.

Working with vulnerable children is undoubtedly one of the most challenging jobs there is and I am committed to supporting staff in undertaking this work, particularly those working with children who, for whatever, reason are in our care. I want to ensure that we have the most effective system of care in place that will provide young people with the stability and security they need and I will consider any changes that may be necessary to achieve this, including legislation if required.

I have directed the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland to undertake a thematic review of the cases that triggered the investigation in order to identify the learning from the management of those cases to inform and improve future practice.

Also, the Minister for Justice and I are setting up an independent expert-led Inquiry into child sexual exploitation in NI. I would hope that we have the full support of all parties in this endeavour, particularly those other Departments whose work substantively impacts on the lives of children and young people.

You will all be aware of recent media coverage on this matter. While the police have indicated that this investigation began with a focus on a number of young people from care they have clearly indicated that this is an issue affecting the lives of many more children living at home in the community. This is supported by evidence in the Barnardo's report 'Not a world away' and from other studies across the UK.

Judging from the public reaction to this issue I know that many, including those in this house, share with me a sense of disbelief and horror that this is happening in our society. People are also asking, and rightly so, valid questions about whether everything that can be done, is being done, to prevent, tackle and disrupt the sexual exploitation of children and young people.

It is clear to me from listening to those who work in this area that the understanding about this issue, how it can happen and how it can be stopped is developing all the time. Throughout the UK all governments, academics, professionals, the public, service providers and frontline staff are working to better understand and respond to this devastating form of sexual abuse which violates, humiliates and, in many instances, traps children into a cycle of harm.

This is the reason why I, and the Minister for Justice, have agreed to set up an independent expert-led Inquiry here to be supported and facilitated jointly by the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority and Criminal Justice Inspectorate of NI. We are also open to the involvement of the Education and Training Inspectorate.

The proposed remit of this Inquiry will be to:

- examine the nature and extent of child sexual exploitation in Northern Ireland in conjunction with relevant agencies and stakeholders;
- determine the most pertinent issues that need to be addressed that can help to prevent, tackle and disrupt CSE;
- examine the effectiveness of current measures aimed at tackling, preventing and disrupting CSE; and
- consider the effectiveness of measures to secure the safety and wellbeing of children in care, including those at risk of CSE;
- make recommendations on what needs to be done in HSC and Justice to improve the effectiveness of these measures: and
- highlight actions that should be taken by other Departments and their agencies, including the education sector, to prevent the risk of CSE, identify children at risk of CSE and support the work the HSC and Justice agencies.

The remit is wide-ranging and not confined to children in the care system. It is intended to address both broad concerns regarding child sexual exploitation and current responses to it as well as specific concerns about the protection of children in care.

I can assure Members of my commitment and the commitment of Minister Ford to respond to the recommendations emerging from this Inquiry. I have no doubt that the recommendations will be wider reaching than justice and health and social care.

It is our intention the Inquiry will be undertaken in conjunction with a wide range of agencies and stakeholders in NI, including the Safeguarding Board for NI who bring together many of the agencies involved in working with and safeguarding children.

I will provide a further statement to the Assembly when the independent expert to lead the Inquiry has been confirmed.

Tobacco Retailers Bill [NIA 19/11-15]

Members present for all or part of the proceedings:

Ms Maeve McLaughlin (Chairperson)
Mr Roy Beggs
Mr Mickey Brady
Ms Pam Brown
Mr Gordon Dunne
Mr Samuel Gardiner
Mr Kieran McCarthy
Mr David McIlveen

The Chairperson: I refer Members to the paper from the Committee Clerk, which provides a summary of the Committee's position to date on all the clauses. I refer Members to a letter from the Minister about a revised amendment at clause 4. We have an updated black and red copy of the Bill, which is in hard copy for Members. I will hand over to the Committee Clerk to brief the Committee.

The Committee Clerk: Thank you, Chair. On the table is the letter from the Minister with the revised red and black copy of the Bill. Members will recall that, at its meeting on 11 September, the Committee asked whether a retailer that was on the register and was subsequently convicted of an illicit tobacco offence resulting in a custodial sentence, whether suspended or not, would be automatically then removed from the register. The Department agreed to consider the issue and to report back to the Committee on 18 September. So, last week, on 18 September, the Department advised that it was content to draft an amendment on that issue. It has now provided the wording of the amendment, which will be clause 4(2)(b). The Department agreed to the Committee's suggested amendment and has provided the wording of that amendment.

The Chairperson: Are members generally content with the Department's proposal to amend clause 4 in that way?

Mr Beggs: May I have some more time to study this, please?

The Chairperson: Certainly.

Are members content?

The Chairperson: I remind members that this is the formal clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill, so it is a vital and essential part of the process and of our duties. It is also the final opportunity for the Committee to propose amendments to the Bill. I want to make sure that we are clear on that.

As a result, I will formally put the Question after each clause. The Committee is required to vote that it is content with the clause; content with the clause subject to the Department's amendment; is not content and wishes to amend the clause; or that it is not content and wishes to oppose the clause. I say that just so that members are clear on that. I ask members to keep the black and red copy of the Bill in front of them as we go through the clauses.

Clause 1 (Register of tobacco retailers)

The Chairperson: This clause provides for the creation of a register of tobacco retailers. The Department is proposing an amendment to allow for a single body, the registration authority, to maintain the register. The Committee indicated that it was generally content with the clause and the proposed amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 2 (Application for registration)

The Chairperson: The clause sets out the arrangements for registration. The Department is proposing an amendment so that a person who has been convicted of an illicit tobacco offence resulting in a custodial sentence, suspended or not, shall not be allowed to register as a tobacco retailer for five years from the date of the conviction. The Committee was generally content with the clause and the proposed amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 5 (Inspection of the Register)

The Chairperson: The Department proposes to remove clause 5, given that the amendment to clause 1 will mean that the public can access the register from the registration authority. The Committee indicated that it was generally content. Is the Committee content to oppose clause 5 as a consequence of the departmental amendment to clause 1?

Question, That the Committee is content to oppose the Question that the clause stand part, put and agreed to.

Clause 6 (Access by Department and councils to the Register)

The Chairperson: The Department proposes to remove clause 6, given that it has proposed an amendment to clause 16 to allow for information on convictions, fixed penalty notices, restricted sales and restricted premises orders to be shared between councils, the registration authority and the Department. Again, the Committee indicated that it was generally content with that.

Question, That the Committee is content to oppose the Question that the clause stand part, put and agreed to.

Clause 7 (Restricted premises orders)

Again, the Committee indicated that it was generally content with that.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 8 (Restricted sale orders)

The Chairperson: The Department has proposed an amendment to clause 8 that will mean that three offences in five years will result in a restricted sales order and that the minimum period of a restricted sales order will be 28 days, and the maximum will be three years. Again, the Committee indicated that it was generally content with the clause and the proposed amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 9 (Appeal against the making of an order under section 7 or 8)

The Chairperson: The Department has proposed an amendment to clause 9 to require premises subject to a restricted premises order to display a sign and to require premises subject to a restricted premises order to remove tobacco from the retail area. The Committee indicated that it was content with the clause and the amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 10 (Offences)

The Chairperson: The Department has proposed an amendment to clause 10 to create an offence for failing to display a notice if subject to a restricted premises order and to create an offence for failing to remove tobacco products from the retail area if subject to a restricted premises order. Again, the Committee indicated that it was content with the clause and the proposed amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 11 (Enforcement by councils)

The Chairperson: The Department proposes to remove clause 11 because it is no longer necessary because of the amendments to clauses 12 to 16. Again, members indicated that they were content with that.

Question, That the Committee is content to oppose the Question that the clause stand part, put and agreed to.

Clause 12 (Powers of entry)

The Chairperson: The Department has proposed an amendment to consolidate in one place in the Bill all the enforcement provisions on powers of entry, fixed penalty notices and obstruction of officers. Again, the Committee indicated that it was generally content with that.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 13 (Fixed penalties for certain offences)

The Chairperson: The Department has proposed an amendment to the clause to allow for fixed penalty notices to be issued for sales from vending machines selling un-packaged cigarettes and for failure to display a warning notice. Again, the Committee indicated that it was generally content with the clause and the proposed amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 14 (Use of fixed penalty receipts)

The Chairperson: The Department has not proposed any amendments. The Committee indicated that it was generally content with the clause.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, put and agreed to.

The amendment also requires every council to make information on fixed penalty notices, convictions, restricted premises orders and restricted sales orders available to every other council, the registration authority and the Department. Again, members indicated that they were generally content with that. Is the Committee content with clause 16, subject to the proposed departmental amendment?

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 17 (Offences by bodies corporate)

The Chairperson: The Department proposes an amendment to clause 18 to increase the fine for selling to under-18s from a level 4 fine of £2,500 to a level 5 fine of £5,000. The amendment also creates an offence of proxy purchasing. Again, the Committee indicated that it was generally content. Is the Committee content with clause 18, subject to the proposed departmental amendment?

Mr Beggs: Just for clarification, we are largely removing a lot of what was originally in clause 18. Will you just clarify where the amendment, as explained, occurs? Is that just reflecting changing the fine from level 4 to level 5? It is all right — I see it now.

The Chairperson: Are you OK? Does that clarify it for you?

Mr Beggs: It is OK.

The Chairperson: OK. Thank you.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Public Participation in Departmental Consultations

Mr G Robinson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the measures taken to ensure maximum public participation in departmental consultations.

(AQO 3831/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Department maintains a central list of stakeholders which is used for all consultations. It is for lead policy officials to determine the most appropriate way to highlight forthcoming consultations and to encourage broad levels of participation. Typically these measures include letters or e-mails to the stakeholders; adverts in the general press and specialist press of affected groups; updates on NI Direct websites and direct invitations to key groups to respond to upcoming consultations.

Public consultation events are held in a variety of venues and areas at different times of day and evening to afford everyone an opportunity to take part.

Copies of consultation documents are usually made available in a range of languages; large font versions and easy-read formats. Braille and audio versions can also be produced as required.

Together: Building a United Community

Mr Hussey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the Together: Building a United Community Strategy will be funded, given the over-commitment already in their departmental budget.

(AQO 4238/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Details on the proposals for funding for the delivery of the actions and targets contained in Together: Building a United Community will be made in due course.

We have established design groups for each of the seven headline actions and these will produce implementation plans with indicative costs.

Social Investment Fund

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the plans to deliver projects through the Social Investment Fund.

(AQO 4239/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Since October 2012, our officials have been working alongside steering groups to ensure communities across all nine social investment zones are engaged in the process to identify objective needs and potential projects to tackle those needs. Steering groups have submitted final area plans, encompassing 89 prioritised projects aimed at addressing the key objectives of the Fund. Project proposals total in excess of £100m which exceeds the amount available under the Fund.

The final plans are now subject to a quality assurance review, including the completion of the economic appraisal process for each proposed project. This process is assessing the individual projects within the plans against set criteria to ensure the most robust projects are recommended, to maximise impact on the ground.

Following the appraisal process, we will then move into the mainstream delivery phase of Social Investment Fund.

Children and Young People: Ten-year Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 23502/11-15, (i) how an assessment of the progress achieved over the period of the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People post 2016 will be carried out, given that the strategy did not run its full course; and (ii) what actions are contained within the Children and Young Persons Early Action document to deal with the high level outcomes of the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People, specifically programmes relating to (a) Being Healthy; Enjoying, learning and achieving; (b) Living in safety and with stability; (c) Experiencing economic and environmental well-being; (d) Contributing positively to community and society; and (e) Living in a society which respects their rights.

(AQW 24641/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: When we come to consider any successor to the Ten Year Strategy account will be taken of progress of the current strategy to that point in time. The Ten year Strategy will run its full course until 2016.

The Children and Young Persons Early Action Paper identifies the key immediate priorities for children and families. It focuses efforts and resources on a joined-up approach to tackling poverty and improving the lives and experiences of children and young people. In terms of actions, the delivery of the six Signature Programmes, through the Delivering Social Change Framework, includes provision for: additional teachers to promote numeracy and literacy, Family Support Hubs, Pathways to Employment for Young People, Children's Nurture Units and Parenting Support Programmes. Proposals for future Signature Programmes are under consideration. They will be complemented by some of the projects to be supported under the Social Investment Fund which have been identified by communities. These are intended to contribute to the outcomes framework within the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People (2006-16) and by their nature many will address multiple outcomes.

Planning Expertise

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many staff in their Department have planning expertise.

(AQW 24676/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We do not hold information in relation to planning expertise within the Department.

Hydraulic Fracturing

Mr McKay asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in light of the amendments to the Planning Bill which will bring aspects of planning under their remit, whether they have considered any planning proposals that relate to fracking.

(AQW 24801/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: No planning proposals have been considered.

G8 Summit 2013

Mr Spratt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the G8 Summit 2013.

(AQO 4414/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The G8 summit was a tremendous success for us because it generated very significant positive international coverage. We had eight of the world's leaders here, plus the presidents of the institutions of the European Union and leaders from other influential countries and organisations. We were able to engage with them directly to welcome them here and to discuss a number of our priorities, as well as how we might engage with those countries to progress those priorities. We spent time at Lough Erne speaking directly to the G8 leaders about a number of economic, trade and investment issues. We also discussed how we could maximise our science and technology expertise internationally and how we could contribute to stabilisation in areas through sharing our conflict resolution experience. We have been following up on those issues, and we are already seeing the benefits, with the G8 countries and others agreeing to participate in an economic conference later this year.

The G8 has enabled us to raise our profile internationally in a positive way. The world's media were able to see and report at first hand the infrastructure that we have that supports investment and the products and services that our companies can offer to other countries. Everyone who saw the TV and newspaper coverage of the events at Enniskillen will know that the surroundings, the countryside and even the weather were at their best. That will greatly help our international tourism message around the world.

We have all worked hard to ensure that a very positive image has been created internationally. We have made contacts and have discussed practical initiatives for the future that will provide long-term benefits. We now need to capitalise on that and to build a legacy that will increase our exports, bring in investment, enhance our technical skills and bring more people to visit us here. We have made a lot of friends internationally, and we need to maintain and develop those friendships.

We commend those campaigners who took part in the various protests throughout the North. We saw the first peaceful G8 happen here, and that sends a very positive message. We pay tribute to all those who were involved in the preparation and successful planning of the G8 event. Although some costs were associated with hosting this world event, the benefits will be greater in the medium and longer term.

We need to continue to tell our story internationally of how we have managed the transition from conflict to peace. The G8 gave us an opportunity to tell those leaders that we intend to continue to take our community forward in a peaceful and united way.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Forests: Cycling

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of Forest Service managed forests that are available for use by cyclists.

(AQW 24655/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): My Department's forests provide great opportunities for cyclists with approximately 125kms of way-marked trails. These trails provide a variety of challenges and range in nature from leisure cycling to mountain bike trails. There are also 32 kilometres of Sustrans routes available on Forest Service land. These are part of a wider national network of cycle trails.

Forests available for use by cyclists include Castlewella Forest Park, Rostrevor forest, Castleward forest, Gosford Forest Park, Castle Archdale forest, Florencecourt forest, Gortin Glen Forest Park, Muckamore forest, Garvagh forest, Bineveagh forest, Downhill forest, Learmount forest and Davagh forest.

Forest Service also facilitate various cycling events in other forests with event organisers responsible for identifying trails to be used and managing events through licence arrangements with Forest Service.

I am pleased that the range of facilities has been greatly enhanced during the last number of years through my Department's commitment to working in partnership with organisations and local government. This partnership approach has secured a more diverse range of facilities and attractions in our forests, for the benefit of our rural communities and for the enjoyment of present and future generations.

Fishing: Aid Package

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, following the Private Members' Motion Aid Package for Fishermen, which was debated in the Assembly on 17 June 2013, to outline her Department's plans to deliver urgently a meaningful package of assistance to fishermen.

(AQW 24662/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As you are aware some weeks ago I announced a range of measures worth some £740,000 to help the fishing industry adapt to the changing needs of the reformed Common Fisheries Policy. During the Assembly debate in the Assembly on 17th June I said that I would keep the matter of further financial assistance under review. Since then I have been giving careful consideration to further options for a strategic support package and on 4th July I announced three further elements of that package.

Firstly there is an immediate need to assist the industry with cash flow problems that are making it difficult for some vessels to get to sea. I will therefore make available short-term assistance to meet a proportion of operating costs associated with harbour dues. I estimate this scheme will be worth approximately £500,000. It will be paid during the summer and will be available to all active fishing vessels under 27 metres in length.

Secondly I will be examining the potential for a fisheries loan fund to improve access to funding which is often quoted as a constraint to taking up grant opportunities. Potentially all sectors of the industry – catching, aquaculture, processing and shore based support could potentially benefit from better access to finance and it could play an important role in helping the fishing industry diversify to exploit service opportunities for the offshore renewable energy industry. Thirdly, I will be bringing forward a further plan in the autumn to address the recommendations involving the fishing industry that are contained in the Agri-Food Strategy Board's report "Going for Growth". I want to insure that our fishing industry maximises its potential so that it will continue to play an important role in the economic life of the coastal communities in which it is based.

Portavogie Fishing Fleet

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the discussions that she or her officials have had with Portavogie fishermen since the Adjournment Debate on the challenges facing the fishing fleet in Portavogie, on 11 June 2013.

(AQW 24721/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Officials met with fishermen and representatives of the Portavogie Trawlermen's Trading Company on 28 June, and I met with Jim Shannon MP and Michelle McIlveen MLA on 1st July. At both meetings the case for assistance was made strongly.

You will be aware of the range of measures I announced some weeks ago, worth some £740,000 to help the fishing industry adapt to the new challenges that will flow from the reformed Common Fisheries Policy. I have been giving careful consideration to further options for a strategic support package and have announced three further elements of that package.

In the short term I have decided to make further immediate assistance available. This assistance will help the industry with the immediate cash flow problems that are inhibiting some vessels from getting to sea and will be based on a proportion of harbour dues paid. It will be available to all active fishing vessels under 27m in length and is estimated to be worth in the region of £500,000.

For the longer term I also want to address access to finance, which is often quoted by fishing industry representatives as one of the reasons why fishing businesses have not taken up grant opportunities. My Department will examine the need for intervention in the form of a loan fund. Potentially all sectors of the industry – catching, aquaculture, processing and shore based support could potentially benefit from better access to finance and it could play an important role in helping the fishing industry diversify to exploit service opportunities for the offshore renewable energy industry.

Finally, I will be bringing forward a further plan in the autumn to address the recommendations involving the fishing industry that are contained in the Agri-Food Strategy Board's report "Going for Growth". I want to ensure that our fishing industry maximises its potential so that it will continue to play an important role in the economic life of the coastal communities such as Portavogie.

Ash Dieback

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the number of trees that have been lost as a result of Ash Dieback disease.

(AQW 24734/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since the first findings of ash die-back in the north were confirmed on 16 November 2012, the approximate number of ash trees subject to destruction notice is 70,000.

Further information on the disease and reporting finding is available on the Department's website at the following link <http://www.dardni.gov.uk/ash-dieback>

Underspend

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what was her departmental underspend in the last financial year.

(AQW 24757/11-15)

Department of Education

Together: Building a United Community

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 23815/11-15, (i) how; and (ii) when he was consulted on these issues.

(AQW 24315/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): I had discussions with OFMdfM regarding educational issues relevant to my Department prior to the announcement.

School Transport: Cost

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Education what was the cost to his Department of transporting post-primary school pupils from the Ballymena Borough Council area to schools outside Ballymena in 2012/13; and what was the cost for pupils from other council areas travelling in to post-primary schools in Ballymena.

(AQW 24450/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board has informed me that the cost of transporting post-primary school pupils from the Ballymena Borough Council area to schools outside Ballymena in 2012/13 was £955,902.08. The cost for pupils from other council areas travelling in to post-primary schools in Ballymena was £678,612.55.

Judicial Reviews

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education how many Judicial Review cases have been taken against his Department in each of the last three years; and to detail the cost to his Department of this litigation in each year.

(AQW 24653/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below which provides details of Judicial Review cases which commenced in the last three financial years.

Year	Number of Judicial Review Cases Commencing	Cost of Litigation £s
2010/11	2*	137,315.00
2011/12	1	172,685.78
2012/13	0	30,690.24

* These cases incurred expenditure over more than one financial year.

The figures provided do not include the cost of departmental officials as it is not possible to disaggregate these from their other duties.

Project Bank Accounts

Mr McGlone asked Minister of Education, in order to facilitate proper payments to contractors, sub-contractors and suppliers, for an update on the adoption of Project Bank Accounts as good practice within his Department.

(AQW 24700/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I would refer the member to the answer to AQW 22019/11-15, tabled by Tom Elliott and published in the official report on the 3rd of May 2013.

Schools: Defibrillators

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education how many schools have access to a defibrillator; and whether he has any plans to ensure that all schools install this piece of equipment.

(AQW 24729/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not hold any record of how many schools have access to a defibrillator.

Recently the 5 Education and Library Boards, with support of the British Heart Foundation, have established an Inter-Board Working Group which has compiled a specification for defibrillators for schools. This will enable a tender process to be completed. In addition the Working Group will devise a guidance document that will outline the conditions of using a defibrillator, training requirements and maintenance.

It is hoped to go to tender in October 2013 and the approved product identified by the end of 2013.

When this process has been completed, my Department will consider the best way forward regarding the matter of defibrillators.

Causeway School: Closure

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education whether he has been consulted by the North Eastern Education and Library Board on the closure of the Causeway School.

(AQW 24766/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have not been consulted by the North Eastern Education and Library Board on the closure of the Causeway School. The service provided by the School is non-statutory and the Board is not, therefore, required to consult with me.

Freedom of Information

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education whether, in answers to written questions, he gives an answer that would be consistent if the same question was asked under a Freedom of Information request.

(AQW 24795/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the Freedom of Information Act the Department is only required to provide information already held in recorded form. It does not have to create new information. However, in responding to Assembly Questions, the Department may create new information.

Primary School Admissions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 23764/11-15, to detail the figures broken down by the (i) catholic maintained; (ii) controlled; (iii) integrated, and (iv) Irish language sectors.

Controlled Integrated	24
Total	865

Notes:

- 1 The statistics are liable to change right up to the start of the 2013/14 school year, as more children will obtain places in their first preference schools due to withdrawal of applications, additional places being approved by the Department, or as a result of successful appeals.

2 Since compiling the information for AQW 23764/11-15, the Boards have revised the overall numbers from 850 to 865.

Schools: Invitations to Visit

(AQW 24871/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The breakdown of this information can only be compiled by the Education and Library Boards and I am informed that it is not available in the form requested at this time as the process of placing children is ongoing. I will write to you when the information becomes available.

Primary School Admissions

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education for a breakdown by (i) Education and Library Board area; and (ii) constituency of the 850 pupils who were unable to obtain a place at their first choice primary school.
(AQW 24872/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The breakdown of the 850 pupils who were unable to obtain a place at their first choice primary school by Education and Library Board area was provided in my answer to AQW 23764/11-15.

Since then, AQW 24819/11-15 has updated the figure of 850 to 865 and the following table gives a breakdown by Board area and by school management type:

Management Type	BELB	WELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	Total

Total	243	32	118	320	152	865

Note: The statistics are liable to change, right up to the start of the 2013/14 school year, as more children obtain places in their first preference schools due to withdrawal of applications, additional places being approved by the Department, or as a result of successful appeals.

The breakdown of this information by constituency area can only be compiled by the Education and Library Boards and I am informed that it is not available in the form requested at this time.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to outline the resources expended by the Council for the Curriculum Examinations and Assessment on (i) the dissemination of information; and (ii) training schools on examinations and assessment.

(AQW 24964/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: CCEA is funded to deliver a range of statutory functions related to the curriculum, assessment and examinations. In 2012/13 this was circa £31m. The dissemination of information is an embedded element within all of CCEA activities. Similarly, the training of teachers on aspects of examinations and assessment is fundamental to the delivery of CCEA's statutory responsibilities and is therefore also an embedded element. CCEA does not hold records in a format that could isolate costs related to the activities highlighted.

Education and Library Boards: Supplier Payments

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, in relation to the prompt payment of invoices, how much each Education and Library Board paid suppliers in each month of the 2011/12 financial year.

(AQW 24966/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The amounts paid to suppliers in each month of the 2011/12 financial year, as provided by the Education and Library Boards are set out in the table below.

Education and Library Board:	April 2011 £'000	May 2011 £'000	June 2011 £'000	July 2011 £'000	Aug 2011 £'000	Sept 2011 £'000	Oct 2011 £'000	Nov 2011 £'000	Dec 2011 £'000	Jan 2012 £'000	Feb 2012 £'000	Mar 2012 £'000

Maze/Long Kesh Site

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how his Department and schools will relate to, and use, the proposed Conflict Resolution Centre and prison buildings at the Maze site; and to outline any related material which may be produced.

(AQW 24986/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: While the proposed Conflict Resolution Centre and prison buildings at the Maze site are likely to provide important educational opportunities for our young people, it is a matter for schools to decide how they deliver the curriculum. The Department does not prescribe resources or programmes to be used by schools in their delivery of the curriculum, which provides teachers with greater flexibility to decide on the educational resources and programmes they wish to use to enhance teaching and learning. This also includes educational visits outside of the classroom.

Funding for Community Relations activities is made available to schools and youth groups through the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity (CRED) Enhancement Scheme. This application based scheme is managed by the Education and Library Boards, but like the curriculum, it is up to individual schools/youth groups to decide how the funding is best used to meet the needs of their young people.

If requested the Department could of course facilitate the dissemination of materials produced by the Centre to schools by making them available via the C2k managed ICT service. For example, the Department recently offered to make available, via the C2k exchange, a holocaust learning resource produced by the Imperial War Museum in London.

Schools: Transformation to Integrated Status

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education whether he has received representations from primary and post-primary schools which wish to change their designation to integrated for 2014/15.
(AQW 24990/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under Article 68 of the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989, any existing grant-aided school is eligible to transform to integrated status. A Development Proposal would be required if such a change is proposed. No such proposals for transformation in 2014/15 have been received by the Department of Education.

Regional Vision Resource Base

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the Regional Vision Resource Base; and whether funding will be extended for this service beyond 31 March 2014.
(AQW 24997/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I understand that the Regional Vision Resource Base provides a very effective service that has had a significant impact on enhancing access to the curriculum and independent learning for children and young people with a visual impairment.

As the Centre continues to develop its expertise in this highly specialist area, the speed at which materials are produced is well in excess of previous models delivered at individual board level. Furthermore, the sharing of expertise, the partnerships developed and the fact that the Centre operates on a regional basis ensures that a more streamlined, equitable and informed service will continue to develop across all board areas.

It is anticipated that a similar level of funding will be available in 2014-15 to that in place for 2013-14 but this will be confirmed prior to the start of the next financial year. In regard to future years, the Chancellor of the Exchequer recently announced the 2015-16 Spending Round outcome which provided a budget for the Executive to allocate to departments in that year. It is likely to be next year before any decisions on departmental allocations for 2015-16 are agreed by the Executive.

Blind and Partially Sighted Children and Young People

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education what consideration he has given to a cross sectoral review, in partnership with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on services to blind and partially sighted children and young people.
(AQW 25021/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: At present the Department of Education's (DE's) policy focus regarding children and young people (CYP) with a visual impairment (VI) is on implementing the policies already in place for raising standards and tackling barriers that CYP with a VI may face in fully accessing the curriculum.

To this end, DE continues to support the Royal National Institute of the Blind's (RNIB's) Vision Strategy for the north of Ireland through membership of the Vision Strategy Steering Group. This Group is made up of members from across the Health, Social Care and Education spectrums.

In practical terms, this involved the formation of four Priority Action Groups (PAGs) tasked with meeting the priorities arising from the Strategy. PAG 3 deals specifically with Education and Employment and includes representation from DE, the Department for Employment and Learning, Education and Library Boards (ELBs), Health and Social Care, the special school sector, voluntary organisations and service users.

In light of the above policy approach, I do not consider it necessary, at this stage, to undertake a cross sectoral review specifically with DHSSPS.

Blind and Partially Sighted Children and Young People

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education what consideration he has given to the introduction of a dedicated habilitation service within the education sector for young people who are partially sighted or blind.
(AQW 25022/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My response to AQW 25021/11-15 outlined my Department's current policy with regard to children and young people with a visual impairment.

At present, the Department of Education has no plans to introduce a dedicated habilitation service for children and young people with a visual impairment.

GCSE and A-level Exams: Choice of Examination Board

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education whether parents will retain the right to choose that their children continue to sit English Board GCSEs and A Levels.

(AQW 25040/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: At present, an open qualifications market operates here. This means that schools can choose the qualifications they offer to pupils. This will continue to be the case for as long as awarding organisations offer qualifications which match our curriculum and policies.

Area Planning: Post-primary Schools

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Education what process and procedure the North Eastern Education and Library Board has employed to assess the 8000 plus responses from the public regarding Post Primary school area planning; and for his assessment of this process.

(AQW 25092/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board has confirmed that the process and procedure used to assess responses to consultations are as follows.

All individual responses to a consultation are made available to members of the Board for detailed consideration prior to the relevant Committee meeting.

Government guidelines, e.g. Cabinet Office Guidance on Consultation (August 2012), local Public Sector Guidance and best practice, are followed by the Board when considering responses to consultation.

The process includes:

- analysing each response carefully;
- having a focus on the evidence given by those submitting responses to back up arguments presented;
- ensuring there is greater emphasis on the qualitative nature of responses while noting the quantitative;
- providing a summary of who responded;
- providing a summary of the views expressed and how they link to the decision making process;
- publishing a Consultation Report to Board Members prior to Committee discussion and more widely via the Board Website.

In completing the above in respect to the Area Planning process, the North Eastern Education and Library Board has deployed an officer with expertise in consultation processes from outside its Education Department, and therefore an officer not directly involved in face to face consultation meetings or the Area Planning process, to bring internal independence to the scrutiny of responses received.

The NEELB has indicated that it is assuming the 8,000 responses you refer to are those submitted by Cambridge House Grammar School and confirmed that these will be assessed in the manner outlined above.

I am content with the approach outlined by the NEELB with regard to their consultation and assessment of responses.

Schools: Rugby

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education what steps he is taking to promote the uptake of rugby amongst pupils at (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools.

(AQW 25099/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Physical Education is a compulsory Area of Learning for all pupils through Years 1-12. As with all Areas of Learning in the curriculum, delivery of PE, including the choice of which sports or games to be offered, is a matter for each school. The Department delegates as much funding as possible to schools who are best placed to make decisions on curricular delivery to meet the needs of their pupils.

Schools: Rugby

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education what specific steps he will take to ensure that the funding and promotion of rugby in schools is equal to that of other sports.

(AQW 25100/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Physical Education is a compulsory Area of Learning within the revised curriculum for all pupils through Years 1-12. The revised curriculum which has been taught to all pupils of compulsory school age since 2009/10 provides more flexibility for teachers to make decisions on how best to interpret and combine minimum requirements to provide a broad and balanced curriculum and adapt their teaching to meet the needs of individual pupils. In line with this flexibility, the Department's policy is to delegate as much funding as possible to schools and it is up to schools to decide what is taught and how it is taught under each Area of Learning.

The decision on what sports or games are offered to pupils and the funding they wish to allocate to chosen sports or games is therefore a matter for each school.

Department for Employment and Learning

Freedom of Information

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether, in answers to written questions, he gives an answer that would be consistent if the same question was asked under a Freedom of Information request.

(AQW 24794/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): Under the Freedom of Information Act the Department is only required to provide information already held in recorded form; it does not have to create new information. However, in responding to Assembly Questions, I may supplement this information.

University of Ulster: Sports Shirts

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why students attending the Jordanstown campus of the University of Ulster can be asked to leave if they wear a Glasgow Rangers football shirt but not if they wear a GAA shirt.

(AQW 24802/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the local Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The Institutions, however, are responsible for their own policies and procedures.

My officials contacted the University of Ulster for a response. The University advised that it has no record of disciplinary action being taken against any student connected with the wearing of a sports shirt. The University also advised that it does not currently have a policy in relation to the wearing of sport shirts. However there are plans to develop a good relations policy, in conjunction with the Students Union.

As my Department has no remit in this matter, you may wish to contact the University of Ulster directly if you require further clarification.

Deaf or Hard of Hearing Students

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students who (i) are deaf; or (ii) have partial hearing loss attended each (a) university; and (b) Regional College, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24812/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details the number of students who are deaf or hard of hearing enrolled in Northern Ireland Higher Education Institutions in the academic years 2009/10, 2010/11 and 2011/12. The figures combine deaf and hard of hearing as there is no differentiation within the Higher Education datasets.

Deaf or Hard of Hearing Students

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students who (i) are deaf; or (ii) have partial hearing loss began their studies at each (a) university; and (b) Regional College, but did not complete them, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24814/11-15)

Dr Farry: Data on drop-out rates for Higher Education Institutions are obtained from the Higher Education Statistics Agency, and are currently only available for new full time undergraduate entrants who fail to return to Higher Education in the following academic year. Because of the small numbers and the potential identification of individuals, data for the universities and drop outs over the last 3 years have been combined. The figures combine deaf and hard of hearing as there is no differentiation within the Higher Education datasets.

In 2010/11 there were 19 full-time undergraduate entrants who were deaf or have partial hearing loss, 12 in 2009/10 and 26 in 2008/09. Of these 57 new entrants across the 3 years of entry, 4 did not continue onto the next year of their course.

The Number of Students recorded as deaf/hard of hearing who withdrew from courses at Further Education Colleges, 2009/10 - 2011/12 is detailed below. The figures combine deaf and hard of hearing as there is no differentiation within the Further Education datasets.

(AQW 24815/11-15)

Dr Farry: Data on drop-out rates for Higher Education Institutions are obtained from the Higher Education Statistics Agency, and are only currently available for new full time undergraduate entrants who fail to return to Higher Education in the following academic year. ### Access to Work Scheme

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether the Access to Work scheme is available to people aged 19 years and over who have a learning disability; if so, whether this is being promoted for take-up through transition agencies; and if not, whether he will make the scheme available to all.

Dr Farry: The Department's Access to Work programme is available to all people with disabilities, including those with a learning disability, who are aged 16 or over, and who require specialist support to move into employment or are experiencing problems in work due to the nature of their disability. This includes support at interview, financial assistance with travel to work, and in-work support such as special aids and equipment or a dedicated support worker.

The Department, through its Disability Employment Service and the Employment Adviser teams in the local Jobs and Benefits Offices and Jobcentres, works closely with the transitions agencies, including the Department of Education's Special Education Team and the Transitions Officers within the Education and Library Boards and with those organisations who advocate specifically on behalf of people with learning disabilities. All of these specialist disability organisations are fully aware of the Access to Work programme and the benefits that it can offer.

North-South Higher Education Joint Working Group

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether his Department has engaged or sought to engage with the North-South Higher Education Joint Working Group.

(AQW 24849/11-15)

Dr Farry: I understand that, on 31 May 2013, the Presidents of Dundalk, Letterkenny and Sligo Institutes of Technology addressed the Joint Committee on the Implementation of the Good Friday Agreement on the issue of cross-border student access to higher education.

In particular, they recommended the establishment of a North-South Higher Education Joint Working Group. The Committee supported this proposal and agreed to make recommendations to the Education Ministers in both jurisdictions.

I can confirm that my Department has not yet received any correspondence from that Committee in relation to this proposal.

Blind or Partially Sighted Students

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many blind, or partially sighted students, achieved a third level degree or equivalent in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24859/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details the number of students who reported they are blind or have partial sight loss that achieved an undergraduate degree or equivalent at Northern Ireland Higher Education Institutions in the academic years 2009/10, 2010/11 and 2011/12.

13. Information on disability is collected on the basis of a student's self assessment.

Students: Irish Citizenship

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether prospective students who have lived in Northern Ireland for three years and obtained Irish Citizenship while resident within Northern Ireland prior to their application for student finance are eligible under Student Finance Northern Ireland guidelines to access student support.

(AQW 24953/11-15)

Dr Farry: The requirement under the Regulations is that prospective students must have been ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom (UK) and Islands throughout the three year period preceding the first day of the first academic year of the course to be entitled to student financial support. Consequently, if prospective students, regardless of whether they have obtained Irish citizenship while in Northern Ireland or not, can comply with this residency requirement they are eligible for student support. However, if there are any restrictions placed on the student's passport or travel documents by the relevant Borders Agency, the student may not be entitled to student financial support.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Investment: First-time Prospective International Investor Visits

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of first-time prospective international investor visits that were made to each constituency in 2012/13.

(AQW 24616/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): In the period from 1 April 2012 to 31 March 2013 Invest NI hosted a total of 174 first time prospective international investor visits to all Northern Ireland Parliamentary Constituency Areas (PCAs). The detail of these visits to each PCA is provided below – Table 1.

	Financial Year 2012/13

Upper Bann	0	0	0
Total	174	31	205

Notes:

- 1) A credible visit is defined as one where Invest NI can claim to have promoted Northern Ireland and arranged a visit programme to a District Council Area or Parliamentary Constituency Areas, for a potential inward investor, who has an identifiable project proposal.
- 2) In addition to the above listed visits, Invest NI has also facilitated a number of visits by other organisations e.g. influencers, overseas governments and trade bodies, which serve to strengthen FDI & Trade links in overseas markets.

It is important to note that Invest NI does not determine the location of an inward investment project. This decision is taken by the investor. Invest NI does work closely with the company when preparing a visit programme to ensure that the locations to be visited meet their requirements and also provide the best opportunity for Invest NI to sell Northern Ireland as viable location for the company.

Investment: First-time Prospective International Investor Visits to Foyle

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 21912/11-15, to detail why no jobs were promoted by first-time international investors in the Foyle constituency in 2012/13.

(AQW 24618/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In the period from 1 April 2012 to 31 March 2013 Invest NI hosted a total of four first time prospective international investor visits to the Foyle constituency. Regrettably none of these potential investors has decided to locate in the Foyle constituency or elsewhere in Northern Ireland, at this time.

The investment process undertaken by international companies is typically a lengthy and detailed process, influenced by a number of external factors. Invest NI does not publically comment on its engagement with individual companies, unless an investment is agreed and then announced. Such comment would be prejudicial to Invest NI's efforts to secure existing and future inward investment projects.

Northern Ireland competes for Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) against some much larger regions and nation states. In order to maximise our presence in overseas markets, Invest NI focuses on selling Northern Ireland as a whole. It is important to clarify that location decisions are a matter for individual companies, which can take time and are the subject of considerable international competition. Recent trends have shown that investors favour reducing their risk by locating their businesses in areas where they can draw on a large pool of skilled labour and where they believe investment and cost risk will be minimised.

Invest NI continues to pursue a number of opportunities to bring investment to the Foyle constituency and the agency will continue to engage with stakeholders in the constituency, in order to maximise the local inward investment proposition.

Invest NI

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 23962/11-15, to identify each occasion when Invest NI has challenged any assisted company in regard to its non-compliance with employment legislation and to outline the action that resulted.

(AQW 24685/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No such issue of non-compliance has been drawn to Invest NI's attention.

Electricity: Price Increases

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in relation to protecting the interests of electricity consumers, to detail the information held on the comparative increases in electricity prices by Northern Ireland Electricity and those imposed in the Republic of Ireland, in the last five years.

(AQW 24736/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not routinely collect or hold information of this nature.

Electricity: Interconnector to Wales

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, consequent upon the sale of SONI to Eirgrid and Eirgrid owning and controlling the interconnector to Wales, how she will ensure that there will be no manipulation of the flows, which could affect the market price to the detriment of consumers.

(AQW 24737/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This is a regulatory issue, not a matter for my Department. The Single Electricity Market (SEM) Committee is the decision making authority on all SEM matters and has responsibility for ensuring that the market is operated in a non-discriminatory, fair and transparent manner.

Electricity: Licences

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the protections that exist to ensure licences will not be changed or decisions made to move to all-island management of Northern Ireland Electricity/Electricity Supply Board and SONI/Eirgrid.

(AQW 24738/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Licensing matters are an issue for the Utility Regulator, not my Department. Any transactions of the nature raised in this question would require extensive consultation and examination by the Regulatory Authorities in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. The sector is also fully privatised and my Department has no formal remit to examine or challenge commercial investment decisions that may give rise to change in structures or ownership of companies. That said, my Department's principal objective, set out in the Energy (Northern Ireland) Order 2003, is to protect the interests of consumers and, in the event of any development of this nature, full consideration of issues would be given at the appropriate point.

Jobs Fund: Down District Council

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what percentage of jobs (i) supported; and (ii) created through the Jobs Fund were specific to the Down District Council area.

(AQW 24758/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Between 1st April 2011 and 31st March 2013, the Jobs Fund promoted a total of 5,060 jobs and created a total of 2,699 jobs. As a result of local businesses bringing forward viable projects for support, 2% of the promoted jobs and 2% of the created jobs were located within Down District Council area.

Invest NI Regional Offices

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department plans to relocate Invest NI regional offices following the proposed Review of Public Administration and boundary changes.

(AQW 24891/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI currently has 5 Regional Offices and a further 3 points of presence in satellite offices across Northern Ireland. The 5 Regional Offices are located in Omagh (West), Newry (South), Belfast (East), Londonderry (North West) and Ballymena (North East). The satellite offices are in Enniskillen, Coleraine and Craigavon. These points of presence align well with the 11 council model.

Invest NI, and indeed my Department, continue to work closely with Councils on the transfer of economic development functions under RPA.

Visa Waiver Pilot

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has had with the governments of the Republic of Ireland and Westminster regarding any necessary security upgrades before a visa waiver pilot is taken forward. (AQW 24892/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This issue will be taken forward under the recently announced Economic Pact for Northern Ireland, which contains a commitment to develop a reciprocal pilot waiver scheme for the UK and Ireland.

I have previously discussed this matter with my counterparts in the Republic of Ireland Government and with Westminster through the Northern Ireland Office.

Department of the Environment

Compliance, Improvement and Review Team

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 20928/11-15, what other audits have been carried out by the Compliance, Improvement and Review Team as part of its ongoing Audit Programme. (AQW 22041/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): The Compliance, Improvement and Review Team (CIRT) is a small multidisciplinary team. Its work programme involves reviews of the key systems and processes of Development Management and Development Plan within Local and Strategic Planning Divisions.

Its 2012/13 annual audit programme included work on deferred income, planning fees and decision making processes within Development Management. The Team also provided advice and guidance on compliance issues particularly in relation to fees to its operational colleagues.

Wind Turbines

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment why he is allowing wind turbine schemes to proceed, given that Eirgrid in the Republic of Ireland has already paid out 142 million euros to shut down wind turbines. (AQW 23727/11-15)

Mr Attwood: It is my understanding that the issue you refer to relates to the curtailment of electricity productions from wind turbines on the occasion where there is too much energy is being produced at any one time for the grid to be able to accommodate.

The Executive has, through the Strategic Energy Framework, confirmed that by 2020 40% of electricity consumption should be from renewable sources. Wind farm electricity generation is the most established large-scale source of renewable energy in Northern Ireland and will continue to play a vital role in meeting the renewable energy target.

To date my Department has granted planning permission to 70 wind farm developments. This is delivering in a very significant way on the requirements set out at the highest level of government.

Gaelectric: Post-installation Noise Surveys

Mr Wells asked the Minister of the Environment whether he is aware of the recent case in County Roscommon in the Republic of Ireland where it is alleged that Gaelectric failed to carry out post-installation noise surveys of its turbines. (AQW 24039/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am aware of the case referred to in the AQ, but clearly it is out with the authority of the NI Government. Senior planning managers attended a meeting in early July with the CEHOG in relation to noise conditions. I have asked for an update in due course, to consider the issues identified in the Roscommon case and to discuss these matter with the industry.

Wind Turbines

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, given the existent climate in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland, for his assessment of the impact on wind farms in Northern Ireland from Eirgrid's decision to pay in excess of 140 million Euros to shut down wind turbines. (AQW 24147/11-15)

Mr Attwood: It is my understanding that the issue you refer to relates to the curtailment of electricity productions from wind turbines on the occasion where there is too much energy is being produced at any one time for the grid to be able to accommodate.

The Executive has, through the Strategic Energy Framework, confirmed that by 2020 40% of electricity consumption should be from renewable sources. Wind farm electricity generation is the most established large-scale source of renewable energy in Northern Ireland and will continue to play a vital role in meeting the renewable energy target.

To date my Department has granted planning permission to 70 wind farm developments. This is delivering in a very significant way on the requirements set out at the highest level of government.

Welfare Reform

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of how Welfare Reform will impact on the aims and objectives of his Department.

(AQW 24266/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Welfare Reform - in the image of the Conservative/Liberal Democrat coalition – will have profound, multiple negative impact on Welfare claimants in NI. There is some need to simplify welfare law and enable people to work. But this is not the primary London ambition, which is to cut the cost of welfare, failing to recognise the particular circumstance in NI with higher disability and invalidity and the very different housing matrix that prevails here.

This has an impact in a comprehensive and deeply negative way. This impacts on the life of this place and the life of all departments, including DOE.

Planning Policy Statement 16

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment whether the implementation of PPS 16 was supported by the results of the Oxford Economics research into forecasting tourism accommodation demand.

(AQW 24267/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The assessment of the performance and future potential of all sectors of the tourism industry in Northern Ireland is carried out by DETI and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board. This includes the forecasting of tourism accommodation demand.

The research referred to in the Member's question was commissioned by DETI, and completed in 2011. There was no specific engagement with DOE officials on this research. However, the formulation of PPS 16 involved close liaison between DOE officials and officials within DETI and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board who agreed its contents prior to publication.

Hydraulic Fracturing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether any separate permissions, in addition to those which would normally be granted to companies with conventional oil and gas wells, are required for companies to conduct hydraulic fracturing; and if so, to provide details.

(AQW 24540/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There is an existing environmental regulatory framework for dealing with all types of developments with the potential to impact upon the environment, including conventional and unconventional oil and gas projects. The suite of regulations that will apply to specific development types will be determined on a case by case basis, appropriate to each individual operator's proposed activities, working practices and location.

I have always said that it is essential to see the fullest range of science before any decisions are taken on hydraulic fracturing. The output from scientific research will enable us to determine the adequacy of the existing regulatory framework and whether additional regulation would be required. That is how we should proceed.

I adopt an 'enhanced precautionary' approach to the issue of hydraulic fracturing. It is on the far side of water, emissions, health and other assessments that this matter could or should be considered.

District Councils: Recruitment Process for Chief Executives

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the recruitment process for Chief Executives of the new councils.

(AQO 4403/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There is a need for strong leadership in the local government reform process, both in the run up to 2015 and in the years beyond, not only at a political level, but also operationally. The chief executives of the 11 newly formed councils will be critical to the success of the local government reform process. Clearly, much will be asked of those appointed, and they will need to have the experience, leadership qualities and skills required to transform local government.

Taking legal advice on this matter into account, I have decided to recruit the new council chief executives through full, open competition. I believe that this is the fairest and most effective way to fill the posts. These posts are fundamentally different to the current chief executive posts. Not only will all councils cover a geographically larger area and serve a bigger population base, but they will also deliver significant new functions and operate within a new governance and performance framework. The job specification should clearly reflect this growth, the task of building a new organisation and the transformation challenges inherent in the job.

There has been a call at political level to make these appointments as soon as possible, so the Statutory Transition Committees will be given powers in the Statutory Transition Committee Regulations, which I have laid recently, to appoint the chief executive designate for their corresponding successor councils. It is anticipated that chief executives will be in place by the end of this year, and they will then transfer across to the successor councils once they are formed in 2014.

The recruitment process will be rigorous and include assessment centre testing and interview stages. The Local Government Staff Commission will oversee the process.

District Councils: Capacity Building for Councillors

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department plans to provide capacity building for councillors in relation to planning, post implementation of the Review of Public Administration.

(AQO 4404/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Planning Reform & Transfer Project Office was set up to ensure the smooth delivery of planning to local government in 2015. As part of that work, a team comprising officers from both the Department and local government has been scoping out planning-specific training /capacity building requirements for both members and all affected staff. This work has been fed into the overall local government reform training programme.

That programme comprises 2 phases to coincide with the timeline for Statutory Transition Committees and the shadow councils.

Phase 1 runs from now up to May 2014; phase 2 will run up to April 2015 when the Executive funding expires.

In parallel, consideration will also be given to the ongoing needs of councillors once planning transfers. However, any capacity building post April 2015 will have to be funded by the new councils.

Landfill Site, Campsie

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the action being taken in relation to the large scale illegal landfill site recently discovered in the Campsie area of Foyle.

(AQO 4405/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Firstly, the very intensive and complex criminal investigation remains ongoing with a view to using the full force of the law to deal with alleged offenders connected with this situation. Evidence retrieved from the waste in the ground is being painstakingly analysed and its producer identified wherever possible. This information can then be used to determine where the waste should have ended up and what businesses were involved in its handling.

At present I am expecting my officials to submit a prosecution case to the PPS in the next 2 to 3 months.

The waste management facility remains closed and a number of authorisations relating to transfrontier movement of waste associated with it have been terminated.

The Department is carrying out an intensive targeted programme of water quality monitoring in the area of the illegal landfill in order to fully quantify the extent of the likely environmental harm involved and to provide a means of alerting us if the situation deteriorates. We believe that water pollution from leachate presents the most immediate risk of harm.

It is my firm intention that those who carried out these activities will be forced to pay for the mess they have created – however I remain ready to take immediate action to prevent harm to the environment or health if this becomes necessary.

Finally, I have asked the former Chief Executive of the Welsh Environment Agency, Chris Mills, to conduct a full and robust review of this incident.

International Appalachian Trail: Ulster Way

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the proposal to develop the International Appalachian Trail using the existing Ulster Way.

(AQO 4406/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I support the concept of the International Appalachian Trail (IAT) and convened a meeting earlier this year with the European Vice President of the IAT together with representatives from the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and from the seven councils along the proposed route.

Officials in the Northern Ireland Environment Agency subsequently wrote to the relevant councils seeking nominees to sit on a Northern Ireland IAT Working Group. Thus far three councils have provided nominations and confirmed they are content that the route of the IAT is dual branded with the Ulster Way. I welcome the support of councils as it is clearly important that each would have a crucial role in ensuring that the standard of the IAT is appropriate to its international status.

I understand that the IAT Steering Group intends to launch the IAT at a local event in August 2013 and I welcome this positive development.

Quarries: Safety

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of the Environment when he proposes to bring forward legislation to deal specifically with safety at quarries.

(AQO 4407/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Due to issues identified to me and my own concerns, I have been addressing this matter. As outlined below, I have intervened in order to attempt to address the real risks and tragic potential of disused quarries.

Specifically, in order to decide upon the most appropriate courses of action I have met with, the Quarry Products Association to discuss the range of safety issues and their awareness raising campaigns. As a result, there was a gathering of all relevant bodies on 3 July 2013 to identify further actions and a number are now being rolled out. I have also written to district councils, confirming to them of their responsibilities and asking that they undertake a review of disused quarries, including a site inspection and risk assessment.

The review of disused quarries is expected to conclude later in the year. However, due to the ongoing risks I again wrote to the Councils recently to urge that, in the short-term, Councils identify places of highest risk and identify how to mitigate that risk.

I have also written to Arlene Foster regarding extending the role of the Health and Safety Executive. She has agreed that her officials will cooperate in developing an improved system of handover meetings to the district councils.

I have also sought advice from my planning officials on whether the Review of Old Mineral Permissions regime could be extended to make disused quarries safer, though this does not provide a means to address disused sites.

The situation is different when quarries cease to operate. When operations at a quarry cease, some responsibility for ensuring appropriate fencing and safety measuring is in place passes to district councils under the statutory nuisance regime. The Quarries (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 (as amended by Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2011) states that a quarry (worked or unworked) shall be deemed to be a statutory nuisance if it is:

- (a) not provided with an effective and properly maintained barrier so designed and constructed so as to prevent any person from accidentally falling into the quarry; and
- (b) by reason of its accessibility from a highway or place of public resort, it constitutes a danger to members of the public.

In cases where the fence is sufficient to prevent an accidental fall or where an individual has trespassed over private land to reach the quarry face, district councils are not required to take action by way of serving a notice requiring improved fencing. There may be legal limitations on all of this, which is one of the areas which may require action.

There is a regime addressing safety at operational quarries in line with current health and safety legislation. It is enforced by the Health and Safety Executive Northern Ireland.

This is a challenging issue – I have initiated immediate action to address immediate issues, as I develop longer term actions. This reflects my concerns and that of many others.

Sprucefield Retail Park: Bulky Goods Site

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment what communication or discussions he has had with Lisburn City Council in the past month regarding his decision to re-designate Sprucefield Retail Park as a bulky goods site.
(AQO 4408/11-15)

Mr Attwood: On 11 January this year I gave advance notice of what my Department intends to adopt in relation to retailing issues with regard to the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan (BMAP), subject to completion of all necessary statutory processes.

I should advise that the criteria restricting the type of goods to be sold to bulky was contained within the policy relating to Sprucefield Regional Shopping Centre in the draft BMAP, published November 2004. The advance notice of January this year confirmed that restriction in relation to bulky goods.

I wrote recently to both the Right Worshipful the Mayor and the Chief Executive of the Council to clarify that I remain convinced that the proposed policy in relation to Sprucefield was faithful to planning policy and the Regional Development Strategy, informed by present economic and retail circumstances and the right approach for retail and all the town and city centres within 60 minutes driving distance of Sprucefield (including Lisburn City centre).

Planning Enforcement Notices

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning enforcement notices his Department has served on rural businesses and enterprises in the Western Division in the last five years.
(AQO 4409/11-15)

Mr Attwood: A manual count from the Planning Register has identified that from May 2008 – May 2013 (inclusive) 83 planning enforcement notices were served on rural businesses and enterprises in the Western Area Office covering the Omagh, Fermanagh, Cookstown, Strabane and Dungannon Council Areas.

Taximeters for Belfast Public Hire Drivers

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment how taximeters for Belfast Public Hire drivers will be regulated during the interim period before the legislation relating to taxi fares and taximeters is implemented.
(AQO 4410/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In response to industry concerns raised during a recent consultation, the Belfast Public Hire taximeter requirements will remain unchanged. The status quo will continue until taximeter regulations are brought forward in 2014.

Fuel Laundering

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on what his Department is doing to address fuel laundering.

(AQO 4411/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Fuel laundering is a complex issue which necessitates a considered composite response from a range of regulatory and enforcement bodies. My Department is an essential player in this. Officers from NIEA's Environmental Crime Unit (ECU) are continuing to conduct joint investigations with the PSNI and HMRC when fuel laundering plants are detected. ECU is a member of the Organised Crime Taskforce Cross Border Fuel Fraud Group and a number of key operational activities have arisen via this network. We are also running a joint campaign with the Crimestoppers charity to encourage members of the public, particularly in rural communities, to report - anonymously and therefore without fear - those who are dumping fuel waste. You may also be aware of the Department's pilot Flytipping Pilot Programme, which has been removing fuel laundered waste from participating Council areas – some 19 in total at present – at a cost to date of £527,026.15 for 1550.68 tonnes of laundered fuel waste.

These are representative of actions been taken. However, the scale of the fuel laundering/waste threat is such that all responses need to be escalated. That is why I made a bid for further monies to address, in year, the threat of these activities, why I met Minister Ford on this two weeks ago, why I hope to speak of this at the NSMC on 5 July and take forward a range of other measures so organised crime on the island is faced head on.

Cycling

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment how cycling is incorporated into planning requirements for new developments.

(AQW 24707/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I can advise that my Department has a number of mechanisms in place to ensure that cycling provision is an important consideration in determining planning applications for new developments.

In terms of planning policy – Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 13 'Transportation and Land Use' sets out my Departments commitment to incorporating cycle paths into new developments and promoting more sustainable modes of transportation.

More specifically however, Policy AMP 3 'Cycle Provision' of PPS 3 (Revised) 'Access Movement and Parking' actually states that planning permission will only be granted for development providing jobs, shopping, leisure and services (including educational and community uses) where specific needs of cyclists are taken into account.

Furthermore, Policy QD 1 'Quality in New Residential Environments' of PPS 7 'Quality Residential Environments' advises that all proposals for residential development will be expected to conform to a number of criteria, including the support of a movement pattern that incorporates walking and cycling.

In terms of Development plans, a number of those published more recently have identified existing as well as proposed cycle networks and, where appropriate, the key site requirements of zonings and development opportunity sites requiring the provision of cycle paths or further enhancements to the cycle network.

In addition, development plans have introduced policies which directly impact on the National Cycle Network – such as Policy OSR 1 'Public Rights of Way and Permissive Paths' of the Draft Northern Area Plan 2016 which states that permission will not be granted for development proposals which would have an adverse impact on the route, character, function or recreational value of the Ulster way, the National Cycle Network, public rights of way or permissive paths.

Gasification: Maydown

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether consultation took place with neighbouring regions, such as Donegal, on the proposed gasification facility in Maydown in order to comply with EU regulations.

(AQW 24715/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Prior to the submission of a full planning application the Department carried out a scoping exercise under The Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (NI) 1999 to establish the content of the required Environmental Statement.

As part of the scoping exercise the Department consulted a number expert consultees at an early stage of the process. No transboundary issues were identified. The Department therefore considered that the proposal would not have any significant effects on a neighbouring EU Member State and that transboundary consultation in this case was not required.

Gasification: Isle of Wight

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the decision of the Isle of Wight Council in June 2011 to overhaul its waste management practice in order to reduce dependence on a gasification plant.

(AQW 24716/11-15)

Mr Attwood: It is my understanding from the publically available information that the Isle of Wight's revised approach to waste management practice derived from ongoing problems since the gasification plant was retro-fitted into a small conventional incinerator plant in 2008. This particular plant's subsequent unreliability was reported to be due to the unsuccessful reuse of the flue gas cleaning system of the old incinerator in the retrofit, leading to dioxin emission levels exceeding the legal limit, and requiring it to be shut down on more than one occasion.

The Isle of Wight Council has not to my knowledge expressed any objection to gasification as a technology, and it continues to be a key element in its waste management plan. If the gasification plant were to fail completely, the Council would still have to divert a further 12,000 tonnes of waste per annum from landfill to avoid landfill tax and landfill allowance penalties of up to £2.28m in 2014/15.

The Isle of Wight's plans for reducing its dependency on the gasification plant involve activities which are already in place or about to be introduced by our own councils, including expanding the range of materials collected at kerbside, reducing residual waste collections from weekly to fortnightly and providing caddies for food waste collection. Councils in Northern Ireland have already taken the enhanced recycling which these activities generate into account in determining the quantum of residual waste which they will still have to divert from landfill.

Asbestos: District Councils

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what plans his Department has to introduce by-laws for local councils governing the removal of asbestos.

(AQW 24805/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The management of asbestos as a hazardous waste is covered in Northern Ireland by the Hazardous Waste Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005.

Bye-laws affect localised areas and are not usually made by central government but by statutory bodies such as district councils, under enabling Primary powers. However, Bye-laws cannot be made in respect of matters which are already dealt with in legislation. Therefore, from an environmental perspective, because hazardous waste is already dealt with adequately under the Hazardous Waste Regulations the Department of the Environment has no plans for to introduce bye-laws for local councils governing the removal of asbestos.

Asbestos: District Councils

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the adequacy of the legislation and regulations governing the management of asbestos by councils.

(AQW 24806/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There are two pieces of legislation covering the management of asbestos in Northern Ireland, The Control of Asbestos Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 and The Hazardous Waste Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005.

The Control of Asbestos Regulations are administered by the Health and Safety Executive Northern Ireland (HSENI). You may wish to contact the HSENI for further information on the application of these Regulations. For ease of reference I attach web address to the HSENI Asbestos Advisory Service site, www.hseni.gov.uk/guidance/topics/asbestos.

The Hazardous Waste Regulations, which are administered by this Department, set out the regime for the control and tracking of the movement of hazardous waste, including asbestos, in Northern Ireland. Part 4 bans the mixing of hazardous waste during disposal or recovery operation or by anyone who produces, collects or transports hazardous waste. Part 5 requires documents to be completed whenever hazardous waste is removed from premises, (which includes removal from ships and removal by pipeline). The Regulations require that all hazardous waste produced in Northern Ireland must be accompanied by the appropriate documentation for transfer within the United Kingdom. Part 6 requires producers, holders, carriers, consignors and consignees to keep records, which must kept for no less than 3 years and gives the Department a right of inspection.

I am content that these environmental controls are adequate for the management of asbestos within the auspices of waste management.

Coastal Paths: North Down

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the upgrades of the North Down Coastal Paths by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency.

(AQW 24810/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The upgrading of paths is the responsibility of the local authority which in this case is North Down Borough Council. You may therefore wish to approach North Down Borough Council directly regarding its plans to upgrade the coastal path.

I am however aware that the North Down coastal path is an important section of the Ulster Way. The Northern Ireland Environment Agency through its Natural Heritage Grant Programme provided £60,000 to North Down Borough Council between 2008 – 2010 for upgrades to two sections of the route to make them accessible for cyclists and all-ability use.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, which his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 24825/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department has defended 125 legal cases, including judicial reviews since 2007. The number of legal challenges lost was 42. The cost incurred on cases which the Department lost was £515,521.

Business Area	Number of Cases	Cases lost	Cost of cases lost £
Department (excluding agencies)	31	7	160,207
Northern Ireland Environment Agency	46	11	82,596
Driver and Vehicle Agency	48	24	272,718
Total	125	42	515,521

Wind Turbines: Planning Guidance

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether planning guidance on wind turbines varies in accordance with the height of the proposed turbine; and to outline these variations.

(AQW 24873/11-15)

Mr Attwood: PPS18 'Renewable Energy' sets out my Departments planning policy in respect of renewable energy and includes specific measures in relation to wind energy development. These provisions include a requirement that this form of development should not unacceptably impact visual amenity or landscape character through the number, scale, size and siting of turbines.

These provisions within Policy RE 1 of PPS 18 apply to all wind energy development requiring planning permission, regardless of the height of the proposed turbine.

In assessing whether a particular turbine height is acceptable at a particular location the Department will on a case-by-case basis consider the individual circumstances of the overall development scheme, including the local landscape setting.

To assist with the assessment NIEA have prepared Supplementary Planning Guidance to PPS18 'Wind Energy Development in Northern Ireland's Landscapes'. This provides broad, strategic guidance in relation to the landscape and visual impacts of wind energy across 130 landscape character areas through NI. It identifies turbine height as a key principle affecting how wind energy development may be accommodated in the landscape and advises that, in general, it is preferable for turbine height to be proportionate to landform and landcover and landform.

Where however the hub height of any proposed turbine exceeds 15 metres the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 require the Department to screen the application to determine whether full Environmental Impact Assessment is required.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Tests

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment how many heavy goods vehicles were presented at test centres in each of the last five years; and how many of these vehicles failed the test at the first attempt.

(AQW 24875/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The number of Heavy Goods Vehicles presented at test centres for a full test in each of the last five years (1 April 2008 to 31 March 2013), together with the number that passed or failed the test, is set out in the table below.

Full Test Pass Rates for Heavy Goods Vehicles by Test Centre - 2008/09 to 2012/13

Driving Licence Fees

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment why the fees charged for driving licences by the DVA in Northern Ireland are higher than those charged by the DVA in the rest of the UK.

(AQW 25058/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Driving licensing fees in NI were maintained at the same level as those in GB from 2004 until October 2012, despite the cost of producing licences here being higher due to the lack of economies of scale available in GB. The gap in income resulting from maintaining fee parity was balanced by surplus funds from the UK-wide vehicle registration fee, however, the downturn in vehicles registrations ended this source of funding.

The new fees were necessary to assist with the full recovery of the costs associated with the administration of driver licensing in NI and to minimise the extent of the deficit in the fee account. This deficit has been exacerbated by falling volumes, particularly in respect of the fee paying transactions and a significant increase in costs. It should be noted that the income generated from driver licensing fees will not wholly eliminate the fee account deficit and a 'subsidy' payable by the Department will still be required.

Prior to introducing the increased driver licensing fees, the Department carried out public consultation between 14 May 2012 and 8 July 2012.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Children's Rights

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether a child has a right, in legislation or otherwise, to social contact with its father upon the separation of its parents; and for his assessment of the adequacy of any such provisions.

(AQW 24531/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): Article 9(3) of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child ("UNCRC") provides that State Parties must respect the right of a child who is separated from one or both parents to maintain personal relations and direct contact with both parents on a regular basis, unless it is contrary to the child's best interests.

The Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 does not set out specific rules on contact post-separation. However it does clearly state that, in determining any question with regard to the upbringing of the child, the court must treat the child's welfare as the paramount consideration. As the UNCRC shows, it is generally accepted that it is in a child's best interests to maintain contact with his or her non-resident parent, provided the contact is safe, and I believe that, when our courts consider applications for contact, they seek to ensure that the child has a continuing relationship with both parents. However, separation is not an easy process and difficulties can arise. My Department is currently considering how the law on contact is operating in practice, with a view to determining whether any amendments to that law are required.

Barnett Formula

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why, in the application of the Barnett formula, there is a rebate in respect of a VAT adjustment; and whether this applies in other parts of the UK.

(AQW 24566/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I refer the Member to the HMT Statement of Funding Policy which states:

"Northern Ireland value added tax abatement: the changes to the Northern Ireland Executive's budget determined through the Barnett Formula are abated to reflect the fact that under Section 99 of the Value Added Tax Act 1994, the Northern Ireland Executive, unlike departments in the rest of the United Kingdom, do not require provision to meet Value Added Tax expenditure since any value added tax paid by the NIE is refunded by HM Customs and Excise."

Tourist Attractions in County Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the top ten tourist attractions in County Down, in terms of visitor numbers; and (ii) the number of visitors each received, in the last available year.

(AQW 24731/11-15)

Mr Wilson: This information is sourced from the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency's Visitor Attraction Survey. It is important to note that the Visitor Attraction Survey is a voluntary survey and all data presented in the report is based solely on the visitor numbers provided by attractions choosing to take part in the survey. Visitor numbers are accepted in good faith from the proprietor of the attraction.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much his Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24784/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Expenditure on branded apparel for non-frontline staff by my Department in each of the last three years is provided in the following table.

Financial Year	Total Expenditure (£000)
2011/12	Nil

Barnett Consequentials: Comprehensive Spending Review Announcement

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the Barnett consequentials of the Chancellor's recent Comprehensive Spending Review announcement.

(AQW 24808/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Chancellor's Spending Round announcement on Wednesday 26th June 2013 detailed the UK's budget for the financial year 2015-16 and provided an overall envelope for the Executive's 2015-16 Budget.

Our 2015-16 Resource DEL will be £10.2 billion, and our 2015-16 Capital DEL will be £1.1 billion.

Irish Bank Resolution Corporation Employees

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what actions he plans to take to protect the Irish Bank Resolution Corporation employees, based in the Belfast office, who have been advised that they will be made redundant on statutory terms on 2 August 2013.

(AQW 24834/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As outlined in my 2 July 2013 correspondence to yourself, I have written to Mr Frank Daly (Chairman, NAMA) seeking an update on the IBRC staff. Mr Daly has advised that current plans include the recruitment by Capita and NAMA of relevant existing IBRC NAMA unit staff, including those in Belfast. It is NAMA's understanding that as part of the process, Capita is examining retaining a Belfast office and that it is seeking to progress its plans with the Special Liquidator.

Mr Daly anticipates that in addition to opportunities with Capita and NAMA, the successful tenders for the new portfolio to be acquired by NAMA from the Special Liquidator towards the end of the year will create employment opportunities for current IBRC staff.

I also raised this issue with Minister Noonan when we met on 13 June 2013. He has noted my concerns and indicated that he would look into this matter. I will continue to monitor this situation closely as it develops.

Blacklisting: Public Contracts

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps he has taken to ensure that companies involved in blacklisting are not awarded public contracts.

(AQW 24836/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I have not taken any steps to prevent companies involved in blacklisting being awarded public contracts.

The Public Contracts Regulations (2006), which govern all public procurement, permits the exclusion of contractors from contract awards on limited grounds. These require the economic operator to have been subject to a criminal conviction or a finding following a formal investigation by the NI Human Rights Commission, the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland or an Employment tribunal. There is little scope to move beyond these grounds and any attempt to do so could be subject to legal challenge.

Blacklisting: Public Contracts

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what contact he has had with trades unions on strategies to ensure that companies involved in blacklisting are not awarded public contracts.

(AQW 24837/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I have not had any contact with trade unions on this matter. This is a difficult area as there is little scope to exclude such companies under current legislation.

Blacklisting: Procurement Reform Bill

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what plans he has to include blacklisting in the Procurement Reform Bill.

(AQW 24839/11-15)

Mr Wilson: There are no plans to introduce a Procurement Reform Bill in Northern Ireland.

Welfare Budget Cap

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the impact of the proposed welfare budget cap. (AQW 25004/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As part of the recent UK Spending Round statement for the 2015-16 year, the Chancellor of the Exchequer outlined plans to introduce a cap on welfare expenditure.

The rationale for this cap is to improve spending control, supporting fiscal consolidation and ensuring the welfare system remains affordable. A nominal cap will be set from 2015-16, and will be set over a five year forecast period.

In terms of the specifics of how the cap will operate, at this stage HM Treasury have not provided any further detail beyond what the Chancellor outlined in his Spending Round on 26 June 2013. I intend seeking clarification from HM Treasury on this matter in order that the implications for Northern Ireland can be fully assessed. I will update the Minister for Social Development and the Executive Sub Group on Welfare Reform in due course.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Dalriada Urgent Care: Moneymore Out of Hours Service

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the areas covered by the Dalriada Out of Hours Service in Moneymore.

(AQW 24590/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The geographical area normally covered by the Moneymore Centre is to the west and north west of Lough Neagh and covering Moneymore, Magherafelt, Maghera, Bellaghy, Castledawson, Cookstown, Coagh, Tobermore, Stewartstown.

Dalriada Urgent Care: Moneymore Out of Hours Service

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what areas doctors travel from to cover the Dalriada Out of Hours Service in Moneymore.

(AQW 24591/11-15)

Mr Poots: All doctors on Dalriada Urgent Care's register are free to work in any of its Centres. There are approximately 39 doctors who generally cover the Moneymore Out of Hours Service Centre, on a 4 week rotating basis; 18 are from the Mid Ulster area and 11 come from other localities covered by Dalriada Urgent Care.

Dalriada Urgent Care: Medical Equipment and Supplies

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety by what means Dalriada Surgeries are stocked with medical equipment and supplies.

(AQW 24592/11-15)

Mr Poots: Dalriada Urgent Care has a regional contract with Victoria Pharmaceuticals primarily for the supply of pre-packed and over-labelled medicines. It sources items such as multi-sticks, syringes, needles in other ways, for example, through community pharmacy.

The main items of medical equipment in surgeries and cars are –

- defibrillators purchased over time from Cardiac Services; replacement pads are obtained from Cardiac Services;
- Nebulisers, O2 monitor and blood sugar monitors purchased from medical equipment suppliers;
- Supplies such as nebuliser and oxygen masks and sample bottles obtained from Health and Social Care Business Services Organisation.

Fire and Rescue Service: Job Applicants

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people who (i) applied; and (ii) were appointed to the Fire and Rescue Service in each of the last three years, broken down by community background.

(AQW 24614/11-15)

Mr Poots: The table below details the number of applicants and appointees for the three calendar years 2010 to 2012.

Year	Applicants				Appointees
	Protestant	Roman Catholic	Other	Total	Protestant	Roman Catholic	Other	Total
2010*	0	4	3	7	11	9	4	24
2011	2764	2426	578	5768	16	13	1	30
2012	26	34	9	69	16	19	4	39

* appointments may be made in a different year(s) from when the applications were received.

** the number of applicants reflects the wholetime recruitment exercise which ran in the second half of 2011

Prisons: Prescription Drug Risks

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether all prisoners that have prescription drugs of a high and medium risk score, as defined in the template on the Northern Ireland Prison Service policy document, are administered on a 'see to take' basis during their first week in custody; and if so, (i) when this commenced; and (ii) will this practice be extended beyond the first week in custody.

(AQW 24648/11-15)

Mr Poots: Within the Northern Ireland Prison Service, in line with the "In Possession Policy", which has been operated by the South Eastern HSC Trust since November 2010, all prisoners are assessed, by means of 'In Possession' (IP) Risk Assessments, on their suitability for storing and taking their own prescribed medication within one week of committal.

If the outcome of the Risk Assessments is that prisoners are assessed as IP, the position should be reviewed at least annually. If the outcome is that prisoners are not suitable for IP, medications will be given as supervised administration (known as supervised swallow). This will be extended beyond the first week in custody and reviewed after one month or when a trigger factor occurs. Trigger points include, overdose incidents; if a prisoner found hoarding or trading medication; and deteriorating mental health.

Nursing Care

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, over the last three months, how many people in each Health and Social Care Trust area, who had been assessed as requiring residential care, have been reassessed as requiring nursing care.

(AQW 24682/11-15)

Mr Poots: The following table is based on information provided by each HSC trust and details the number of people, across all programmes of care, in their area who were in residential care who have been reassessed as requiring nursing care in the last 3 months:

Belfast HSC Trust	4
Western HSC Trust	33
Southern HSC Trust	18
South Eastern HSC Trust	24
Northern HSC Trust	50

Project Bank Accounts

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in order to facilitate proper payments to contractors, sub contractors and suppliers, for an update on the adoption of Project Bank Accounts as good practice within his Department.

(AQW 24698/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health Estates Investment Group of the Department will implement the agreed strategy for the use of Project Bank Accounts in line with the guidance currently being produced by the Department of Finance and Personnel's Central Procurement Directorate.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, which his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 24824/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Misuse of Legal Drugs

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to amend legislation to ensure the opportunity for drug abuse from legal drugs is reduced.

(AQW 24832/11-15)

Mr Poots: Within the UK the relevant legislation governing medicines is the Human Medicines Regulations 2012 and, in some cases, the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. These are reserved matters for the Government at Westminster to lead on in consultation with the devolved administrations. This is important as it is vital to have a consistency of approach and message across the UK.

Following approaches from various departments, including DHSSPS, the UK Government enacted legislation to amend the Misuse of Drugs Act to incorporate a new classification for placing new drugs otherwise known as 'legal highs' under temporary control for up to 12 months.

Bonfires: Injuries

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people (i) were walk-ins at; and (ii) were brought by ambulance to Accident and Emergency departments as a result of injuries sustained at bonfires, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24850/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of people that (i) were walk-ins at; and (ii) were brought by ambulance to Accident and Emergency departments as a result of injuries sustained at bonfires is not currently available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Bonfires: Ambulance Service and Fire and Rescue Service Call-outs

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the (i) Ambulance Service; and (ii) Fire and Rescue Service call-outs to incidents at bonfires in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24851/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) Information on the number of Ambulance Service call-outs to incidents at bonfires is not available.
- (ii) The number of call-outs to incidents at bonfires made by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) in each of the last three years is given in the table below:

Year	No. of call-outs to incidents at bonfires <sup>1</sup>
2010/11	586
2011/12	380
2012/13	303

Source: Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS)

- 1 Relates to the number of calls which resulted in a NIFRS vehicle being dispatched, and which were subsequently classified as a 'bonfire' incident

Personality Disorder Unit

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety where the £3 million funding, secured under his predecessor for the establishment of a personality disorder unit, has been spent; and what services are being funded.

(AQW 24853/11-15)

Mr Poots: In the last Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) £1.1m was allocated for the development of Personality Disorder services. Due to budgetary pressures, this was less than the anticipated investment to underpin the Northern Ireland Personality Disorder Strategy 'Personality Disorder: A Diagnosis for Inclusion' (June 2010).

The £1.1M has been used to progress work in the following areas:

- Development of community-based Personality Disorders services across the Region;
- Development of a regional clinical network to share services, skills and expertise, including PBNI and Prison Health;
- Development of a training strategy, with a particular focus on raising the capacity of primary care and other mainstream services to meet the needs of the Personality Disorder population;
- Adoption of recovery principles which allow service users and carers to protect their own mental health and offer peer support, education and training;
- Joint training with Forensic services, where appropriate; and
- Development of an Integrated Care Pathway based on NICE Guidelines.

Scoliosis

Mr B McCreagh asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people are on the waiting list for scoliosis surgery; and what is the waiting time from referral to operation.

(AQW 24867/11-15)

Mr Poots: There were 41 patients waiting for surgery to treat scoliosis of the spine at the 31st March 2013, the most recent quarter for which official statistics are available.

Northern Ireland reports hospital waiting times on the basis of outpatient, inpatient and diagnostic waiting times, not waiting times from referral to treatment.

At the 31st March 2013, the average inpatient waiting time for surgery to treat scoliosis of the spine, measured from the date the decision to admit was taken, was 40.8 weeks.

It should be noted that inpatient waiting time information is collected on the basis of the type of procedure the patient is waiting for, rather than the condition that the patient is diagnosed with. Procedures used for treatment of scoliosis of the spine were identified using the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys tabular list of operations and procedures (OPCS-4) codes V41—Instrumental correction of deformity of spine and V42 – Other correction of deformity of spine. The figures in the answer refer to intended procedures only.

Vending Machines

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to advise Health and Social Care Trusts on changes to the goods sold in vending machines in Emergency Departments, given the high-sugar and high-calorie content of the products normally on sale.

(AQW 24868/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vending machines on Health and Social Care Trust premises offer a variety of choices for visitors and staff as well as patients. The options include bottled water, hot and cold beverages and low-calorie or sugar-free products, as well as those with high sugar content.

Nutrition provided in health and social care facilities is kept under review and in that context the Public Health Agency (PHA) has advised that action on vending machines is being taken forward as part of a wider initiative to improve the availability and encourage uptake of healthier choices provided for staff and visitors within health and social care catering facilities across Northern Ireland.

Prostate Cancer

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has spent on the study of prostate cancer in each of the last five years.

(AQW 24874/11-15)

Mr Poots: The table below shows the annual funding allocated directly for prostate cancer research from the regional Health and Social Care R&D Fund, managed by the HSC R&D Division, Public Health Agency. Funding comprises both support for research projects and support for staff to undertake clinical trials of potentially beneficial new treatments. Prostate cancer trials account for some 15% of all cancer trials activity so the sum included in the table represents 15% of the total HSC R&D allocation for cancer trials.

This allocation of monies has levered into NI significant additional investment from other sources that include charities, government and private sector. Those additional funds are not included in the table.

Year	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14	Total
Total £	138,210	245,435	294,039	237,895	280,602	292,959	1,489,139

Finance, Procurement and Logistics

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he first became aware of the (i) content of the letter, under the heading "FPL stock accounting issues" dated 7 March 2013 and emailed from the Business Services Organisation's Finance Director to his Department's Senior Responsible Officer/Deputy Secretary; and (ii) the New Risk No 17 added to the Business Services Organisation's Corporate Risk Register on 30 January 2013 with a risk classification of "extreme"; and by which date will the Finance Procurement and Logistics solution be fully implemented.

(AQW 24888/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Departmental staff are aware of the content of the letter relating to 'FPL stock accounting issues' and the addition of the new Risk No 17 added to the BSO's Corporate Risk Register. Whilst the specific content of the above correspondence has not been brought to my attention, I am aware of the problems that have been experienced during the implementation of the FPL system and the measures being taken to address them.

The final phase of implementation of the FPL system is expected to be completed in September 2013, with the implementation of shared services to follow.

Scoliosis

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what criteria is used to decide who gets an urgent appointment at the scoliosis clinic.

(AQW 24889/11-15)

Mr Poots: A patient will be offered an urgent appointment at a scoliosis clinic if they have a noted respiratory compromise due to scoliosis, if they have a noted neurological interference due to scoliosis or if the referral is a consultant tertiary referral for urgent appointment at a scoliosis clinic.

Drug Abuse

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people in each Health and Social Care Trust area were treated for drug abuse in the last twelve months, broken down by age.

(AQW 24898/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of people who were treated for drug abuse is published on the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety website. The latest published information is for 2011/12 and can be found at the following weblink: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/dmd\_bulletin\_2011-12.pdf

Learning Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he will ensure that robust arrangements are in place so that the future needs and wishes of people with a learning disability and their family carers are (i) identified at the earliest possible stage; (ii) planned for; and (iii) delivered when required.

(AQW 24901/11-15)

Mr Poots: The needs of individuals (both adults and children) with learning disabilities, their families and carers will vary throughout the life of the individual and may involve many agencies, including a range of statutory, independent and voluntary sector organisations.

Individuals with learning disabilities may also have associated physical, sensory, mobility, emotional and personal care needs. For health and social care services, they have a right of access to primary, emergency and elective healthcare services in the same way as any other citizen. Programmes are in place to enhance access to primary health care services for people with disabilities, including annual health checks, and employment of health facilitators in the community.

I recognise the importance of early intervention, especially for children with learning disabilities. Most of these services are planned for through Children's Services Planning arrangements, and integrated working is promoted through the Children's and Young People's Strategic Partnership. However, I recognise that more can always be done, to enhance early years support for children with learning disabilities and manage transitions better.

It is intended to amend the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 to require Health and Social Care Trusts to ascertain the wishes and feelings of children in need in their area in connection with decisions about the provision of services to them to safeguard them and promote their welfare. Trusts will also be required to give due consideration to the wishes and feelings expressed by children in need in these circumstances. This will be done by way of the Adoption and Children Bill, which I intend to introduce in the Assembly in 2014.

Individual care plans and regular review of these plans are the best way to promote effective service delivery to meet assessed needs. Carers are also entitled to a carers assessment. I expect that succession planning for the care of loved ones to be part of these processes.

Self-directed Support

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to introduce self-directed support or individual budgets.

(AQW 24904/11-15)

Mr Poots: Self-directed support is currently being widely rolled out in Northern Ireland - by way of Direct Payments. This is where a HSC Trust provides an individual with a cash payment, in lieu of social care services, which they can use to purchase the necessary support to meet their assessed needs. Access to Direct Payments as a means of delivering social services in Northern Ireland has been available since 1996.

HSC Trusts continue to explore new and innovative ways of providing personalised support to individuals and carers. A personalised budget (or "personal budget") is another way of delivering self-directed support, a concept which has been piloted in the Southern Trust. A personalised budget is an amount of money that is identified and allocated to meet the assessed needs of a particular individual; the money is retained by the Trust, but the service user will be told the amount available, and can direct how the money will be spent and what type of services will be purchased.

Additionally, the HSC Board, in partnership with a wide range of stakeholders, is in the process of planning the roll-out of personal budgets across the region. Intended Measurements of Success of the project include: by March 2015, 100% of those eligible for a social care service will have a record of their personal budget, and 20% of those individuals in receipt of a social care service will access some form of self-directed support i.e. Direct Payments, a managed budget or mixed provision.

Castledearg Ambulance Station

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to improve (i) the entrance road and abutting entrance walls to Castledearg Ambulance station; and (ii) the overall state of the grounds to the old hospital site; and whether he has any plans to deal with the issue of dumping taking place at this site.

(AQW 24932/11-15)

Mr Poots: The old Derg Hospital site is owned by my Department; however, it is maintained on our behalf by the Western Health and Social Care Trust (the Trust). The Trust carried out remedial works to the entrance road to Castledearg Ambulance station in 2012. Recently, the Trust as part of its ongoing maintenance, reviewed the condition of road and walls and plans to carry out the necessary repairs to the damaged section of wall and also the road surface by autumn this year.

The grounds of the old Derg hospital site are maintained in line with the rest of the Trust's estate with grass around the ambulance station being regularly cut during the growing season. This is currently being reviewed to determine how the visual amenity of the grounds on the rest of the site could be improved. The Trust is aware of the issue of illegal dumping and is continuing to monitor the situation to determine appropriate measures to prevent reoccurrence.

Tobacco Control

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of full time equivalent staff who work on the enforcement of tobacco control in (i) his Department; (ii) the Health and Social Care Board; (iii) the Public Health Agency; and (iv) each district council.

(AQW 24933/11-15)

Mr Poots: In Northern Ireland, district councils have sole responsibility for the enforcement of tobacco control legislation. No other staff in my Department, the Public Health Agency or the Health and Social Care Board have responsibility for this area of work.

My Department, through the Public Health Agency, provides funding for 12 Tobacco Control Officer posts in Northern Ireland. These officers are responsible for co-ordinating tobacco control enforcement activity across all 26 district councils. To assist the work of the Tobacco Control Officers, district council based Environmental Health Officers occasionally undertake certain duties in relation to tobacco enforcement. However, information on the amount of time spent on such duties is not available.

Urgent Respite Care: Carrickfergus

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of urgent respite care places available in the Carrickfergus area on a weekly basis; and how many spaces were available in each of the last four weeks.

(AQW 24948/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the Northern Health and Social (HSC) Trust. Their response is provided below.

Children's Services

There are no dedicated respite places for urgent or emergency situations and there have been no requests for such a place within the four week period preceding the 5th July 2013.

Adult Services

Respite care is normally provided on a planned basis within Adult Learning Disability service, with 6 dedicated residential respite beds (Ellis Court Respite Service) and 2 dedicated nursing respite beds (Castleview Nursing Home) in the Carrickfergus area.

Should the need arise for any emergency respite care, colleagues from the Multi-Disciplinary Team would firstly check with already established Northern HSC Trust services for availability, if not available then the Trust would spot purchase a residential or nursing bed.

Adoption

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children have been adopted in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 24976/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is assumed that the question refers to the number of children adopted from care in each of the last ten years.

The number of children adopted from care in Northern Ireland can be found in the statistical bulletin 'The Adoption of Looked After Children in Northern Ireland.' This publication was produced biennially from 2002 to 2012. It will now be available on an annual basis and can be found on the Department's website at the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/stats-cib/statistics\_and\_research-cib-pub/children\_statistics/statistics\_and\_research-cib\_adoption.htm

Adoption and Foster Care

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people were registered as potential (i) adoptive; and (ii) foster parents in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 24978/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- i Information is not centrally available on the number of people registered as potential adoptive parents in each of the last ten years, nor could this information be sourced from Health and Social Care Trusts due to disproportionate costs. The nearest available figures to those requested are detailed below for your information.

The number of people who have successfully completed an assessment and been approved as an adoptive carer in each of the last three years is detailed in Table 1 below.

Table 1: The Number of People who have under gone an Assessment and been Approved as an Adoptive Carer during year ending 31 March

Note: These figures have not been validated by DHSSPS. Figures for 2012 and 2013 include those approved for inter-country adoption. Figures for 2013 are provisional and potentially subject to change.

- ii. This information could not be sourced from Health and Social Care Trusts due to disproportionate costs. Figures are centrally available for the number of registered foster parents at 31 March in each of the last three years. These figures are detailed in Table 2.

Table 2: The Number of People Registered as a Foster Parent at 31 March

Foster Care

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children were fostered in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 24980/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of children fostered at 31 March in each of the last ten years can be found in the publications 'Children's Social Care Statistics' (Table 3.6) and 'Children Order Statistical Tables' (Table 3.3) available on the Department's website at the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/stats-cib/statistics\_and\_research-cib-pub/children\_statistics/stats-cib-children\_order.htm

Diabetic Macula Oedema

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to make Ranibizumab available to qualifying patients for the treatment of diabetic macula oedema, given its proven effectiveness and the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence recommendation.

(AQW 24994/11-15)

Mr Poots: NICE Technology Appraisal TA274 on ranibizumab for treating diabetic macular oedema was endorsed by my Department in March 2013. The HSC Board are currently developing a Service Notification which will detail arrangements for implementing the guidance. Once this Service Notification has been agreed, it will represent my Department's formal policy position on implementation.

Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether resources are available to meet the extra demand on the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority for the reviews and inspections due to the increased number of private care homes resulting from Transforming Your Care.

(AQW 24995/11-15)

Mr Poots: The principal source of funding for the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) is grant-in-aid paid by my Department. If any shift in Departmental policy leads to a requirement for more resources to meet the demand for reviews and inspection, RQIA would seek additional funding from the Department by way of a suitable Business Case and it would be considered according to guidance from the Northern Ireland Guide to Expenditure and Appraisal.

Belfast Health and Social Care Trust: Pneumatic Blood Tubing System

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what contingency plans are in place in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust in the event of a complete tubing system failure for the delivery of blood; and who is responsible for the repair and maintenance of the tubing system.

(AQW 25006/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the pneumatic tube system is not used for the delivery of blood for transfusion, but is used to send blood samples for cross-matching and typing in order to determine what blood or blood products can be issued.

It is used for urgent samples, but samples that have been difficult to obtain and where it may be difficult to obtain further samples eg from young children or babies, are normally hand delivered by porters. This method of delivery is also used as the contingency back up when the pneumatic tube system is out of order.

The contract for repair and maintenance of the pneumatic tube system was awarded to Sumetzberger Ireland (Phil-Tec) for the period 1 January 2010 to 31 December 2014.

Royal Victoria Hospital: Accident and Emergency Department

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has provided (i) changing facilities for Band 1 PCSS staff; and (ii) a work base for porters in the new Accident and Emergency department at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast.

(AQW 25007/11-15)

Mr Poots: The design ethos behind the new Critical Care Building at the Royal Victoria Hospital is to create a multi-disciplinary working environment throughout it. Multi-disciplinary teams including the Patient and Client Support staff (PCSS) who are based in the Emergency Department will share changing accommodation within the building with other disciplines.

A multi disciplinary office which porters will access has been provided adjacent to the ambulance entrance to the Emergency Department.

Nursing and Residential Care Homes: Enforcement

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list the enforcement actions taken against older peoples' nursing or residential care homes by the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority in (i) 2011; (ii) 2012; and (iii) 2013.

(AQW 25023/11-15)

Mr Poots: Details of enforcements actions taken by Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) are published on the RQIA website.

Enforcement activity from April 2011 to March 2012 is published on Pages 32-35 of the RQIA Annual Report and Accounts 2011/12 which may be found at:

http://www.rqia.org.uk/cms\_resources/Annual%20Report%202011-12%20Published%20Version.pdf

Enforcement activity on 2012/13 is available on the RQIA website at: http://www.rqia.org.uk/inspections/enforcement\_activity.cfm. This will be collated in the RQIA Annual Report and Accounts 2012/13 when it is published in August.

Western Health and Social Care Trust: Flexicare Scheme

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the Flexi-Care scheme in Western Health and Social Care Trust has been cancelled; and what measures he will put in place to ensure that carers are afforded respite.

(AQW 25073/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Western HSC Trust have advised that a range of low-intensity support services are provided in partnership with the voluntary and independent sector through the Flexicare service. This is funded on a recurring basis and there are agreed volumes of service to be provided each year, specified within each service level agreement.

During 2012, the Trust in partnership with the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) was able to extend the Flexicare model as part of its tackling poverty and social exclusion agenda, particularly for clients in rural areas.

This was a time-limited extension and funding for this programme came to an end on 1st April 2013 and the initiative is currently being evaluated.

The Trust continues to provide Flexicare from its recurrently funded budget without any reduction in service volumes.

Wind Turbines

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assurances he can give that wind turbines are constructed and located following established guidance and best practice there is no possibility of risk to the health of the local population.

(AQW 25140/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has no role in respect of the construction and location of wind turbines.

The Public Health Agency is regularly asked by the Planning Service to comment on potential health effects of proposed wind turbine development. This response will often depend on the specific details of the proposed development. However, in general, the view of the Public Health Agency is that, provided established guidance and best practice in relation to placement of wind turbines and mitigation measures is undertaken, there is minimal to no risk to the health of the population associated with such facilities.

Department of Justice

Prison Service: Hot or Cold Debriefs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 23174/11-15 (i) to explain the disparity between the answer relating to follow up checks conducted by the Personnel Governor at Maghaberry Prison and the Northern Ireland Prison Service Welfare Officer on the female nursing officer who found 'Mr C' and Issue of Concern number (32), highlighted by the Prisoner Ombudsman; (ii) why a hot de-brief did not take place as highlighted at Issue of Concern number (31); and (iii) whether a cold de-brief took place, including the date, and if not, to outline the reasons for this.

(AQW 24196/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice):

- (i) The response to AQW/23174/1 1-15 relates to follow up checks that were conducted with a male officer who found Mr C. There are no records of either of the two nursing officers involved in the incident having been subsequently absent from work.
- (ii) A hot de-brief did not take place as the seriousness of Mr C's medical condition was not known at the time of the incident.
- (iii) Once the seriousness of Mr C's medical condition was confirmed, a cold de brief was scheduled. This cold de brief was held on Tuesday 13 March 2012 and the minutes were shared with the Prisoner Ombudsman's Office.

Prisons: Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to explain the disparity between AQW 24026/11-15 and the 2009/10 Northern Ireland Prison Service Annual Report which states, 'From April 2009 all acts of self harm however minor are centrally collated in order to identify patterns and trends', and to clarify if this practice has ceased, and if so, from what date.

(AQW 24598/11-15)

Mr Ford: Electronic records have been examined and discussions held with current NIPS staff. This has clarified that NIPS did not centrally collate all acts of self harm however minor to identify patterns and trends before 2010. The central collation of the information is ongoing.

Prisons: Staff Affected by Deaths or Near Deaths in Custody

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) if support mechanisms, as recommended by the NI Prisoner Ombudsman, are in place for Northern Ireland Prison Service staff affected by deaths or near deaths in custody; (ii) when these mechanisms were implemented in each prison; and (iii) the responsibility for ensuring such support is in place.

(AQW 24687/11-15)

Mr Ford: Support mechanisms are in place for staff who have been affected by deaths or near deaths in custody. Carecall have been responsible for providing the counselling service to the Northern Ireland Prison Service since 1 July 2006. From November 2002 until Carecall took over responsibility, Trauma Management Recovery provided an independent counselling service for staff provided. In addition, at any time following an incident staff can discuss any concerns they have with their Line Manager, Personnel Manager, local Personnel Units and Staff Welfare.

These systems have been in place in each prison establishment for a number of years and the Suicide and Self Harm Prevention Policy/Standard Operating Procedure highlights a hot de-brief as a relevant time to identify whether staff require specific support.

The Governing Governor has overall responsibility for ensuring this support is in place in his establishment.

Project Bank Accounts

Mr McGlone asked Minister of Justice, in order to facilitate proper payments to contractors, sub contractors and suppliers, for an update on the adoption of Project Bank Accounts as good practice within his Department.

(AQW 24706/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 8 January 2013, the Minister of Finance and Personnel announced that Project Bank Accounts (PBAs) would be introduced to projects awarded by Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) that have a construction value in excess of £1 million and which contain a significant subcontracting element.

CPD is finalising guidance which details how PBAs will be implemented within projects awarded by it. PBAs are now being included in projects which are suitable for their adoption and which are led by CPD.

Northern Ireland Police Fund

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Justice to explain why the Northern Ireland Police Fund has recently employed additional staff when services have been cut due to 'austerity measures'.

(AQW 24709/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have been advised by the Northern Ireland Police Fund (NIPF) that there is no correlation between the past requirement for efficiency savings and the recent engagement of one member of staff on a temporary basis. The purpose of this short term specialist post is to enhance governance arrangements and support the Fund in ensuring that its business objectives, including the provision of client services, can be achieved and that the Fund has proper procedures in place which will help secure future funding streams.

Northern Ireland Police Fund

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Justice whether the additional wage bill is being deducted from the grant provided to the Northern Ireland Police Fund by his Department.

(AQW 24710/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department does not make any deductions from the grant funding to Northern Ireland Police Fund in respect of any salaries and wages.

Prisons: Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24026/11-15, (i) if he will revise his answer given that Appendix 7 of the Northern Ireland Prison Service Annual Reports and Accounts, up to and including 2009-2010, details statistics pertaining to incidents of self harm, Prisoners at Risk and Supporting Prisoners at Risk processes opened and deaths by suicide; (ii) to provide an explanation for the disparity in his answer and; (iii) to demonstrate, by collating such information, how there would be a disproportionate cost.

Mr Ford: A revision of AQW 24026/11-15 is not necessary.

As stated in AQW 24026/11-15 electronic records began in 2010. To provide the breakdown of the information requested from January 2008 to 2010 would require a manual check of the records of all prisoners who self harmed or committed an act of suicide or attempted suicide, to determine whether they were under the SPAR process at the time.

Prison Service: Inaccurate Information

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 23884/11-15, whether Northern Ireland Prison Service staff conducted a review of all responses to Questions for Written Answer prior to answer. and if not, to outline the reason why checks for relevance and accuracy were not carried out.

(AQW 24725/11-15)

Mr Ford: NIPS staff did not conduct a review of all responses to Questions for Written Answer. Checking each of the 1438 answered during the current and previous assembly mandate could only be provided at a disproportionate cost

James Clyde Reilly

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for a breakdown of the costs incurred by the Northern Ireland Prison Service in relation to the matter of James Clyde Reilly and his subsequent High Court challenge.

(AQW 24762/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service is not as yet in receipt of a bill of costs for the Judicial Review challenge taken by James Clyde Reilly.

Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline any incidents and/or allegations against the prisoner during time spent in sentenced and remand custody at Hydebank Young Offenders Centre since his committal in December 2012.

(AQW 24763/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Information requested is sensitive personal data as defined at Section 2 of the Data Protection Act 1998. To provide this information would constitute a breach of the data subject's rights under that Act and would be contrary to the first, second and sixth data protection principles.

Prisons: Deaths in Custody

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many deaths in custody are awaiting final inquest at the Coroners Court, broken down by year of death.

(AQW 24822/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are 25 deaths recorded by the Prison Service that have a Coroner's verdict outstanding.

The table below shows the deaths recorded by the Prison Service, broken down by year.

Year	Deaths recorded by NIPS with a Coroner's Verdict outstanding.
2008	1
2009	3*
2010	3*
2011	5*
2013	2*

* Includes one death which occurred out of prison custody, but has been recorded by the Prison Service due to the circumstances of the death.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, which his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 24826/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information requested is not readily available in the format requested and a response could only be provided by undertaking additional work at disproportionate cost.

Outstanding Fines

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Justice, following the recent judgement by the Court of Appeal, if there is any progress on how to retrieve the estimated £7.5m in outstanding fines.

(AQW 24838/11-15)

Mr Ford: My officials in the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service are working to relist the relevant Crown Court cases in the new legal term which begins in September.

In relation to Magistrates' Courts cases, officials are developing revised arrangements as outlined in the recent Divisional Court judgment.

Human Trafficking Cases

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24361/11-15, if this answer constitutes all current human trafficking cases in the court system, including that of case number 13/049483 at Banbridge Magistrates Court; and if not to clarify (i) all cases with an element of human trafficking; and (ii) associated offences/allegations where relevant.

(AQW 24847/11-15)

Mr Ford: The answer to AQW24361/11-15 included active court cases with a human trafficking charge brought under the Sexual Offences (Northern Ireland) Order 2008 or the Sexual Offences Act 2003. Case number 13/049483 was included in the previous answer.

Committee for Justice, Equality and Defence Report

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the Oireachtas' Committee for Justice, Equality and Defence report which recommended the criminalisation of payment for sexual services; and the implications, if any, for Northern Ireland.

(AQW 24848/11-15)

Mr Ford: This report has been prepared with regard to the particular circumstances of the Republic of Ireland. My officials will consider the contents within the context of general policy research into the law on prostitution.

I will also have opportunities to discuss such issues with the Minister of Justice and Equality, Alan Shatter TD, in the context of inter governmental meetings on criminal justice cooperation.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice how much his Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24877/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice, including its Agencies but not its arm's length bodies, has had no expenditure on branded apparel for non-frontline staff in each of the last three financial years.

Drug Abuse

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the actions his Department is taking to tackle crime related to illegal drug abuse, in particular to protect children and young adults in (i) the Foyle constituency; and (ii) the rest of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 24899/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department is working with DHSSPS and a number of other Departments and agencies, to deliver the outcomes defined in the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2011- 16. One of the key priorities identified is to address alcohol and drug –related crime. In addition alcohol and drugs issues have also been identified as key components in the Community Safety Strategy for Northern Ireland.

In May 2013, I launched the Strategic Framework for Reducing Offending which recognises the complexity of offending and the need to tackle offending and crime through better coordinated partnerships. My Department has commenced a series of meetings to identify opportunities to shape and influence strategies and programmes that will contribute to the Framework's key aims. This will include better targeting of programmes or interventions, to tackle behaviours such as drug misuse.

My Department and the Policing Board jointly fund Policing and Community Safety Partnerships to develop local solutions to locally identified issues. Within the Foyle constituency the Policing and Community Safety Partnership have allocated approximately £46,000 to implement a range of projects that aim to tackle drug issues within the local community which should lead to an impact on the level of crime. The majority of funded projects are diversionary in nature, targeting those at risk of offending and may address a number of issues and not solely focus on illicit drugs.

Between August 2013 and March 2014, the Derry PCSP will provide approximately £36,000 to four projects that will target 8 to 21 year olds with a range of workshops to raise awareness of illicit drug and alcohol problems and these will link to efforts to tackle other issues such as anti-social behaviour and healthy relationships. In addition the Derry PCSP secured a further £10,000 from Criminal Confiscation Receipts to deliver the 'Foyle Tackling Drugs' Campaign. This project will deliver 8 counselling sessions to 25 young or vulnerable adults and will provide training to 20 community activists to assist with their efforts to tackle drug and alcohol issues within their communities.

The Department of Justice also funds three Health Trusts, including the Western Health and Social Care Trust, to provide addiction staff in a custody environment with a view to engaging with arrested offenders who wish to tackle their illicit drug misuse problems. The aim is to address their illicit drug issues through encouraging them to engage in treatment and so reduce their need to perpetrate offences. While these projects target those over the age of 18 years they will encourage any young person to engage with suitable services.

Legal Services Commission

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the loss incurred by the NI Legal Services Commission due to false claims made by Ling Mo Ho (13/034412) in respect of a non-existent interpretation services company; (ii) how the fraud was discovered; and (iii) the amount that has been, or is expected to be, repaid.

(AQW 24908/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission is currently bound by reporting restrictions contained in an order made by the Trial Judge on the 7 June 2013 in relation to this case and cannot respond until those restrictions are removed.

Cruelty to Animals

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of people that have been sentenced for offences related to cruelty to animals, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 24936/11-15)

Mr Ford: During the period for which the most recent conviction statistics are available animal cruelty offences were prosecuted under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972 and the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985.

The table below gives the number of convictions for animal cruelty for the calendar years 2005 to 2009 (the latest year for which figures are currently available) and therefore predates the Welfare of Animals Act 2011.

Number of convictions for animal cruelty, 2005-2009

Year	Number of convictions
2005	24
2006	17
2007	21
2008	17
2009	11

Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is convicted is included.

Data for 2005-2006 should not be directly compared with data from 2007 to 2009 as the data sets are sourced from different systems.

Roadside Monuments

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 23391/11-15, to detail how many of the nineteen listed are (i) Republican; and (ii) Loyalist.

(AQW 24127/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's most recent assessment indicates there are nineteen illegal roadside monuments to terrorists.

Eighteen of these monuments are Republican, whilst the identity of one monument cannot be definitively determined as it is currently blank.

Parking Tickets

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 23622/11-15, to detail the other towns in which parking tickets have not been issued since the beginning of Decriminalised Parking Enforcement in 2006.

(AQW 24245/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is not possible to list all the towns where Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) have not been issued, however, the towns and villages where the lowest numbers of PCNs have been issued since the beginning of Decriminalised Parking Enforcement in 2006 are as follows:

Town	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13

Toome			1	2	4

My Department must prioritise its limited Traffic Attendant resource in order to provide an effective and balanced enforcement service. Although it is not possible to cover every restriction, officials do respond where complaints or requests for enforcement are received.

Parking: Self-regulation by Drivers

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development for a definition of the term 'self-regulation by drivers' in terms of parking.

(AQW 24359/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member the term 'self-regulation by drivers' is intended to refer to drivers who adhere to applicable parking restrictions, irrespective of whether Traffic Attendants are in attendance to enforce against illegal parking.

Park and Ride: Donaghadee

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the action he is taking to facilitate a Park and Ride scheme in Donaghadee to encourage more people in the area to use public transport.

(AQW 24427/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In 2011 I endorsed my Department's 'Strategic Review of Park and Ride'. The subsequent report presented recommendations for the delivery and prioritisation of Park and Ride facilities.

A Park and Ride Programme Board, with representation from Departmental Divisions, Transport NI and Translink, was established with the responsibility of co-ordinating and prioritising the implementation of Park and Ride projects.

The Programme Board compiled the 'Park and Ride Strategic Delivery Programme 2013 – 2015' which prioritised the delivery of the Park and Ride projects up to 2015.

I am conscious of the demand for Park and Ride facilities in the North Down area. The Strategic Delivery Programme for 2013 – 2015 includes proposals for increased Park and Ride facilities in the Bangor and Cultra areas of North Down. However, at present, there are no plans for a priority Park and Ride facility in Donaghadee.

Murals and Graffiti

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department decides the difference between murals and graffiti. (AQW 24560/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I do not endorse or support the unauthorised use of my Department's property for any purpose and in this respect my Department does not make any distinction between murals and graffiti.

Magherafelt Bypass

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the proposed timescale of the commencement to completion of the Magherafelt bypass. (AQW 24575/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Executive has now considered my paper tabling the options for the reallocation of A5 funding to other major road projects and, I am delighted to confirm the Executive has approved the allocation of £40m for the construction of the Magherafelt Bypass.

This early decision will hopefully pave the way for construction work to begin in Autumn 2014. With a two year construction period, the new road could be open to traffic by 2016.

A5 Road Scheme: EU Habitats Directive

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the importance of an EU environmental designation, for his assessment of whether it will be possible to resolve the issues relating to the EU Habitats Directive in relation to the A5 road scheme. (AQW 24604/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department and its advisors are currently engaging with relevant interested parties to address the environmental concerns identified during the recent legal challenge into the A5 scheme. A report to inform the Appropriate Assessment of the impacts on the River Foyle and tributaries and River Finn Special Areas of Conservation is being prepared and will be publically consulted on.

However, it is important that the outcomes of any assessment are not pre-judged and therefore I will need to see all the evidence provided in the report and the outcome of the public consultation exercise before I can make further decisions.

Cycle Lanes: Outside Belfast and Derry

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the location of cycle lanes outside of (i) Belfast; and (ii) Derry. (AQW 24652/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that details of the location of cycle lanes outside Belfast and Londonderry are included in the table below

Location of cycle lanes outside Belfast and Londonderry

Personal Injury and Vehicle Damage: Compensation

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of compensation claims which could not be defended by the Central Claims Unit for damage to motor vehicles and personal injuries, made in the last three years, due to (i) potholes/damages missed on inspection; (ii) lack of inspections; (iii) late inspections; and (iv) poor repairs.

(AQW 24656/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below provides details of the number of claims for compensation payments made in each of the last three financial years, in respect of personal injury and vehicle damage, which the Department was unable to defend on the grounds that it could not raise a defence under Article 8 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993. Information as to the reasons why these claims could not be defended is not readily available in the form requested.

Year	Type of Claim
	Personal Injury	Vehicle Damage
2010/2011	232	1,574
2011/2012	273	1,476
2012/2013	311	587

Personal Injury and Vehicle Damage: Compensation

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total amount of compensation paid out in the last three years for (a) personal injuries; and (b) damage to motor vehicles/property; and to breakdown these figures between incidents on (a) roads; and (b) footpaths.

(AQW 24658/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The information requested by the Member is not available in the form requested as my Department does not maintain details of compensation payments which distinguish between incidents which occurred on roads or footpaths.

However, details of all personal injury and vehicle / property damage compensation paid in each of the last three financial years relating to incidents on public roads as a whole, are provided in the table below:

Year	Personal Injury	Vehicle / Property Damage
2010/2011	£1,921,179.00	£408,413.02
2011/2012	£1,925,743.33	£370,451.58
2012/2013	£1,882,050.84	£188,286.22

Street Lighting in North Down: Cost of Electricity

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the amount spent on electricity for street lighting in North Down, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 24691/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not hold such information on a constituency basis.

Project Bank Accounts

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development, in order to facilitate proper payments to contractors, sub-contractors and suppliers, for an update on the adoption of Project Bank Accounts as good practice within his Department.

(AQW 24704/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: On 8 January 2013 Minister Wilson announced that Project Bank Accounts (PBAs) would be introduced for contracts awarded by Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) that have a construction value in excess of £1 million and which contain a significant subcontracting element. This will apply to contracts that CPD awards for a range of government departments.

CPD is finalising guidance which details how PBAs will be implemented within such contracts.

I can confirm that my Department will examine this guidance once it issues to consider how PBAs could be used for the construction contracts we award.

Cycle Lanes: North Down and Ards

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cycle lanes in (i) North Down Borough Council; and (ii) Ards Borough Council areas.

(AQW 24733/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the locations of cycle lanes in the North Down Borough Council and Ards Borough Council areas are included in the table below:

Location of cycle lanes

Council Area	Location
North Down Borough Council	A2 Tillysburn to Holywood
	Abbey Street, Bangor (Bus Station to Dufferin Avenue)
	Ballycrochan Road Bangor
	Bexley Road Bangor
	Newtownards Road Bangor (Abbey Street to Abbey Hill Drive)

Resurfacing: Ballyhenry Area of Newtownabbey

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to prioritise road resurfacing in the Ballyhenry area of Newtownabbey once funding that had been allocated to the A5 road scheme is redesignated within his budget.
(AQW 24745/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has not directly received any reallocation of A5 funding at this stage. However, it was successful in receiving additional structural maintenance funding from the June Monitoring round. Officials will now consider areas within Newtownabbey for inclusion in any programme of additional work. I can confirm my Department's current resurfacing programme for 2013-14 includes the Sandyknowes Roundabout in the Ballyhenry area of Newtownabbey.

Ballyclare Link Road

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Regional Development if he plans to provide financial assistance to build the Ballyclare Link Road once funding that had been allocated to the A5 road scheme is redesignated within his budget.
(AQW 24746/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the recent Court ruling on the A5 scheme and in accordance with financial procedures, I declared a reduced requirement of £108m in relation to the A5 allocation.

In the June monitoring round, I secured over £31m in funding for roads maintenance and for the purchase of around 80 new buses. In addition, around £40m has been agreed to enable work to start on the Magherafelt Bypass next year.

The Ballyclare Relief Road is a non-strategic road scheme connecting Templepatrick Road, Doagh Road and the Rashee Road. The project is developer-led and is primarily required to support development proposals within Ballyclare, including access to approved housing development on lands west of Ballyclare. The road scheme received planning approval in January 2011.

As the Strategic Road Improvement Programme gives priority to upgrading the strategic road network, the provision of the Ballyclare Relief Road would not be considered a high priority in the current circumstances.

Underspend

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development what was his departmental underspend in the last financial year. (AQW 24756/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department had an excellent 2012-13 provisional outturn position with a Resource DEL underspend of £2.6m (0.5%) and a Capital DEL underspend of £1.2m (0.3%), comparing very favourably with other Departments and the overall NI Block position as set out in the Finance Minister's 1 July Statement to the Assembly on '2012-13 Provisional Outturn and 2013-14 June Monitoring'.

Bus Shelters

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of bus shelters in each constituency. (AQW 24780/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that the current contract my Department has with Adshel has delivered 1,362 bus shelters in Northern Ireland at no cost to my Department. Whilst details of the distribution of these bus shelters is not available in the form requested, details of the number of bus shelters in each Council area, are provided in the table below:

Council Area	Replacement	New Shelters		Total

In addition, my Department maintains approximately 20 bus shelters mostly located in the Greater Belfast area which pre-date the current contract.

Other bus shelters have been provided across Northern Ireland by local Councils and Translink.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the route of the A6 strategic road proposal is affected by any of the sites where the illegal landfill at Mobouy Road, Derry.

(AQW 24786/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm the route of the A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dual carriageway traverses areas identified as potentially containing illegal landfill.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department was aware of the extent, scale and content of the illegal landfill uncovered at Mobouy Road, Derry when the Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) was carried out as part of the A6 strategic road proposal; and whether the fact that the EIA did not identify and address the likely significant and adverse environmental effects from the landfill renders that EIA inadequate as a basis on which to allow the road scheme to proceed.

(AQW 24788/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The presence of potentially contaminated land influenced the choice of the preferred route for the scheme. The Environmental Statement, published in December 2011 and examined at the September/October 2012 Public Inquiry, comprehensively examined all known potential areas of contaminated land along the line of the new road, including the lands identified by NIEA at Mobouy Road, and details measures to reduce or eliminate those effects. I am therefore content that the risks associated with encountering contaminated land at Mobouy Road, Londonderry have been fully assessed as part of the Public Inquiry process.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development what impact the discovery of the illegal landfill site at Mobouy Road, Derry, will have on the findings of the Public Inquiry into the A6 strategic road proposal, given that this issue was not assessed as part of the Environmental Impact Assessment process and was not part of the inquiry.

(AQW 24789/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The potential for encountering contaminated land at a number of locations along the route of the proposed A6, including the lands identified by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency at Mobouy Road, was fully assessed as part of the Environmental Statement. I am therefore content the risks associated with encountering contaminated land at Mobouy Road, Londonderry have been fully assessed as part of the Public Inquiry process.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked Minister for Regional Development whether he has made, or intends to make, the European Commission aware of the implications, financial or otherwise, of the discovery of the illegal landfill site at Mobouy Road, Derry, given that it is co-funding the A6 strategic road proposal.

(AQW 24790/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Design work on this section of the A6 was not co-funded by the European Commission and therefore I am not aware of any implications, financial or otherwise, that would require me to inform it of the ongoing investigation into alleged illegal dumping at Mobouy Road, Londonderry.

Northern Ireland Water: Ernst & Young

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Ernst & Young has carried out any work for Northern Ireland Water since its inception in 2007; and to detail the nature and monetary value of any work.

(AQW 24829/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that between its inception in 2007 and 2010 the company has engaged Ernst & Young to carry out work to the value of £1,713,329. A further £360 was spent in 2012 in relation to a VAT conference. The total paid to Ernst & Young was £1,713,689.

Details are provided in the table below:

Date	Service Type	Total £
2007-2010	Staff Substitution <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ Internal Audit Function</li> </ul>	574,741

Northern Ireland Water: Ernst & Young

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) whether Ernst & Young carried out any work, on an ex gratia basis, between July 2009 and July 2010 for, or in relation to, Northern Ireland Water; (ii) for whom was any such work carried out; (iii) who was the recipient of the work; and (iv) who instructed the work to be carried out.

(AQW 24830/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that the company is only aware of one small piece of work having been carried out by Ernst & Young on an ex gratia basis between July 2009 and July 2010. It is unclear whether this was requested by the previous Chief Executive or whether it was offered voluntarily by Ernst & Young.

Public Transport: Wi-Fi

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how the quality of Wi-Fi on Translink Goldline services compares to that on Northern Ireland Railways.

(AQW 24843/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink advise that Wi-Fi equipment on Ulsterbus Goldline and NI Railways fleets is provided and fitted by the industry leader in terms of supply in UK and Ireland.

The respective fleet types and associated equipment used are capable of providing similar levels of capacity/quality. The most significant influence on quality will be network coverage provided by the various mobile phone network providers and the extent to which mobile black spots occur across the bus and rail networks.

Ballycastle: Rail Link

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what assessment has been made of (i) extending a rail link to Ballycastle; and (ii) the tourism benefits this could bring.

(AQW 24910/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No assessment has been made by my Department of the feasibility of extending a rail link to Ballycastle or of any tourism benefits that this might bring.

My Department has consulted on the prioritisation of future railways investment up to 2035. This invited discussion about possible extensions to the rail network. Whilst the response included calls for railway extensions to various towns, there were no requests for a rail link to Ballycastle.

Student Travel Discounts

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development why mature students do not receive student discount on Ulsterbus services when discount is available on services provided by Northern Ireland Railways.

(AQW 24913/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink have commercial responsibility for these matters and have advised that a discount for mature students using rail services was introduced separately from bus because a mature student travelling by rail is not able to obtain as good a discount without the use of the 24+ Railcard. Mature students using both Metro and Ulsterbus services can avail of the best discounts through standard Smartlink products which are available for bus journeys.

Roads: South Down

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to improve roads infrastructure in South Down to assist in the delivery of the South East Coast Master plan.

(AQW 24918/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: During the spring of each year my Department's Roads Service presents their respective Minor Works programmes to each Council, which sets out the schemes they hope to construct during the current financial year and beyond, subject to the necessary funding being available.

I have arranged for copies of the relevant council reports to be forwarded directly to you.

Waterside Railway Station: Out-of-hours and Weekend Arrangements

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the out-of-hours and weekend arrangements for passenger accommodation at Waterside Railway Station.

(AQW 24963/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised me that Waterside Railway Station is open from 06.45 to 18.00 Monday to Friday, 07.00 to 18.00 on Saturday and 09.00 to 20.00 on Sunday, which matches the peak passenger flows to/from Londonderry. Outside these times the station operates as an unstaffed halt with customer access/egress via the accessible night gate. There is a covered waiting area on the platform.

With the reopening of the line between Londonderry and Coleraine, Translink will continue to monitor the opening hours of the ticket office and station facilities in light of any changes in passenger numbers.

Department for Social Development

Dignity at Work: Sports Shirts

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 23810/11-15, whether it is in line with the Dignity at Work Policy for GAA sportswear to be brought into the work place.

(AQW 24533/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The NICS Dignity at Work policy includes guidance on common forms of unwanted, unreasonable and offensive conduct, and makes specific reference to sportswear which may be deemed offensive by others, such as football, GAA and rugby tops.

The Department's position is therefore that it would not normally be appropriate for such sportswear to be brought into the workplace

Housing Executive: Overpayment of Contractors

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what action he has taken to ensure there is no repeat of the Housing Executive's overpayment of contractors.

(AQW 24555/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My oral statement on 10 June 2013 clearly sets out the actions I have taken. I introduced special accountability measures last year, which includes a monthly accountability meeting between my Permanent Secretary and the Housing Executive's Chief Executive where the position on these actions and other key issues is reported. My Permanent Secretary has already instigated a further governance review by my Department's Head of Internal Audit to assess the outcome of the implementation of the recommendations of the Housing Executive governance review in 2010, the special accountability measures and the ASM recommendations. It will also look at the lessons learned by the Housing Executive in respect of the management of response maintenance and the extent to which they have been applied to the management of planned maintenance contracts.

Terms of reference have also been developed for work by DFP's Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit (PEDU), which will support the internal audit team. The focus of PEDU's work will be on the contract management processes. I have recently sent the terms of reference for this work to Minister Wilson to agree.

My officials have also been reviewing the oversight arrangements in place, including the update of the management statement and financial memorandum between my Department and the Housing Executive. My Permanent Secretary has also written to the Chairman to advise him of additional actions to be put in place by my officials.

I also believe that it may now be appropriate to introduce an inspection regime to the landlord function of the Housing Executive and I have instructed my officials to proceed with the necessary arrangements.

Finally, I appointed a new Chairman and Vice –Chairman who I have been meeting monthly to discuss key issues of concern and who are determined to put in place clear governance and assurance systems and to tackle the issues and make the organisational changes that are required to bring this organisation into line and to ensure that appropriate services are delivered to tenants along with value for public money.

Urban Regeneration: Murals

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development what criteria are used when deciding whether to paint over existing murals which are within urban regeneration scheme areas.

(AQW 24574/11-15)

Mr McCausland: During the design of public realm schemes, Departmental Officials and Landscape Architects consider all aspects of the scheme area including: new street lighting; resurfacing footpaths; semi-mature tree planting; and boundary treatments. When considering defaced property, officials will seek to identify any pieces of community art within the scheme area, and apart from these will clean or repaint the affected surface, with the owner's agreement. Consultation is also carried out with relevant statutory bodies, including the local council and DRD Roads Service.

Campbell Tickell Investigation

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 24342/11-15, whether the contract was offered on a single tender basis, and if so, why and did the Permanent Secretary agreed this.

(AQW 24623/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The contract was appointed on a single tender basis as agreed by the Permanent Secretary. In view of the scale of the overpayments the Permanent Secretary accepted the arguments of the Board that they needed an expert to look at this as quickly as possible. Had the Permanent Secretary not agreed to this course of action there would have been major concerns about the timeliness of any investigation and possible further overpayments. This procurement process was in line with relevant guidance for the direct award of contracts (single tender action) and the use of consultants.

Campbell Tickell Investigation

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 24342/11-15, for his assessment of whether Campbell Tickell is uniquely placed to complete the work.

(AQW 24624/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have been advised by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that Campbell Tickell has previous experience and reported on a wide range of matters, including frauds, mismanagement, financial malpractice, complex financial issues, governance and management issues and previously conducted a statutory inquiry for the then Housing Corporation, looking into mismanagement in a specialist housing association.

Social Housing: Waiting Lists

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current social housing waiting lists in the (i) Newtownabbey 1; (ii) Newtownabbey 2; and (iii) Antrim districts.

(AQW 24650/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The tables below detail the social housing waiting list and those in housing stress at 1 June 2013 for the Housing Executive's Newtownabbey 1, Newtownabbey 2 and Antrim district office areas.

Table 1 – Waiting List

	Elderly	Large Adult	Large Family	Single	Small Adult	Small Family	Total
Newtownabbey 1	165	25	41	424	58	185	898

Housing Executive: Occupancy Rates

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the occupancy rates for Housing Executive units in the (i) Newtownabbey 1; (ii) Newtownabbey 2; and (iii) Antrim districts.

(AQW 24651/11-15)

Mr McCausland: At 31 May 2013, the Housing Executive had 6,680 properties within their Newtownabbey 1, Newtownabbey 2 and Antrim local office areas. Of these, 176 properties were vacant; with only 29 in a lettable condition. The remainder were vacant for a variety of reasons such as undergoing repairs or decanting of tenants.

The table below details the breakdown of vacant stock by the various Housing Executive local offices in question.

Local Office area	Total Stock	Tenanted Stock	Total Vacant
Newtownabbey 1	2,168	2,060	108
Newtownabbey 2	2,138	2,115	23

Housing Executive: Overpayment of Contractors

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to his announcement concerning the £18m overpayment on planned maintenance by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE), who was the Director in charge at that time; and what position does that person presently hold within the NIHE.

(AQW 24679/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the planned maintenance contracts ran from January 2008 to January 2013 and operational responsibility for the contracts rested with their Design and Property Services division. During the period of the contract there have been three Directors of that division as follows:-

- John McPeake was Director prior to the contract commencing until December 2010. He is currently the Chief Executive of the Housing Executive.
- Dolores Ferran served as Acting Director from January 2011 until March 2012 and is currently Assistant Director Housing Policy.
- Siobhan McCauley was appointed as Director from April 2012 and is the current post holder.

Ballykeel: Housing Development

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the proposed Housing Development adjacent to Ballykeel, Ballymena.

(AQW 24689/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Work are currently on site, refurbishing 47 units at the St. Patricks Barracks site and this is due to complete in December 2013. There is a second phase in year one (2013/14) of the Social Housing Development Programme for 10 units however planning issues may lead to this number reducing to closer to 2 units.

Ballykeel Estate comprises two Housing Executive Common Landlord Areas- Ballykeel One and Ballykeel Two. Connswater registered a site at Crebilly Road, close to Ballykeel 2 CLA in March 2013. The Housing Executive advised Connswater at that time that they would not be in a position to support the site for social housing as there is no projected housing need for Ballykeel 2.

The Housing Executive has extensive land holdings in the area and should housing need emerge the development of these lands will be investigated in the first instance.

Project Bank Accounts

Mr McGlone asked Minister for Social Development, in order to facilitate proper payments to contractors, sub contractors and suppliers, for an update on the adoption of Project Bank Accounts as good practice within his Department.

(AQW 24701/11-15)

Mr McCausland: All of my Department's construction projects are awarded through the Department of Finance and Personnel's Central Procurement Directorate. On 8 January 2013 the Finance Minister Sammy Wilson, announced that Project Bank Accounts would be introduced to projects awarded by Central Procurement Directorate that have a construction value in excess of £1 million and contain a significant subcontracting element.

Central Procurement Directorate is currently finalising guidance detailing how Project Bank Accounts will be implemented in contracts which they award. The establishment of Project Bank Accounts is now being included in relevant projects let by Central Procurement Directorate.

Social Security Appeal Tribunals

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many Social Security Appeal Tribunals in the last 12 months have had the initial hearing adjourned because the appellant's GP did not submit a full medical history record, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 24713/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information cannot be provided in the format sought. The Appeals Service arranges for appeals to be heard at venues throughout Northern Ireland. The selection of venues for appeal hearings is determined by the postal district within which the appellant resides. The data is only available by tribunal district.

The table below outlines the number of appeals adjourned on the first date of hearing in the period 1 June 2012 to 31 May 2013 where the record noted that it was due to General Practitioner medical records not being available or incomplete.

Homelessness

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development (i) to detail the number of people under the age of 18 who are classified as homeless; (ii) what support is available for these people; and (iii) whether, and how, this information is shared with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

(AQW 24722/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to (i), the Housing Executive advises that at 1 June 2013, 85 people aged 16/17 were accepted as statutorily homeless (Full duty applicants).

In relation to (ii), the Housing Executive launched its new "Homelessness Strategy for Northern Ireland 2012 – 2017" in May 2012. The strategy aims to eliminate long term homelessness and rough sleeping across Northern Ireland by 2020. The new integrated approach includes a range of initiatives, from support services to prevent homelessness, to the introduction of a province-wide private rented sector access scheme. More detailed information on the Homelessness Strategy can be found on the Housing Executive website at www.nihe.gov.uk.

In addition the Housing Executive, through Supporting People funding, supports five dedicated young people's services with a total of 168 spaces throughout Northern Ireland as set out in the table below: -

Organisation	Address	Units	Contract Value £
First Housing Aid & Support Services	Jefferson Court	20	313,986
Simon Community	242 Antrim Rd	10	210,376
Simon Community	3-5 Malone Road	42	347,853
Simon Community	Mount St Mews	16	174,362
Triangle Housing	Floating Support	80	563,818

In relation to (iii), the Housing Executive works in partnership with the Health and Social Care Trusts via a joint working protocol designed to meet the housing and support needs of young people. Young individuals who present as homeless are jointly assessed for accommodation and care/support requirements. This is used as a gateway to support/care services where required for those presenting.

The protocol is monitored and reported via the Regional Reference Group for young homeless. This group has representation from the Housing Executive, the Health and Social Care Board and each of the five Trusts, along with representatives from the Voluntary and Community sector. While the Housing Executive does not share the information collected directly with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Housing Executive understands that the Health and Social Care Boards may do so.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Housing Executive: Faulty Insulation

Ms Ruane asked the Minister for Social Development how many houses in (i) Rathfriland; and (ii) South Down have been affected by faulty insulation such as formaldehyde foam.

(AQW 24747/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I assume the Member is referring to Housing Executive houses, most of which were cavity insulated 25 to 30 years ago. The Housing Executive believes that it was mainly with fibre or bead insulation although some properties may have had urea formaldehyde insulation also.

The information requested is not available. However, following a University of Ulster report on fibre based insulation, which recommended further extensive studies on this issue the Housing Executive has decided to undertake a technical survey of 300 of its properties to examine the quality of the insulation. Until that survey is complete the Housing Executive will not know if there is a wider problem with cavity insulation and, if so, to what extent.

A private company, Energy Store, has recently carried out some inspections of cavities. One of these was in the Rathfriland area and the survey confirmed that this private dwelling had a problem with insulation board and fibre.

Social Housing: Fermanagh

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Social Development how many social housing new builds were completed in the Fermanagh District Council area, in each of the last three financial years.

Mr McCausland: The table below details the number of social housing new builds completed in each of the last three years in the Fermanagh District Council area.

Year	Scheme	Units
2010/11	Enniskillen EMI, Phase 1	30

Housing Stress: Fermanagh

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Social Development how he plans to address the increase in housing stress in the Fermanagh District Council area.

(AQW 24772/11-15)

Mr McCausland: At March 2013, which is the most recent date that information is available from the Housing Executive, there were 302 first preference housing stress applicants on the waiting list for Fermanagh District. The Housing Executive allocates properties in accordance with the Housing Selection Scheme with properties usually allocated to the relevant applicant with the highest points once they become available.

Based on March 2012 waiting list figures there is an additional five year social new build requirement of 74 for Fermanagh district. The Housing Executive has advised that at 31 March 2013 there were 62 general needs units on-site within Fermanagh District, with a further 13 general needs listed on the three year Social Housing Development Programme 2013/16. Stock turnover and new build, both on-site and programmed, should help to address the level of housing stress in the district.

Universal Credit: Pilot Schemes

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what co-ordination is taking place with the Department for Work and Pensions on the monitoring of the pilot schemes for the introduction of Universal Credit.

(AQW 24776/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My officials continue to be engaged with the Department for Work and Pensions on the progress from the operation of the Pathfinder. The Universal Credit Programme in Northern Ireland receive regular updates which will help inform plans for the launch of Universal Credit in Northern Ireland. Officials are continuing to discuss how best the two departments can work together as the Universal Credit Pathfinder is rolled out across Great Britain.

Howard Shiplee, the new Department for Work and Pensions Director General for Universal Credit, will also be visiting Northern Ireland in mid July, providing an opportunity to discuss directly progress not only on the operation of the Pathfinder but plans for the wider rollout of Universal Credit nationally and the impact for Northern Ireland

Housing Executive: Overpayment of Contractors

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how, and when, the Board of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive was involved in the decision to delist four contractors arising from the alleged overpayment of £18m.

(AQW 24783/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that no contractor has been delisted. The position is that the four planned maintenance contractors in question will not receive any new contracts from the Housing Executive until matters relating to planned maintenance have been resolved.

Delay in Answering AQW 1004/11-15

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 24480/11-15, will he now answer parts (ii) and (iii) of the question.

(AQW 24798/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I would advise the Member that a response to AQW 24480/11-15 has already been provided.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, which his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 24827/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I would advise the Member that the Department does not hold the information in the format requested and it is therefore not possible to provide an answer to this question.

Fitness for Work Tests

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department intends to engage with Paul Litchfield as he carries out his independent review of fitness for work tests.

(AQW 24869/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I can confirm that Dr. Paul Litchfield will conduct the fourth Independent Review of the Work Capability Assessment. As with the three previous independent reviews, conducted by Professor Harrington, the fourth review will extend to Northern Ireland.

Officials from my Department have been in contact with Dr Litchfield since his appointment on 26 February 2013 and as part of this year's review, Dr Litchfield will visit Northern Ireland in September 2013. On 10 July I launched the Call for Evidence for the review of the Work Capability Assessment in Northern Ireland and this will inform Dr. Litchfield's independent report which will be laid before the Assembly by the end of 2013.

Fitness for Work Tests

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development, in the event that the Welfare Reform Bill becomes law, what consideration will be given to the progressive nature of conditions such as Parkinson's, cystic fibrosis and multiple sclerosis in (i) fitness for work tests; and (ii) mobility criteria assessments for the Personal Independence Payment.

(AQW 24870/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Welfare Reform Bill contains no proposed changes to the Work Capability Assessment for Employment Support Allowance.

Subject to the Welfare Reform Bill successfully completing its passage through the Assembly, it is anticipated that Personal Independence Payment will be introduced in Northern Ireland in spring 2014.

The assessment criteria for Personal Independence Payment were designed in collaboration with independent specialists in disability, social care and health and there has been extensive engagement with disabled people and their organisations, including three formal consultation exercises which resulted in a number of changes to the criteria. In addition, consultation was recently launched in relation to the Moving Around activity of the Mobility Component of Personal Independence Payment and this will end on 5 August 2013.

The assessment criteria take account of all types of disabilities including physical, sensory, mental, intellectual, cognitive, and neurological impairments. Entitlement is not based on having a particular health condition or impairment but considers the claimant's individual circumstances and the impact of their health condition or impairment on their ability to carry out key everyday activities. A key consideration is not just whether they can complete the activities but that they can do so safely, to an acceptable standard, repeatedly and in a reasonable time period.

Personal Independence Payment has been designed to ensure that decisions on entitlement, award lengths and timing of reviews are appropriate and evidence-based and all awards, regardless of duration, will be reviewed periodically to ensure that the individual continues to receive the correct amount of benefit.

Health Professionals, who will conduct the assessments for Personal Independence Payment, will receive specialist training in assessing the impact of disabilities. As part of the assessment, the Health Professional will be asked to provide advice on when it would be appropriate to review the claim. This advice will be used to inform decisions on the duration of benefit awards and when it would be sensible to review the claim to ascertain if a claimant's circumstances have changed. Where a Health Professional considers that an individual's needs are likely to continue but may increase, as in the case of progressive conditions, the Health Professional should provide advice on a medically appropriate review point to ensure that the case is reviewed and increased support provided where appropriate. In addition, a claimant can ask for their award to be reviewed at anytime if they feel that their condition has deteriorated.

Teenage Kicks Mural at Bridge End, Belfast

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 24576/11-15 to (i) list the bodies that were consulted regarding the removal of the Teenage Kicks mural at Bridge End; and (ii) what criteria is used to establish what constitutes community art.

(AQW 24943/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) The bodies consulted with on the Bridge End Environmental Improvement Scheme were East Belfast Partnership, The Ballymac Friendship Centre, DRD Roads Service and Belfast City Council. Specific discussions in respect of the graffiti were with East Belfast Partnership and the representative of the Ballymac Friendship Centre.
- (ii) There are no formal criteria for establishing what constitutes community art within an area. Officials take advice through local consultation from established community representatives, relevant statutory bodies, including the local council and DRD Roads Service.

Landlord Registration Scheme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the landlord registration scheme.
(AQW 24951/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My original intention was to have Landlord Registration in place by the Summer. However, in order to facilitate the direct payment to landlords of the housing cost element of Universal Credit, it is necessary to make a number of practical changes to implementation. In addition the Head of the Civil Service issued a directive to all Departments that when developing new programmes involving online or telephone interaction with citizens or business services, there should be a presumption in favour of using NI Direct programme. My Department is therefore now working with NI Direct to ensure there is a fully functional landlord registration scheme in place as quickly as possible and certainly before the end of 2013.

Universal Credit: Waiting Period

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the impact of the proposed introduction of a one week waiting period for benefit payments.
(AQW 25002/11-15)

Mr McCausland: On 26 June 2013, as part of the Spending Review, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr George Osborne, announced a further three measures under Welfare Reform. These include a proposal to introduce a seven-day waiting period before new Universal Credit claimants can claim benefit if they have not had a Universal Credit claim in the previous six months, where at least one person is subject to conditionality. It is proposed to introduce this measure in 2015 -16. A full assessment will be made when more details on the proposed changes are available.

Registered Herdkeepers

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 24422/11-15, to detail the total number of registered herd keepers, in each of the last three years. (AQW 24915/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The number of operational registered herd keepers, on 31st March in each of the last three financial years (i.e. 31-3-11, 31-3-12 and 31-3-13), is given in the table below.

Operational Registered Keepers

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Cattle	27,357	27,446	27,226
Sheep	11,994	12,420	12,834
Pigs	1,431	1,527	1,429
Goats	546	541	487

Cruelty to Animals

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the range of offences that can be prosecuted as cruelty to animals; and (ii) the maximum sentence for each offence.

(AQW 24935/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The welfare of animals here is protected by the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. The word "cruelty" does not appear in the Act. There are however, a range of offences relating to activities which may cause an animal to suffer unnecessarily.

- (i) Section 4 of the Act sets out the circumstances in which a person who causes or permits an animal to suffer commits an offence. It is an offence to cause physical or mental suffering, whether by a positive act or an omission, to an animal;
- Section 5 makes it an offence to carry out a prohibited procedure on any protected animal. Prohibited procedures are those which involve interference with the sensitive tissues or bone structure of the animal for example, ear cropping of dogs;
- Section 6 creates a number of offences regarding the cosmetic docking of dogs tails;
- Section 7 creates offences relating to the administration to a protected animal of any poisonous substance or drug without lawful authority or reasonable excuse;
- Section 8 creates a number of offences regarding animal fighting including keeping or training an animal for use in such a fight or organising or attending an animal fight;
- Section 9 creates an offence for failing to ensure the welfare of animals for which a person is responsible; and
- Section 14 creates offences regarding the abandonment of animals for which a person is responsible.
- (ii) Section 31 sets out clearly the penalties for breaches of the Act. A person found guilty of a range of offences under the Act is liable by summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 6 months and/or a fine not exceeding level 5 (currently £5,000). Section 31 also sets out the serious offences which the prosecutor can decide to try either by summary conviction or by indictment. The maximum penalty for conviction on indictment is imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years and/or an unlimited fine.
- As well as the penalties set out above, Section 32 of the Act enables the courts to confiscate an animal from an owner who has been convicted of an offence in relation to that animal. Section 33 confers a power on a court to disqualify a person from owning, keeping or participating in the keeping of animals; and from being party to any arrangements to control or influence the way in which animals are kept.

Cruelty to Animals

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether, in relation to cruelty to animals, convictions can include offences committed against all species of animal, and if not, to detail which animals are excluded.

(AQW 24940/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The welfare of animals here is protected by the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. The word "cruelty" does not appear in the Act, this has been replaced by the term "unnecessary suffering" which is all embracing. Within the Act "animal" means a vertebrate other than man. The Act does not therefore apply to any invertebrate animals.

However, the Department may by regulations, in the future, extend the definition of "animal" so as to include invertebrates of any description but only if the Department is satisfied, on the basis of scientific evidence, that animals of the kind concerned are capable of experiencing pain or suffering.

The offences in Section 4 of the Act in relation specifically to unnecessary suffering apply to all vertebrate animals including wild animals. However, it is important to note that many of the other offences in the Act apply only in relation to "protected animals". A "protected animal" is one which is: (a) commonly domesticated here; (b) is temporarily or permanently under the control of man; or (c) is not living in a wild state. Whether or not an animal is considered a protected animal will therefore be based on the circumstances rather than its species.

Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail all Memoranda of Understanding and Service Level Agreements that the Central Investigation Service holds with any other organisation.

(AQW 24941/11-15)

They include the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, the Special European Union Programmes Body, the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure, the Public Prosecution Service and the NI Prison Service.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much her Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24992/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Details of the spend on branded apparel, defined as clothing bearing the departmental logo, for non-frontline staff is set out in the table below. The spend information for 2010/11 is incomplete as records which identified spend for front and non frontline staff from April 2010 to 12 December 2010 were destroyed when the store area in Dundonald House was flooded during the heavy rainfall in June 2012.

Year	Spend
2010-11 (13 Dec 2010 – 31 March 2011)	£30.67

2012-13	£967.34

Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has lobbied Central Investigation Service staff in relation to a case they were investigating.

(AQW 24999/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have not lobbied Central Investigation Service staff in relation to any case they were investigating.

Department of Education

Nursery School Admissions

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many children in each Education and Library Board area did not receive their first preference choice of nursery school.

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The pre-school admissions process is preference based: therefore those children not offered a place by their 1st preference setting may be offered a place in another setting listed by their parents as a preference on their application.

The table below details the number of children in each education and library board area who were not offered a place by their first preference provider broken down between statutory nursery and voluntary and private pre-school settings.

At the end of the 2013/14 pre-school admissions process, 99.9% of target aged children, whose parents fully engaged with the process, were offered a funded place in a pre-school setting.

Preschool Admissions

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many children in each Education and Library Board area did not receive their first preference choice of pre-school provision.

(AQW 24957/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The pre-school admissions process is preference based: therefore those children not offered a place by their 1st preference setting may be offered a place in another setting listed by their parents as a preference on their application.

The table below details the number of children in each education and library board area who were not offered a place by their first preference provider broken down between statutory nursery and voluntary and private pre-school settings.

Nursery School Provision: Cookstown

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education whether extra capacity is available for over-subscribed nursery schools and nursery units in the Cookstown District Council area.

(AQW 25018/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Figures provided by the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) indicate that at the end of stage two of the pre-school application process, only one child whose parents had participated in the full process had not been allocated a pre-school placement.

A number of parents decided not to nominate further preferences at stage two and a number of children, therefore, remain unplaced. However, I understand that the Southern Education and Library Board Pre-School Education Advisory Group is actively seeking to engage a new provider, located in Cookstown, to cater for the unplaced children in the area.

In relation to the statutory sector, I will consider all Development Proposals submitted to me in light of demand.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25026/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

Number of Legal Cases Defended Since 2007	14*
Number of Legal Cases Lost by the Department	4
Payments made to Date for Legal Cases Lost by the Department	£1,762,000

* For 6 of these cases final judgements have not yet been received.

Hospitality

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19484/11-15, whether the figures includes the hospitality spend by arm's length bodies in 2011/12; and to detail any hospitality spend by arm's length bodies in 2011/12.

(AQW 25045/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The response to AQW 19484/11-15 does not include the Department's arm's-length bodies. The amount spent on hospitality by the Department's arm-length bodies in 2011/12 was £638k.

Preschool Admissions

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many children in each constituency did not receive their first choice pre-school place.

(AQW 25085/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The pre-school admissions process is preference based: therefore those children not offered a place by their 1st preference setting may be offered a place in another setting listed by their parents as a preference on their application.

Information on the number of children who did not receive their first choice pre-school place is not held in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Education and Library Boards are, however, able to provide the information requested broken down by District Council.

Savings Delivery Plan

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education why his Department has yet to produce a savings delivery plan.

(AQW 25086/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Your assertion that my Department has not produced a Savings Delivery Plan is incorrect. A Savings Delivery Plan for the Budget 2011-15 period was first published by my Department in 2011. This has been kept under review and updated to reflect changes in spending plans. Any subsequent revisions have been notified to the Education Committee, with the latest version of the plan the subject of discussion with the Committee on 24 April 2013. The plan is published on the Department's website at www.deni.gov.uk/index/about-the-department/8-admin-of-education-pg/departamental-budgets-and-accounts/budget\_2011-2015\_savings\_delivery\_plan.htm. ### Savings Delivery Plan

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to outline the cooperation to date between his Department and the Department of Finance and Personnel on a savings delivery plan.

(AQW 25088/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Executive did not define nor agree savings targets for each Department across the Budget 2011-15 period. Rather it was left to each Minister to deliver their priorities and Programme for Government commitments from the resources allocated to them.

In view of this I agreed and published a clear and transparent Savings Delivery Plan (SDP) which sets out the level of savings to be delivered by my Department between 2011-12 and 2014-15 so as to remain within budget. I remain firmly of the view that the SDP for education was for me to agree as Minister and I did not see the need for engagement with the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Free School Meals

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education, in light of his announcement to extend the free school meals eligibility criteria by September 2014, what similar support will be available for Year 8 students who are starting post-primary education in September 2013.

(AQW 25091/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: On 11 June 2013 I announced my intention to apply the same eligibility criteria for free school meals for both primary and postprimary pupils. This will mean that postprimary pupils from the lowest income families will be supported with access to free school meals in the same way as primary pupils.

I am pleased to advise that an estimated 15,000 children from lower income households will benefit as a result of the change. It will also ensure that the postprimary schools they attend will be supported in a similar way. This will require further additional funding which I will make available.

The changes to the criteria will take effect from September 2014 hence students starting postprimary education in the 2013/14 school year will continue to be assessed for free school meals eligibility under the existing free school meal criteria.

All applications for free school meals for the 2014/15 school year, however, will be assessed under the extended free school meal eligibility criteria. Consequently, in the 2014/15 academic year those eligible will include a number of students who may be ineligible under the current criteria.

I would emphasise, therefore, that if an application for free school meals for the 2013/14 school year is deemed ineligible under the current criteria this should not deter parents or guardians from applying for free school meals for the 2014/15 school year.

Qualifying Period for Graduate Teachers

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, in light of the concerns raised by teachers who graduated before 2010, for his assessment of the impact of the requirement by some schools that applicants for teaching posts, who are not in permanent teaching posts, must be qualified in the period from June 2010 up to and including the June 2013 cohort of graduate teachers. (AQW 25115/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The requirement that teachers must be qualified in the period from June 2010 to June 2013 applies only to the additional 230 teaching posts being provided by the Delivering Social Change Signature Project on improving literacy and numeracy as announced by OFMdfM - "An additional 230 recent graduate teachers who are not currently in work will be employed to deliver tuition, where appropriate, for children in primary and post primary schools who are currently struggling to achieve even basic educational standards."

A copy of an extract of the project implementation plan, which explains the rationale for the June 2010 date, is provided below<sup>1</sup>.

This worthwhile project will provide much needed employment opportunities for many newly qualified teachers (NQTs).

I am aware of the concerns raised by teachers who graduated prior to June 2010; over the last few years I have taken a number of significant steps to improve employment prospects of NQTs. These steps include:

- urging employers to give preference to NQTs and experienced non retired teachers when vacancies arise;
- providing guidance to schools about using the Substitute Teacher Register when booking substitute teachers, thus enabling schools to identify younger teachers;
- challenging schools and employing authorities as to why prematurely retired teachers are being re-employed in preference to NQTs or non-retired teachers;
- making schools liable for the total cost of employing prematurely retired teachers;
- restricting the pay of prematurely retired teachers who have received discretionary compensation ("added years") but who subsequently return to teaching.

Recent Graduate Teachers, defined as those who have graduated from June 2010, year-on-year, up to and including the potential cohort of graduates in June 2013, who are not in a permanent teaching post are eligible to apply for the 230 additional teaching posts being made available to support selected schools deliver the two-year Delivering Social Change Signature Project to improve Literacy and Numeracy.

In furtherance of the stated policy aims of the Northern Ireland Executive and in keeping with all the legal requirements to ensure employment equality, this programme has been developed in consultation with the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland and the Teaching Unions. It takes account of the Equality Commission's publication 'Age Discrimination in Northern Ireland - A Guide for Employers' and relevant case law.

The objective justification for establishing eligibility from the year 2010, as an interpretation of the term "recent", is based on statistical information from GTCNI issued in Jan 2013. (Please see Table 1).

These statistics confirm that in June 2010 fewer than 50% (i.e. 45%) of the recently graduated teachers were gaining employment. Furthermore they demonstrate that from this year up to and including graduation in June 2012 there has been a 15% year-on-year decline in the number of graduates gaining employment either in a permanent or significant temporary capacity.

Year of Graduation	Totals for all institutions, all programmes and all subjects
	No of Graduates	Currently registered	% of total graduates who are currently registered	Currently registered with an Open job record	% of those registered who are employed
June 2012	629	475	75.52%	78	16.42%
June 2011	649	524	80.74%	160	30.53%
June 2010	681	540	79.30%	243	45.00%
June 2009	691	558	80.75%	335	60.04%
June 2008	735	591	80.41%	379	64.13%
June 2007	812	644	79.31%	482	74.84%

When these statistics are further analysed by age (please see Table 2 below) it can be clearly demonstrated that the youngest age band (i.e. 24 years and under) constitutes only 1% of the total current active working teaching population locally.

The next age band (25-29 years) accounts for a total of 10% of the total active teaching population. These statistics, demonstrate that setting eligibility criteria from June 2010 will target the “24 and under” and “25-29” age bands which, when combined, constitute a smaller proportion of the total number of teachers employed (i.e.11.05%) compared with the majority of other single age bands.

Such information serves to support the proposition that to define “recent graduate teachers” as those who have graduated from June 2010, in effect aims to target the cohort of qualified teachers who are experiencing the greatest difficulty in securing employment. To widen the scope of eligibility beyond June 2010, to encompass other graduate year groups, would in fact dilute the objective to target teachers who are most disadvantaged in terms of their ability to secure meaningful employment.

As the eligibility criterion is widened so would there be a consequential increase in the number of applicants. This would have a detrimental impact on recent graduate teachers on the basis that they would be the first candidates eliminated in a shortlisting exercise which serves to facilitate a manageable shortlist for interview by increasing the work experience criterion. Therefore, defining eligibility as those who have graduated from June 2010 up to and including the cohort who will graduate in 2013 is deemed to be in keeping with the OFMDFM’s target to recruit 230 recently graduated teachers.

Teachers by Age Range	Totals	Percentage
24 and under	204	1.05%
25 to 29	1940	10.00%
30 to 34	3348	17.27%
35 to 39	3349	17.27%
40 to 44	3312	17.08%
45 to 49	2525	13.02%
50 to 54	2234	11.52%
55 to 59	2042	10.53%
60 to 64	406	2.09%
65 and over	31	0.16%
Totals	19,391	100%

Consideration has been given to the legitimacy of targeting recently graduated teachers, as has been referenced in the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister’s announcement on the Delivering Social Change Programme: “An additional 230 recent graduate teachers who are not currently in work will be employed to deliver tuition, where appropriate, for children in primary and post primary schools who are currently struggling to achieve even basic educational standards”.

Consideration focussed initially on the skills set required to support raising standards in literacy and numeracy and it has been determined that in many instances the appropriate skills set can be accessed through experienced teachers employed within a school.<sup>4</sup>

This approach is based on advice received from the Equality Commission. It is supported by the statistical information on the composition of the teaching population accessed through GTCNI (table 1 and 2 above) and is a positive action measure deemed appropriate, under the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2006.

The Regulations only permit two types of positive action to be taken by employers. These are:

- affording persons of a particular age or age group access to facilities for training which would help to fit them for particular work;
- encouraging persons of a particular age or age group to take advantage of opportunities for doing particular work.

The Regulations state that these two types of lawful positive action may only be taken where, in regard to the work in question, it reasonably appears to the employer that taking the action will prevent or compensate for disadvantages linked to age suffered by persons of the targeted age or age group. In addition to the educational benefit of this programme, it provides an opportunity to combat the disadvantage faced by recent graduate teachers in trying to obtain employment in the profession. Whilst the opportunities are limited to the two year period of the implementation of this programme it is anticipated that it will nonetheless substantially enhance the employment opportunities of this cohort of recently graduated teachers.

In the predominant number of cases where the school eligible to access resources under this programme has the capacity to second an existing teacher, the recruitment exercise would seek to appoint a supernumerary teacher to backfill the release of the seconded teacher.

It is in this set of circumstances that meaningful employment, on a sustained two year basis, should be offered to recent graduate teachers as per the stated objective from the OFMDFM.

In line with this proposal it would then be reasonable to assume that in the main such an approach would serve to advantage younger people, but not exclusively so, as it could also be argued that anyone of any age could be a new or recently graduated teacher i.e. on the basis of a 35 year old re-training and being eligible. However, if it is accepted that younger people would in fact benefit from this approach the concept of "intergenerational fairness" ( i.e. facilitating access to employment by young people, enabling older people to remain in the workforce, sharing limited opportunities to work in a profession fairly between the generations) maybe a relevant factor in this case.

It would have to be highlighted that there will be no displacement of older teachers as a consequence of this programme as the additional resource will be supernumerary to the schools staffing structure. In addition, it could be argued that the secondment opportunities for experienced (older) teachers offer the chance to up-skill, capacity build and by implication create much needed employment opportunities to (potentially younger) recently graduated teachers.

Department for Employment and Learning

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much his Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24928/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): The Department did not incur any expenditure on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in the last three years.

One Plan

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether a business case from the University of Ulster on expanding the Magee campus and the physical expansion of the campus on the grounds of Foyle College would assist the target of 9,400 places as contained in the One Plan.

(AQW 24969/11-15)

Dr Farry: Although the One Plan contains the aspiration of a university with 9,400 full-time equivalent students by 2020, the current Programme for Government does not contain such a commitment. Rather the Programme for Government contains an undertaking to develop the One Plan for the regeneration of Derry/Londonderry, incorporating the key sites at Fort George and Ebrington.

If a proposal were to be taken forward to expand the Magee campus in line with the vision set out in the One Plan, then a full economic appraisal would be required. To date the university has submitted a strategic outline case (SOC) which is a precursor to the full business case. However, the full business case will need to prove that there is sufficient demand for higher education places in Derry~Londonderry and that the decision to fund the expansion of Magee would not be to the detriment of higher education in other parts of Northern Ireland. There is a risk that a business case would be unable to prove this and approval for expansion may not follow.

On the other hand, if higher education numbers in Northern Ireland are increased, as has been done over the last few years, there is no specific requirement for a business case. The funding of places is calculated annually on a formula funding basis and is approved by myself and this applies to any additional places made available during the year.

The One Plan itself contains an interim target of 1,000 additional undergraduate places by 2015. I have been working to increase the number of undergraduate places throughout the Northern Ireland higher education sector since taking office and, to date, I have allocated an additional 1,200 places to the sector with 572 of these going to the University of Ulster. The university has undertaken to deploy all these places at its Magee campus. I believe that this represents excellent progress towards the 2015 target.

I remain fully committed to the expansion of higher education provision in Northern Ireland and will continue to seek opportunities to secure the resources necessary to increase the numbers further. I have, for example, made a bid for an additional 450 undergraduate places under the Delivering Social Change framework. If the bid were to be successful, this would mark yet another significant step towards achieving the 2015 target.

I believe that my approach to the expansion of the Northern Ireland Higher Education sector, together with the University of Ulster's commitment to deploy its additional places at the Magee campus will benefit all institutions, our economy and best assist Magee in realising the interim target of 1,000 additional places by 2015.

Postgraduate Students: Financial Support

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what financial support or grant package is available to full-time PhD students carrying out non-funded research as part of their degree.

(AQW 24972/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides the funding to Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster to administer the postgraduate studentship awards scheme. Historically the Universities have allocated over 95% of these awards to PhD students. The universities have always selected, by open competition, the students to receive these awards, within the limits of the funding available. This year I announced funding for an additional 100 PhD places in economically relevant subjects split between Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster. Furthermore, I aim to increase the number of places year on year to double the total number of PhD awards to 1,000 by 2020.

The Department for Employment and Learning funded postgraduate studentship awards are non-means tested and non-repayable. The PhD studentships include a maintenance award for the student of £13,726 plus tuition fees and other expenses.

An alternative source of funding is a Professional and Career Development Loan (PCDL). This is a bank loan which is designed to help people pay for work-related learning to help gain experience, training and qualifications to improve job skills or launch a new career. The borrower must repay the money borrowed but, with PCDLs, the interest is paid on the loan while the borrower is learning and for up to one month afterwards. A learner can borrow anything between £300 and £10,000 to help fund up to two years of learning (or up to three years if the course includes one year of relevant practical work experience). Further information is available by telephoning 0800100900 or visiting:

<https://nationalcareersservice.direct.gov.uk/>

University of Ulster: Magee Campus

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why he did not bid in the June Monitoring Round for the physical expansion of the University of Ulster - Magee campus.

(AQW 25001/11-15)

Dr Farry: The monitoring rounds within the financial year are designed to deal with in-year pressures and easements.

Funding transferred between programmes and between departments must be used by 31 March otherwise the funding is lost as it cannot be carried forward. In-year monitoring is, therefore, not a suitable mechanism to use when considering a project such as the expansion of the Magee campus of the University of Ulster which would require additional funding on a recurrent basis.

ESOL Provision Pilot

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the ESOL provision pilot to asylum seekers since its introduction; and to detail (i) how many people have participated in the pilot; and (ii) how many participants, who may have been given refugee status during the course, were able to obtain employment.

(AQW 25056/11-15)

Dr Farry: In August 2012 my Department introduced a pilot programme to enable colleges to deliver free English for Speakers of other Languages (ESOL) classes to asylum seekers and their dependants. The six months eligibility rule for access to ESOL and other further education provision for asylum seekers was also removed. Asylum seekers are defined as those who have applied to the UK Border Agency for refugee status.

Belfast Metropolitan College is the main provider of ESOL courses delivered to asylum seekers in Northern Ireland. Early indications from the college are that in the period from 1 August 2012 to 31 March 2013 some 123 asylum seekers participated in the pilot programme gaining the language skills necessary to help them integrate into the community and encourage a sense of belonging and equality. Since 1 April 2013, a further 64 asylum seekers have been assessed, although they are a mixture of returning learners and new applicants.

The pilot programme will be completed at the end of August 2013, after which my officials will be carrying out a full evaluation. The aim of the evaluation will be to ensure that the new policy is working effectively, and to consider if it is necessary to make any changes to its operation. The evaluation is not expected to be completed until the end of October 2013, and I will then be in a position to confirm the actual number of programme participants. Where possible, the evaluation will attempt to identify the number of participants who secured refugee status during the course of the pilot and who were, consequently, able to obtain employment.

I can also confirm that the current pilot arrangements will remain in place during the period of the evaluation.

Supporting Refugees

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what plans his Department has to support refugees in improving their chances of employment.

(AQW 25057/11-15)

Dr Farry: When asylum seekers are granted a positive decision (refugee status with indefinite leave to remain, Humanitarian Protection, leave outside the immigration rules or Discretionary Leave to Remain) they can claim state benefit on the same terms as a British National. Refugees may, therefore, claim Jobseekers Allowance and have access to work and training programmes.

All asylum seekers with refugee status are issued with a status document (which grants the leave) and a letter from the Home Office confirming this. These documents detail the type of leave that has been granted and statements relating to their right to work; and access to the NHS and social services.

As a condition for receipt of JSA, claimants must attend fortnightly interviews at their local Jobs and Benefits Office or JobCentre, where they receive tailored support from a Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) Personal Adviser and access to DEL programmes and services to help them into work.

My Department also provides English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) courses as part of its mainstream further education provision. Having the opportunity to develop English language and employment skills is of vital importance to refugees. It provides economic independence, and enables refugees to integrate better within their local community. Colleges may charge a small fee for provision, with concession fees applicable to those entitled to means tested benefits. Refugees can also access the full range of further education provision.

In addition, although not aimed specifically at refugees, DEL funds a migrant workers employment rights project to deliver employment rights clinics and advice and information to migrant workers. The Employment Agency Inspectorate also prioritises inspections and complaints investigations if there is a concern for workers and work-seekers from migrant communities, and has provided information seminars on migrant workers' rights along with other agencies.

DEL has a place on a number of forums including the NI Strategic Migration Partnership, the Race Equality Forum's Immigration Sub-group and Belfast City Council's migrant forum, all of which are concerned with migrant worker (including asylum seeker and refugee) issues. DEL is also a member of DOJ's Organised Crime Task Force, Immigration and Human Trafficking sub-group.

Postgraduate Students: Financial Support

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether his Department plans to provide funding and support to students wishing to study to Masters and Doctorate level, given the lack of employment opportunities.

(AQW 25146/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides the funding of some £20 million to Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster to administer the postgraduate studentship awards scheme. This enables the universities to offer fully funded post-graduate places. Around 500 places are currently available. Historically, the Universities have allocated over 95% of these awards to PhD students. They select, by competition, the students to fill these awards within the limits of funding available. This year I announced further funding for an additional 300 PhD places over the next three years in economically relevant subjects. My aim is to double the number of places available by 2020.

The Department for Employment and Learning funded postgraduate studentship awards are non-means tested and non-repayable. They include an award to the student of £13,726 for PhD studentships (or £6,863 for Masters studentships) plus tuition fees and other expenses.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

NI2012

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for a breakdown of the (i) £17,836,506 Tourism Impact; and (ii) £42,200,518 Economic Impact, as identified in the evaluation of ni2012.
(AQW 24774/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): The ni2012 evaluation identified that the economic impact was £17,836,506 and the tourism impact was £42,200,518.

(i) Economic impact - £17 million

The economic impact measures the net additional benefit to the economy from outside Northern Ireland. It includes expenditure from visitors from out of state coming to Northern Ireland because of ni2012; expenditure by event organisers in Northern Ireland; and income generated by event organisers. It excludes any expenditure by event organisers that went out of state, for example artist fees.

(ii) Tourism impact - £42 million

The tourism impact includes the above economic impact and adds in the impact from domestic tourism. A domestic visitor is defined as someone who travels to an event or short break outside their local authority area. The tourism impact does not include those who attended events within their own local area.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much her Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 24785/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment does not provide branded apparel for non-frontline staff.

Wind Turbines

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the actions her Department is taking to connect wind turbines to the electricity network.
(AQW 24860/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The connection of wind turbines to the electricity grid is a matter for Northern Ireland Electricity (NIE) operating under a regulatory framework determined by the Utility Regulator and as detailed in the company's licence. My Department has no statutory role or remit in this process.

Red Tape

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the future involvement of her Department in the recently announced review of business red tape; (ii) how she will involve the business sector in this review; (iii) how the review will take account of other ongoing work such as the Review of Employment Law by the Department for Employment and Learning.
(AQW 24893/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) My Department will take the lead role in ensuring completion of this review. Consideration is currently being given to identifying the best approach to conducting the review.
- (ii) The review will provide business with the opportunity to share and articulate their views on red tape, and I will also want it to draw upon the experiences of the UK Government in delivering its regulatory reform policies.
- (iii) This review of business red tape will build on the commitments to better regulation that are already being taken across the Executive, including the Review of Employment Law being undertaken by the Department for Employment and Learning.

Hydraulic Fracturing

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given her statement in the Impartial Reporter of 28 March 2013 on hydraulic fracturing in Co. Fermanagh, 'Gas exploration should have a relatively small impact on the local community and landscape', (i) to outline how many exploration wells and appraisal wells she believes would be required to determine shale gas potential in the area; and (ii) for her assessment of the view of a geologist from the Petroleum Affairs

Division of the Department of Communications, Energy and Natural Resources who stated that 'many exploration and appraisal wells' would be required to assess the potential for shale gas.

(AQW 24916/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) The sole Petroleum Licence currently issued by my Department in respect of Co. Fermanagh is held by Tamboran Resources Pty Ltd. Tamboran has indicated that a test site of about 6 acres within which about 7 test wells would be drilled should be sufficient to establish the technical and commercial viability of the shale gas resources in Fermanagh.
- (ii) It is important to distinguish between exploration and production phases. If the DCENR geologist means that extended production testing from a substantial number of wells would be required to define the variability in the shale gas potential within the sedimentary basin, then my Department would agree. Indeed the characterisation of production from the Bundoran Shale Formation throughout the basin would inevitably continue into the development or production phase rather than be restricted to the exploration phase. Many production wells could also be termed appraisal wells in this context.

Invest NI: Job Promotion and Creation

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline (i) the reason that all information regarding jobs promoted and created by InvestNI is not made publicly available, given that public money is funding this work; and (ii) how the accountability of InvestNI can be demonstrated in the absence of this information.

(AQW 24975/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) All information regarding the number of jobs promoted by Invest NI is publicly available and is regularly reported on in press releases and in the Invest NI Annual Report. Where job creation data is currently available, such as for the Jobs Fund, this is also made publicly available.

Invest NI has recently developed a system to enable the reporting of jobs created; however, as offers typically have a three to five year life span, a detailed and meaningful analysis of this job creation data will not be possible until the end of each contract period. In the interim Invest NI will continue to report on the number of jobs promoted, as this is the only employment-based measure available, apart from the Jobs Fund, when an offer of assistance is provided.

- (i) Invest NI's performance has been scrutinised by the Northern Ireland Audit Office whose report stated that performance in Invest NI's most recent Corporate Plan period has been the strongest to date. They also stated that "Invest NI's performance reporting has been relatively clear and transparent".

Israel: Illegal Settlements

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail any current operations, within her Department's remit, that either directly or indirectly assist illegal Israeli settlements.

(AQW 25046/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Department does not have any current operations.

Ethical Trade and Investment

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she would consider banning trade and investment that is unethical, damaging to human rights and complicit in illegal activities such as the settlement of occupied territory.

(AQW 25049/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI is responsible for targeting overseas markets that represent the best opportunity for Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) or Northern Ireland exports. That is not to say that the agency acts without regard to other factors.

When considering whether to target a new market for either FDI or export development, advice is sought from colleagues at both the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and UK Trade and Investment on human rights and other issues.

I am therefore satisfied that any of the countries in which Invest NI is active can be considered suitable trading partners.

Broadband: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action is being taken to improve broadband facilities in North Down.

(AQW 25075/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has initiated the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project, which aims to ensure that, by 2015, virtually all premises in Northern Ireland, including North Down, are able to avail of a broadband download speed of at least 2Mbps, and at least 90% of premises are provided with superfast broadband, with speeds in excess of 24Mbps.

DETI proposed a potential area of intervention and engaged with the industry and the public in September 2012 to help affirm where it might intervene. The area of intervention has to comply with State Aid rules and has been subject to continual refinement, both from the market and consumers.

On 5 July 2013, my Department published the outcome of this initial engagement, coupled with a refined intervention area, which is subject to a further public consultation. I can confirm that, at this time, a number of postcodes in the North Down area have been included for consideration.

Broadband: Next Generation Project

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there are plans to upgrade rural broadband service in the Blackskull area, under the Next Generation Broadband Project.
(AQW 25077/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Next Generation Broadband Project has now been completed.

The Department has initiated a new Broadband Project, the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project. (NIBIP)

The intervention area is being finalised and a consultation document has recently been issued. I can confirm that, at this time, the Blackskull area (BT25 1JL), has been included for consideration under the superfast element of the project.

Electricity Generation: Cost

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the average cost of generating one kilowatt of electricity from (i) coal; (ii) natural gas; (iii) wind; (iv) hydro; (v) solar; and (vi) nuclear.
(AQW 25136/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Information on estimated, levelised generation costs has been published in a report by the Department of Climate Change and relates to the main technologies likely to be deployed in the UK over the next 15 years.

The report acknowledges that these cost estimates are highly sensitive to a range of factors, such as the underlying data and assumptions used, including assumptions on capital costs, fuel and carbon costs, operating costs and load factors.

The October 2012 Report on Electricity Generation Costs can be referenced at:

Electricity Generation: Wind

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the approximate number of megawatts currently being taken from the national grid by wind farms in order to provide the power necessary to assist in generating electricity from wind.
(AQW 25138/11-15)

Mrs Foster: According to information provided by Northern Ireland Electricity, during the period 1 April 2012 to 31 March 2013, participating wind farms i.e. those selling electricity into the Single Electricity Market, imported a total of 1,113 MWh of electricity. This is equivalent to 0.13% of the 868,573 MWh of electricity exported by these wind farms over the same period.

Department of the Environment

Flooding: Drumnakilly

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what action he intends to take to bring a resolution to the flooding issue with the quarry in Drumnakilly, given that the situation is impacting on the cancer treatment of a local resident.
(AQW 18546/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): I refer the Member to the answer of AQW 18854/11-15.

Flooding: Drumnakilly

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment when the flooding in Drumnakilly, County Tyrone was first reported to his Department; and what action departmental organisations have taken to resolve this issue.
(AQW 18854/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have personally visited the affected residents and I have made it very clear that every stone will be turned over to address this issue. I have deployed a series of interventions in doing so, as I believe this is an intolerable situation.

Flooding is primarily an issue for the Department of Agriculture and Rural Developments (DARD) Rivers Agency. However I am acutely aware of the issues surrounding this site and in addition to the flooding issue there are planning and water quality issues currently ongoing, which do fall within my Department's remit.

I directed officials in the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to take the lead on finding a resolution to this issue acknowledging that issues of planning and water fall to DOE and flooding fall to DARD. NIEA encouraged a multi-agency approach to this issue.

As part of this approach, at a meeting between NIEA and Rivers Agency, on 24 January 2013, it was identified that a number of investigatory actions were required to identify the specific cause or causes of the flooding and ultimately to determine how the issue can be resolved.

There are no designated watercourses in the immediate vicinity and maintenance of drainage systems is the responsibility of landowners, however NIEA, Rivers Agency and Road Service have undertaken investigations on the site to determine the cause of the flooding. These investigations revealed two significant blockages. One blockage consisted of a plastic fertiliser bag in a gully on the McKiernan's property and the second blockage, in the storm line below the McKiernan's property, consisted of silt and other debris.

The plastic bag blockage was removed and the sand and gravel cleared by jetting the pipeline. Once the 2nd blockage was removed the floodwater began to dissipate immediately. A follow up Rivers Agency inspection of the site, on 14 February 2013, confirmed that the flooding had ceased.

Further investigatory works of the drainage system around the property at this location were undertaken by Rivers Agency on 8 March 2013. This investigation has identified a number of issues related to the culvert network system. Rivers Agency has informed me that a condition report and CCTV surveys of this network will be forwarded to the residents for their information and action.

There continues to be an issue with discharge of water from the sand quarry upstream of the affected property. There is no record of the quarry owner having received consent from Rivers Agency, to discharge storm water from the quarry. In order to get retrospective consent the Quarry owner made application on 31 January 2013 in accordance with the Drainage (NI) Order 1973 to discharge storm water into the upstream end of the culvert that runs through the affected property. I am advised that Rivers Agency is currently withholding consent until a detailed drainage assessment has been carried out and submitted to the Agency for approval.

I will write to Minister O'Neill on this issue to express both my thanks for the efforts of her Agency so far in resolving this issue in the short term, but also to ask her to make every effort to bring this discharge under her Department's regulatory control.

The owner of the site has previously been prosecuted by NIEA, found guilty and been fined a total of £40,000 for past incidents of pollution. NIEA has also submitted a file to the Public Prosecution Service recommending a further prosecution be taken against the site owner for a number of further pollution incidents that occurred between November 2011 and April 2012.

In addition to this action, an Article 8 Prevention Notice was issued to the site owner under the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999. This required that the discharge from the site must cease with immediate effect and that an application for the discharge must be made to the Department. Adequate treatment facilities to ensure compliance with any consent issued are also to be provided. Once the Discharge Consent has been obtained the discharge can recommence.

An application for the Water Order consent has not yet been received by the Department and this is not expected until the site owner has received Rivers Agency Consent to discharge the quantity required. NIEA have raised the need to consider the application, with Rivers Agency, as a matter of urgency.

NIEA has visited the site and have confirmed that a non-polluting discharge is occurring. As this discharge is a combination of natural drainage and natural springs the Department is currently considering whether sufficient evidence exists to support a prosecution for breach of the Article 8 Notice.

DOE Planning has also previously prosecuted the owner of the quarry, for an unauthorised development, and are currently progressing an existing enforcement case in relation to the location of a washing plant on the site.

Moreover, planning applications for the site were presented to Omagh District Council on 14 February 2013 with recommendations for refusal, which the Council concurred with.

More recently, there have been some further developments in respect of proposed action including possible remedial action by the quarry owner. I have written to a local resident in respect of these matters

This is representative of the seriousness with which I take this matter. The conduct of the owner - in the past and now is unacceptable and these measures aim to take action and mitigate/end flooding risks.

Parkgate Quarry: Planning Application

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the Parkgate Quarry planning application. (AQW 20086/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Following the deferral meeting the Department undertook a further round of consultations regarding the issues raised by objectors and a number of local Councillors.

Following this both Rivers Agency and NIEA asked for further information. Rivers Agency requested a drainage assessment (received on 26 March 2013) and has confirmed that a hydrological survey is not required. NIEA Natural Heritage asked for an updated newt survey (received 20 June 2013).

This information will be advertised as required by the EIA regulations. Given the public interest in the application, advertisement will be after the July fortnight holidays. A period for public comment and consultation will then take place. My officials will bring this application back to Antrim Borough Council for consideration once all comments and consultation responses have been received and considered.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Drivers' Registration Details

Mr Ross asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the companies that paid for drivers' registration details from the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) in the last financial year; and (ii) the total amount that DVA received from these sources. (AQW 21813/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Vehicle licensing is an excepted matter which is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Transport. It is administered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) under a formal agreement with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) of the Department for Transport.

In relation to the release of information, DVA acts in accordance with the policy set by DVLA. The relevant legislation permitting the release of information from the vehicles register is regulation 27 (1) (e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002 which states "(1) The Secretary of State may make any particulars contained in the register available for use - ... (e) by any person who can show to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that he has reasonable cause for wanting the particulars to be made available to him".

Under these provisions, vehicle keeper data is released to a range of undertakings such as finance companies, car park enforcement companies, insurance companies, garages and solicitors.

The table below shows the main companies to which vehicle keeper information was released within the last financial year (April 2012 to March 2013).

The DVA does not sell keeper details but, a £2.50 or £5.00 administrative fee (dependant on the nature of the enquiry) is charged to cover the cost of dealing with requests under the reasonable cause provisions. In the last financial year, the total revenue received for release of keeper information to companies was £44,912.50. This revenue goes to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency of the Department for Transport.

However, I am concerned about the release of information and have written to DfT in that regard and the conduct of car park companies. I would refer the matter to AQW 21814/11-15 in that regard.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Drivers' Registration Details

Mr Ross asked the Minister of the Environment what importance is placed by the Driver and Vehicle Agency on drivers' data protection; and how his Department ensures the integrity of companies who pay for getting information on drivers.

Mr Attwood: Vehicle licensing is an excepted matter which is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Transport. It is not a devolved matter. It is administered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) under a formal agreement with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) of the Department for Transport.

In relation to the release of information, DVA is governed by the policy as set by DVLA. The relevant legislation permitting the release of information from the vehicles register is regulation 27 (1) (e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002 which states “(1) The Secretary of State may make any particulars contained in the register available for use - ... (e) by any person who can show to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that he has reasonable cause for wanting the particulars to be made available to him”.

Some of the circumstances considered to be ‘reasonable cause’ include

- matters of road safety
- events that occur as a result of vehicle use
- the enforcement of road traffic legislation
- the collection of taxes

Enquirers are required to give full details of why they want the information and how it will be used and DVA evaluates this information very carefully, in line with procedures and on a case by case basis, before deciding if the information will be disclosed.

The evidence that enquirers are required to produce varies depending on the nature of the enquiry. For example, enquirers are asked to provide details of their Companies House registration, if applicable, and their Data Protection Registration Number. Enquirers may also be required to produce further supporting documentation, such as a court order, a copy of a finance agreement, or a copy of a landowner’s agreement. If the enquirer is unable to provide the documentation required, the information is not disclosed and the application is rejected.

The DVA takes its responsibility to protect personal details on the vehicle register seriously and any complaints about alleged abuse of information supplied are investigated fully. Abuses would result in future requests being refused. Additionally, any legitimate complaints about information obtained unlawfully would be passed to the Information Commissioner to consider prosecution.

As a result of careful handling of these enquiries there have been very few legitimate complaints from customers in Northern Ireland, none of which have identified abuse of the facility to obtain information for unlawful or malicious purposes.

There is a particular arrangement entered into by DVLA in relation to the release of information to companies which manage car parks. Again, DVA is governed in this regard by the arrangement DfT have entered into. I have concerns about this arrangement – I met the BPA in London on 8 March 2013, together with one of their members (Civil Enforcement Ltd.). As I outlined my concerns including: punitive “fines”, failure to properly advertise “terms and conditions”, the appearance of the “demand” and its contents, no right of appeal (etc).

Since then, I have met the Chief Executive of BPA in Belfast and received unsatisfactory answers to a series of questions and issues. As a result, I have taken a series of further actions:

- Written to BPA repeating concerns that the approach of BPA is to protect its fee paying members, not the customer;
- Written to DRD suggesting that DRD should review its membership of BPA;
- Asked for Counsels advice on the legal basis on which BPA members issue and seek payment of “penalties”;
- Sent a letter to DfT requesting a review by DfT of the code of practice issued by BPA and it’s evident inadequacies and how the release of driven information should be handled meanwhile;
- A ‘notice’ has been drafted for release to the Northern Ireland public so that the public know more fully their entitlements.

I am determined that aggressive conduct is addressed and the industry better regulated and the customers protected.

Single-use Plastic Bag Levy

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of the Environment for an estimate of how much capital will be raised by the Single Use Plastic Bag levy in the first financial year of its operation.

(AQO 3845/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The primary purpose of the levy is to protect the environment by reducing the estimated 250 million bags used in Northern Ireland every year. The amount of revenue raised through the levy will be dependent on how shoppers adjust their behaviour in response to the levy. Total revenue estimates are £1.7m in 2013/14 and £3.4m in 2014/15. These estimates are lower than previous assessments of £2.3m and £4.6m respectively. These are adjusted figures, informed by the recent Welsh experience, reduced from the £2.3million and £4.6million respectively in recent assessments.

Environmental Enforcement

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 20926/11-15, whether the original minerals Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) screenings that were reviewed by the Strategic Planning Division’s Minerals Team, with assistance from the Development Management Guidance Team, were carried out in compliance with the EIA Directive (Directive 85/337/66C); and what records have been kept of these reviews.

(AQW 22228/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The exercise to check that EIA screening was done properly was to ensure that the requirements of the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations 1999 and 2012 were fulfilled. The Regulations transpose the EU Directive. I am satisfied that there is full compliance. Any actions arising from the review are recorded on the individual planning application files.

Together: Building a United Community

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister in relation to the proposals included in "Together: Building a United Community."

(AQW 22925/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The First Minister and deputy First Minister held no discussions with me prior to their statement of 9 May 2013. At the subsequent Executive meeting, I raised with and expressed at length to FM&DFM my views on their 9 May statement. At the Executive meeting of 23 May 2013, FM&DFM presented the Publication of the Good Relations Strategy - Together: Building a United Community. It was noted that FM&DFM were publishing their document and that a special Executive meeting would be convened. A special Executive meeting was not convened, but the issue was discussed at the Executive meeting of 27 June 2013. The FMDFM Strategy did not receive endorsement and I explained why this was not the right step to take. The Executive agreed its determination to work to build a united community, acknowledged the 'Together: Building a United Community' document as a positive starting point, and committed itself to its delivery.

Planning Policy Statement 21

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications have been granted under PPS 21 where the farm dwelling is situated on a site across a road from the established group of farm buildings, broken down by Planning Office.

(AQW 24775/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department does not hold the required information on its IT system. A manual search of all planning application files would be required to retrieve the information and this would result in the diversion of staff from normal duties for an unreasonable period of time. This would have an adverse impact on the Department's ability to provide the statutory public service for which it is obligated.

In the period June 2010 to 31 March 2013, the Department has granted planning permission for a total of 12,486 planning applications for single dwellings in the rural area. Table 1 below details the number of new single dwellings in the rural area that were granted planning permission since June 2010, broken down by Local Government District and grouped by local area office.

Stonebridge Development

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the stone bridge in the Stonebridge village development in Green Road, Newtownards is listed, or is likely to be listed, for preservation purposes.

(AQW 24945/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have been informed that this structure is not listed and that it was considered for listing in the past. However I have been informed that in the most recent survey of this area in 2010/11, the Department asked for an updated record and received a report indicating that the bridge had been demolished.

This is clearly not the case and I have therefore asked departmental officers to visit the structure to reconsider its architectural and historic interest. To meet the statutory test of Article 42 of the Planning Order (1991) such a structure must be of 'special architectural or historic interest' to be protected as a listed building. I will let you know the outcome of this consideration.

Stonebridge Development

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department is aware of a threat to the stone bridge in Stonebridge village development, Green Road, Newtownards; and whether they intend to take any action to ensure that the bridge remains intact.

(AQW 24946/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Concern has been expressed to my department by a member of the public who resides in the Stonebridge Development. He has noted that works have recently commenced beside the bridge which in his view appear to be providing access to a new development called 'Bridgelee'. I have been informed that permission for this work (Planning reference W/2007/0273/F) issued in 2008 and that though this involves alterations to the slip road to the bridge, to provide sightlines to the entrance of the development, this does not involve the removal of the bridge.

You will be aware from my answer to your other question on this structure (AQW 24945/11-15), that this feature is not listed but that this will now be the subject of a review. Under Article 42 of the Planning Order (1991) only buildings of 'special architectural or historic interest' can be protected in this way.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the illegal landfill at Mobouy Road, Derry poses any threat to the integrity of the River Faughan and Tributaries Special Area of Conservation.

(AQW 24955/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am fully aware of the ecological significance of this area, particularly in terms of our salmon population and the general biodiversity the river system supports. I have instructed officials to closely monitor the site in question and the river itself for as long as is necessary.

Since closure of the waste premises, regular NIEA inspections have taken place to monitor the site. We have also undertaken significant additional chemical and biological monitoring of the River Faughan close to and downstream of this site. This programme of monitoring is in addition to the normal monitoring of the River Faughan, as part of the routine monitoring of all Northern Ireland's rivers and water bodies.

NIEA is also working closely with a number of other agencies, including Derry City Council, Northern Ireland Water and the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service, to ensure that any wider risks from the site are recognised and addressed.

To date no significant water quality impacts in the River Faughan have been identified through this monitoring programme, although pollution of a tributary that flows past the formerly licensed waste management facility has been detected – enforcement action in relation to this will form part of the wider investigation. This monitoring will continue in order that any problems are picked up early in order that action can be taken. The monitoring on site and in water are extensive and I have directed they continue to be so.

Tree Felling

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how many consents have been given by his Department, and its agencies, to fell trees between the period 1 March to 31 August, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24961/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There are 3 types of request for works to trees, felling trees protected by a Tree Preservation Order, felling within a Conservation Area and felling those trees covered by a retention condition in a planning approval.

The Department does not hold the information requested on the planning portal and it is not held centrally on one single database. To collate this would require each Tree Officer to manually check the issued consent notices. Currently there are around 800 confirmed TPOs which would need to be searched manually. In addition to this, records for Conservation Areas and retention conditions would also need to be searched manually.

A manual search of all the relevant files would result in the diversion of staff from normal duties for an unreasonable period of time. This would have an adverse impact on the Department's ability to provide the statutory public service for which it is obligated.

Wind Turbines

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many wind turbines are located in each constituency.

(AQW 25050/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner.

The Department can provide the number of applications for wind turbines that have been approved for each constituency; however it does not gather information on the number of wind turbines that have been constructed following approval.

Table 1 below details the number of wind turbine approvals, broken down by parliamentary constituency, for each of the last 5 years.

Decentralising Public Sector Jobs

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of the Environment what plans his Department has to decentralise public sector jobs. (AQO 3848/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My Department provides a wide range of public services to the local community and consequently its 2,560 staff are widely dispersed in approximately 50 offices and facilities in many cities and towns in Northern Ireland and also in locations such as country parks and historic monuments. Of these, 55% are already located outside Belfast with 19% located in Co Derry, 15% in Co Antrim, 7% in Co Armagh, 6% in each of Counties Down and Tyrone, and 2% in Co Fermanagh. Consequently, there is significant dispersal, but clearly on a differential basis!

I have also secured the dispersal of public sector jobs from the Greater Belfast area such as new posts in Derry for Road Traffic Examiners, the Carrier Bag Levy team and Planning's Divisional Support Team and in Coleraine for Estate Management Branch.

I also expect that a substantial number of posts, possibly as many as 400 and mainly from the local planning and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency functions, will be transferred to Local Government from 1 April 2015.

I will however continue to actively explore all opportunities to disperse public sector jobs from the greater Belfast area where it is practicable to do so. I have adopted a two principle approach both decentralisation and centralisation to heritage property. That is the approach which is being adopted and actively considered.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Neuroblastoma

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline how his Department helps patients suffering from neuroblastoma, as well as their families, to deal with the illness; and to detail the range of treatments available and the financial support provided for patients who have to travel abroad for trials. (AQW 24835/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Clinical management of Neuroblastoma depends on the individual patient's condition and circumstances, and the majority of cases in Northern Ireland are managed by the clinical team in the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children (RBHSC) who work hard to ensure children with the condition have access to the most up to date specialist treatments and can participate in clinical trials of new treatments where this is appropriate. Some highly specialist aspects of care may be accessed from tertiary centres in other parts of the UK.

The Children's Cancer Trials team at the Cancer Research Clinical Trials Unit (CRCTU) in the University of Birmingham co-ordinate clinical trials for children with cancer in the UK and Ireland. The CRCTU have a portfolio of childhood cancer clinical trials and they invite centres to enrol patients into these multi-centre, national and international trials. Each Paediatric Oncology centre (20 covering the UK and Ireland) will open as many trials as they can.

The decision to seek admission of patients into trials is a matter for the clinicians involved in the patient's care. If there is a suitable trial open in the treating centre, and providing the patient meets all the eligibility requirements for such a trial, the parents/guardians and the patient (if appropriate) will be invited to participate in this trial. Age appropriate information will be supplied both to parents/guardians and the patient. The trial will then be fully discussed by the principal investigator and/or members of the research trial team. Provided that the reason for the trial is fully understood, they then sign a consent form for participation into the trial. They can at any stage withdraw that consent for any reason and this decision should not affect the standard of clinical care that they subsequently receive.

Northern Ireland cancer patients are also able to participate in clinical trials through the Northern Ireland Cancer Trials Centre and province-wide through the Northern Ireland Cancer Trials Network.

Should there be a trial which is not open in Belfast but which is open in another appropriate centre in the UK, the Health and Social Care Board will consider funding patient transfer costs associated with the pre-assessment of the patient's suitability for participation in a trial should these arise.

Should the patient be accepted onto a trial, the Board's understands that trial organisers will fund all costs, including patient transfer and accommodation costs, for the duration of the trial.

Cancer services are provided to everyone regardless of age so once detected all cancer patients, irrespective of age, will have full access to the services delivered through the cancer services delivery framework. The cancer service framework sets out the standards of care that patients, carers and their wider family can expect to receive – a copy is available at:

Business Services Organisation: Risks

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a detailed explanation of the risks in the Business Services Organisation's Corporate Risk and Assurance Report 2012/2013 where (i) the likelihood is classified as either likely or almost certain; and (ii) the total impact is either major or catastrophic.

(AQW 24881/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) At 31 March 2013, eight risks were classified as either likely or almost certain, as follows:
- Four risks related to various aspects of the shared services project, including the timing of implementation and the stability of the new business systems, the impact of these on the reputation of BSO and the deliverability of business case outcomes;
  - Other risks were in relation to the potential qualification of BSO's 2012/13 accounts (following the issue with its 2011/12 accounts), the risk to Data Centres from unstable power supply, the impact of extant legislation on BSO's growth strategy and major high value regional procurement contracts.
- (ii) At 31 March 2013, 12 risks were classified as either major or catastrophic, as follows:
- Four risks related to various aspects of the shared services project, including the timing of implementation and the stability of the new business systems, the impact of these on the reputation of BSO and the deliverability of business case outcomes;
  - Two risks were in relation to the potential qualification of BSO's 2012/13 accounts (following the issue with its 2011/12 accounts) and the risk to Data Centres from unstable power supply;
  - Six other risks were assessed as either unlikely or possible and were in relation the challenging financial environment, including the potential impact of this on BSO's customers, the operation of IT and other legacy business systems and accountability frameworks for screening programmes.

The BSO is robustly managing these risks through a range of mitigating actions aimed at minimising the likelihood of these risks materialising and their impact. As a result, progress has been made in a number of key areas, such as the implementation of shared services.

Transport Act (Northern Ireland) 1967

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether Health and Social Care Trusts have an exemption from the Transport Act (Northern Ireland) 1967 for vehicles not for hire or reward.

(AQW 24912/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Transport Act (Northern Ireland) 1967 is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment (DOE). I am advised by that Department that the Transport Act requires that all those who are providing bus passenger transport for reward are licensed. Reward is defined as any benefit whether monetary or not. The Act also provides for an exemption from an operator licence for organisations concerned with social welfare, education etc who operate on a not for profit basis – this is known as a 10B permit.

The DOE also advises that Trusts in fulfilling their statutory role, that is, in providing patient transport, do not come within the scope of the Act. However, the Trusts from time to time also hire their buses to associated groups on a not for profit basis, thus providing benefits in terms of social welfare. Those Trusts wishing to provide this service must have 10B permits. The DOE has advised that they are satisfied that those Trusts which are required under the legislation to have 10B permits have obtained them.

Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total cost to his Department of providing care in (i) statutory; and (ii) independent residential and nursing homes, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25143/11-15)

Mr Poots: The cost to my Department of providing care in statutory and independent sector nursing homes and residential homes for adults, children and the elderly from 2008/09 to 2011/12 (latest information available) is as follows:

	2011/12 £m	2010/11 £m	2009/10 £m	2008/09 £m
Nursing Homes(1) – Independent	270	265	249	241
Residential Homes – Independent	89	86	83	80
Residential Homes – Statutory	91	90	91	91
Total	450	441	423	412
Client Contributions	121	114	101	93
Total Less Client Contributions	329	327	322	319

(1) There are no statutory nursing homes in Northern Ireland

Western Health and Social Care Trust: Complaints

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of complaints made against the Western Health and Social Care Trust in relation to patient care, in each of the last three years; (ii) the number of complaints related to people over 65 years of age; (iii) the number of these cases that have been referred to the Ombudsman; (iv) how these figures compare to other Trust areas; and (v) the complaints relating to patient care broken down by hospital.

(AQW 25145/11-15)

Mr Poots:

(i) Information on the number of complaints received by Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts is published annually by the Department, and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/hospitalstats/patient\_safety/complaints.htm

Appendix 1, Table 1e of this publication details the number of complaints issues received by the Western HSC Trust by subject of complaint during each of the last four years.

(ii) Information on the number of complaints received by HSC Trusts relating to people over 65 years of age is not collected by the Department, and could only be provided by manually trawling through patient records, which would incur disproportionate cost.

(iii) During the last three years, the Western HSC Trust indicated that it referred 17 complaints to the Ombudsman, 10 in 2010/11, 4 in 2011/12 and 3 in 2012/13.

(iv) Information on the number of complaints received by HSC Trusts referred to the Ombudsman is not routinely collected by the Department. However, in response to this AQW, HSC Trusts provided this information in Table 1 below.

Table 1: Number of Complaints Received by HSC Trusts That Were Referred to The Ombudsman (2010/11 – 2012/13)

HSC Trust	Year
	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Belfast	19	9	4
Northern	10	7	5
South Eastern	10	10	3
Southern	9	9	9
Western	10	4	3
NIAS	3	4	2
Northern Ireland	61	43	26

*Information for the SHSCT refers to the calendar years 2010, 2011 and 2012

Over the last 3 years, the number of complaints referred to the Ombudsman decreased by 35 (57.4%), from 61 in 2010/11 to 26 in 2012/13 (Table 1).

- (v) Information on the number of complaints received by each hospital is not currently collected. Complaints to specific hospitals are referred to the relevant HSC Trust, and are included within the HSC Trusts complaints figures detailed in the statistical report at the link below:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/hospitalstats/patient\_safety/complaints.htm

Western Health and Social Care Trust: Haemophilia

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are available for patients suffering from haemophilia in the Western Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 25148/11-15)

Mr Poots: Patients suffering from haemophilia are under the care of the Northern Ireland Regional Haemophilia Centre at Belfast City Hospital.

Altnagelvin Area Hospital provides diagnostic and emergency therapeutic support to haemophilia patients and facilitates a monthly outpatient review clinic by a visiting consultant from the Regional Centre.

Department of Justice

Prisons: Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24026/11-15, given that in the Northern Ireland Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts for 2009/2010 the Director General stated, 'from April 2009 all acts of self harm, however minor, are centrally collated in order to identify patterns and trends', (i) whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service follows this practice, and if not, to outline the rationale and responsibility for non-compliance; and (ii) if the practice is followed, to outline patterns and trends that have been identified since 2009 and how they are being addressed.

(AQW 24724/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I refer the member to the answer provided to AQW 24598 in relation to recording of all acts of self harm prior to 2010.

Since January 2010 all acts of self harm have been recorded on the Prison Record Information System (PRISM). Each prison establishment has a safer custody coordinator who monitors and reviews self harming incidents and develops and maintains local systems to support vulnerable offenders and promote a safe custodial environment. Where trends are identified, underlying causes and levels of support required to minimise further incidents will be discussed at the local safer custody fora and appropriate strategies put in place to address local operational needs.

The prison population comprises a high proportion of very vulnerable individuals with complex needs. Prisoners who have been identified as being at increased risk of self harm include: new committals, foreign nationals, and those who are vulnerable due to mental health issues or addictions.

A range of support services have been introduced across the prisons to respond to the needs of a vulnerable population, including access to Mental Health Teams, CRUSE Bereavement counselling; abuse counselling; Samaritans Listener Scheme; Prison Chaplaincy; family support; befriending services and diversionary activities. A dedicated Samaritans helpline is also available 24 hours a day to prisoners in distress and in need of support. In addition, prisoners can access a number of free counselling services including Lifeline, the NI crisis response helpline. The Donard Programme in Maghaberry Prison provides a range of therapeutic interventions for the most vulnerable offenders including individually designed programmes delivered on a multi-agency basis.

Joseph Abraham

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the NI Prisoner Ombudsman report on the death in custody of Mr Joseph Abraham, whether both issues of concern highlighted in the report have been addressed by the Prison Service.

(AQW 24820/11-15)

Mr Ford: I can confirm that the Prison Service and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust (SEHSCT) have addressed the two issues of concern highlighted in the Prisoner Ombudsman's report.

Prisons: Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24026/11-15, why Prison Service information does not differentiate between the act of self harm and an attempt or act of suicide.

(AQW 24821/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since January 2010, information relating to self harm and Supporting Prisoners At Risk (SPAR) have been recorded electronically on the Prison Record Information System (PRISM).

When a prisoner self harms this is recorded on an 'injury report form' on PRISM. This will not identify whether the act of self harm was a suicide attempt. Further information will only be determined during a SPAR interview with the prisoner, when the intentions are probed and recorded electronically on the SPAR screen on PRISM.

The details surrounding a death in custody are not recorded on PRISM but are recorded on a separate database.

A review of the Suicide and Self Harm Prevention policy is currently underway, and a variety of issues relating to the recording of information on safer custody matters are being considered as part of that review.

Ian Kernohan

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he will order a serious case review into the monitoring and supervision of Ian Kernohan following his re-arrest for breaching his Sexual Offences Prevention Order twenty four hours after being freed from custody, particularly as he was residing at a hostel operated by the Probation Board for Northern Ireland.

(AQW 24858/11-15)

Mr Ford: The basis for instigating a serious case review under the public protection arrangements is provided for in guidance to agencies issued under Article 50 of the Criminal Justice (NI) Order 2008. The guidance, published on the Department of Justice website, requires the agencies to commission a serious case review in defined circumstances. Those circumstances are not present in this case.

Prison Service: Suicide and Self-harm Prevention Policy 2011

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24166/11-15 and AQW 24239/11-15, given the recent criticisms of the Northern Ireland Prison Service by the Northern Ireland Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders (NIACRO), and by external agencies, since the implementation of the Supporting Prisoner at Risk process in 2009, and the Northern Ireland Prison Service Suicide and Self Harm Prevention Policy in 2011 (i) to provide an interim evidence based assessment as to the evaluation of the findings of the review and any recommendations to date, in conjunction with the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service Key Performance Target, as outlined in the Northern Ireland Prison Service Business Plan, to reduce the number of instances of self harm by 10 per cent from the 2011-12 baseline has been met, including the present percentage; and (iii) if not, to provide his assessment as to the reasons it was not met.

(AQW 24919/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) I would refer the Member to the answer I provided to AQW 24239/11-15 on 27 June 2013. Information for an evidence based evaluation is not available. As previously advised there has been no formal review, the procedures are subject to continual, ongoing informal review. A review will be undertaken following the restructuring of the Headquarters functions as part of the wider Reform Programme, in conjunction with the South Eastern Trust.
- (ii) There was a 4% increase in the number of self harm cases using the average prison population as the basis for measurement.
- (iii) Self harming behaviour in custody is a highly challenging and complex issue and prisons contain a disproportionate number of distressed and vulnerable people. An increase in self harm incidents may be associated with an increase in the prison population, including those held on remand, and a high prevalence of mental health issues and personality disorders. The risk factors identified in the wider community such as alcohol and substance abuse, poor coping skills, social isolation and multiple family breakdowns are all increased among the prison population. The impact of imprisonment may also contribute to acute self harm crisis for those experiencing overwhelming emotional distress. The Prison Service takes the responsibility of keeping prisoners safe extremely seriously and will continue to take all practicable measures to prevent prisoners inflicting harm on themselves.

Prison Service: Compromise Agreements

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) where the monies to effect Compromise Agreements between the Northern Ireland Prison Service and staff originate; and (ii) the audit processes that are in place to ensure accountability. (AQW 24920/11-15)

Mr Ford: Budgetary provision was secured from existing baselines in advance of the Compromise Agreements being drawn up; and decisions are made on the basis of legal advice and approved at Director level.

Foyleview Resettlement Unit

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners, who served custodial sentences in Foyle View, had to be transferred back to Magilligan Prison for a breach of prison rules, in each of the last five years. (AQW 24924/11-15)

Mr Ford: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained/compiled at disproportionate cost. For clarification, Foyleview is a residential area located within the confines of Magilligan Prison, it is not a separate facility.

Prison Service: Complaints

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the protocols in place in the Northern Ireland Prison Service to inform staff of complaints made against them by prisoners.

(AQW 24926/11-15)

Mr Ford: Where a complaint alleges misconduct against a member of staff an appropriate Prison Service official is appointed to investigate. This individual will interview the member of staff and inform them of the nature of the complaint.

If a complaint alleges unlawful actions by a member of staff the PSNI will be informed.

Prison Service: Threats

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the steps that the Northern Ireland Prison Service are taking to assess the security intelligence that identifies the veracity of threats against staff.

(AQW 24930/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service has a formal arrangement with PSNI to share intelligence regarding the personal security and safety of staff. All information relating to threats is assessed and if it is deemed appropriate, steps are taken to put necessary measures in place.

If concerns are reported regarding a specific officer, that officer will be informed of the details. An individual threat assessment will be carried out; all factors including those that have come to light within the prison will form part of this assessment.

Prison Service: Threats

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the protocols in place between the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Police Service of Northern Ireland when assessing the personal welfare of prison staff against intelligence indicating a threat exists.

(AQW 24931/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service has a formal arrangement with PSNI to share intelligence regarding the personal security and safety of staff. All information relating to threats is assessed and if it is deemed appropriate, steps are taken to put necessary measures in place.

If concerns are reported regarding a specific officer, that officer will be informed of the details. An individual threat assessment will be carried out; all factors including those that have come to light within the prison will form part of this assessment.

Ian Kernohan

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to Ian Kernohan and given the seriousness of his previous offences as well as breaches of Sexual Offences Prevention Orders and the speed at which he reoffended following his release, whether he intends to recommend that he is reassessed as dangerous, as defined by the Criminal Justice (NI) Order 2008.

(AQW 24959/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is for the court to make an assessment of the dangerousness of an individual and section 15 of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2008 provides that this assessment is made at the time of conviction on indictment for a specified sexual or violent offence.

There is no statutory basis for such reassessment in relation to an extant sentence though licence conditions can be varied by criminal justice agencies in response to any revised risk assessment. This would be considered when an offender who has been recalled to custody is re-released at the direction of the Parole Commissioners.

The court will consider the alleged breach of a Sexual Offences Prevention Order in due course and, if this results in a conviction on indictment, can make an assessment of dangerousness in relation to that offence prior to sentencing.

Hydebank Wood Prison: Alleged Assaults on 7 October 2012

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the alleged assaults by an inmate on three prison officers at Hydebank Wood on 7 October 2012 and given that the Prisoner Ombudsman found in favour of the complainant (i) what is the procedure within the Northern Ireland Prison Service for dealing with those who initially decided the complaint was groundless; and (ii) whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service reviewed CCTV footage before reaching its decision.

(AQW 24960/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Director of Offender Policy and Operations has commissioned an internal investigation to be conducted by Senior Prison Staff as recommended by the Prisoner Ombudsman. This investigation was commissioned on 4 July 2013 to be completed by 19 July 2013. I have attached a copy of the Terms of Reference.

Annex A*FROM:*Date: 4 July 2013*TO:*RE: Allegations and Findings Relating to an Incident at Hydebank Wood on 7 October 2012 Contained in the May 2013 Report by the Prisoner Ombudsman into Complaints Made by a Former Prisoner on 5 September 2012

I wish you to conduct a Code of Conduct and Discipline investigation with regards to the above, and with particular reference to the Prisoner Ombudsman's Conclusions in paragraphs 59 – 61 of the report and Recommendation 1 in paragraph 80 of the report.

You should provide a detailed account and interpretation of the actions taken, and any written reports made, by the two Prison Officers who sustained injuries in this incident, and any accompanying reports made by other members of staff. You should also make recommendations for any further action (or not) to be taken with regards to each of the individual members of staff concerned.

You should submit your final report to myself by Friday 19 July 2013.

Prison Service: Compromise Agreements

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, for each of the last three years, to detail (i) the number of Compromise Agreements entered into between the Northern Ireland Prison Service and its staff; (ii) on whose authority such agreements are sanctioned; and (iii) the total cost to his Department and the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 24971/11-15)*Mr Ford:

- (i) The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) have entered into Compromise Agreements with individual members of staff during the last 12 months. The actual number of such Agreements has been withheld to protect the identity of those involved as disclosure would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998;
- (ii) each agreement was sanctioned at Director level in the context of legal advice; and
- (iii) the terms of each agreement are confidential.

Hydebank Wood Prison: Alleged Assaults on 7 October 2012

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the alleged assaults by an inmate on three prison officers at Hydebank Wood on 7 October 2012, whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service and/or the prison officers notified the PSNI of the incidents.

(AQW 24973/11-15)

Mr Ford: I can confirm that the Northern Ireland Prison Service did not notify the PSNI of the incident which took place on 7 October 2012, although such action was taken by one of the individual Prison Officers concerned.

Prison Service: Compassionate Leave

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what additional steps his Department is taking to reduce the number of prisoners who have absconded after being released on compassionate leave.

(AQW 24977/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) operates a comprehensive Compassionate Temporary Release (CTR) scheme which includes a requirement to complete a comprehensive risk assessment. I am satisfied that the current process is robust. However, risk management does not mean elimination of all risks and on occasions prisoners do fail to comply with the conditions of release by absconding. NIPS does review such cases to identify if there are any learning points.

Prisoners on remand applying for compassionate bail are subject to decisions of the Court.

Prison Service: Pay

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Justice, when a pay rise will be implemented for Prison Officers recruited in 2012.

(AQW 25000/11-15)

Mr Ford: The 2013 pay award, effective from 1st April 2013, was implemented in June with any arrears due included in June salary.

Court Buildings: Flags

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to outline the policy for flying flags at Court Service buildings.
(AQW 25003/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service flies the Union Flag on designated days as set out in the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000 as amended by Section 67 of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002.

Disciplinary Investigations: Experienced Investigators

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24242/11-15 and AQW 21834/11-15, in light of the absence of clarification on the consideration given to Dr Pearson's suggestions (i) whether the Prison Service, along with the relevant stakeholders, held any meetings to discuss and consider the issue of employing senior retired police officers to act as discipline investigating officers; (ii) if so, when and where these meetings took place; and (iii) to detail the rationale which formed the basis of his decision that external recruitment is not considered necessary.
(AQW 25020/11-15)

Mr Ford: As the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the wider Northern Ireland Civil Service already has a large pool of staff to draw from, it would not have been appropriate or cost effective to seek to recruit retired senior police officers to investigate internal employment related matters.

Prison Service: Code of Conduct and Discipline

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice if he will place a copy of the new Prison Service Code of Conduct and Discipline and the Code of Ethics in the Assembly Library as soon as it becomes available.
(AQW 25035/11-15)

Mr Ford: I will place a copy of each of the new Codes in the library as soon as they become available.

Prison Service: Management Board Minutes

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice when he will publish the April, May and June 2013 minutes of the Prison Service Management Board meetings on the departmental website.
(AQW 25036/11-15)

Mr Ford: I can confirm that a note for each of the meetings of the Prison Service Management Boards (PSMB) for April and May have been published on the NIPS website.

Notes of meetings are not published until they are approved by Board members at the next scheduled Board meeting. A note of the June meeting will be published after the next meeting on 25 July.

Breach of Security in Postal Correspondence: Lay Magistrates

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24581/11-15, (i) why only lay magistrates' addresses were released; (ii) under what circumstances this would be regarded as a disclosure; and (ii) whether the Data Commissioner was consulted.
(AQW 25070/11-15)

Mr Ford: Only Lay Magistrates' address details were requested by the Youth Justice Agency (YJA).

A release of personal information in contravention of any one of the eight data protection principles may be considered a breach of the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA).

The Information Commissioner was not consulted prior to sharing address information with the YJA. The Department of Justice (DOJ), which includes both the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) and the YJA, is a registered organisation under the DPA. Under the DPA information can be shared between different parts of an organisation, in this case the DOJ, providing it is used for a similar purpose. On this basis the sharing of address information by NICTS to YJA would be allowed under DPA.

As previously advised, the subsequent release of information into the public domain was reported to the Information Commissioner.

Legal Aid

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 21644/11-15, (i) for a breakdown of Legal Aid paid to (a) legal firms; (b) junior counsel; and (c) senior counsel; and (ii) to clarify if the same legal firm, junior counsel and senior counsel acted at their first trial, subsequent appeals and second trial.
(AQW 25082/11-15)

Mr Ford: The breakdown of legal aid payments (including VAT and disbursements) to the legal teams of Christopher Francis Kerr and Aaron Cavana Wallace for their initial trial, Court of Appeal hearing and re-trial is set out in the tables in Annex A.

The legal team (solicitor firm, senior counsel and junior counsel) for Kerr was changed after the initial trial. The newly appointed legal team then represented Kerr at the Court of Appeal hearing and the re-trial.

The legal team (solicitor firm, senior counsel and junior counsel) for Wallace was also changed after the initial trial. Subsequently, the new solicitor firm represented Wallace at the Court of Appeal hearing and the re-trial. Wallace had the services of three senior counsel at the Court of Appeal hearing, with one continuing on to represent him at the re-trial. This counsel was then changed to another senior counsel during the re-trial. The junior counsel who represented Wallace at the Court of Appeal hearing was changed for the re-trial.

Department for Regional Development

Student Travel Discounts

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development why there is a disparity between Ulsterbus and Northern Ireland Railways in terms of the provision of discounted fares for students.

(AQW 24373/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I refer you to my response to AQW24372/11-15 which sets out the position on this issue.

Magherafelt Bypass

Mr I McCreagh asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are sufficient funds in place to cover the cost of vesting orders for the Magherafelt by-pass.

(AQW 24416/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Executive has considered my paper tabling options for the reallocation of A5 funding to other major road projects and I am delighted to be able to confirm the approval of £40m for the construction of the Magherafelt Bypass, which includes the cost of the land to be vested for the scheme.

This early decision will pave the way for construction work to begin in autumn 2014.

Railway Network Upgrades

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what upgrade work is planned for the railway network in each of the next four years.

(AQW 24845/11-15)

Railway Network Extension

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what assessment on extending the railway network has been completed.

(AQW 24846/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The public consultation on future railways investment closed on 12 April 2013. A report containing the views of the 119 respondents to the public consultation will be published later this month. My Department's assessment of the response and its prioritisation of future investment options will be made available later.

Blue Badges

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Blue Badges can only be issued to people in receipt of the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance.

(AQW 24857/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Blue Badge scheme in Northern Ireland is regulated by the Section 14 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons (NI) Act 1978 and the Disabled Persons (Badges for Motor Vehicles) Regulations (NI) 1993. Under the legislation a Blue Badge can be issued to individuals who:

- receive the higher rate of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance;
- are registered blind;
- receive a War Pensioner's Mobility Supplement;
- have a permanent and substantial disability which means he/she cannot walk, or have very considerable difficulty walking - in this case a doctor may be asked to answer a series of questions to confirm eligibility for a badge;
- drive a vehicle regularly, have a severe disability in both arms and are unable to operate, or have considerable difficulty operating, all or some types of parking meter, or;
- are children under the age of two, who have a disability due to a medical condition and need to travel with bulky equipment, or to be close to a vehicle for emergency medical treatment, may be eligible for a badge.

In addition, organisations which care for people with disabilities who meet one of the above criteria may be eligible for a badge.

I should also advise that my Department is currently conducting a public consultation on a number of planned and potential changes to the Blue Badge Scheme. These changes include options for ensuring the link to automatic eligibility for a Blue Badge is maintained after the Department of Social Development led change from Disability Living Allowance (DLA) to Personal Independence Payment (PIP) is introduced in Northern Ireland, and extending the benefit to children under the age of three with specific medical conditions. The consultation period ends on 30 July 2013.

Protocols on Flags Flown on Ships

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 24138/11-15, given his Department's responsibility for ports, whether he is aware of the Royal Navy having offered advice to naval vessels that berthed in Londonderry on the occasion of the Return of Colmcille.

(AQW 24882/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am not aware if the Royal Navy offered advice to naval vessels on this issue. As these matters lie outside my responsibility, the Royal Navy would not be required to inform me as a matter of course.

Cycle Lanes

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the estimated change in usage on new cycle lanes completed in the last five years.

(AQW 24883/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is committed to providing safer roads for the growing number of vulnerable road users, including cyclists and pedestrians, through a range of safety measures, such as, traffic calming and enhancement of the pedestrian and cycling network. I fully recognise the benefits to be obtained from improving the cycle network, in particular the environmental and health benefits and the positive contribution to an integrated transport system.

Over the past 5 years my Department has invested approx £4.1m in creating approx 75km of new cycle lanes. However, my Department does not carry out monitoring of usage of new cycle lanes.

A6 Dualling Scheme

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development when the report on the A6 Derry to Dungiven dualling scheme will be published.

(AQW 24906/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The recommendations in the Inspector's report are currently being considered and I intend to publish a statement on the way forward later this year.

Parking Tickets: Ballyclare and Antrim

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of parking tickets issued in (i) Ballyclare; and (ii) Antrim, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 24911/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of Penalty Charge Notices issued in Ballyclare and Antrim over the last five financial years are shown in the table below:

Numbers of Penalty Charge Notices issued

Financial Year	Ballyclare	Antrim
2008/09	615	999
2009/10	628	758
2010/11	499	960
2011/12	476	1380
2012/13	235	1139

Parking Restrictions: Coalisland

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 24335/11-15, in which year previous proposals to provide additional waiting restrictions in Coalisland were presented to the Regeneration Partnership.

(AQW 24921/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Proposals to provide additional waiting restrictions in Coalisland were presented to the Coalisland Regeneration Partnership in August 2008.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24929/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has had no expenditure on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

Ballagh Road

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the reasons why, despite senior officials confirming that the Roads Service is in control of the land in the Ballagh Road wall dispute, he has refused to take enforcement action under Article 71 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993.

(AQW 24952/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: For enforcement action to be taken under Article 71 of the Roads order, definitive evidence of a contravention of the Order must exist.

Following a site meeting with the owner of the wall, officials made attempts to source historical records but no definitive evidence was uncovered which detailed the line of the original wall. Checks made with regular users of the road could not confirm the new wall extended any further out than the original. In addition, there was no engineering evidence to show that the new wall had been moved out.

It would therefore be extremely difficult for my Department to prove that the rebuilt wall extends further than the original wall and without such definitive proof, any action taken under the provisions of the Roads (NI) Order 1993 would not succeed.

I understand DOE Planning intends to take enforcement action in relation to the wall in question.

Legal Costs

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 21235/11-15, if he is now in a position to outline the total costs his Department incurred in relation to the Declan Gormley legal case.

(AQW 24967/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am not yet in a position to outline the total costs incurred by my Department in relation to the Declan Gormley legal case. The Departmental Solicitor's Office is still engaged on the matter with Mr Gormley's solicitors.

I will of course honour my commitment to let you know what the final costs are once they become available.

Ballynahinch Bypass

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the range of surveys, including environmental, undertaken by Roads Service in order to progress the A24 Ballynahinch Bypass project.

(AQW 24979/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the surveys undertaken to date during the development of Ballynahinch Bypass are as follows:

A7 Upgrade

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the planned improvement scheme on the A7 between Doran's Rock and Rowallen.

(AQW 24981/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Preliminary design work is continuing on a proposal to carry out a road widening scheme between Rowallane and Doran's Rock, south of Saintfield. This entails widening 1.8 kilometres of the A7 carriageway and improving forward visibility along this section of road.

The proposal is to widen the existing road to provide a 7.3 metre wide carriageway with verges. The option to provide a right turning lane at a minor road junction is also being considered.

The cost of the scheme is estimated to be in the range £2-5 million and will require land from adjacent owners. In order for the scheme to progress it will require a satisfactory economic appraisal demonstrating value for money in terms of costs and transportation benefits. Implementation will also be dependent upon the scheme clearing any necessary statutory procedures including, for example, the vesting of lands and the availability of funding in future budget rounds.

Roads: Downpatrick

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development, in relation to a possible link road from Irish Street to St. Patrick's Avenue in Downpatrick, for an update on the talks he has had with the PSNI to allow for necessary survey work to be carried out at Downpatrick PSNI Station.

(AQW 24983/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's officials recently met with PSNI officials to discuss a proposal for a road link from Saint Patrick's Avenue to Irish Street, Downpatrick, which impacts on the site of the Downpatrick PSNI Station.

As a result, the existing survey data that is currently available to the PSNI is to be examined to determine if it can be used in developing preliminary options for the proposed link road.

C290 Magherahamlet Road/Dunmore Road Crossroads

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the planned minor works due to be carried out at C290 Magherahamlet Road/Dunmore Road crossroads, Spa, in this financial year.

(AQW 24984/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of proposed roads schemes for the current financial year are set out in the Roads Service Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. I understand you received a copy of the latest council report in June this year.

There is no further update in relation to the proposed works, other than to advise that officials are working to deliver this scheme in the current financial year, subject to successful land acquisition.

C278 Loughinisland Road/Tareesh Lane

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the planned minor works due to be carried out at C278 Loughinisland Road/ Tareesh Lane, Annacloy, in the current financial year.

(AQW 24985/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of proposed roads schemes for the current financial year are set out in the Roads Service Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. I understand you received a copy of the latest council report in June this year.

There is no further update in relation to the proposed works, other than to advise that officials are working to deliver this scheme in the current financial year, subject to successful land acquisition.

Student Travel Discounts

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Regional Development why mature students do not receive student discount on Ulsterbus services, when discount is available on services provided by Northern Ireland Railways.

(AQW 24988/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink have commercial responsibility for these matters and have advised that a discount for mature students using rail services was introduced separately from bus because a mature student travelling by rail is not able to obtain as good a discount without the use of the 24+ Railcard. Mature students using both Metro and Ulsterbus services can avail of the best discounts through standard Smartlink products which are available for bus journeys.

Roads: Adoption

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the reallocation of departmental funding will allow Roads Service to adopt roads in private developments where there is an insufficient bond in place following the liquidation or administration of the construction company responsible.

(AQW 24993/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As the Member will be aware, developers are responsible for providing new roads in housing developments, and for making provision for the costs of so doing in the event they are unable to complete the works.

In the event the bond in a private streets development is not sufficient to cover fully the cost of completing the required works to allow roads to be adopted, my Department will arrange for the necessary works to be completed, and seek to recover the shortfall from the responsible party.

Bellarena Railway Halt

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) status; (ii) plans; and (iii) timescale for the provision of (a) passing loops; (b) a covered halt; (c) a Park and Ride facility; (d) additional bus shelters; and (e) additional footpath provision, at Bellarena railway halt.

(AQW 24996/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the successful completion of Phase 1 of the Coleraine to Londonderry Track Relay Programme, procurement processes for Phase 2 of the programme, which will include the design of this phase are currently underway. Phase 2 work is due to commence in 2014/15 but Translink advise that as the design work for Bellarena Halt has not been undertaken they are unable to comment on the details at this stage.

In order to ensure the future provision of bus shelters, my Department is currently working towards the establishment of new contractual arrangements, which are to be in place for 2015. Any requests for bus shelters received in the intervening period that cannot be accommodated will be given priority when the new contract is in place.

The Member may also be aware that District Councils and Translink are also permitted to provide and fund additional bus shelters

In relation to footpath provision, a footway is currently provided over a distance of approximately 2.2km on Seacoast Road, from Bellarena Presbyterian Church and Magilligan Field Centre southwards to Bellarena Railway Halt. This continuous footway links the main housing developments of Bellarena and Oughtymoyle Avenue, and also a number of individual properties along the Seacoast Road, to Bellarena Railway Halt.

In addition, a scheme proposal is under development to provide a footway/cycleway on Seacoast Road, from Bellarena Presbyterian Church northwards towards Benone Tourist Complex, an approximate distance of 4km. This footway/cycleway will provide a continuous link between Benone Tourist Complex and Bellarena Railway Halt.

However, due to the length and potentially high cost of this proposal, it is likely the scheme will be delivered in stages. The footway/cycleway is being developed in accordance with current policies and procedures, and will be prioritised within future works programmes as each stage gains approval through the development process.

Delivery of the scheme is dependent upon its priority when compared to competing schemes, the availability of funding and a number of other key issues, such as land acquisition.

Water Supply: Donaghadee

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the reasons for the recent disruptions to the water supply in Donaghadee; and what steps are being taken to improve the water infrastructure in the town.

(AQW 25052/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that the recent interruptions to the water supply in the Donaghadee area occurred when the local service reservoir was taken out of service for maintenance purposes. There was a slight increase in water pressure in the area as a result of the maintenance work which caused a number of older water mains to burst. The bursts have been repaired and the reservoir is now back in service and operating normally. NIW does not anticipate any further interruption of supply to customers.

As part of its programme to improve the water infrastructure in Donaghadee, NIW is planning to replace the water main in Gloucester Avenue and is currently in the process of including a scheme for this work on its capital works programme.

Roads: Downpatrick

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the traffic flow difficulties in Downpatrick and the need for work to begin to alleviate the difficulties, what commitment he can give that his Department will begin work to progress the Eastern Link Road scheme.

(AQW 25060/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Ards Down Area Plan 2015 includes the Downpatrick Eastern Link Road proposal and identifies that the development of adjacent zoned land "is reliant upon the provision of the Downpatrick [Eastern] Link Road". Developers buying land in this area of the town for residential development should therefore be in no doubt of their responsibilities to provide the Eastern Link Road to serve the development land. Roads Service officials are willing to provide advice on the layout and standard of the proposed development road to those developers interested in developing the land zoned for housing.

While the Ards Down Area Plan 2015 also makes separate provision for the upgrading of the northern section of Rathkeltair Road and its junction with Strangford Road, Roads Service's contribution to such an improvement is subject to the availability of the necessary funding. Given current pressures on budgets and the uncertainty about future funding, it is not possible to advise when this improvement scheme may be included in the Investment Delivery Plan for Roads.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what actions are taken to ensure that contractors manufacturing asphalt materials for road works during the night and at weekends do not contravene Health and Safety guidelines.

(AQW 25069/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are occasions when work must be carried out on the road network outside normal working hours to facilitate local business and minimise disruption on highly trafficked routes.

There is no relaxation of health and safety obligations imposed on contractors manufacturing asphalt materials for road works during such periods. The general health and safety obligations for employers are set out under the Health and Safety and Work (NI) Order 1978 and The Management of Health and Safety at Work (NI) Regulations 2000.

Donaghadee Bus Station

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the steps that he will take to ensure the accelerated transfer of land at the current Donaghadee Bus Station site and to facilitate a turning circle and Park and Ride scheme.

(AQW 25105/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer you to my answer in AQW 24426/11-15. The position outlined in that answer remains the same. However, I understand that Ards Borough Council has now written directly to Translink on this issue.

Roads: Millisle and Donaghadee

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any planned road improvement schemes in (i) Millisle; and (ii) Donaghadee within the current financial year.

(AQW 25118/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: During the spring and autumn of each year my Department's Roads Service presents their respective Minor Works programmes to each Council, which sets out the schemes they hope to construct during the current financial year and beyond, subject to the necessary funding being available.

I have arranged for a copy of the relevant council report to be forwarded directly to you.

Roads: Bangor

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any planned road improvement schemes in Bangor within the current financial year.

(AQW 25119/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drndi.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information/cinformationtype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

Roads: Hollywood

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any planned road improvement schemes in Hollywood within the current financial year.

(AQW 25120/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer you to my answer provided for AQW 25119/11-15.

Roads: Downpatrick

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the planned collision remedial work due to take place in this financial year at Fountain Street, Downpatrick and to outline the consultation that took place with local residents.

(AQW 25124/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Design work on the proposed road widening scheme at Fountain Street is nearing completion and my officials are in the process of identifying the lands required to deliver the scheme.

To date, no consultations have taken place with local residents. However later this year, in conjunction with the land acquisition process, officials will issue leaflets to all residents likely to be directly affected detailing the proposed scheme, including the collision remedial and traffic calming aspects, and will commence the required legislative processes under the relevant articles within the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993.

I remain hopeful this scheme can be delivered during the current financial year, however that will be dependent upon successful completion of the necessary statutory processes.

Traffic Calming Measures: Saintfield

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the planned traffic calming work due to take place at Downpatrick Street/Listooder Road, Saintfield, in the current financial year.

(AQW 25125/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In the interests of road safety, my Department plans to provide a series of road humps on Downpatrick Street, Saintfield, from Main Street to junction with Old Grand Jury Road. This scheme extends an existing traffic calming scheme along Listooder Road, in the vicinity of a local Primary School, which was completed a number of years ago.

Design work on the proposal is ongoing and should be completed in the coming months, allowing the necessary consultations to be completed in accordance with our legislative processes, in respect of The Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993. At this stage, my officials plan to consult with local residents during October/November 2013, to allow this scheme to be completed this financial year.

Proposals, at that time, will be leafleted to directly affected residents living along Downpatrick Street, Saintfield and other statutory authorities, to allow for comments and feedback. A formal legislative process will follow, before such a scheme can be constructed.

While my Department remains hopeful this scheme can be delivered as planned, progress does hinge on the successful outcome of the necessary statutory processes, as detailed above. If you wish to discuss this scheme in further detail, please contact the Divisional roads Manager for Roads Service - Southern Division at Marlborough House, Craigavon.

U207 Loughmoney Road, Raholp

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed road markings at U207 Loughmoney Road, Raholp.

(AQW 25127/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The 'SLOW' road markings on U207 Loughmoney Road, Raholp, which Roads Service agreed with Councillor Gareth Sharvin, were placed during June 2013.

Traffic Management: Collins' Corner, Downpatrick

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed traffic management work at Collins' Corner in Downpatrick following the completion of a geotechnical survey and option study.

(AQW 25129/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The necessary geotechnical studies for the Collins Corner scheme are substantially complete on existing embankments. This will allow completion of design work and plans and identify the amount of land to be acquired for the scheme.

My Department remains hopeful that this scheme can be delivered this financial year as planned. However, this is subject to the successful outcome of the necessary statutory processes, including the acquisition of necessary lands.

Downpatrick Road Traffic Study

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the recently commissioned Downpatrick Road Traffic Study and to outline the key findings from the report.

(AQW 25130/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Roads Service has yet to receive the report on the recently commissioned Downpatrick Traffic Study.

All the necessary site visits and collection of traffic survey data was completed during June 2013. Roads Service consultants, Amey Ltd, are currently developing proposals, and Roads Service remains confident that the study will be completed on schedule for the autumn. Roads Service officials then hope to present the findings of the report, along with the Department's Interim Progress Report, to Down District Council.

My officials will give full consideration to the key findings and recommendations. However, I should advise that all recommendations will be subject to full consultation with key stakeholders, including local residents, any legislative processes, the necessary land acquisitions and securing the necessary finances in future budget years.

Wind Turbines

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the limitations which apply to locating wind turbines close to public roads.

(AQW 25135/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In considering the location of wind turbines, my Department uses the guidance available in PPS 18 and the accompanying Good Practice Guidance.

In summary, the guidance advises that:

- applicants should consult with DRD Roads Service at an early stage;
- wind turbines should be set-back at least full over distance (i.e. the full height of the turbine including blades) plus 10% from the edge of any public road, and;
- wind turbines should not be treated any differently from other visual distractions a driver may face and should not be considered particularly hazardous. If considered helpful, appropriately sized lay-bys may be provided for viewing purposes.

While this is less detailed than guidance produced elsewhere, my Department has found it to be adequate.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Trees at Parliament Buildings

Mr Agnew asked the Assembly Commission why permission was given to fell trees at the back of Parliament Buildings during nesting season and whether compensatory planting will take place elsewhere on the estate.

(AQW 24934/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): To facilitate the construction works associated with the forthcoming roof project and to provide much needed additional space for car parking, deliveries and re-cycling (on completion of the roof project), the Commission granted approval to the creation of a contractor's yard / service area at the rear of Parliament Buildings.

As this work is to be carried out during summer recess to avoid unnecessary disruption to Assembly business, work has commenced on the creation of a haul road which is required to provide access and a working platform for the contractors.

A small number of semi-mature trees, the remnants of a previous planting scheme, had to be removed in the course of the works. These have been removed by the specialist contractor and will be 'chipped' for re-use as mulch elsewhere on the estate. There was no evidence of nesting birds in any of the trees that were removed.

Discussions took place with members of the design team, DFP's Estate Management Unit and its specialist advisor with regard to trees and possible re-planting / replacement planting and the route of the haul road was also adjusted to avoid causing damage to 2 mature ornamental trees at the west side of the building.

As part of the planning approval process discussions, including reference to the trees that would need to be removed, took place on site with representatives of NIEA's Natural Heritage division.

The construction works will also include some improvement to the drainage from the rear bank and it is planned to carry out some compensatory tree planting on completion of the construction works.

Written Answers to Questions

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Fodder Task Force

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the range of issues identified by the Fodder Task Force; and any proposed action by the Department to help mitigate any future difficulties which may arise.
(AQW 25028/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The joint Government and industry Fodder Taskforce group has identified a wide range of issues affecting farmers as a result of unfavourable weather conditions in the first half of 2013. These include:

- Grassland management,
- Grass growth and nutrient management,
- Budgeting and management of fodder stocks,
- Concentrate prices,
- Animal health,
- Potential reduced agricultural output
- Mental wellbeing of Farmers
- Financial pressures on Farmers

The Fodder Taskforce is in the final stages of finalising an action plan that I will publish on the DARD website in July. I believe that farmers can do a lot now, and in the coming months, to considerably lessen the impact of poor Spring weather and mitigate any difficulties they may face. DARD has already embarked on a series of workshops, events, technical articles and bulletins as part of the action plan, to encourage and support farmers to adopt best management practice in their businesses. In addition we are working with banks and other organisations such as Rural Support to ensure that farmers can access a broad range of both business and personal support.

Fodder Scheme

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when all claims and payments for the Fodder Scheme will be complete; and for an estimate of the overall cost of the scheme.
(AQW 25029/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Fodder Transport Scheme has been considered successful and the cost of claims received is expected to be in the region of £1.3m. A significant number of claims have been received from Hauliers and it is anticipated that all payments will be completed by the end of August 2013.

Quarries and Reservoirs: Safety

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline how she proposes to increase safety measures at reservoirs and quarries.
(AQW 25054/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Subject to Executive approval, I intend to introduce the Reservoirs Bill to the Assembly in September 2013. This legislation will enable assurance to be provided that the risk of flooding due to an uncontrolled release of water as a result of a dam failure is being appropriately managed. The legislation will therefore increase the safety of reservoirs, particularly for those who live and work in the potential downstream inundation area. The legislation does not deal with any other aspects of reservoir safety as this is outside the flood risk management responsibilities of my Department. NI Water operates a number of impounding reservoirs. These are regularly inspected with appropriate warning signs in place. Risk assessments are in place and, currently there are no further plans to increase inspections or enhance safety at these sites. The Department of Environment have been very proactive in addressing the issue of safety at quarries. They have worked closely with various organisations including District Councils to review all disused quarries within their areas, including physical inspections with an urgent focus on those disused quarries which present the highest risk. The previous Environment Minister recently launched a quarry safety campaign during July 2013 and the new Minister has confirmed his intention to continue to progress this issue.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that her Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by her Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25102/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has defended 24 legal cases, including Judicial Reviews, since 2007 and lost 11 of these cases. The total costs incurred in relation to the cases lost were £547,596 incorporating both legal costs and any compensation paid.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she has taken to tackle Bovine Tuberculosis, particularly in dairy farms.

(AQW 25117/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DARD has a robust EU Commission approved TB eradication programme in place that is based on testing to detect infected cattle; removing infected animals; and reducing the risks of disease spread through movement controls and other biosecurity measures. The same disease control measures are applied to both beef and dairy herds.

This rigorous TB eradication programme will continue to be a priority to ensure continued access to the export trade by our livestock and livestock products industry, which is worth over £1,000 million per year.

The Department publishes generic TB disease control advice for use by all herdkeepers and provides specific advice to those who have a TB herd breakdown. The publication "TB in your Herd" is issued to all herdkeepers who have a TB herd breakdown. These publications are available on the DARD website. In addition, DARD Veterinary Officers and Animal Health and Welfare Inspectors give on-farm advice to farmers in relation to specific biosecurity issues particularly relevant to their farm business.

I am pleased to report that the recent rise in TB herd incidence peaked in October 2012 and has since fallen for seven consecutive months. However I am not complacent and wish to achieve a sustained and progressive reduction towards the ultimate eradication of TB here, and by as early a date as possible.

As I advised the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee, I have tasked officials to bring forward a package of possible additional measures to further reduce the level of TB infection in cattle. I shall be giving consideration to these possible measures seeking to ensure that they are proportionate, practical and cost-effective in reducing TB in cattle.

Rural Youth Entrepreneurship Scheme

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much funding her Department allocates to the Rural Youth Entrepreneurship scheme.

(AQW 25123/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Rural Youth Entrepreneurship (RYE) Programme aims to stimulate business potential among vulnerable young people in rural areas. The overall budget for the Programme in the North is £450,796, of which 60% is funded through the EU Interreg IVB Trans-National "Northern Periphery Programme (NPP)" and £180,318 (40%) is funded from my departments' Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation budget. RYE commenced in December 2011 and is due to continue until 31 March 2014.

Rural Youth Entrepreneurship Scheme

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the Rural Youth Entrepreneurship scheme works with InvestNI to help develop new business start-ups; and if so, how the work is coordinated.

(AQW 25126/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The key outputs of the Rural Youth Entrepreneurship Programme are the completion of 100 Business Action Plans and appropriate onward referral to further sources of business development support. The range of support required will be determined by the business theme and the development needs of individual participants. This will include co-ordinated referrals to Invest NI for further business plan development.

Equine Council for Northern Ireland

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the recommendations contained in the final report produced by the Equine Council for Northern Ireland on the status of the horse; and for an update on any actions or further discussions she has had with the council and the wider equine sector following their meeting to discuss the report on 14 January 2013.

(AQW 25139/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I met with the Equine Council for NI (ECNI) on 14 January 2013 to discuss their report on the Status of the Horse, including the key recommendation that the 1949 Act should not be amended to designate the horse as an agricultural animal.

You may be aware that there have been a range of recent developments relevant to the equine sector, including the EU Commission's proposals for a 5-point Point Action Plan in response to the recent horsemeat issue, which includes actions in relation to horse passports and proposals for a national equine database.

Following my meeting, my officials have continued to engage with ECNI on a range of matters, including the Commission's proposals for a 5-point Action Plan; the potential for local improvements to the operation of the horse passport system; and the development of our proposals for the Rural Development Programme 2014-2020. I intend to take account of these recent developments as part of my further detailed consideration of the recommendations made by the ECNI.

Rural Development Programme 2014-2020

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the 2014-2021 Rural Development Programme contains measures to facilitate and support the equine industry.

(AQW 25142/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The draft NI Rural Development Programme 2014 – 2020, which is currently out for public consultation, is based around the three European objectives of smart, sustainable and inclusive growth. One of the European priorities for rural development beneath these objectives is 'promoting social inclusion, poverty reduction and economic development in rural areas'. Support for the equine industry could be considered under this priority, for example by facilitating diversification, creation of new small enterprises and job creation. Support is also available for the equine industry under the current Rural Development Programme, and has been detailed by the Equine Council for the north of Ireland in their booklet 'Opportunities for the Equine Sector in the north of Ireland'.

European Horse Passport System

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the European Horse Passport system and to detail the specific actions that she has taken following the horsemeat scandal to address any short comings that may have been identified.

(AQW 25144/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: It is a legal requirement for all horses and ponies (and other forms of equidae) within the EU to have a passport identifying the animal. The Horse Passports Regulations (NI) 2010, on the identification of equidae, have been in operation since March 2010. These Regulations implement Commission Regulation (EC) No. 504/2008 in the north of Ireland.

The Commission recently wrote to Member States with its 5 Point Action Plan in response to the recent horse meat fraud. The 5 Point Action Plan contains a number of measures in relation to food fraud, country of origin labelling and actions in respect of horse passports.

On horse passports the Commission proposes to amend Commission Regulation (EC) No. 504/2008 to make mandatory the recording of horse passports in a central national database and to transfer the issuing of horse passports entirely to the competent authorities and reduce the number of passport issuing bodies in the forthcoming proposal on Zootechnics.

I was pleased that the important issue of horse registration was discussed at the North South Ministerial Council meeting on 10 July 2013 as given the all-island nature of the equine industry it is important that we co-operate on the arrangements we put in place to strengthen the horse passport system and help to prevent food fraud throughout the island.

DARD and DAFM officials will explore the possibility of having an all-island horse passport centralised database and to enhance the security of the equine identification system.

My officials have also been in discussion with both Defra and DAFM officials about proposals for enhancing the equine identification system and centralised databases and, further discussions are planned. In addition officials are working with the Equine Council for NI about improving the operation of passports locally.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Ulster-Scots Academy

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she has plans to provide premises for the Ulster Scots Academy.

(AQO 4148/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The Ministerial Advisory Group Ulster-Scots Academy (MAGUS) is tasked with progressing the Ulster-Scots Academy approach. The MAGUS Development and Research Strategy, which was recently launched, includes “To identify, consider and progress options for the creation of a physical Ulster-Scots Academy” as a strategic objective. This reflects comments about the need for an Academy received during the public consultation on the strategy.

The MAGUS has shortlisted options for taking forward the Academy approach including a physical academy. A business case is to be prepared to examine those options and recommend a preferred option for taking forward the academy including potential location and premises options.

I have also approved preparation of a business case for an Ulster-Scots ‘hub’ social economy project focused around the development of the Ulster-Scots sector, at the site of the former Oldpark Library in North Belfast or in another similar area of poverty and social exclusion. An Ulster-Scots Hub could draw on other examples of successful social economy projects such as An Cultúrlann. It could also provide a base for a physical Ulster-Scots Academy and other related sector bodies.

My officials will ensure effective engagement between those undertaking work on the two business cases to achieve consistency and complementarity in approach.

The aim is to complete both business cases by the autumn so that I can consider how best to proceed.

Department of Education

Schools: Funding

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education what was the background and detail of the announcement to some school principals regarding financial assistance under Class Size policy that was made on the last day of the June term 2013. (AQW 25031/11-15)

Mr O’Dowd (The Minister of Education): The Department made no announcement to schools regarding financial assistance and class sizes.

You have provided further clarification regarding your question and I understand that it relates to an Education and Library Board’s reply to a school in relation to their application for assistance to meet class size requirements to limit pupil numbers to 30 in Years 1-4 classes.

Following on from this, officials obtained a copy of the Board’s letter which mentioned that the Board concerned is not in a position to recommend the school’s application for funding to the Department of Education. It also explicitly stated that the decision not to provide funding was on the basis that the Department had indicated that schools with a budget surplus should not be considered for funding.

I must first explain, the Boards do not recommend to the Department, schools for additional funding. The process involves a decision by the Board on presentation of information from schools. This policy is administered by the Education and Library Boards and the Boards are responsible for providing any additional funding to meet the policy from within their overall allocations. Legislation also allows the Boards to approve exceptions to the statutory limit.

At no time has there been any instruction or direction from the Department to any Education and Library Board stating that no funding is to be provided, from Board centre budgets, to schools in surplus and a letter was issued to all Boards on 11 July 2013 to reaffirm this.

Department for Employment and Learning

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost. (AQW 25027/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): Since 2007, the Department for Employment and Learning has:

- (i) defended 17 legal cases, including judicial reviews;
- (ii) lost one legal challenge. Some cases are still ongoing, however; and
- (iii) incurred a total of £177,674 on the case which it lost.

These figures exclude Industrial Tribunal cases in which the Department’s Redundancy Payments Service has been involved. These cases arise when a claimant’s former employer has failed to fulfil their legal obligation and make the appropriate redundancy payments to those employees. The Department is party to the vast majority of these cases by virtue of its statutory role in administering the statutory redundancy guarantee scheme.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Staff: Air Travel

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the (i) number; and (ii) cost of flights that have been paid for by (a) her Department; and (b) InvestNI, in each year from 2008, and to disaggregate the total for business class flights. (AQW 24764/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment):

Staff: Air Travel

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, of the business class flights paid for by her Department in each year since 2008, how many were taken by (i) Elected Representatives; (ii) Civil Servants; and (iii) Special Advisors. (AQW 25016/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The information requested is set in the table below:

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that her Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by her Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25103/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

Department of the Environment

Biodiversity Laws

Mr Agnew asked Minister of the Environment how many people were fined for failing to adhere to biodiversity laws in each of the last twelve months.

(AQW 24944/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): The Northern Ireland Environment Agency Wildlife Team does not enforce the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 as (amended). In instances where the wildlife law has been breached it is the responsibility of the Police Service of Northern Ireland to investigate and bring forward cases to the Public Prosecution Service, albeit with expert advice from NIEA Wildlife Officers. In relation to the Wildlife Order my Department does not hold the required information.

Areas of Special Scientific Interest are declared and protected under the Environment (Northern Ireland) Order 2002 (as amended). I can confirm however that no fines have been imposed on people as a result of damaging Areas of Special Scientific Interest in any of the last twelve months.

Gasification: Maydown

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether consideration was given to alternatives to the proposed gasification incinerator in the North West.

(AQW 24954/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The North West Region Waste Management Group (NWRWGM) procurement is intended to meet landfill diversion targets. Achieving these targets constitutes a key element of the Waste Management Plan agreed by its constituent councils following extensive consultation. Prior to initiating the procurement, the Joint Committee of the councils of the NWRWGM considered what technologies could constitute an acceptable element of any proposals for meeting their landfill diversion obligations. They agreed that all forms of energy recovery could be included, with the exception of mass burn incineration.

The Preferred Bidder's solution includes a gasification plant which will recover energy from the residual waste left after additional recyclates have been extracted from waste through a Mechanical Biological Treatment plant. In the absence of energy recovery there would be no other available outlet for this residual waste except landfill.

Any facility involving the thermal treatment of wastes is defined as an "incineration plant" for the purposes of the EU Waste Incineration Directive; that is, to ensure that emissions from all such facilities are regulated to the same high standards. For the purposes of the directive therefore not only incineration by oxidization but other thermal treatment processes such as gasification, pyrolysis or plasma processes are all defined as Incineration, regardless of the specific technology involved. The technological distinctions are recognized in DEFRA guidance on Incineration of Municipal Waste, which advises that "Both Incineration and Advanced Thermal Treatment (ATT) technologies offer the option of treating residual waste and recovering energy. These technologies are different in how the waste is processed and the energy liberated for recovery."

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether City Industrial Waste, Mobouy Road, Derry received the requisite planning permissions before locating in the countryside close to the River Faughan and on each occasion that it expanded its business; and whether the extent of its current operation has planning permission.

(AQW 25024/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department granted planning permission for a waste segregation and recycling centre for City Industrial Waste, Mobouy Road. Enforcement action was taken on the operations not covered by this permission. Subsequently a number of applications were submitted by City Industrial Waste to regularise these activities. These applications are currently on hold by my officials.

Lignite Mining

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment, notwithstanding any current environmental preclusions, whether an area that would enable the mining of lignite would be considered an economically significant site as a source of fuel.

(AQW 25042/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My Department is unaware of any current plans or proposals to develop lignite fuel sources in the North. In the event of a planning application being received to develop such fuel sources, the application would be subject to a comprehensive assessment of its environmental and social impacts, in the context of our environmental policies and obligations, as well as the economic implications of any such proposed development.

Quarries and Reservoirs: Safety

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment whether any local reservoirs or quarries have been drained and filled in as a result of safety concerns.

(AQW 25055/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am not aware of any quarry or reservoir having been drained and infilled for safety reasons, except for one clay pit in the Dungannon area. A disused clay pit situated on Derry Road, Coalisland, was infilled earlier this year to comply with a planning permission condition that required the site to be reinstated to agricultural grazing land.

While quarries with planning permission will often have conditions relating to restoration or reinstatement of the land, this is not the case with older quarries.

As quarries are primarily in private ownership and there is no legislative basis upon which to require draining or infilling (other than a planning condition), such work would only be undertaken voluntarily by the quarry owner and at his/her personal expense. In the event that a quarry owner were willing to voluntarily undertake such works, a number of approvals/consents would be required, including planning, a water discharge consent from NIEA, a Pollution Prevention and Control Permit in the event that a quarry is to be infilled. In cases where a quarry is very large it may not be practical to infill.

Furthermore, it is not possible to drain or infill operational reservoirs. Reservoirs are necessary to supply the population with water and are often used by angling clubs for fishing. In addition to this I am not aware of any disused reservoirs having been drained or unfilled for safety reasons.

Wind Turbines: Environmental Impact Assessments

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) has to be carried out on a planning application for a wind turbine or a wind farm; (ii) how many have been carried out, in each of the last three years; (iii) how many (a) have been approved; and (b) are pending; and (iv) will he make the results of all such EIAs to date available for public inspection

(AQW 25076/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner.

In the instance of wind farms or wind turbines, if the development involves the installation of more than 2 turbines; or the hub height of any turbine or height of any other structure exceeds 15 metres, then a determination is required to see if an Environmental Statement (ES) is required. This determination is carried out through a screening process.

In the process of screening, if it is determined that the impact is significant, then the identified development is classified as an EIA development and an ES will be required i.e. a positive determination. Where it is considered not significant, then an ES is not required i.e. a nil determination.

Table 1 below details how many EIA screenings have been carried out for wind farms/turbines, in each of the last three years and the determination made

Table 1

	No of EIA screenings carried out	Positive Determinations	Nil Determinations	Data not available
2012	524	7	511	6
2011	591	29	554	8
2010	336	40	289	7

Table 2 shows the planning decision made regarding wind farms/turbine applications subject to EIA Screening Determinations

Table 2

	No of EIA screenings carried out	Permission Granted	Permission Refused	Decision Pending	Withdrawn by Applicant
2012	524	212	14	256	42
2011	591	325	57	101	108
2010	336	181	47	27	81

All information regarding EIAs on specific applications is available through the planning portal, or the paper file can be viewed in the local office upon request. The Department also has an obligation to keep EIA determinations on a public register which is available to view in the relevant local office at all times.

Asbestos: Disposal

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment what action the Northern Ireland Environment Agency takes to ensure that companies responsible for the removal of asbestos dispose of it legally.

(AQW 25078/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Under the Hazardous Waste Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005 all movements of asbestos waste must be accompanied by a document called a consignment note, each one having a unique reference number which can only be obtained from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA). The consignment note system ensures a clear audit trail from when the waste is produced until it is disposed of.

Under the consignment note system the NIEA must receive a copy of the consignment note, with the relevant sections completed, 72 hours prior to the movement taking place thus enabling officers to assess the document and ensure the facility identified is authorised to accept the waste. On completion of the note by the receiving facility a copy must be forwarded to the NIEA.

NIEA staff conduct regular inspections of facilities producing hazardous waste and those receiving hazardous waste to ensure compliance of the regulations. They also conduct regular road and port checks with other enforcement agencies and liaise closely with the Northern Ireland Health and Safety Executive who have responsibility for asbestos removal under the Control of Asbestos Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012.

Asbestos: Disposal

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment what financial support is available to help (i) businesses or private owners to meet the cost of asbestos removal; and (ii) asbestos removal companies meet the cost of shipping asbestos to Scotland.

(AQW 25079/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department does not provide financial assistance for the removal and disposal of asbestos waste. I am aware of one Council in Northern Ireland which does arrange for the collection and disposal of small volumes of asbestos waste from householders, meeting full costs of collection transportation and final disposal. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive also provides discretionary grant aid to assist owner-occupiers of former Housing Executive dwellings to deal with asbestos.

Asbestos: Disposal

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment what audit trail the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has in place to ensure that companies responsible for the removal of asbestos can account for the tonnage and end disposal.

(AQW 25080/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The removal of asbestos from buildings or equipment must be carried out in accordance with Health and Safety legislation. The removal of higher risk asbestos-containing materials (sprayed asbestos coatings, asbestos insulation, asbestos lagging and most work involving asbestos insulating board (AIB) should only be carried out by a contractor licensed by the Health and Safety Executive and in accordance with the Control of Asbestos Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012.

The movement of asbestos waste must comply with the Hazardous Waste Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005. Under these regulations a consignment note must be completed for every movement of asbestos waste. A copy of the consignment note, partially completed, must be sent to the NIEA at least 72 hours prior to movement taking place. This includes details of where the waste is to be removed from and where it is to be taken to, what the waste is, its hazardous properties, the quantity involved and the type of containment. This enables officers to assess the document and ensure the facility identified is authorised to accept the waste.

At the time of collection the producer and carrier sign and retain a copy of the note with the remaining copies of the note travelling with the waste to the receiving facility. The receiving facility then completes the final section of the consignment note providing details of their licence, date and time of receipt and tonnages received. They retain a copy of the document and must also forward a copy of the completed document to the NIEA. NIEA staff monitor asbestos waste movements through this consignment note system which provides a clear audit trail from when the waste is produced until it is disposed of.

Asbestos: Disposal

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment how many companies were fined for the illegal dumping of asbestos in (i) 2011/12; and (ii) 2012/13.

(AQW 25081/11-15)

Mr Attwood: No companies have been fined specifically for the illegal dumping of asbestos in these two years. However asbestos is not uncommonly identified mixed with other types of waste in illegal landfills and in the last 2 years 30 prosecutions have resulted for waste crime, generating £85,400 in fines.

Planning: Developments near Airfields

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment what considerations Planning Service must take into account in relation to proposed developments near licensed and unlicensed airfields.

(AQW 25122/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In assessing an application for proposed developments near licensed and unlicensed airfields DOE planning must have regard to the development plan and other relevant material planning considerations.

In reaching a balanced planning decision consideration may be given to matters such as airport safeguarding areas, airport public safety zones as set out in guidance document 'Control of Development in Airport Public Safety Zones', policy RE1 of PPS18 where the proposed development is for renewable energy, and other relevant policy and guidance particular to the proposed development, site and surrounding context in order to reach a balanced judgement.

The Department does not hold records of private airfields or of their owners and therefore does not consult directly with such persons/organisations.

Wind Turbines: Planning Applications

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment how the current success rate of planning applications for wind turbines and farms compares to each of the last five years.

(AQW 25128/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner.

In the last 5 years a total of 1274 applications have been granted planning permission, 515 of these in the last full business year alone.

Table 1 below details the number of applications for single wind turbines and wind farms decided in each of the last 5 years, indicating how many were approved and the approval rate.

- 1 All applications received in the period may not have had a decision issued within the same time period. Applications received may also include some applications that are subsequently withdrawn.
- 2 Decided applications may not have been received in the same time period. Therefore direct comparisons between the figures can not be made. Applications decided do not include withdrawn applications.

The increasing number of decisions issued over this period demonstrates the Department's commitment to supporting the economy and a sustainable environment through renewable energy sources.

Wind Turbines: Planning Applications

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of wind turbine or farm planning applications in each district council area which were (i) approved; (ii) rejected; and (iii) pending, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25131/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner.

Table 1 below details the number of applications for single wind turbines and wind farms decided in each of the last 5 years, broken down by Local Government District. Table 2 details the number of applications that are pending, broken down by year and LGD, as of 31 May 2013.

Notes:

1 31st May 2013 is currently our latest published information for pending RE applications.

Due to the significant interest in renewable energy applications a renewable energy report is now available on the planning website at <http://www.planningni.gov.uk/index/tools/about-statistics/renewable-energy.html> where you can view this detail of information.

Wind Turbines: Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment whether an Environmental Impact Assessment must be carried out before planning permission is granted for a wind turbine or farm.

(AQW 25132/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner.

Wind farms and wind turbines constitute Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) type development. If the development involves the installation of more than 2 turbines; or the hub height of any turbine or height of any other structure exceeds 15 metres, then a determination is undertaken to see if an Environmental Statement (ES) is required.

If an Environmental Statement is required, when submitted, it forms part of the information considered in determining whether or not Planning Permission may be granted.

All information regarding EIA on specific applications is available through the planning portal, or the paper file can be viewed in the local office upon request. The Department also has an obligation to keep EIA determinations on a public register which is available to view in the relevant local office at all times.

Wind Turbines: Location

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment (i) under what circumstances a wind turbine can be located within 500 meters, or less than 10 times the rotor diameter, of a domestic property; and (ii) how many wind turbines are located within this area.

(AQW 25133/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As a matter of best practice for wind farm development the Department will generally apply a separation distance of 10 times the rotor diameter to occupied property (with a minimum distance of not less than 500m) which should ensure that any significant impact on occupied dwellings will be minimised.

If a proposal were within 500m or within 10 times the rotor diameter of an occupied dwelling, the applicant would have to demonstrate that the noise output would not have a significant negative effect on the amenity of the dwelling.

The distances referred to are a best practice guide, and are not so prescriptive that locating a turbine within these distances would be impossible. Each application is considered on its own merit and determined accordingly.

It is not possible to readily identify whether or not approved turbines are located within 500m of a domestic property. To assess this would involve a manual search of around 1728 approvals (since April 2002) and would result in the diversion of staff from normal duties for an unreasonable period of time which would have an adverse impact on the Department's ability to provide the statutory public service for which it is obligated.

Staff: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of the Service.

(AQW 25149/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The number of staff employed in the Department's Press Office is 8, of which 6 are EIS staff and 2 administrative staff with total salary costs of £278,300.70.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Civil Service Vacancies: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of vacancies in the civil service in North Down, broken down by (i) grade; and (ii) Department.

(AQW 24778/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The information requested is set out in the table attached.

Irish Language Helpline

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he approved the circulation of the document 'Courtesy Translation. Re:Freagra - Irish Language Helpline/Gaelchultur' to departmental staff, and if so, why.

(AQW 25044/11-15)

Mr Wilson: My officials were notified of the existence of this free helpline in April 2013 and in the interests of value for money advised staff of its existence.

There was no requirement for my approval.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25071/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The information requested is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Family Support Hubs

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 24317/11-15, whether Derry will be included in the Family Support Hub proposal, given the high levels of child poverty in the Foyle constituency.

(AQW 24970/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): There are currently 3 family support hubs in Londonderry, Waterside, Shantallow and Creggan/Bogside. No more are planned.

The proposals to utilise the £3m outlined in my previous answer will support existing hubs, including those in Londonderry.

Postgraduate Students: Financial Support

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what financial support or grant package is available to full-time PhD students carrying out non-funded medical research as part of their degree.

(AQW 25019/11-15)

Mr Poots: This Department provides support for a small number of doctoral fellowships (PhD) from the HSC Research and Development (R&D) Fund. The awards are granted through annual competition and managed by the HSC R&D Division of the Public Health Agency.

In addition the Department for Employment and Learning, through its Postgraduate Awards scheme, makes available student support funding to Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster for research and certain approved courses of full-time study leading to higher degrees (Masters and PhDs). The universities are responsible for administering the Postgraduate Awards scheme and select, by competition, the students to fill these awards within the limits of funding available. This year the Department for Employment and Learning announced funding for an additional 100 PhD places in economically relevant subjects split between Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster. Furthermore, the Minister for Employment and Learning aims to increase the number of places year on year to double the total number of PhD awards to 1,000 by 2020. For academic year 2013/14, eligible students who are successful in securing a postgraduate award for a Research PhD course will receive a minimum studentship award of £13,726.

Prisons: Prisoner Medication Policy

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many prisoners in each prison facility have breached the Prisoner Medication Policy, after signing the required form; and how many of these prisoners have been charged under Prison Rules per facility in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25037/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information required to answer this question could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Vehicles

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list the vehicles used by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to transport patients.

(AQW 25039/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust generally uses the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) to transport patients to and from hospitals. Private ambulances are used for example when NIAS cancels bookings or is unable to take new requests for patient discharge, due to response demand as a result of 999 and urgent GP calls.

In addition patients are sometimes transported by taxi when no other mode of transport, such as public transport, Trust transport or private motor car, is available. Taxi transport must be hired from a list of contractors approved through the Trust's tendering process.

Cancer Treatment

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for the comparative numbers of individual funding requests for cancer drug and treatment availability in Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom.

(AQW 25090/11-15)

Mr Poots: Whilst information is available on individual funding requests for Northern Ireland, corresponding information from the relevant authorities in the rest of the UK is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Department of Justice

Prisons: Staff Numbers

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers were on duty in each prison, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 24974/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The data below provides details of the staff on duty on Friday 1 April 2011 and Friday 30 March 2012 for comparison purposes.

Maghaberry

On 1 April 2011 there were 383 officers on duty and on 30 March 2012 367 officers on duty.

Hydebank Wood

On 1 April 2011 there were 162 officers on duty and on 30 March 2012 162 officers on duty.

Magilligan

On 1 April 2011 there were 141 officers on duty and on 30 March 2012 146 officers on duty.

Prisons: Sexual Offences

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of prisoners that have been charged with committing (i) rape; (ii) indecent and/or sexual assault; (iii) lewd and/or obscene behaviour; (iv) any other sexual offence whilst in a prison facility in each of the last five years, broken down by prison facility, and of these how many were dealt with by the respective prison or prosecuted in an external court.

(AQW 25084/11-15)

Mr Ford: Information is not held separately on PRISM regarding prisoners who are charged with committing (i), (ii), (iii) or (iv) whilst in prison and prosecuted in an external court.

A prisoner carrying out an assault on another person whilst in custody may be subject to an internal charge under paragraphs 2, 3, 4 and 18 of Prison Rule 38. It would be of disproportionate cost to manually check all of these records.

Prisons: Deaths in Custody

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24334/11-15, (i) why this answer is at variance with the Prisoner Ombudsman's report into the near death of 'Mr C' and her comments to the media on 1 May 2013, which she said was critical of the effectiveness of the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Trust's approach to managing vulnerable prisoners, as well as raising concerns about the extent of the Supporting Prisoner at Risk procedures in delivering an appropriate level of care, and highlighting a clear need for a further review of how vulnerable prisoners are dealt with; and (ii) since the Director of Estates is accountable to him and has an ethical and professional responsibility to provide answers that are factually accurate, whether he will seek an explanation for any inaccuracies in his answer.

(AQW 25087/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) As stated in my answer to AQW 24334/11-15, the Director of Estates' statement was not a verbatim quote from the Prisoner Ombudsman's Report but reflected the Prisoner Ombudsman's public statements.
- (ii) These comments were made in the context of a wider analysis of the suicide prevention strategy whereby the Director of Estates acknowledged the issues of concern, underpinned his commitment to learning lessons and the need to embed a culture of care to change attitudes and behaviours alongside processes and systems.

Department for Regional Development

Magherafelt Bypass

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Regional Development whether a business case is required for a road scheme, and if so, if one has been submitted for the Magherafelt bypass.

(AQW 25104/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I confirm that a business case (economic appraisal) is required for all major road schemes.

Preliminary business cases carried out during the various stages of development of the Magherafelt Bypass scheme have indicated a positive return on the capital investment.

Following the Executive's recent confirmation of funding for construction of the Magherafelt Bypass, and in line with normal procedures, the final business case for the project will be submitted to the Department of Finance and Personnel for approval.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what consultation his Department has had with local councils on the subject of contractors manufacturing asphalt type materials for road works during the night and at weekends.

(AQW 25107/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does generally not consult with local councils in relation to the manufacturing of asphalt materials for road works undertaken during the night or at weekends. However, in instances where my Department is made aware of complaints regarding breaches of operating times or noise limits, reports are provided to the appropriate council.

Roads: Craigantlet Crossroads/Whinney Hill/Ballymiscaw Road

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 20623/11-15, for an update on the proposal for the construction of two new roundabouts at the Craigantlet crossroads and the junction of Whinney Hill and Ballymiscaw Road in North Down.

(AQW 25116/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Roads Service Consultant has completed a report on the alternative options put forward by local residents and final quality assurance checks are now being completed. Roads Service officials expect to receive this report shortly.

No decisions relating to the proposed scheme will be taken before the findings of this report have been given careful consideration.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Social Investment Fund: Steering Groups

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they issued guidance that lead or managing agencies for projects should only come from representatives on Social Investment Funds steering groups; and whether such guidance was equality proofed, given that members of steering groups were appointed as individuals and not organisations. (AQW 20347/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): Guidance was issued to Steering Groups to assist them during the area planning process and included advice on the identification of lead partner organisations coming from within the Steering Groups. That advice did not state that lead or managing agencies should only come from within the steering group. Decisions on lead partners will take into account which organisations are best placed to manage and oversee individual project delivery.

Steering Groups have now identified preferred lead partner organisations on their final plans and these are under consideration within the economic appraisals submitted to the Department for assessment

Children and Young People: Ten-year Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when a further action plan will be developed for the ten year children and young people's strategy; and when work will begin on a further children and young people's strategy. (AQW 21793/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The current Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People is due to continue until 2016. Work to further the aims of the Strategy is now being taken forward through the Delivering Social Change framework which seeks to address the linked issues of poverty and improving children's lives. Through Delivering Social Change, we are moving away from plans with long lists of existing activities towards smaller numbers of cross-cutting and strategic objectives which can really make a difference and which are additional to existing work across government.

The Children and Young People's Strategy is the key mechanism for the implementation of our obligations under the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) and the outcome of the forthcoming Periodic Review of the Convention will be critical in informing our assessment of how we can best deliver for children and young people post 2016.

In particular, as part of the Periodic Review of the UNCRC, a series of direct engagements with children and young people is currently underway. Account will be taken of the views expressed to help inform how best the needs of children and young people can be met. The recommendations of the UN Committee in their Concluding Observations at the end of the process will help us to identify those areas where further progress is needed.

The outworking of this process taken alongside the ongoing development of the Child Rights Indicator Framework, represents an excellent basis to review the effectiveness of the existing strategy and inform a clear strategic direction for co-ordinated Government action in the future to ensure that all of our children and young people have the best possible start in their lives.

Freedom of Information

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the Freedom of Information Request, OFMDFM/2012-0027, will be answered. (AQW 22812/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: This request was answered on 28 June 2013.

Assembly: Extension to the Current Mandate

Mr Elliott asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of an extension to the current Assembly mandate.

(AQO 4064/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The proposal to extend the current Assembly term to 2016 will bring us into line with the arrangements for Scotland and Wales and will avoid the poll being held on the same day as the next scheduled Westminster election.

Delivering Social Change

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether their Department had any role in determining whether signature projects, under the Delivering Social Change Framework, would be advanced.

(AQW 23430/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: On 10 October 2012 we announced six significant Signature Programmes under the Framework. Our Department is leading on the Delivering Social Change Framework, with lead departments now taking these programmes forward.

Delivering Social Change

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister who was responsible for deciding whether funding would be allocated to each of the Delivering Social Change signature projects.

(AQW 23431/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: On 10 October 2012 we announced six significant Signature Programmes under the Framework. Our Department is leading on the Delivering Social Change Framework, with lead departments now taking these programmes forward.

Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline (i) the annual government subvention required for the proposed Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre, as set out in the business case; and (ii) any additional funding streams identified in the development of a business plan.

(AQW 23802/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Any information relating to the business case is commercial in confidence.

Indecent Images of Children Online

Mrs Overend asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what action they have taken to limit the availability of indecent images of children online.

(AQW 23915/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Article 3 of the Protection of Children (NI) Order 1978 prohibits the possession, distribution and publication of indecent images of children under 18 years.

OFMDFM co-ordinates the work of relevant Departments through the Delivering Social Change Ministerial Sub-Committee on Children and Young People.

Similarly, we work on a cross-departmental basis with other relevant departments and agencies which have a remit for policing, regulating and raising public awareness around internet use in order to protect children and young people online.

The actions led by the Department include working with the UK Safer Internet Centre to raise awareness of safer internet issues through participating in Safer Internet Day held in February this year; networking with the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland to identify potential areas for collaborative working; commissioning a survey of internet use among P7 pupils across the region; taking forward a gap analysis to identify further actions to promote better internet safety for children and young people and liaising with external organisations such as NSPCC and the National Children's Bureau in Northern Ireland.

Magdalene Laundry

Ms S Ramsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on their inquiries into Magdalene Laundry type institutions.

(AQO 4235/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The recent reports regarding the Magdalene Laundry institutions in the Republic of Ireland have raised the question of how those who were resident in similar institutions here may address concerns.

Anyone who experienced abuse as a child within such institutions will be covered by the remit of the Inquiry into Historical Institutional Abuse. They will be able to talk in private about their experiences to two members of the Inquiry's Acknowledgement Forum. Contact details for the Inquiry are available on its website.

However, we are conscious that there may be a group that would not be covered as they were over the age of 18 during their residency.

We had appointed a senior civil servant to draw up a scoping report on the Magdalene Laundry type institutions here to see what further action could be taken. We received that report and we intend to give serious consideration to the options that have been laid out. We will consider the advice and options in the paper very carefully before deciding the way forward.

Freedom of Information

Mr Swann asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether, in answers to written questions, they give an answer that would be consistent if the same question was asked under a Freedom of Information request.

(AQW 24793/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) the Department is only required to provide information already held in recorded form. It does not have to create new information. However, in responding to Assembly Questions, the Department may create new information.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how much their Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24800/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM has incurred no expenditure on branded apparel in each of the last three years.

European Funding

Mr McElduff asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the Programme for Government commitment to increase the draw down of European funding by 20 per cent is on target.

(AQO 4420/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The revalidation of competitive EU funding drawdown by departments is now complete. A new baseline of £13.4m has been determined for 2010-11, giving rise to a four-year drawdown value of £64.4m.

Drawdown was £22.9m in Year 1 (2011-12) and £17.9m in Year 2 (2012-13).

Departments have secured competitive EU funds worth £40.8m at the mid-point of the Budget Period, representing 63% of the four-year drawdown value. We remain on target to meet this Programme for Government commitment.

Together: Building a United Community

Mrs Cochrane asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the financial implications of the Together: Building a United Community Strategy.

(AQO 4427/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Funding implications for the delivery of the actions and targets contained in Together: Building a United Community will be assessed by the design groups that we have established for each of the seven headline actions. The design groups will produce implementation plans with indicative costs.

Decisions on the proposals for funding for the delivery of the actions and targets contained in Together: Building a United Community will be made in due course.

Strategic Investment Board: Communication with Special Advisers

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether there is a protocol governing the Strategic Investment Board's communications with Special Advisers; and if not, whether they have any plans to introduce a protocol.

(AQW 24989/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Director of Equality and Strategy oversees all the work carried out in the Directorate. The role of the Directorate is to deliver high quality and timely support to us and the institutions of government. The involvement of the Directorate, and therefore the Director, in the Together: Building a United Community Strategy was fully in line with this role.

Initial design and delivery arrangements for all the Together: Building a United Community programmes are being taken forward by OFMDFM and other key departments.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

(AQW 22143/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): It is a matter for each of the Governing Bodies to deliver the community returns of each of the Stadiums.

My Department will review the Governing Body proposals to ensure that the maximum community returns are being delivered within the overall stadium programme.

Boxing: Funding

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the funding allocation for boxing and to detail the successful applications and the amounts awarded.

(AQW 22178/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI has identified an indicative funding package within its sports lottery funding of up to £3.27M to assist with the development of boxing. Following an expression of interest exercise a total of 94 boxing clubs have been identified as meeting the agreed eligibility criteria to receive boxing equipment under the first strand of the Boxing Investment Programme. Details of which clubs will receive equipment are attached. Sport NI, in association with the governing body for boxing, the Irish Amateur Boxing Association, is now progressing a procurement exercise for this equipment which will be distributed to successful clubs in due course.

(AQW 22207/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department considers community returns to include any initiative which promotes and positively impacts the well being of the overall community.

These returns can include amenities and improvements such as stadiums, pitches, projects which promote equality, tackling poverty and social exclusion etc.

It is a matter for each of the governing bodies to deliver the community returns of each stadium, which my Department will review to ensure that the maximum community returns are delivered within the overall stadium programme budget.

Together: Building a United Community

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what discussions she has had with the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister in relation to the proposals included in "Together: Building a United Community."

(AQW 22924/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Following the announcement of "Together: Building a United Community", a Departmental official attended a briefing session hosted by OFMDFM officials to set out the way forward for the design and implementation of each of the identified programmes included in "Together: Building a United Community".

A specific programme was announced to be led by DCAL which was the "Creation of a significant Cross-Community Sports Programme". The programme will initially be piloted at urban and rural interfaces and contested spaces with a view to rolling it out across communities.

Business Cases

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the business cases that are with her for decision; (ii) the value of each of the proposed investments; and (iii) the date on which each of business case was received/referred.

(AQW 23101/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am currently considering one business case.

The business case is yet to be formally approved. Until it is approved, the conclusions reached may be subject to change. Therefore it is not appropriate to release the details of the project at this stage.

GAA: Funding

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, following her predecessor's comments on 29 September 2009 about funding for GAA clubs named after terrorists, whether she is aware of any changes made to the grant-making arrangements for Sport Northern Ireland.

(AQW 23735/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am not aware of any sports organisations that are named after any deceased person whom all sections of the community label as having been a so-called terrorist.

Commonwealth Games

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why her Department is not planning to promote and mark the arrival of the Queen's baton as part of the Commonwealth Games celebrations.

(AQW 23749/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for making plans to promote and mark the arrival of the Queen's Baton to the north of Ireland as part of the 2014 Commonwealth Games celebrations rests with the NI Commonwealth Games Council (NICGC), the lead body for Commonwealth sport here.

Together: Building a United Community

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she was consulted in advance of the announcement by the First Minister and deputy First Minister on Together: Building a United Community, in respect of issues relevant to her Department and, if so, how and when.

(AQW 23811/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Issues such as cohesion, sharing and integration; good relations; reconciliation; economic pact; etc have long been under discussion at Executive level. Together: Building a United Community is part of that overall process. Following the announcement of "Together: Building a United Community", a Departmental official attended a briefing session hosted by OFMDFM officials to set out the way forward for the design and implementation of each of the identified programmes included in the initiative.

A specific programme was announced to be led by DCAL which was the "Creation of a significant Cross-Community Sports Programme".

City of Culture 2013

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action her Department has taken to ensure that the venue in Derry's Ebrington Square is secured as a permanent arena after the 2013 City of Culture year.

(AQW 24016/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I recognise that The Venue 2013, funded primarily by DSD, is an essential space for hosting medium and large scale events included in the City of Culture Cultural Programme during 2013. My main focus in terms of the City of Culture is to deliver a lasting legacy for local people. The continued need for The Venue will be considered as part of this legacy planning.

It is worth noting that my Department has invested significantly in the development of arts infrastructure in Derry over the last ten years with the refurbishment of the Playhouse, Waterside Theatre, Cultúrlann Uí Chanáin and the Gasyard Centre. The Millennium Theatre is also one of the largest theatres in Ireland.

Sports Stadiums: Optimism Bias

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) for what Optimism Bias can be used; (ii) the amount of the Optimism Bias being held by her Department for the redevelopment of (a) Casement Park; (b) Windsor Park; and (c) Ravenhill Stadium; and (iii) the projects which may be funded by the Optimism Bias.

(AQW 24136/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

- (i) Optimism Bias is the term used to describe the process whereby an additional allowance is allocated to the capital budget of a project to ensure that any tendency for project appraisers to be overly optimistic about project costs, duration and benefits at the outline stage of the project is accounted for.

Therefore optimism bias can be used to cover any deficiencies in project costs, duration and / or benefits which were not fully considered or understood at initial budget development stage.

- (ii) An overall Optimism Bias budget of £8,710,000 has been identified within the £110 million stadium programme budget. DCAL is responsible for the management of the stadium programme Optimism Bias budget.

The following Optimism Bias amounts are currently being held by DCAL for the redevelopment of each stadium:

- £6,008,000 for the redevelopment of Casement Park
- £1,835,000 for the redevelopment of Windsor Park
- £867,000 for the redevelopment of Ravenhill

- (iii) Optimism Bias may be used to fund the project identified within the FBC for each of the Stadiums.

Parades: Socio-economic Impact

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 23497/11-15, when she will be in a position to make a substantive comment on the report.

(AQW 24262/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am aware of the research findings in the DSD funded report but I note that the figures quoted do not take account of the negative impacts on both tourism and potential investment caused by the disruption and trouble linked to contentious parades.

My Department, through the Arts Council and the Ulster Scots Agency currently provides funding to marching bands from all communities to maintain and develop the level of music making within the sector.

Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the impact on scientific research following the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute's decision to replace experienced staff with contract staff at the Bushmills Research Station. (AQW 24353/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) has recently recruited two contract workers to provide temporary cover for two vacant Assistant Scientific Officer posts at the Bushmills Salmon Station, pending the recruitment of permanent staff to these posts.

My Department is satisfied that this temporary arrangement will provide continuity for the important scientific research undertaken by the AFBI at the Bushmills Salmon Research Station.

Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she, or her Department, were consulted by the Agri-Food and Bioscience Institute prior to the significant staff changes at the Bushmills Research Station. (AQW 24354/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The staffing complement deployed by the Agri-Food and Bioscience Institute (AFBI) to undertake the agreed works is specified in a Service Level Agreement (SLA) between DCAL and AFBI.

DCAL officials regularly meet with AFBI management to discuss the progress of works detailed in the SLA and this would include staffing issues.

Football Tournaments

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list the football tournaments for which her Department has provided funding in each of the last three years; and the amount of funding provided in each instance. (AQW 24517/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department, through Sport NI, has provided funding to two football tournaments in each of the last three years, up to 31 March 2013. The details are as follows: -

Foyle Cup

- 2012/2013 - £7,000

Milk Cup

- 2012/13 - £7,000

- 2011/12 - £15,000
- 2010/11 - £20,000

During this current financial year (2013/14), the Foyle Cup received £20,000 through the Culture Company and the 2013 City of Culture programme. In addition, following a successful bid in the June Monitoring Round, an additional £10,000 each has been provided for the 2013 Foyle Cup and 2013 Milk Cup tournaments.

Netting of Salmon off the Coast

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 22086/11-15, whether the other netsmen who had held licences in the previous season received any compensation or did they not reapply for their licences.

(AQW 24526/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The other netsmen who held licences in 2012 have not received compensation to date, nor have they applied for licences for the 2013 fishing season.

Anglers with Disabilities

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what progress has been made on securing a stand for anglers with disabilities in Dungiven.

(AQW 24637/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: As Dungiven is located within the Loughs Agency jurisdiction it would be the Agency rather than DCAL that would consider any angling related development proposals.

Disabled facilities are available at the Public Angling Estate waters of Binevenagh Lake and Moor Lough which are the closest to the town of Dungiven.

The Department is planning to construct a new angling stand which will be suitable for disabled anglers at Binevenagh Lake

Tree and Hedge Cutting Contracts

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many tree and hedge cutting contracts her Department, and its arm's-length bodies, awarded between 1 March and 31 August, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24638/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The number of contracts for tree and hedge cutting awarded by the Department and its arm's-length bodies in these periods are detailed in the table below.

Period	Number of Contracts Awarded
1 March to 31 August 2010	1
1 March to 31 August 2011	5
1 March to 31 August 2012	1

Lough Neagh Dollaghan

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the work being carried out by Queen's University Belfast on the establishment of a genetic baseline for the Lough Neagh Dollaghan; and whether she will provide assistance to the project.

(AQW 24649/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The work being carried out by Queen's University Belfast on the establishment of a genetic baseline for the Lough Neagh dollaghan will help inform the Department's future policy in relation to the conservation and protection of dollaghan stocks.

My officials will meet with those involved in the work to consider how DCAL can contribute to the work to establish this genetic baseline.

World Police and Fire Games 2013: Cultural Programme

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the application process and criteria for groups wishing to access funding to deliver content for the Cultural Programme for the World Police and Fire Games 2013.

(AQW 24670/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There was not an open call to make applications for funding to deliver DCAL's summer cultural programme which aims to complement the World Police and Fire Games. The cultural programme was an extension of activities already on offer by my Department's Arms Length Bodies and PRONI. It also incorporated additional cultural events from two established Belfast Festivals which coincide with the Games, namely Féile and the McCracken Summer School. Further activities were delivered by the Belfast Film Festival, again an established festival which had a highly successful run in April of this year.

My Department was keen to enhance the experience of international visitors and local people in supporting the Games and welcomes the Assembly's support in showcasing our culture during this important summer to increase the potential for a positive legacy from the Games for local people.

World Police and Fire Games 2013: Cultural Programme

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail how the £500,000 bid for the Cultural Programme for the World Police and Fire Games 2013 will be spent.

(AQW 24671/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The DCAL Cultural Programme to complement the World Police and Fire Games was supported by a business case which identified the need to maximise the significant opportunity afforded by the Games to promote and showcase local culture, arts and leisure to local people and international visitors during the summer period.

Spend under the business case has been directed at a diverse range of arts and cultural events coinciding with the Games and therefore increasing the potential for a positive legacy for local people.

World Police and Fire Games 2013: Cultural Programme

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the content of the business cases provided by the (i) Belfast Film Festival; (ii) West Belfast Festival; and (iii) McCracken Summer School, for the Cultural Programme of the World Police and Fire Games 2013.

(AQW 24673/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The business cases identified how each organisation could complement the World Police and Fire Games and achieve the overall aim of the cultural programme, which was to enhance the experience of international visitors and local people and showcase the culture and artistic talent of the north.

Sport Northern Ireland: Vacancies at Board Level

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a timescale of the appointment of the Vice Chairperson to the Board of Sport Northern Ireland.

(AQW 24675/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is currently anticipated that the appointment of a Vice Chairperson to the Board of Sport NI will take place in December 2013, subject to a suitable candidate being found from an open competition.

Sport Northern Ireland: Vacancies at Board Level

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a timescale for the filling of vacancies to the Board of Sport Northern Ireland and to detail the appointments process and whether such appointments will create religious and gender balance.

(AQW 24684/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is currently anticipated that the vacancies on the Board of Sport NI will be filled by December 2013, subject to suitable candidates being found from an open competition.

The process for appointing individuals to the Board of Sport NI will be carried out in accordance with the Commissioner for Public Appointments NI 'Code of Practice for Ministerial Public Appointments in NI'. Public appointments are made on the basis of merit and only those judged to best meet the requirements of the post are appointed, whilst ensuring that the Board is balanced in terms of skills and experience. Factors such as gender and religious background do not play any part in the decision of who to appoint or who not to appoint. The Department is aware of its responsibility to ensure equality of opportunity and equal treatment of all applicants at every stage of the appointment process, as required by the Code of Practice. The Department will also seek to encourage applications from individuals from a wide range of groups, including women, people with a disability and people from ethnic minorities.

DCAL Properties Not In Use

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to provide details of all the properties in the ownership of her Department which are not in use; and the length of time that this has been the case.

(AQW 24712/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The table below provides details of properties that are not in use and the length of time this has been the case.

Each of the properties has been made available for disposal or is being considered for alternative use.

Owner	Unused Properties	Unused since
Libraries NI	Ligoniel Library	2010

Marching Bands: Funding

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the funding that is available to marching bands; and (ii) when applications for funding open.

(AQW 24741/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council provides funding to bands through the Musical Instruments for Bands Scheme which opens on an annual basis, generally in April. The dates for the 2014 programme are not yet set. Their Small Grants Programme, to which Marching Bands may apply for tuition or other project costs, is open on a rolling basis.

The Ulster-Scots Agency run a Music and Dance Tuition Programme and Marching Bands may apply to this for support. The programme is currently closed but is due to reopen in Autumn 2013.

Marching Bands: Funding

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the funding that is available to marching bands for uniforms.

(AQW 24742/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department does not fund the provision of uniforms for marching bands.

The Arts Council provides funding to bands through the Musical Instruments for Bands Scheme and the Small Grants Programme. The Ulster-Scots Agency also provides funding for musical tuition through its Financial Assistance Scheme.

These schemes, however, do not provide funding to assist with the costs of new band uniforms.

Sign Language

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what assistance is provided to the parents of deaf children who wish to learn sign language.

(AQW 24744/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department provides secretariat support and funding for the Sign Language Partnership Group which brings together organisations representing the Deaf Community and 11 government departments to improve access to public services for British and Irish Sign Language users.

There is a clear distinction between my Department's remit to promote British Sign Language and Irish Sign Language as indigenous languages and the provision of services to provide sign language classes for deaf individuals and their families which may be the responsibility of other Departments such as the Departments of Education, Employment and Learning and Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

Notwithstanding this, in 2012/13 my Department provided a grant of £8,810 to the National Deaf Children Society (NDCS) for its Family Sign Language Courses project which was directed at families in the Portadown and Newtownabbey areas. The project provided early intervention to help families of young deaf children who want to use BSL to learn some signs and phrases needed for nursery rhymes, stories, playing make-believe games as well as the tools for practical communication about food, sleeping and nappy changing, for example. This contributed to DCAL's remit by promoting sign language to the families of deaf children as the emphasis in education for deaf children is 'oralism' ie teaching the child to speak where possible despite hearing loss.

Snooker and Billiards: Funding

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the level of funding provided to (i) snooker; and (ii) billiards, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 24861/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Within the last five years, up to 31 March 2013, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, provided exchequer funding of £25,832 to both snooker and billiards. The funding was provided to purchase snooker tables on which both snooker and billiards can be played and, as such, the level of funding between the two sports cannot be differentiated. The detail of funding provided is outlined below: -

Financial Year	Organisation	Purpose	Amount
2010/11	Stadium Youth and Community Centre, Belfast	Purchase of eight full size snooker tables	£25,832

Woodstock Rhythm and Blues Festival

Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether the Woodstock Rhythm and Blues Festival will be included in the cultural programme associated with the World Police and Fire Games 2013.

(AQW 24864/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The cultural programme which aims to complement the World Police and Fire Games is an extension of activities already on offer by my Department's Arms Length Bodies and PRONI. It also incorporates additional cultural events from three established Belfast Festivals two of which coincide with the Games.

The Woodstock Rhythm and Blues Festival is supported by the Arts Council and, as such, will be reflected in my Department's summer Cultural Programme.

Lough Neagh Salmon Nets

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the number of nets licensed to take salmon from Lough Neagh; (ii) the number of salmon recorded as being taken, by legal nets, from Lough Neagh; (iii) the number of tags issued to Lough Neagh nets men; and (iv) the number of salmon found in illegal nets in Lough Neagh, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25038/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

(i) Number of draft nets licensed to take salmon from Lough Neagh

	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012
Number of nets	18	20	16	20	21

(ii) Number of salmon recorded as being taken, by legal nets, from Lough Neagh

	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012
Total catch	56	nil	9	36	20

(iii) Until 2010, each licensed netsman on Lough Neagh was initially issued with 20 salmon carcass tags with his licence. Further tags could be issued upon submission of a fully completed salmon catch return. Since 2012 the initial allocation of tags has been reduced to 10.

(iv) In the past five years DCAL Fisheries Protection Officers have found one salmon carcass in illegal nets seized on Lough Neagh.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that her Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by her Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25101/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My department has successfully defended one legal case since 2007.

There is an on-going judicial review of the DCAL decision to fund the Windsor Park project.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Northern Ireland Economic Outlook

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the recent Northern Ireland Economic Outlook publication by PriceWaterhouseCoopers.

(AQO 3850/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): PwC identifies the particular impact of the downturn on Northern Ireland. Indeed, it is for this reason that we have been fighting to retain Regional Aid and to gain the power to reduce corporation tax.

The report suggests that Northern Ireland is showing increasing signs of stability and may be on a path of modest recovery. This is in tune with the sentiments set out in my Department's economic brief, published last month.

It is pleasing to note that the report highlights the positive performance of the tourism sector over the last year, in addition to a number of significant business investments.

It is important that we continue to follow the path outlined in our Economic Strategy, to encourage export-led growth, and rebuild and rebalance our economy.

Industrial Development Board

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she has any plans to adopt the recommendation in the Westminster Public Accounts Committee report into the Industrial Development Board, to replace the term 'jobs promoted' with 'jobs created'.

(AQO 3853/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have no plans to replace Jobs Promoted with Jobs Created. However, my Department and Invest NI have developed plans to track both Jobs Promoted and Job Created, and indeed are already monitoring both of these measures in respect of the Jobs Fund.

Economic Growth

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment in light of the recent announcement on Corporation Tax, to outline her strategy for enabling economic growth.

(AQO 3852/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I remain confident that the actions detailed in the Economic Strategy and Programme for Government will deliver growth, increase prosperity and create jobs.

However, it must be recognised that the Economic Strategy's key economic objective of rebalancing the local economy would be delivered more quickly if we had the power to vary the rate of Corporation Tax.

The NI Economic Strategy is based on the need to drive forward export-led economic growth. We will do this by pursuing greater investment in R&D and innovation, developing our skills base, supporting local SMEs to develop supply chain linkages; ensuring the appropriate infrastructure is available and rebuilding the local labour market to address the impact of the global downturn.

Barnett Consequentials

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she had with the Minister of Finance and Personnel on the utilisation of the Barnett consequentials following the most recent budget delivered by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

(AQO 3857/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have met the Finance Minister on a number of occasions recently to discuss a wide range of issues including the implications for the NI economy of the recent Budget.

The allocation of any Barnett consequentials resulting from the Chancellor's announcement will, of course, be a matter for the whole Executive.

Review of Public Administration: Tourism

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the proposals for devolving tourism functions to local councils under the Review of Public Administration.

(AQO 3861/11-15)

Mrs Foster: A number of key changes have taken place around the tourism functions since they were last considered for transfer. Local marketing is now being undertaken by councils and the development of local tourism area plans by councils also gives them the lead in functions such as local product development, visitor servicing and development of the sector at local level.

The tourism functions which remain on the transfer list are:

- Small scale tourism accommodation development
- Providing business support including business start up advice along with training and delivery of customer care schemes
- Providing advice to developers on tourism policies and related issues.

I am happy to consider other options for transferring tourism functions to councils if a case is presented.

Inward Investment

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline any overseas trips she proposes to undertake in 2013 to promote inward investment.

(AQO 3859/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I currently intend to accompany the Invest NI trade and investment missions to Brazil and South Africa during 2013.

This provides me with the opportunity to meet potential investors to promote Northern Ireland as a place to do business.

It also allows me to thank existing investors for their support and to impress upon them how essential it is that Northern Ireland and Invest NI have their continued commitment in our drive to secure further Foreign Direct Investment.

In addition, I am able to provide personal support to the companies on the Trade Missions in their efforts to secure export agreements.

Jobs Promoted: Foyle

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many of the 405 jobs promoted in the Foyle constituency in 2011/12 were newly created jobs.

(AQO 3860/11-15)

Mrs Foster: A company contracts with Invest NI to create an agreed quantity of jobs, which are referred to as "Promoted Jobs". These jobs are always new jobs and will be created over an agreed time period. Therefore, all of the 405 jobs referred to by the member are new jobs.

Hotel and Bed and Breakfast Sector: South Down

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when she expects capital grant assistance to become available through InvestNI for the hotel and bed and breakfast sector in South Down.

(AQO 3862/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Capital grant assistance is currently available through Invest NI for the establishment or expansion of hotels and for the expansion of bed and breakfast businesses throughout Northern Ireland.

In addition, DARD, under Measure 3.3, encouragement of tourism activities, of the Rural Development Programme, provides the opportunity for rural dwellers to apply for funding to enhance existing Bed and Breakfast facilities, with the exception of providing funding for additional bed space.

The Invest NI Tourism Team will consider any applications from promoters in South Down.

G8 Summit

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what business opportunities will develop as a direct result of the forthcoming G8 Summit in Fermanagh.

(AQO 4021/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The G8 summit 2013 will provide a singular opportunity for Northern Ireland to showcase itself to a global audience as a positive place to live, work, visit, study, invest and do business with.

Aside from the immediate economic benefit to our tourism and hospitality sectors, we understand that the organisers of the Summit expect to use local products and services wherever possible.

In the longer term, we would hope that the international media exposure which will come from the Summit will support our efforts to win new inward investment and for our local companies to develop their export activity.

C S Lewis

Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what the Northern Ireland Tourist Board is doing to market Northern Ireland as the home of C.S. Lewis.

(AQO 4019/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) recognises the importance of the C.S. Lewis legacy to Northern Ireland's cultural tourism agenda, particularly given the 50th anniversary of C.S. Lewis's death in 2013.

NITB works with Belfast City Council and the East Belfast Partnership to ensure the C.S. Lewis legacy is promoted to domestic and international visitors.

NITB also promotes the C.S. Lewis legacy through its promotion of literary tourism in Belfast and Northern Ireland.

NITB provided £113,000 funding for the development of the Literary Belfast app and website through the Tourism Innovation Fund. It continues to work with Belfast City Council on this project to develop it further and enhance literary events and offering for tourists.

Horizon 2020

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what opportunities will exist for local businesses from the upcoming EU Horizon 2020 Funding.

(AQO 4020/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The exact details of the specific opportunities for businesses under Horizon 2020 have yet to be finalised as the European Commission is still completing their negotiations with Member States.

However, the NI Horizon 2020 Action Plan for 2013, which my Department published earlier this year, identifies a range of actions that will ensure our companies and research organisations have the necessary support to be successful in Horizon 2020.

A major part of this is the appointment of experts in the key thematic areas of Horizon 2020, and they will work directly with companies and researchers in supporting them with applications.

Petroleum Licence PL1/13

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the number of objections to, and responses in support of, the granting of the new petroleum licence PL1/13 from named persons during the consultation period.

(AQO 4022/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As at 6 May a total of 243 representations had been received by my Department. Of these, 226 were predominantly representations by individual members of the public and several organizations objecting to the proposal. A substantial proportion of these objections were submitted as standard template copy letters and 9 came from outside Northern Ireland including the Irish Republic, the United States, Australia and Bolivia.

All appeared to assume that exploration might involve hydraulic fracturing of shale and/or be targeted also at lignite deposits. Both of these assumptions are erroneous as the targets identified in the licence application are conventional oil or gas reservoirs.

Of the remaining representations received, including those from District Councils whose areas fall within the proposed licence area, some have requested additional information or for certain considerations to be taken into account in the granting of the licence, but none to date have objected.

Invest NI: South Antrim

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much money Invest NI secured for South Antrim in each of the last five years.

(AQO 4023/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Between 1st April 2007 and 31st March 2012, Invest NI offered support to businesses which planned to invest £151 million within the South Antrim constituency. The value in respect of each individual year was £11.9 million in 2007-08, £31.4 million in 2008-09, £16.5 million in 2009-10, £71.8 million in 2010-11 and £19.5 million in 2011-12.

Titanic Belfast

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what changes are being made to the tourism strategy to take account of the impact on visitor numbers resulting from the success of the Titanic Building, as well as the continued support from HBO and the BBC filming their productions locally.

(AQO 4024/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Challenging targets have been set in the Programme for Government to increase both visitor numbers and, more importantly, tourism revenue by December 2014. These targets were set on the basis of new world class tourism product coming on stream such as Titanic Belfast and the Giant's Causeway Visitor Experience, and the anticipated impact of the ni2012 campaign and the exciting events happening this year such as the UK City of Culture and World Police & Fire Games.

In order to meet our visitor targets my Department's 'Priorities for Action' Plan for tourism also includes a commitment to develop stronger linkages between creative industries and the tourism sector in such areas as film and TV. NITB and Tourism

Ireland liaise closely with Northern Ireland Screen, and I am delighted with the tremendous success that we have had in promoting Northern Ireland as a major production centre across a number of mediums over the last few years.

Inward Investment: West Tyrone

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action her Department is taking to address the lack of prospective inward investors being hosted by InvestNI in the West Tyrone constituency during the past 4 years.

(AQO 4025/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI works to market all of Northern Ireland as an investment location. Potential investors choose the locations they want to visit by looking at a number of factors including availability of skills or suitable infrastructure, and how well these meet the needs of their specific investment project. Invest NI then facilitates the visits to these areas.

I am aware of the issues facing many of our local areas and my Department is committed to working with local stakeholders to maximise opportunities for their areas. In the current economic climate it is important that all stakeholders, local councils and Invest NI work together to promote Northern Ireland as a viable investment location.

We will continue to focus on promoting the whole of Northern Ireland and potential investors will look at locations which are best considered to meet their needs depending on the specific project in question.

The Innovation Growth Centre based at Omagh, to officially open for business by the end of May 13, is an excellent example of regionally based infrastructure with access to first class facilities such as superfast broadband, and business support services making it attractive to potential investors.

Invest NI's International and Regional Teams are due to meet shortly with representatives of Omagh Chamber of Commerce and Council Officials to discuss International Investment.

Invest NI's Chairman has written to all Councils inviting them to work to develop Unique Selling Propositions for their individual Council areas.

It is also planned to provide funding under the LED Competitiveness Programme to support Councils to develop localised content for a Northern Ireland wide Application for Apple and Android operating systems focused on FDI.

Anglo-North Irish Fish Producers Organisation

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has had with representatives of the Anglo-North Irish Fish Producers Organisation, and other commercial fisheries stakeholders, in relation to the development of an offshore wind farm off the County Down coast.

(AQO 4026/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has consulted and encouraged all the main fishing organisations to engage fully in the various meetings and stages of the ongoing consultation process in relation to offshore renewable energy deployment. The Anglo-North Irish Fish Producers Organisation, ANIFPO has actively participated in all of the meetings and has engaged fully and constructively in this process.

I have met with representatives of ANIFPO on a number of occasions, once with representatives of the Northern Ireland Fish Producers Organisation and will shortly be meeting the NI Trawlermen's Association on this issue.

I do recognise that it is essential to fully understand the impact on the local fishing industry arising from the development of offshore renewable projects. The Environmental Impact Assessment process will look at the potential impacts on the environment and marine users and it is imperative that the fishing community, along with other key stakeholders, fully engage in this process.

Giro d'Italia 2014

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the tourism and economic benefits of the Giro d'Italia visiting Armagh City in 2014.

(AQO 4191/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The key aim is to showcase Northern Ireland, including Armagh City, on a local, national and international stage. It is also the aim to raise the profile and change perceptions both in terms of a great venue for cycling as well as a place to visit, work, study and invest.

I expect the event to be of significant benefit to Armagh City.

Trade Links with India

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her Department's trade links with India.

(AQO 4192/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am happy to report that from my first trade mission to India in September 2009 and my most recent trade visit in April 2012, along with the First and deputy First Ministers, Northern Ireland's manufacturing exports to India have increased by over 50 per cent, from £17.8 million in 2009 to £27.4 million in 2012.

India continues to be a challenging market for Northern Ireland companies to increase exports. To enhance trade opportunities, around 30 Northern Ireland companies have established a base in India to enable them to compete in the market.

Invest NI continues to support local companies in their efforts to expand exports into India, with Invest NI offices in Mumbai and Bangalore carrying out detailed market research and arranging appointments for visiting companies. Invest NI regularly updates its export programmes in India in order to meet the challenges of this difficult market. Two trade missions, involving 29 companies, visited India in 2012/13.

The Global India conference will be held in Belfast during June 2013 and Invest NI plan to use this event as an export catalyst.

Invest NI: Jobs Target

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether InvestNI will be able to meet their 25,000 jobs target as outlined in the Programme for Government 2011-2015.

(AQO 4193/11-15)

Mrs Foster: At 31st March 2013, Invest NI has promoted 13,870 new jobs against the Northern Ireland Executive's 25,000 job target. This represents excellent progress in what have been extremely challenging economic conditions.

Invest NI is now in a strong position to achieve the four year Programme for Government target, and I can assure you that Invest NI and my Department will work tirelessly to maximize employment opportunities for our whole community.

Mobile Telephone Communications and Broadband: Fermanagh

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the long-term improvement in mobile telephone communications and broadband in Fermanagh as a result of the telecommunications infrastructure improvement following the G8 Summit.

(AQO 4194/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am aware that several telecommunications companies are making improvements especially around the Summit venues and I am informed that some of these improvements will remain after the Summit. This will benefit consumers close to those areas. In the longer term the industry continues to make investments across the county as it prepares to extend 3G services and prepares to deliver the next generation of mobile services. I am assured that all this will see enhancement to services.

Growth Loan Fund

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration is being given to expansion of the Growth Loan Fund.

(AQO 4196/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The £50million Growth Loan Fund has approved over 30 loans to a value of more than £7million. The pipeline of demand is strong at present. Nevertheless, at this point in time the Fund has considerable funding available to approve.

Invest NI is closely monitoring demand and meets with the loan fund manager on a monthly basis. Should demand and loan approvals remain strong then Invest NI will make a business case to satisfy the demand from viable businesses.

Development of Indigenous Businesses

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her proposals to support the further development of indigenous businesses.

(AQO 4197/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive is committed to growing the Northern Ireland economy through a focus on export-led economic growth.

The Northern Ireland Economic Strategy includes a wide range of measures which will support growth in our indigenous businesses and enable many of them to compete in international markets.

To complement the measures set out within the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy, my Department is developing a range of further Action Plans to address key issues facing local businesses.

Invest NI Land: Downpatrick

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what her plans are for the future use of unused InvestNI land in Downpatrick.

(AQO 4198/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There are 49 acres of land available at Invest NI's business parks in Downpatrick.

Invest NI is currently working with two businesses to further develop their interests in acquiring land in the Downpatrick area. It can, however, take a long period of time for interests to convert to actual sales and investment. Securing the necessary funding and achieving all relevant statutory approvals can be important factors in determining when an investor will be able to implement their growth project.

NI Events Company

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why the investigation into the NI Events company has taken five years instead of the projected maximum of two years.

(AQO 4199/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The duration of the investigation into the Northern Ireland Events Company is reflective of the complexity of the issues to be addressed in this case.

Economic Growth

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her priorities regarding the fiscal levers which would stimulate economic growth.

(AQO 4200/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My priority remains gaining the power to set a lower rate of Corporation Tax in Northern Ireland, which could rebalance our economy, create jobs and increase prosperity. I will continue to press for this important measure despite the delay in the Prime Minister reaching a decision until Autumn 2014.

In addition, the proposals currently being developed as part of the Economic Pact will also stimulate economic growth. It is intended that these measures will be put in place, pending the Corporation Tax decision.

Hotels: Downpatrick

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what support her Department can give towards the provision of a new hotel in Downpatrick.

(AQO 4385/11-15)

Mrs Foster: New hotel developments may benefit from capital support from Invest NI if the promoter can demonstrate that the project is market driven with the capability of attracting visitors from outside Northern Ireland and not displacing business from similar projects. New hotel projects offering at least 30 rooms and achieving at least a 3-star classification under NITB's grading scheme will be considered for support.

It may also be possible for an hotel promoter to apply for assistance under the Jobs Fund which provides employment grant support to investment projects

World Police and Fire Games 2013

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact on the local economy of the organisers of the World Police and Fire Games 2013 confirming that they will not meet their target of ten thousand competitors.

(AQO 4388/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The World Police and Fire Games will be the largest multi sport event that Northern Ireland has ever hosted.

Although the number of participants may be less than originally forecast, it will still be a major event and provide another platform to promote Northern Ireland to a wide audience. It will follow on from a very successful G8 Summit here.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board continues to provide information encouraging visitors to extend their stay.

G8 Summit: Economic Benefit

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the action she intends to take to maximise the economic benefit of hosting the G8 Summit.

(AQO 4397/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The G8 Summit in Fermanagh has been an unprecedented opportunity to showcase a modern and forward looking Northern Ireland that is a great place to visit, to work and to do business. We have been working hard to ensure that we capitalise on the worldwide opportunities the summit presents not only for trade development, but also for changing perceptions, creating awareness about Northern Ireland, stimulating a sense of civic pride and driving visitor numbers.

I am looking forward to the investment conference that the Prime Minister will be supporting in the autumn.

Trade: Human Rights

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she places an emphasis on ensuring compliance with human rights during discussions on trade and investment with representatives of foreign governments.

(AQO 4390/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI's target markets for trade and investment are those countries that present the best opportunity for Foreign Direct Investment or Northern Ireland exports. That is not to say that Invest NI acts without regard to other factors. When considering whether to target a new market, advice is sought from colleagues at both the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and UK Trade and Investment on human rights issues.

I am, therefore, satisfied that any of the foreign governments with whom I meet to discuss trade and investment can be considered suitable trading partners.

Economic Growth

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her proposals for increasing both the efficiency and growth of the economy.

(AQO 4392/11-15)

Mrs Foster: It is the responsibility of all Executive Departments, through the commitments they have made within the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy, to help grow the private sector and rebalance the economy towards one where a greater number of firms compete in global markets and there is growing employment and prosperity for all.

Research indicates that it is exposure to external markets that drives efficiency and productivity improvements in individual businesses and regional economies such as Northern Ireland.

That is why the key focus of the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy is on supporting export-led economic growth.

Natural Gas Network

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the extension of the natural gas network to the Mid Ulster area.

(AQO 4393/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Following Executive approval in January 2013 of up to £32.5 million grant support towards extending the natural gas network to towns in the West including Dungannon, Cookstown, Magherafelt and Coalisland, my Department is currently working towards securing State aid approval from Brussels.

In parallel, the Utility Regulator has recently consulted on the process for the licence competition, with the aim of making a licence award in early 2014. It is anticipated that main pipeline construction works could begin before the end of 2015.

Tourism: Booking Arrangements and Visa Procedures

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on measures to promote a seamless process of booking arrangements and visa procedures for prospective tourists coming to this island.

(AQO 4394/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I welcome proposals within the economic support package for Northern Ireland, announced on 14 June 2013, to develop visa waiver arrangements between the UK and the Republic of Ireland starting with the introduction of a pilot scheme. This pilot, subject to the appropriate safeguards, and agreement between both Governments, will permit visitors from a range of overseas destinations to enter Northern Ireland and Great Britain on an Irish visa without the need for a separate UK visa.

Department of the Environment

Planning Application Q/2011/0220/O

Mrs Dobson asked Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 18988/11-15, to detail the reasons for the delay in a decision on planning application Q/2011/0220/O.

(AQW 20228/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): A recommendation will be brought to the next available Banbridge District Council.

EU Funding Programmes

Mr Brady asked the Minister of the Environment how many of his departmental officials are allocated to deal specifically with EU funding programmes.

(AQO 3480/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department has a small team which currently has a complement of 4 full time staff who deal specifically with the promotion of, and drawdown from, competitive EU funding streams for climate change and energy projects. This team supports the work of the Climate Change and Energy Thematic Group established under the Barroso Task Force Working Group. In addition to this, other DOE policy and operational staff are involved in providing specialist input on projects as required although specific information on this type of input is not readily available. The Department also has access to the services of the Climate Change and Energy Desk Officer in the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels.

DOE Senior Management know of the importance and priority I give, and which must be given, to potential EU funding. This is essential given the opportunities presented by new funding programmes commencing in 2014 and the relatively low level of drawdown to date in the North. As an example, £55m has been drawn down in the North under the current FP7 programme compared to around £600m in the South. Horizon 2020, which is the successor to the FP7 project, is likely to have a total budget in the region of £60bn and this is an opportunity that must not be missed. I held a gathering in September 2012 of EU, DOE, SEUPB and Enterprise Ireland personnel to identify how this work could be taken forward. This is work I believe must be developed and I have instructed officials to continue to work closely with these organisations to ensure that the potential benefits are realised.

Northern Colletes Bee

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, in addition to the Northern Ireland Environmental Agency's Species Action Plan published in 2006, what plans his Department has to protect and help the Northern Colletes bee flourish on the North Coast. (AQW 23012/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department jointly funded a PhD study on the "Conservation Biology and genetics of a rare mining bee, Colletes floralis" centred on the North Coast area of Northern Ireland.

Since the re-discovery in 2003 of the Northern Colletes at four sites on the North Coast, after an absence from Northern Ireland of 70 years, there has been much interest in its local distribution and biology. Several surveys have been conducted and following the PhD study a number of scientific papers have been published adding to the knowledge base required to promote the protection of this rare species.

The PhD study also identified a number of management conclusions and recommendations which are available to site owners/managers. Many of these recommendations have been passed on to land managers in its four main breeding sites and much positive work has been delivered as a result. The bees require areas of bare sand in close proximity to certain native wildflowers, and management prescriptions which favour these conditions, such as light grazing of the sites, have been introduced.

Northern Colletes Bee

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether an assessment will be carried out on the impact of the construction of Bushmills Dunes golf course on the survival of the Northern Colletes bee, given that the area hosts one quarter of the world's population of this species.

(AQW 23013/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Northern Colletes bee, Colletes floralis, is a small solitary mining bee. Some 90% of the world's population is thought to be located in coastal areas of Ireland. The species was recorded as absent from Northern Ireland records between 1933 and 2003, when it was re-discovered in four sites on the North Coast: - Magilligan Dunes, Portstewart Strand, Bushfoot Strand and White Park Bay.

When proposals were submitted for a major golf facility at Runkerry the possibility of such an important species being present was raised. A survey of C. floralis was requested as part of the Environmental Statement accompanying the application. A site survey in 2007 did not locate any C. floralis within the proposed development area. The absence of the species was confirmed in a resurvey of the site in 2011.

The potential impact of the construction of the Bushmills Dunes golf resort on the Northern Colletes Bee was therefore properly assessed during the processing of the planning application. The conclusion was that the development would not give rise to significant effects on the species. Following a challenge to the decision by the National Trust, the permission was held to be lawful by the Courts.

Planning Applications: Delay

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications have been in the planning system for more than three years, broken down by (i) council; and (ii) planning division area. (AQW 23841/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As a result of initiatives put in place over the last year, progress has been made to reduce the number of applications in the system over 12 months.

As of 30 April 2013 a total of 423 planning applications have remained in the system for more than three years.

Table 1 below outlines the number of such applications by planning area office, and by Local Government District.

Table 1: Planning applications outstanding that were received on or before 30/04/2010, as at 30/04/2013

Recycling Businesses

Mr Hamilton asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the impact that the proposed increase in fees for transfrontier movements of waste will have on recycling businesses.

(AQO 4217/11-15)

Mr Attwood: DEFRA has provided the Department with details of all responses received from organisations in Northern Ireland to the consultation on the proposed Transfrontier Shipment of Waste (amendment) Regulations. My officials have reviewed those responses and contacted the relevant recycling businesses who voiced their concerns. The main impact identified by those companies related to the possibility of a no refunds policy being introduced by the Department. Whilst the Agencies in England Scotland and Wales only provide refunds for notifications of waste movements which have been rejected or fail to commence, the NIEA are proposing to introduce a refund policy which ensures the Department returns monies for activities which have failed to transpire thus ensuring full cost recovery by the Agency isn't exceeded.

Officials also discussed better utilisation of the general notification system with those companies identified and have established that by using the system to its full potential, the costs incurred by the companies could be lower than those under the present fee structure.

Based on the responses to the consultation I am assured that the impact of the proposed fee structure would not be prohibitive to the recycling businesses providing the notification system is utilised to its full potential.

SSE

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment what consideration has been given to SSE Wind's recent fine of £10.5 million by Trading Standards for breaching procedures, given the fact that the Lisnaharney Wind Farm proposal is under investigation by the same body.

(AQW 24148/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The fine you refer to was imposed by Ofgem. Ofgem has stated that customers contacted by SSE were exposed to misleading statements, inaccurate and misleading information on SSE's charges, and misleading comparisons between SSE's charges and costs of other suppliers.

The planning application for the Lisnaharney wind farm proposal is currently being assessed by my Department. Any issue relating to trading standards is for the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation to comment upon.

Wind Turbines: Liability

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how he intends to address the issue of third party claims, in relation to wind turbines, for liability against the landowner; and whether he plans to amend legislation on this issue.

(AQW 24332/11-15)

Mr Attwood: PPS 18 'Renewable Energy' sets out the Department's planning policy for development that generates energy from renewable resources. The principal aim of PPS18 is to facilitate the siting of renewable energy generating facilities in appropriate locations within the built and natural environment in order to achieve Northern Ireland's renewable energy targets and to realise the benefits of renewable energy.

Policy RE1 requires that no development proposal will result in an unacceptable adverse impact on human health. In addition, applications for wind energy development are required to demonstrate that wind turbine development will not cause significant harm to the safety or amenity of any sensitive receptors (including future occupants of committed developments) arising from noise; shadow flicker; ice throw; and reflected light.

With respect to wind farm development, PPS18 sets a general amenity separation distance of 10 times rotor diameter to occupied property with a minimum distance not less than 500m. Further information and guidance on the safe siting of wind turbines is set out in the Best Practice Guidance accompanying PPS18.

While planning policy aims to secure the orderly and consistent development of land and the planning of that development, issues relating specifically to liability are a matter between the turbine owners and the land owners and as such lie outside the planning system.

Ballinlea 1 Test Well

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether an environmental impact assessment was conducted on the Ballinlea 1 test well; and if so, to provide further details.

(AQW 24479/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Due to its size and location the proposed test well fell below the thresholds which would trigger the requirements set out in the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (NI) 1999.

Ballinlea 1 Test Well

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to list the chemicals which have been used in the drilling fluids in the Ballinlea 1 test well; and the quantities of the chemicals used.

(AQW 24541/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Data on the drilling fluids used has been supplied by the operator to DETI.

Wind Energy

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the benefits and drawbacks of wind energy.
(AQW 24714/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I agree with the advice I have received from the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment (DETI) that wind is one of the most cost effective and proven renewable energy technologies and that it has an important part to play in a responsible and balanced Northern Ireland energy policy. Wind energy development cuts carbon emissions, reduces our reliance on fossil fuels and improves energy security. DETI however advise that wind is, by its nature, intermittent, hence the need for a mix of renewable technologies.

Furthermore I consider that renewable energy technologies (including wind energy) present the potential to develop an indigenous renewable energy industry and provide a range of opportunities to support the Northern Ireland economy, including through direct and indirect employment opportunities; revenue to the owners of the land on which they are built; employment in the manufacture of components and services; and opportunities for rural diversification.

Finally I am satisfied that the planning process is adequately robust to ensure that all relevant planning considerations are fully taken into account in determining proposals for wind energy.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the timescale for the publication of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan.
(AQW 24982/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department plans to publish BMAP on completion of the relevant statutory processes and following the issue by DRD of a certificate of general conformity with the Regional Development Strategy 2035.

Planning: Developments near Airfields

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment what requirements are in place for Planning Service to consult with the Civil Aviation Authority in relation to proposed developments near licensed and unlicensed airfields.
(AQW 25121/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Under Article 15 of the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 the Department is required to consult the District Council and the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland. These are the only two statutory consultees DOE Planning is required to consult.

DOE Planning regularly consults with other authorities or bodies likely to have an interest in, and observations to make in respect of proposed developments. The expert advice of these non-statutory consultees plays a key part of the development management process.

In 2003 the responsibility for the administration for Airport Public Safety Zones moved from the Civil Aviation Authority to Airport Operators.

There are currently two Airport Public Safety Zones in Northern Ireland, one at George Best Belfast City Airport, and the other at Belfast International Airport. The Department will consult the relevant airport operator on receipt of any planning applications which are adjacent to or within either of the two airport public safety zones in Northern Ireland.

DOE Planning will consult with the Civil Aviation Authority (Directorate of Airspace Policy) in considering the impact planning applications for particular types and scales of development, such as wind farms, have on the airspace safeguarding areas around airports. In addition, Belfast International Airport is also consulted on all wind energy applications. Other airports – i.e. City of Derry, Belfast City, Enniskillen and Newtownards are consulted where a wind energy proposal is within 30km of the airfield. This is to safeguard against developments that could adversely affect safe operations.

The Department does not hold records of private airfields or of their owners and therefore does not consult directly with such persons/organisations.

Wind Farms: Noise

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the methods of measuring and assessing acceptable wind farm noise within Planning Policy Statement 18.
(AQW 25141/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 18 – ‘Renewable Energy’ aims to facilitate the siting of renewable energy facilities in appropriate locations in order to achieve Northern Ireland’s renewable energy targets. Proposals for wind farms and single turbines will be permitted provided that the proposal will not result in an unacceptable adverse impact on a number of criteria including public safety, human health and residential amenity.

Best practice guidance associated with PPS18 recommends the use of national guidance contained in the ETSU-R-97 report in the assessment and rating of noise from wind energy developments. Where necessary, the relevant District Council environmental health officials will be consulted on wind farm and single turbine planning applications and will provide the Department with their expert advice and opinion on the interpretation and application of ETSU-R-97.

At the request of the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) in England, the Institute of Acoustics (IoA) recently established a working group to examine the application of ETSU-R-97. This group published a 'Good Practice Guide', in May 2013, on the application of ETSU-R-97 methodology. The aim of this guide is to provide up to date advice to ensure that noise assessments are carried out in a thorough and, as far as possible, consistent manner and that all necessary information required by District Council environmental health professional consultation is provided. In this context, I am satisfied that the methods of measuring and assessing acceptable wind farm noise within Planning Policy Statement 18 are adequate.

Department of Justice

Noel Parker

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 22900/11-15, (i) when the administrative error was first discovered; and (ii) whether the prisoner was temporarily released on the impression that he was attending his daughter's wedding, or was the error reflective of the answer provided to AQW 21633/11-15.

(AQW 24515/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): An investigation into the facts and circumstances surrounding this incident is underway. I will endeavour to respond to the member's question following the outcome of the investigation.

Prisons: Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, since the introduction of Supporting Prisoner at Risk processes were introduced and replaced any previous practice, how many prisoners have self-harmed, attempted suicide or died by suicide (i) whilst the subject of a Supporting Prisoner at Risk process; (ii) having been the subject of a Supporting Prisoner at Risk process which was since closed; and (iii) having never been the subject of a Supporting Prisoner at Risk process.

(AQW 24573/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below provides a breakdown of the number of prisoners who have self harmed by each category requested. Prisoners may be recorded in more than one category depending on the individual circumstances when either the self harm or attempted suicide occurred and as the data includes any previous custodial periods.

Subject to SPAR procedures	Had been subject to SPAR procedures that were closed	Never been subject to the SPAR procedures
357	389	151

Figures relating specifically to suicide attempts can not be provided in the format requested due to the current electronic recording of this data on the Prison Record Information System (PRISM). Some of the incidents of self harm reported above will include suicide attempts.

The Prison Service can not provide data for any prisoners who died by suicide for the timeframe requested as the Coroner has yet to give a verdict. However, the table below shows the deaths recorded by the prison service as self inflicted by each category requested.

Subject to SPAR procedures	SPAR procedures which have since closed	Never been subject to the SPAR procedures
1*	7*	6*

* Includes one death which occurred out of prison custody but has been recorded by the prison service due to the circumstances of the death.

Department for Regional Development

Traffic Calming Measures: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on plans for traffic calming measures in North Down. (AQW 23848/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I would remind the Member that information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information/cinformationtype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

I can advise that the detailed budget for subsequent years has not yet been finalised and it is therefore not possible to provide details of future works programmes at this time.

Roads: Resurfacing

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how much has been spent on road resurfacing, in each of the last five years, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 23995/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not maintain an analysis of expenditure in the format requested, however, it does analyse expenditure on Structural Maintenance by District Council and resurfacing is a component part of Structural Maintenance. Analysis of this expenditure for each of the last five years is detailed in table 1.

In addition, whilst officials cannot provide an analysis of the amount spent on resurfacing by Council area, table 2 provides details of the comparison between the total amount spent on resurfacing in Northern Ireland, for each of the last five years, and the total spend on Structural Maintenance over the same period.

Railway Network: Sligo and Derry

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what discussions he has had with his counterpart in the Dublin Government about availing of European funding to connect Sligo and Derry by rail.

(AQW 24842/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The exploration and securing of European funding opportunities remain an ongoing priority for my Department, and we are continuing our efforts to seek further funding for upgrading of the Belfast to Dublin Enterprise service in this context. Irish Rail's Rail Strategy Network Review, published in 2011, considered the proposal to create a new rail connection from Londonderry into Donegal and beyond; the conclusion of which was that it would not be economically viable to do so in the period up to 2030.

Railway Network: Dunloy

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will consider the introduction of a railway stop at Dunloy between Ballymoney and Ballymena.

(AQW 24844/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In designing and delivering services, including the need for, and benefits of, additional railway halts, Translink must strike the right balance between delivering fast, efficient and limited stop services and the potential increase in passenger demand arising from increases in the population catchment areas.

Translink advise that the application of established passenger demand forecasting models would indicate that demand would be insufficient to justify an additional halt near Dunloy.

In addition, operation of regular services in both directions on a single line track requires trains to arrive at the passing-loop at regular scheduled times.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by his Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25025/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) The number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that my Department has defended since 2007 and
- (ii) the number of these legal challenges lost by my Department are detailed below.

Financial Year	The number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that the Department has defended	Number of challenges lost
2007/08	2,555	957
2008/09	2,935	1,107
2009/10	3,658	1,301
2010/11	3,759	1,861
2011/12	2,927	1,794
2012/13	2,574	952

- (iii) The total costs incurred on cases that were lost cannot be provided as the departmental accounting system cannot disaggregate between the legal costs associated with successful and unsuccessful defences.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development how many times his Department has required a roads contractor to manufacture asphalt materials, for road works, during the night or at weekends since May 2011; and at which locations this took place.

(AQW 25065/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In order to minimise delays to traffic and inconvenience to residents and businesses, my Department, occasionally requires a roads contractor to carry out road works outside normal working hours. This has meant that, on some occasions, contractors have had to manufacture asphalt materials during the night or at weekends. This situation has occurred on 207 occasions since May 2011. The following table provides location details of the road schemes and manufacturing plant at which the asphalt was manufactured:

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any current road works schemes in which his Department requires a contractor to manufacture asphalt materials during the night or at weekends.

(AQW 25066/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the locations of the current road schemes which my Department intends to undertake works during the night or weekends are listed below:

- Sandelford Bridge, Coleraine;
- Artillery Road, Coleraine;
- Strand Road Car Park, Londonderry;
- Foyle Road Car Park, Londonderry;
- Bishop Street, Londonderry;
- Glen Road, Braniel, Belfast;
- Glen Road, Belfast;
- Cairnshill Road, Belfast;
- Newtownards Road Roundabout, Bangor;
- North Road, Belfast
- A32 Irvinestown Road, Enniskillen (at Levaghy);
- A509 Main Street, Derrylin;
- A34 Main Street, Lisnaskea;
- Swinging Bars Roundabout, Omagh;
- A31 Castledawson Road, Magherafelt; and
- A1 Dual Carriageway between Hillsborough and Banbridge (various locations).

It is, however, the responsibility of the contractor or their supplier to determine when the material required for these schemes is actually manufactured and to comply with relevant legislation when doing so.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what criteria he applies when taking a decision on whether roads contractors should operate heavy machinery or undertake manufacturing during the night or at weekends.

(AQW 25067/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Quarrying and the manufacture of construction materials is a heavy industrial process. I recognise that there has to be a balance between the needs of the construction industry for materials and the rights of neighbours.

Quarries must comply with noise and pollution regulations which are enforced by District Councils. In addition, quarries must comply with conditions set out in their Planning consent which are enforced by Planning Service

On occasions, my Department's Roads Service requires contractors to carry out resurfacing works at nights at weekends, to minimise disruption to the travelling public and to ensure that work can be done safely. Such decisions take into account the impact on local services such as schools, churches, businesses, emergency services and public transport providers, in addition to the impact on those living in proximity of the works.

If materials have to be manufactured overnight it is the responsibility of the contractor's supplier to comply with the relevant regulations

A careful balance has to be struck between safety, disruption, quality and value.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what actions are taken to ensure that contractors who are manufacturing asphalt materials for road works during the night or at weekends do not contravene statutory noise nuisance.

(AQW 25068/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Department of the Environment's Air and Environmental Quality Unit is responsible for the legislation and policy on noise control.

With regard to the manufacture of asphalt materials for road works, noise limits for specific sites producing these materials are contained within the relevant planning permissions. The enforcement of noise control legislation, for either night or weekend work within these sites, is a matter for Environmental Health departments of the local council.

If you have particular concerns about a specific site I would suggest that you contact the appropriate local council in the first instance to discuss the relevant issues and ascertain if indeed there is a contravention of noise control legislation at the site.

I am not aware of any asphalt manufacturing plant that has been served with a notice in relation to the contravention of noise regulations and in particular any plant that has been served with such a notice while carrying out work directly related to the laying of road surfacing material for my Department.

If you become aware of any site that has been issued with a notice by the local council in relation to the contravention of noise regulations which relates directly to a contract with my Department I will be happy to meet with you to discuss the issue.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department ensures that statutory noise nuisance is avoided to attenuate potential problems for local residents as a result of work undertaken during the night and at weekends whilst manufacturing asphalt type materials.

(AQW 25106/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to his Assembly Question AQW 25068/11-15.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what consultation his Department has had with local residents on the subject of contractors manufacturing asphalt type materials for road works during the night and at weekends.

(AQW 25108/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is normal practice for my Department, or its contractor, to notify frontagers (residents and businesses), prior to the start of any works, that asphaltting resurfacing and/or minor road improvements will be carried out in their vicinity during the night or at weekends. This notification can take the form of advanced warning signs and, on occasion, letter drops.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the circumstances under which he could remove contractors from the select list of firms who carry out road works due to consistent contravention of noise nuisance regulations during the manufacture of asphalt type materials for road works.

(AQW 25109/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to his Assembly Question AQW 25068/11-15.

Roadworks: Night and Weekend Operations

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will consider a policy change to penalise contractors who consistently contravene noise restrictions during the manufacture of asphalt type materials for road works.

(AQW 25110/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to his Assembly Question AQW 25068/11-15.

Department for Social Development

Social Housing Developments

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 19181/11-15 and AQW 19176/11-15 and in relation to new build completions in 2011/12, (i) what date retention has been released to the main contractors on each of the projects; (ii) in cases where retention hasn't been released, to detail the reasons why; (iii) what checks have been made to ensure that sub-contractors receive retention monies on each of these projects; and (iv) what penalties are in place for main contractors who delay and withhold retention monies.

(AQW 24593/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): Housing Associations have provided the information recorded in the Table attached, in relation to (i), (ii), (iii) and (iv). They have also explained that generally one half of the retention monies are released in the payment made following Practical Completion (Tranche 1). The remaining retention monies are released in the payment made following completion of the Maintenance Period (Tranche 2), which normally has a twelve month duration from Practical Completion and is subject to the issue of the Making Good Defects Certificate. Therefore full retention release will not be paid until the contract administrator is satisfied that all defects have been satisfactorily remedied.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Single-skinned Properties: South Antrim

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of single skinned properties in South Antrim, broken down by town; and whether there are planned major repairs to alleviate the fuel poverty issues arising from single skinned properties.

(AQW 24770/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as neither my Department nor the Housing Executive collates information on the number of single skinned properties in the Private Sector by Parliamentary Constituency.

With regard to the Social Housing Sector, the table below details the number of Housing Executive single skinned properties in South Antrim, broken down by District Office area and town.

Table: Housing Executive single skinned properties in South Antrim

District Office	Town/village	Aluminium Bungalows	No Fines	Orlit	Timber Framed	Pre 1940	Rural Cottages
Antrim	Antrim	0	538	27	25	0	0
Antrim	Randalstown	18	0	0	0	0	7
Antrim	Crumlin	9	0	0	0	0	0
Newtownabbey 1 & 2	Newtownabbey	8	248	0	0	5	0
Newtownabbey 2	Ballyclare	10	0	0	0	0	2

In relation to Housing Executive stock generally, the main programmes aimed at addressing fuel poverty are: -

- Heating Replacement Programme – now includes loft insulation top-ups
- Heating Adaptations
- Double Glazing
- Heatsmart (energy advice)

In relation to No Fines dwellings, the Housing Executive are considering taking forward a range of initiatives to alleviate associated problems with no fines dwellings, following some pilot projects.

In relation to Housing Associations, there are two single skinned properties in Templepatrick, owned by one Housing Association. They were restored about ten years ago and were extended using cavity wall construction with cavity insulation and faced with basalt stonework, so that some rooms have a mixture of single-skin and cavity walls. The solid walls were insulated on the internal face and the floors were fully insulated as was the roof, while the windows have secondary glazing to reduce heat loss.

Together: Building a United Community

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQWs 23814/11-15 and 24313/11-15, apart from ongoing discussions what specific consultation the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister had with his Department prior to the announcement of 'Together: Building a United Community Strategy'.

(AQW 24781/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I would refer the Member to the answer I gave in response to AQW 24313/11-15 and would add that I had no specific consultation with the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister prior to the announcement of 'Together: Building a United Community Strategy'

Campbell Tickell Investigation

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 24342/11-15, on what date did the Board of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive appoint Campbell Tickell; and how is this appointment recorded in the minutes of the Board meeting.

(AQW 24782/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Chairman of the Housing Executive, in his press release dated 10 June 2013, stated that the Board of the Housing Executive had commissioned an independent review into how the organisation has been dealing with planned maintenance contracts over the last five years following evidence of substantial overcharging. The initial processes of appointing the consultant at that time were managed by the Chairman and are not therefore recorded in the minutes of a Board meeting at the time of appointment.

Mr McCausland: The Appeals Service (TAS) cannot provide information prior to 2008/09 as it was retained on an IT system which is no longer accessible.

The table below outlines the number of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) and Employment Service Allowance (ESA) appeal hearings where the record shows the appellant was supported by an MLA.

Social Housing Units in Ballymena, Ballymoney and Moyle: Double Glazing

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development (i) how many social housing units in (a) Ballymena; (b) Ballymoney; and (c) Moyle are planned to have double glazing installed, broken down by street; and (ii) how many houses in these areas have had double glazing installed, broken down by street.

(AQW 24914/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I assume the Member is referring to Housing Executive properties. Table 1 details the Housing Executive properties by road/street in Ballymena and Ballymoney which are included in the double glazing programme that is expected to commence in late 2013/14. The Housing Executive has advised that their records indicate that this will complete the double glazing programme in these areas although this does not include properties in the Stock Transfer Programme or properties where work has been refused by the tenant.

The Housing Executive's double glazing programme within their Ballycastle local office area, which covers the Moyle district, is complete. Details of these properties and those completed in Ballymena and Ballymoney are included in Table 2.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how much his Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24923/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The amount spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff in the last 3 years was as follows:

2010-11	209
2011-12	Nil
2012-13	1,023

Housing Executive: Heating Replacement Programme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has considered prioritizing Housing Executive tenants who are of pensionable age when installing new heating systems, in order to ensure that their homes are adequately prepared for the onset of winter.

(AQW 24950/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that their heating replacement programme is based on the age and condition of existing heating systems within the property and not on the age of the current tenant. The Housing Executive is responsible for keeping existing heating systems in working order. Should tenants who are of pensionable age have any problems with their heating systems they should advise the Housing Executive who will ensure they are attended to by a heating contractor.

Doury Road, Ballymena

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development when he will unveil the plans for the Doury Road area of Ballymena.
(AQW 24998/11-15)

Mr McCausland: On 3 June my Department granted approval to a Housing Executive economic appraisal which will see the Victoria Park part of Doury Road significantly improved. Implementation will be considered by the Housing Executive Board at its next meeting on 31 July.

I have made arrangements for the member to be further updated following that meeting.

Turkington Holdings

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development whether his meeting with Turkington representatives in May 2012 included representatives of the Glass and Glazing Federation.
(AQW 25032/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I did not meet with Turkington representatives in May 2012. However, I would refer the Member to my answer provided to AQW 13779/11-15 in relation to my meeting with the Glass and Glazing Federation on 16 April 2012.

Turkington Holdings

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development why the draft letter that originally stated that he had met with Turkington was changed to read that he had also met with Fusion 21 about double glazing.
(AQW 25033/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I had also met with Fusion 21 on 23 April 2012. In relation to this matter I advised the Assembly on the 8 July that there was a minor error with regards to the grammar and detail of the response in my initial answer to AQW 11512/11-15 on this subject. The correct position is that I also met with Fusion 21 on 23 April 2012 to discuss generally their procurement model. Fusion 21 then raised the issue of the Housing Executive's double glazing programme with my officials who advised that, as this was an operational matter for the Housing Executive, they should contact the Housing Executive's Head of Procurement to discuss this.

Fusion 21

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of Fusion 21's statement that it did not meet with him to discuss double-glazing, why he informed the Committee for Social Development that he had met with Fusion 21 on this issue.
(AQW 25034/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to this matter, I informed the Assembly on Monday 8 July 2013 that the details of the initial meeting with Fusion 21 were set out in an Assembly question for written answer, AQW 11512/11-15. However, there was a minor error with regards to the grammar and detail of that response. The correct position is that I also met with Fusion 21 on 23 April 2012 to discuss generally their procurement model. Fusion 21 then raised the issue of the Housing Executive's double glazing programme with my officials who advised that, as this was an operational matter for the Housing Executive, they should contact the Housing Executive's Head of Procurement to discuss this.

Housing Executive: Investigation of Contractors

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 24243/11-15, in relation to each of the four contractors, to detail how many contracts were found by Moore MacDonald to have been overcharged.
(AQW 25043/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that Moore MacDonald considered 20 schemes, four from each of the Housing Executive's five geographical management areas that were in place at that time. Overpayments were discovered in all schemes investigated. A list of those schemes relating to each of the four contractors is detailed below.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Social Development whether he was aware that the owner of Turkington Holdings had nominated a Member of the DUP for election to the Assembly, when he met with the company's representatives in May 2012, to discuss double glazing specifications in Housing Executive properties.

(AQW 25062/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I did not meet with Turkington Holdings representatives in May 2012 to discuss double glazing specifications in Housing Executive properties.

However, I would refer the Member to my answer provided to AQW 13779/11-15 in relation to my meeting with the Glass and Glazing Federation on 16 April 2012. I was not aware at that time that the owner of Turkington Holdings had nominated a member of the DUP for election to the Assembly.

Red Sky

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development what legal advice he sought before and after his meeting in June 2011 with Red Sky and other DUP MLAs; and to detail the advice.

(AQW 25093/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As I informed the Assembly on Monday 8 July 2013, I sought advice from the Departmental Solicitor's Office before the meeting with Red Sky on 27 June 2011, which advised that Ministers may meet such persons as they choose.

Red Sky

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development on what basis he sought legal advice before meeting in June 2011 with Red Sky and other DUP MLAs.

(AQW 25094/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As I informed the Assembly on Monday 8 July 2013, I sought advice from the Departmental Solicitor's Office before the meeting with Red Sky on 27 June 2011, as I was being asked to meet individuals from a company in administration and wanted to be assured of the probity of my actions.

Red Sky

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development who invited him to a meeting with Red Sky in June 2011, which he attended with other DUP MLAs.

(AQW 25095/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Councillor Robin Newton MLA wrote to me on 17 May 2011 asking me to agree to a meeting with representatives of Red Sky.

Red Sky

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rationale for his request of 27 June 2011 to extend the length of the Housing Executive's contract with Red Sky.

(AQW 25096/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My position in relation to the termination of the Red Sky Group contract by the Housing Executive in July 2011 has been a matter of public record for some time. Shortly after taking up office in May 2011, I expressed my concerns about contract management, both on foot of briefing on the governance review findings carried out in 2010 and on the issues leading to the termination of the Red Sky Group contract in July 2011. Although there has been a great deal of speculation and innuendo that I sought either to extend the contract with the Red Sky Group or to assign the contract to a new company, that was not the case.

In particular my letter to the then Chairman on 7 July, makes it clear that I believed the most appropriate way forward was for an open procurement exercise for the Red Sky Group contracts to be undertaken rather than automatic assignment to adjacent contractors. This was subject to the administrator being able to provide assurance that those contracts could be serviced until such an exercise could be undertaken. When the Housing Executive advised that the administrator could provide services only until the end of July and that, thereafter, it was intended that the company would be sold and, from that date, the service could be provided only by a new company and it would take in the region of four months for an open procurement exercise, I confirmed to the then Chairman that the Housing Executive should proceed with the termination of the Red Sky Group contracts and reassign those contracts.

Housing Executive: Investigation of Contractors

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development what evidence he was in possession of in June 2011 regarding the improper conduct of Housing Executive contractors other than Red Sky.

(AQW 25111/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As I informed the Assembly on 8 July 2013, I was aware in June 2011 that wrongdoing was not restricted to one contractor. The Housing Executive was already investigating another contractor in relation to issues first raised in 2010.

Red Sky

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to open tenders for contracts, for his assessment of the potential advantage afforded to Red Sky of his meeting in June 2011 with the company.

(AQW 25112/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I would refer the Member to the answer provided in AQW 25096/11-15. There was no potential advantage afforded to Red Sky as a result of my meeting with them on June 2011.

Totalis Solutions

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development what knowledge he had of Totalis Solutions before, during and after his meeting with Red Sky in June 2011.

(AQW 25113/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I informed the Committee for Social Development on Thursday 4 July 2013, that at the meeting with Red Sky in June 2011, there was no mention of Totalis Solutions and I was not aware of the company at that time.

Housing Executive: Investigation of Contractors

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of investigations that were instigated into Northern Ireland Housing Executive contracts by former chair Brian Rowntree, including the (i) date; (ii) scope; and (iii) the full outcome of each investigation.

(AQW 25137/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive advises that eight investigations were initiated into Northern Ireland Housing Executive contracts during the tenure of the former Chairman, Brian Rowntree. The table below shows detail in relation to (i); (ii) and (iii) of the question:

Date	Scope	Full outcome of each investigation
2005	The Housing Executive's Counter Fraud Unit undertook an investigation into a number of allegations received in relation to the former Red Sky Group.	A file was submitted to the PSNI, who concluded that there was insufficient evidence of criminality to proceed with prosecution.
August 2009 – October 2010	Following information received from the Northern Ireland Audit Office, the Housing Executive commissioned an external review of response maintenance services provided by the former Red Sky Group in six Districts.	The ASM report identified overcharging and unsatisfactory workmanship. The report was used to recover overpayments from the company.
2010 – 2011	Following receipt of the ASM report the Housing Executive's Repairs Inspection Unit undertook a further review of the response maintenance services provided by the former Red Sky Group.	The reports identified further overpayments and findings were used to recover amounts from the then administrator of the company. On the basis of these investigations and those undertaken by the external consultant, the Housing Executive's Board decided to terminate the contracts held by Red Sky Group
2011 – 2012	On the basis of the two previous investigations, the Housing Executive's Counter Fraud Unit undertook an investigation into certain aspects of the services provided by the former Red Sky Group	Files were submitted to the PSNI, who concluded that there was insufficient evidence of criminality to proceed with prosecution.

Date	Scope	Full outcome of each investigation
January 2010 - October 2010	The Housing Executive's Repairs Inspection Unit undertook an investigation in response maintenance services in one District by the former company, Leeway Maintain.	The report identified overpayments and poor workmanship. These findings were used to recover amounts from payments due to Leeway Maintain, which was then in administration. This decision was challenged by the administrator and is now scheduled for court hearing in September 2013.
November 2011 – July 2012	In response to concerns about overcharging which had been raised by the Housing Executive's Scheme, Inspection Unit (SIU), Internal Audit was asked to investigate a number of planned maintenance kitchen replacement schemes.	Internal Audit produced a report which identified evidence of overcharging on the scheme selected by them for detailed investigation. This scheme was further investigated by Moore MacDonald as part of its sample of kitchen replacement schemes.
August 2010 – ongoing	The Housing Executive's Counter Fraud Unit was asked to undertake an investigation into concerns raised in connection with invoices submitted by a construction company	On the basis of the report produced by the Counter Fraud Unit, the company was suspended from new contracts and a file was submitted to the PSNI. The matter is still under consideration by the PSNI.
2007 – 2013	The Housing Executive undertook an investigation into contract management services provided on its behalf by a private sector professional consultancy company	The investigation has concluded that there had been both negligence and incompetence on the part of the company which resulted in a substantial sum being paid to the Housing Executive by the company's insurers.

Areas at Risk Programme: Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding has been made available for the Areas at Risk programme, since being awarded to Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee.
(AQW 25166/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Beechfield Estate been allocated funding of £67,766.00 from the Area's at Risk programme for the period 1 April 2011 to 31 March 2014 to finance a range of community projects drawn up by the Beechfield Residents Association Planning Team.

Written Answers to Questions

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Families Acting for Innocent Relatives

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if the Central Investigation Service has conducted an investigation into funding for Families Acting for Innocent Relatives, and if so, who requested the investigation.
(AQW 25282/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Central Investigation Service (CIS) has not conducted an investigation into funding for Families Acting for Innocent Relatives.

In 2010 the Special European Union Programmes Body (SEUPB) commissioned auditors to investigate concerns in relation to Families Acting for Innocent Relatives' (FAIR) management of three projects which were in receipt of funding from the EU Programme for Peace and Reconciliation (Peace III).

From the auditor's findings the SEUPB determined that expenditure incurred under the projects was not eligible for support under EU regulations.

Under the Service Level Agreement in place between CIS and the SEUPB, SEUPB sought the view of CIS as to whether or not any of the irregularities included in the auditors report merited further investigation.

SEUPB subsequently referred the auditor's report to the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) to take forward an investigation.

DARD Headquarters Relocation

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the findings of the consultation on the relocation of her departmental headquarters to Ballykelly.
(AQO 4511/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The formal consultation period for the Equality Impact Assessment on the decision to relocate the DARD headquarters to Ballykelly closed on 5 July 2013. The Formal Consultation Document was issued to over 500 stakeholders and a total of 24 responses were received. None of the respondents provided evidence of any further equality impacts that should have been considered.

My decisions to relocate Forest Service to Fermanagh, Rivers Agency to Loughry and Fisheries Division to South Down are now undergoing Equality impact assessments and when complete I will publish a full combined EQIA report on all four relocation projects.

DARD Headquarters Relocation

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the relocation of her departmental headquarters.
(AQO 4510/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Much preparatory work has been undertaken by officials in moving this programme forward. This has included full consultation with Trade Union Side, undertaking surveys of staff not only within my Department but across the whole of the Civil Service. My officials completed a full Equality Impact Assessment, commissioning DFP to undertake a site options study and ensured that sound governance arrangements have been put in place to guide the overall programme of work.

The outcomes of this work have been incorporated into a business case which is currently with our departmental economists for consideration.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline how she plans to reduce the number of occurrences of Bovine Tuberculosis.

(AQO 4512/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: TB is a very complex disease and there is no simple solution or 'quick-fix'. We have a robust TB eradication programme in place that is based on testing to detect infected cattle, removing infected animals and reducing the risks of disease spread through movement controls and other biosecurity measures. At any time, around 90% of our herds are free of TB.

Considerable work has been undertaken to enhance the TB eradication programme in recent years. We now remove as reactors those animals that give an inconclusive result to a second consecutive TB test rather than after a third test as before. We have improved communications with Private Veterinary Practitioners and strengthened the supervision process. We have improved DARD's own delivery of TB testing through monitoring Key Performance Indicators (KPIs). We also use DNA identity tags on reactors to help reduce reactor identity queries, substitution fraud and associated disease risks.

However I am not complacent and aim to achieve a sustained and progressive reduction towards the ultimate eradication of TB here. Work is ongoing to reassess the current programme and identify any additional actions which would enhance our current approach to TB. In the coming weeks, when this work is concluded, I will announce any proposed additional measures to further strengthen our robust programme.

In addition to our EU approved programme I will continue to invest in TB research, and learn from the outcome research undertaken by others administrations, to enable us to refine our approach to TB in light of new scientific developments.

Flood Alleviation: South Belfast

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the departmental and Rivers Agency actions in response to the flooding in South Belfast, particularly the Balmoral District Electoral Area, on 27 June 2012.

(AQO 4513/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: We know that the extreme storm on 27 June 2012 caused flooding to more than 1,400 properties across the north of Ireland, with many of these situated in South Belfast. With regard to the Balmoral District Electoral Area, Rivers Agency has put considerable effort into clearing blocked watercourses, repairing and upgrading infrastructure, as well as taking on responsibility for the maintenance of a number of additional sections of watercourse in the area. In undertaking this work the Agency has continued to liaise with affected communities and with their counterparts in NI Water and Roads Service, to undertake practicable measures which will reduce the risk of a reoccurrence.

Farm Safety

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, given the number of recent tragedies, to outline how she is tackling the issue of farm safety.

(AQO 4514/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am sure the house will agree with me that the recent farm accidents were both tragic and disturbing, particularly as one accident involved the death of a child. My sympathies go out to all of those families.

My Department continues to work with the Health & Safety Executive Northern Ireland (HSENI), the Ulster Farmers' Union (UFU), Northern Ireland Agricultural Producers Association (NIAPA), National Farmers Union Mutual (NFU Mutual) and the Young Farmers Clubs for Ulster (YFC) through the Farm Safety Partnership the purpose of which is to reduce and, ultimately, eradicate work related fatalities on farms.

The Partnership is continuing to implement its Action Plan launched in November 2012 delivering on the 4 Key areas:

- Provision of Information and Promotion of Safe Working;
- Health and Safety Training;
- Motivating Good Practice and Discouraging Poor Practice; and
- Collection and Analysis of Information.

The multi media campaign launched by the Partnership on 25 March 2013, is hard hitting and is still running. It is designed to change the attitudes of farmers to risk and also targets their family members as influencers. The campaign covers TV, Radio and News media.

Indications are that farmers are well aware of the risks and what they should do. It is a matter of changing the mind set to think about the risk before taking action.

Through locally based CAFRE Development Advisers, my Department distributes farm safety information at training events and workshops across the north. All Focus Farm visits incorporate a farm safety presentation and all CAFRE students receive farm safety training.

My Department also runs FarmSafe Awareness courses targeting some 3,000 farmers of all ages, and covering the four key risk areas on the farms:

- Tractors and Machinery;

- Livestock;
- Falls from Height; and
- Slurry.

Forestry Fund

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline her plans to implement the Forestry Fund. (AQO 4515/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The £4m awarded to my Department from the Executive's Economy & Jobs Initiative was under the theme Supporting Infrastructure Investment. My Department's forests are already heavily used for formal and informal recreation. A recent study undertaken jointly by Forest Service and the Tourist Board recognises that forest based tourism has significant potential for further growth. Consequently, the Forestry Fund will be utilised to enhance and develop supporting infrastructure for recreation and tourism.

Following DFP's approval of the Business Case, the available budget will be allocated to strategic forest improvement works and those that have the strongest likelihood of delivery within budget and Fund timescales.

Reservoirs

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she plans to regulate reservoirs. (AQO 4516/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I plan to introduce a Reservoirs Bill which will create a legal and administrative framework for regulating reservoir safety in the North. The Bill is currently in draft and I intend to seek Executive agreement for its introduction to the Assembly shortly.

The proposed legislation will regulate 'controlled reservoirs', which are structures or areas which are capable of holding 10,000 cubic metres of water above the natural level of the surrounding land and are created wholly or partially by artificial means.

The legislation will clarify that the reservoir manager is responsible for reservoir safety and require routine supervision and inspections to be carried out by qualified engineers. I also want to ensure that the regulation is proportionate to the risk and so the management regime will be tailored to the potential impact of the controlled reservoir.

This approach complies with industry best practice for the management of reservoir safety and will provide assurance that the safety of these reservoirs, and hence the risk of flooding, is being appropriately managed.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline her Department's commitment to the return of the Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann in 2016 and thereafter. (AQO 4526/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann is one of many successful events to have taken place as part of Derry's City of Culture year. The Fleadh, held in the north for the first time, brought thousands of people from all over Ireland and across the world to the City for a fantastic week of Irish traditional music and culture.

In terms of the impact of the Fleadh on the local economy, project partners, including the NI Tourist Board, are currently conducting research into the economic benefits of the Fleadh. A research study and evaluation of the event will be prepared and should be available in late November 2013. While it is not possible at this stage to provide any preliminary findings, it is worth noting that an economic impact assessment of the Cavan Fleadh in 2010 concluded that it generated more than £30m in direct expenditure in the local economy. I am confident that the 2013 Fleadh has had a very positive impact on the economy in the North West.

As part of the focus on legacy, we will be working with project partners to look at which aspects of the programme were successful and may return to the city in the future. This work will look at the possibility of the Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann returning to Derry in 2016.

Walled City Tattoo

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, following the success of the UK City of Culture Walled City Tattoo 2013 in Londonderry, will her Department consider assisting the staging of this event in future years. (AQO 4528/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Walled City Tattoo, which I attended, was a very impressive event that once again put Derry in the international spotlight during this City of Culture year.

As we approach the end of the year and the cultural programme of events, the focus for the City of Culture is now shifting towards the longer term benefits for local people, particularly those sectors and areas facing greatest objective need. Targets to increase jobs, investment and wages and to improve perceptions, quality of life and opportunities have been developed to address specific need in the City up to 2020.

I am committed to ensuring that major events such as the Tattoo and Fleadh return to the North of Ireland in the future. My Department will play a leading role in the delivery of City of Culture legacy.

Arm's-length Bodies

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how she will ensure that her departmental priorities are reflected in the service provision of its Arm's-Length Bodies.

(AQO 4525/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has published its business plan for 2013/14 setting out its priorities for the year ahead.

My Department met on a number of occasions with ALBs to ensure that budgets are focused on the delivery of the Department's key priority of promoting equality and tackling poverty and social exclusion.

I have reviewed ALB business plans to ensure that they have prioritised and targeted resources in support of this priority. I have now approved these plans.

My officials will continue to liaise and monitor ALB progress to ensure that real and meaningful actions are taken in respect of the promotion of equality and tackling poverty and social exclusion.

Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the assessment that her Department has carried out, in conjunction with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, on the economic benefits of the Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann.

(AQO 4527/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann is one of many successful events to have taken place as part of Derry's City of Culture year. The Fleadh, held in the north for the first time, brought thousands of people from all over Ireland and across the world to the City for a fantastic week of Irish traditional music and culture.

Royal Scottish Pipe Band Association

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the impact the Royal Scottish Pipe Band Association has on culture and tourism here.

(AQO 4529/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I believe the Royal Scottish Pipe Band Association's support and alliance with Pipe bands from all communities here in the north continues to play a key role in offering musical excellence, education opportunities and driving cultural tourism.

The ongoing promotion of pipe band contests and solo competitions, along with the hugely impressive All Ireland Pipe Band Championships held in 2013 in Derry as part of the City of Culture Celebrations, provides opportunities for local bands to shine and demonstrate their musical excellence and skill to the world. This in turn helps showcase the North.

Cultural tourism undoubtedly has the potential to be further developed to bring sustainable benefits for our society as a whole.

Department of Education

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) his Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.

(AQW 25201/11-15)

Preschool Admissions

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 25085/11-15, how many of these children failed to obtain a place at any of their first three choice pre-schools.

(AQW 25236/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- 1 Information on the number of children who did not obtain a place at any of their first choice pre-schools is held by Education and Library Boards, who have advised that it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As indicated in my previous response, the Pre-school admissions process is a preference based: therefore those children not offered a place in their 1st preference setting may be offered a place in another setting listed by their parents as a subsequent preference on their application.

- 2 99.9% of target aged children whose parents fully engaged with the process were offered a funded place in a pre-school setting and funded places remained available at the end of the 2013/14 pre-school admissions process, I am, therefore, satisfied that overall there is sufficient funded pre-school provision available to meet the Programme for Government commitment to provide a place for every child whose family wants it. The Department will continue to work with each Education and Library Board's Pre-School Education Advisory Group in order to ensure that the level of provision in individual areas is sufficient to meet demand at a local level.

Preschool Admissions

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 25085/11-15, what action he is taking to increase the availability of pre-school places.

(AQW 25237/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- 3 Information on the number of children who did not obtain a place at any of their first choice pre-schools is held by Education and Library Boards, who have advised that it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As indicated in my previous response, the Pre-school admissions process is a preference based: therefore those children not offered a place in their 1st preference setting may be offered a place in another setting listed by their parents as a subsequent preference on their application.

- 4 99.9% of target aged children whose parents fully engaged with the process were offered a funded place in a pre-school setting and funded places remained available at the end of the 2013/14 pre-school admissions process, I am, therefore, satisfied that overall there is sufficient funded pre-school provision available to meet the Programme for Government commitment to provide a place for every child whose family wants it. The Department will continue to work with each Education and Library Board's Pre-School Education Advisory Group in order to ensure that the level of provision in individual areas is sufficient to meet demand at a local level.

Woodlands Language Unit, Derry

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education for an update on the future of the Woodlands Language Unit in Derry. (AQW 25239/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Development Proposals No's 233, 234, 235, and 236 were published by the Western Education and Library Board in the week beginning 21 January 2013. These sought the closure of the Woodlands Language Unit and the relocation of classes to Ebrington PS, St Anne's PS, Derry and Ballykelly PS.

This is a complex matter and it is important for me to take time to consider in detail all information I have received. My decision will centre on the best interests of the children involved as it is crucial to get the provision right for these educationally vulnerable children.

I will not unduly delay any decision on the proposals but I must ensure that they are comprehensively assessed and all pertinent issues considered.

I hope to be in a position to announce my decision shortly.

School Enhancement Programme

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for an update on the School Enhancement Programme. (AQW 25250/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Seventy applications were received under the Schools Enhancement Programme (SEP) by the closing date of 10 May and are currently being assessed against the SEP criteria. Economic appraisals (EAs) will be prepared for those that meet the criteria and these will then be prioritised (as outlined in the protocol) against the available capital budget. I will make a statement identifying projects that will proceed to the EA stage in due course.

Early Years Funding

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education why the criteria for Early Years funding were changed. (AQW 25285/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The criteria for Early Years funding have not been changed.

The report on the recent review of the Fund included a number of recommendations for change around the implementation and management of the Fund. The implementation of these recommendations has included a greater focus on the financial position of applicant groups this year to ensure that there was a clear demonstration of need.

In light of the report findings, as previously advised, I plan to review this funding and its delivery to ensure that it aligns with DE's current aims and objectives. In considering the way forward for the Early Years Fund I will take account of the recommendations in the review as well as DE's wider priorities and the overall budgetary position. I will set out the way forward in due course.

Early Years Funding

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what assessment his Department made of the impact on Early Years Providers prior to the change in the Early Years funding criteria taking place. (AQW 25286/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The criteria for Early Years funding have not been changed.

The report on the recent review of the Fund included a number of recommendations for change around the implementation and management of the Fund. The implementation of these recommendations has included a greater focus this year on the demonstration of need. The financial position of each applicant group, based on the content of the application form and supporting financial information provided by each organisation, was carefully scrutinised and considered by the strategic funding panels in the assessment process, prior to agreement of the allocations for 2013/14.

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education for an update on the progress made on each of his Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25291/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education has lead responsibility for delivering eight of the commitments in the Executive's Programme for Government (PFG) for 2011-15. It reports quarterly to the Office of the First and deputy First Minister on its progress and shares those reports with the Education Committee. As is the case for all departments, summary reports on its commitments are also published and accessible via the NIDirect portal.

The next quarterly report will be due at the end of September. The latest position in relation to the DE-led commitments is provided below:

Commitment	Progress report at end August 2013
21. Increase the overall proportion of young people who achieve at least 5 GCSEs at A* - C or equivalent including GCSEs in Maths and English by the time they leave school  Including: Increase the proportion of young people from disadvantaged backgrounds who achieve at least 5 GCSEs at A* - C or equivalent including GCSEs in Maths and English	The latest available data show that the proportion of school leavers achieving at this level has increased from 59.5% in 2010-11 to 62.0% in 2011-12. The proportion of school leavers entitled to free school meals achieving at this level has increased from 31.7% in 2010-11 to 34.1% in 2011-12.  Reducing the level of underachievement among pupils from disadvantaged backgrounds remains a challenging target and further interventions are planned or underway to address this. These include the Delivering Social Change Literacy and Numeracy scheme; the 'Education Works' advertising campaign; and, in each of the next two years, an additional £2m to deliver a Community Education Initiatives programme and £1million to deliver a Continual Professional Development project for KS2 and KS3 literacy and numeracy teachers focused on the delivery of high quality teaching and learning.
42. Improve literacy and numeracy levels among all school leavers, with additional resources targeted at areas of educational underachievement

Schools: Holywood

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed new school builds for Holywood, County Down. (AQW 25336/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In advance of my capital investment announcement in January 2013, the South Eastern Education & Library Board (SEELB) identified a multi-schools project for Holywood as one of its top priorities. However the project was not advanced due to the need for clarity on how enrolment at Priory IC is to be managed to a sustainable level.

A Development Proposal seeking an increase of 150 pupils at Priory College has been received by the Department. Consideration of this will be in the context of schools within proximity, including schools along the Knock dual carriageway which fall within the Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) area.

The SEELB draft Primary area plans seeks no change for Holywood Primary School

Preschool Admissions

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of parents who expressed a preference for a pre-school place at Stage 1 of the process in 2013, and the number that did not take part in Stage 2. (AQW 25349/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Applications were submitted for 22,735 children during Stage 1 of the 2013/14 pre-school admissions process. The parents of 475 children who did not receive the offer of a place at the end of Stage 1 did not avail of the opportunity to state further preferences for consideration during Stage 2 of the process. 99.9% of target aged children whose parents fully engaged with the process were offered a funded place in a pre-school setting.

Primary School Admissions

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many pupils in North Down currently do not have a first year place in a primary school.

DHSS

Staff employed by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety have access to a range of policy related training programmes, provided by the Centre for Applied Learning (CAL), elements of which aim to develop knowledge and understanding of the consultation process for policy making in Northern Ireland.

This policy making training has been developed in line with good practice guides developed by OFMDFM, including the "Practical Guide to Policy Making" and the "Policy Toolkit", which are also available as resources to all staff.

Public Safety (NIFRS)

Northern Ireland Fire & Rescue Service's approach to consultation is based on the Best Practice Consultation Guidelines as established by the Consultation Institute and in keeping with the statutory duties under Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and as per the requirements outlined in NIFRS approved revised Equality Scheme.

A number of key NIFRS staff attended training on consultation methods and survey design facilitated by the "Consultation Institute."

(ii) The Health and Social Care Board (including Business Services Organisation (BSO))

HSCB and BSO report that no formal training on consultation is provided. Advice and guidance is provided by BSO legal and equality teams as well as the Personal and Public Involvement (PPI) teams in HSCB and Public Health Agency (PHA). BSO Equality Managers received training on Section 75 consultations prior to the Review of Public Administration and members of the Transforming Your Care (TYC) central team underwent consultation training with the Department (DHSSPS) and the "Involving People Programme."

(iii) Arms Length Bodies

Arms Length Bodies comply with the Personal & Public Involvement Strategy in accordance with the DHSSPS circular HSC (SQSD) 29/07. They also adhere to the requirements stated in "Sections 19 & 20 of the Health and Social Care (Reform) Act (NI) 2009"

(iv) Health and Social Care Trusts

The Health and Social Care Trusts recognise the importance of consultation in all aspects of the Section 75 equality duties and carry out consultations in accordance with the Equality Commission's guidance "Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 – A guide for Public Authorities (April 2010)"

Trusts have revised their "Section 75 screening template" to reflect the new Equality Commissions guidance; this includes training on effective engagement and consultation. Trusts also report the delivery of Specialist Master classes to key policy makers to ensure that they have the necessary skills to effectively screen policies, are up to date with new developments and consult or engage as required.

Trusts have also developed "Consultation Schemes" which are underpinned by a "Personal and Public Involvement (PPI) Strategy" in order to meet statutory requirements of "Sections 19 and 20 of the Health and Social Care (Reform)

Act N.I. 2009 (“the Reform Act”) which aims to ensure that involvement is effective, transparent, and honest. A number of initiatives are currently in place throughout the HSCs and a Personal and Public Involvement (PPI) toolkit provides staff with a road map to engaging with stakeholders. The training aims to provide staff and managers with information and guidance to enhance personal and public involvement within their area of service and ensure staff have the necessary skills to engage and consult effectively with service users and carers.

Blood Donation Ban

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has spent on legal costs defending his stance on the blood donation ban on gay men, in relation to the current legal challenge taken against it. (AQW 25177/11-15)

Mr Poots: To date my Department has incurred legal costs of £37,112 (net of VAT) in relation to this case.

Adoption Ban

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has spent on legal costs appealing the High Court decision ruling that the ban on civil partners adopting children was illegal. (AQW 25178/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department has spent circa £17K to date on legal costs in respect of the appeal proceedings

Mental Health Wards

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what supervision or monitoring is carried out on mental health wards or institutions to ensure the proper treatment of patients. (AQW 25179/11-15)

Mr Poots: In accordance with the regional guidance: Promoting Quality Care (PQC), each patient has a risk assessment and management plan in place. If increased levels of observation are indicated then this will be put in place and will be based on the Regional Guidelines: Observation and Therapeutic Engagement in Adult Psychiatric Inpatient Facilities in Northern Ireland.

All mental health wards in Trusts are subject to announced and unannounced inspections from the RQIA mental health team. These inspections follow a rigorous format and the team has the opportunity to speak to family, patients and staff. RQIA is informed of any serious untoward events and has the right to visit any ward at any time. RQIA may also investigate any complaint made by a patient or their family regarding their care.

Children with Severe Disabilities

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail what respite is available to parents who have children with severe disabilities who have now reached the age of thirty five. (AQW 25196/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not available in the format requested. However, I recognise the importance of short breaks/ respite for older parents and their loved ones.

The intention is to further develop a more diverse range of age appropriate day support, respite and short break services. A programme of service improvement has commenced through the Short Break Development Group which will meet for the first time in September 2013. There is also a programme underway to enhance uptake of self-directed support to improve choice and control for individuals.

It is estimated by the HSC Board that expenditure on all forms of respite was in excess of £20m during 2012/2013.

GP Surgeries

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the financial stress being experienced by GP surgeries due to mortgage repayments; and whether he will provide financial assistance for struggling practices to ensure minimal impact on service delivery. (AQW 25203/11-15)

Mr Poots: Out of the 175 GP Practices in Northern Ireland which own their own premises, only three Practices have reported that they are experiencing financial stress. The three Practices are currently receiving the maximum allowance available, within the GMS Premises Costs Directions 2004, to meet their premises costs. Health and Social Care Board officials will be meeting with representatives of the three Practices to examine their financial situation.

Whilst I appreciate the financial pressures GPs are facing, these pressures are not unique to GP Practices, and apply equally to other independent contractors who own their premises, and who have entered into financial commitments based on their own decisions following assessment of their planned income and expenditure.

The General Medical Services budget is fully committed and no further financial assistance is available.

Bexsero Vaccine

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail when his Department engaged with the Department of Health in London regarding the Bexsero vaccine for Meningococcal serogroup B (MenB) disease.

(AQW 25204/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department engages regularly with the Department of Health in London regarding immunisation programmes.

In Northern Ireland as in the rest of the UK, vaccination policy is informed by the work of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI). JCVI is an independent expert advisory committee that advises the four UK Health Ministers. In formulating its advice and recommendations, the Committee's aim is to ensure that the greatest benefit to public health is obtained from the most appropriate vaccination and immunisation strategies. A Senior Medical Officer from my Department attends JCVI meetings as an observer.

JCVI issued an interim position statement on the vaccine Bexsero on 24 July. Before finalising its advice to Ministers, JCVI will seek comments from the key stakeholders who provided evidence to JCVI and its sub-committee about the use of this vaccine. This includes the national meningitis charities and Novartis, the vaccine manufacturer.

Nursing Homes: Admissions

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail when the Southern Health and Social Care Trust took the decision to stop permanent admissions into their statutory nursing homes.

(AQW 25205/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Southern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust does not provide statutory nursing home care. All nursing home care is provided by the independent sector. However, the Trust does provide statutory residential care.

The Trust has advised that, following the public endorsement of the changes set out in Transforming Your Care – Vision to Action consultation document, including the proposal to reduce the number of statutory residential homes, the decision to cease permanent admissions to statutory residential homes for older people was taken at the Trust's Board meeting in March. This took effect from 1st April 2013.

The HSC Board launched the Project Initiation Document for their Project on Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change on 21 August 2013. This project will help determine the future provision of statutory residential homes. In this context the Trust has advised that, given the need to plan ahead for any potential change and the need to minimise any potential future disruption to residents that may be caused by any change, there are currently no plans to recommence permanent admissions to statutory residential homes. However, temporary admissions, day care and respite placements are unaffected.

There is currently plenty of capacity in this sector across Northern Ireland.

Nursing Homes: Admissions

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) why the Southern Health and Social Care Trust has taken the decision to stop permanent admissions to their statutory nursing homes; (ii) when this decision took effect; and (iii) and whether permanent admissions will recommence.

(AQW 25206/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Southern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust does not provide statutory nursing home care. All nursing home care is provided by the independent sector. However, the Trust does provide statutory residential care.

The Trust has advised that, following the public endorsement of the changes set out in Transforming Your Care – Vision to Action consultation document, including the proposal to reduce the number of statutory residential homes, the decision to cease permanent admissions to statutory residential homes for older people was taken at the Trust's Board meeting in March. This took effect from 1st April 2013.

The HSC Board launched the Project Initiation Document for their Project on Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change on 21 August 2013. This project will help determine the future provision of statutory residential homes. However, temporary admissions, day care and respite placements are unaffected.

There is currently plenty of capacity in this sector across Northern Ireland.

Ulster Hospital

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the date of practical completion for the works completed by Mascott Construction Ltd at the Ulster Hospital for the Pharmacy Robotics and Pacing Suite.

(AQW 25217/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust have confirmed that the certificate of completion was issued on 19 March 2013 stating that under Condition 39 (certifying completion) that the works were completed in accordance with the Contract on 19 February 2013.

Shingles Vaccination

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what provision is being made for the roll-out of the shingles vaccination for people over 70 years old.

(AQW 25235/11-15)

Mr Poots: A routine shingles vaccination programme is to be introduced in Northern Ireland for all people aged 70 from 1 October 2013.

A catch-up programme for those aged 71 to 79 will also be introduced over the next few years beginning on 1 October 2013 with all 79-year-olds.

Adult Respite and Day Care Centres

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on any consultations taking place regarding the possible closure of adult respite and day care centres.

(AQW 25238/11-15)

Mr Poots: It remains the position that no consultations regarding the possible closure of adult respite and day care centres are taking place at this time.

Respite/short breaks can be provided in a variety of settings. The intention is to enhance opportunities for more age appropriate respite/short break services to meet need. A Service Improvement Programme will be taken forward through a Regional Short Break Development Group which meets for the first time in September 2013.

The HSC Board has recently published its Project Initiation Document on Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change. In addition, work is ongoing to develop and broaden the range of day opportunities. In doing so, it is recognised that day care centres provide valuable services especially for those with complex needs.

Non-appointment of a Trade Unionist

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has spent on legal costs as a result of the non-appointment of a trade unionist to the Northern Ireland Social Care Council.

(AQW 25244/11-15)

Mr Poots: To date my Department has incurred legal costs of £29,990 net of VAT.

Public Consultations

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he last met with the Consultation Institute to discuss standards and quality in conducting public consultations.

(AQW 25266/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have not met with the Consultation Institute.

Public Consultations

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he will undertake a review of his Department's, the Health and Social Care Trust's, the Health and Social Care Board's and other Health and Social Care agencies' consultation policies, programmes, training of staff, budgets, processes and reviews.

(AQW 25267/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department and its Arms-Length Bodies recognise the importance of consultation as part of the policy development process. Arrangements for assessing and consulting on the likely impact of policies with regard to section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act are set out in the Department's Equality Scheme.

Section 19 of the Health and Social Care (Reform) Act (NI) 2009 places a statutory obligation on the Department and Health and Social Care organisations to prepare and put in place Personal and Public Involvement (PPI) Consultation Schemes outlining their commitment to ensuring that service users and carers are actively involved in the planning and delivery of the health and social care services they receive.

I have no plans to review the consultation process at this time. However, the Patient and Client Council, in collaboration with the Public Health Agency, will be jointly commissioning a research project to evaluate the effectiveness of PPI.

Public Consultations

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline how his Care Homes consultation complies with the integrity standard, signalled by the Consultation Institute's Charter; and whether he will order an external review and rerun of the consultation.

(AQW 25271/11-15)

Mr Poots: I recognise that the Consultation Institute's Charter has merit. However, I am assured that the approach set out by the HSC Board in Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change is the right one for Northern Ireland and therefore see no compelling case to begin the process again.

This process will allow every opportunity for people to share their views with adequate transparency and consistency. The HSC Board will be working closely with residents and relatives throughout the process, as well as liaising with key stakeholders such as the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland and Age NI.

Public Consultations

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in light of the action he took on the Health and Social Care Trust's care homes consultation, whether he will intervene in the Health and Social Care Board's care homes consultation and begin the process again to ensure integrity, transparency and consistency.

(AQW 25272/11-15)

Mr Poots: I recognise that the Consultation Institute's Charter has merit. However, I am assured that the approach set out by the HSC Board in Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change is the right one for Northern Ireland and therefore see no compelling case to begin the process again.

This process will allow every opportunity for people to share their views with adequate transparency and consistency. The HSC Board will be working closely with residents and relatives throughout the process, as well as liaising with key stakeholders such as the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland and Age NI.

Programme for Government commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the progress made on each of his Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25299/11-15)

Mr Poots: DHSSPS leads on six of the 82 Programme for Government commitments for 2011-15.

Progress on the delivery of Programme for Government commitments is closely monitored in accordance with the published programme arrangements and delivery framework and includes scrutiny by departments, the Delivery Oversight Group and by the PfG Programme Board.

The latest publicly available information on progress against Programme for Government Commitments can be accessed at: <http://www.northernireland.gov.uk/index/work-of-the-executive/pfg-budget-economic-strategy/pfg/strategic-online-report-2011-2015.htm>

Social Workers

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of social workers in each Health and Social Care Trust area, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25310/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of qualified social workers employed by each Health and Social Care Trust as at 30th June in each of the last three years is shown, by headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE), in the table below.

HSC Trust	2011		2012		2013
	Headcount	WTE	Headcount	WTE	Headcount	WTE

Conflicts of Interest

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether any senior managers or directors of the (i) Health and Social Care Trusts; and (ii) Health and Social Care Board are owners of, or shareholders in, private nursing homes or companies that currently provide private nursing homes.

(AQW 25315/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not held centrally. All Health and Social Care bodies must keep registers of interest appropriate to the bodies' activities. Senior Managers and Directors who can influence decisions in the organisation must declare any potential conflicts of interests such as business interests, position of authority in a charity or voluntary body in the field of health and social care, and any connection with a voluntary or other body contracting for HSC services. All senior staff should declare any conflict of interest that arises in the course of conducting HSC business. In relation to the question asked the information would be recorded on the HSC Bodies' Registers of Interest which are available on request, from the relevant body, for public inspection.

Nursing Homes: Medical Care

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to the cost of medical care for people residing in nursing homes, given that the "Coughlan" judgment of 1999 (R. v. North and East Devon HA Ex Parte Coughlan [1999]) confirmed that if a care home resident has nursing needs that are specialised or are more than "incidental and ancillary" to their personal and social care needs, their care should be fully funded by the NHS, whether this is currently being practiced locally.

(AQW 25318/11-15)

Mr Poots: Legislation governing the provision of health and social care in Northern Ireland differs significantly from that in England. This is a result of Northern Ireland benefiting from a fully integrated system of health and social care, with services delivered by Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts.

Departmental Circular ECCU 1/2010 'Care Management, Provision of Services and Charging Guidance' provides HSC Trusts with direction on the assessment process to be undertaken to identify both health and social care needs. As set out in the circular an individual's primary need can be either for health care – which is provided free – or social care for which a means tested contribution may be required.

My Department sought confirmation from all HSC Trusts in October 2012 that they were compliant with this circular. All HSC Trusts confirmed that this was the case.

Fire and Rescue Service: False Alarms

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of false alarms and unwanted fire signals per divisional area, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25327/11-15)

Mr Poots: Table 1 details the number of False Alarms per Area Command in each of the last three years.

Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of legal cases, including judicial reviews, that his Department has defended since 2007; (ii) the number of these legal challenges the Department lost; and (iii) the total costs incurred by her Department on the cases which it lost.

(AQW 25341/11-15)

Mr Poots: I refer the member to my response to AQW 24824/11-15.

Occupational Therapy Waiting Times: Western Health and Social Care Trust

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current waiting times for an Occupational Therapist referral visit for a major disabled adaptation grant in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 25347/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not collected centrally and was requested from the Western Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust.

Table 1 below details the number of people waiting at 2nd September 2013 for all Occupational Therapy referrals which require assessment and intervention to manage functional difficulties or access issues.

Table 1

Recommendations for major adaptations may or may not be the required intervention to meet the client's assessed need. This will be identified at the assessment visit.

Human Trafficking: Children

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 16676/11-15, how many trafficked children, for whom Health and Social Care Trusts established parental responsibility under a care order between 2009 and 2012, were (i) UK citizens; (ii) citizens of EU or European Economic Area countries; and (iii) other foreign nationals. (AQW 25367/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not centrally held by the Department.

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has provided the information in Table 1 below.

Table 1 – The Origin of Trafficked Children for whom Health and Social Care Trusts Established Parental Responsibility (2009 – 2012)

January 2009 – December 2012	Total

Deafness

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have been diagnosed with profound deafness in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 25373/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not available.

Information is available on the number of hearing impaired persons in contact with the Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts during the year, by type of impairment and age group.

Information for the last ten years is detailed in Table 1 below.

Deafness

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children have been diagnosed with profound deafness, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 25375/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not available.

Triage Car

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration he has given to running a pilot scheme similar to 'The Triage Car' mental health pilot used by Leicestershire Partnership NHS Trust and Leicestershire Police.

(AQW 25482/11-15)

Mr Poots: Consideration has not been given to running a pilot scheme similar to 'The Triage Car' mental health pilot used by Leicestershire Partnership NHS Trust and Leicestershire Police. However I recognize early reports have been encouraging and look forward to further evaluation.

Each Trust currently has a 24/7 Crisis Response Team and a Home Treatment Team as part of their range of mental health services. These teams can respond rapidly when people require urgent treatment for an acute mental health episode and in many cases this avoids the need for admission to a psychiatric hospital.

Police officers also have powers under the Mental Health (NI) Order 1986 to take a person who appears to be suffering from a mental disorder and to be in immediate need of care or control to a Hospital Emergency Department. These powers are currently being reviewed jointly with the Department of Justice in the context of the proposed Mental Capacity Bill.

Bangor Fire Station

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the staff complement at Bangor Fire Station.
(AQW 25498/11-15)

Mr Poots: The staff complement at Bangor Fire Station is as follows:

Wholetime (Fulltime) as at 11 September 2013	Complement

Pinewood Residential Care Home, Ballymena

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on what date the last patient was admitted to Pinewood Residential Care Home, Ballymena.

(AQW 25527/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been informed by Northern Health and Social Care Trust officials that the last resident to be admitted permanently to Pinewood was admitted at the beginning of February 2011.

The Trust continues to admit residents to Pinewood for intermediate and respite care as required.

Department of Justice

No Fixed Abode

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of people currently facing a charge, within the court system, that are recorded as no fixed abode, broken down by magistrates court and crown court, per court division.

(AQW 25157/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Information on the number of people currently facing a charge within the court system that are recorded as no fixed abode, broken down by Magistrates' Court and Crown Court, per court division is given in the tables below:

County Court Division	Magistrates' Court			Total

For defendants on bail, a bail address will have been recorded as part of the bail conditions, however the address details will not be updated unless the bail address is confirmed as a permanent address when signing bail.

Cyberbullying

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to people who carry out cyber-bullying or internet trolling, what legislation he intends to introduce to allow them to be liable for (i) causing the death of a person, who died by suicide, following online abuse; or aiding and abetting manslaughter and/or unlawful killing; and (ii) causing grievous bodily harm or aiding and abetting causing grievous bodily harm as well as harassment, in cases of attempted suicide.

(AQW 25158/11-15)

Mr Ford: Current legislation in Northern Ireland already allows for prosecutions in relation to protecting people from harassment or bullying. The Protection Against Harassment (NI) Order 1997 allows, for example, for the general offence of harassment and also the offence of putting someone in fear of violence. These powers cover behaviours that are both visible and invisible including, for example, cyber-bullying with sentences of up to seven years' imprisonment available to the court. And if a threat to kill were involved then a sentence of up to ten years' imprisonment is available.

The Communications Act 2003 also makes it an offence to use a public electronic communications network to send a message or any other matter that is grossly offensive or menacing, punishable by a maximum sentence of 6 months' imprisonment and/or a £5000 fine. The Computer Misuse Act 1990 criminalised unauthorised access to computer material attracting penalties of up to two years' imprisonment. Across the criminal law more generally, penalties for aiding and abetting offences are the same as those for the substantive offence.

I am aware that England and Wales and Scotland have recently created offences specifically in relation to stalking, including computer-based stalking, with penalties of up to five years in prison. Whilst I have no plans to change our laws at this stage I will be keeping developments in Great Britain under review.

Prosecutions for Stealing Cattle or Sheep

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of prosecutions for stealing cattle or sheep, and the sentences imposed, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25161/11-15)

Mr Ford: The theft of cattle or sheep may be prosecuted under Section 1 of the Theft Act (Northern Ireland) 1969. As prosecution and conviction datasets do not contain details on the stolen item(s), it is not possible to provide the information requested.

Abattoirs and Fuel Laundering

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice to detail all occasions when an illegal abattoir has been found in the same location as a fuel laundering plant; and any resulting prosecutions.

(AQW 25162/11-15)

Mr Ford: One such plant was uncovered in Newry in October 2012. Two trailers were recovered which appeared to be mobile laundering plants at the site of an unregistered meat plant. There have been no prosecutions arising from the recovery of the trailers. Investigations by council Environmental Health Officers are ongoing.

Prison Service: Staff Training and Profiling

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the Irish News article of 24 June 2013, to detail (i) why external profilers from England were hired by the Northern Ireland Prison Service to carry out new staff training and profiling at a cost of £150,000, which had to be corrected by existing staff; (ii) the cost of this, combined with the original outlay, to date; and (iii) why no initial tendering process took place at the stage.

(AQW 25220/11-15)

Mr Ford: At the time of the development of the Concept Target Operating Model, the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) hoped to use its internal profiling team. The internal resources could not be secured to take this work forward in the required timescale, which was linked to development of the Business Case for the Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme for staff.

In this context NIPS followed the required process for the approval of a Direct Award Contract to secure timely specialist advice. The Concept Target Operating Model was developed for NIPS by the external profiling team between April and August 2011.

The development of the Concept TOM into detailed Models for each NIPS establishment took place between September and December 2011. The Team that completed this work consisted of four NIPS representatives and the two external profilers who developed the original concept. The detailed TOM for each establishment was completed in January 2012. The work did not have to be corrected by existing staff. An in-house team undertook the setting up of the system and have reviewed the implementation at each prison establishment over the last six months. On going reviews and updating of shift patterns are a normal part of prison operations and reflect changing needs and meeting the requirements for regime delivery.

The total cost of the external support to develop the concept and detailed Target Operating Models was £107,000, not £150,000.

Kieran Doherty

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) what compensation was paid to the family of Kieran Doherty; (ii) the names of the beneficiaries; (iii) how dependency was established; (iv) what deduction was made having regard to the deceased's character, record and past; (v) what, if any, part of the compensation was agreed; and (vi) what plans he has to further challenge the award.

(AQW 25295/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Compensation was awarded to the family of Kieran Doherty for bereavement award and funeral expenses. The Northern Ireland Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme 2009 Tariff Scheme provides that where there is one qualifying claimant, a bereavement award of £11,000 is payable. Where there is more than one qualifying claimant an award of £5,500 is payable to each. The Scheme also provides for reimbursement of reasonable funeral expenses.
- (ii) Christine Doherty (mother) and Mary Ellen Doherty (grandmother) were the beneficiaries of a bereavement award and Christine Doherty was the beneficiary of an award for reasonable funeral expenses.
- (iii) Dependency was established in accordance with paragraphs 38-40 of the Northern Ireland Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme 2009.
- (iv) A deduction of 50% was applied to the bereavement and funeral expenses awards.
- (v) Compensation was initially refused by my Department because of Mr Doherty's unspent convictions and intelligence received from the PSNI regarding criminal activity. The decision to award compensation was made by the independent Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel for Northern Ireland (CICAPNI), following appeals by Christine Doherty and Mary Ellen Doherty.
- (vi) I have no locus to challenge the award made.

Restorative Justice: North Down Alternatives

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to detail the funding provided to the North Down Alternatives to administer the Restorative Justice Scheme, in the last three financial years.

(AQW 25334/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department has not provided any funding directly to North Down Alternatives in the last three financial years. Restorative justice funding has been provided in that period to Northern Ireland Alternatives which provides central support to North Down Alternatives and the other accredited schemes within its network.

Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether case number 13/055303 at Ards Magistrates Court relates to an alleged incident/detection at Hydebank Young Offenders Centre.

(AQW 25381/11-15)

Mr Ford: I can confirm that case number 13/055303 at Ards Magistrates' Court relates to an alleged incident at Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre and Prison.

Department for Regional Development

Fish Kill at Portavoe Reservoir

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the reasons provided by NI Water for the recent fish kill at Portavoe Reservoir.

(AQW 25168/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that officials from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency have confirmed that no pollutant was introduced to the reservoir where the recent fish kill occurred. The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure are investigating the cause of the fish kill and preliminary findings suggest issues with lice and/or fungus.

When notification of the fish kill was received, a walk-over of the inlet tributary stream to the reservoir and the adjacent pumping main air valves was undertaken as a precautionary measure to verify operational performance. This indicated that there was no pollution arising from NIW assets in the area.

Portavoe Reservoir has not been in service as a supply reservoir for some years so there is no danger to the public drinking water supply.

Park and Ride: Bangor

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration has been given to installing a ticketing or barrier system at the Park and Ride facility in Bangor in order to secure the availability of parking spaces for those availing of the service.

(AQW 25174/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am aware of the difficulty in ensuring that parking spaces designed for use by public transport customers are available for those availing of those services, especially where Park & Ride sites are located in, or near, town centres, as is the case in Bangor. Translink has sought to minimise misuse of the Bangor Park & Ride site by deploying an employee at the entrance during the early morning commuting period and this seems to be working effectively.

Translink are currently undertaking a feasibility study into a replacement ticketing system. This study will explore the viability of using a ticketing smart card to control access to Park & Ride sites by way of a barrier system.

I have also asked Translink to consider whether there are any interim measures which could be introduced in advance of the new ticketing system to alleviate this problem.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 24790/11-15, whether he has made, or intends to make, the European Commission aware of the implications, financial or otherwise, of the discovery of the illegal landfill site at Mobouy Road, Derry, given that construction work on this section of the A6 is co-funded by the European Commission.

(AQW 25175/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that the position remains as stated in my answer to his Assembly Question, AQW 24790/11-15, on this issue. Funds for the construction of the A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling scheme have not been allocated and I am not aware of any contribution from the European Commission that would necessitate informing them of any aspect of the scheme's progression.

A26 Dualling Scheme

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Regional Development what correspondence his Department has had with the Department of Finance and Personnel in relation to the funding of the dualling of the A26.

(AQW 25188/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: With the delay to the A5, and the funding that was subsequently made available, I wrote to the previous Finance Minister in May of this year, highlighting other schemes that could commence in 2014/15. These included the A26 Glarryford to Drones Road Scheme. In July, the Finance Minister announced funding for one of these schemes, the A31 Magherafelt Bypass.

I wrote to the new Finance Minister in August requesting a meeting to discuss the merits and the importance of the A26 project. After initially declining the meeting, I am happy to report that the Finance Minister has now recognised the importance of an early discussion on this issue, he has agreed to a meeting and we are due to meet in the near future.

I can assure you that, in parallel, I have heavily promoted this scheme in the 2014/15 Capital Budget Exercise, and will continue to do so in the forthcoming October Monitoring Round, with a view to securing the funds to allow construction to commence in 2014/15.

Road Races (Amendment) Bill

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the concerns of local churches are addressed regarding the Road Races (Amendment) Bill.

(AQW 25189/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Road Races (Amendment) Bill is a single clause Bill that seeks to provide road race promoters with flexibility to change the date of their race, practice or qualifying sessions with the Department's approval, where they would otherwise be compromised by bad weather. In itself, the Bill does not propose anything that would cause concerns for local churches, so I assume you mean what steps would be taken by my Department to address the concerns of local churches when race promoters elect to use a Sunday as one of their contingency days.

It would be for race promoters to determine the dates they wish to use as contingency days in the event of bad weather threatening the cancellation of their event. The existing legislation, the Road Races (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, does not preclude racing on Sundays. Although no promoter of a motor cycle race has thus far elected to race on a Sunday, numerous road closing orders have previously been made to facilitate the closure of roads on which motor car rally special stages have taken place.

Should a race promoter elect to race on Sunday, my Department would wish to be reassured reasonable arrangements have been put in place to enable people to travel to and from their places of worship. As a result, any road closing order would aim to facilitate such travel.

Railway Network: Graffiti

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department is ensuring that train routes are free from graffiti, in particular, sectarian graffiti.

(AQW 25262/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink rely upon staff to notify them of graffiti at stations and their maintenance teams for halts and other locations. It is Translink's policy that any graffiti identified is removed as soon as possible.

Donaghadee Bus Station

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the closure of Donaghadee Bus Station, what steps will be taken to dispose of the land.

(AQW 25323/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink is responsible for the disposal of Donaghadee Bus Station. As the land is no longer required for operational purposes it has been placed on Translink's surplus properties list.

It advises that the property will be offered to the public sector through the D1 process. If the property is not purchased through the D1 process it will then be placed on the open market for sale through an agent.

Belfast Public Bike Hire Scheme

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Belfast Public Bike Hire Scheme.

(AQW 25357/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Belfast City Council was awarded an Active Travel Demonstration Project Grant of almost £700k in August 2012, to develop the infrastructure requirements for the Belfast Public Bike Hire Scheme.

Belfast City Council are responsible for the project management of the scheme and will be responsible for managing any future contractual arrangements and meeting ongoing running costs.

Work is continuing on the identification of suitable sites for up to 25 docking stations which will hold a total of 300 bikes at city centre locations. Staff from Belfast City Council are working closely with colleagues in Roads Service, Planning Service, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency and other stakeholders to ensure that the sites do not impede pedestrian or vehicular movement and take account of the surrounding built heritage.

After considering expressions of interest from potential suppliers Belfast City Council intend to go out to tender for the scheme in October 2013 and are also considering sponsorship and branding arrangements which have proved very successful in providing revenue for other schemes around the world.

Although the timescales for the implementation of the scheme remain challenging Belfast City Council remains confident that the scheme will go live in 2015.

My officials are providing a project assurance role and will continue to assist Belfast City Council in any practical way possible, during the development of the scheme.

Railway Network: Coleraine and Derry

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development, given that Translink have announced a suspension of work on the Coleraine to Derry railway line due to issues on the procurement of signalling, to outline how this will be addressed in order to advance work at the earliest opportunity.

(AQW 25450/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has commenced a revised procurement strategy aimed at delivering Phase 2 of the Coleraine to Londonderry Renewals project. At this time the predicted completion date of the work is late 2016. There is no suspension of the project.

I am disappointed by the delay and my officials will work closely with Translink in order to try to identify any and all opportunities to accelerate this timeline.

Strategic Infrastructure Plan

Mr Milne asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the recent announcement on the Magherafelt bypass, whether the priorities within the strategic infrastructure plan are on target for delivery.

(AQO 4478/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Firstly, I would advise the Member there is no document termed the strategic infrastructure plan, however my Department has a range of schemes listed in the Strategic Road Improvement (SRI) Programme. The programme was developed in conjunction with the Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland, with the majority of the funding in this budget period to 2015 being allocated to the A5, A8 and A2 projects.

I have written to the Finance Minister and recently bid for funding to advance a number of major road improvements given the delay to the A5. As a result, it has been agreed that around £40 million will be allocated to my Department to enable work to start on the Magherafelt Bypass next year.

When completed, the Bypass will significantly reduce the traffic congestion in Magherafelt and will facilitate economic growth, while at the same time creating around 200 jobs in the construction sector over the two year duration of the project.

I am pleased to move forward with this project and hopefully other schemes, including the A26, which will be included in bids in the DFP capital budget exercise for 2014/15.

Cookstown Bypass

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Cookstown bypass.

(AQO 4479/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The preferred route for the A29 Cookstown Bypass was announced in June 2010. Since then, my Department has been progressing detailed design work on the Preferred Route and carrying out additional geotechnical investigations and a detailed topographical survey.

I am keen to progress this scheme. However, the pace at which the A29 Cookstown Bypass is progressed, and its delivery, will be dependent upon the availability of funding in future budget periods and advancement through the normal statutory processes. It will compete for funding with other important schemes, such as those on the A6 Belfast to Londonderry route, the York Street Interchange, A2 Sydenham Bypass and Ballynahinch Bypass, amongst other schemes across Northern Ireland.

Road Safety: Titanic Quarter

Mr Douglas asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to make access safer for pedestrians and cyclists at Dee Street Bridge which links the Titanic Quarter cycle lanes.

(AQO 4480/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The portion of roadway between the Harbour Estate and Dee Street Bridge is public road with existing footways and, under the current layout, it is not possible to provide separate cycling facilities. However, my Department has a longer-term plan to widen the Sydenham By-Pass and replace the existing Dee Street Bridge. This scheme would provide the opportunity to provide enhanced cycle facilities into the Harbour Estate.

If these plans are achieved, this would link to the recently-provided two-way cycle lane along Sydenham Road which lies solely within the grounds of Belfast Harbour Estate and is under the control of the Belfast Harbour Commissioners. This cycle lane links the wider Titanic Quarter to the public road network via the pedestrian/cycle bridge over the Sydenham By-Pass to Island Street. This is the route preferred and recommended by Sustrans linking the Comber Greenway to Titanic Quarter.

I would stress that safety of pedestrians and cyclists is an issue I take very seriously. I am aware of the difficulties cyclists may encounter between Dee Street Bridge and the two-way cycle lane on Sydenham Road. The major difficulties for both pedestrians and cyclists at this point lie within the Harbour Estate and the Harbour Authority is aware of these concerns.

Bus Lanes: Use by Taxis

Mr McCarthy asked for an update on his Department's proposal to allow all taxis to use bus lanes.
(AQO 4481/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As a result of the Minister of the Environment's original proposal, to introduce single tier licensing and other taxi reforms, by way of regulations to be made under the Taxis Act (2008), during 2013, my Department consulted on a proposal to permit all taxis to use bus lanes. The consultation document explored the various possible impacts on the use of bus lanes by taxis.

I understand the DOE Minister now intends to bring forward draft regulations in September 2014, on this proposal, which I await with interest.

Roads: Adoption

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development what action he is taking to complete unfinished roads and street lighting in residential developments where the developer has been declared bankrupt.
(AQO 4482/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Where a developer of a residential development has been declared bankrupt, my Department takes enforcement action under the Private Streets (Northern Ireland) Order 1980, in order to have the roads completed and adopted. Where appropriate, Roads Service will initially liaise with the administrator to seek completion of the development's roads infrastructure. If this is not possible, Roads Service will call upon the road bond and arrange for another contractor to complete the necessary works.

Rail Passenger Numbers: Larne

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the number of passengers on the Larne railway line over the last twelve months.
(AQO 4483/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Approximately 2.5million passenger journeys were recorded on the Larne railway line in the past 12 months. This represents an increase of 13% over last year and 18% on 2010/11.

Ballymena: Combined Train and Bus Station

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development when a new combined train and bus station will be built in Ballymena.
(AQO 4485/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A combined bus and rail station at Ballymena is currently on Translink's long term outline capital plan I will look to secure funding for the project in the next Budget to accelerate the work.

Road Races (Amendment) Bill

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development what additional safety measures are being considered to supplement the proposals in the draft Road Races (Amendment) Bill.
(AQO 4486/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This is a single purpose Bill which seeks only to provide race promoters with some flexibility to change the date of their race, practice and qualifying sessions, where they would otherwise be compromised by bad weather. In addition, there are significant safety benefits in not running the races during poor weather conditions.

Safety at road races is a matter for the event organiser, race promoters and for the sport's governing body, the Motor Cycle Union of Ireland (Ulster Centre). It is the Department's responsibility for making the necessary road closure orders to facilitate motor racing events on public roads.

Department for Social Development

Jenny Palmer

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has ever instructed his special adviser to contact Councillor Jenny Palmer; and if so, on which dates and what was the reason for that contact.
(AQW 25061/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): I would advise the member that on no occasion did I instruct my Special Advisor to contact Councillor Jenny Palmer. It should be noted however that it is normal practice for a Special Advisor to provide a significant level of policy advice and to meet and influence key policy and decision-takers within and outside Government.

Towns and Villages in West Tyrone

Mr Byrne asked the Minister for Social Development what proposals are in place to help rejuvenate smaller towns and villages in West Tyrone.

(AQW 25154/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As you may be aware, the official definition of an urban settlement in Northern Ireland is one having a population of 4,500 or more. In line with this definition, my Department's funding for urban regeneration is targeted at towns with populations over 4,500 and in West Tyrone this only relates to Omagh and Strabane.

In Omagh, my Department published a Town Centre Masterplan in January 2009 and work is progressing to implement the recommendations. Town centre regeneration projects which have recently been funded by my Department in Omagh include a revitalisation project to promote and market Omagh and works to address unsightly areas of the town centre. A further revitalisation scheme, specifically tackling vacant and unsightly properties in John Street is underway. DSD Officials are currently working with Omagh District Council to develop a further revitalisation scheme for the town. A Public Realm scheme for the Castle Street area (to complement the town centre public realm schemes already completed) and a Comprehensive Development site at the Kevlin Avenue car parks are also in the development stages.

In Strabane, my Department published a Town Centre Masterplan in September 2010 and work is progressing to implement the recommendations. Town centre regeneration projects which have recently been funded by my Department in Strabane include a Public Realm scheme on Castle Place and part of Lower Main Street, an environmental improvement scheme on Bridge Street and new festive lighting for the town centre. Plans are being worked up for a number of other projects, including a development brief for the SCORE site, the Strabane Community Pedestrian and Cycle Bridge, a major Public Realm scheme in the town centre and a Revitalisation project.

It is hoped these interventions will help to rejuvenate these town centres and lead to an increase in shoppers and visitors.

(AQW 25185/11-15)

Shankill Lurgan Foyer

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development when he will publish the business case drawn up by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the Southern Health and Social Care Trust regarding the future operation of the Shankill Lurgan Foyer.

(AQW 25207/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Shankill Lurgan Community Project is in the process of developing a business case for the future operation of the Shankill Lurgan Foyer. When the business case has been developed, Shankill Lurgan Community Project will submit it through the local Area Supporting People Partnership. The local Area Partnerships are central to the commissioning process in terms of their role in identifying, assessing and prioritising the housing support needs of a range of vulnerable client groups at local level. Once it has been agreed at the local Area Supporting People Partnership it will be submitted to the Supporting People Commissioning Body for approval. As the Shankill Lurgan Community Project are the authors of the business case it would be a decision for them if they wanted it published.

Disability Living Allowance and Employment Support Allowance

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to Examining Medical Practitioners (EMP) carrying out Disability Living Allowance and Employment Support Allowance application examinations, (i) what is the minimum qualification required by an EMP; (ii) for a breakdown of job descriptions currently used; and (iii) how many EMPs currently used are qualified medical consultants.

(AQW 25226/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The responses for (i), (ii) and (iii) for Examining Medical Practitioners who complete medical assessments for Employment and Support Allowance and Incapacity Benefit reassessment, Disability Living Allowance and Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefits are set out below.

- (i) The qualifications required are set out in the Medical Support Services Agreement which defines a healthcare professional as:

This includes the following required qualifications:

- current registration to practice in the UK;
  - 3 years post-registration full-time equivalent experience across a range of relevant clinical disciplines (within the last 6 years prior to an advertisement for positions being placed); and

- (ii) The Medical Support Services Agreement does not set out job descriptions for healthcare professionals, the requirements are as specified in answer (i). Currently only registered medical practitioners or registered nurses are employed in the provision of the service to the Department for Social Development.
- (iii) Healthcare professionals are required to be qualified medical practitioners are set out in (i) and (ii) above.

Social Security Benefits: Asylum Seekers

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the Social Security benefits, including the rates, to which asylum seekers are entitled.

(AQW 25277/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Anyone who has come to the UK and made an application for asylum is not entitled to social security benefits while their application is being considered by the UK Border Agency.

An asylum seeker can, however, apply for support from the National Asylum Support Service, which is administered by the UK Border Agency. This support can provide cash payments and accommodation.

Where an application for asylum is successful and a person is recognised as a refugee, or they may stay in the United Kingdom for humanitarian reasons, or they are given discretionary leave to remain, they will have the same rights as permanent residents and can claim social security benefits.

The rate of benefit payable is dependent on individual circumstances.

Capita Business Services

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to his Department's contract with Capita Business Services, to detail (i) when the contract commenced; (ii) the amount that has been paid Capita to date; (iii) the full contract value; and (iv) duration of contract.

(AQW 25337/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) The contract with Capita Business Services Limited was awarded on 20 November 2012;
- (ii) No Payments have been paid to Capita Business Services Ltd;
- (iii) The published value of the contract is £59,253,626;
- (iv) The duration of the contact is for 5 years.

Neighbourhood Renewal: Kilcooley Estate, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding has been made available for Neighbourhood Renewal in the Kilcooley estate, Bangor, over the last five years.

(AQW 25368/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The total amount spent on Neighbourhood Renewal for the Kilcooley Estate, Bangor over the last five financial years is as follows:

Financial Year	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	Total
Amount spent	£140,989	£374,689	£293,814	£295,634	£502,300	£1,607,426

Social Housing: Energy Efficiency

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development what options for energy efficiency schemes are available to Northern Ireland Housing Executive tenants.

(AQO 4497/11-15)

Mr McCausland: From a programme point of view there are various energy efficiency schemes available to Northern Ireland Housing Executive tenants. These include Heating schemes to upgrade old inefficient heating systems. In 2013/2014 the Housing Executive intends to replace or install 5,750 heating systems. During heating installation, roof space insulation is checked and upgraded as necessary.

Double Glazing schemes will also be available. Under the Programme for Government target it is intended that by the end of 2015 all Housing Executive homes will have double glazing. Other initiatives will be available including frost stat installation. The Housing Executive also intends to run a pilot scheme to improve the energy efficiency of no-fines properties.

Duke Street, Belfast

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail any plans in place to replace the roofs on homes in Duke Street, Belfast.

(AQW 25432/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has confirmed that Nos 8, 11 and 12 Duke Street are scheduled to have their roof tiles replaced with protective metal tiles. Unfortunately, this work has been delayed as a result of recent problems relating to a number of the Housing Executive's planned maintenance contractors. The scheme is now expected to start in January 2014.

Repossession

Ms Brown asked the Minister for Social Development what level of protection is available for tenants in the private rental sector when the property is going to be repossessed.

(AQO 4492/11-15)

Mr McCausland: This is an interesting issue and particularly relevant at a time when the private rented sector is growing in importance. The latest published figures show that there are now over 144,000 private rented properties in Northern Ireland making it the biggest sector next to home ownership.

In the recently published Housing Strategy Action Plan there is a commitment to make the private rented sector a more attractive housing option for a wider range of households by reviewing the current regulatory framework. This will build on improvements like Tenancy Deposit schemes which I have already introduced.

Where a landlord takes out a mortgage and makes the lender fully aware that a tenancy exists in the accommodation, or will exist, the general rule is that the lender will also be bound by the lease. This means that if the lender later gains possession of the property they will have to let the lease run on until the end of the contractual period and accept rent from the tenant.

Once a lender has obtained a possession order from the Courts he or she must apply to the Enforcement of Judgements Office to have it enforced. The Enforcement of Judgements Office has protocols in place which aim to keep tenants involved in cases of repossession.

If a landlord's property is repossessed a tenant should seek advice from a solicitor or advice agency.

Underoccupancy Tax

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the implementation of the under occupancy tax and its consequences for new and existing tenants

(AQO 4493/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The social sector size criteria was introduced for working age social tenants in Great Britain on 1 April 2013 and I understand from a report published in July 2013 by the National Housing Federation that rent arrears are rising as a result of this change. Housing Associations and Local Authorities are also facing increased pressures to find smaller homes for families to downsize to.

The Department for Work and Pensions is monitoring the impact of the size criteria and an independent review has been commissioned to undertake monitoring, over the coming two years, of the effects on claimants and landlords. The final report will be published in 2015.

Welfare Reform is an area we can see devolution working for the people of Northern Ireland. I am continuing to seek ways to ameliorate some of the more negative aspects of welfare reform to meet the needs of Northern Ireland, whilst recognising the need to protect the principle of parity to have a single system of social security across the United Kingdom.

While I am supportive of the need to reform our existing benefit system to ensure it supports people back into work and offers help to those who are genuinely in need of assistance, I am alive to the very real concerns people have about the introduction of the social sector size criteria and the need to protect the vulnerable, whilst ensuring we maintain a level of mobility in the social rented sector. You will be aware that I have already expressed concerns as to how the criteria might be implemented in Northern Ireland.

Social Housing: Energy Efficiency

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Social Development, in terms of tenant spending on energy, for his assessment of the energy efficiency of new social housing units which use solar energy and up-to-date insulation methods compared with older housing stock.

(AQO 4494/11-15)

Mr McCausland: From April 2012 all new Social Housing Units are built to satisfy the 2012 revised Building Regulations. These specify a maximum fossil fuel emissions rate for the home, taking into account insulation, heating systems, and any solar panels installed. The average weekly energy costs for a 3 bedroom house may be £7 - £13 less than for social housing units of similar size when the home is heated.

There are also various energy efficiency schemes available to Northern Ireland Housing Executive tenants. These include Heating schemes to upgrade old inefficient heating systems. In 2013/2014 the Housing Executive intends to replace or install 5,750 heating systems. During heating installation, roof space insulation is checked and upgraded as necessary.

Double Glazing schemes will also be available. Under the Programme for Government target it is intended that by the end of 2015 all Housing Executive homes will have double glazing. Other initiatives will be available including frost stat installation. The Housing Executive also intends to run a pilot scheme to improve the energy efficiency of no-fines properties.

ATOS Assessment Process

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to benefits appeals and the services provided by ATOS, what consideration has been given to having nurses, rather than doctors, carry out medical assessments in more complex medical cases.

(AQO 4495/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As many Members will already know, medical assessments are carried out by healthcare professionals, who are qualified nurses or doctors and have a minimum of 3 years post qualification experience. Medical assessments in relation to Employment and Support Allowance and Incapacity Benefit reassessment are completed by either a nurse or a doctor. However there are some conditions, mostly central neuropathy conditions that are currently only assessed by a doctor.

I will write separately to the member to provide a detailed breakdown of the medical conditions that are currently assessed by either a nurse or doctor.

Social Housing: Monkstown

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the current social housing provision in the Monkstown area.

(AQO 4496/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to Housing Executive stock, in Monkstown there are 509 properties owned by the Housing Executive which includes 66 bungalows, 250 houses, 184 flats and 9 maisonettes.

Housing Executive: Maintenance Contracts

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development what recent changes have been made to the process for monitoring the costs of Northern Ireland Housing Executive maintenance contracts.

(AQO 4498/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have been advised by the Housing Executive that from a planned maintenance perspective they have/are implementing the following to monitor costs and payments:

- New multi discipline consultant contracts are in place – where the consultants will be managing the delivery of Planned Schemes through contractors. Within the consultant contracts the Housing Executive will be monitoring the following using Key Performance Indicators (KPIs):
  - Consultant's proposed costs at Area Clearance approval stage will be sample checked by the in-house Project Manager (PM) for accuracy. Consultants will be held accountable for the accuracy.
  - On production of the Project Price List (PPL) the PM will sample check again to ensure that costs compare with those submitted at the earlier stage and the Consultants will be held accountable for any changes.

- On site, the Project Manager will check the monthly certified payments to the contractors and will be holding the Consultants accountable for any changes since approval of the PPL.
- The Housing Executive is in the process of evaluating and awarding new Planned Schemes Contracts to contractors to be managed by the Consultants. In these contracts they will be monitoring the following through KPIs:
  - When a dwelling is complete the contractors will invoice on a house by house basis and the consultants will check for accuracy on a 100% check basis. When the invoices are inaccurate, the contractors will be held accountable.
  - In tandem with this the Project Manager will cross check a sample of these invoices back through the process above.

The above will be measured through objective KPIs and the consultants and contractors will be held accountable for failed KPIs by the application of damages. Failures will also entail the production of improvement plans and may lead to termination of contract if considered necessary.

The Housing Executive has further advised that from a response maintenance perspective there have been a number of changes recently to the process of monitoring costs.

New contracts have been introduced with eight challenging KPIs which are measured, monitored and reported upon on a monthly basis. Where the Contractor fails to meet set performance standards, damages have been and will continue to be applied. Two of these KPIs relate to quality of work and correct invoicing and are measured through the Housing Executive's post-inspection process with inspecting officers having received additional training around the policy and standards requirements that must be applied.

In addition the Contract requires improvement action plans to be submitted which in turn are subject to approval before being monitored. An escalation process is in place to ensure that clear guidelines are in place, should there be continued performance issues.

Risk based reports are regularly run in order to identify potential areas where over claims have potential to arise and two new reports are now available to Maintenance staff to facilitate this.

Homelessness

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development what action he is taking to address the 15 per cent increase in people who presented themselves as homeless between January and March 2013.
(AQO 4499/11-15)

Mr McCausland: All applicants who present as homeless undergo a homelessness assessment. Those who are assessed as being statutorily homeless are offered temporary accommodation, that is, supported accommodation or private rented sector accommodation, pending the availability of permanent accommodation in the social rented sector. Applicants who are not eligible for full duty homeless status (FDA) are offered advice and assistance, including information on the private rented sector.

The Housing Executive launched its Homelessness Strategy 2012-17 in May 2012 with the prime focus of the strategy to eliminate long term homelessness and rough sleeping across Northern Ireland by 2020.

It has four strategic objectives;

- To place Homelessness Prevention at the forefront of Service Delivery
- To reduce the length of time households experience homelessness by improving access to affordable housing
- Remove the need to sleep rough
- To improve services to vulnerable homeless households and individuals

The Strategy includes 38 actions to address homelessness. Four sub groups have been set up to take forward each of the strategic objectives and they have developed detailed plans which they are currently progressing.

Also, the Promoting Social Inclusion Homelessness Partnership, which is a cross sectoral, inter-departmental body chaired by my Department is assisting the Housing Executive to implement the actions contained in the strategy.

Homelessness continues to be a significant challenge in Northern Ireland and no one organisation or agency can address these issues in isolation. The new strategy therefore focuses on all the relevant organisations working together to deliver housing, employment, health, financial support and welfare services to those who experience homelessness.

The Housing Executive and its staff continue to provide advice and assistance to anyone who presents as homeless.

Whilst it is too early to say what this increase is indicative of, I have requested that the Housing Executive assessment and proposed actions be made available as soon as possible.

Social Housing and Regeneration Projects

Ms McCorley asked the Minister for Social Development to compare the criteria used by his Department to allocate funding for the provision of social housing with that for funding for regeneration projects.
(AQO 4501/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Department's opening budgets for the four years 2011-12 to 2014-15 were determined in the course of a major Budget Review conducted by DFP during 2010 and subsequently approved by the NI Executive. Following the range of bids submitted by my Department (and other Departments), capital budgets were duly allocated by DFP based on NI Executive priorities and the total amount available to the NI Block from HM Treasury. In 2013-14, the available net Housing capital budget is approximately £67m and for Urban Regeneration/Community Development is just under £30m. The respective Business Areas manage these budgets; planning and implementing projects; and reprioritising expenditure as necessary.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

European Funding

Ms Ruane asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what his Department is doing to encourage greater draw-down of European funding from funding streams that are currently being underutilised.

(AQO 3490/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): We have set a specific Programme for Government target to increase our drawdown of competitive EU Funding by 20% over the four-year period 2011-15.

Departments have each been charged with delivering an increase in funding, and progress is being monitored by the Budget Review Group and the Programme for Government monitoring team. We are on track to meet the 20% target.

Four Barroso Task Force Desk Officers, based in the Executive's Brussels Office, are working with departments to identify and encourage drawdown from a broader range of sources, including new programmes such as Horizon 2020 and the Connecting Europe Facility, and to further utilise funding programmes in which we are already successful.

Junior Minister Bell and Junior Minister McCann, as co-chairs of the Barroso Task Force Working Group (BTWG), continue to co-ordinate and monitor engagement in European funding streams. BTWG has developed and published the Executive's European Priorities, which outline departmental objectives to increase engagement in European policies, networks and funding programmes.

Economic Package

Mr Dunne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on any potential economic package.

(AQO 4066/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We met with the Prime Minister, David Cameron, on 26 March 2013 to discuss the devolution of Corporation Tax powers to the Executive. He said at the meeting that no decision on this issue will be made until Autumn 2014. We expressed our disappointment and agreed to adjourn the meeting to allow officials to explore how, if a positive decision was made, this could be given legislative effect before the end of the current parliament.

Since our meeting with the Prime Minister, we received correspondence from the Secretary of State detailing some proposed economic measures for the local economy. The economic package 'Building a Prosperous and United Community' was announced on 14 June 2013, and was ratified by the Executive on 27 June 2013.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the average length of time taken by the Veterinary Sciences Division of the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute to provide a report of its findings on the death of a wild bird.

(AQW 25153/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The average turnaround time for a first report on the post-mortem of wild birds during the financial year 2012/13 was two days.

Cattle and Sheep Theft

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail how many (i) cattle; and (ii) sheep have been (a) stolen; or (b) reported missing, in each constituency, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25160/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Information on (a) stolen or (b) animals reported missing is kept on the Department's database the Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS). APHIS does not differentiate between missing or stolen animals. These two categories are recorded collectively on APHIS (Table 1).

APHIS does not keep information by constituency.

We are currently developing a system for the recording of stolen or sheep reported missing. Table 1 provides the number of cattle reported as missing or stolen over the last three years by Divisional Veterinary Office area.

Flood Risk Management Plans

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the development of flood risk management plans.

(AQW 25186/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Management of flood risk is determined by the EU Directive (2007/60/EC), commonly known as the Floods Directive. To date my Department, in its role as Competent Authority, completed the preliminary flood risk assessment in 2011. Information from this work then enabled the significant flood risk areas to be determined. Currently, detailed flood hazard and risk maps are being developed for these areas, which are to be prepared by 22nd December 2013. The maps will provide detail on the nature and extent of flooding from different sources within each settlement and this information will be included in the Flood Risk Management Plans to be drafted. To inform the plans, Local Flood Forums have been established for each river basin district. Statutory Agencies, Community Leaders and Elected Representatives with an interest in flood risk management are members of these forums. The plans are to be in draft by December 2014 and finalised a year later. The enclosed leaflet describes how the Floods Directive is being implemented and highlights the key delivery stages and milestones (a copy of the leaflet has been placed in the Assembly library).

Flood Risk Management Plans

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to list the areas in Ballymoney that have been identified for further investigation as a result of the development of flood risk management plans.

(AQW 25187/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The attached map shows the areas in Ballymoney which are subject to further study, as part of the implementation of the EU Floods Directive. Detailed flood hazard and risk maps for these areas are to be prepared by 22nd December 2013. The development of the Flood Risk Management Plan for the Neagh Bann River Basin District, which includes Ballymoney, has also commenced and it will be in draft by December 2014 and finalised a year later.

Rural Development Schemes

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she is aware of unspent budgets in any rural development schemes, and if so, will surplus funds be transferred to other projects in rural areas to avoid underspend.

(AQW 25227/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am aware that the remaining unspent funds within the Rural Development Programme are allocated against projected expenditure to the end of the Programme. My officials will continue to monitor the programme expenditure and make any further adjustments, which are permitted within the programme rules, to ensure the drawdown of funds is maximised.

Dereliction

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what assistance her Department can provide to deal with derelict and dilapidated properties in villages.

(AQW 25281/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Measure 3.5 of Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme, village Renewal and Development, funded by my Department, aims to support, encourage and enable residents of villages and surrounding areas to create a vision and an integrated action plan to ensure the full potential of the area is achieved. Flowing from these action plans are integrated village initiatives which may be supported by my Department or where appropriate, referred to another relevant Department.

Projects which could be supported by my Department include the establishment or upgrade of community facilities, tourism projects, creation of or expansion of small businesses and rural heritage initiatives.

Derelict and dilapidated properties in villages, where part of any of the above projects could be supported under the village Renewal measure.

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the progress made on each of her Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25288/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Progress on the delivery of Programme for Government commitments is closely monitored in accordance with the published programme arrangements and delivery framework and includes scrutiny by Departments, the Delivery Oversight Group and by the PFG Programme Board.

The latest available information on progress against Programme for Government Commitments can be accessed at: <http://www.northernireland.gov.uk/index/work-of-the-executive/pfg-budget-economic-strategy/pfg/strategic-online-report-2011-2015.htm>

Price Controls

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she plans to introduce legislation to protect the price of farm produce in the open market.

(AQW 25305/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I firmly believe that farmers should receive a fair price for their produce. As all links in the food chain are dependent on each other it is reasonable that all should share in the rewards. However, the price farmers receive for their produce is a commercial matter and it is not, therefore, within my remit to introduce legislation to determine prices for farm produce.

It is recognised that for a number of years there have been problems in the supply chain. As a first step to help address the situation, the Competition Commission introduced a new strengthened and extended Groceries Supply Code of Practice. As this action was only part of the solution, the British Government recently introduced legislation establishing a Grocery Code Adjudicator. I welcome this legislation and can advise that, in view of the importance of this matter for our producers and processors, I and the DETI Minister wrote to the British Government supporting this legislation and underscoring the need for an adjudicator with real power.

The Adjudicator has now been appointed and I plan to meet with her later this month when I will relay to her, on behalf of our industry, their concerns about how the food chain operates and highlight the problems being faced by our producers and processors. Whilst the Adjudicator's role is not to determine a fair price, her influence on preventing unfair practices should help safeguard the interests of producers and others in the food chain. My aim is to see a food industry where both farmers and other suppliers, who together make a very important contribution to the local economy, are getting a fair deal.

Price Controls

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she plans to work with her counterparts in other parts of the UK and Ireland to protect the price of farmed produce by introducing a minimum price based on the cost of production and margin of inflation linked to their produce.

(AQW 25306/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I refer the Member to my answer to AQW 25305/11-15. The establishment of a pricing structure for farm produce is a commercial matter and outside my remit.

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) her Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.

(AQW 25308/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The numbers of people employed by recruitment agencies used by my Department and its arms-lengths bodies as of April 2011, April 2012 and April 2013 are detailed below.

Date	Number of Agency staff
(i) In her Department
1 April 2011	25
1 April 2012	23
1 April 2013	26
(ii) Arms-length bodies
1 April 2011	18
1 April 2012	37
1 April 2013	72

Equal Pay

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether staff from the Veterinary Sciences Division who were transferred to the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute in April 2006, are to be compensated under the equal pay settlement for the period 2003-2006, and if not, why not.

(AQW 25339/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am very much aware of this issue and would assure you that both my Department and AFBI have sought legal advice to establish the full extent of our potential liability in respect of the equal pay settlement and have acted in strict accordance with that advice.

This confirms that AFBI's potential liability in respect of backdated equal pay is limited to the period 1 April 2006 (when AFBI was created) to 31 January 2009 (after which, pay scales were re-aligned). All eligible AFBI staff have been paid accordingly.

The legal advice received by my Department further confirmed that the time available in which to challenge the Department's potential liability in respect of the period before 1 April 2006 under the Equal Pay Act (NI) has expired.

I have considered this matter at some length and as I must act in accordance with legal advice received, no AFBI staff will receive compensation from DARD under the equal pay settlement for the period 2003-2006.

Oyster Farmers: Compensation

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she will take action to compensate oyster farmers that use Carlingford Lough and have had their stocks destroyed by a combination of unusually warm weather and a virus, on similar lines to the assistance afforded to sheep farmers during the period of heavy snowfall at Easter and livestock farmers who received assistance to import fodder last spring.

(AQW 25382/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are no measures available for compensation or restocking through DARD or under European funding.

This is not an unusual circumstance and there is a high likelihood of repeated mortalities in future years. Both DARD and producers are aware of the risks in farming Pacific oysters that may carry the OsHV1 virus and that are being farmed in affected waters.

However, DARD has assisted industry through the European Fisheries Fund for a project taken forward by CBAIT, the Cross-Border Aquaculture Initiative Team, in conjunction with Pacific oyster farmers. The project "Advance Through Disease Control", aims to compile baseline data for the Pacific oyster industry and investigate possible farming techniques to try to limit risk of spread of OsHV1- $\mu$ var.

DARD officials met with affected Pacific oyster farmers on 2nd September and discussed possible areas eligible for funding. DARD has contacted Seafish who will liaise with the Cross Border Aquaculture Initiative Team in taking forward possible applications to assist the Pacific oyster sector.

DARD Headquarters Relocation

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the individuals and organisations that responded to the consultation on the proposal to move her departmental Headquarters to Ballykelly.

Forest Service: Staff Numbers

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the total number of (i) industrial; and (ii) non-industrial staff employed by the Forest Service in each of the last ten years; and to outline the reason for change.

(AQW 25405/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The details of the total number of (i) industrial; and (ii) non-industrial staff employed by the Forest Service in each of the last ten years are detailed at Annex A.

The main reason for a reduction in Forest Service staff numbers over this period was the need to improve efficiency. This was achieved by:-

- (a) Implementing NICS-wide systems for e-HR and e-financial management, so that fewer administrative centres were needed to pay industrial wages, to procure goods and services, and to manage forest operations;
- (b) increased use of standing sales of timber, where the customer is in control of all aspects of tree harvesting;
- (c) natural wastage, typically through age retirement, and replacing capacity through advancements in industry mechanisation and increased use of contracted services for operations including site preparation and tree planting;
- (d) involvement in the recreational management of forests by operational partners including local government.

Annex A

AQW 25405 11-15

April 2009	103	140
April 2008	104	147
April 2007	112	162

Forest Service Headquarters Relocation

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the relocation of the Forest Service Headquarters to Enniskillen.

(AQW 25407/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My officials are preparing an economic appraisal that will identify a preferred location for my consideration.

Forest Service relocation should be accomplished before June 2015.

Forest Service Headquarters Relocation

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the approximate number of jobs which will be relocated to the proposed new Forest Service Headquarters in Enniskillen.

(AQW 25409/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service has identified approximately 60 Headquarters posts for relocation to Co. Fermanagh excluding arrangements for the recently announced incorporation of Plant Health responsibilities within the Forest Service.

Rivers Agency Headquarters Relocation

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the relocation of the Rivers Agency Headquarters.

(AQW 25410/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I announced my intention to relocate the Rivers Agency to Loughry College on Thursday 16th May 2013. DFP's Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) is currently carrying out an assessment of the various options available to accommodate the Rivers Agency Headquarters at the Loughry Campus. A report from CPD is expected by end of September.

In addition, an Equality Impact Assessment is underway and when complete a full EQIA report on relocation will be produced.

I expect that this relocation will be completed by June 2015.

DARD Headquarters Relocation

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the relocation of her departmental Headquarters.

(AQW 25412/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The work to identify, cost and analyse the options to accommodate our headquarters on the Ballykelly site is now complete. That work was informed by input from the accommodation options study produced by DFP's Central Procurement Directorate (CPD), an Equality Impact Assessment and a number of staff surveys involving not only the staff in my Department but the staff across the whole of the NICS.

The outcomes of this work have been incorporated into a business case which is currently being quality assured and I expect this aspect of the process to be completed by the end of October.

Staff Suspensions

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the (i) number of departmental staff that have been suspended on full pay; and (ii) the duration of the suspension in each case.

(AQW 25443/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Two members of staff are currently suspended on full pay. The duration as at 13 September 2013 is eleven months (officer 1) and two months (officer 2).

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail any instances where beef from cattle infected with Bovine Tuberculosis has entered the food chain.

(AQW 25452/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: All animals entering the human food chain are subject to a rigorous public health examination.

This public health inspection is required throughout all of Europe under EU legislation, and is performed in the North of Ireland by DARD Veterinary Service meat inspection staff on behalf of the Food Standards Agency (FSA).

Beef from cattle infected with Bovine TB can enter the food chain here and everywhere in the European Union, but only after a more thorough post mortem examination carried out by government Meat Inspectors. Where this inspection reveals any lesions caused by TB in more than one organ or region of a carcass, the whole carcass and offal are declared unfit for human consumption and destroyed, because this indicates more generalised infection. When a localised TB lesion has been found in the lymph nodes of only one organ or part of the carcass, that organ or part of the carcass and the associated lymph nodes are removed and destroyed. The remaining carcass is considered safe to enter the food chain.

In the light of recent public discussion of this issue, the Food Standards Agency has re-examined the risk to human health from meat originating from TB reactors and other possibly infected animals, and confirmed that they are content with this approach. Further details are provided on the Food Standards Agency and DARD websites.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the mechanisms in place to ensure that beef from cattle infected with Bovine Tuberculosis does not enter the food chain.

(AQW 25453/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Beef from cattle infected with Bovine TB can enter the food chain here and everywhere in the European Union, but only after a thorough post mortem examination by government Meat Inspectors who inspect animals before slaughter and the carcasses afterwards for visible TB lesions.

In the light of recent media articles around this issue, the Food Standards Agency has re-examined the risk to human health from TB reactors and other possibly infected animals. The FSA has confirmed that they are content that beef from TB reactor animals presents a very low risk to public health. There is no documented evidence of humans acquiring TB from eating beef.

The European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) has also looked at the risks and concluded that the risk of transmission of M. bovis to humans through eating meat is 'negligible', because the bacteria is not usually found in the meat, even in infected cattle.

In cases where routine public health examination detects visible lesions of TB in the lymph glands of any animals that have not reacted to a TB skin test, these are then treated in exactly the same way as if they were reactors.

Further details are provided on the Food Standards Agency and DARD websites.

Families Acting for Innocent Relatives

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 25282/11-15, whether it was due to the advice by the Central Investigation Service to the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB), that "SEUPB subsequently referred the auditor's report to the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) to take forward an investigation".

(AQW 25473/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: It would be for the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB) to confirm the extent to which the Central Investigation Service advice led to their decision to refer the auditor's report to the Police Service of NI (PSNI) to take forward an investigation.

Families Acting for Innocent Relatives

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 25282/11-15, to outline the resultant outcome of the investigation taken forward by the Special EU Programmes Body.

(AQW 25474/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The outcome of the Police Service of NI (PSNI) investigation was reported to the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB) and not to my Department. I am not, therefore, in a position to outline the outcome of the investigation taken forward by SEUPB.

Badger Sett Surveys

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail, in each of the two survey areas earmarked for the badger sett surveys in County Down, what percentage of the total land area is covered by those who (i) responded yes; (ii) responded no; (iii) did not respond; and (iv) where applications were returned as undeliverable.

(AQW 25475/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: For the Banbridge area, the percentage of the total land area eligible for surveying which is covered by the various groups is detailed in the table below.

Local Farmer / Landowner Response	Percentage of land area eligible for surveying *
Responded Yes	74.1%
Responded No	11%
Did Not Respond	14.3%
Returned Undeliverable	0.4%

For the Castlewella area, the percentage of the total land area eligible for surveying which is covered by the various groups is detailed in the table below.

Local Farmer / Landowner Response	Percentage of land area eligible for surveying *
Responded Yes	61.4%
Responded No	7.2%
Did Not Respond	30.7%
Returned Undeliverable	0.57%

Angling: Foyle

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the number of people that are employed as full time bailiffs to patrol the Foyle river system; and (ii) the number of fines which have been issued in the last twelve months as a result of illegal angling or breaches of an angling licence in this area.

(AQW 25612/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The description and term bailiff is no longer used and may be considered misleading. Staff carrying out a range of scientific, development and enforcement functions across fin fisheries and aquaculture, including shellfisheries, are referred to as Fishery Officers.

The Loughs Agency has the following staff employed as Fishery Officers in the Foyle system; 13 Fishery Officers supervised by 4 Fishery Inspectors, covering the Foyle catchment and Lough Foyle.

- (ii) The Loughs Agency relies on the courts for sanctions on those who breach the Regulations. There were a total of 31 fines imposed by the courts in the last 12 months, for the following offences:
- 18 Angling offences
  - 3 Pollution offences
  - 1 oyster offence
  - 9 illegal netting offences

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Trial Biking

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what facilities exist for trial biking; and if she plans to improve the facilities.

(AQW 25340/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): I am not aware of any permanent facilities that currently exist for trial biking in the north of Ireland. That said, I understand that trial biking is prohibited in many of the north's 'open spaces' and, as a result, competitions take place on temporary facilities constructed on private land.

Neither my Department, nor Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, have received any requests to improve facilities, or indeed, provide facilities for the sport.

Department of Education

Primary School Admissions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 24819/11-15, for a breakdown of the figures in each council area. (AQW 25263/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The Education and Library Boards have advised that the number of pupils in each council area not admitted to their first preference primary school is as set out in the tables below:

Note: admissions to schools is a fluid situation, therefore, figures may differ slightly from those provided in answer to previously asked questions.

Free School Meals

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the educational benefits associated with the provision of free school meals.

(AQW 25283/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Research indicates that nutrition has a key influence on cognitive development and academic performance in children and adolescents and that poor diet is detrimental to children's learning, concentration and behaviour, in addition to its wider health impacts.

Evaluations of the free school meal pilot initiative undertaken in three local authorities in England between 2009 to 2011, Kingston Upon Hull's "Eat Well, Do Well" initiative in 2008 and the "Feed Me Better" campaign by Jamie Oliver in 2004/05 highlight the improvements in concentration, behaviour and in some cases in educational attainment which were achieved as a result of the provision of healthy school food, including free school meals.

The school meal can contribute to around one third of a child's daily food intake. For children and young people from the most disadvantaged backgrounds, who are more likely to be at greater risk of having a poor diet, free school meals can make a vitally important contribution to their nutritional requirements.

I consider that the provision of healthy free school meals is necessary to address the particular challenges that these children face in accessing and participating fully in school life, in improving their learning outcomes and ultimately lifetime opportunities. This also contributes to the statutory target, which falls on each Department, to take action to eradicate child poverty here by 2020 and to the wider Programme for Government Commitment to tackle disadvantage.

Consequently, I indicated in June my intention to apply the same eligibility criteria for free school meals for both primary and post-primary pupils from September 2014. This means that post-primary pupils from the lowest income families will be supported with access to free school meals in the same way as primary pupils. It is estimated that this will benefit 15,000 children.

Education and Skills Authority: Procurement

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for an update on the establishment of the Project Board to agree a service level agreement between the Education and Skills Authority and the Central Procurement Directorate, including the membership of the Project Board and the number of meetings held to date.

(AQW 25284/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The first meeting of the Project Board, constituted for the purpose of establishing a service level agreement between the Education and Skills Authority (ESA) and the Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) to enable the latter to act as ESA's Centre of Procurement Expertise for the procurement of supplies and services, will take place in October 2013.

Members of ESA Implementation Team will act as Senior Reporting Officer and Project Manager. Membership of the Project Board will include representation from the Department of Education, CPD, the Education and Library Boards (both an ELB Chief Executive and an ELB Procurement Officer) and Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment.

School Holidays

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education how he plans to achieve standardisation of school holidays across all primary and secondary education sectors.

(AQW 25342/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Chief Executives' Working Group on the harmonisation of services consists of representatives from all Education and Library Boards, the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, the Council for Integrated Education and the Governing Bodies Association. It is responsible for co-ordinating non-operational days for school transport and catering services for the purpose of achieving efficiencies. Therefore, school holidays are aligned with the agreed days of non-operation of transport and catering.

In December 2012, the Department asked the Association of Chief Executives to explore the possibility for better co-ordination of school days and opening and closing times in a bid to further reduce transport costs. The Association concluded that there is as much harmonisation of school days as possible at the present time.

The flexibility in place regarding staff training and school development days allows schools to use these days in the most appropriate way to accommodate their school management and training requirements. It would not be possible to align training days as specialist training providers are limited in number and could not service all schools on the same dates.

Schools: Strabane

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education for an update on the priority new school builds (i) Gaelscoil Uí Dhocartaigh; and (ii) Strabane Academy.

(AQW 25348/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my statement to the Assembly on 22 January 2013 I announced a programme of 22 new build projects that would advance in planning. My officials are working with the relevant school authorities to bring these projects forward as swiftly as possible with an initial focus on confirming the enrolment / class base at each school with the planning and managing authorities

Gaelscoil Uí Dhocartaigh and Strabane Academy were included in my January 2013 announcement and both at an early stage of the planning process.

The draft Economic Appraisal for Strabane Academy is currently being examined by my Department and the Economic Appraisal for Gaelscoil Uí Dhocartaigh is currently being drafted by the School's consultants.

It is my intention that these projects will be taken through to construction. However, authorisation to proceed with construction will be based on the level of capital funding available at that time and all necessary approvals being obtained.

School Transport

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education what consideration is given to the effect that a change in the method of transport to school will have on children, especially those with special needs, when tendering for new transporters and when making a decision on any change of transport to school.

(AQW 25378/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Pupils with a statement of special educational needs are assessed by Health Care Professionals to identify whether they require a particular form of transport to school. If a specific form of transport is recommended, the Education and Library Boards are responsible for making the appropriate provision which can range from a specialised Board bus to a taxi or other contract service. For other pupils with a statement of special educational needs, the appropriate transport provision can be a standard Board bus service or, in certain circumstances, a Translink service.

In terms of the consideration given to the impact on children with special educational needs when tendering for operators to carry out school runs, the Education and Library Boards have assured me that each pupil's individual circumstances are taken into account and that, in some instances, where indicated on a pupil's statement that they have particular specialist needs and requirements, continuity may be maintained year on year.

Preschool Admissions

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to list the schools which were oversubscribed at stage 1 of the pre-school enrolment process in each of the last three years, broken down by (i) Education and Library Board; and (ii) constituency.

(AQW 25395/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Information on the location of pre-school settings is not held in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Education and Library Boards are, however, able to provide information broken down by District Council.

I will arrange for a list of those settings which had filled all of their allocation of funded places by the end of Stage 1 of the pre-school admissions process for 2011/12, 2012/13 and 2013/14, broken down by Education and Library Board and District Council, to be placed in the Assembly Library.

The pre-school admissions process is preference based: therefore children not offered a place by their 1st preference setting may be offered a place in another setting listed by their parents as a preference on their application.

By the end of stage 1 of the 2013/14 pre-school admissions process over 95% of children had been offered a place in a preferred setting and, overall, sufficient funded places remained available to meet the needs of those who had not been placed. By the end of stage 2 of the process 99.9% of those children whose parents remained with the process received an offer of a place for their child.

Early Years Funding

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 24633/11-15, when he will publish the outcome of his review of Early Years funding.

(AQW 25396/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As advised in previous correspondence, I am currently reviewing this funding and its delivery to ensure that it aligns with DE's current aims and objectives. I will set out the way forward in due course.

St Joseph's High School Autism Unit

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, in relation to children who qualify for Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) funded taxi travel to St Joseph's High School Autism Unit, Coalisland, (i) for his assessment of the concerns raised by parents and staff over children arriving late for school, and late back home after school, due to multiple pick-ups and drop-offs, thus interfering with the child's existing challenges and necessary routines symptomatic of autism; and (ii) what action will he take to address this issue particularly in respect of a lack of co-operation from the relevant department of the SELB.

(AQW 25427/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) have advised me that their Transport Officer was contacted by a parent on 5th September with concerns regarding journey times and late arrivals at St Joseph's College, Coalisland. The parent was advised that it would take several days for new arrangements to be put in place. Similar concerns were raised on 9th September by the teacher in charge of the Learning Support Centre at the school.

The SELB responded to these concerns by arranging for two taxis to provide this service with effect from 10th September. I understand that the Transport Officer contacted the teacher in charge of the Learning Support Unit on 10th September and she confirmed that she was satisfied with the new arrangements.

In this case, the Board provided alternative transport arrangements within three working days of the initial contact from the concerned parent which resolved the matter. I am therefore content that no further action is required.

Ben Robinson

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what action he proposes to take as a result of the findings by the coroner in the Ben Robinson case.

(AQW 25439/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have now received a copy of the Coroner's report into the tragic death of Ben Robinson following injuries sustained during a school rugby match in 2011.

In considering the Coroner's report, I intend to seek professional advice and will also liaise with my colleague, the Minister for Culture, Arts and Leisure, who has responsibility for sport in the north of Ireland. These consultations, based on the findings in the Coroner's report as to the reason for Ben's death, will determine what, if any, specific guidance the Department should provide for schools.

The Department of Education does support schools in meeting their responsibilities regarding the health and safety of their pupils and has, for a number of years, provided all schools with a copy of the 'Association for Physical Education's Safe Practice in PE and Sport publication'. Schools are expected to adhere to this guidance when pupils are involved in curricular PE or extra-curricular provision.

I will be meeting Ben's father to discuss the issues raised by this tragic occurrence when I have fully considered the professional advice I receive and have liaised with the Minister for Culture, Arts and Leisure.

Children who Cannot Attend School

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education whether he intends to issue guidance similar to that issued by the Department for Education in England in January 2013 in relation to children who cannot attend school because of health needs.

(AQW 25553/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department is currently developing guidance on Education Otherwise Than At School (EOTAS). EOTAS provision includes support for children who cannot attend school because of health needs and my officials will consider the DfE guidance in taking forward this work.

Illuminate

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many children have benefitted from the use of Illuminate since its introduction in 2011.

(AQW 25556/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not hold information on the number of children who have benefitted from the use of Illuminate.

Illuminate is a web-based video-conferencing and collaboration tool which enables pupils and staff in all schools in the north of Ireland to participate in a variety of online e-learning opportunities. For example, it enables schools to hold collaborative lessons and to participate in video-conference events and lectures. It can also be used to allow pupils to participate remotely in lessons or revision groups or for pupils at home to keep in touch with their teacher/class(es).

It is a matter for individual schools to decide on how they will make use of the Illuminate video-conferencing software, however, I recently wrote to all schools to raise awareness of this facility and to encourage schools to ensure it is used to best effect.

Illuminate

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what plans he has to use Illuminate for children who are unable to attend school for health reasons.

(AQW 25559/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is a matter for individual schools to decide on how they will make use of Illuminate. However, I recently wrote to all schools to raise awareness of this facility and to encourage schools to ensure it is used to best effect. In addition, further opportunities to participate in training on Illuminate have been offered to all schools and Education and Library Boards.

Children who are unable to attend school for health reasons will have differing needs and may require different solutions. There are a range of products, including the Illuminate video-conferencing facility, that could help pupils keep up to date with their school work. For example, some schools use the Virtual Learning Environment facility to enable pupils to access school resources from home and to upload assignments. E-mail is also used by some schools to maintain links with their pupils and to set and receive work assignments.

Home tuition is intended to help keep a pupil who is unable to attend school, due to illness or a health related problem, in touch with learning. It is not intended to be a replacement for regular attendance at school. Each Education and Library Board has a responsibility to determine how to meet this need and may adopt different approaches. Home tuition can be augmented by lessons from the pupil's school or e-learning opportunities, including Illuminate. Much depends on the young person and how learning might be integrated into their treatment or recovery plan.

My aim would be to help pupils who are unable to attend school to continue with their education, however, decisions on the best means to achieve this must be made on the basis of each child's individual needs.

Projected Capital Spend

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW22718/11-15, how much finance has been expended to date in each of the projects listed.

(AQW 25560/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Finances expended against the 18 capital build projects announced in June 2012 up to 31 March 2013 are shown in the table below.

Schools: Starting Age

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the introduction of a flexible school starting age; and whether he has taken any action to introduce this locally.

(AQW 25563/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I recognise that we have the youngest school starting in Europe and following a meeting with representatives from the Association of Teachers & Lecturers and associates, I agreed to look at options for introducing a degree of flexibility around the school starting age here.

Work on identifying potential options within this area is currently ongoing and will be completed as quickly as possible.

Schools: Attendance Management

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 18725/11-15, for an update in relation to the guidance on attendance management policies.

(AQW 25575/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department issued this guidance in June 2013. DE Circular 2013/13 -Attendance Guidance and Absence Recording by Schools came into effect from the beginning of the 2013/14 school year. This provides schools with good practice, guidance and strategies to manage pupil attendance and includes an attendance policy template.

The inclusion of a summary and evaluation of the attendance strategy is a legal requirement as set out in the Education (School Development Plans) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2010 (S.R. 2010/395).

My Department also issued 'School Attendance Matters – A Parent's Guide' to all schools for distribution to Year 1 and Year 8 pupils starting in September 2013.

Physical Education

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what action his Department is taking to encourage physical activity in children, particularly girls.

(AQW 25577/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Physical Education (PE) is a compulsory part of the curriculum for all pupils at every Key Stage from age 4 to 16 and schools are encouraged to provide at least 2 hours of PE per week. The statutory minimum content for each key stage is set out in the Education (Curriculum Minimum Content) Order (Northern Ireland) 2007.

Each year, £1.5 million is made available to enable the delivery of the Curriculum Sports Programme which encourages participation from boys and girls in over 540 primary schools throughout the north of Ireland. The programme aims to develop the generic physical literacy skills of our youngest pupils (Foundation and Key Stage 1) through participation in enjoyable physical activities. Key strengths of the programme are the extended opportunities it provides to build on children's basic movement skills and transfer these skills to other areas of PE. Currently just over 19,000 boys and over 18,000 girls are participating in the programme.

DE has also been working towards achieving the targets set out in DCAL's Sport Matters Strategy for Sport and Physical Recreation. In March 2012, DE conducted an online questionnaire involving primary, post primary and special schools to establish a baseline for the number of children of compulsory school age participating in a minimum of two hours quality PE per week. A summary report has been published on the DE website and it is intended that follow-up visits to schools will be undertaken by the Education and Training Inspectorate.

School Closures: Western Education and Library Board

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Education to list the primary and post-primary schools in the Western Education and Library Board area which closed in each of the last five years; and how many pupils attended each school at the time of closure. (AQW 25583/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Lists of the primary and post primary school closures in the WELB area over the last 5 years are included below. A list of the schools that have closed as a result of amalgamations is also included. As requested the lists include details of the enrolment in each school in the year of closure.

Schools: Community Use

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many schools have regularly opened their premises for community usage, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25586/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Information in the format requested is not routinely collected by the Department.

As part of the School Omnibus Survey conducted in June 2013, schools were asked if they made their facilities available for wider community use.

A total of 559 responses were received giving an overall response rate of 51%. Of the total respondents 80% reported that they made their facilities available for wider community use, 20% did not and less than 1% did not respond to the question.

At 95%, post-primary respondents were most likely to make their facilities available to the wider community, followed by 76% of primary schools and 72% of special school respondents.

Savings Delivery Plan

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education whether his Department will meet its savings delivery plan.

(AQW 25591/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department intends to deliver on its Savings Delivery Plan in full by 2014-15 and will take all reasonable steps to achieve this outcome. Details of the Department's current Savings Delivery Plan and the level of savings achieved in 2011-12 can be accessed via the following link:

http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/about-the-department/8-admin-of-education-pg/departmental-budgets-and-accounts/budget\_2011-2015\_savings\_delivery\_plan.htm

Savings Delivery Plan

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) his Department's savings delivery target for each year since 2011; and (ii) the actual savings made in each year (a) in real terms; and (b) as a percentage of the target set.

(AQW 25592/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department's Savings Delivery Plan requirements across the 4 year Budget period 2011-15 are £101.5m/£146.9m/£175.5m/£206.1m.

The actual savings achieved in 2011-12 were £95.6m, or just over 95% of the 2011-12 requirement. In real terms, the savings made would represent £99.3m at today's prices.

The actual savings delivered in 2012-13 are currently being assessed and will be published on the Department's website in due course. The latest version of the Savings Delivery Plan and details of 2011-12 actual savings can be found on the Department's website. These can be accessed via the following link:

http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/about-the-department/8-admin-of-education-pg/departmental-budgets-and-accounts/budget\_2011-2015\_savings\_delivery\_plan.htm

Physical Education: Cycling

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education what level of cycling is contained within the school sports curriculum.

(AQW 25638/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not hold this information.

Physical Education (PE) is a compulsory part of the revised curriculum for all pupils in Years 1 – 12. There are statutory requirements in relation to the delivery of Athletics, Dance, Games, Gymnastics and swimming; however, it would be a matter for individual schools to determine the activities and specific sports they offer their pupils when delivering PE.

There are a number of opportunities within the curriculum for teachers to discuss and encourage cycling as a healthy and sustainable mode of transport. Within the Personal Development and Mutual Understanding area of learning at primary level and Learning for Life and Work at post primary level, pupils have the opportunities to explore the benefits of a healthy lifestyle and the importance of being physically active.

Educational Attainment

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of this year's GCSE and A-Level results, including how he plans to continue to improve educational attainment.

(AQO 4558/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In relation to GCSEs:

- 76.5% of entries achieved grades A*-C.
- 68.8% of entries in English and 64.6% in mathematics showed increases of 0.6 and 1.7 percentage points respectively.
- The overall pass rate increased slightly with 99.2% of grades awarded at A*-G.

In relation to A levels:

- 83.5% of entries at A-level here achieved grades A*- C
- The overall pass rate remained unchanged, with 98.2% of grades awarded at A*-E this year.

The fact that so many young people are achieving good examination grades is pleasing news; their achievements are due to a great deal of hard work over the past number of years. We should not forget the teachers and parents who have supported these children to reach this stage in their education.

Since coming to office I have continued to implement policies to raise standards and tackle underachievement. These policies are realising improvements at Key Stage 2, GCSE and A level. However we still have room for improvement, in particular to close the gaps in achievement that exist among our most and least disadvantaged young people.

The key now is to step up the pace of implementation and delivery of these policies. Alongside this, additional funding has been allocated to specific programmes to target educational underachievement in socially disadvantaged areas.

St Joseph's High School Autism Unit

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education how many pupils attend the St Joseph's High School autism unit; and how many of these pupils were new intake in the September 2013 term.

(AQW 25700/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The 2013/14 school census is due to take place on the 11th October; therefore, figures relating to the September 2013 term are not currently available. Provisional figures will be available mid December. Figures collated from the 2012/13 school census indicated that there were 38 pupils enrolled in the learning support centre located in St Joseph's College, Coalisland.

Schools: Community Use

Ms Brown asked the Minister of Education for an update on the guidance being drafted by his Department on schools opening their premises for community use.

(AQO 4554/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have recently approved the draft guidance on community use of school premises: a guidance toolkit for schools which has been developed as a web-based resource and will be disseminated to all schools via a link hosted on the DE website.

As previously agreed, I have forwarded a copy of the draft guidance to the Chairperson of the Education Committee. The Committee is currently considering the guidance and has sought oral briefing from my Officials. My intention is to publish the guidance following consideration of the Committee's comments.

A Levels

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education what steps he has taken to ensure the portability of Northern Ireland A Levels for English universities following the announcement by the Secretary of State for Education about the ending of coursework and the operation of a single final examination for A Levels in England.

(AQO 4548/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My current policy position on A levels is similar to Wales. We believe it is appropriate that an A level should continue to include both an AS and A2 element to provide a bridge between GCSE and A level; that the number of assessments should be reduced; and that there should be an assessment opportunity at the end of the 1st and 2nd years.

My Department consulted widely on A level policy following the changes to A levels in England announced by Michael Gove last year. Stakeholders have been supportive of my policy on A levels. I believe the decisions I have taken are in the best interests of our learners and will ensure the integrity of our A Levels going forward. These decisions will also ensure that our A Level qualifications remain equitable, robust and portable, and are credible in the eyes of Higher Education Institutions and employers.

Differences in policy between England and ourselves raise the possibility that our standards may not be seen as robust. I am determined that we meet that challenge head on and ensure that our qualifications are comparable to those offered across these islands and beyond. I have received CCEA's report of its fundamental review of GCSEs and A levels and will be making an announcement shortly on the way forward.

It contains a number of recommendations, both short and long term, which seek to address concerns around the comparability and portability of qualifications. I am confident that we will find a way of determining our own path which will support and augment our young people's future.

CCMS: Certificate of Education

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education whether he has discussed with the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools the reasons for maintaining the Certificate of Education as an essential criterion for the positions to tackle literacy and numeracy problems at primary school level that were advertised in summer 2013.

(AQO 4553/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have not discussed with the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools the reasons for maintaining the Certificate of Education as an essential criterion for the positions to tackle literacy and numeracy problems at primary school level that were advertised in summer 2013.

The teaching posts that were advertised over the summer are the additional teaching posts being created as part of the Delivering Social Change Signature Project which aims to improve Literacy and Numeracy and provide recruitment opportunities for recent graduate teachers.

The criteria for the recruitment process was developed by the Strategic Oversight Group led by the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) and agreed by employing authorities, sectoral organisations and the teaching unions.

The agreed criteria, to be applied by all schools, do not include a requirement for primary school teachers to hold a Teacher's Certificate in Religious Education. However, the recruitment process of classroom based teachers was undertaken by the relevant employing authority and, in the case of schools in the Catholic Maintained Sector, their normal Scheme of Management was applied with the appointments made by the Boards of Governors of each school.

The WELB is also undertaking a central recruitment for literacy and numeracy support teachers to be deployed into a number of schools. For these support posts, there is no requirement for primary teachers to hold a Teacher's Certificate in Religious Education.

Common Funding Scheme

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the impact that cuts to school funding, through the revised Common Funding Scheme, will have on the provision of services such as Special Educational Needs teachers.

(AQO 4556/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is important to state at the outset that I have not yet made any final decisions and have not cut the budget to schools as a result of the Common Funding Scheme Review. The opposite is the case. I am providing an additional £30m to the Aggregated Schools Budget over the next 2 years as a result of this review.

Although the Budget 2011-15 outcome for education has been extremely challenging I have also protected funding for Special Education across this 4 year period. Pupils in special schools and those with a statement of Special Educational Needs will continue to have their needs met. The funding for this is already separate from the funding that is allocated via the Common Funding Scheme and my proposals are that this should continue to be the position for 2014-15.

This review was not about saving money; it was about making better use of the funding we have to ensure that the needs and aspirations of all our children and young people are to the fore.

That is why, as well as protecting funding for children with Special Educational Needs, I am also proposing to increase the funding available to support schools in helping pupils from our most disadvantaged areas to overcome the barriers that too often lead to educational underachievement. I want to ensure that the pupils who stand to benefit most from education receive the support they need. I am determined to break the link between social disadvantage and poor educational outcomes.

I am open to new ideas that can help us meet that objective and I encourage the Member opposite and his constituents to participate in the consultation and let me have their views before the consultation deadline of 18 October.

Schools: Community Use

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education how a community group that wishes to take over the occupation of disused school buildings can enhance its application.

(AQO 4557/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department, in common with all Departments, must dispose of surplus properties in line with the Land and Property Service (LPS) Guidance.

For disused school buildings in the Controlled sector the final decision regarding disposal will rest with the relevant Education and Library Board in conjunction with LPS advice. Disused school buildings in the Maintained sector will be the property of Trustees and therefore the Department would have no input regarding their further use on closure.

Community Groups interested in purchasing a disused school should make the relevant ELB aware of their interest.

It would be advantageous for the Group to seek a sponsor eg their local council or DSD in making a case for community ownership. Their sponsors may agree to register an interest in the property when LPS trawl the public sector in advance of placing the property on the open market.

The Department will favour applications from third sector groups which support its Education or Youth policies. An application will be further enhanced if the group are able to produce evidence of available funding and the ability to move forward quickly on acquiring the premises.

Pupil Performance: Rural/Urban

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the fact that pupil performance, at Key Stages 1 and 2 in English and Maths, in rural primary schools is significantly better than pupil performance at schools in an urban location.
(AQO 4559/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Pupil performance at Key Stages 1 and 2 in English and Maths in rural primary schools is not significantly better than pupil performance at schools in an urban location.

In 2011/12 there was a one percentage point difference in English and a one point two percentage point difference in mathematics between those pupils attending urban and rural schools at the end of Key Stage One.

At Key Stage Two the difference was slightly more marked with a 5.2 percentage point difference in English and a 5.4 percentage point difference in mathematics.

Research suggests that social disadvantage is the strongest factor impacting on attainment and we know from our evidence that schools in urban areas have a greater concentration of pupils entitled to free school meals than schools in rural areas (36% of pupils attending primary schools in urban areas are FSME compared to 21% in rural areas). It is therefore my assessment that the difference in attainment at Key Stage Two reflects the distribution of disadvantage between urban and rural areas. Of the 50,000 primary school pupils entitled to FSM, just under 36,000 (72%) are enrolled in schools in urban areas.

I will continue to implement my policies to raise standards and tackle educational underachievement. These policies and programmes are realising improvements for all our young people. This is evidenced by improved outcomes at Key Stage 2, GCSE and A Level.

However, we still have room for improvement to raise achievement among all our young people and in particular to close the gaps in achievement that currently exist, particularly among our most and least disadvantaged young people.

The key now is to step up the pace of implementation and delivery of these policies and to maintain the focus on raising standards to ensure that every pupil is able to achieve to their full potential.

Department for Employment and Learning

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) his Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.
(AQW 25199/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): The number of people employed by recruitment agencies within the Department for Employment and Learning, and its Arms-Length Bodies, as of 1 April in each of the last three years is as follows:

Year	Department	Arms-Length Bodies
2011	1	260
2012	9	206
2013	3	171.5
Total	13	637.5

Kilcooley Women's Centre, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail how much funding his Department provides to Kilcooley Women's Centre, Bangor.
(AQW 25229/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not have any statutory basis or remit to core fund voluntary or community organisations to deliver training or education, nor is it resourced to assist voluntary and community organisations to find funding. My Department is therefore unable to help find funding opportunities for the Kilcooley Women's Education Centre.

However, in a recent competition under the Collaboration and Innovation Fund to address issues associated with young people not in education, employment or training, the Training for Women Network (TWN) was successful in securing £770,067 for a project to help 440 young women in this category; Kilcooley Women's Education Centre is one of eight community centres collaborating to deliver this project and could potentially receive up to £25,945.00 in 2013/14 from TWN.

TWN has also secured funding from the Northern Ireland European Social Fund Programme 2007-2013 for their 'Advancement of Women' project, which delivers training to women across Northern Ireland via 12 regional partner organisations; Kilcooley Women's Centre is one of the 12 participant organisations benefiting from the funding, which includes £711,847 (European Social Fund) and £444,905 contribution by my Department over a two year period 2013/14 – 2014/15.

In addition, payments of £1,040 were made to Kilcooley Women's Centre and Development Group in respect of a Steps to Work Employer Subsidy.

Kilcooley Women's Centre, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail how much funding the South Eastern Regional College provides to Kilcooley Women's Centre, Bangor.

(AQW 25230/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold the information requested.

Therefore, I have asked the Director of South Eastern Regional College to respond to the Member directly on this matter.

Apprenticeships

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many apprenticeship places are currently funded by his Department.

(AQW 25231/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department funds the 'off the job' training element of an apprenticeship through the ApprenticeshipsNI programme. ApprenticeshipsNI aims to provide participants with the opportunity to take part in a Level 2/Level 3 Apprenticeship where the apprentice, in paid employment from day one, works towards achieving an industry-approved Level 2/Level 3 Apprenticeship Framework.

The latest statistical bulletin shows that the total number of participants on the programme at 30 April 2013 was 8,998. The full statistical bulletin can be viewed on the Department's website <http://www.delni.gov.uk/appsni-bulletin-aug-13.pdf>.

The latest statistical bulletin, published on 29 August 2013, refers to the position as at 30 April 2013. Further publications will be produced on a quarterly basis.

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the progress made on each of his Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25297/11-15)

Dr Farry: The 2011-15 Programme for Government contains five Key Commitments allocated to the Department, as follows:

- 1 increase uptake in economically relevant Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) places (target:700 additional places);
- 2 upskill the working age population by delivering over 200,000 qualifications;
- 3 develop and implement a Strategy to reduce economic activity through skills, training, incentives and job creation;
- 4 support people (with an emphasis on young people) in to employment by providing skills and training (target:114,000); and
- 5 ensure there are no increases in student fees beyond the rate of inflation for Northern Ireland students studying here.

The final commitment listed above, to ensure there are no increases in student fees beyond the rate of inflation for Northern Ireland students studying here, is a policy commitment whose delivery consists of maintaining the policy.

Of the other four commitments, three are on track (1, 2 and 4) and one is broadly on track (3) for achievement.

Further details on the progress of our PfG commitments can be found on the OFMDFM website at <http://www.northernireland.gov.uk/index/work-of-the-executive/pfg-budget-economic-strategy/pfg/strategic-online-report-2011-2015.htm>.

Students Studying in Scotland

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail any progress made with the Scottish Government regarding fees paid by local students studying in Scotland.
(AQW 25325/11-15)

Dr Farry: I can advise the member that for the incoming academic year 2013/14 the Scottish Government has changed its policy which exempted Northern Ireland domiciled students with Irish passports from paying tuition fees, if they enrolled in a Scottish higher education institution as an EU national. Under Scottish legislation Scottish domiciles do not pay tuition fees. EU legislation requires devolved administrations, within member states, to treat EU students as they treat their own domiciles when it comes to charging tuition fees.

Scottish Government has now added another criterion for Northern Ireland domiciles to support EU dual nationality applications. From academic year 2013/14 Northern Ireland domiciles with Irish passports applying as an EU student to a Scottish higher education institution will be obliged to demonstrate they have exercised their right of free movement within the EU and resided for at least three months in another EU member state. Scottish Government officials have advised the evidence Northern Ireland domiciles applying under dual nationality may provide to demonstrate residing in another member state could be bank statements, utility bills, confirmation from member state government officials. It is too early in the academic year to be able to report on how this policy change has affected Northern Ireland students applying to Scottish higher education institutions for 2013/14.

Poppies

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what legislation exists, or is planned, to protect employees who wish to wear poppies from being asked to remove them by their employer.
(AQW 25366/11-15)

Dr Farry: Legislation covering emblems and symbols does not fall within my Department's remit. However, the Equality Commission's position regarding the wearing of poppies is contained in the publication: Promoting a Good and Harmonious Working Environment, a guide for Employers and Employees which can be found at the following link:

In summary, the Equality Commission recognises the sensitivity surrounding the use of emblems and symbols in Northern Ireland, and offers guidance on these issues based on the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998, which is the responsibility of the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister.

It is a part of the Commission's remit to give advice and guidance on Fair Employment legislation, and it is for the Fair Employment Tribunal and the courts to interpret the law.

Sign Language Courses

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the assistance that is provided to parents of profoundly deaf children when undertaking courses in sign language.
(AQW 25401/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides a range of financial assistance to assist individuals to undertake accredited courses at further education colleges. This assistance is not, however, targeted directly at specific groups, such as parents or carers of children with disabilities. To ensure that funding is directed to those most in need of support, eligibility for assistance is restricted by a number of criteria, including means-testing based on household income. As a result, the amount of assistance provided is dependent on individual circumstances.

The two main sources of support are the Further Education (FE) Awards and Hardship Funds. FE Awards provide a maintenance grant for eligible students undertaking full-time or part-time courses. Individuals experiencing exceptional financial difficulty may also be eligible for help through college Hardship Funds. Students with dependent children may also be eligible to receive assistance with childcare costs which is in addition to the other available financial support.

Further details regarding financial assistance can be obtained from the Student Finance Team in any of the Northern Ireland further education colleges.

Sign Language Courses

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether parents of profoundly deaf children are given priority when enrolling on sign language courses.

(AQW 25402/11-15)

Dr Farry: Further education colleges are responsible for their own enrolment procedures; therefore, my Department has no role in this process.

Nevertheless, I have asked the Directors of each of the six colleges to respond to the Member, directly, on this matter.

Welding Courses: Mid Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail what training opportunities are available at Further Education Colleges in Mid Ulster for people wanting to obtain a qualification in welding.

(AQW 25460/11-15)

Dr Farry: I can confirm that further education colleges in the Mid Ulster area offer welding qualifications from level 1 through to level 3. This provision is available through further education courses, or through the Department's Training for Success and ApprenticeshipsNI programmes, and leads to qualifications that are on the Qualification Credit Framework which are, therefore, recognised nationally.

Enrolments in the Mid Ulster area in the 2011/12 academic year, the last year for which validated data is available, are outlined in the table below:

College name	Further Education Provision enrolments.	Training Provision enrolments.
Northern Regional College (NRC)	34	0
Southern Regional College (SRC)	12	79
South West College (SWC)	253	20
Total	299	99

In total, in 2011/12 including FE and Training, there were 398 enrolments in the Mid-Ulster area.

Finally, I can confirm that in the 2011/12 academic year there were 560 enrolments on 'welding' courses across the Northern Ireland FE Sector, including those outlined above in the Mid Ulster area.

Red Sky

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the total number of employees who made use of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (TUPE) Regulations after the dissolution of the Red Sky Group.

(AQW 25516/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold this information. The Department's role is to establish and maintain Northern Ireland's employment relations legislative framework, including the TUPE Regulations.

Compliance with the governing legislation is entirely a matter for individual employees, employers, and any administrators that are appointed. There is no duty to inform the Department of the details of any TUPE arrangement.

Further Education: Quality

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what quality control checks his Department routinely carries out on Regional Colleges.

(AQW 25517/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department has an oversight and scrutiny role on a number of key aspects of the quality of colleges' performance. For example, the Department monitors annually colleges' student enrolments, and their rates of student retention, achievement and success, and releases detailed annual statistical bulletins in these areas. Colleges produce annual college self assessments and quality improvement plans, and these are reviewed by the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI). The ETI also carries out a whole college inspection of each college every three years, and their reports are published. Where weaknesses are found by the ETI, colleges are obliged to produce improvement plans, and are subject to follow-up inspection.

More widely, the Department through its governance framework, routinely monitors colleges' financial and risk management processes and outcomes.

Finally, every year the Department holds two key meetings with the Chairs and Directors of each college. One of these is part of the College Development Planning process through which the Department monitors individual college's performance in the previous year and sets targets and budgets for the coming year. The second is an annual accountability review meeting with the Department's Permanent Secretary and senior staff with responsibility for further education.

Further Education: Equal Opportunities

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what checks his Department routinely carries out on Regional Colleges in relation to the provision of equal educational opportunities for young people.

(AQW 25520/11-15)

Dr Farry: All further education colleges in Northern Ireland are designated as public bodies. Under Schedule 9 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, they must submit an Equality Scheme to the Equality Commission stating how they promote equality of opportunity and good relations, between persons of different sexual orientation, religious belief, political opinion or racial group. My Department does not therefore carry out routine checks on this aspect of their duties.

Zero-hour Contracts

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the number of employees currently on zero hour contracts.

(AQO 4565/11-15)

Dr Farry: There is currently no definitive assessment of the number of workers on zero-hours contracts at a UK level. The Labour Force Survey estimates that there are around 250,000 workers on zero-hours contracts in the UK as a whole. The Chartered Institute for Personnel and Development provides separate analysis that the numbers could be up to one million.

The Northern Ireland sample of the UK Labour Force Survey is statistically too small to provide a reliable estimate of the numbers on zero-hours contracts here.

I have therefore asked my officials to urgently commission new research, to establish a more reliable estimate of the number of workers on zero-hours contracts here in Northern Ireland. The research will also seek to identify the merits and demerits of using these type of contracts. The purpose of the research is to provide the Department with a more informed understanding of whether there is a need to introduce protections for workers on zero-hours contracts. The Department will therefore welcome any evidence from stakeholders regarding the abuse of zero-hours contracts.

In the interim, I will continue to keep a close eye on the emerging position in Great Britain.

Unemployment

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline any proposed new initiatives to address ongoing long-term unemployment.

(AQO 4566/11-15)

Dr Farry: As Minister, I have introduced a comprehensive range of initiatives to address unemployment in Northern Ireland. In direct response to the economic downturn and as part of the Northern Ireland Executive's Economy and Jobs Initiative my Department's Steps to Work programme has introduced two additional employment strands, known as First Start and Step Ahead 50+. These initiatives are targeted at long term unemployed young people aged 18 -24 and those aged 50 and over respectively.

My Department also plans to introduce a new employment programme in June 2014. Steps 2 Success will replace and build on the success of the existing Steps to Work Programme. It is designed to give Providers the flexibility to offer provision to meet the needs of participants and work to ensure they do not move into longer term unemployment.

I have established a very successful Youth Employment Scheme providing help and support to young people aged between 18 and 24 years old who are currently unemployed and seeking permanent work. In addition DEL has developed and leads on the Executive's cross-departmental strategy 'Pathways to Success' for addressing the needs of young people who are not in employment, education and training (NEET).

As part of the Strategy, I introduced the Collaboration and Innovation Fund to help unemployed 16 – 24 year old young people who have a diverse range of employability needs. I have extended the Local Employment Intermediary Service to all areas of Northern Ireland to support young people that are in the NEET category and have also scaled up the Community Family Support Programme.

My Department, in partnership with the Department for Enterprise Trade and Investment and other relevant Executive Departments, is currently developing a new strategy to tackle economic inactivity and I hope to gain Executive approval for the draft strategy later this year.

Community Family Support Programme

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the roll-out of the Community Family Support Programme.

(AQO 4567/11-15)

Dr Farry: A pilot of the family support programme involving 44 families has recently been completed. This has confirmed the effectiveness of the initiative. Despite the small scale of the pilot there have been a number of very positive outcomes. Some parents have moved into employment, some young people have returned to school or entered training programmes and a number of mothers are volunteering in the community.

My Department is now poised to roll out the programme to at least 720 families across Northern Ireland. A tendering process has been conducted to identify the providers who will take the initiative forward and the successful organisations will be announced shortly.

My Department intends to have the programme operational by the first week in October 2013, enabling disadvantaged families from throughout Northern Ireland to avail of this service.

The programme will be delivered in five contract areas across Northern Ireland, based on the Health and Social Care Trust areas. The intervention will initially support 720 families from October 2013 to March 2015.

The initiative is designed to help families make life changing decisions to enhance their prospects and become full participants in society. The programme will also support families with a high level of need to develop their capacity to reach their full potential.

During the 26 week programme families will receive help to address the health, social, economic, educational, employment and training issues that impact on their daily lives.

Professional support workers will engage and consult with parents of children and young people to promote early intervention and high quality parenting, and to identify solutions to address their specific needs.

Issues such as education, essential skills, housing, money management, anger management, healthy living, childcare, alcohol and drugs misuse will be addressed by the initiative.

The CFSP will focus primarily on the needs of families with post primary school children to support parents with young people (16-24 years) not in education, employment or training (NEET) to re-engage with education, training or employment and help prevent younger family members falling into the NEET category.

The CFSP will also have a structured family learning component to enhance family life skills. This learning component will help address issues that families are faced with in their daily lives e.g. family values, changing behaviour, anger management, drug and alcohol misuse, speaking and listening etc.

CFSP providers will work in partnership with statutory agencies such as Health and Social Care Trusts and Youth Justice Agency to support families and deliver the programme.

Schools: Leaving Age

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the implications to his Department of the increase in education participation age in the rest of the UK from 16 to 17 years old and the plans to increase this again to 18 years old in 2015.

(AQO 4568/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold legislative responsibility for setting the minimum school leaving age. It is a matter for the Minister for Education and his department.

The changes referred to by the member relate to legislation applicable only to England where the new Compulsory School Leaving Act will raise the education leaving age to 17 in 2013 and to 18 from 2015.

That does not necessarily mean young people staying on at school, rather, it aims to raise the level of educational participation among young people aged 16 to 18 across a range of educational provisions including training and apprenticeships.

These proposals do not impact on Northern Ireland or on the work of my Department. Young people in Northern Ireland who have reached the minimum school leaving age and leave school have a range of options including access to a wide range of courses at further education colleges.

In addition, my Department offers a guaranteed training place to all school leavers aged 16 and 17 years of age through its Training for Success programme, as well as extended eligibility for those with a disability or from an in-care background. There are 2,160 young people on Training for Success; 4,739 on Programme Led Apprenticeships and 4,949 are employed as apprentices with training funded through the Department's ApprenticeshipsNI programme.

Participation in full-time education and training in Northern Ireland for 2010/11, the latest year for which figures are available, shows participation rates of 93.8% and 86.3% for 16 and 17 year olds respectively. Combined figures for both cohorts show a participation rate of 90.0%

In order to engage those not in education, employment or training my department developed and leads the cross-departmental strategy 'Pathways to Success' as the Executive's formal strategy for addressing the needs of these young people. To date 705 young people are accessing the Collaboration and Innovation Fund programme.

In addition: 272 young people are taking part in the Department's Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS); 2,298 NEET have been assisted through the NIESF Programme (an average of 400 per year).

Steps 2 Success

Mr Milne asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the mechanisms in place to ensure that the Steps to Success scheme does not become discredited.

(AQO 4569/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department intends to introduce the Steps 2 Success programme in June 2014 as the Department's main programme to assist unemployed people in receipt of benefits to find and sustain employment. Steps 2 Success will replace and build on the success of the Steps to Work programme. Stage 1 of the two stage procurement process is presently underway.

The Department has undertaken an extensive development and consultation process to ensure that the programme is designed to best meet the needs of participants and employers.

The following key elements have been put in place.

The Central Procurement Directorate of the Department of Finance and Personnel has been involved from the start of the development process to ensure that the design features of the programme meet best procurement practice.

The Departmental Solicitor's Office has been involved in assessing and assuring the procurement process and documentation to ensure that these meet all statutory requirements.

An extensive public consultation process has been undertaken which elicited over 80 written responses from a wide range of interested parties. Following analysis of responses the Department amended a number of the design features of the programme.

The Department has taken account of lessons learned from the introduction of the Work Programme in Great Britain and best practice elsewhere, to ensure Steps 2 Success is designed to best meet the needs of participants and employers throughout all parts of Northern Ireland.

The Department is introducing a Service Guarantee with the intention of using this to help define the level of service that all participants on the programme will receive from the provider.

It is my assessment that these measures will ensure that the new programme is 'fit for purpose', tailored to meet the needs of Northern Ireland, and will build upon on the very credible performance of Steps to Work.

University Fees

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the above-inflation increase in postgraduate-taught course fees at Queen's University, Belfast for the incoming year.

(AQO 4571/11-15)

Dr Farry: Whilst my Department determines the upper limit for undergraduate fees, Universities are responsible for determining the level of fees charged for postgraduate-taught courses.

Youth Employment Scheme: South Antrim

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the impact of the Youth Employment Scheme in South Antrim.

(AQO 4572/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Youth Employment Scheme was launched in July last year and since then within the South Antrim area 284 opportunities for young people have been offered by employers. As at 6 September 129 young people in this area have participated in the scheme by availing of these opportunities, with 30 having entered permanent subsidised employment. In addition, 87 young people have secured six months' temporary employment under the First Start initiative.

A Post Implementation Review of the Youth Employment Scheme has been carried out which recommended some revisions to the scheme that should help to increase uptake by both young people and employers. I intend to implement these revisions later this month which includes the payment of a Benefit Based Training Allowance to participants on work experience, modifications to the restrictions on the eligible job growth sectors and involving Steps to Work Lead Contractors to source and deliver training within Skills Development placements.

The Youth Employment Scheme is not the only provision available for young people in South Antrim. The Department's full range of support, both from Employment Service frontline services and contracted provision like the Steps to Work programme, are in place. In the period April to date, the Employment Service has helped 591 young unemployed people aged 18 to 24 find employment in the South Antrim area.

I appreciate the member's interest in the Youth Employment Scheme and would ask all members to encourage employers and young people in their constituencies to become involved.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Electricity Transmission System

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what input will she have on the branding review of the name System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI).

(AQW 25202/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I have no role or input into branding reviews undertaken by commercial companies.

Electricity Transmission System

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given that Condition 12 of the System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) Licence requires the licensee at all times to maintain "the full operational independence of the Transmission System Operator Business", why the Transmission System Operator Business is now fully under the control of the Eirgrid Executive Directors based in Dublin; and for her assessment of whether the Eirgrid Group Board has embarked on a strategy of full integration with the goal of a seamless all-Ireland Transmission System Operator Business.

(AQW 25208/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am not party to internal discussions conducted by the EirGrid board.

SONI licence conditions, including Condition 12, are monitored by the Utility Regulator. SONI is required to provide an annual Compliance Plan which is reviewed by the Regulator, demonstrating how it ensures operational independence in line with its licence conditions. Moreover, any proposals to amend the SONI licence are subject to scrutiny by the Regulator and public consultation.

Certain provisions were also put in place as a condition of the arrangements for acquisition of SONI by EirGrid. These included the undertaking that two independent members of Northern Ireland background and appropriate standing be appointed to the EirGrid board. EirGrid's Memorandum and Articles of Association were also widened to provide an additional level of protection and to ensure ongoing financial security of SONI.

The requirement for SONI to have full managerial and operational independence of the Transmission System Operator Business applies in respect of any managerial and operational independence from any business/company that itself undertakes generation or supply activities. This reflects, and is in compliance with the requirements of applicable EU law.

Electricity Transmission System

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the how the Regulator is monitoring whether Northern Ireland Electricity and the System Operator for Northern Ireland are complying with their licences, and in particular, how each have remained fully independent of ESB and Eirgrid by providing the premises, systems, equipment, facilities, property, personnel, data and management resources that are necessary for their efficient and effective managerial and operational independence as per Condition 12 of each licence.

(AQW 25209/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Regulator acts independently of and is not accountable to my Department. It is responsible for keeping under review the activities undertaken by NIE and SONI and their compliance with their respective licence obligations. With regard to Condition 12 in particular, each licensee has a Compliance Plan (outlining the steps being taken or to be taken by the respective licensee to meet the requirements of that condition) and appoints a Compliance Officer to monitor and report (to the Utility Regulator) on compliance and any particular issues arising from or in respect of the obligations of that condition.

I am informed that in addition to its general monitoring and updates from the Compliance Officer, where it considers it appropriate and/or necessary to do so (including for example in response to consumer complaints and/or information from third parties) the Utility Regulator carries out more detailed investigations.

Electricity Transmission System

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many meetings her Department has had with (i) ESB; (ii) Eirgrid; and (iii) the Utility Regulator to discuss the importance of securing existing jobs and maintaining the identity of the electricity network business in Northern Ireland following the sale of both Northern Ireland Electricity and System Operator for Northern Ireland to ESB and Eirgrid.

(AQW 25210/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I meet regularly with the Utility Regulator and companies in the energy sector to discuss a range of issues. On the specific issue of the sale of NIE to ESB, I met with senior representatives from NIE and ESB and with the Irish Energy Minister Eamon Ryan prior to the sale and obtained assurances on NIE jobs and maintenance of the identity of NIE. As a condition of acquisition of SONI by EirGrid, the Irish Energy Minister also put in place legislative amendments to expand the membership of the EirGrid board to allow appointment of independent members of Northern Ireland background and appropriate standing.

Electricity Transmission System

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, as Northern Ireland Electricity (NIE) and System Operator Northern Ireland are now owned by state owned companies in the Republic of Ireland, what measures are in place to ensure that NIE employees and consumers are not disadvantaged by investment decisions to the benefit of customers in the Republic of Ireland and the Irish Government, as the sole shareholder and monopolised controller of the electricity industry on the island of Ireland.

(AQW 25211/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The NIE Transmission and Distribution licences and the SONI Transmission System Operator licence contain specific conditions relating to provision of undertakings by the ultimate owners to ensure the independence of decision making and availability of resource to conduct their business. Monitoring of compliance with the licence conditions is a matter for the Utility Regulator.

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) her Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.

(AQW 25258/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the progress made on each of her Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25290/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Progress on the delivery of DETI Programme for Government commitments is closely monitored in accordance with the programme arrangements and delivery framework published by OFMDFM.

The latest available information on progress against Programme for Government Commitments can be accessed at: <http://www.northernireland.gov.uk/index/work-of-the-executive/pfg-budget-economic-strategy/pfg/strategic-online-report-2011-2015.htm>

Rock Shopfitting International

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she will take to safeguard the 100 jobs currently under threat following Tesco's decision to cancel their contract with Rock Shopfitting International Ltd.

(AQW 25490/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Mr McCafferty contacted me in July 2011 and, at his request, I personally intervened with Tesco senior management regarding an ongoing issue between the companies. At the same time Mr McCafferty met with the staff from Invest NI's North West regional team. I've now instructed Invest NI to contact Mr McCafferty to discuss his company's current situation.

Department of the Environment

Southern Area Planning Office: Case Number R/2008/0164/CA

Mr Wells asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 22334/11-15, whether aerial photographs confirmed the presence of a structure on the site.

(AQW 25152/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): I can confirm that as part of the enforcement investigation, the Department obtained aerial photographs which confirmed the presence of a structure on the site.

Compliance, Improvement and Review Team

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment when an answer will be provided to AQW 22040/11-15, given that it was due for answer on 19 April 2013.

(AQW 25243/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Following consideration of the issues associated with AQW 22040/11-15 regarding the ongoing audit of minerals planning application files I intend to issue a response within the coming days.

Moy Park

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department is taking regarding the planning process of the proposed extension plans by Moy Park.

(AQW 25252/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has been in active pre application discussion with Moy Park and other key consultees in relation to the proposed expansion plans. In order to ensure the applications are processed as efficiently as possible the Department has created a dedicated project team based at the South Antrim Area Planning Office in Ballymena. This team will deal strategically with all Moy Park planning applications for poultry units across Northern Ireland.

The importance of this strategic project has been emphasised to staff, key consultees and all Councils likely to be affected by the applications have been advised to highlight the importance of this forthcoming project within their Districts.

I consider the agri-food sector to be a key economic driver and that is why I have ensured that my officials have taken proactive measures to ensure the planning process responds appropriately to the demands of the industry. Overall I see this as a core project for my Department where timely and robust planning decisions can be made that will assist economic recovery here in the North.

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) his Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.

(AQW 25257/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has two arms-length bodies – Northern Ireland Local Government Officers' Superannuation Committee (NILGOSC) and Local Government Staff Commission (LGSC).

The number of people (headcount) employed by recruitment agencies in the Department and its arms-length bodies (NILGOSC & LGSC) is shown in the following table.

Date	Number of Agency Workers (headcount)
	DOE	NILGOSC	LGSC	Total
1 April 2011	86	2	0	88
30 March 2012*	144	3	0	147
26 April 2013*	165	1	0	166

* Closest figures available to 1 April.

Statutory Transition Committees

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment what legal standing the guidance issued by his Department has in relation to the nomination process with regard to the Statutory Transition Committees.

(AQW 25326/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The current guidance has a legal position in relation to the functions of a statutory transition committee but has no basis in law in relation to the nomination process. The guidance was intended to help Councils make fair and balanced decisions, as expected by the electorate, when nominating members to the statutory transition committees.

In order to allow Councils maximum flexibility, no particular method of democratic selection was prescribed within the statutory transition committee regulations. However, my predecessor did recommend in the guidance that Councils use a recognised method of proportional representation namely d'Hondt, Sainte Lague and Single Transferable Vote. He advocated a light touch approach, believing that Councils should be trusted to demonstrate political maturity and make equitable decisions for the benefit of all citizens and rate payers. With some exceptions, most Councils have complied with the guidance.

I have written to those Councils who have still to comply asking them to re-run their nominations process. I am hopeful they will act accordingly. In the event of a failure to do so I intend to intervene to ensure local government reform proceeds for the benefit of citizens, ratepayers and local business.

Cycling: Road Safety

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what actions or initiatives are in place to reduce the number of road deaths and serious injuries amongst cyclists.

(AQW 25331/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety and, within the context of the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy, does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, including road safety public information campaigns and education programmes.

I believe that reducing further all deaths and serious injuries on our roads, with the ultimate ambition of 'Vision Zero', where any death is unacceptable, is an important and achievable objective.

Between 2008 and 2012, six cyclists died on our roads. So far this year three cyclists have died. In 2012, 55 cyclists were seriously injured, an increase from 36 in 2003. The rate of Pedal Cyclist deaths and serious injuries per 100 million kilometers cycled in 2011, the latest figures available, was 77, an increase of 28% on the 2004-2008 baseline of 60.

Drivers are responsible for the majority of collisions, with the main causes being speeding, drink driving and inattention on our roads. Changing the attitudes and behaviours of drivers is therefore the most effective way of protecting all road users and our campaigns concentrate on changing such behaviours. The Road Safety Strategy recognises cyclists as a vulnerable road user group and includes a range of actions that relate to cyclists' safety that are summarised below.

In October 2011, the Department launched the 'Be Cycle Aware' campaign to remind drivers and cyclists to pay attention when sharing the road. This campaign consists of two radio messages and bus back posters.

In May 2012, a campaign was launched to encourage road users to 'respect everyone's journey'. The important safety messages to drivers will benefit all vulnerable road user groups, including cyclists.

In September 2012, a campaign was launched, focusing on wider road user responsibility, urging all road users to take responsibility for their actions on the road. The television, press and online campaign includes an injured cyclist saying "I was cycling in the bike lane. The driver said the sun was in his eyes."

A further campaign, launched on 24 April 2013, invites everyone to 'Share the Road to Zero'. This is aimed at all road user groups – cyclists, pedestrians, motorcyclists, drivers and passengers and, indeed, focuses heavily on cyclists in the opening scenes. The aim is to get every road user to take personal responsibility for helping to prevent deaths on Northern Ireland's roads. The social media aspect of this campaign provides appropriately targeted road safety messages to subscribers. This can be found at www.sharetheroadtozero.com

Rules 204 to 218 in the Highway Code provide advice on how drivers should treat vulnerable road users, including cyclists, with extra care and attention. Advice specifically for cyclists can be found in Rules 59-82. A 'Cycling Skills & Cycling Safety' guide, developed jointly by DOE and DRD, is available in hard copy and online and provides information on the benefits of cycling, on basic safety requirements and on the rules of the road.

The Cycling Proficiency Scheme is offered by the DOE Road Safety Education Officer Service to every primary school in Northern Ireland. Over 530 Primary Schools participate in the scheme each year, with approximately 8,365 children benefiting from the scheme annually.

Given a rise in cyclist casualties, the Department is currently analysing available data and has commissioned qualitative research to help inform consideration of potential new educational activity around cyclist safety.

I recognise the continuing challenges of reducing casualties on our roads, and will take forward further actions as appropriate from this analysis and research.

Illegal Dumping Sites

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the twenty five illegal dumping sites that his Department are reviewing.
(AQW 25338/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Unfortunately I cannot provide you with the details of the individuals, businesses or locations that the Northern Ireland Environment Agency's Environmental Crime Unit is currently investigating in relation to alleged unauthorised dumping. Releasing the identities of those suspected of being involved in criminality would have the potential to damage ongoing investigations. I can however assure you that information will be released on the progress of investigations at an appropriate time.

NIEA is using intelligence coupled with all the legal powers contained in environmental law to identify and act against those believed to be committing criminal offences within the waste management sector – I will not allow authorisations to manage waste that are issued by my Department to be abused to the detriment of the environment, public health and the economy.

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the progress made on each of his Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25352/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department of the Environment has 6 Programme for Government commitments. An update of progress on each commitment is outlined below.

Commitment number 8 – to ensure 90% of large scale investment planning decisions are made within 6 months and applications with job creation potential are given additional weight.

This commitment relates to all major applications designated under Article 31 of the Planning (NI) Order 1991 and other significant development proposals identified by Area Planning Managers. It is being phased in over three years – 2012/13 60%, 2013/14 75% and 2014/15 90%. Large scale investment decisions are monitored on a regular basis and the finalised figures for 2012/13 show 72% were processed within the 6 month target. The Department continues to focus its efforts and resources to ensure this business target of 75% large scale investment decisions are processed within 6 months. Applications will be prioritised and carefully managed throughout the business year.

Commitment number 49 - Implement a levy on single use carrier bags by 2013 and extend this to reusable bags from April 1st 2014.

The 5 pence levy on single use carrier bags launched on 8 April 2013 and has been broadly welcomed by the public and retailers alike.

Provisional returns for the first quarter suggest a substantial reduction in the number of single use bags dispensed by retailers. The Department will publish validated statistics for 2013/14 next year.

The Carrier Bags Bill is currently at Committee Stage in the Assembly. The Bill provides the Department with the powers to extend charging beyond single use bags. Assuming the Bill is passed, the Department plans to use these powers to make Regulations applying the levy to all new carrier bags costing less than 20p.

Commitment number 50 - Continue to work towards a reduction in greenhouse gas emissions by at least 35% on 1990 levels by 2025.

The latest greenhouse gas emission figures for Northern Ireland, 1990-2011 were published on 7 June 2013. Northern Ireland's 2011 emissions are estimated at 19,827 kilotonnes of carbon dioxide equivalent. This represents a decrease of over 5% compared to 2010. This is mainly due to a large reduction in the burning of oil in the residential and business sectors after the exceptionally cold weather in 2010, and a reduction in emissions from coal consumption at power stations. The 2011 emission levels also show a longer term decrease of over 17% since the base year, 1990. This new figure for emissions up to 2011 will now be used (with other information) to provide a fresh estimate of the likely greenhouse gas emissions for 2025. The new projection will be available in the autumn. The previous projection based on 2010 data was for a 28.7% reduction by 2025.

Commitment number 51 - Work towards halting the loss of biodiversity by 2020.

Progress to date includes:

- The launch of an Invasive Species Strategy.
- Consolidation of Conservation Regulations is progressing.
- Development of a revised Biodiversity Strategy is on-going and informal discussions with departments on objectives and actions currently taking place. It is intended that formal consultation will be in late autumn.
- The Marine Division has completed the Rathlin Island European Marine Site Management Scheme after consultation with statutory authorities, non-governmental organisations and private individuals. The Management Scheme was launched by the Minister on 1 June 2013. It aims to secure compliance with the objectives of the European Habitats and Birds Directives.

Commitment number 52 - Achieve a household waste recycling or composting rate of 45% by end of March 2015.

Provisional results for 2012/13 show a household recycling and composting rate of 40%. The inclement weather in the January-March 2013 quarter did have a negative effect on the recycling rate, resulting in the annual increase being suppressed. Although increasing the recycling rates has been challenging, waste arisings continue to fall demonstrating that the actions in the delivery plan are producing positive results for resource efficiency within Northern Ireland.

Commitment number 75 – Establish the new 11 Council model for Local Government by 2015.

The Local Government Bill has been agreed by the Executive and will be introduced into the Assembly in late September 2013. The Local Government (Statutory Transition Committee) Regulations (NI) 2013 were approved by the Assembly on 1 July 2013 and became operational on 2 July 2013. This provided for the establishment of new statutory transition committees to drive the convergence process at local level. Regulations to provide for severance arrangements for councillors were made in July 2013 and the scheme became operational in August 2013.

Pollution: River Faughan

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 24955/11-15, to detail the specifics of the pollution that was detected in the tributary to the River Faughan; and what measures have been taken to prevent this pollution reaching and damaging the River Faughan.

(AQW 25387/11-15)

Mr Durkan: NIEA has collected a number of water and effluent samples from both the site and surrounding waterways, as part of the ongoing investigation and to establish impacts. As the results of these samples form a key part of the evidence in this pending prosecution the information is sub judice, and releasing or publicly commenting on them prior to any court hearing could endanger the case. However, I can confirm that the River Faughan does not appear to have been impacted and that sufficient monitoring is in place to detect any problems at an early stage.

Working with NIEA, NIW has facilitated the disposal of the waste effluent captured in a lagoon at the former waste management site at Culmore Waste Water Treatment Works. This waste effluent will be treated at Culmore WWTW over a number of weeks. The removal of this polluting liquid from the Mobuoy Road will further reduce the risk of it entering the watercourses in the area and causing pollution.

I can assure you that NIEA has in place a detailed, ongoing sampling and monitoring programme in the River Faughan and on this site, to ensure that both the river and the public are protected.

Pollution: River Faughan

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 24955/11-15, (i) what enforcement action has been taken; (ii) on what date this action was taken; (iii) what future enforcement action will be taken; and (iv) when this action will be taken. (AQW 25388/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As you will appreciate, this is a wide ranging and complex investigation. The Northern Ireland Environment Agency has carried out an extensive range of enforcement action to date. A number of days have been spent conducting intrusive inspections of the area gathering evidence of the criminality involved and the polluting potential of the waste being kept. The intrusive surveys took place between August 2012 and July 2013. In addition, a number of private and business premises have been searched under warrant between November 2012 and July 2013.

Two individuals were arrested in November 2012 and have been questioned on a number of occasions. Further individuals have been questioned.

The waste management licence for the waste treatment facility at Mobuoy Road was revoked in June 2013 and a number of statutory notices were issued to landowners under both the Waste and Contaminated Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 and the Environmental Liability (Prevention and Remediation) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2009.

The investigation continues and further action is planned. It is not possible to disclose details of planned actions as this might assist those who are subject of the investigation.

Mineral Extraction at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 24485/11-15, how enforcement action by Strategic Planning Division could have prejudiced any Northern Ireland Environmental Agency criminal investigation into unauthorised mineral extraction at Mobouy Road. (AQW 25389/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In addition to the ongoing investigations by DoE Planning and Local Government Group – Strategic Planning Division, there is a criminal investigation being pursued by NIEA Environmental Crime Unit in relation to alleged illegal landfill at this location.

I therefore cannot elaborate on the details of these investigations as it may result in criminal proceedings and I must ensure that there is no prejudice to this process.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether the removal of illegal waste at Mobouy Road requires an Environmental Impact Assessment prior to work starting; (ii) how his Department is paying for the removal of this waste; and (iii) whether it will recuperate any of the costs prior to the work starting. (AQW 25391/11-15)

Mr Durkan: At this point in time it is premature to speculate on the manner in which the illegal waste is to be dealt with.

Clearly if the waste was to be removed a great deal of work would be required to develop a method of carrying out the works in order not to cause environmental or health risks as a result. At present the NIEA is using some funding obtained during this financial year to remove waste that was left within the premises of the previously licensed waste management facility and remove leachate from a lagoon within the premises.

In spite of being served with statutory notices, the site was left in a state that was causing a risk of fire and was giving rise to a problem with flies in the area.

It would be the intention of the Department to pursue those suspected of the illegal activities in Operation Sycamore using the full force of the law to recover costs and criminal benefit. As the investigation is still ongoing it would not be appropriate for me to comment in any detail about those matters at this stage.

Mineral Extraction at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 24485/11-15, why no enforcement action was taken over the unauthorised mineral extraction at Mobouy Road between 2000 and 2012.

(AQW 25393/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There have been a number of enforcement cases opened for investigation in relation to unauthorised mineral extraction at Mobouy Road and several remain open at this time. The Department has also served an Enforcement Notice. The Department has also a number of retrospective planning applications in relation to the unauthorised mineral extraction.

There is also an ongoing NIEA criminal investigation into alleged illegal landfill at this location. It would be inappropriate at this time to provide further comment or detail as it may prejudice that investigation and any subsequent prosecution should this take place.

Planning Application: Kilkeel

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of the Environment when he will reply to my correspondence on a planning application for an Activity Centre, Fair Road, Greencastle, Kilkeel, Co.Down.

(AQW 25398/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Your letter of 5 July 2013 was addressed to the then DOE Minister Alex Attwood. Minister Attwood had expressed a wish to visit the site and to review the planning application.

I considered it appropriate to follow through with that commitment. I recently carried out the site visit with planning officials. I will now review the case and respond to your correspondence in the near future.

Local Government: Co-option

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has had any discussions with the Northern Ireland Office in relation to the bar on co-options to the existing 26 local councils in 2014; and what was the outcome of these discussions.

(AQW 25399/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 22 July, the Secretary of State wrote to me confirming that she is content to make an amendment to the Electoral Law Act (Northern Ireland) 1962 to clarify the co-option provisions in respect of a vacancy which occurs in one of the existing 26 councils from 1 January 2014.

I understand that an Order in Council including provision to extend the period for co-option until 1 January 2015 will be laid at Westminster in the near future.

Statutory Transition Committees

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will ensure that the principle of proportionality, whether through the D'hondt allocation process or otherwise, is administered in an equitable way to the transition committees on local councils.

(AQW 25406/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I fully support the principle of proportionality and that is demonstrated by the fact that I have written to a number of councils that have not complied with the spirit and intent of the regulations and associated guidance. I have requested that these councils rerun their nomination process using the democratic method of proportional representation outlined in departmental guidance to ensure that the appointees to statutory transition committees are nominated in a fair and equitable manner.

I also believe there is a need for collective responsibility across all political parties represented in councils, which is the reason why I wrote to all party leaders recently asking them to engage with their local councillors about political maturity and impartial decisions that benefit all citizens.

Dog Fouling

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment (i) how many Fixed Penalty Notices have been issued for dog fouling in each council, in each of the last two years; (ii) how much these accrued in fines; (iii) how many fines were unpaid; and (iv) how many required court action.

(AQW 25431/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department obtains statistical information on fixed penalty notices on an annual basis and this relates to financial years rather than calendar years. The Table attached reflects the information provided by all 26 Councils for the 2011/12 and 2012/13 financial years.

The figures for some councils show a smaller number of fines paid compared with fines issued. Apart from straightforward cases where the fine has simply not been paid there may be other factors which explain the difference between some of the figures. In an ideal world every fine would be paid. However, in reality, this will not be the case. On occasion, there will be reasons where to pursue payment would not be in the public interest, for example, where further information about the circumstances of an alleged offender comes to light or where someone that had been issued with a fine had moved and a forwarding address cannot reasonably be obtained.

Quarries

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 25055/11-15, what plans he has to ease the bureaucratic burden on landowners who voluntarily undertake to drain or infill quarries.
(AQW 25455/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have no immediate plans to make changes to the current regulatory regime at present. I have asked District Councils to undertake a risk assessment on all disused quarries and this is expected to be completed in the autumn. I will carefully consider the outcome of this risk assessment and seek to identify whether there are any appropriate opportunities to work with landowners to help prevent further tragedy.

Wind Farms: Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment whether there are any restrictions on developing windfarms in Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty.
(AQW 25461/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While my Department's policy for assessing windfarm proposals does not distinguish between Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty and other undesignated landscapes, it is a policy presumption that development will not be allowed where this will result in an unacceptable adverse impact on visual amenity or landscape character of that area.

Wind Farms

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment whether there is any zoning of areas for the development of windfarms.
(AQW 25462/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are no zones designated for the development of wind farms in Northern Ireland. The location of proposed developments will be assessed on a case by case basis in line with Planning Policy Statement 18 and associated documents, which aim to facilitate the siting of renewable energy generating facilities in appropriate locations within the built and natural environment, and other regional policy.

Wind Farms

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment whether there are any locational guidelines for planners on the development of windfarms.
(AQW 25463/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning Policy Statement 18 Renewable Energy (PPS 18) sets out the planning policy for development that generates energy from renewable resources, including wind energy. The application of PPS 18 is one of the material considerations that the Department shall have regard to in the determination of planning applications for wind turbines and wind farms.

The policy is accompanied by a 'Best Practice Guidance to Planning Policy Statement 18' document, which provides technical information and guidance on a range of renewable energy technologies.

It is also accompanied by a Supplementary Planning Guidance document entitled 'Wind Energy Development in Northern Ireland's Landscapes'. This document, published by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, provides broad and strategic guidance in relation to the visual and landscape impacts of wind energy development.

The supplementary planning guidance document 'Wind Energy Development in Northern Ireland's Landscapes' identifies 130 Landscape Character Areas (LCA) and provides an assessment of the characteristics and values associated with each one. It provides guidance on a number of issues including the broad locations that would be the most suitable for wind energy development, in landscape and visual terms, for each LCA.

When assessing planning applications for wind farms, consideration will therefore be given to PPS18, Best Practice guidance, supplementary planning guidance and also to all other material factors. Although the guidance referred to does not provide site specific locational guidelines it is important to note that a detailed consideration of the particular landscape, visual impacts and locational matters associated with each wind farm planning application will take place on a case by case basis.

Mineral Extraction: Renewal of Permission

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of times that reviews of old mineral permissions have been carried out since 2000; and the number of times since 2000 when an assessment of current minerals permissions have been carried out on special areas of conservation.
(AQW 25467/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While the review of old minerals permissions has not yet commenced, I am exploring options and timelines for introducing this review which will enable my Department to apply up-to-date conditions of operation.

Single-use Plastic Bag Levy

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) how much his Department now forecasts the single-use plastic bag levy will raise in each year until 2015; (ii) what environmental projects were allocated the £4m originally forecasted from the single-use plastic bag levy; and (iii) whether £4m will continue to be allocated to these projects.

(AQW 25468/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The carrier bag levy is an environmental measure intended to substantially reduce the number of carrier bags issued in Northern Ireland and to encourage the reuse of all types of bags. The evidence from the first quarter of charging shows that the Department, working in conjunction with retailers and consumers, has delivered a step change in bag use.

Retailers provided their returns to the Department of the Environment for the first quarter (8 April to 30 June inclusive) in July 2013. The total amount of revenue collected for this period was £885,000. While a number of factors such as seasonal variation are likely to impact revenue in the remaining quarters of the financial year 2013/14, based on the first quarter returns, the Department anticipates that the single use bag levy will generate in the region of £3m this year (net of operational costs).

The amount of revenue generated by the levy is expected to increase in subsequent years, when the levy will be extended to new carrier bags costing less than 20 pence (both single use and low cost reusable bags). Since retailers do not currently report the number of reusable bags issued here, it is not possible to accurately forecast the amount of additional revenue this is likely to generate. However the general quantum of additional revenue, over and above the £3m from single use bags, is expected to be in the hundreds of thousands of pounds. This reflects the fact that the number of reusable bags issued by retailers is much lower than the number of single use bags.

When shoppers still choose to purchase a new carrier bag, the environmental impact will be offset by investing the levy proceeds in community based projects that deliver environmental improvement. None of the revenue generated from the carrier bag levy has been allocated to projects yet. I intend to make an announcement on this subject in the near future.

Planning Service: Economists

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 18791/11-15, to detail the number of times planning service requested the services of departmental economists in 2012.

(AQW 25503/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In 2012 DOE planning requested the services of departmental economists on 5 occasions in relation to assessing planning applications and on 3 occasions in relation to appeal hearings following the Department's decision on a planning application.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to Paragraph 1 of the Planning Agreement 2008 between his Department and the George Best Belfast City Airport, to detail the flights that have taken off from, or arrived at, the airport outside of the agreed extended hours due to reasons other than exceptional circumstances; and what action was taken as a result.

(AQW 25526/11-15)

Mr Durkan: George Best Belfast City Airport provides the Department with Seats for Sale and Extensions (late flights after 9.30pm) Log Information on a bi-monthly basis. This information includes explanations for delayed flights which invoke a range of issues typical to a regional airport. The level of extensions at the airport has remained at approximately 1% of the total air traffic movements for the last few years.

I am satisfied that the explanations for late flights which have been provided to date are compliant with the Planning Agreement and that there have been no flights that have taken off from, or arrived at, the airport outside the agreed extended hours due to reasons other than exceptional circumstances.

Wind Farms: Planning Applications

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of the Environment how many current planning applications for wind farms in each constituency are awaiting a determination.

(AQW 25580/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are currently 44 wind farm applications awaiting determination. The following table details these by constituency:

The number of Wind farm applications that were pending, as at 31st July 2013

Wind Farms: Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of the Environment how many wind farms, that received approval from the Planning Service in the last five years, had an Environmental Impact Assessment carried out prior to approval being granted.

(AQW 25581/11-15)

Mr Durkan: All planning applications for wind farms approved by the Department in the last five years have had an Environmental Impact Assessment carried out prior to approval.

Wind Farms: Planning Applications

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of the Environment how many wind farms have received planning permission in each of the last five years, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 25584/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The following table details windfarm approvals by constituency:

The number of Wind farm applications that were approved, between April 2008 and July 2013, by parliamentary constituency

Compliance, Improvement and Review Team

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 22037/11-15, on what legal basis he is withholding the reference numbers; and to detail the planning applications.

(AQW 25615/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In response to AQW 22037/11-15 my predecessor (Minister Alex Attwood) indicated that there was an ongoing audit of minerals planning application files which had not yet been completed. The reference numbers, locations and descriptions of minerals applications forms part of this audit work which is still in the course of completion.

The Environmental Information Regulations 2004, Part 3, Regulation 12(4)(d) outlines the exception to the duty to disclose environmental information in this instance.

Cycling: Road Safety

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what action he is taking to prevent cyclists being killed or seriously injured on roads.

(AQW 25631/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety and, within the context of the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy, does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, including road safety public information campaigns and education programmes.

I believe that reducing further all deaths and serious injuries on our roads, with the ultimate ambition of 'Vision Zero', where any death is unacceptable, is an important and achievable objective.

Between 2008 and 2012, six cyclists died on our roads. So far this year three cyclists have died. In 2012, 55 cyclists were seriously injured, an increase from 36 in 2003. The rate of Pedal Cyclist deaths and serious injuries per 100 million kilometers cycled in 2011, the latest figures available, was 77, an increase of 28% on the 2004-2008 baseline of 60.

Drivers are responsible for the majority of collisions, with the main causes being speeding, drink driving and inattention on our roads. Changing the attitudes and behaviours of drivers is therefore the most effective way of protecting all road users and our campaigns concentrate on changing such behaviours. The Road Safety Strategy recognises cyclists as a vulnerable road user group and includes a range of actions that relate to cyclists' safety.

In October 2011, the Department launched the 'Be Cycle Aware' campaign to remind drivers and cyclists to pay attention when sharing the road. This campaign consists of two radio messages and bus back posters.

In May 2012, a campaign was launched to encourage road users to 'respect everyone's journey'. The important safety messages to drivers will benefit all vulnerable road user groups, including cyclists.

In September 2012, a campaign was launched, focusing on wider road user responsibility, urging all road users to take responsibility for their actions on the road. The television, press and online campaign includes an injured cyclist saying "I was cycling in the bike lane. The driver said the sun was in his eyes."

A further campaign, launched on 24 April 2013, invites everyone to 'Share the Road to Zero'. This is aimed at all road user groups – cyclists, pedestrians, motorcyclists, drivers and passengers and, indeed, focuses heavily on cyclists in the opening scenes. The aim is to get every road user to take personal responsibility for helping to prevent deaths on Northern Ireland's roads. The social media aspect of this campaign provides appropriately targeted road safety messages to subscribers. This can be found at www.sharetheroadtozero.com

A 'Cycling Skills & Cycling Safety' guide, developed jointly by DOE and DRD, is available in hard copy and online and provides information on the benefits of cycling, on basic safety requirements and on the rules of the road.

The Cycling Proficiency Scheme is offered by the DOE Road Safety Education Officer Service to every primary school in Northern Ireland. Over 530 Primary Schools participate in the scheme each year, with approximately 8,365 children benefiting from the scheme annually.

Rules 204 to 218 in the Highway Code provide advice on how drivers should treat vulnerable road users, including cyclists, with extra care and attention. Advice specifically for cyclists can be found in Rules 59-82.

Given a rise in cyclist casualties, the Department is currently analysing available data and has commissioned qualitative research to help inform consideration of potential new educational activity around cyclist safety.

I recognise the continuing challenges of reducing casualties on our roads, and will take forward further actions as appropriate from this analysis and research.

Cycling: Road Safety

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what proposals he has to make roads safer for cyclists.

(AQW 25637/11-15)

Department of Finance and Personnel

Suicide

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of (i) deaths by suicide; (ii) deaths from complications following a suicide attempt; and (iii) suspected deaths by suicide in cases where there has not been an inquest or coroner verdict, in each of the last five years, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 25307/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The table overleaf details the number of deaths registered as a suicide<sup>1</sup> in Northern Ireland, for 2008 to 2012, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust Area.

Cause of death is based on a medical or coroner's certificate. The certifying doctor or coroner states the direct cause of death (e.g. 'Suicide') on the certificate. It would thus be very unusual for "Complications following a suicide attempt" to be written on a death certificate.

There is a duty placed on all medical practitioners (and others for example the Registrar of Deaths or Funeral Directors) and the Police Service for Northern Ireland (PSNI) in the 1959 Coroners Act (Northern Ireland) to report all deaths from unnatural causes to the coroner for investigation. This would include all cases of known or suspected suicide. The PSNI Investigating Officer must then collate an inquest file on behalf of the coroner to investigate the full circumstances surrounding the death. Once the file is complete the coroner will decide if an inquest is necessary. This is dependent on the circumstances of the death and the final report of the post mortem examination.

The purpose of the coroner's investigation, with or without inquest is to find out who the person was and, how, when and where they died and to establish the details the Registrar of Deaths needs to register the death. There should therefore be no instances in Northern Ireland of any suspected suicide being registered which has not been the subject of a coroner's investigation.

1 In considering suicide events it is conventional to include cases where the cause of death is classified as either 'Suicide and self-inflicted injury' or 'Undetermined injury'. Since 2001, the ICD10 codes used for 'Suicide and self-inflicted injury' are X60-X84 and Y87.0 and the ICD10 codes used for 'Undetermined injury' are Y10-Y34 and Y87.

Table 1: Number of Deaths Registered as Suicide<sup>1</sup> in Northern Ireland by Health and Social Care Trust Area, 2008-2012

P Data for 2012 remains provisional until the publication of the Annual Report of the Registrar General in late 2013.

Rate Relief Scheme

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of households in receipt of Rates Relief at the end of the financial year 2012-13.

(AQW 25492/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Only one person in a household can obtain Rate Relief. As at 31st March 2013 there were a total of 17,563 live Rate Relief awards.

The figure provided relates to claims for Rate Relief administered by Land & Property Services.

Rate Relief Scheme

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail how many people on the Rates Relief Scheme were in employment during the financial year 2012-13.

(AQW 25493/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information on the employment status of rate relief recipients is not available. Of the 17,563 live awards of Rate Relief at 31st March 2013, a total of 5,824 households had reported some earned income.

The figures provided relate to claims for Rate Relief administered by Land & Property Services.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if he has approved the process for the development and construction contract of the new Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25534/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Having completed their internal processes and endorsed the business case for the Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat, the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) formally submitted a joint business case to my Department (DFP). Following consideration this case received DFP approval in September 2011.

Following this DOJ invited tenders for the project. It was soon clear that the tender responses were in excess of costs in the approved business case. To address this, a bill of reductions exercise was necessary and an Addendum to the business case required to ensure value for money and that the ethos and functionality of the college is maintained. The Addendum will require DFP approval, but as yet it has not been received.

DOJ and DHSSPS appointed Health Estates as their Centre of Procurement Excellence (CoPE), whose role was to take forward the procurement process for the Northern Ireland Community Safety. The process for the development and construction contract itself therefore is not an issue for my Department but the appointed Centre of Procurement Excellence.

Farm Maps

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 22464/11-15 to detail the (i) sub-contractors; and (ii) value of the contracts.

(AQW 25603/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The positional improvement part of the Land Parcel Identification System (LPIS) Improvement Project was carried out by two Land & Property Services sub-contractors DSM Geodata Ltd and BLOM Aerofilms Ltd.

The total monies spent on the contracts, now completed, totalled £2.43 million. The DSM contract accounted for £1.14 million and the BLOM contract accounted for £1.29 million

Northern Ireland Civil Service Pensions

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration he has given to ensuring that correspondence sent to members of the public regarding Northern Ireland Civil Service pensions can be understood by the recipient, who is unlikely to have in-depth actuarial knowledge.

(AQW 25665/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Civil Service Pensions has a dedicated Communications Section responsible for maintaining the website, booklets, leaflets and standard letters which are issued to scheme members. In all their literature and correspondence Civil Service Pensions Branch endeavours to use plain English. Where technical terms are used in the booklets and leaflets they are put in bold and explained in a Glossary Section. Pensions is a complex area and therefore Civil Service Pensions also recommends that members seek financial advice when making life changing decisions relating to their pension.

Rate Revenue

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an estimate of the rates revenue that has been lost since 2007 as a result of the closure of retail outlets due to the recession.

(AQO 4537/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Land & Property Services does not collect or generally hold information on why retail outlets close down or vacate premises. There are many reasons why a business or retail outlet closes, for example retirement, lack of sales due to the increase in e-commerce, competition, movement to another location and so on. For this reason LPS is unable to provide an estimate of rate revenue that has been lost since 2007 as a result of the closure of retail outlets due to the recession.

Rate Relief Scheme

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many pensioners were included in the 2012/13 Rates Relief Scheme.

(AQO 4544/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There were approximately 17,500 pensioners included in the 2012/13 Rate Relief Scheme, over 11,000 of these were owner occupiers and around 6,500 were tenants.

The Low Income Rate Relief scheme was introduced under Direct Rule in April 2007 to address shortcoming in the rating system where there were virtually no reliefs beyond those available through the housing benefit system. It is a top up scheme which provides assistance to those low income households that are just beyond the thresholds for Housing Benefit or that are in receipt of partial Housing Benefit. The scheme was biased in favour of pensioners, particularly those who are asset rich and income poor. The scheme costs the NI Executive almost £7m per annum.

Since its introduction other allowances were introduced by the NI Assembly to help moderate the excesses of the new rating system, including the £400,000 value cap and the Lone Pensioner Allowance.

My Department is currently out for consultation on removal of the top up scheme. This is so we can better afford to retain the main rate rebate scheme which currently helps around 225, 000 of our lowest income households but is faced with a 10% cut in funding imposed by HM Government – a cut that applies throughout the UK.

Before jumping to conclusions on the removal of the top up scheme I would urge members to study the worked examples in the consultation paper, as they do show that the scheme is not targeted at the poorest households, whether that be pensioners or those of working age.

Given the continuing public spending squeeze, we have to look at these things in terms of what are our real priorities in terms of helping those least able to pay rates.

Capital Resource Allocation

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how he intends to proceed with the allocation of resources freed up by the delay in the A5 and the additional capital allocated by Her Majesty's Government.

(AQO 4536/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As the Member will recall, the Executive agreed as part of June Monitoring that my officials would commission a capital budget reallocation exercise for the 2014-15 financial year. The main objective of this exercise is to reallocate capital funding that has become available due to delay in projects such as the A5 road scheme and additional allocations received from HM Treasury.

An important element of this exercise will also be to make further progress on allocating out the Financial Transactions capital funding the Executive has available over the next three years.

The capital budget reallocation exercise is now well underway and I intend to inform the Assembly of the outcome once the Executive has considered my proposals as part of the October Monitoring round.

Surplus Land Sales

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what assets have been raised through the sale of surplus land through Land and Property Services over the last three years.

(AQO 4538/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am presuming that the Member is referring to monies realised from the sale of surplus land and buildings managed through Land & Property Services (LPS).

I can report that in the period January 2010 to August 2013 the total sales proceeds realised from the sale of surplus land and buildings through LPS amounted to £39,188,373. This figure includes all land and buildings sold on the open market as well as properties sold to other public sector bodies. A further £2,554,375 of sales are agreed "subject to contract."

Economic Pact

Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on his Department's role in the implementation of the Economic Pact.

(AQO 4539/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department is responsible for taking forward a range of actions included in the Economic Pact and will report to the First and deputy First Minister on progress. Broadly speaking these are on track to meet the agreed delivery timetable.

For example, work on allocating the £100 million in additional borrowing is underway as part of a 2014-15 Capital reallocation exercise, while my officials are in discussions with their BIS counterparts to confirm Northern Ireland's allocation in respect of both the PEACE and INTERREG Programmes.

Furthermore, within the last couple of weeks I have held a series of meetings with the Secretary of State, the Chief Executive of the British Bankers Association, and the Irish Finance Minister to help progress access to finance issues. Work is also ongoing to prepare for the implementation of any positive decision on the devolution of Corporation Tax and in considering the case for Enterprise Zones and the potential for devolving additional fiscal powers.

My Department and I will continue to work to progress these and the other issues in the Economic Pact significantly over the coming months.

Zero-carbon Homes

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what efforts his Department has made to promote the development of Zero Carbon Homes through the rates process.

(AQO 4540/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In 2009 my Department introduced a scheme to provide a rates holiday to the first occupiers of newly built zero and low carbon houses. However my predecessor closed the scheme in 2012 due to the high cost of administration and the relatively low take up. He chose instead to transfer the funding to the Green New Deal, in order to make better use of available money in pursuit of similar aims.

I have no plans to resurrect the scheme.

Public Sector Reform

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how the new Public Sector Reform Division will operate.

(AQO 4541/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I firmly believe people in Northern Ireland are entitled to world class public services both in terms of the quality and coverage of those services, and to achieve this goal, we need to make the Executive's resources stretch as far as possible. I have therefore established, within my department, a new Public Sector Reform Division to be a catalyst for change and improvement, designed to support and enable departments, arms length bodies and local government to deliver more effective public services.

Creating a more competitive government will both improve our public services and help to stimulate economic growth. There is certainly potential to deliver public services in a more cost effective and efficient manner, for example, by thinking innovatively about procurement and by ensuring we have in place the most effective delivery models. The new reformed

RPA structure creates opportunities for new, larger councils to engage in collaborative procurement and shared service undertakings. Organisations like the European Investment Bank are keen to assist in developing our infrastructure but the previous local authority structure and HM Treasury rules frequently hindered such developments advancing.

The new Reform Division will also have a key role to play in encouraging the private sector and local authorities to bring forward investments that can utilise the increasing amounts of Financial Transactions Capital that the Executive receives from HM Treasury.

Rate Liability for the Landlord Sector

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of any preliminary findings of the consultation on the review of Rates Liability for the Landlord Sector.

(AQO 4542/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department has recently published the outcome of the consultation on review of rates liability for the landlord sector on the Rating Policy Division website.

The consultation closed on the 28 June 2013. A total of 16 responses to the consultation exercise were received, consisting of 2 businesses, 8 organisations, 2 district councils, 1 political party and 3 ratepayers.

My initial assessment is that the policy proposals to simplify the current arrangements were well supported by the consultation and I am inclined to make these relatively straightforward changes, with the Assembly's support, through new legislation. The measures to be taken forward will remove the need for landlords to provide tenancy agreements to LPS and will also standardise the level of allowance.

Furthermore my Department has also put in place administrative arrangements to deal with difficult cases. However, the Department must act in accordance with the legislation when assessing rate liability and recovering outstanding debt.

I should add that some consultees want radical changes to be made to the rating system. They lie in opposing camps - landlords would like tenants to be liable in all cases and vice versa for the advice sector.

Either of those approaches would represent a major change and I am not convinced that now is the time to do that given everything else that is going on, in particular Welfare Reform with the difficult question of direct payment of housing costs to landlords. I think the sensible thing is to wait before we do anything radical with the rates and we can revisit this whole area at a better time.

Rates: Capital Value Limit

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration has been given to removing the statutory maximum capital value limit for rating purposes instead of scrapping rate relief payments, as proposed by his predecessor.

(AQO 4543/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This particular issue was consulted upon during my Department's preliminary public consultation which took place between January and April this year. A few organisations suggested this as an alternative way of helping close the funding gap caused by the restricted funds now provided for rate rebate under Housing Benefit.

However, I share the views of my predecessor that this measure, which was introduced following the Executive's 2007 Review of the Domestic Rating system, remains relevant today as it continues to moderate one of the extreme effects of the rating system introduced under Direct Rule. It does this by ensuring that no ratepayer in Northern Ireland pays more than the average of someone in the highest council tax band in England.

Whilst I am not one for keeping old policies that are redundant or don't do their job properly or are low priority, I think I am on safe ground in saying that what was fair then, remains fair today. For this reason I am not keen to pursue this particular suggestion. However, before making my mind up on the matter I would like to consider the outcome of the current consultation on the future of Rate Rebate.

Fiscal Powers

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the recent research report produced by the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action regarding the potential for enhanced fiscal powers.

(AQO 4545/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: NICVA's recent report on the Assembly's fiscal powers provides a useful contribution on the debate on this matter it sets out the current Scottish and Welsh approaches to fiscal devolution and using that identifies some further fiscal powers that we might seek. However, in considering this it is important to recognise that the context and rationale behind the devolution process in the other administrations is somewhat different from our own.

Financial accountability has been a major focus for Scotland and Wales whilst in contrast we have, unapologetically, taken an economic focus thus far. Increasing accountability is about bringing the revenues you raise more into line with the monies that you spend. That is why income tax powers are such a big part of this for Scotland and Wales. While Corporation tax with a total tax base of maybe £800m-£900m remains a possibility, it would in my view be unwise to seek devolution of any other substantial tax.

That said, we are examining the potential for devolving specific additional powers in line with that commitment in the Economic Pact.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Heart Surgery

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of local children who have required cardiac procedures in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25302/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Information on the number of cardiac procedures carried out on local children, in each of the last five years is detailed in the table below.

Year	Number of cardiac procedures
2008/09*	111
2009/10*	97
2010/11	121
2011/12	131
2012/13	132

Source: Belfast Health and Social Care Trust (HSCT) Information Department and the Northern Ireland Health and Social Care Board (HSCB)

* HSCB was unable to provide data on the number of cardiac procedures undertaken during 2008/09 and 2009/10. As such the figures for these years relate only to those children resident in Northern Ireland who were treated at the Belfast HSCT.

Heart Surgery

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of local children that have had cardiac procedures completed in (i) Northern Ireland; (ii) Republic of Ireland; and (iii) England, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25303/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of paediatric cardiac procedures carried out on children resident in Northern Ireland, in each of the last three years is detailed in the table below.

Year	Northern Ireland <sup>1</sup>	Republic of Ireland <sup>2</sup>	England <sup>2</sup>

Loane House

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if the closure of twelve beds by the Southern Health and Social Care Trust in Loane House, South Tyrone Hospital, is (i) temporary, and if so, for how long; or (ii) permanent, and if so, why.

(AQW 25312/11-15)

Mr Poots: There has been a temporary closure of 12 beds at Loane House due to a downturn in demand over the summer months. The Southern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that as soon as the rate of referrals to Loane House increases the beds would be reopened.

Health and Social Care: Complaints

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why complaints against doctors and dentists are dealt with by an independent body but complaints against nursing staff are dealt with internally; and to outline the plans he has to bring independent oversight and appeal procedures to the nursing profession.

(AQW 25344/11-15)

Mr Poots: The procedures for dealing with all HSC staff, including doctors and nurses, are employer led and managed internally. In addition, in serious cases, HSC employers may make referrals to relevant professional bodies e.g. Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) in the case of nurses or General Medical Council (GMC) in the case of doctors.

I have no plans to bring independent oversight and appeal procedures to the nursing profession.

Health and Social Care: Complaints

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the criteria that is used for immediate suspension of nurses following complaints; and how the rate of suspension compares with complaints against doctors that are now dealt with by an independent investigatory body.

(AQW 25345/11-15)

Mr Poots: The immediate suspension of a nurse will apply on lapse of registration with the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC). In other cases, immediate suspension may be appropriate where gross misconduct is suspected or alleged and where continued working may give rise to further misconduct or interference with the process of fair investigation. In the calendar year ending December 2012, 53 nurses were suspended compared to 3 doctors.

Health and Social Care: Missed Appointments

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many appointments were missed at (i) GP surgeries in North Down; (ii) Bangor Hospital; (iii) Newtownards Hospital; and (iv) the Ulster Hospital, over the last twelve months.

(AQW 25371/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) General Practitioners (GPs) are independent contractors who contract with the Health and Social Care Board to provide Primary Medical Services to their patients. As independent contractors, GPs are responsible for the day to day management of their practice, including patient appointment arrangements, therefore information on missed appointments is not collated centrally and therefore could only be available at disproportionate cost. (AQW 25371/11-15 & AQW 25372/11-15)
- (ii) – (iv) The number of outpatient appointments missed at Bangor Hospital, Newtownards Hospital and Ulster Hospital, in each quarter of the last twelve months, is shown in the table overleaf. These figures represent the number of outpatient appointments where a patient did not attend (DNA) and failed to give advance warning to the hospital. (AQW 25371/11-15)

When assessing the level of missed outpatient appointments, it is more appropriate to consider these in the context of the total number of outpatient attendances, in order to provide a more comparative trend analysis. This involves the calculation of a standardised measure of missed appointments, which is called a DNA rate. DNA rates are also presented in the table below.

Deafness

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assistance his Department provides for the parents of profoundly deaf children.

(AQW 25374/11-15)

Mr Poots: Following diagnosis and assessment, appropriate advice and guidance is given to parents and/or carers by Health and Social Care Trusts. These include for example, counselling support, parents support groups and family sign classes. Any child who is profoundly deaf is entitled to be assessed under the Understanding the Needs of Children in Northern Ireland framework, which includes a section on the needs of carers.

In addition, my Department's Physical and Sensory Disability Strategy which was published in 2012, recognises the important role that carers play in lives of children with disabilities. The needs of children and their carers are also being addressed through the Children with Disabilities Sub-group of the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership which includes representatives from the field of sensory disability, including the National Deaf Children's Society

The Health and Social Care Board has also recently identified an additional £750k of funding support for the carers of children with a disability.

Residential and Respite Care: Carrickfergus

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what provision exists in the Carrickfergus area for elderly people who require (i) residential care; and (ii) respite care; and what is the current waiting time for each.

(AQW 25433/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern HSC trust has informed me that there are 3 care homes in the Carrickfergus area which provide, amongst other services, residential care for the elderly.

The Trust also advises that there are 2 dedicated respite care beds available in Joymount Residential Unit. Should demand for respite beds increase the Trust will commission additional capacity from the independent sector to meet this need.

There is currently no waiting list for residential or respite care in the area.

Joymount House

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many beds for respite care were available in Joymount House between the 28 June and 7 July 2013.

(AQW 25434/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not held centrally and was requested from the Northern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust.

The Northern HSC Trust stated that there are 2 dedicated respite beds in Joymount House. Both were occupied between the 28 June and 7 July 2013.

Health and Social Care: Payment of Invoices

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of suppliers invoices (i) paid; and (ii) paid within ten working days of receipt by each Health and Social Care Trust (a) between 1 April 2013 and 31 August 2013; and (b) in the 2012/13 financial year.

(AQW 25438/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of invoices paid by each Health and Social Care Trust and the number paid within ten working days of receipt (a) between 1 April 2013 and 31 August 2013; and (b) in the 2012/13 financial year are contained in the table below.

Nursing and Care Homes

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority has expressed a view on the sufficiency of the present level of fees paid to private nursing and care homes, having regard to the standards which they require.

(AQW 25441/11-15)

Mr Poots: The level of fees is a matter for agreement between the provider and the placing authority, normally a Health and Social Care Trust or in the case of private funders, an individual client or their representative.

The Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority as an independent arms length body is required to register and inspect all residential care and nursing homes in accordance with regulations and against minimum care standards published by the Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety.

Regulations include a requirement that the provider furnishes the patient or resident with a statement specifying the fees payable and to notify in advance, any increase in fees.

RQIA as regulator monitors compliance with the regulations but has no role in the setting of such fees.

Ex-service Personnel

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many ex-service personnel, who served during 31 August 1969 and 31 July 2007, from the (i) armed forces; (ii) UDR; (iii) RUC; and (iv) Prison Service are currently suffering from (a) mental health issues; and (b) physical injury.

(AQW 25494/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not collected by the DHSSPS.

Bangor Hospital

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are currently available at Bangor Hospital.

(AQW 25499/11-15)

Mr Poots: Current services at Bangor Hospital consist of a wide range of outpatient clinics including diabetes, chest, rheumatology, gynaecology, skin, pain, audiology, sexual health and reproductive services, wound management, lymphoedema, and continence. The hospital also houses a therapy and rehabilitation centre, minor injuries unit, radiology service, along with medical outpatients and 20 GP inpatient beds. Bangor Hospital also contains offices for Cruse Bereavement Care.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has agreed the process for development and the construction contract of the new Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25550/11-15)

Mr Poots: This project is being procured and funded through the normal method of public capital procurement using competitive tendering processes, in line with DFP and Departmental guidance. The project is now at the stage where consideration is being given to the appointment of the preferred bidder.

As you will be aware the costs of this project have increased since the business case was approved in 2011, requiring approval of the addendum to the business case by all parties – Departments and the three relevant bodies. This is currently underway.

Bangor Hospital

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many outpatients have attended Bangor Hospital over the last three years.

(AQW 25594/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not collected by the DHSSPS.

Foundation Dentists

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many places were available for Foundation Dentists commencing practice based training in August 2013.

(AQW 25596/11-15)

Mr Poots: There were 34 places available in Northern Ireland for Foundation Dentists commencing practice based training in August 2013.

Childcare: South Tyrone

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the child care services and providers located in the South Tyrone constituency.

(AQW 25609/11-15)

Mr Poots: The website, www.familysupportni.gov.uk, lists all registered childcare providers across Northern Ireland. Registered childminders are also included on the website apart from a small number who have requested that their details are withheld on security grounds.

A list of registered childcare providers in the South Tyrone constituency is attached.

Continuing Healthcare

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what mechanisms are in place to ensure that Health and Social Care Trusts are compliant with the provision of Continuing Health Care.
(AQW 25610/11-15)

Mr Poots: Departmental Circular ECCU 1/2010 'Care Management, Provision of Services and Charging Guidance' provides Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts with direction on the assessment of a person's health and social care needs. As set out in the circular the outcome of the assessment could be either a primary need for health care, which is provided free; or social care for which a means tested contribution may be required.

My Department sought confirmation from all HSC Trusts in October 2012 that they were compliant with this circular. All HSC Trusts confirmed that this was the case.

Pinewood Residential Care Home, Ballymena

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the consultation regarding the closure of the Pinewood Home in Ballymena was completed prior to his Statement of 3rd May 2013.

(AQW 25617/11-15)

Mr Poots: On 03rd May I stopped all Trust consultation processes with regard to statutory residential homes for older people. Consequently, the Northern Health and Social Care Trust's consultation on the Future of Statutory of Residential Care for Older People, which included Pinewood, was not completed.

The HSC Board launched the Project Initiation Document for their Project on Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change on 21 August 2013. This new regional approach gives assurance that best practice will be followed in the future development of proposals, engagement and delivery of change.

Pinewood Residential Care Home will be considered as part of this process going forward. Residents, families and staff have been advised of the new two stage process and I would encourage people to share their views during the forthcoming two periods of public consultation.

Hydraulic Fracturing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has made, or intends to make, any assessment of the health impacts from the extraction of oil or gas using slick water high volume hydraulic fracturing.

(AQW 25626/11-15)

Mr Poots: Public Health England (formerly the Health Protection Agency), provides specialist advice and support to Departments and agencies across the UK on a wide range of health protection matters. PHE is currently reviewing the potential health impacts of hydraulic fracturing, the process commonly known as fracking. It is anticipated that this report will be available in the near future. My Department and the Public Health Agency will be guided by this advice.

Cycling and Pedestrian Infrastructure

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department is promoting the need for proper cycling and pedestrian infrastructure as an aid in improving public health.

(AQW 25634/11-15)

Mr Poots: I would like to answer both these questions together as they are of a similar nature.

My Department and the Department for Regional Development have ongoing discussions about the importance of creating an environment that promotes walking and cycling, including the need for appropriate infrastructure. This supports the delivery of my Department's obesity prevention framework, "A Fitter Future for All", and DRD's Active Travel Strategy for Northern Ireland, which was launched in January 2013, and the Active Travel Action Plan, launched in August 2013.

Cycling and Pedestrian Infrastructure

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what communication he has had with the Minister for Regional Development on the link between better cycling infrastructure and improved levels of public health.

(AQW 25635/11-15)

Mr Poots: I would like to answer both these questions together as they are of a similar nature.

My Department and the Department for Regional Development have ongoing discussions about the importance of creating an environment that promotes walking and cycling, including the need for appropriate infrastructure. This supports the delivery of my Department's obesity prevention framework, "A Fitter Future for All", and DRD's Active Travel Strategy for Northern Ireland, which was launched in January 2013, and the Active Travel Action Plan, launched in August 2013.

Belfast School of Dentistry

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assurances he can give on the future of the Belfast School of Dentistry; and whether there are any plans to migrate the service elsewhere.

(AQW 25682/11-15)

Mr Poots: The General Dental Council has a statutory obligation to quality assure dental education courses and judges whether students have reached a level of experience suitable to allow GDC registration. It decides if an undergraduate dentistry course is deemed sufficient and so enables a dental school to recruit and train students. The 2011 and 2012 GDC inspection reports for the Belfast School of Dentistry at Queen's University concluded that the then final year students would be allowed to register and that the course was sufficient. However both reports required further inspections in the next year. The report of the GDC inspection of 16 and 17 April this year has not yet been published but Queen's graduates joined the GDC register in June.

I remain committed to having a dental school in Northern Ireland. A local dental school provides a key source of trained dentists for our future dental workforce and consultant staff also provide an important specialist service function. I have previously assured the GDC of my full support and commitment to the Belfast School of Dentistry and the GDC have acknowledged the strong and clear level of support from my Department at a time when sustainability and vulnerability are concerns for those involved with the dental school. I note the progress that has been made at the School of Dentistry at Queen's and continue to keep the situation under review.

My Department provides recurrent funding of almost £6m, along with similar funding from DEL, for undergraduate dental education including senior clinical academic staff. My Department has also invested £2.9m in recent years to refurbish clinical areas in the dental school and the GDC has been pleased with the positive impact that this has made.

No plans have been made to migrate the service elsewhere.

Deafness

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children in each constituency are diagnosed as profoundly deaf.

(AQW 25722/11-15)

Mr Poots: Refer to answer in AQW 25375/11-15

The information provided in the answer to AQW 25375/11-15 cannot be disaggregated beyond Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust Area.

Smoking: Western Health and Social Care Trust

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the decision by the Western Health and Social Care Trust to prohibit smoking throughout all its buildings and grounds; and whether he has any plans to encourage other Trusts to implement a similar policy.

(AQW 25725/11-15)

Mr Poots: I fully support the decision by the Western Health and Social Care Trust to become completely smoke-free by prohibiting smoking in both premises and grounds. This decision is in line with my Department's 10-year tobacco control strategy which encourages organisations, such as HSC Trusts, to go further than the legislation requires by adopting more comprehensive smoke-free policies.

The Public Health Agency has established a steering group to implement the tobacco control strategy and its action plan includes a commitment to support any HSC Trust wishing to become completely smoke-free. I have no doubt that the decision by the Western Trust will encourage other Trusts to adopt similar policies.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the outstanding approvals needed before work can begin on the Training College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25774/11-15)

Mr Poots: The business case was approved in 2011, at which point work commenced on the design element of this project.

The costs for this project subsequently increased significantly, requiring a new addendum to be developed and approved by all parties before the project can continue.

The addendum to the business case needs to be approved by both my Department and the Department of Justice, whilst the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service, Police Service for Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland Prison Service need to agree the plans in terms of value for money and affordability. Finally, given the cost of this project, approval is required by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Residential Care

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps have been taken to improve health service engagement with elderly people and their families over the future of Health Service residential care homes and care packages for the elderly.

(AQO 4580/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC Board launched the Project Initiation Document for their Project on Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change on 21 August 2013. This new regional approach will include two periods of public consultation: the first will be on draft criteria which will be applied to statutory residential homes at a local level by Trusts; the second will focus on any proposals arising from that exercise.

With that in mind I am confident that this revised process will allow every opportunity for people to share their views with adequate transparency and consistency. The HSC Board will be working closely with residents and relatives throughout the process, as well as liaising with key stakeholders such as the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland, the PCC and Age NI.

Causeway Hospital

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the options appraisal for the management arrangements at the Causeway Hospital.

(AQO 4581/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Post Consultation Report on the "Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action" published in March 2013 recommended that an options appraisal on the future of management arrangements for Causeway Hospital should go forward, with a view to completing this appraisal within 6 months. My Department had begun preparatory work on the appraisal.

In parallel with this, work has been ongoing at the Northern Trust to take forward the implementation of the Turnaround Improvement Plan. A key element of that work is a series of service reviews, including networking of clinical services, and development of a new model for medical leadership and management. These processes should provide the Trust the opportunity to embed necessary change and reform. I am advised that it is the view of the Turnaround and Support Team that an appraisal on future management options should be informed by this work and therefore should follow on from it. This view is shared by the Trust. Accordingly, I am of the view that these processes should be substantially in place before further work is carried out on the options appraisal on management arrangements.

My objective remains to ensure that we have effective delivery of safe, sustainable and resilient services for patients and clients served by the Causeway Hospital.

Residential Care

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will give a commitment that, following consultation, statutory residential care homes will not be forced to close in areas where there is no alternative local supported housing or a lack of affordable care.

(AQO 4582/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC Board launched the Project Initiation Document for their Project on Improving Services for Older People – A New Process for Consulting, Engaging and Implementing Change on 21 August 2013. This new regional approach gives assurance that best practice will be followed in the future development of proposals, engagement and delivery of change.

As this revised approach is only just underway it would be wrong of me to predetermine its outcome. There will be two periods of public consultation as the process moves forward and I would encourage people to share their views and any concerns they may have during those consultations before any decisions are made on individual statutory homes.

I would like to be clear, however, that, should a resident living in a statutory residential home move to a different home as a result of decisions made in this process, they will not be financially disadvantaged by any such move.

Care Pathway

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the emergency and urgent care pathway procedure in time-critical cases for children and young people.

(AQO 4583/11-15)

Mr Poots: I understand that this question is in respect of children and young people presenting to hospital emergency departments requiring cardiac care.

Cardiac emergencies in children are rare occurrences. If a child presents to an emergency department they will be assessed and stabilised. The emergency department staff may call for assistance from paediatric, anaesthetic or other specialty teams if they are available on site. The child will then usually be admitted for further assessment and treatment. The clinicians will decide if the admission should be to the local paediatric unit, or to the regional paediatric intensive care unit, or the regional paediatric cardiology unit in the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children. Further care and treatment will depend on the individual patient's condition.

Elderly and Vulnerable People

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will consider a rights-based approach to the protection of elderly and vulnerable people.

(AQO 4584/11-15)

Mr Poots: Current regional adult protection policy and procedural guidance is based on principles that respect the rights of all vulnerable adults, including the elderly.

Furthermore, my Department, in conjunction with the Department of Justice, is also in the process of developing both a new Safeguarding Vulnerable Adults Policy Framework and a Mental Capacity Bill. Both the Policy Framework and the Bill will be underpinned by a number of principles which reflect a rights-based approach and have safeguarding the rights and dignity of people who fall within scope at their core.

Bexsero Vaccine

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the decision by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation not to recommend the Meningitis B vaccine Bexsero for adoption into the national immunisation program.

(AQO 4585/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) issued an interim position statement on the vaccine Bexsero® on 24 July. Before finalising its advice to Ministers, JCVI will seek comments from the key stakeholders who provided evidence to JCVI and its sub-committee about the use of this vaccine. This includes the national meningitis charities and Novartis, the vaccine manufacturer.

I will consider the final JCVI recommendations before deciding what the policy will be in Northern Ireland.

In the meantime, I would like to reiterate that I welcome the quest for an effective, safe and cost-effective vaccine to protect against meningitis B.

Loane House

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the future of Loane House at South Tyrone Hospital, Dungannon.

(AQO 4586/11-15)

Mr Poots: No decision has been taken regarding the future of Loane House. The Southern Health and Social Care Trust is exploring options across the Trust for improved, affordable delivery of care in light of the changes outlined in Transforming Your Care which are required to meet the needs of our growing older population. The Trust is committed to working with the Health and Social Care Board as commissioner of services and engaging at an early stage with clinical leaders, the wider body of staff in the Trust, key partners, and the wider community.

Welfare Reform

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on progress on cross departmental working to monitor the impact of Welfare Reform on the lives of health and social care users.

(AQO 4587/11-15)

Mr Poots: Welfare reform will undoubtedly impact on the lives of health and social care users in Northern Ireland.

The delivery of passported benefits, such as free dental and ophthalmic care and the Healthy Start scheme, an important issue for my Department, with the forthcoming introduction of Universal Credit. To this end, my Department have been liaising closely with the Department for Social Development and counterparts in Great Britain in order to examine the potential implications for services and patients.

My Department has also been involved in several areas as follows:

In respect of childcare, my Department is working with the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister and DSD to ensure that the forthcoming Childcare Strategy takes account of the impact of Welfare Reform. Work has taken place on amendments to the familysupportNI website to ensure that the Social Security Agency has access to provision of accurate, up to date, information on registered childcare settings. My Department, in conjunction with colleagues in the Social Security Agency, is considering terms of reference for research on the impacts of ratios of adults to children in registered settings on the costs of childcare to parents.

In respect of adult services, my Department is currently taking forward a three-stage process of reform to establish the future direction and funding of adult care and support in Northern Ireland. In doing so my Department has worked closely with DSD, recognising the key role that benefits play in helping people with care needs to remain independent.

In respect of General Medical Services there has been an initial discussion between my Department and DSD with regard to the issues surrounding medical reports and work capability assessments. Both Departments agreed to continue to work together to try progress any emerging issues and to minimise the impact on individuals.

Department of Justice

Glorifying Terrorism

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to provide a definition of the criminal offence of glorifying terrorism.
(AQW 25156/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Section 1 of the Terrorism Act 2006 makes it an offence to publish statements which are likely to be understood by members of the public as a direct or indirect encouragement to commit, prepare or instigate a terrorist offence. Indirect encouragement includes statements which glorify acts or offences of terrorism whether in the past, in the future, or of terrorism more generally. Glorification includes any form of praise or celebration.

Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 2011

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of people that have been convicted of offences under the Welfare of Animals Act 2011.
(AQW 25180/11-15)

Mr Ford: Sentencing and conviction datasets are currently available only up to 2009. The Welfare of Animals Act came into force on 11 July 2011. Therefore, it is not possible to provide the information requested.

Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 2011

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of people that have been charged under the Welfare of Animals Act 2011, and of these, how many were tried on indictment.
(AQW 25181/11-15)

Mr Ford: Sentencing and conviction datasets are currently available only up to 2009. The Welfare of Animals Act came into force on 11 July 2011. Therefore, it is not possible to provide the information requested.

Cattle and Sheep Theft

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice to detail how many (i) cattle; and (ii) sheep have been (a) stolen; or (b) reported missing, in each constituency, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 25197/11-15)

Mr Ford: The issue raised in this question is an operational matter for the Chief Constable.

Given the way that thefts are recorded, the detailed data may not be available.

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) his Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.
(AQW 25198/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of people employed by recruitment agencies in the Department of Justice and its arms-length bodies (ALBs), at 1 April 2011, 1 April 2012 and 1 April 2013 are detailed below:

Date	Number of people employed by Recruitment Agencies in DOJ (inc Agencies)	Number of people employed by Recruitment Agencies in DOJ ALBs
1 April 2011	44	676
1 April 2012	36	430
1 April 2013	50	409

Noel Parker

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24515/11-15, to detail (i) the reason for the delay in answering this question; (ii) when the investigation commenced; (iii) who ordered the investigation; (iv) how many staff and at what grades are carrying out the investigation; (v) the terms of reference; and (vi) when this is expected to be concluded.
(AQW 25218/11-15)

Mr Ford: In response to AQW/24515/11-15 NIPS advised that an internal investigation had been established into the temporary leave application and risk assessment process of Mr Parker in 2008. There was a delay in answering in order to ensure that the answer was accurate.

This investigation was initiated by the Director of Offender Policy and Operations on 4 July 2013 when terms of reference were issued to a Governor II from Headquarters assisted by a Principal Officer.

The terms of reference required the investigators to establish the circumstances around the following matters:

- i Whether managers within the Lifer Management Unit followed the correct procedures when authorising the accompanied temporary release of Noel Parker in 2008.
- ii. If errors were made in the temporary release process or application what were they and who made them?
- iii. What influence did a named manager have on this process and what were the circumstances that led to their departure from the Northern Ireland Prison Service?

The investigation itself was conducted under the provisions of the Code of Conduct and Discipline, and was submitted to the commissioning authority on 31 August.

William Beggs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to William Beggs, formerly from Northern Ireland and having returned from serving a custodial sentence in Scotland, given that the murder conviction included sexual violence and despite a court ruling which ordered his name being removed from the sex-offender register due an incorrect administrative recording of his conviction at trial, and given that he is now residing in Northern Ireland (i) what assurances can be provided that an appropriate order is sought to ensure he is monitored given the nature of the crime, the sexual violence involved and the risk to public safety; and (ii) to outline the procedure for obtaining such an order.

(AQW 25221/11-15)

Mr Ford: Mr Beggs is a life sentence prisoner in custody in Scotland, and as such, the Department of Justice has no role in the management of this individual.

Marian McGlinchey

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the amount of Legal Aid that has been paid for all court cases in respect of Marian McGlinchey since she was first charged with the current offences of providing a phone for use in terrorism; attending a meeting of a proscribed organisation; resisting and obstructing police on 10 July 2010 and the granted application to have this set aside; and all other applications at all court levels in respect of the alleged inability to appear at court due to health and media concerns.

(AQW 25268/11-15)

Mr Ford: The total legal aid paid to date in respect of various offences relating to Marian McGlinchey heard in the Magistrates' Court is £14,290.19 (including VAT of £2,381.70).

Of the fees paid in Magistrates' Court proceedings a total of £10,838.17 (including VAT of £1,806.36) was paid to solicitors and a total of £3,452.02 (including VAT of £575.34) was paid to counsel.

The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission is precluded from releasing any information in respect of any payments made under the civil Legal Aid Schemes by virtue of Article 24 of the Legal Aid, Advice and Assistance (NI) Order 1981 without the legally assisted person's express consent.

Chairman of the Prison Officers' Association

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for assessment of the remarks made by the Chairman of the Prison Officers' Association in an article in the Irish News on 24 June 2013, particularly in relation to the statements "The reality is that they (new custody officers) will never become an offender supervisor" and "Magilligan is just a powder keg because people lie about doing nothing."

(AQW 25269/11-15)

Mr Ford: The comments quoted in the Irish News on Wednesday 24 July are the views of the chairperson of the Prison Officers Association. However, the Member should note the following:

- (i) The Terms and Conditions of Employment for those recruited to the role of Custody Prison Officer (Custody Officer) since September 2012 explicitly state that Custody Officers in possession of a Certificate of Competence will be eligible to apply for Prison Officer Offender Supervisor vacancies.

Those who have been recruited to this role since September 2012 are currently undertaking a programme of development leading to the attainment of this Certificate of Competence.

- (ii) Whilst in the past year the population at Magilligan Prison has increased, there is a range of activities for Prisoners. These include access to recreational programmes, education and skills programmes and visits.

Trafficking: Confiscated Funds

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the total funds confiscated from prosecuted traffickers in each year since 2009; and (ii) the proportion of these funds awarded to victims as compensation.

(AQW 25270/11-15)

Mr Ford: A total of £68,081 has been confiscated from convicted traffickers. This sum relates to monies confiscated in 2012 from the convicted trafficker, Rong Chen. Of this, 50% was available to the Assets Recovery Community Scheme.

A total of £52,500 has been paid in compensation to victims of trafficking. £30,000 was paid to one victim in 2009 and £22,500 was paid to another victim in 2013.

However, these compensation payments were made under the Northern Ireland Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2009), and not directly from funds confiscated from those convicted.

Kieran Doherty

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, further to the award of compensation arising from the death of Kieran Doherty, what plans he has to review the criminal injury compensation legislation.

(AQW 25296/11-15)

Mr Ford: In June 2013, I launched a five year Strategy for Victims and Witnesses of Crime which included a commitment to review the legislation underpinning the Criminal Injuries and Criminal Damage Compensation Schemes. The review has commenced and it is my intention to publish a Consultation Paper relating to the criminal injuries scheme by next summer. The decision to review the legislation underpinning the compensation schemes was taken before the recent coverage of the Doherty case.

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the progress made on each of his Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25300/11-15)

Mr Ford: Of the seven Department of Justice Programme for Government (PfG) commitments, progress at the end of the first quarter indicates that the Department is on track, or broadly on track to deliver against six of the seven commitments.

The remaining commitment, that of delivering at least 70% of the programme capital budget for the construction of the new Police, Prison, and Fire Training College is not expected to be delivered within the current PfG period.

Details on the progress against each commitment is set out at Annex A.

ANNEX A

Commitment 53:

Quarter: April–June

Substantially complete the construction of the new Police, Prison and Fire Training College

Recent action has addressed the immediate issues identified in the previous report. Provided that the identified dependencies do not raise new issues, achievement of the overall Commitment remains possible. The programme as a whole is highly sensitive to further delay - consequently early identification of potential issues and prompt, robust action to address these will be essential to the achievement of the Commitment.

Commitment 54:

Quarter April-June

Reduce the level of serious crime

The position in respect of the cross-Departmental Strategic Framework for Reducing Offending has been rectified. The Central Team anticipates sight of the findings of the CJINI report in the next reporting quarter. The proposed broadly on track assessment is appropriate.

Commitment 55:

Quarter: April-June

Tackle crime against older and vulnerable people by more effective and appropriate sentences and other measures

The Minister of Justice announced measures for transparency, consistency, and understanding of sentencing practice in June 2012. As part of these measures, two lay members, one of whom is representative of the views of victims, have been recruited to the Sentencing Group, established by the Lord Chief Justice to enhance the guidance available to the judiciary. Justice Committee agreed the action plan tackling crime against older and vulnerable people in January 2013 and a number of actions are now being progressed. The Central Review Team is content that appropriate consideration of the requirement for legislative changes has occurred, and that the commitment is therefore on track for delivery.

Commitment 56:*Quarter: April-June*Improve community safety by tackling anti-social behaviour *Statistically significant change

The baseline for the percentage of people affected by ASB has been established as 82.1%*. This has been taken from the Northern Ireland Crime Survey. Policing and Community Safety Partnerships have all now been fully established and are operational. ASB action plan agreed by Justice Committee in January 2013 and actions are being progressed.

Commitment 57:*Quarter: April-June*Improve access to Justice

The Minister for Justice published his response to the Access to Justice Review and associated Departmental Action Plan. A Bill to give effect to reforms requiring primary legislation will be introduced in autumn 2013.

Commitment 68:*Quarter: April-June*Actively seek local agreement to reduce the number of 'peace walls'

The 2012/13 milestone is complete. Implementation of action plans on 40 to 54 remaining structures has begun per the 2013/14 milestone. Preparation for monitoring community tensions and residents concerns are in hand. Reporting in future quarters should focus on: engagement at the remaining 14 structures; progress on implementation of action plans; and, where appropriate, actual or anticipated further reductions in numbers of physical structures.

Commitment 69:*Quarter: April-June*Reform and modernise the Prison Service

Currently, 100% of the recommendations in the Prison Review Action Plan are on track for achievement within the agreed timescales.

Prisons: Sexual Offences

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 25084/11-15, whether there have been any reports of (i) rape; (ii) indecent and/or sexual assault; (iii) lewd and/or obscene behaviour; and/or (iv) any other sexual offence whilst in a prison facility in each of the last five years, broken down by prison facility.

(AQW 25311/11-15)

Mr Ford: The tables below provide the requested information for each prison.

Hydebank

	2013	2012	2011	2010	2009
Rape	0	0	0	0	0
Indecent and/or sexual assault	2	0	3	0	0
Lewd and/or obscene behaviour	0	2	5	2	2

Human Trafficking

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18870/11-15, to detail (i) the mechanism used for logging cases involving issues of human trafficking where no prosecution for offences was brought but individuals were prosecuted for other offences, such as controlling prostitution; and (ii) the number of cases that have been logged in each of the last five financial years.

(AQW 25314/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information requested is as follows:

- (i) A broad range of information for such cases is recorded on the PPS Case Management System (CMS), including key data relating to suspects, the nature of the offences for which they have been charged or reported by police, the prosecutorial decisions and offences relating to individual suspects and (where appropriate) any outcomes at court.

Relevant management reports are produced on request.

- (ii) For each financial year from 2008/09 to 2012/13, the following details have been provided, as recorded via the PPS CMS:
- The numbers of cases submitted by police, involving at least one offence of human trafficking. A case may involve several individual suspects.
  - The numbers of individual suspects charged or reported in respect of human trafficking offences.

Prison Service: Reform

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the reform of the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 25332/11-15)

Mr Ford: Good progress is being made against the extensive programme of end to end transformational reform, guided by the 40 recommendations made by the Prison Review Team (PRT). To date, nine recommendations have been approved as complete by the Prison Review Oversight Group, which I Chair.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service is currently half way through a three year programme of reform which will run until April 2015. A clear pathway for delivery has been developed to ensure all recommendations are implemented, with the remaining recommendations due to be completed at various stages over the next 18 months.

The Oversight Group has a robust independent element and provides the Justice Committee with an update on progress after each meeting. The next update will be issued to the Committee in October 2013.

Lisnevin Site, Millisle

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether there is a timetable in place for the sale of the Lisnevin site, Millisle.

(AQW 25333/11-15)

Mr Ford: The current plan for closure and vacating Millisle is predicated on the opening of the Northern Ireland Community Safety College. However NIPS will shortly explore options for the early disposal of the Millisle site which will include offering the site to other Government bodies. If no interest is shown by the public sector, it will be advertised for sale on the open market. In the meantime the site will continue in its present role as the Prison Service College.

Prostitution

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the terms of reference for the inquiry into prostitution; (ii) who has been appointed to carry out the inquiry; (iii) the groups, organisations and/or individuals who will be invited to participate; (iv) when it will commence; and (v) when it is expected to conclude.

(AQW 25379/11-15)

Mr Ford: I recently announced that I intend to commission independent research into the extent and nature of prostitution in Northern Ireland. Initial work is underway to scope the extent of the research required. Once this work is complete, a specification will be drawn up and tenders will be sought. I have undertaken to share the specification with the Justice Committee.

Thomas Ward

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the Terms of Reference for the Serious Case Review into the handling and monitoring of Thomas Ward; and why the report has not yet been published despite being completed in September 2012 and presented to the Strategic Management Board of the Public Protection Arrangements in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 25380/11-15)

Mr Ford: As explained in an earlier answer (AQW/13008/11-15), the case did not fall within the guidelines for a serious case review as defined in the PPANI guidance. However, in view of the circumstances, the PPANI Strategic Management Board, representing the relevant agencies, decided to undertake internal agency reviews of the case.

The purpose of the reviews was to look at the respective agencies' practice in this case; and identify any learning for future application.

These agency reviews were considered at the September 2012 meeting of the PPANI Strategic Management Board (SMB), and an executive summary was provided to the Department.

Thomas Ward then lodged an application for leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal against his conviction and sentence.

Decisions on publication of the conclusions of the report cannot be taken until judgment is made in the appeal proceedings currently before the Court of Appeal.

Prison Service: Museum Collection

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice to outline his plans to preserve and promote the Northern Ireland Prison Service Museum Collection.

(AQW 25383/11-15)

Mr Ford: I recognise the importance of many of the artefacts held by the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

NIPS is currently giving consideration to the future arrangements for storing and managing these artefacts and has engaged with a number of interested parties. Work is also ongoing to clarify what, if any, legal obligations are attached to the material. No final decisions have been taken.

Magilligan Prison: Rebuilding

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, following his announcement in March 2013 to outline the progress made, and the future timetable, regarding the rebuilding of Magilligan Prison on the existing site.

(AQW 25404/11-15)

Mr Ford: Following my update to the Assembly on 19 March 2013 and my response to question AQW/22450/11-15 dated 16 May 2013, NIPS Officials continue their work in developing the plans for all the projects included in the Estate Strategy, including that of the rebuilding of Magilligan.

In the intervening period, a Strategic Outline Business Case has been developed in-house and approved by colleagues in the Department of Finance and Personnel. NIPS Officials are in the process of developing the Outline Business Case (OBC) for the project with a deadline for completion by the end of this year.

The future programme is dependent on the OBC being approved and capital funding being made available. Until the Business Case is approved and capital funding made available, I am unable to provide any further details of the timetable.

Maghaberry Prison: Suicide and Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he plans to place a copy of the local Maghaberry policy and procedures pertaining to hot and cold debriefs, as referred to in Annex N of the Suicide and Self-Harm Prevention Policy 2011, in the Assembly Library.

(AQW 25425/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have no plans to place the local Maghaberry policy in the Assembly Library.

Prisons: Leaving Grants

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the grants that are available to assist people leaving a prison facility after serving a custodial sentence to either find or set up employment; (ii) who provides funding for the grants; (iii) the application procedure; (iv) if more than one grant or allocation of funding can be paid to an ex-prisoner following release(s); (v) what follow-up monitoring is carried out to ensure funding is appropriately expended and utilised; and (vi) if a grant is found to have been misspent or misused does the grant have to be paid back and is there any other penalty.

(AQW 25428/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department does not make any grants available to assist people leaving a prison facility after serving a custodial sentence to either find or set up employment. I am however aware that NIACRO occasionally provides grants to organisations, but not individuals, for the purpose of assisting ex-offenders to find employment through its Jobtrack programme.

Scanning Equipment

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the implementation of electronic scanning equipment across the prison estate, specifically the application by the Northern Ireland Prison Service to the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs under the Ionising Radiation legislation.

(AQW 25557/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service submitted its Justification Application on behalf of the Department of Justice to the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC), in May 2013. In compliance with the legislation surrounding the Justification of Practices involving Ionising Radiation Regulations 2004, DECC have a co-ordination role in this process and have established a Justification Liaison Group (JLG).

The JLG met in London, on 21 August 2013 to consider the NIPS Application. This meeting was chaired by a representative from the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) and included representatives of the Health and Safety Executive, the Office for Nuclear Development, the Food Standards Agency, the Welsh Executive, Health Protection Agency and NIPS.

The meeting agreed that the NIPS Justification Application was similar, but not identical, to existing practices employed by the United Kingdom Borders Agency (UKBA). However, because the UKBA practice pre-dated the enactment of the 2004 legislation and had never been subject to a full justification process, it is likely that they will subject the NIPS Application to further scrutiny before coming to a final determination.

My Officials and I await the written determination from this Group which will show what further information, if any, may be required from NIPS should a full justification process prove necessary and the timescale within which this will take place.

Speech, Language and Communication Difficulties and Criminality

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the link between speech, language and communication difficulties and criminality; and to outline the preventative measures being taken by his Department.

(AQW 25900/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are many factors associated with offending behaviour. It is the case that individuals with speech, language and communication difficulties are over-represented in the justice system but there is no automatic link between such communication difficulties and offending.

Individuals with speech, language and communication difficulties have particular needs within the criminal justice system in terms of support. My Department has introduced a number of measures to address these needs and provides assistance at critical points in the criminal justice journey.

Earlier this year, I launched the Registered Intermediaries Scheme pilot. Registered Intermediaries are communication specialists who assist vulnerable individuals with significant communication difficulties to communicate their answers more effectively during police interview and when giving evidence at court.

The Youth Justice Agency is working in partnership with the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists (RCSLT) to enhance support for young people with speech, language and communication difficulties within the youth justice system. This included the development of an e-learning tool to assist staff in identifying young people experiencing difficulties with communication.

On 12 September 2013, I approved the appointment of a dedicated Speech and Language Therapist resource to be based at the Woodlands Juvenile Justice Centre.

The Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) is separately working with Mindwise in Belfast, Antrim and Londonderry to ensure that young people and adults (aged 13-25) engaging with PSNI are provided with support and advocacy in a number of areas including assistance with communication.

Within prison custody, the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) provides a varied selection of programmes to meet prisoners' speech, language and communication needs. Prisoners are screened on committal to identify indicators of speech, language and communication difficulties.

Under the auspice of the Strategic Framework for Reducing Offending, my Department is looking at options to improve the management and support of vulnerable individuals across the justice system - particularly those with mental health issues and learning, speech and communication difficulties. Early priorities for this work will include improving arrangements for assessing offender needs and vulnerabilities and providing appropriate training and guidance for staff working with vulnerable offenders in all areas of the justice system.

Department for Regional Development

Flooding: Craigdarragh Road, Helen's Bay

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any flooding incidents that have occurred on the roadway at the railway bridge at Craigdarragh Road, Helen's Bay and to outline any remedial drainage works that have been carried out at the bridge since 2009.

(AQW 25173/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): Flooding incidents have occurred at this location on the following dates:

- 5 January 2009;
- 21 July 2009;
- 12 November 2009;
- 29 October 2010;
- 11 November 2010;
- 17 October 2011;
- 24 October 2011;
- 27 August 2012;
- 17 October 2012;
- 22 November 2012; and
- 5 February 2013.

The railway over bridge is located at the low point on Craigdarragh Road and, during periods of heavy rainfall, debris is carried by surface water to this point.

Although Roads Service has installed large gully covers at this location, leaves and debris can on occasions prevent surface water from accessing the gullies. Indeed, seven of the eleven incidents detailed above occurred in the autumn, when fallen leaves were the main contributing factor.

On all occasions Roads Service staff have removed the debris covering the gullies which has allowed the water to drain from the road. The drainage system at this location is considered to be functioning correctly.

Roads: Bangor

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total spent by Roads Service on the (i) Rathgael Road; and (ii) Balloo Road in Bangor, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25182/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not monitor capital and resource expenditure for individual roads. I would remind the Member that information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

www.drndi.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information/cinformationtype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

Roads: Bangor

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number times that roadworks have taken place on the Rathgael Road, Bangor, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25183/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The following works have been carried out on the Rathgael Road, Bangor in the last five years:

- Apr/Mar 2010 - Drainage works involving a two week road closure on the section of Rathgael Road from the A2 to Clandeboye Road;
- February 2012 – Carriageway refurbishment patch involving a three day closure on the section of Rathgael Road from the A2 to Clandeboye Road; and
- August 2013 – Resurfacing scheme involving a three week road closure on the section of Rathgael Road from Clandeboye Road to Balloo Road RBT.

Cycle Hoops

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how many cycle hoops have been installed in each council area in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25212/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Over the last five years my Department has installed 156 cycle hoops in the following council areas:

- |                      |                   |
|----------------------|-------------------|
| ■ Belfast – 97       | ■ Coleraine – 4   |
| ■ Londonderry – 18   | ■ Moyle – 3       |
| ■ Down – 6           | ■ Dungannon – 2   |
| ■ North Down – 6     | ■ Omagh – 2       |
| ■ Limavady – 5       | ■ Lisburn – 2     |
| ■ Newry & Mourne – 4 | ■ Castlereagh - 1 |
| ■ Magherafelt – 6    |                   |

Cyclehoop is the trade name of a specific brand of cycle stand which attaches to existing street lighting columns or sign posts. Therefore, for the purposes of answering this question, the information above refers to cycle stands in general and not a specific brand or type.

Councils and, for example, the Department for Social Development as part of public realm works, may have also installed cycle stands and other cycling facilities, details of which are not maintained by my Department or included in the above figures.

Bicycle Racks on Buses

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration he has given to introducing bicycle racks on Ulsterbus and Metro services.

(AQW 25213/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink considered introducing an exterior mounted type of cycle rack for potential fitment to buses three years ago. The rack was to be fitted either to the front or rear of a bus. It was decided not to proceed as racks mounted at the front of a bus substantially obscured the driver's field of vision through the front windscreen of the bus. The rear mounted version was also ruled out as it would have severely restricted access to the bus engine compartment for both routine maintenance and emergency access.

In addition other safety issues associated with these racks were identified, primarily the potential increased risk of injury to cyclists who would be required to load, unload and secure their bicycles in the racks, as well as the potential increased risk to pedestrians if they were accidentally struck by the racks.

Bicycle Storage Facilities on Trains

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he has given consideration has to installing vertical storage facilities for bicycles on trains, to provide more space for cyclists and other passengers.

(AQW 25214/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink is responsible for the design specification when it commissions new trains.

For Class 3000 train design, various methods of cycle storage were considered including vertical storage. Class 3000 trains entered service in 2004-05. The final design was based on a flexible multi-purpose area incorporating tip-up seats, space for parents with buggies, standing passenger space or accommodating up to 4 bicycles which are securely stowed with minimum effort.

The design team believed that this arrangement was superior to vertical storage in regards to ease of use; less risk to other passengers and best use of space. The concept proved very successful in operation and in the design of Class 4000 trains, which entered service in 2011-12, the multi-purpose/bicycle area was duplicated in both driving cars providing a total space for 8 bicycles in a 3 car train.

In striving to provide as much capacity as possible and to carry as many passengers as possible, Translink have placed no restrictions on the number of folding bicycles that they can carry provided they are completely folded down. These may also be carried at any time, including prior to the normal 09.30 restriction.

Parking in Cycle Lanes

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he intends to introduce tougher penalties for drivers who park in cycle lanes.

(AQW 25216/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In July last year, I increased the amount of a Penalty Charge Notice from £60 to £90 for all parking contraventions. My officials are currently reviewing the impact of that increase.

Mandatory cycle lanes are bounded by a solid white line and all other vehicles are excluded from entering them. A Traffic Regulation Order is needed to introduce mandatory cycle lanes and a Penalty Charge Notice can be issued if a vehicle is found parked in one. Mandatory cycle lanes are only used where it is reasonable to exclude all other traffic, for example, where there is no frontage development, no need to park, and where there is an adequate carriageway width.

Advisory cycle lanes are bounded by a broken white line and signify that other vehicles should not enter unless it is safe to do so. These can be provided without the need for an Order. The vast majority of cycle lanes here are advisory and unless there are other parking restrictions such as clearway regulations, a Penalty Charge Notice cannot be issued to a vehicle found parked within one of these lanes.

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) his Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.

(AQW 25255/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The required information for DRD and its associated arms-length bodies is shown in the table below.

	Numbers of Agency Staff
	1 April 2011	1 April 2012	1 April 2013
DRD	12	14	20
NIW	28*	29*	17
Translink	9	15	20
Total	49	58	57

* Headcount figures captured at 31 March

Wi-Fi: Buses and Trains

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of WiFi provision on buses and trains.

(AQW 25320/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The relevant capital and annual costs for the installation of Wi-Fi across Translink bus and train services as currently available are included in the table below.

	Capital Cost £k	Annual cost £k
Goldline	160	41
Enterprise	99.5	4
Class 3000	422	64
Class 4000	-	56
Cross Channel Services	6	8

As far as Class 4000 trains are concerned, Wi-Fi fitting was included in the procurement specification.

Internal costs for Wi-Fi fitting are minimal, as the equipment supplier is responsible for its fitting.

Young People: Train Services

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what incentives are in place to encourage young people and students to use train services.

(AQW 25322/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: yLink is the Translink youth card. This smartcard is available to all young people between the ages of 16-23 years of age (until their 24th birthday). It costs only £8 for up to 8 years and offers substantial savings across all Translink services:

- Metro 1/3 off cash singles
- Ulsterbus 1/3 off cash singles
- NI Railways 1/3 off singles, day returns, weekly and monthly fares
- Enterprise up to 50% off fares

In addition, the card offers savings and promotions with many partner businesses.

The card is promoted heavily throughout the year, but in particular at this time Translink runs a series of roadshows at Freshers' Events in third level colleges. More detailed information can be obtained at the following link, www.translink.co.uk/Fares/Translink-Products/ylink/.

Translink has advised that a discount for mature students using rail services was introduced separately from bus because a mature student travelling by rail is not able to obtain as good a discount without the use of the 24+ Railcard, whereas mature students using both Metro and Ulsterbus services can avail of the best discounts through standard Smartlink products which are available for bus journeys.

Furthermore, the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) currently provides a range of financial assistance, including help with transport costs, to those students who are most in need and who might otherwise be unable to undertake a course of study at a further education college or higher education institution in Northern Ireland.

Further details are available at www.delni.gov.uk.

Public Transport: Donaghadee

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of passengers travelling to and from Donaghadee on public transport, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25324/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The information cannot be provided in the format requested as Translink record the number of passenger journeys as it cannot record the number of actual passengers. The table below therefore provides the number of passenger journeys undertaken.

Financial Year	Passenger Journeys
	Boarding Donaghadee	Alighting Donaghadee
10/11	66,782	50,737
11/12	66,883	48,628
12/13	68,039	49,202
Total	201,704	148,567

Public Transport: Donaghadee and Millisle

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the steps that his Department and Translink are taking to increase the use of public transport in (i) Donaghadee; and (ii) Millisle.

(AQW 25330/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following liaison with my officials, Translink has advised that Donaghadee and Millisle are included in the promotional and advertising campaigns covering all areas where Ulsterbus services are operated. It has further advised it has recently concluded a campaign to encourage use of bus services for the summer / tourism season, including special fares and tickets. They will now commence a further campaign to promote the use of bus services to those travelling to college and also to promote the uptake of the yLink youth card.

Railway Halts: Parking

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the railway halts where an increase in parking provision is has been identified; and the plans that are in place to address this.

(AQW 25353/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink is currently considering Park & Ride schemes for the following railway stations and halts (in no particular order).

- Ballymoney
- Dunmurry
- Cullybackey
- Moira
- Whiteabbey
- Finaghy
- Carnalea
- Holywood
- Whitehead
- Ballycarry
- Londonderry
- Ballymartin
- Portadown
- Lurgan

All are at different stages and some may not proceed due to issues with Planning, land acquisition, economic appraisal, operational requirements or funding.

As you may be aware, following a Strategic Review of Park & Ride in 2011, my Department established a Park & Ride Programme Board which is responsible for co-ordinating and prioritising the implementation of Park & Ride and Park & Share projects in line with the Department's strategy.

The Programme Board has produced a 'Park & Ride Strategic Delivery Programme 2013-15' which is a prioritised schedule of new Park & Ride projects in the next 2 years with clearly defined responsibilities for funding, implementation, maintenance and operation. This Programme plans to create at least an additional 1,000 Park & Ride and Park & Share spaces across Northern Ireland in the next 2 years. The Programme is available on my Department's website at: www.drdni.gov.uk/index/publications/publications-details.htm?docid=8996

Funding has been set aside for Park & Ride in my Department's budget. However, the implementation of Park & Ride schemes will take place in a constrained budgetary context.

The Programme contains a number of projects for the development of Park & Ride facilities associated with the railway network.

Speed Limits

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what legislation permits the designation of speed limits on roads of less than 30mph.

(AQW 25360/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Most road traffic law pertaining to speed limits is contained in The Road Traffic Regulation (Northern Ireland) Order 1997. Other relevant legislation includes the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 and the Motor Vehicles (Speed Limits) Regulations (NI) 1989.

All speed limits, other than those on restricted roads, are made by order under Article 38 of the Road Traffic Regulation (Northern Ireland) Order 1997. This is applicable to all speed limits under 30 mph.

Sewerage: Millisle

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the new sewerage system in Millisle.

(AQW 25364/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it is investing £2.3 million in a project to upgrade the sewerage system in Millisle in order to comply with European Union bathing water standards and to reduce the risk of out of sewer flooding. The project is progressing well and is presently at design stage. Completion of the overall project will involve the replacement of the existing Shore Road Wastewater Pumping Station by a new pumping station constructed on land adjacent to the car park beside Millisle Presbyterian Church. It will also involve the construction of a new wastewater pumping sewer, a new marine emergency overflow and some other associated pipe laying work.

Subject to NIW obtaining all necessary statutory approvals and the satisfactory completion of all necessary lands and procurement procedures, it is envisaged that construction work will commence in Spring 2014 and finish in Spring 2015.

Highway Code

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of whether the Highway Code is adequately providing for cyclists and other road users.

(AQW 25390/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Statutory responsibility for the Highway Code in Northern Ireland rests with the Department of the Environment (Article 51 of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1995).

Public Transport: Derry and Belfast

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development when an hourly public transport service between Derry and Belfast will be introduced.

(AQW 25417/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Bus services between Belfast and Londonderry currently operate on a 10-minute basis during peak hours, and every 30 minutes in the off-peak.

NI Railways currently operates 9 services daily each way between Londonderry and Belfast, resulting in a 2-hour frequency service. An hourly frequency operates all day between Coleraine and Belfast.

The introduction of an hourly rail service between Belfast and Londonderry cannot be achieved until Phase 2 of the Coleraine to Londonderry renewal project is complete. At this time the predicted completion date of the work is late 2016.

Railway Network: Portadown and Dungannon

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development for a breakdown of the £187m cost of extending the railway line from Portadown to Dungannon.

(AQW 25418/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The estimate of £187m quoted in the consultation paper on Future Railway Investment to extend the railway from Portadown to Dungannon was an indicative figure based on an industry average of £11 million to lay a mile of new single track line, inclusive of associated infrastructure costs, multiplied by the distance of new track required, which in this case is estimated to be 17 miles.

A detailed feasibility study of any planned railway extension would be necessary in order provide a more precise breakdown of the likely costs involved.

Comber and Donaghadee Bus Stations

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the cost of retaining Comber Bus Station since its closure; and (ii) the actions that are being taken to dispose of Comber and Donaghadee Bus Stations.

(AQW 25421/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink advise that no expenditure has been outlaid in relation to the facility at Comber since it was vacated by Ulsterbus.

Comber station was immediately put through the process whereby surplus property is initially offered to other parts of the public sector (this is known as the D1 process and is facilitated by Land and Property Services). A local Housing Association expressed an interest in purchasing it. The Housing Association has made an offer and a meeting is scheduled with Translink's Estates Department to progress potential disposal of the site.

Donaghadee Bus Station will be offered to the public sector through the D1 process. If the property is not purchased through the D1 process it will then be placed on the open market for sale through an agent.

Wi-Fi: Bus and Train Stations

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he would consider making WiFi available in waiting areas at major bus and train stations.

(AQW 25540/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Wi-Fi is currently available at Central Station but is not free; it is a commercial service provided by BT Openzone.

Translink has looked at providing free Wi-Fi in key locations but this is not being progressed at present, mainly on the basis of cost and the fact that most passengers spend only a short period waiting for its services.

Railway Network Extension

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department plans to extend the rail network.

(AQW 25604/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There has been a wide ranging response to the recent public consultation on Future Railway Investment with a variety of preferences for prioritisation of different railway investment options including those in support of extensions to the rail network.

The Department is continuing to analyse all of the information gathered as a result of the consultation alongside the on-going wider analysis of future investment in transportation infrastructure. The outcome will lead to a prioritisation framework for all future transportation investment. I expect to publish a report on the railways analysis later in the autumn.

While I am increasingly minded that we should explore the potential for extensions to the existing network at some future point, the ability to invest in the railway and indeed, in our wider transport infrastructure, will be very much dependent upon what the Executive can provide in future budget allocations

Rate Relief Scheme

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in receipt of (i) Disability Living Allowance; (ii) Housing Benefit; and (iii) Employment and Support Allowance were registered on the Rates Relief Scheme in the 2012/13 financial year. (AQW 25249/11-15)

Neither my Department nor the Housing Executive holds the information requested at Part (iii).

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

(AQW 25265/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The cost to the Appeal Service (TAS) to provide interpreters at benefit appeal tribunals in each of the last twelve months is detailed in the table below.

Month	Total Cost

Social Housing: Protection of Tenancies

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, given his Department's role as the social housing regulator, how the Department ensures the protection of secure tenancies in the context of a proposed merger of housing associations; and whether the requirement for a ballot of tenants would assist in the protection of these tenancies.

(AQW 25274/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Department will only approve the merger of a Registered Housing Association another Registered Housing Association. The tenancies of Housing Association tenants involved in any such merger are therefore fully protected because they remain within the same regulatory framework. A ballot of tenants would not provide any additional protection.

Social Housing: Protection of Tenancies

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the conflict of interest that exists in his Department being the promoter of housing association mergers and the protector of secure tenancies.

(AQW 25275/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There is no question of a conflict of interest. The Department does not promote mergers. However it has been and will continue to be fully supportive of associations which wish to merge. On the issue of secure tenancies when a merger between Registered Housing Association occurs, the housing stock always remains under the control of a Registered Housing Association therefore the security of tenancy for the tenants is fully protected

Housing Executive: Director of Transformation

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development (i) to detail the recruitment arrangements for the appointment of a Director of Transformation in the Northern Ireland Housing Executive; (ii) why the Strategic Investment Board was involved in the recruitment; and (iii) what is the total cost of the financial package awarded to the appointee.

(AQW 25316/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) The post of Director of Transformation was filled through an open competition managed by the Strategic Investment Board (SIB). At interview each candidate was assessed against the competency requirements set out in the application pack. These competencies were determined by the requirements of the post.
- (ii) NIHE identified the need for a specialist post to support them in organisational change to improve service delivery and in preparation for the impacts of the Social Housing Reform Programme. NIHE sought the assistance of SIB in the sourcing of this resource.

- (iii) The package being offered to the successful candidate is an annual salary of £142k with reimbursement of annual travel and local accommodation costs up to £15k.

Housing Associations: Mergers

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what provisions or guidance exist in relation to ballots of Housing Association tenants in the event of proposed mergers or take-overs; and what plans he has to provide for same, as exists elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

(AQW 25317/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There is no provision for Tenant ballots in respect of proposed mergers between registered Housing Associations although tenant consultation must take place. This is the position in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The position is different in Scotland where tenant ballots are required. I do not anticipate a need to change the position in Northern Ireland at present.

Housing Executive: Insulation

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what type of insulation is used in properties owned by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

(AQW 25335/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that they generally have used blown fibre and polystyrene beads which are bonded together with an adhesive as the means of cavity wall insulation in their dwellings.

They also provide roof space insulation as part of the heating installation programme and External Cyclic Maintenance (where Heating upgrades are not planned). The specification for roof insulation is regularly reviewed, with the latest specification being in use since September 2012. In the main, mineral wool insulation is used; however there are cases where Phenolic foam insulation is acceptable (areas of sloping roof of a room within a roof and roof space trap doors etc.). The aim is to improve the thermal comfort of their homes by bringing their roof space insulation up to 300mm.

Programme for Government Commitments

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the progress made on each of his Department's Programme for Government commitments.

(AQW 25351/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is responsible for six of the Programme for Government commitments. The commitments on Social and affordable housing, fuel poverty and Public Realm are on target for achievement. Slippage in the Double Glazing Programme should be retrievable within the overall Programme for Government period. A Community Asset Transfer policy framework will be submitted to the Executive in the autumn following public consultation. Work is also currently underway to explore the reform of social housing structures, with engagement occurring with key stakeholders. However, it is unlikely that the new structures will be fully implemented by 2015.

Small Pockets of Deprivation: Rathgill Estate, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much Small Pockets of Deprivation funding has been made available the Rathgill estate, Bangor, over the last five years.

(AQW 25369/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department has provided £304,093.00 of Small Pockets of Deprivation funding to Rathgill Estate over the last five years.

Small Pockets of Deprivation

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on Small Pockets of Deprivation in each year since its inception.

(AQW 25411/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department has provided the following levels of Small Pockets of Deprivation funding:

2007/2008	£539,298
2008/2009	£739,429
2009/2010	£454,948
2010/2011	£415,740
2011/2012	£414,920
2012/2013	£450,003

Small Pockets of Deprivation

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to list the areas currently receiving Small Pockets of Deprivation funding. (AQW 25416/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is currently providing Small Pockets of Deprivation funding for: Rathgill & Harbour, Bangor; Bawnmore, Newtownabbey; Benmore & White City, Belfast; Castle, Carnary & Glebeside, Ballymoney; Gortalee, Greenisland & Sunnylands, Carrickfergus; Tullgarley & Dixon Park, Larne; Bowtown, Glen Ward & West Winds, Newtownards; Strathfoyle, Londonderry.

Facing the Future: Housing Strategy for Northern Ireland

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to the Topical Question I asked on 9 September 2013, to detail which four areas he visited. (AQW 25481/11-15)

Mr McCausland: On 7th August I visited Belfast's Lower Oldpark/Hillview, Tiger's Bay/Mountcollyer, Divis/Albert Street and Doury Road in Ballymena. These areas were brought to my attention by elected and community representatives who felt they demonstrate the characteristics of areas suitable for Housing Led Regeneration as set out in the Housing Strategy for NI.

Areas at Risk Funding

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to list the areas currently receiving Areas at Risk funding. (AQW 25500/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The following Areas are currently receiving Areas at Risk Funding: Old Warren and Hillhall in Lisburn, Ballybeen and Annadale in Belfast, Ferris Park in Larne, Crossmaglen, Beechfield in Donaghadee, Scrabo in Newtownards and Gilford in Banbridge.

Village Regeneration Scheme, South Belfast

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development (i) how many houses have been rebuilt as part of the Village Regeneration Scheme in South Belfast; (ii) how many are yet to be rebuilt; (iii) whether the scheme has been scaled back in regard to rebuilding plans; and (iv) if so, why this is the case. (AQW 25598/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Regeneration plans for the Village area were approved in 2008 to include:

- The demolition of 539 dwellings; and
- The construction of 273 dwellings on a mixed tenure basis over a ten year period.

To date 87 new social dwellings are complete or nearing completion. A further 9 properties are currently being rehabilitated for future social housing. In addition a further 53 social dwellings have been completed at two adjacent overspill sites at Roden Street and Richview Court.

A further phase of social housing comprising 27 dwellings has been submitted for planning approval and is expected to start in early 2014. This planning application also seeks approval for the creation of a dedicated area of public open space which is a Planning Service requirement for the area. A further scheme to rehabilitate 13 more properties for social housing is also due to start in early 2014.

There has been no scaling back in relation to rebuilding plans.

Housing Executive Stock Transfer: Bloomfield, Bangor

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what were the results of the residents' ballot on the proposed stock transfer of the bungalows in Bloomfield, Bangor. (AQW 25625/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Over the period 17th May 2013 to 02nd August 2013 the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE) commissioned a formal tenant consultation exercise on the Bloomfield Bungalows Stock Transfer proposal for the transfer of 72 NIHE properties in Bloomfield estate in Bangor to Oaklee Housing Association.

Allowing for void properties and joint tenancies there were 71 ballot papers issued. These were posted to the tenants on 04th July 2013 and were to be returned by 02nd August 2013. A number of home visits were carried out by Holywell Consultancy, on behalf of the NIHE, to follow up on non response before the return deadline.

The Ballot Report was submitted to the NIHE on 05th August 2013 and the result of the ballot was as follows:

Ballot papers returned	63
Ballot response at home visit	1

---

In favour of the transfer proposal	62
Not in favour of the transfer proposal	2
Ballot papers returned after the deadline	2
No response	5

In summary 90% (64 out of 71) of tenants responded in the ballot. As noted on the Offer document the outcome of the Tenant ballot is determined by a majority of those who returned their ballot papers. Therefore a majority of 96.7% (62 out of 64 responses), were in favour of the transfer proposal (although not counted, the 2 late ballot papers were also in favour of the proposal).

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Single Identity Groups

Mr I McCrea asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how much funding has been allocated to single identity groups in each of the last five years, broken down by (i) group; and (ii) constituency.
(AQW 19282/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): We do not hold this information.

Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will review their various strategies under Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act to ensure they are unified, coherent and up-to-date.
(AQW 19524/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are committed to the fulfilment of our Section 75 obligations in all aspects of our work. We view the requirement to have due regard for the need to promote equality of opportunity and to promote good relations as important objectives of all our policies.

As we continue to develop and review our policies and strategies, we ensure all are unified, coherent and up-to-date.

UK Passports

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will make representations to the Government regarding the thousands of Northern Ireland residents who were born in the Irish Republic, but have lived in Northern Ireland for decades and are unable to obtain a United Kingdom passport.
(AQW 19730/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We will write to the UK Government and make representations on this issue.

Delivering Social Change

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Delivering Social Change signature projects.
(AQW 21225/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Work on the implementation of the six initial Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes is ongoing and close discussions between our officials and lead departments continue in order to ensure effective delivery at the earliest opportunity.

The Department of Education has recently undertaken the recruitment process for the teachers under the numeracy and literacy project. These teachers will be in place for the beginning of the new school year.

The Department for Employment and Learning is leading on the 'Pathways to Employment for Young People' Signature Programme. A 26-week pilot of the Community Family Support programme commenced in January 2013 which is designed to focus on the needs of 44 disadvantaged families in the targeted areas of Belfast (West and East), Strabane, Cookstown and Newtownabbey. All 5 Family Liaison Officers have been recruited to support the families and they are currently working with mainstream provision to deliver the pilot. This pilot will be scaled up and rolled out as a Signature Programme to areas of greatest need where the levels of young people who are Not in Education, Employment or Training (NEETs) are highest. The intention is to replicate the model and help support over 720 families.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has lead responsibility for the 'Direct Family Support' and 'Support for Parents' Signature Programmes. Significant progress has been made by the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency on both programmes since the launch. As part of the Family Support Hub programme, the development infrastructure has been put in place. In the Northern Trust area, an additional Hub is coming “on-line” and Northern hubs will all be in place by the end of September.

In the Belfast Trust, work has begun to identify potential locations for four initial Hubs. The exact locations will be decided in September 2013.

In line with the Outcomes Groups’ priorities to enhance the existing early intervention services, the planning for additional investment in early intervention services to support Hub work has been completed and has begun to move to the procurement stage. The Belfast Outcomes Group has completed this work and the Southern Outcomes Group will be moving to procurement in September.

In addition, an evaluation system for Hubs has been introduced across all existing Hubs and data capture will start across all Hubs for monitoring and evaluation purposes.

Under the Support for Parents programme, a suite of parenting support programmes to be delivered has been developed from the Public Health Agency’s ongoing engagement with stakeholders through the Child Development Programme Board and the Children and Young People’s Strategic Partnership. The programmes focus on parenting programmes for the vulnerable groups.

The Department for Social Development and the Department of Education are working collaboratively to deliver 20 new Nurture Units under the ‘Early Intervention for Vulnerable Children’ Signature Programme. Twenty schools were invited to participate in an awareness session on 10 April 2013. Plans have been developed with the aim of having all Nurture Units in place by the start of the 2013/2014 academic year.

Finally, the Department for Social Development is also working in partnership with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to bring forward proposals to establish up to 11 Social Enterprise Incubation Hubs under the ‘Accelerating Social Enterprise’ Signature Programme. The Hubs will be established in currently vacant commercial premises and will offer a range of business advice and practical support to social enterprise entrepreneurs including facilities from which their businesses can operate on a ‘test-trading’ basis.

Victims and Survivors Groups

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) how much McClure Watters was paid for the 2010 Audit of Victims and Survivors Groups; (ii) whether this was paid from core victims funding; and (iii) if not, what was the source of the payment.

(AQW 23258/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: FGS McClure Watters were appointed following a tender process to carry out an audit of a number of victims groups focusing on controls and governance. The audit was funded by our Department and the company paid £110, 000. This did not come from core victims funds.

City of Culture 2013: Dermot McLaughlin

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why the position of Project Director with the UK City of Culture was filled by secondment by the Strategic Investment Board in March 2013 from Temple Bar Cultural Trust, given that the latter organisation is under investigation for financial irregularities; and what due diligence was completed before this appointment was approved as a Single Tender Action.

(AQW 23403/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The report of the investigation referred to has not been formally published and is a matter for the Temple Bar Cultural Trust and Dublin City Council. It is understood that a report was due to be presented to Dublin City Council in March 2013 so it could not have been considered at the time of Mr McLaughlin’s appointment, nor would it have been appropriate prior to the final report being completed to draw any conclusions from allegations which may have been made.

In relation to the Single Tender Action, OFMDFM carried out appropriate consideration of the business case in relation to need, value for money and reason for the recommended appointment route and concluded that these had been demonstrated. OFMDFM was not involved in the appointment process.

Delivering Social Change

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister who undertook the assessments of the cost effectiveness of the Delivering Social Change signature projects; and whether their Department had any role in the evaluation.

(AQW 23429/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Through the workings of the Delivering Social Change Ministerial Sub-Committees and Programme Board we are continuing to regularly monitor progress with regard to programme implementation and budget spend, and will continue to do so post implementation.

The cost effectiveness of each of the programmes will be a key consideration, for the lead departments, within both the initial approval and evaluation processes.

Victims and Survivors Service

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister which agencies are conducting psychological assessments for the Victims and Survivors Service; and when and how these contracts were awarded.

(AQW 25011/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The table below shows the agencies/organisations which conduct psychological assessments for the Victims and Survivors Service (VSS), the individuals conducting the assessments and details of the contracts awarded. ## Ilex: Matt McNulty

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what role (i) their Department; and (ii) the Strategic Investment Board had in the appointment of Mr Matt McNulty as Acting Chair of ILEX.

(AQW 25191/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Sir Roy McNulty resigned from the Ilex Board in February 2012. Subsequent to his departure, Sir Roy, with the Ilex Board's support, recommended the appointment of Matt McNulty as interim Chair. Departmental officials supported this recommendation and Mr McNulty accepted the position as interim Chair in March 2012.

The Strategic Investment Board had no role in the appointment of Matt McNulty as Acting Chair of Ilex.

City of Culture 2013: Dermot McLaughlin

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why the appointment of Mr Dermot McLaughlin as Project Director of UK City of Culture 2013 was approved as a single tender action; and what financial package was approved.

(AQW 25194/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department approved the business case for the process to make a direct appointment as there was an urgent need to recruit a Project Director to enable key aspects of the City of Culture programme to be delivered in the required timescale.

The recruitment process and financial package were a matter for SIB and did not involve OFMDFM.

Social Investment Fund

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many applications to the Social Investment Fund have been (i) made for each designated area; (ii) assessed; and how many successful applicants have been notified.

(AQW 25601/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Strategic area plans were received by the Department on 28 February 2013. Each zone has submitted economic appraisals for up to ten projects within their area plans. These are currently being considered as part of a comprehensive appraisal process. As the process remains ongoing, no zones have been notified of the final outcome.

Child Rights Indicator Framework

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the Child Rights Indicator Framework will monitor departmental progress on the Children and Young People's Strategy.

(AQW 25640/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Child Rights Indicator Framework will incorporate the majority of indicators which are currently used to monitor progress on the Children and Young People Strategy and will therefore provide an evidence base for reporting not just on compliance with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) but also on delivery of the Strategy. This reflects the central role of the Strategy in co-ordinating and driving forward the work of the Executive on the delivery of children's rights and wellbeing.

Victims and Survivors Service

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what analysis of need is conducted by the Victims and Survivor Service when a group applies for funding; and how this analysis is conducted.

(AQW 25659/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Comprehensive Needs Analysis produced by the Commission for Victims and Survivors categorises seven areas of need which are reflected in the Victims Support Programme. Groups submitting applications to the Programme are required to provide an analysis of the needs that exist within their client base and the services and support they propose to offer to meet those needs.

The independent panel, set up by the Service, then assesses the extent to which the group has objectively provided evidence of need and the adequacy and quality of the proposed services.

Two panels were established by the Service to assess applications for funding: an Independent Grant Funding Panel and an Independent Grant Funding Appeals Panel. The overall objective of the panels is to ensure a fair, objective and impartial mechanism for funding applications to be considered.

Through monitoring and evaluation returns provided by funded groups and the individual needs reviews conducted by the Service's assessors, a more comprehensive picture of needs across the victims sector is being developed. The analysis of this information will ensure the future revision of services is better targeted to where they are required.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on how her Department is controlling the risk of badgers spreading Bovine Tuberculosis to cattle.

(AQW 25552/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): My Department provides generic TB disease control advice for all herdkeepers and provides specific advice to those who have a TB herd breakdown. The "Biosecurity Code for NI Farms" includes advice about reducing the risk that is posed by wildlife. The publication "TB in your Herd", which is issued to all herdkeepers who have a TB herd breakdown, also includes specific advice in relation to mitigating the risk of badgers spreading bovine Tuberculosis to cattle. We have also recently, with input from stakeholders, produced easy to understand leaflets entitled "Biosecurity Measures which help protect your herd against TB" and "Wildlife Biosecurity". These publications are available on the recently refreshed DARD website.

In addition, DARD Veterinary Officers and Animal Health and Welfare Inspectors give on-farm advice to farmers in relation to specific biosecurity issues relevant to their farm business.

I have asked my officials to develop a "test and vaccinate or remove (TVR)" wildlife intervention research. The aim of this wildlife intervention research will be to test the effectiveness of this approach on the level of TB in badgers and in cattle in the north of Ireland. It is envisaged that badgers in the study area will be tested and the test negative badgers will be vaccinated and released. Only test positive badgers will be removed.

The TVR study design is complex and there are number of preparatory phases that must be completed before the main elements of this TVR research can get underway. However, I am pleased to say that substantial preparatory work has already been undertaken. Computer modelling to help us design the TVR study has been completed. We have made good progress with badger sett surveying in two 100km<sup>2</sup> areas in Co. Down. Some 75% of the Banbridge / Rathfriland area and 61% of the area near Castlewellan have already been surveyed. We will soon invite other landowners to participate and surveying the remainder of these areas will commence again in coming weeks. We are also planning to soon commence a badger ecology study to gather baseline monitoring data on badger movements in these areas.

I also propose to consult on changing secondary legislation to allow trained and licensed lay persons to vaccinate badgers for TB. This would allow, for example, environmental organisations or interested farmers to vaccinate badgers on their own land.

I recently announced that I propose to establish a government / industry Strategic Partnership Group to develop a long term strategy to eradicate TB from the cattle population here. This new Strategic Partnership Group will be all embracing and will be asked to address all the issues including biosecurity and the wildlife factor.

I am also considering what support could be provided through the next Rural Development Programme, for example training for herdkeepers on biosecurity and if any capital funding could be made available to help herdkeepers ensure that badgers do not have access to their farmyards, housed cattle or animal feed stores.

Ploughing Championships

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the monetary value of the support that her Department is providing to The Ploughing Competition in (i) the Republic of Ireland; and (ii) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 25632/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is providing sponsorship support to the NI Ploughing Association through sponsorship to the value of £230 for the 2013 NI Ploughing Championships.

No sponsorship support is provided to the National Ploughing Championships.

Single Payment Scheme

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what input and contribution she made to the discussions and agreement in Brussels during the week commencing 9 September 2013, which allow for an advance 50 percent contribution to be made under the 2013 Single Payment Scheme.

(AQW 25736/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: On 11 September, the Commission's Management Committee for Direct Payments agreed to allow any Member State that was in a position to do so to make up to 50% advance payments from 16 October 2013.

This was as a result of a number of Member States having made requests for derogations to make advance payments as required under the existing EU legislation. The meeting was not attended by Ministers. I understand that some Member States including south of Ireland, France, Italy, Czech Republic, Hungary and Greece made this type of request. Decisions in regard to advance payments are relevant to Paying Agencies or Member States that consider that they are in a position to make advance payments. DARD is not currently in that position, but the work necessary to change that must be carried out here and not in Brussels.

Farm Business ID Numbers

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of Farm Business ID numbers (i) applied for; and (ii) granted by her Department, in each of the last twelve months, broken down by county.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Milk Cup Funding

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she is considering allocating additional funding to the Milk Cup in order to support its ongoing development.

(AQW 24425/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Primary responsibility for providing support and funding to events, including sporting events such as the Milk Cup, transferred in 2010 to the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI).

However, in order to support the ongoing development of the Milk Cup, £10,000 was allocated from my Department through the June Monitoring Round.

In addition, my Department has approved a one year pilot Sports Events Funding Programme, which has just recently been launched by Sport NI, and to which the Milk Cup may be eligible to apply.

Belfast Mela

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail how much the Arts Council has awarded the Belfast Mela, in each of the last seven years.

(AQW 24719/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Arts Ekta received funding for the Belfast Mela from 2009/2010 through the Arts Council's lottery funded small grants programme. Funding details are listed in the table below:-

Finance Year	Grant Amount
2011-2012	£2,830.00
2010-2011	£7,200.00
2009-2010	£5,000.00

Netting of Salmon off the Coast

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 22086/11-15, whether the fishermen who did not receive licences for the 2013 season refused to provide written undertakings not to fish.

(AQW 24854/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The coastal salmon netmen who have not received licences for the 2013 season did not apply for licences from the Department. Therefore the provision of an undertaking not to fish is not relevant.

Salmon and Inland Fisheries Forum

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 23598/11-15, when she will recruit for the two vacant positions; and if the positions are specifically representative of any group or body.

(AQW 24856/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The two vacant positions on the Salmon and Inland Fisheries Forum are for representatives of Lough Erne commercial fishermen and fish dealers.

Both of these groups are licensed by the Department and officials have written to licence holders seeking applications for the posts. To date there have been no applications received from these groups.

The Department will continue to seek applications from the two groups.

Branded Apparel for Non-front Line Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much her Department has spent on branded apparel for non-frontline staff, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 24879/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Department incurred no expenditure on branded apparel for non-frontline staff in this period.

Pleasure Grounds: North Down

Ms Cochrane asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQO 4337/11-15, when her Department received the new draft Pleasure Ground Bye-Law proposals for the North Down Borough Council area; and for her assessment of the proposals.

(AQW 24890/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department received the new draft Pleasure Ground Bye-Law proposals for the North Down Council area on 13 February 2013. Departmental officials subsequently sought legal advice on technical issues related to the bye-law proposals. Having given due consideration to the proposal and the legal advice received, my Department has now confirmed approval of the bye-laws to the Department of the Environment.

Netting Licences

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of netting licences that have been granted for Lough Neagh in the last twelve months.

(AQW 24917/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The open seasons for different species of fish vary throughout the calendar year, therefore the table below relates to 2012, the last year for which records are complete.

Licence type	Number of licenses issued
Eel Draft net	45
Draft net for the capture of salmon and fresh water fish	21
Single wall set net or trammel net (Trout)	63
Single wall set net or trammel net (Coarse)	125
Bait nets (only for use with eel long lines)	69

Sport Northern Ireland: Vacancies at Board Level

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list the members of the Board of Sport NI; and how many vacant places there are on the Board.

(AQW 25053/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The members of the Board of Sport NI are as follows:

- |                                    |                    |

| ■ Gerard Campbell                  | ■ Shane McCullough |
| ■ Paul Cummings                    | ■ Danny O'Connor   |
| ■ Brian Delaney                    | ■ John O'Neill     |

There are currently five vacant places on the Board, including the position of Vice-Chair.

Fisheries Staff: Suspension

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the number of fisheries employees that are (a) suspended; and (b) how long they have been suspended; and (ii) the terms and conditions that relate to their suspension.

(AQW 25089/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am unable to supply the information requested as this could lead to the possible identification of individual(s) concerned and would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Angling: Alcohol

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action is being taken to make drinking alcohol an offence at fishing loughs that are maintained by her Department, in the interests of public safety and to ensure these areas remain family-orientated and free of anti-social behaviour.

(AQW 25155/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has had very few reports or complaints involving the consumption of alcohol at DCAL Public Angling Estate waters.

DCAL does not have any powers to regulate the consumption of alcohol at these locations, but should evidence emerge of alcohol related issues at PAE waters my Department will consider appropriate action.

Netting of Salmon off the Coast

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 24526/11-15, in which she states “the other netsmen who held licences in 2012 have not received compensation to date” whether they have or will receive compensation from 28 August 2013.

(AQW 25163/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: No compensation has been paid to date to the other netsmen.

The Department has written to each of the netsmen who did not apply for licences in 2013 on this issue, but to date no agreement has been reached.

Fish Kill at Portavoe Reservoir

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the reasons for the recent fish kill at Portavoe Reservoir. (AQW 25167/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) has confirmed that water samples taken from Portavoe show no evidence of pollution. There are no health concerns about anglers taking fish at Portavoe.

It is likely that a combination of high temperatures and excessive weed growth have depleted dissolved oxygen levels. The Department is using a weed cutter at Portavoe to reduce the weed cover which will contribute to improving oxygen levels.

Fish are sensitive to Dissolved Oxygen levels in the water and the NIEA staff have taken a number of samples from the reservoir. Dissolved Oxygen levels recorded during the daytime were deemed adequate to sustain fish life, however it is at night that the dissolved oxygen levels will be at their lowest. The NIEA subsequently positioned a water monitoring buoy in the centre of the reservoir to record Dissolved Oxygen levels over a number of days and information received has indicated that the lake is prone to periods of low oxygen levels. As such DCAL is currently reviewing its stocking protocols for Portavoe.

Any fish stressed by the depleted dissolved oxygen level would be more vulnerable to lice and fungal infections and it is likely that the conditions were more suitable for the infections to take hold.

Illegal Netting: Lough Neagh

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many illegal nets have been seized in Lough Neagh in the last three years, broken down by quarter; and how many prosecutions have resulted from these breaches.

(AQW 25246/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Number of nets seized on Lough Neagh:

Year	March/May	June/August	Sept/Nov	Dec/Jan
09/10	2	1	6	9
10/11	2	7	12	17
11/12	5	8	2	1
12/13	3	4

Prosecutions resulting from these seizures:

Year	March/May	June/August	Sept/Nov	Dec/Jan
09/10	0	0	0	1
10/11	1	0	0	0
11/12	0	1	0	0
12/13	1

Staff: Recruitment Agencies

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in (i) her Department; and (ii) arms-length bodies, as of 1 April (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013.

(AQW 25309/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Under the terms of the NICS Framework Agreement for the Provision of Temporary workers, DCAL has engaged with recruitment agencies to secure temporary workers to cover various posts over the last three years.

The table below details the number of people employed by recruitment agencies in both DCAL and its Arms Length Bodies (ALBs).

Source	1 April 2011	1 April 2012	1 April 2013
DCAL	2	3	12
ALBs	60	78	95
Total	62	81	107

World Police and Fire Games 2013: Northern Ireland Flag

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why Team Northern Ireland were not represented by a flag at the World Police and Fire Games 2013.

(AQW 25445/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Country flags were displayed at the Opening Ceremony of the 2013 World Police and Fire Games. During the athletes parade a team of volunteers entered the arena carrying country flags for all countries represented at the Games. The country flags were then displayed near the stage for the remainder of the Opening Ceremony.

Sports Stadiums

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if the funding allocated to Regional Sports stadia has been ring-fenced.

(AQW 25447/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: A funding package totalling £110m (including Optimism Bias) for the Regional Stadium Development was endorsed by the Executive as a priority area of spend in this current CSR period.

Sports Stadiums: Windsor Park

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what impact the delay in progressing the Windsor Park development is having on the work programme and funding for the Regional Sports Stadia.

(AQW 25448/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Windsor Park development is currently on programme for full commitment of the public sector spend within the current CSR period, provided that significant delays around any legal challenges are avoided and IFA provide assurance to DCAL that appropriate governance and accountability structures are in place.

Deprivation and Participation in Physical Activity

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she plans to investigate the link between deprivation and low adult participation in physical activity; and if the targeting of legacy funding can be directed towards sporting facilities in deprived areas.

(AQW 25670/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Extensive research continues to be carried out by my Department to investigate the link between deprivation and low adult participation in physical activity. In addition to the annual analysis of the Continuous Household Survey – which assesses the experience of sport and physical activity by adults across the north of Ireland, including in deprived areas - my Department has just recently published research into “The Impact of Poverty on Engagement in Sport in NI”. These findings can be accessed via the DCAL website at www.dcalni.gov.uk/index/quick-links/research\_and\_statistics-3.htm.

All Departmental funding provision will be considered in line with DCAL's priorities of promoting equality and tackling poverty and social exclusion; and in the context of DCAL's strategy for sport, ‘Sport Matters’.

Department of Education

Classroom Assistants: Job Evaluation

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many evaluations of classroom assistants posts have yet to be completed in each Education and Library Board area.

(AQW 25504/11-15)

Mr O’Dowd (The Minister of Education): The information requested has been provided by Education and Library Boards and is set out in the table below. The figures relate to only those classroom assistants who have signed up to have their post evaluated and for whom the process is not yet complete:

BELB	62
WELB	90

NEELB	29
SEELB	201
SELB	239
Total	621

Classroom Assistants: Job Evaluation

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many appeals have been lodged by classroom assistants over the outcome of the job evaluation process, broken down by Education and Library Board.

(AQW 25505/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There is no appeal process attached to job evaluation for Classroom Assistants as generic job descriptions were agreed by the Employers and Trade Unions in advance of evaluation. However, the following number of Classroom Assistants have signified their disagreement with their allocation of a job description and the associated grade.

BELB	47
WELB	19
NEELB	29
SEELB	16
SELB	69
Total	180

Classroom Assistants: Job Evaluation

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what is the average length of time taken to complete the appeal process for a classroom assistant job evaluation.

(AQW 25507/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There is no appeal process attached to the job evaluation for Classroom Assistants as generic job descriptions were agreed by the Employers and Trade Unions in advance of evaluation. What is being considered at the moment is an Assessment and Review Process for those Classroom Assistants, who are dissatisfied with the job description and associated grade that they have been allocated. The Employers are still in discussions with the Trade Unions on this matter and have not agreed an appropriate review process to date.

Admissions Criteria

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education when he will publish the outcome of his Department's review of the current advice and guidance on admissions criteria.

(AQW 25508/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Working in close collaboration with the 5 Education and Library Boards, my Department has conducted a series of workshops during September 2013 for representatives of primary schools and their Boards of Governors to provide advice on best practice when formulating their admissions criteria for the 2014/15 school year.

This training was scheduled to assist schools in reviewing the criteria they wish to be included in booklets for parents, which will be published by the ELBs before the end of November. All primary schools were invited to attend. School feedback on the events was positive and attendance of oversubscribed primary schools was good.

The guidance given to primary schools at the workshops, and the training materials, will be published on the Department's website and a link sent to all primary schools by the end of September.

Based on attendee feedback and issues raised during the workshops, the Department is now considering what further advice and guidance needs to issue to schools in autumn 2013 to support them for the 2014/15 admissions process and beyond.

Minor Works

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the value of minor works contracts awarded by his Department over the last twelve months, broken down by (i) Education and Library Board; and (ii) educational sector.

(AQW 25510/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The value of minor works contracts awarded by the Department of Education over the last twelve months up to 31 August 2013, broken down by (i) Education and Library Board; and (ii) educational sector is as follows:-

Sector (£000s) 1/9/12 – 31/8/13	BELB	WELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	TOTAL

Preschool Admissions Criteria

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education when he will issue revised guidance on pre-school admission criteria. (AQW 25551/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department issued a circular to all statutory pre-school providers in September 2012 advising Principals and Boards of Governors of the arrangements for the application of open enrolment procedures to admissions to nursery schools and classes in primary schools. Similar advice was also issued to voluntary/private pre-school settings participating in the Pre-School Education Programme.

My officials will be writing to all funded pre-school before the end of this month to clarify that advice and to confirm the timetable for September 2014 admissions.

Conductive Education

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education whether he has considered commissioning research into Conductive Education as a form of teaching children with disabilities and special educational needs; and if not, to outline his reasons. (AQW 25576/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have not, to date, considered commissioning research into Conductive Education as a method of teaching children with disabilities and special educational needs (SEN).

I am sure you will appreciate that due to the financial constraints under which my department, and indeed all government departments, currently operate that priority must be given to the provision of frontline services.

While Conductive Education is one option for supporting children with disabilities and SEN, the Education and Library Boards provide a wide range of educational services, based on the individual SEN of the child, and non-educational support may also be provided, including therapeutic support from medical professionals.

Free School Meals

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what research his Department has carried out into the impact of free school meals locally. (AQW 25578/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: International research and evidence demonstrate the critical influence of nutrition on cognitive development and academic performance in children and adolescents and that poor diet is detrimental to children's learning, concentration and behaviour, in addition to its wider health impacts.

Similarly, evaluations of various school food initiatives, such as the Jamie Oliver led "Feed Me Better" campaign, the free school meal pilots in England, and Kingston-upon-Hull's "Eat Well, Do Well" initiative also highlight the positive correlation between nutrition, health and educational attainment.

Whilst research at a local level has not been undertaken the findings of these research studies are directly applicable to the north of Ireland and have informed the development of my Department's approach to the provision of free school meals.

Children from families on low incomes and those living in poverty, whether they live in the north of Ireland, in Scotland, England or Wales face significant and particular barriers in accessing and benefiting from a good education. I consider that the provision of healthy free school meals is necessary to address the particular challenges that these children face in accessing and participating fully in school life, in improving their learning outcomes and ultimately lifetime opportunities.

This also contributes to the statutory target to take action to eradicate child poverty here by 2020 and to the Programme for Government Commitment to tackle disadvantage.

Consequently, I announced in June that I will extend the Working Tax Credit free school meal eligibility criterion from September 2014. This will mean that an estimated additional 15,000 pupils from low income households to benefit from free school meals as a direct result.

Children Living in Areas Affected by Conflict

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what specific support his Department offers children living in areas most affected by conflict.
(AQW 25579/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I recognise that children who live in areas affected by conflict can face particular barriers in accessing and benefitting from a sound education. Research indicates that many of the areas in the north of Ireland which are characterised by high levels of social deprivation are also areas which have been affected by conflict.

My Department is committed to ensuring that children and young people from socially deprived backgrounds, including those living in areas affected by conflict, are supported to achieve their full potential. A wide range of programmes and interventions, which are supported by substantial funding allocations, are being taken forward which directly and indirectly provide support to children who live in these areas. These include the provision of:

- an additional £9m over the period 2012-13 to 2014-15 to increase access to mainstream youth services in disadvantaged areas which gives priority to interface areas;
- a further £420k allocated by the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) in 2013/14 to youth groups to run youth intervention schemes particularly in interface areas; £750k to deliver projects to address educational underachievement in the West Belfast area;
- £376k for 2013/14 for each of the two Full Service pilot programmes at the Boys and Girls Model Schools in North Belfast and through the Full Service Community Network in Ballymurphy;
- over £15.6m funding over three years for the Delivering Social Change programme to employ additional teachers to support pupils at risk of underachievement;
- £2m funding per annum in 2013/14 and 2014/15 on a new community education initiatives programmes to address educational underachievement in socially and educationally disadvantaged communities;
- £360k funding per annum for the Achieving Belfast and Achieving Derry – Bright Futures programmes; and
- £12m in 2013/14 through the Extended Schools Programme and in each year to 31 March 2015 to enable schools serving pupils from areas of disadvantage to improve their life chances by providing additional learning opportunities.

My Department also provides financial support for the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity (CRED) policy through the ELBs and Youth Council Northern Ireland (YCNI). A minimum of 20% of this funding must be used to support meaningful interaction between young people with different social, cultural or religious backgrounds.

In addition, my Department works closely with the Department for Social Development in relation to education-related Neighbourhood Renewal Projects which target children in the most disadvantaged areas, providing additional support to address educational underachievement.

I consider that the range of Departmental interventions outlined, therefore, will continue to provide both targeted and indirect support to children at greatest risk of underachievement, including those living in areas most affected by conflict.

Western Education and Library Board: Staff

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Education how many (i) teachers; and (ii) classroom assistants in the Western Education and Library Board (i) retired; (ii) were made redundant; and (iii) have been left unemployed, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 25582/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) Since the removal of the compulsory retirement age in October 2006, employers have not recorded leavers as "retired". The table below provides the number of teachers who have opted to access their pension in the last five years. The same information is not available for classroom assistants as the employers are not the pension providers and therefore do not hold pension related details.

Academic Year	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	Total
Retired	120	99	88	111	132	550

- (ii) The number of redundancies for teachers and classroom assistants are set out in the table below. In relation to teachers, it should be noted that there is the potential for double counting of staff included in both the redundancy figures below and retirement figures quoted at (i) above. Teaching figures include staff in all grant-maintained schools and the classroom assistant figures include staff in Controlled and Maintained schools only.

Academic Year	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	Total
Redundancies:
Teachers	42	33	61	111	80	327
Classroom Assistants	17	23	23	66	41	170

(iii) Regarding the number left unemployed, the department does not hold this information.

Bangor Grammar School

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has for the Rugby pitches belonging to Bangor Grammar School at Ballymacormick, Bangor.

(AQW 25643/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The future of Bangor Grammar School's rugby pitches at Ballymacormick is a matter for the school itself. My Department does not own the property.

Child Obesity

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what strategies are being pursued through the education system to tackle child obesity.

(AQW 25688/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department recognises the detrimental impacts which being overweight or obese can have on children and young people's physical, emotional and mental health. Consequently, a range of measures are in place which will support the delivery of the targets set in the obesity prevention strategy "A Fitter Future for All" to reduce the proportion of children who are obese or overweight and obese by 2022.

The Department recognises the particular importance of a healthy, balanced diet in this regard and has proactively worked to improve the quality of food in schools here. In 2007 my Department introduced mandatory Nutritional Standards for School Meals which ensures that children receive only healthy, nutritious school meals. Nutritional Standards for Other Food and Drink provided in schools have also been introduced. I have allocated annual funding - some £4.2 million in 2013/14 - to support the implementation of the standards with part funding also provided for a regional Food in Schools Coordinator to provide specialist support in all aspects of healthy eating.

The Personal Development and Mutual Understanding (primary) and Learning for Life and Work (post-primary) Areas of Learning within the curriculum provide opportunities for pupils to learn about the importance of healthy lifestyles, including diet and physical activity. In addition, the curriculum requires all pupils to undertake Home Economics at Key Stage 3 which provides opportunities for young people to develop their understanding of a healthy diet and the hygienic and healthy use of foods in the preparation of meals.

My Department also promotes physical activity through Physical Education (PE) which is a compulsory curriculum element for all pupils through all Key Stages. Schools are encouraged to provide opportunities for pupils to take part in at least 2 hours of PE per week. I have also made £1.5 million available this year to fund the Curriculum Sports Programme in primary schools. The programme aims to develop the physical literacy skills of our youngest pupils and encourage ongoing participation in physical activity.

I intend, along with the Minister for Health, to announce the Food in Schools policy in the near future. The policy advocates a whole school approach to all food and drinks provided in schools to ensure that all children develop the knowledge and skills necessary to make healthy food choices now and in later life.

I consider that through the measures outlined my Department and the wider education system will make an important contribution to tackling childhood obesity.

Nursery School Provision: Cookstown

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 25018//11-15, whether a new provider has been engaged by the Southern Education and Library Board; and what progress has been made with the Development Proposals that are currently with his Department.

(AQW 25706/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Southern Education and Library Board has advised that the that Pre-School Education Advisory Group for the area has approved the participation of Care Bears Day Nursery in the Pre-School Education Programme for the 2013/14 academic year.

As previously advised, I will consider all Development Proposals submitted to me in light of demand for additional nursery places. To date, however, no Development Proposals have been published seeking additional nursery places in the Cookstown District Council area.

Special Educational Needs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many pupils with Special Educational Needs in the South Eastern Education and Library Board require transport to school, broken down by district.

(AQW 25718/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have been advised by the South Eastern Education and Library Board that the number of children with special educational needs who require transport to school is as set out in the table below:

District by Council Area	Number of pupils
Ards Borough Council Area	631
Castlereagh Borough Council Area	332
Down District Council Area	733
Lisburn City Council Area	902
North Down Borough Council Area	314

Schools: Starting Age

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what plans he has to allow flexibility in primary school starting age.

(AQW 25720/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I recognise that we have the youngest school starting age in Europe and following a meeting with representatives from the Association of Teachers & Lecturers and associates, I agreed to look at options for introducing a degree of flexibility around the school starting age here.

Work on identifying potential options within this area is currently ongoing and will be completed as quickly as possible.

Schools: Organ Donation

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education to detail the occasions, including the dates, that his Department has liaised with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on the incorporation of Organ Donation and Transplantation into schools criteria, as recommended in the Taking Organ Transplantation to 2020 report.

(AQW 25742/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A Department of Education official attended a meeting with a delegation of the Committee for Organ Donation and Transplantation (established by the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety) on 15 April 2013.

Following the meeting, the Department provided details for the appropriate contact from the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) to advise the Committee on the development of its educational resource for schools. The Department has also offered assistance with the dissemination of any resource developed by the Committee via the C2k service in schools. A further meeting is scheduled for 18 November 2013.

Bush Primary School, Dungannon

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education for an update on the provision of a nursery school unit at Bush Primary School, Dungannon, including the progress made to date.

(AQW 25749/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Development Proposal 293 was published by the Southern Education and Library Board on 2 September 2013. This proposes the provision of a nursery unit at Bush Primary School, Dungannon catering for 26 pupils on a part time basis with effect from 1 September 2014 or as soon as possible thereafter.

Following publication of a Development Proposal (DP) there is a statutory two month consultation period during time which anyone who wishes can forward objections or comments to the Department. At the end of this consultation period I will make a decision on the DP, taking account of all relevant issues and the comments received.

The two month consultation period for DP 293 ends on 4 November 2013.

Southern Education and Library Board: Redundancies

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, following the area plan consultation, for his assessment of the level of public funds required to meet the redundancy costs of (i) Principals; (ii) academic staff; and (iii) non-academic staff, following the decision of the Southern Education and Library Board to back Option A as the model for future provision.

(AQW 25750/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware that, following the completion of a public consultation on its post-primary area plan, the Southern Education and Library Board supported the recommendation of its advisory subcommittee for controlled schools by backing Option A.

To date, however, the Board has not yet published any Development Proposals in regard to the future provision of post primary schools in the Craigavon area.

Until formal Development Proposals have been brought forward it is not possible for me to make an assessment of the level of public funds required to meet potential redundancy costs if they arise from the SELB decision to back Option A.

Common Funding Scheme

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to publish the anticipated impact of the revised Common Funding Scheme, in terms of the increases and decreases in funding, for each individual school.

(AQW 25762/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Illustrative budgets have been prepared for all schools as part of the current consultation process on the proposed changes to the Common Funding Scheme and are available on the Department's website at <http://www.deni.gov.uk/june-2013-common-funding-scheme-consultation.htm>. Information on each school's current budget for 2013/14 can be found at <http://www.deni.gov.uk/common-funding-formula-budgets-for-schools-2013-15.htm>

School budgets for the new financial year will be published in due course. They will reflect increases in the Aggregated Schools Budget in 2014-15, factors at individual school level such as pupil enrolment numbers and Free School Meals entitlement and my final decisions on changes to the Scheme following consideration of consultation responses.

Levels of Progression

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how much has been spent on the implementation of Levels of Progression to date.

(AQW 25768/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The following figures have been provided by the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA).

To date, £1,788,373 has been spent on implementation of the Levels of Progression. The breakdown by financial year is provided below.

2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	Total
£796,297	£674,951	£317,125	£1,788,373

These figures cover the period from 1 April 2011 (initiation of pilot assessment training programme in primary schools) to 31 August 2013 (latest available figures).

Project costs included relate to additional teacher release costs and the training, support and operational costs associated with implementation.

Costs for development and trialling phases up to 31 March 2011 (i.e. prior to system implementation in schools) are not included.

Salaries of CCEA officers are not included.

Free School Meals

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the current uptake of free school meals, broken down by (i) Education and Library Board; and (ii) sector.

(AQW 25769/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The uptake of free school meals by those entitled to them is measured through the annual School Meals Census which takes place in October. The table below provides information on the proportion of pupils entitled to free school meals who took a school meal on census day 2012.

Free school meals taken as a proportion of pupils entitled to free school meals by Education and Library Board and School Management Type: 2012/13

Entitlement Source: NI School Census 2012/13

Uptake Source: NI School Meals Census 2012/13

Notes:

- 1 Figures are based on nursery schools, primary (including nursery classes, reception and years 1-7) and post primary schools. Special schools are not included.
- 2 Uptake percentages express the number of free school meals taken by pupils present in a particular category as a proportion of the number of pupils entitled to free school meals in the same category.
- 3 The school census date was 5 October 2012 while the school meals census date was 19 October 2012. The later date of the school meals census could be responsible for a slighter higher level of uptake of free school meals compared to entitlement, than if the data was collected on the same date.

Free School Meals

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the current entitlement to free school meals, broken down by (i) Education and Library Board; and (ii) sector.

(AQW 25770/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The most up-to-date figures for entitlement to free school meals relate to the 2012/13 school year and are provided in the table below. Updated 2013/14 figures will be available following completion of the annual school census which will be carried out during October.

Percentage free school meal entitlement - Nursery schools, primary and post primary - 2012/13

Levels of Progression

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what advice he has received from the Council for the Curriculum Examinations and Assessment following its consultation with teachers on the implementation of the Levels of Progression.

(AQW 25771/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I accepted advice from the Council for the Curriculum Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) on the operation of the new assessment arrangements on the basis that they would be reviewed after their first year of operation.

The Council's programme of research and evaluation took place between September 2012 and June 2013. As an important aspect of this, my Department together with CCEA conducted a review of the new arrangements consisting of 10 face-to-face workshops with school leaders.

While there were some positive aspects to take from the feedback from schools (the value of internal standardisation for example), it is clear that the feedback overall was very negative. While CCEA will publish its research findings shortly, in summary the Council reported a number of common messages, particularly during the workshops held in June. These included that:

- the submission date for levels is too early;
- timescales are too tight / unrealistic; and
- the arrangements create a heavier / unmanageable workload.

After considering this feedback and the options to address them, I have decided to move to revised arrangements that I believe will reduce the pressure on teachers and schools whilst maintaining the primary purpose of the Levels of Progression – to assist teaching and learning. I plan to make a more detailed announcement shortly and I have asked my officials to arrange a detailed update for the members of the Education Committee.

Primary Schools: Computer-based Assessments

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how much has been spent on computer based assessment in primary schools to date.

(AQW 25772/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) has provided the following figures:

Contracts were let with the suppliers (Tribal and Rising Stars) in November 2011. From this date to the end of August 2013 a total of £2,378,385<sup>5</sup> was spent on implementing the new computer-based assessment arrangements.

The breakdown of NINA/NILA costs is as follows:

Total Cost to Aug 2013	£
Supplier Costs	1,496,660
Teacher Release Costs	836,152
Implementation Costs (Venues, Print Resources)	45,573
Total	2,378,385

The Interactive Computerised Assessment System (InCAS) was the CBA tool used by schools during the period 2007-08 to 2011-12 and cost £3,425,939<sup>6</sup> to implement.

The breakdown of InCAS costs is as follows:

Total Cost	£
Software Licence Agreement (via C2K)	1,050,441
Development and Implementation Costs (CCEA)	2,375,498
Total	3,425,939

Parkhall Integrated College, Antrim

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the newbuild for Parkhall Integrated College, Antrim.
(AQW 25775/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Parkhall Integrated College is one of the 22 projects I announced to advance in planning in January 2013.

The Department is currently working with the North Eastern Education & Library Board (NEELB) to finalise the Economic Appraisal for the project. While the project is at an advanced stage in design, the NEELB has advised it will require a review to confirm compliance with current building regulations and the school building handbook. A fresh planning application will also be required for the project.

Victoria Park Primary School

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education when the capital build at Victoria Park primary school will begin.
(AQW 25840/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my statement to the Assembly on 25 June 2012 I announced a programme of 18 new build schools as part of a £173 investment in the school's estate, Victoria Park Primary School was included in that announcement.

5 This cost includes payments to suppliers and teacher release provided to schools to engage in training and excludes CCEA staffing costs.

6 This cost includes payment to supplier, teacher release, venues, printing etc. and excludes staffing costs.

My officials are working with the school authorities to bring the project forward as swiftly as possible. The Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) are currently in discussions with their strategic partner regarding the delivery of the Victoria Park project. A start date will not be available until these discussions have been completed.

Free School Meals

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to list the 15 Independent schools whose pupils will benefit from his recent announcement to extend Free School Meals provision.

(AQW 25841/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In line with child poverty considerations I consider that it is important that eligible children from low income households should receive free school meals whether they attend a grant-aided school or an independent school. Therefore, I have extended Free School Meal provision to apply also to children and young people who attend independent schools and who meet my Department's free school meal eligibility criteria.

The fifteen independent schools whose pupils may benefit from my recent announcement to extend Free School Meals provision are as follows:

- Ballymoney Independent Christian School
- Focus School, Knockloughrim Campus
- Living Rivers Christian School
- Newtownabbey Independent Christian School
- Bangor Independent Christian School
- Glenraig Curative School
- Hollywood Rudolf Steiner School
- Rockport School
- Buddy Bear Trust Conductive Education School
- Clogher Valley Independent Christian School
- Focus School, Newry Campus
- Mourne Independent Christian School
- Portadown Independent Christian School
- Gaelscoil na Deirge
- Kilskeery Independent Christian School

The Education and Library Boards are working with the independent sector to put in place the necessary arrangements to ensure this support is provided as soon as possible. My officials are working closely with the Boards to identify the number of pupils who will be eligible.

GCSE Passes: Upper Bann

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education how many young people in the Upper Bann constituency (i) achieved; and (ii) did not achieve pass grades in GCSE (a) English; and (b) Maths, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 25848/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The answer is contained in the table below.

Number and percentage of school leavers resident in the Upper Bann constituency who (i) achieved and (ii) did not achieve pass grades in GCSE (a) English; and (b) Maths, in each of the last two years

		2010/11		2011/12

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education how many young people in the Upper Bann constituency (i) achieved; and (ii) did not achieve 5 or more GCSE pass grades, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 25849/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The answer is contained in the table below.

Early Years Funding

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education why there is a delay in issuing the awards for the Early Years funding, given that the letters of award were made in April 2013.

(AQW 25850/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Following a thorough assessment of the financial position of the applicant groups by the strategic funding panels, letters of award were issued by Early Years – the Organisation for Young Children in August 2013. Groups awarded funding are subsequently required to submit a claim for funds to Early Years, which is verified before payment is made.

Free School Meals

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education how much additional funding per child is available to schools when a pupil avails of Free School Meals.

(AQW 25857/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Registered entitlement to Free School Meals is a key indicator used within the Common Funding Formula to distribute additional funding to schools' delegated budgets under the Targeting Social Need (TSN) factor. In the current financial year almost £66.7 million was distributed to schools under the TSN factor, of which £44.2m used free school meal entitlements as an indicator – in full or in part – of social deprivation and additional need.

The level of funding per child with a registered entitlement that is distributed to schools will vary, due to the progressive weighting applied under the main element of social deprivation funding within the funding formula, as well as the phase of education.

For a nursery-age pupil, funding per pupil ranges from approximately £670 to £1,340, averaging around £755 per pupil. For a primary-age pupil, funding per pupil ranges from approximately £340 to £680, averaging around £605 per pupil*. For a post-primary age pupil funding per pupil ranges from approximately £380 to £760, averaging around £440 per pupil.

Note * primary-age funding includes both weighted funding under the social deprivation element and a flat rate of £210 per pupil under the educational under-achievement element.

As I announced in June, I am making £30million of additional funding available, over the next two years, to target support for pupils and schools; to break the link between social deprivation and low educational outcomes. I have also announced an extension to the free school meals eligibility criteria that will see, by September 2014, an additional 15,000 children entitled to free school meals and support with uniform costs.

School Uniform Costs

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education to outline the cost to his Department of providing allowances for school uniforms, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25858/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The cost to my Department of providing the school uniform grant in each of the last three years is as follows:

2010/11	£3.421 million
2011/12	£3.835 million
2012/13	£4.051 million

The increase in cost reflects the increase in the numbers entitled to receive the school uniform grant over this time. Around 77,800 pupils were entitled to receive the uniform grant in 2012/13 compared to almost 62,400 in 2010/11.

School Uniform Costs

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education whether he has held discussions with individual schools and schools' representative bodies in an effort to reduce the burden of uniform costs on parents and carers.

(AQW 25859/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I recognise that the cost of school uniforms can place a substantial financial burden on families particularly in the current economic climate when many families are struggling to make ends meet. I consider it wholly unacceptable that some schools charge excessive costs for school uniforms, particularly where such costs may act as a deterrent to parents who are considering whether to send their child to a particular school.

Whilst the day-to-day management of schools, including school uniform policy, is a matter for school Principals, subject to any directions that might be given by the Board of Governors (BoGs), my Department recognised the burden that uniform costs can place on families and issued guidance to schools in March 2011 on school uniform policy. The guidance makes it very clear that the Department expects Boards of Governors to give high priority to cost considerations when designing their uniforms and that schools "... should ensure that their school uniform policy is fair and reasonable, in practical and financial terms, and should have regard to their duties under relevant equality and other legislation."

Schools were also advised to ensure that their uniform is widely available in high street shops and other retail outlets, and internet suppliers rather than from an expensive sole supplier.

Whilst I have not held discussions with individual schools and have not been approached by their representative bodies on this matter I wrote to all schools in September 2012 reminding Boards of Governors of their responsibilities in relation to the Department's school uniform guidance and emphasising that Governors should ensure that regard is given to the guidance when drawing up their school uniform policy.

If schools or their representative bodies consider that it would be helpful to discuss this matter with me or with my officials I would be pleased to facilitate this.

I would urge Boards of Governors, however, to take action to reduce their school uniform costs and ease the financial burden this can place on parents and carers.

School Transport

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the safety concerns arising from his Departmental policy not offering transport facilities to children who live less than three miles from their school.

(AQW 25897/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the existing Home to School Transport policy, transport assistance is restricted to pupils who have been unable to gain a place in a suitable school within statutory walking distance of their home – two miles for primary age pupils and three miles for post-primary pupils. The distance criterion is used solely to determine who is responsible for a child's journey to school and is not an injunction that an ineligible pupil must walk to school.

In the case of post-primary pupils, responsibility lies with the Education and Library Board where it is determined that the pupil lives over three miles from their nearest suitable school using the shortest walking route. If the pupil lives under three miles from their nearest suitable school, then the parent is responsible for making whatever arrangements they consider appropriate to facilitate their child's attendance at school. Where this is the case, the safety of the child on any part of its journey to school is the parent's responsibility.

Due to the geographical distribution of schools, the majority of pupils in rural areas are eligible for transport assistance, particularly at post-primary level.

I have signalled my intention to bring forward a wide-ranging review of the Home to School Transport policy. My officials are currently taking forward work to establish the review and I hope to make an announcement in the near future.

Free School Meals

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 15960/11-15, what has convinced him since November 2012 to extend free school meals to post-primary children.

(AQW 25902/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Children from families on low incomes and those living in poverty face significant and particular barriers in accessing and benefiting from a good education. I consider that the provision of healthy free school meals is necessary to address the particular challenges that these children face in accessing and participating fully in school life, in improving their learning outcomes and ultimately lifetime opportunities. This also contributes to the statutory target to take action to eradicate child poverty here by 2020 and to the Programme for Government commitment to tackle disadvantage.

I constantly keep the free meal criteria under review to ensure that children and young people from low incomes receive the support they need, in doing this, I also need to take account of resource constraints and competing budgetary pressures.

On 11 June 2013 I announced how I intended to take forward the recommendations from the "Independent Review of the Common Funding Scheme." The Review included a specific recommendation to adjust the eligibility criteria for free school meals which I accepted and is why I announced my intention to apply the same eligibility criteria for free school meals for both primary and postprimary pupils from September 2014. This will benefit an estimated additional 15,000 children from lower income households.

Shared Education Campuses

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how he proposes to deal with issues of ownership in the context of shared education campuses.

(AQW 25903/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Work on the delivery of the 10 shared education campuses as announced recently by the FM and dFM is at an early stage and as such the issue of ownership of these campuses has not yet been addressed.

Early Years Organisation

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 25286/11-15, whether his Department has issued additional guidance to the Early Years organisation in advance of the allocation of funding for the current financial year.

(AQW 25906/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In order to ensure compliance with the criteria for the Fund, officials requested that Early Years – the Organisation for Young Children should conduct a comprehensive assessment of the financial needs of the applicants to the Early Years Fund in 2013/14 in accordance with good financial governance. Groups were required to demonstrate continued requirement for support from the DE

Early Years Fund and show that they:

- Provide direct early years care and education to children;
- Provide a service in areas of low provision, disadvantaged areas or where the service is considered critical for children;
- Ensure inclusion and diversity; and
- Ensure a standard of excellence in relation to quality.

Relationships and Sexuality Education

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Education (i) for his assessment of the current Relationships and Sexuality Education guidance; (ii) what plans his Department has to update these guidelines; and (iii) whether he will consider bringing Relationships and Sexuality Education into the statutory curriculum.

(AQW 25909/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) guidance for schools is provided in the Department of Education Circular 2001/15 'Relationships and Sexuality Education' and the accompanying materials produced by the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA). Guidance and resources on RSE are also provided on the Northern Ireland Curriculum website.

There is a need to review and update the 2001 RSE guidance to set it within the context of the statutory Personal Development and Mutual Understanding (primary) and Learning for Life and Work (post-primary) areas of learning within the revised curriculum.

- (ii) The Department of Education has asked CCEA to commission a review of existing RSE guidance and develop resources to address any identified gaps in provision. Preliminary work is underway on this project.
- (iii) RSE is an integral part of the revised curriculum in both primary and post-primary schools and must be delivered in a sensitive manner which is appropriate to the age and understanding of pupils and to the ethos of the school. The Department requires each school to have in place its own policy on how it will address the delivery of RSE. A school's policy should be subject to consultation with parents, and should be endorsed by a school's Board of Governors.

A key strength of the revised curriculum is the flexibility it provides for teachers to introduce topics to meet the needs and interests of pupils, the statutory content has therefore been considerably reduced. I have no immediate plans at this stage to make any legislative changes to introduce any further compulsory elements to the curriculum. However I will keep the matter under review.

School Crossing Patrols

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what policy his Department has on the provision of school crossing patrols.

(AQW 25913/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not have a policy on the provision of school crossing patrols as overall responsibility for road safety in the North lies with the Department of the Environment. However, Education and Library Boards have a role to play and they can set out measures in a scheme, approved by my Department, to assist in the prevention of accidents involving school children. This enables Boards to provide school crossing patrols where particular traffic hazards have been identified. It also enables them to remove crossing patrols where conditions have changed over time to the extent that a hazard has disappeared or declined in significance. The assessment of potential sites for school crossing patrols is carried out using guidelines developed by the Local Authority Road Safety Officers' Association in England and Wales which the Boards have adapted to reflect local circumstances.

Woodlands Language Unit, Derry

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education whether any jobs will be lost as a result of the closure of the Woodlands Speech and Language Unit, Derry.
(AQW 25914/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In approving the relocation of the Woodlands Speech and Language Unit I modified the proposals to allow the unit to continue to operate, if required, until the end of the 2014/15 academic year to allow all pupils allocated a 2 year place from the 2013/2014 academic year to complete the placement should their parents so wish. I also modified the commencement date of the new Speech and Language Units opening at Ebrington, St Anne's and Ballykelly Primary Schools to open from 1 September 2014.

The Woodlands Unit currently has a staffing complement of four teaching staff and four classroom assistants. The relocation and expansion proposals will provide for six teaching posts and six classroom assistant posts.

The Western Education and Library Board (WELB) has confirmed that, with the agreement of staff, employees will transfer from the Woodlands Unit and follow the speech and language classes. The WELB's Human Resources Service will identify staff transfer preferences and where possible make arrangements for transfer to their preferred location.

Free School Meals

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Education, for the current school year, (i) how many pupils are enrolled in Primary 1-3; (ii) how many of these pupils are entitled to free school meals; and (iii) how many take their free school meal entitlement.
(AQW 25932/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The most up-to-date figures for entitlement to free school meals relate to the 2012/13 school year. Updated 2013/14 figures will be available following the completion of the annual school census which will be carried out during October. Figures collated from the 2012/13 school census indicated that there were 71,048 pupils enrolled in years 1 – 3 in primary schools, of these 21,893 were entitled to free school meals. Figures for pupils entitled to free school meals who go on to take a meal are not available by year group.

School Transport Facilities

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of, from a safety perspective, school transport facilities being denied to rural children living less than three miles from the school which they attend.
(AQW 25940/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the existing Home to School Transport policy, transport assistance is restricted to pupils who have been unable to gain a place in a suitable school within statutory walking distance of their home – two miles for primary age pupils and three miles for post-primary pupils. The distance criterion is used solely to determine who is responsible for a child's journey to school and is not an injunction that an ineligible pupil must walk to school.

In the case of post-primary pupils, responsibility lies with the Education and Library Board where it is determined that the pupil lives over three miles from their nearest suitable school using the shortest walking route. If the pupil lives under three miles from their nearest suitable school, then the parent is responsible for making whatever arrangements they consider appropriate to facilitate their child's attendance at school. Where this is the case, the safety of the child on any part of its journey to school is the parent's responsibility.

Due to the geographical distribution of schools, the majority of pupils in rural areas are eligible for transport assistance, particularly at post-primary level.

I have signalled my intention to bring forward a wide-ranging review of the Home to School Transport policy. My officials are currently taking forward work to establish the review and I hope to make an announcement in the near future.

Schools: Holywood

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education for an update on the new school build programme in Holywood.
(AQW 25943/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education & Library Board identified a multi-schools project for Holywood as one of its top three priorities for major capital investment. However the project was not included in my January 2013 announcement due to the need for clarity on enrolments at Priory Integrated College and the potential to increase these above sustainable schools thresholds, as well as the potential for alliances with other secondary schools in relation to 6th form provision.

On 16 April 2013, the South Eastern Education and Library Board published Development Proposal proposing that the approved enrolment at Priory College, Holywood should increase from 450 to 600 with effect from 31 August 2014 or as soon as possible thereafter. Officials are currently compiling the information available and I expect to take a decision on this in the near future.

While Hollywood Primary / Hollywood Nursery / Priory Integrated College will be disappointed that they were not included in the capital investment announcement in January 2013, this in no way implies that they will not be considered for funding at a later stage within the on-going area planning process.

Teachers: Pay Remit and Staff Remit

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the (i) 2013 pay remit; and (ii) 2010/11 non-teaching staff remit. (AQW 25946/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) Under the Executive's Public Sector Pay Policy when a pay award agreement is outstanding, the pay remit for that group of staff cannot normally be approved until the pay award has been agreed.

The 2013/14 formal pay claim was received from Teacher Unions on 10 September and there was a risk that payment of increments could be indefinitely delayed. As a result, the Department of Education (DE) has secured, exceptionally, DFP agreement to separate the teachers' pay remit into two elements – one covering incremental progression and one covering the pay award once agreed.

DE is currently preparing the former for urgent submission to DFP for approval. It is hoped the necessary approvals will be in place to allow for the payment to be made in October. In due course, the second remit covering any pay award will be submitted to DFP for approval.

- (ii) 2010/11 non-teaching staff remit - Under the Executive's Public Sector Pay Policy, pay remits for all staff in public bodies, are required to be completed and submitted to DFP for approval. It has been agreed that pay remits will be prepared from the 2012/13 financial year onwards for non-teaching staff in the Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated Sectors and initially it was agreed with DFP that this was to be used as the mechanism to seek approval to make the £250 payment to eligible staff for both the 2010/11 and 2011/12 years.

DFP has subsequently agreed to accept a short submission, separate from the normal pay remit process, to enable payments to be made as quickly as possible. The timeline for completion of this work is dependent on DE receiving outstanding returns from a small number of schools. Once the necessary approvals are in place, funding will be made available to enable schools to make the payment to eligible staff.

Delivering Social Change: Teachers

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many recently qualified teachers have been employed on fixed-term contracts following the Delivering Social Change programme. (AQW 25951/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The recruitment process to employ 268.7 (233.3 funded by OFMdfM; 35.4 funded by DE) recent graduate teachers to fixed term contracts is still ongoing; to date 167.9 posts have been confirmed for appointment, including 7.5 appointments made under the DE funded expansion project.

Delivering Social Change: Teachers

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) when; and (ii) where he expects all fixed-term teaching posts contained in the Delivering Social Change programme to be filled. (AQW 25952/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The recruitment process to employ 268.7 (233.3 funded by OFMdfM; 35.4 funded by DE) recent graduate teachers to fixed term contracts is still ongoing; to date 167.9 posts have been confirmed for appointment, including 7.5 appointments made under the DE funded expansion project.

It is envisaged that all the school appointments will be completed by the end of September; the teachers appointed to the central pool will be placed in schools mid October with all appointments being made by the end of October.

The following Primary Schools will receive extra teaching support under the OFMdfM funded Delivering Social Change Programme.

Teaching Posts

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of teaching posts created by additional places being made available in local primary schools, broken down by the (i) Catholic Maintained; (ii) Controlled; (iii) Integrated; and (iv) Irish language sectors.

(AQW 25974/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Schools may apply to the Department for a temporary variation to increase their admissions or enrolment numbers. The vast majority of temporary variation requests are for between 1 and 5 pupils and only apply to the year in which they are granted.

Accordingly it is extremely difficult to understand where any situation would arise that an additional teacher would be required given the low number of spaces granted in respect of any individual request.

Area Learning Communities

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 25329/11-15, why the seven Area Learning Communities did not receive funding.

(AQW 25981/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Six of these seven Area Learning Communities did not make an application to the Strategic Development Fund in the 2013/13 year. The remaining ALC's application did not meet the criteria for funding set out in the application form and guidance.

Capital and Recurrent Funding

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how much funding his Department has transferred from Capital to Recurrent, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25982/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Executive agreed to consider requests from Ministers to reclassify capital expenditure to resource if, following the draft Budget 2011-15 allocations, the pressures on the resource side of the budget were particularly severe and unmanageable. In view of the significant pressures on the resource budget in 2011-12 and the limitations on the Department's ability to release such savings within that financial year, my predecessor wrote to the then Finance Minister seeking to reclassify £41m of capital expenditure to resource funding in 2011-12. This request was to minimise, as far as possible, the impact on the level of funding directly available to schools. In agreeing final Budget 2011-15 allocations, the Executive agreed a reclassification of £25m from capital to resource in 2011-12.

I can confirm that no other transfers from capital to resource funding have taken place in the last 3 years.

Free School Meals

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many children receive free school meals.

(AQW 26017/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The most up-to-date figures for entitlement to free school meals relate to the 2012/13 school year, these are detailed in the table below. Updated 2013/14 figures will be available following the completion of the annual school census which will be carried out during October.

All pupils entitled to free school meals – 2012/13

Note:

- 1 Figures include all pupils entitled to free school meals, including the nursery/preschool sector (whether free school meal or JSA). Special schools are not included.

Young-for-year Children

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Education what provisions are in place to enable young-for-year children, who have already started primary school, to be held back if deemed appropriate; and whether he plans to review these arrangements. (AQW 26019/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is a matter for the school in discussion with the parent of the child to consider but such a movement should only occur in exceptional circumstances where there are clear justifiable educational reasons to do so, and it is in the best interests of the child. The school should, where possible, make every effort to return the child educationally to the correct year group.

I have no plans to change this arrangement.

Teachers: Incremental Pay Increases

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education to detail whether (i) teachers; (ii) classroom assistants; (iii) ancillary staff; and (iv) Education and Board headquarters staff received incremental pay increases during 2012/13 or the current financial year. (AQW 26022/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The majority of eligible teachers, classroom assistants, ancillary staff and Education and Library Board headquarters staff received incremental pay increases during 2012/13. However, 2012/13 pay remits have yet to be completed for Education and Library Board Chief Executives and second tier officers and non-teaching staff in the Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated Sectors. These will be progressed as soon as possible.

For 2013/14, my Department is currently working on obtaining the relevant approvals to allow teachers to receive their incremental pay progression as soon as possible, hopefully in October. My Department will shortly commission 2013/14 pay remits for its arms length bodies and will work to obtain the relevant approvals to allow non-teaching staff to receive their incremental pay progression as soon as possible thereafter.

St. Patrick's Academy, Dungannon

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 17179/11-15, and given that eligible staff at neighbouring schools in the Dungannon area have received payment, when eligible staff at St. Patrick's Academy will receive their payments. (AQW 26024/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department is currently processing the information which has been submitted from the Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated Sectors to enable the £250 payment to be made to eligible staff. However, returns are required from all 89 schools before the Department can seek DFP approval. There are currently 6 outstanding returns which are being pursued as a matter of urgency.

These payments will be made once the necessary approvals have been secured.

Free School Meals: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of pupils with Free School Meals entitlement in each school in North Down; and what this figure represents as a percentage of the number of pupils attending each school. (AQW 26066/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The most up-to-date figures for entitlement to free school meals relate to the 2012/13 school year, these are detailed in the tables overleaf. Updated 2013/14 figures will be available following the completion of the annual school census which will be carried out during October.

Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Sector

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education what meetings he has had with the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender sector since he came to office; and what further meetings are planned.

(AQW 26104/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have met with a number of groups representing the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender sector since my appointment.

These are detailed in the table below;

Date	Group
23 August 2011	Cara- Friend and The Rainbow Project
12 October 2011	Launch of the Education Equality Curriculum Guide

There are no outstanding requests for meetings.

Young-for-year Children

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Education what provisions are in place to enable young-for year-children, who have already started primary school, to be held back a year if necessary; and whether he has any plans to review these arrangements.

(AQW 26122/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is a matter for the school in discussion with the parent of the child to consider but such a movement should only occur in exceptional circumstances where there are clear justifiable educational reasons to do so, and it is in the best interests of the child. The school should, where possible, make every effort to return the child educationally to the correct year group.

I have no plans to change this arrangement.

GCSE Passes: South Antrim

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Education how many young people in the South Antrim constituency (i) achieved; and (ii) did not achieve 5 or more GCSE pass grades, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 26123/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The answer is contained in the table below.

Schools: Development of Land

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the development proposals that exist, or are being considered, for each school in Londonderry, including the sale or lease of land belonging to, or being used, by schools.

(AQW 26127/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are no development proposals currently published for schools in the area. However, CCMS recently sent a request to the WELB to publish a development proposal for phased closure of Immaculate Conception College. It is anticipated that this will be published in local papers during the week beginning 21 October.

The sale or lease of school land does not in itself require the publication of a development proposal but must be approved by the Department. No requests are currently awaiting Departmental approval.

Cerebral Palsy

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what provision is made by his Department for primary and post-primary school pupils with cerebral palsy.

(AQW 26134/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that there is a wide range of special education provision available, for both primary and post-primary school pupils, in both special and mainstream schools to meet the individual needs of children with cerebral palsy. Each child will have an Individual Education Plan and an Individual Health Care Plan and the provision detailed therein will vary depending on the individual special educational needs of each child.

Provision in special schools may involve:-

- Adapted/specialist seating;
- Specialist lifting equipment and adapted technology;
- Allied Health Services such as speech and language therapy, physiotherapy, hydrotherapy and occupational therapy;
- Specialist outdoor play facilities.

Provision in mainstream schools may involve:-

- Support from a classroom/general assistant;
- Specialist advice and support for the child's teacher;
- Recommendations regarding curriculum access and technology support;
- Allied Health Services such as speech and language therapy, physiotherapy, hydrotherapy and occupational therapy;
- Lifting and handling training for staff;
- Specialist furniture/equipment.

ELBs may also have specialist educational centres for children with physical difficulties, including cerebral palsy.

Department for Employment and Learning

South West College: Special Educational Needs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning following the decision taken by South West College to cease part-time courses at the Dungannon campus in favour of amalgamation to full time courses in Cookstown, what discussions were held with Sperrinview Special School staff and the parents/carers of pupils approaching Post 19 transition, particularly but not exclusively in relation to travel between Dungannon and Cookstown on public transport.

(AQW 25350/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): Part time provision

Firstly, I wish to clarify the level and type of provision on offer at the Dungannon campus of South West College (SWC) for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability. The College has informed me that the existing part-time provision on offer at the Dungannon Campus related to courses for participants from the Beacon Centre. SWC consider that this type of provision would not be appropriate for young adults leaving special schools.

Therefore, SWC have stated they chose to review provision of courses for young adults leaving special schools, in the greater Dungannon and Cookstown catchment area, as part of the collaborative work with Principals and staff in both Sperrinview and Kilonan schools and Day Opportunity Workers and Transitions Officers. Subsequently, the college put in place a full-time programme, in addition to the already established part time provision in the Cookstown campus.

Consultation

The college has advised that, in terms of general consultation, as mentioned above, they maintain extremely good links with the Principals and staff in the Sperrinview and Kilonan schools. In addition, strong links have been established with Day Opportunity Workers and Transitions Officers.

As a result of these links, part-time provision has been expanded at the Cookstown campus over the last five years. During this period, the college used meetings, open days and celebration of achievement events to discuss opportunities with students, parents and school managers. The feedback obtained from these meetings and events led to the expansion of existing provision for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability at the Cookstown campus.

Transport

The College has also advised that the issue of prospective students from Sperrinview Special School travelling between Dungannon and Cookstown on public transport was not raised during any discussions relating to location of provision; nor were any further substantive issues raised in relation to the location of this provision

Whilst the College state that there was no formal consultation regarding the location of provision at Cookstown, SWC have reassured me that open channels of communication were consistently maintained between the college and the schools concerned.

Regional Colleges: Funding

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what proportion of each Regional College's budget is provided by the taxpayer; and what proportion each college makes through full cost recovery and income generating activities.

(AQW 25521/11-15)

Dr Farry: The financial accounts for each of the further education colleges provide an audited breakdown of income sources. The table below shows each income source, for each college, as a percentage of that college's total income. This is based on the latest audited accounts, for the year ended 31 July 2012.

2011/12	BMC £'000	NRC £'000	NWRC £'000	SERC £'000	SRC £'000	SWC £'000	Sector £'000
Income
DEL grants	77.50%	72.80%	73.17%	71.47%	65.18%	60.98%	70.67%
Education contracts	7.88%	15.93%	17.48%	21.32%	24.74%	31.37%	19.03%
Tuition fees and charges	11.31%	6.94%	6.12%	4.54%	5.52%	4.48%	6.82%
Other grant income	1.25%	1.41%	1.25%	0.87%	2.20%	1.83%	1.44%
Other operating income	1.61%	2.13%	1.19%	1.55%	1.27%	0.87%	1.43%
Investment income	0.45%	0.79%	0.79%	0.25%	1.09%	0.47%	0.61%

Colleges' accounts do not provide a precise breakdown between their income from the taxpayer and from full cost recovery and income generating activities. However, full cost recovery items are mainly within the other operating income line. The financial accounts for each college, which provide further analysis of the income within each of the lines above, are available in the Assembly Library.

Regional Colleges: Skills

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department takes to ensure that Regional Colleges implement his Department's policies, particularly in respect of providing a skilled workforce for the economy.

(AQW 25522/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department's skills agenda is articulated in the Skills Strategy "Success through Skills – Transforming Futures". The Further Education Strategy "FE Means Business" reflects the role which Regional Colleges play in relation to skills development.

Colleges have a vital role as key drivers in meeting skills needs to foster economic prosperity at local, sub regional and regional level.

My Department's further education policy has therefore been developed to ensure that colleges have a strong focus on provision that supports the economy while enhancing social cohesion and advancing individuals' skills and learning. Around 98% of the Department's funding to the further education sector is for provision that leads to qualifications that are on the regulated qualifications frameworks, and the content of professional and technical (vocational) qualifications on the Qualifications and Credit Framework has been informed by the needs of employers. College enrolments and rates of learner retention, achievement and success are scrutinised through College Development Planning meetings which take place annually between the Department and individual college's Chairs and Directors.

In addition to colleges providing a supply of qualified and skilled individuals, colleges also work directly with employers to support them in areas such as prototyping, product design and development, and innovation.

These measures are examples of the close liaison that exists between my Department, employers and Regional Colleges, and demonstrate the importance that I attach to ensuring that skills provision and workforce development remain in tune with the specific needs of the Northern Ireland economy in both the short and longer term.

Essential Skills

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students are currently studying Essential Skills courses; and whether he plans to implement similar action to that being undertaken in England, where students will continue to study functional skills until aged 18 years or a satisfactory grade is achieved.

(AQW 25523/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the academic year 2012/13, there were 50,480 enrolments (26,902 individuals) on Essential Skills courses. These figures are provisional up to 7 June 2013, and full year data will not be available until December. Since the start of the Essential Skills Strategy, there have been just over 352,000 enrolments in respect of 146,701 individuals.

Young people leaving school who have not achieved a Grade C or above in English, mathematics and ICT who wish to enter DEL funded programmes, such as Training for Success and ApprenticeshipNI, are required to undertake Essential Skills in literacy, numeracy and ICT as part of their programme. Further education colleges also require those participating in full time courses to complete Essential Skills qualifications if they do not have GCSEs at grade C or above in relevant subjects. In addition, all those participating in the Steps to Work Programme have the opportunity to gain Essential Skills qualifications.

South West College: Special Educational Needs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, in relation to the decision taken by the South West College to cease part-time courses in the Dungannon campus in favour of amalgamation to full-time courses in Cookstown, (i) what consultation was carried out; (ii) with whom did the college consult; and (iii) to provide the general responses to the consultation.

(AQW 25524/11-15)

Dr Farry: Part time provision

Firstly, I wish to clarify the level and type of provision on offer at the Dungannon campus of South West College (SWC) for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability. The College has informed me that the existing part-time provision on offer at the Dungannon Campus related to courses for participants from the Beacon Centre. #### Consultation

The college has advised that, in terms of general consultation, as mentioned above, they maintain extremely good links with the Principals and staff in the Sperrinview and Kilronan schools. In addition, strong links have been established with Day Opportunity Workers and Transitions Officers.

As a result of these links, part-time provision has been expanded at the Cookstown campus over the last five years. Whilst the College state that there was no formal consultation regarding the location of provision at Cookstown, SWC have reassured me that open channels of communication were consistently maintained between the college and the schools concerned.

Youth Employment Scheme

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the number of opportunities advertised under the Youth Employment Scheme; (ii) the number of these posts that were filled; (iii) the number of young people in full time employment as a result; and (iv) cost of scheme per full time job created.

(AQW 25618/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) The Youth Employment Scheme was formally launched to employers at the Titanic Building on 26 September 2012. From that date until 13 September 2013 a total of 3951 opportunities have been made available for young people. These comprise of 2082 short work experience opportunities lasting 2- 8 weeks, 1150, 6 – 9 month skills development placements and 719 jobs for which the Department will provide an enhanced employer subsidy.
- (ii) To date 1943 young people have availed of opportunities as follows; 823 have gone into work experience opportunities, 611 into skills development placements and 509 have availed of jobs offered under the enhanced employer subsidy.
- (iii) In this period 626 young people have moved directly into employment (including subsidised permanent employment) immediately after participating on the scheme. More will have found work as a direct result of the experience and skills obtained while participating on the scheme.

- (iv) However, the Youth Employment Scheme's employer subsidy provides an important incentive to stimulate demand among employers. This increases opportunities for YES participants. The cost of the employer subsidy element of the scheme per full time job filled is £5,750.

The Department therefore does not retain figures in relation to the cost of the scheme per full time job created.

South West College: Underspend

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) how a £30,000 underspend of Departmental money for courses aimed at adults with learning disabilities is alleged to have accumulated at South West College; (ii) which specific campus or campuses this underspend relates to; and (iii) whether this funding will remain within the South West College current budget or if it will be returned to his Department.

(AQW 25619/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) This amount can be attributed to a full-time course, 'On Board PLP' (Personal Learning Programme), on offer in the Cookstown campus, for the 2013/14 academic year.

My Department allocates funding to colleges through the annual College Development Plan (CDP) process. This process requires each of the six further education colleges to bid for resources based on the volume of planned provision for the incoming year.

The South West College's bid for resources for the 2013/14 Academic Year will have included provision for the 'On Board PLP' course for 8 full time students, which would have equated to around £30,000 in funding for the College, should it have been able to fill all available places. However, to date, there have been no enrolments on this course and as such it is unlikely that this course will be viable, resulting in a potential underspend of £30,000.

- (ii) This relates to full time provision at the Cookstown campus; however it is part of the South West College overall budget.
- (iii) Colleges are responsible for determining the distribution of their funding, in line with their curriculum provision. The Department does not, therefore, prescribe how funding is distributed at a course level and the South West College would have the authority to re-allocate this funding to provision in other areas if additional pressures arise.

Zero-hour Contracts

Mr McCartney asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to (i) outline how the rights of workers are affected by zero hour contracts; and (ii) what safeguards are in place to ensure that all workers' rights and entitlements are honoured and protected.

(AQW 25667/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) Most people on a zero-hours contract are 'workers' who operate under a contract, but this can include a number of different employment relationships such as agency workers, short-term casual workers, freelancers, and contractors. Irrespective of the precise nature of a zero-hours contract, certain core rights apply such as:
- the National Minimum Wage;
  - rest breaks, paid holiday and night work limits;
  - protection against unauthorised deductions from pay;
  - statutory maternity, paternity and adoption pay (but not leave);
  - protection under Public Interest Disclosure law;
  - protection from unlawful discrimination;
  - Health and Safety protection; and
  - additional rights under the Agency Workers Regulations (NI) 2011.
- (ii) Workers' rights are protected by a range of safeguards enshrined in employment legislation. In most cases, workers have recourse to an industrial tribunal if they believe their statutory rights have been breached.

I have asked my officials to commission new research to establish a more reliable estimate of the number of workers on zero-hours contracts in Northern Ireland. The research will also seek to identify the merits and demerits of using this type of contract, and will provide the Department with a more informed understanding of whether there is a need to introduce additional protections for workers on zero-hours contracts.

University of Ulster: Magee Campus

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 20714/11-15 to outline the amount of funding awarded to construct the daycare facility at Magee.

(AQW 25697/11-15)

Dr Farry: The amount awarded, under the Northern Ireland Single Document – European Regional Development Fund Training Infrastructure Measure, for the project was £193,500.

South West College: Underspend

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, in relation to South West College and the decision to offer the “On Board PLP” course for the 2013/14 academic year, (i) when was the decision taken to offer this course; (ii) what College department will take the lead on delivery; and (iii) with whom did the College consult when compiling this course and/its deciding on content.

(AQW 25702/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) South West College (SWC) has advised that the College reviewed provision during 2012/13, following a range of discussions and enquiries, and has decided to offer an Entry Level Certificate, entitled ‘On Board PLP’ (Personal Learning Programme), for the 2013/14 academic year, at the Dungannon Campus.
- (ii) The College hope to commence this course in September 2013. However, this programme has only received one enrolment application to date, and the remaining places have not been taken up. At present, SWC may not have sufficient numbers to successfully run the course, due to this lack of demand.
- (iii) The decision was reached following a number of enquiries through the College’s normal channels of communication, which includes Principals and staff in both Sperrinview and Kilronan schools; Day Opportunity Workers; Transitions Officers; and also at open days and celebration of achievement events, which provided opportunities to discuss the issue with students, parents and school managers.

Youth Employment Scheme

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Employment and Learning in relation to business and organisations in North Antrim, to detail (i) how many have signed up to the Youth Employment Scheme; and (ii) what work his Department is doing to encourage more business and organisations to sign up to the scheme.

(AQW 25743/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the North Antrim area, serviced by Ballymena and Ballymoney Jobs & Benefits office, a total of 148 employer agreements have been signed since the Youth Employment Scheme was launched in September 2012. Employers have made 197 opportunities available and to date 96 young people have availed of a placement, 33 of these having secured subsidised employment.

My Department is actively working with employers in the North Antrim area to source as many opportunities as possible for young people. Since the launch of the scheme there has been a series of promotional events and press releases in local newspapers across the North Antrim area and I am pleased at the level of support given by local employers for the scheme. The next event is in the Braid Centre, Ballymena on 10 October 2013 where we will be encouraging employers to offer short work experiences, 6 -9 month skills development and subsidised employment. The event will enable employers to match young people to the range of opportunities they can provide.

In addition a number of large Northern Ireland organisations in the priority sectors have offered placements and jobs and some of these have been made available to young people in the North Antrim area. We will continue working actively with these employers to secure as many quality placements as possible that will help and support unemployed young people find and keep employment.

Collaboration and Innovation Fund

Mr Douglas asked the Minister for Employment and Learning in relation to the Collaboration and Innovation Fund, to detail (i) the funding allocated to the programme; (ii) the number of programmes approved; (iii) the number of youth at risk engaged to date; and (iv) the number envisaged to participate over the life of the programme.

(AQW 25778/11-15)

Dr Farry: Over £9.2 million was allocated to the Collaboration and Innovation Fund in December 2012. Eighteen organisations from the community, voluntary and educational sectors will deliver project activity from December 2012 to March 2015. To date projects have engaged with 1,187 young people aged 16-24 who were not in education, employment or training. Projects funded under the Collaboration and Innovation Fund will help a total of 5,500.

My Department is in the process of allocating funding to a further five projects; this will increase the total number of Collaboration and Innovation Fund projects to 23 from October 2013. These new projects will help an additional 900 young people who are not in education, employment or training.

Apprenticeship Posts

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on securing additional apprenticeship posts, including (i) when the posts will be available; (ii) in which industries; and (iii) in which constituencies.

(AQW 25852/11-15)

Dr Farry: The ApprenticeshipsNI programme is an employer-led provision, with employers creating apprenticeship positions in line with their future business needs.

My Department funds the 'off-the-job' training element of an apprenticeship through the ApprenticeshipsNI programme. ApprenticeshipsNI aims to provide participants with the opportunity to take part in a Level 2/Level 3 Apprenticeship where the apprentice, in paid employment from day one, works towards achieving an industry-approved Level 2/Level 3 Apprenticeship Framework.

The latest statistical bulletin shows that the ApprenticeshipsNI programme occupancy at 30th April 2013 was 8,998. The full statistical bulletin, containing an occupancy breakdown by apprenticeship framework and parliamentary constituency, can be viewed on the Department's website <http://www.delni.gov.uk/appsni-bulletin-aug-13.pdf>.

To further raise awareness of ApprenticeshipsNI, my Department conducted an extensive 'employer-focussed' advertising campaign earlier in the year and again in July - ahead of the main recruitment period. The campaign, including; television, radio, internet and outdoor advertising, promoted the benefits to be gained from employing apprentices.

I have also commissioned a review of youth training and apprenticeships, which commenced in February 2013. Key aspects of the review of apprenticeships terms of reference include: how to encourage SMEs to engage with apprenticeships; how to expand apprenticeships into other sectors, such as the professions; and, the role of higher level apprenticeships. The review's full terms of reference can be accessed on the Department's website.

The outworking of the review will report later in the autumn of this year.

Further and Higher Education: Oversight

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he would consider the introduction of an ombudsman style oversight body for Further and Higher Education bodies.

(AQW 25866/11-15)

Dr Farry: It is my view that all learners should have access to a standardised, clear and independent grievance procedure.

Further Education Colleges currently lie outside the remit of the Assembly Ombudsman/Commissioner for Complaints and complainants currently have nowhere to bring complaints except through the tribunal route. I am supportive therefore of the colleges being included within the proposed Northern Ireland Public Service Ombudsman Bill in relation to the investigation of maladministration. The Northern Ireland Public Service Ombudsman's remit will not, however, encompass the exercise of professional judgement and this is accepted by the OFMDFM Committee. My Department will continue to engage with the OFMDFM committee on the passage of this Bill.

In relation to higher education, my Department's Higher Education Strategy, "Graduating to success" includes a Project which is considering whether the remit of the Ombudsman should be extended to include higher education learner grievances. A Project Team has been established to take this work forward by 2015.

Zero-hour Contracts

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what contact his Department has had with H.M Government regarding zero hours contract regulations.

(AQW 25944/11-15)

Dr Farry: My officials have been in contact with their counterparts in the GB Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS), about the internal review of zero-hours contracts that was undertaken during the Summer.

One outcome of the BIS review was the announcement by the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills, on 16 September, that he planned to launch a consultation in GB on how to tackle abuses of zero-hours contract workers.

As employment law is a devolved matter, my Department is currently exploring the potential to commission bespoke research that would provide an accurate understanding of the role and use of zero-hours contracts in Northern Ireland. Any consideration of zero-hours contracts in Northern Ireland will of course be informed by any GB developments following the BIS consultation.

North West Regional College: Priority Skills

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to (i) outline the North West Regional College's target for priority skills; and (ii) their current outcome figures.

(AQW 26193/11-15)

Dr Farry: Through the annual College Development Planning process, the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) sets a variety of key high level targets for curriculum provision through the further education colleges. One of these high level targets relates to the proportion of provision which is in the priority skills areas.

In the most recent academic year for which full validated data is available, the target for year 2011-2012 for North West Regional College in the priority skills areas was 2808 enrolments, the outcome was 2917 enrolments, which represents achievement over target of 3.9%.

The Department's further education curriculum policy has been developed to ensure that colleges have a strong focus on provision that supports the economy and strengthens economic and workforce development, while also enhancing social cohesion and advancing the individual's skills and learning.

Through the Annual College Development Planning and budget setting processes, colleges are expected to:

- increase the proportion of enrolments at Level 2 and above;
- increase the proportion of enrolments that are on the regulated qualification frameworks;
- increase the proportion of enrolments that are on professional and technical courses, particularly in the priority skills areas; and,
- increase the number of learners who complete a recognised qualification in Essential Skills.

While the Department sets the strategic direction for the Further Education Sector in Northern Ireland, each College is responsible for its own curriculum offer tailored to meet the needs of learners and employers in their areas in a cost effective way that ensures best use of public money.

DEL and further education colleges have developed, and continue to refine, the annual College Development Planning (CDP) process, where each college discusses and agrees with DEL how it will meet curriculum targets. The ongoing monitoring of the impact of curriculum changes on learners is important in shaping the curriculum delivered by colleges to its local community. This strong focus on economically relevant provision is particularly relevant to the provision that further education colleges can make available to learners.

University of Ulster: Crèche Facilities

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the annual running costs of the crèche facilities at (a) Magee College; and (b) University of Ulster, Jordanstown in each of the last five years; and (ii) the income derived from these facilities over the same period.

(AQW 26252/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold the information requested. The University of Ulster, like all other universities, is an autonomous body and as such responsibility for the management of services to students including the provision of childcare is a matter for the senior management of the University.

I have, however, asked my officials to pass on your request for income and expenditure information in respect of the creche facilities at the Magee and Jordanstown campuses for the period in question to the University of Ulster. The University will be asked to provide a response direct to you.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Banks: Branch Closures

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what further plans she has to reverse the trend by local banks who have closed local branches and reduced services in those that remain open.

(AQW 25491/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I have been concerned at the branch closures announced in recent times, and in particular the impact of this in rural communities. The DFP Minister and I raised the issue of rural access with the main banks in Northern Ireland as part of our ongoing series of meetings with banks.

In addition, the Consumer Council for Northern Ireland (CCNI) have requested the Northern Ireland Select Affairs Committee enquiry into the Northern Ireland Banking Structure consider the overall impact of bank branch closures on local communities. They also suggested to the Committee that Banks should offer face to face support to customers on the alternative services available from the bank and other alternative options such as Post Offices and that all banks should offer basic current account facilities in Post Offices.

The Consumer Council has also published a Personal Current Account Manifesto. This sets out the key priorities consumers have with daily banking services and they are working with the banks to address these consumer concerns. The Consumer Council is also a member of the recently formed British Bankers Association Consumer Panel and have raised the issue of bank branch closures at this level and have been successful in ensuring the issue is included as an action in the work plan going forward.

Cruise Ships at Ballycastle

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how she plans to increase the number of cruise ships that dock at Ballycastle.

(AQW 25541/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During 2013 Moyle District Council expects to welcome and service 8 cruise ships with 3 ships docking in Ballycastle and a further 5 at Rathlin Island.

It is my understanding that, to date, no formal strategy has been established by Moyle District Council for the servicing of cruise ships to the area.

Both my Department (DETI) and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) would strongly encourage the council to consider the potential for this market and to provide an appropriate strategy for the future growth of the market.

Patents

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many patents have been registered per capita compared to the rest of the UK, for every year since 2007.

(AQW 25547/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Patents are a reserved matter and not within the remit of the NI Executive to grant.

The Intellectual Property Office (IPO) grants patents for the UK; however, companies can also apply for patents from external offices such as the European Patent Office (EPO) and the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO). There is therefore no one single source of patent information for Northern Ireland.

The Intellectual Property Office provides a regional breakdown of UK patent applications that are filed and granted on an annual basis. This information is publically available at <http://www.ipo.gov.uk/about/whatwedo/ourpublications/ourpublications-review.htm>.

Climate Change Levy

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the discussions she has had in relation to an extension to the lower rate of the Climate Change Levy.

(AQW 25566/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In advance of the ending of Northern Ireland's 10 year exemption from the Climate Change Levy (CCL) on natural gas supplies to business and public sector customers in Northern Ireland at 31 March 2011, I held discussions with the Economic Secretary to the Treasury in January 2011 which resulted in the agreement that gas supplies in Northern Ireland should be subject to a reduced rate of CCL (35% of the full rate) for a strictly time-limited period, between 1 April 2011 and 31 October 2013. This was confirmed in a Written Ministerial Statement by HM Treasury on 31 January 2011 which noted that, after 31 October 2013, the main CCL rate for natural gas would apply in Northern Ireland.

In April 2013, my Department engaged again with Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) to press the case and ascertain the scope for continuing with the reduced CCL rate. However, in response, HMRC confirmed that, due to European tax law and State aid rules, it is not possible to extend the reduced rate of CCL past October 2013.

Lighthouses

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment if there are plans to open all lighthouses as tourist attractions, in addition to those initially announced in the joint scheme with the Republic of Ireland.

(AQW 25587/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Many lighthouses already successfully offer visitor accommodation and are tourist attractions.

The Lighthouse Trail Project lead partner is the Commissioner's of Irish Lights (CIL) who would develop the tourism potential of lighthouses. CIL operate over 70 lighthouses around the coast of Ireland, many of which are suitable for tourism development.

The announcement of Phase 1 of the All Ireland Lighthouse tourism trail was made in September 2013 and this new initiative is set to develop the creation of a new lighthouse tourism sector.

Phase 1 of the project involves 5 sites, 3 in Northern Ireland and 2 in Donegal. These will be added to the 6 sites already operating in the Republic of Ireland, with the eventual plan being to have between 15 to 20 lighthouses operating as part of a tourist trail all around the Irish coast.

Phase 2 will deliver a coastal lighthouse trail and the installation of interpretation materials within the lighthouse towers. This phase is aimed primarily at the out-of-state visitor market.

Lighthouses

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when lighthouses will be able to avail of opportunities provided by tourism.

(AQW 25588/11-15)

Mrs Foster: It was my pleasure to launch a Lighthouse Tourism Trail during a recent visit to Blackhead Lighthouse, Co Antrim on 4 September 2013.

The Lighthouse Trail is being supported with £2.2m million of financial assistance from the European Union's INTERREG IVA Programme, managed by the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB).

The first phase of the project involves three lighthouse properties in Northern Ireland – Rathlin West Lighthouse, Rathlin Island; Blackhead Lighthouse, Co. Antrim and St. John's Point Lighthouse, Co. Down, as well as two in the Republic of Ireland.

The target date for project completion is spring 2015 with a view to availing of the Summer 2015 tourist season. The estimated target completion dates currently envisaged for individual properties are as follows:

- Rathlin West Lighthouse, Rathlin Island – November 2014
- Blackhead Lighthouse, Co. Antrim – March 2015
- St. John's Point Lighthouse, Co. Down – April 2015.

Onshore Petroleum Licence Area

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in relation to each onshore petroleum licence area, to detail (i) the size of each in sq km; (ii) the annual rental paid; and (iii) the size of each in imperial measurements for fiscal and licensing terms.

(AQW 25614/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

Broadband: North Antrim

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many customers from North Antrim have reported problems with broadband access whilst using the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project.

(AQW 25734/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP) is still in its 'pre-procurement' stage, and not in an operational phase, hence it does not have any customers.

Broadband: North Antrim

Mr D McIlveen asked nister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many people from North Antrim have checked their broadband services using www.nibroadband.com.

(AQW 25735/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not hold this information. The website www.nibroadband.com is owned by and operated by BT.

Broadband: North Antrim

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what plans her Department has to improve broadband services in rural North Antrim.

(AQW 25806/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has initiated the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project which aims to provide a 2Mbps broadband service to virtually all premises in Northern Ireland and 24Mbps superfast broadband to 90% of premises by 2015.

A consultation exercise, to identify areas where intervention may be required was undertaken in September 2012 and the outcome published on 5 July 2013, coupled with a refined intervention area.

The process is subject to continuous refinement and a second consultation exercise was recently carried out and completed on 16 August 2013. The results are currently being analysed to ensure that any intervention complies with strict State Aid rules.

It is intended that this project will move to the procurement stage shortly, with a contract expected to be signed by the end of the year and implementation completed by the end of 2015. This project will benefit a number of areas including rural North Antrim

Broadband: North Antrim

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what plans her Department has to improve broadband services in (i) Broughshane; (ii) Cullybackey; (iii) Kells; and (iv) Ahoghill.

(AQW 25807/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I refer to my previous answer to AQW No.25806/11-15.

Manufacturing: Island-wide Networks

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the steps taken to enhance the engagement of local manufacturers with island-wide networks.

(AQO 4624/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI and InterTradeIreland both work to promote the links between our firms and business networks in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Air Connectivity

Ms Brown asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her Department's work on improving air connectivity to Belfast International Airport.

(AQO 4621/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department is in regular dialogue with all of Northern Ireland's airports to help bring new air services to Northern Ireland and to promote demand for existing services. As these discussions are of a commercially sensitive nature they must be treated with confidentiality.

I am keen to see improved access to all markets which offer important business and inbound tourism links and have met with a number of airlines in recent months.

I particularly believe there is real potential to reinstate a direct air service between Northern Ireland and Canada and raised this with potential carriers during my recent visit to Toronto.

Tourism: Devolution of Funding

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she would consider devolving tourism marketing finance from the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to Regional Tourism Partnerships or local councils.

(AQO 4622/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I will use a pending review of the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to examine if there is any further scope to transfer tourism functions to councils beyond what has already been agreed under the reform of local government.

Councils are already responsible for local tourism marketing and when looking at the marketing of Northern Ireland I must consider the need to create stand out for Northern Ireland as a destination against key competitors such as Scotland, Wales and the Republic of Ireland and how this can be best achieved.

Energy Prices

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what assessment she has made of the impact of the rise of energy prices on households.

(AQO 4623/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Increases in energy tariffs are never to be welcomed. The Utility Regulator in verifying and approving the 17.8% Power NI tariff increase reported that it will increase a typical, domestic customer bill by £90 per year.

In relation to the recent firmus energy gas tariff increase in the '10 towns', I am informed that depending on usage, the increase is in the region of £70 per year.

Skills: Growth Sectors

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on discussions she has had with the Minister for Employment and Learning to ensure that there are adequate skill levels for growth sectors.

(AQO 4625/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have regular discussions with the Minister for Employment and Learning, including engagements at the Executive Sub-Committee on the Economy. In addition, my Department and Invest NI work closely with DEL in regard to the provision of future skills needs for priority sectors and markets.

In order to meet the changing skills needs of these sectors, DEL, in collaboration with Invest NI and employers, has set up working groups to consider the specific skills required by key sectors. The aim is to put in place suitable interventions such as the Assured Skills programme and the ICT Skills

Tourism: All-island Cooperation

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the steps taken to enhance local tourism through all-island cooperation.

(AQO 4626/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board has been working with local area tourism groups to assist them in developing, clustering and promoting their local tourism offer. This work has been informed by a number of collaborative initiatives between NITB, Fáilte Ireland and Tourism Ireland, the most recent example being the Tourism Recovery Taskforce which was aimed at restoring growth from the important GB market.

A number of joint INTERREG tourism projects are also underway such as the Lighthouse Trail, the Malin Waters Initiative, the Appalachian Trail, which now links the stunning Antrim Coast with Donegal and Scotland, and the recent investment relating to the Gobbins Path experience, which is linked to a similar project in Donegal.

In addition, Tourism Ireland continues its work across 30 markets to promote Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland as an all-island tourism destination.

Housing Executive: Glazing

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has had with the Minister for Social Development regarding the delays in the procurement process for Northern Ireland Housing Executive glazing contracts including the negative impact that this is having on the local economy.

(AQO 4627/11-15)

Mrs Foster: None

Private Sector: Productivity and Employment

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on attempts to increase private sector productivity and employment.

(AQO 4628/11-15)

Mrs Foster: All of the commitments identified within the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy will contribute to the Executive's collective goal of increasing economic growth.

The key productivity drivers are innovation, R&D, business growth, infrastructure and skills and the Executive's Economic Strategy outlines the actions we are taking in these and other areas.

The Executive Sub-Committee on the Economy will shortly be publishing its first annual report setting out the significant progress being made against the Executive's Economic Strategy commitments.

Broadband: Satellite Service

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the uptake of the satellite broadband service funded by her Department.

(AQO 4629/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am disappointed with the uptake of satellite broadband services under my Department's Remote Broadband Services contract. Despite significant enhancement of the packages on offer from Onwave, uptake by both residential and business users remains low. Regrettably, there is a poor public perception of satellite broadband. I would encourage consumers to consider satellite solutions where other services are not available for either technical or commercial reasons.

Department of the Environment

Judicial Reviews and Planning Appeals

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the (i) judicial reviews; and (ii) planning appeals that his Department has lost in each financial year since 2006/07.

(AQW 25242/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Robust and readily accessible information relating to judicial reviews is only available for the last 3 years. In this period twenty six judicial reviews were received by the Department in respect of planning decisions. Of these twenty six cases, ten are ongoing, eight were withdrawn or settled, three were upheld and five decisions were quashed. The decisions quashed are set out in table 1.

Table 1

Mobile Vehicle Licence Enforcement Cameras

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the areas that mobile vehicle license enforcement camera visited, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25346/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Agency manages two ANPR mobile camera units in Northern Ireland, on behalf of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, ensuring they are deployed on a rolling basis across the whole of Northern Ireland to make maximum use of this resource.

The cameras are routinely deployed in or in the vicinity of all main postal towns or associated arterial routes, taking cognisance of local circumstances and road safety conditions.

The Agency is able to provide a breakdown of the overall total number of ANPR camera detections in each of the last three years. The details of which are set out in the table below:

Period	Volume
01 April 2012 – 31 March 2013	16,229
01 April 2011 – 31 March 2012	16,073
01 April 2010 – 31 March 2011	15,634
Total	47,936

Note: Figures were sourced from DVA information systems and are not validated DOE/DVA Official Statistics.

The records of ANPR detections are stored against individual registration marks and places of detection are not stored in a way that would facilitate the breakdown of the relevant figures by individual area.

Marine Bill

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the steps to be taken, and the timescale, for the implementation of the Marine Bill.

(AQW 25400/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Marine Bill principally provides my Department with powers to prepare a marine plan for Northern Ireland's inshore region (out to 12 nautical miles); and to designate any area of sea falling within that region as a marine conservation zone (MCZ).

The Bill's final stage was taken in the Assembly on 21 May 2013 – it will come into operation in its entirety following Royal Assent, which is expected shortly.

Marine Plan

Preparatory work on the Marine Plan for Northern Ireland commenced in 2012 with publication of a Statement of Public Participation. This sets out how my Department proposes to engage with people with an interest in the marine area and the timeline for delivering a Marine Plan.

As a next step, the plan vision, objectives and alternatives, as well as the scope of a Sustainability Appraisal, will be discussed at a stakeholder event in November 2013.

I expect to receive the draft Marine Plan for my approval by November 2014, after which it will be subject to a 12-week public consultation. A report on the Sustainability Appraisal will also be published at this stage.

My Department will then consider whether any amendment to the draft plan's proposals is required and whether an Independent Investigation is needed. Should an investigation be necessary, the Marine Bill provides for the investigator to report within 6 months or such longer period as approved by my Department.

The Marine Plan would subsequently be adopted and published.

Marine Conservation Zones (MCZs)

The Marine Bill gives my Department powers to better protect and manage Northern Ireland's marine environment. These include a new mechanism for the conservation of marine biodiversity through the designation of MCZs, which are a new type of marine protected area.

A 12-week public consultation on draft MCZ guidance should start in October, followed by a series of stakeholder workshops related to the identification and designation process in November 2013, March 2014 and November 2014.

The final MCZ proposals and documents will be subject to a 12-week public consultation process by December 2015, with all MCZs being formally designated by December 2016.

In accordance with the Marine Bill's provisions, Strangford Lough will become Northern Ireland's first MCZ on enactment of the Bill.

Quarries

Mrs Dobson asked Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 25055/11-15, to detail the processes that need to be completed by a landowner who voluntarily undertakes to drain or infill quarries, including the timescale for each process. (AQW 25454/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The processes that are required are detailed as follows:-

Planning Permission

If the quarry is to be infilled with waste, then it will need appropriate planning permission. This will need to cover issues such as final levels, restoration details, permitted waste codes, permission for ancillary facilities such as site office, weighbridge, wheel wash etc. as required. The Department will determine the need for an Environmental Statement under the Planning (EIA) Regulations (NI) 1999, as amended. Full consultation with relevant expert bodies will take place during the planning process. A planning application for infilling of a quarry can be processed within 6 months provided all the required information is submitted by the applicant at the outset. Where a minerals or waste application was originally involved, I would add that where the drainage or infill represents a departure from an approved restoration required by condition; this variation would be required to form part of an application for infilling.

Consent for drainage

In addition any work that affects the drainage function of a watercourse must receive consent under Schedule 6 of the Drainage (NI) Order 1973. This process is managed by Rivers Agency and provided all relevant information is submitted by the applicant, a decision on Schedule 6 approval will take no more than 3 months.

PPC Permit

Once planning permission has been granted, the operator can apply for a pollution prevention and control permit (PPC) permit. This will need to be supported by appropriate site specific management plans, risk assessments (hydrogeological, gas, stability, etc) and environmental monitoring plans.

The level of management plans and risk assessments required will depend on the environmental risk the PPC application will also have to address issues such as technical competence, financial provision, etc to meet the requirements of the relevant PPC and waste regulations. A PPC application can be determined in 6 months provided all the required information is submitted by the applicant.

Consent to Discharge

Under the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999, the consent of the Department of Environment is required to discharge any trade or sewage effluent into our waterways or underground strata. This includes any potentially polluting matter (including site drainage liable to contamination) from commercial, industrial or domestic premises including the dewatering of quarries to waterways or underground strata. Further details on the application process can found on the NIEA website at http://www.doeni.gov.uk/niea/water-home/regulation\_of\_discharges\_industrial/industrial\_and\_private\_sewage\_2.htm. Applications for Consent to Discharge can be processed in parallel with the PPC Permit and/or Planning Permission.

Waste Management: Coleraine Borough Council

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail any instances of serious fraud that have occurred in the waste management contracts in Coleraine Borough Council. (AQW 25464/11-15)

Mr Durkan: These contracts are a matter for Coleraine Borough Council. It would not be appropriate for me to comment on waste management contracts between Coleraine Borough Council and its contractors.

Waste Management: Derry City Council and Coleraine Borough Council

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will inquire with Derry City Council and Coleraine Borough Council if there has been any fraudulent or illegal activity related to waste management contracts in their areas ;and then to publish their response.

(AQW 25466/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Waste management contracts entered into by Derry City Council and Coleraine Borough Council are a matter for them and it would not be appropriate for me to comment on them. The Department's investigation into whether there has been any illegal activity on the part of specific private sector waste operators is a separate and ongoing matter and not one upon which it is appropriate to comment at this juncture.

Wind Turbines

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment to list the current planning applications for wind turbines; and the estimated time before a decision will be made in each case.

(AQW 25478/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable energy projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner.

As of 31 July 2013 the Department had 750 applications for wind turbines under consideration, of which 44 relate to wind farms and 706 relate to single wind turbines. A list of these applications is available in the Assembly library.

To establish an estimated time before a decision will be made in each of these cases would require detailed consideration of each of the relevant planning application files and this would result in a diversion of staff from normal duties for an unreasonable period of time. This would have an impact on the Department's ability to provide the statutory public service for which it is obligated.

Decision times for wind farms and single wind turbines vary depending on a number of factors. The vast majority of applications for single wind turbines still under consideration are awaiting further information from the applicant or agent in relation to amendments; bat surveys; noise reports; road details; or are awaiting consultee responses.

In most instances, applications for wind farms are accompanied by an Environmental Statement. They are complex applications that require input from a wide range of consultees. The quality of the information submitted and the sensitivity of a particular site will also influence the time frames for determination. In many instances the Department may have to request Further Environmental Information before a final decision is taken and this can lead to delays. The volume of objections to an application may also affect determination times.

Cycling: Road Safety

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what steps he has taken to increase the opportunities for children to learn cycling safety at school.

(AQW 25585/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety and, within the context of the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy, does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, including road safety education programmes within schools.

The DOE Road Safety Education Officer Service has a programme of work which is designed to strengthen road safety education within the school environment, including cycling safely. Best practice guidelines advise that teaching professionals are best placed to embed the road safety message. Therefore it is within that context that DOE provides road safety teaching resources to enable teachers to teach road safety as part of the curriculum. Advice and guidance is also provided where required by the teaching professionals. In addition DOE also supports several road safety schemes, such as, the Practical Child Pedestrian Safety Training, Theatre in Education, and the Cycling Proficiency Scheme.

The Cycling Proficiency Scheme targets child cycling safety. The scheme focuses on the road safety elements of cycling, providing formal training in how to ride a bicycle safely, learn some of the rules of the road and how to negotiate junctions. In February each year the Road Safety Education Officers write to every primary and special school in Northern Ireland to promote the scheme. The teaching of road safety within the school environment is optional and down to the individual school, falling into 'Life Long Learning' agenda. Approximately 62% (539) Primary Schools with an average of 8,365 children train children through the Cycling Proficiency Scheme each year. It is delivered mostly to children in Primary 7, although some schools do offer the scheme to Primary 6 and occasionally Primary 5 children.

My Department has no powers to insist that a school takes up the option to deliver the Cycling Proficiency Scheme; this decision lies solely with individual schools.

Landfill Site at Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of times the Planning Service did not enact, follow or adhere to the recommendation by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency at Mobouy Road; and to outline the reasons for each instance.

(AQW 25616/11-15)

Mr Durkan: NIEA and its various business units are consultees to the Department on applications and enforcement cases such as Mobouy Road. NIEA provide Strategic Planning Division with their input and comments and it is for SPD to interpret that advice and make a decision or determination. SPD are not bound or required to accept the advice from any consultee and will provide valid justification for any disagreement.

In relation to concerns raised by NIEA on an application at Mobouy Road, the case officer challenged the concerns raised by the consultee to ensure they were relevant and substantiated.

The application was subsequently deemed refused before a response from the consultee was received.

Drumglass House

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 22801/11-15 and relating to the ongoing situation with the formerly known Drumglass Hospital building, to provide an update on the status of the matter and the proposed outcome.

(AQW 25623/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I understand that you received an update in regard to urgent repair works at Drumglass House, dated 24 May 2013, in response to AQW 22801/11-15.

NIEA:HBU (Historic Buildings Unit) issued an Urgent Works 'final warning' letter on 13 May 2013 to Havenport Properties Ltd, c/o MKB Russell's Solicitors, advising that the Department would issue an Urgent Works Notice, if works had not commenced by 17 June 2013.

No response was received to this final warning letter. On 28 June 2013, MKB solicitors confirmed that they were no longer acting for Havenport Properties Limited.

NIEA's Environmental Crime Unit (ECU) was then asked to help identify the buildings' owners. On 1 July 2013 the ECU reported that a meeting of creditors was scheduled for 4 July 2013 at James B. Kennedy & Co., Chartered Accountants and Licensed Insolvency Practitioners. On 29 July 2013, a letter was received from James B. Kennedy & Co., enclosing a copy of the Disclaimer in relation to Drumglass House, as lodged with the High Court (stamped 5 July 2013). The letter also advised that it is the understanding of the Liquidator '...that the property reverts to the Crown'.

Article 80(4) of the Planning (NI) Order states '...(4) The owner of the building shall be given not less than seven days' notice in writing of the intention to carry out the works and the notice shall describe the works proposed to be carried out.'

Until an owner has been identified, NIEA:HBU cannot proceed to issue a written notice. The matter has now been referred to the DoE Departmental Solicitors Office. I have asked officials to provide me with a further update on this case following receipt of further legal advice.

Stonebridge Development

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 24945/11-15, whether departmental officers have visited the Stonebridge village development site; and if so, what was the outcome of the visit.

(AQW 25628/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In AQW 24945/11-15 my predecessor Alex Attwood MLA confirmed that, in the past and actually back in 1973 the bridge in this development had been considered for listing. At that stage it was not considered to be listworthy. He informed you that he had asked departmental officers to revisit the structure and to reconsider its architectural and historic interest.

This re-visit and re-evaluation of the bridge has now been carried out and I can now confirm that, although the bridge is of some architectural and historic interest, it is not considered to be of sufficient interest to meet the statutory test as a listed building.

Mineral Extraction

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of discharge consents which have been granted to mineral extraction sites which did not have planning permission, at the time the consent to discharge was granted, in each year since 2000.

(AQW 25630/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are currently 85 discharge consents which have been granted to mineral extraction sites since 2000. I have been advised by my Department's Strategic Planning Division that the exercise to determine the existence of planning permission, bearing in mind the manual search of minerals files, would be disproportionate in terms of costs and staff time and divert staff from operational duties. If the Member seeks the planning history on a particular site this can be provided.

Marine Bill

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what consultation there will be on the guidance to be issued under the Marine Bill. (AQW 25686/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department plans to issue draft guidance on the selection and designation of Marine Conservation Zones (MCZs) in the Northern Ireland inshore region for a 12 week public consultation process in October 2013.

This guidance sets out the Department's approach to the selection and designation of MCZs in the Northern Ireland inshore region.

The Department also intends to develop guidance on the enforcement of byelaws in relation to MCZs and use of fixed monetary penalties. This guidance will be consulted on in due course.

Cycling: Road Safety

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment how many adverts his Department has commissioned, and plans to commission, to raise awareness of cyclist safety among motorists. (AQW 25692/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety and, within the context of the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy, does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, including road safety public information campaigns and education programmes.

Drivers are responsible for the majority of collisions, with the main causes being speeding, drink driving and inattention on our roads. Changing the attitudes and behaviours of drivers is therefore the most effective way of protecting all road users and our campaigns concentrate on changing such behaviours.

In October 2011, the Department launched the 'Be Cycle Aware' campaign, comprising of three advertisements; two of which are radio advertisements and the third a bus rear advertisement. This three-fold campaign reminds drivers and cyclists alike to pay attention when sharing the road. The first radio ad targets drivers as they travel in their vehicle during daytime hours when they would be expected to share the road with cyclists. The second targets cyclists, reminding them of their vulnerability and the need to pay attention. Likewise, the bus rear advertising reinforces this message as it alerts cyclists to be aware of their vulnerability as they share the road with many different vehicles. The radio campaign is on air at regular intervals as part of the Department's road safety radio activity and the bus rear campaign is also currently running.

In May 2012, a campaign was launched to encourage road users to 'respect everyone's journey'. The important safety messages to drivers will benefit all vulnerable road user groups, including cyclists.

In September 2012, a campaign was launched, focusing on wider road user responsibility, urging all road users to take responsibility for their actions on the road. The television, press and online campaign includes an injured cyclist saying "I was cycling in the bike lane. The driver said the sun was in his eyes."

A further campaign, launched on 24 April 2013, invites everyone to 'Share the Road to Zero'. This is aimed at all road user groups – cyclists, pedestrians, motorcyclists, drivers and passengers and, indeed, focuses heavily on cyclists in the opening scenes. The aim is to get every road user to take personal responsibility for helping to prevent deaths on Northern Ireland's roads. The social media aspect of this campaign provides appropriately targeted road safety messages to subscribers, including cyclists. This can be found at www.sharetheroadtozero.com

Between 2008 and 2012, six cyclists died on our roads. So far this year three cyclists have died. In 2012, 55 cyclists were seriously injured, an increase from 36 in 2003. The rate of Pedal Cyclist deaths and serious injuries per 100 million kilometers cycled in 2011, the latest figures available, was 77, an increase of 28% on the 2004-2008 baseline of 60.

Given a rise in cyclist casualties, the Department is currently analysing available data and has commissioned qualitative research to help inform consideration of potential new educational activity around cyclist safety.

I recognise the continuing challenges of reducing casualties on our roads, and will take forward further actions as appropriate from this analysis and research.

European Heritage Open Days

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to European Heritage Open Days (i) how much has been spent on advertising in 2013; and (ii) how many properties have been opened to the public, in each of the last five years. (AQW 25704/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

(i) £10,016 was used for advertising in the two weeks before the EHOD weekend.

Other communications activities included media relations, digital and social media marketing, brochures and posters. All of these other communications activities were delivered by staff within the Department, or by the events many volunteers, to highlight buildings or events they were involved with. Social media activities reached over 800 thousand people during this year's campaign; and also the print and broadcast media coverage was very extensive.

- (ii) In regard to the second part of your question, the table below gives numbers of properties and events together with information on properties alone for each of the last five years.

Year	No. of properties and events	No. of properties
2009	250	189
2010	265	185
2011	304	292
2012	320	303
2013	432	315

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment, given its impact on local businesses, when the report on the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan will be published.

(AQW 25710/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department plans to publish BMAP on completion of the relevant statutory processes and following the issue by DRD of a certificate of general conformity with the Regional Development Strategy 2035.

Quarries: Safety

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on his Department's work to increase safety in quarries.

(AQW 25719/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 3 July Minister Attwood convened a meeting with the Quarry Products Association, Health and Safety Executive NI, district councils, Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, and the Department of Justice to discuss options for taking further action to reduce the risks posed by disused quarries.

Following this meeting, the Minister:

- wrote to councils requesting as a matter of urgency, that the quarry review work is focussed on those disused quarries which present the highest risk sites before the main July holiday period, so that additional signage could be erected at these sites, and the PSNI advised accordingly;
- wrote to PSNI district commanders on 4th July, drawing their attention to the issue of potential risks at disused quarry sites, setting out the relevant legislation and listing the highest priority sites by district council area;
- launched a quarry safety campaign, 'Stay out! Stay safe!' on 8th July, with a news release which had wide uptake in regional and local press;
- engaged with the Department of Justice to raise awareness of the issue by distributing information and resources through Policing and Community Safety Partnerships;
- commissioned the Government Advertising Unit to arrange for a detailed schedule of display advertisements to be designed and placed in the daily and Sunday newspapers (11th July and 14th July), as well as all the regional weekly newspapers, (week beginning 15th July);
- commissioned the production of 1,000 'DANGER - NO SWIMMING' warning signs, which were made available to councils on 10th July, for immediate erection at highest risk sites (a further 1,000 warning signs were subsequently produced, for use by councils);
- commissioned the production of 1,500 campaign posters for display in public buildings, supported by media relations activities, social media activities, information on NIDirect and other relevant websites (councils, Northern Ireland Local Government Association, NI4Kids etc) and internal communications in Department of the Environment and the wider Northern Ireland Civil Service;
- established a new web-page on both the Department of the Environment and NIDirect websites warning of the dangers of swimming in disused quarries; and
- wrote to councils, asking them to give consideration to the potential for dyeing quarry water to dissuade swimming.

The District Council review of disused quarries across Northern Ireland is expected to be completed in the autumn. Following this I will assess the scale and precise nature of the problem. Only then will I be in a position to identify all the longer term options available and fully explore their implications with a view to minimising the risk of future loss of life.

Mineral Extraction

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has permitted any applicants to withdraw any planning applications for mineral extraction following refusal on Environmental Impact Assessment grounds since 2000; and to provide further details.

(AQW 25727/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am aware of one application which is procedurally listed on the Planning Portal as having been withdrawn, following refusal in accordance with the EIA Regulations.

I can confirm that this application relating to minerals extraction at Mobouy Road, Derry (planning reference A/2009/0400/F) is deemed refused as opposed to withdrawn.

Wind Turbines

Mr Wells asked the Minister of the Environment whether planning staff have the authority to ensure that wind turbines erected in the countryside are painted in appropriate colours in order to reduce their visual impact.

(AQW 25741/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 18 Policy RE1 Renewable Energy Development sets out the main considerations that the Department will take into account in assessing planning applications for renewable energy developments, including wind turbines.

The policy is accompanied by a Best Practice Guidance document which is also a material consideration to be taken into account when assessing wind turbine proposals.

Policy RE1 states that visual amenity and landscape character are among the material considerations which will form part of the assessment of a wind turbine planning application. The outcome of this assessment will however differ depending on the nature and scale of each application and, in particular, the location of each proposal and the ability of the landscape to absorb the turbine.

Paragraph 1.2.13 of the Best Practice Guidance advises that wind turbines are usually semi-matt white, off white or grey in colour, often as a condition of planning permission. In the event that it is considered that a different coloured turbine would assist with the integration of the proposal, the Department's planning officers can use their professional judgement to request that the colour is changed. It is important to note, however, that changing the colour of a turbine will not allow an unacceptable proposal to become acceptable; it may merely assist with the integration of an already acceptable proposal.

Planning decisions are made on the individual merits of each application on a case by case basis and after all planning policies and other material considerations have been taken into account.

Waste Management: Leisure Services

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how much was spent by leisure services in each local council on (i) the disposal of waste by recycling; and (ii) conventional waste disposal, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25830/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department does not hold these figures. I have asked my officials to request councils to provide this information.

It will take several weeks to compile the information and I will forward it to you as soon as it has been received from the councils.

Single-use Plastic Bag Levy

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how much revenue has been raised from the Carrier Bag Levy to date.

(AQW 25844/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The 5 pence single use carrier bag levy has raised £902,000 to date. These proceeds relate to single use bags distributed by retailers during the first three months of the levy (8 April to 30 June 2013 inclusive).

I intend to allocate the net proceeds of the levy to help fund community groups, charities, schools and businesses in delivering local projects to improve the environment for everyone. I will identify some of these projects in the coming weeks.

Waste Management

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of the Environment why Becon/ARC21 is seeking planning permission for a 300,000 ton per annum facility when it is estimated that it will receive a maximum of 250,000 tons of municipal waste per year from the participating councils.

(AQW 25934/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No formal planning application for a Waste Treatment Facility at Hightown Quarry has been received by DOE Planning from Becon/arc21

There however have been ongoing pre application discussions between the Department, arc 21 and key statutory consultees.

If an application is received, it will be advertised and robustly assessed against relevant planning policy and all other relevant planning considerations including public representatives and the views of elected representatives.

The onus will be on the applicant to demonstrate and justify the scale of the proposal in the Environmental Statement.

Environmental Impact Assessment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment at what stage in the processing of a planning application would his Department normally be expected to carry out an Environmental Impact Assessment Determination.

(AQW 26000/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Under Regulation 10 of the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, the Department must make a determination on the need for an Environmental Impact Statement within 4 weeks from the date of receipt of the application or such longer period as may be agreed in writing with the applicant.

The requirement under Regulation 10 relates to the categories of development set out in Schedule 1 and 2 of the 2012 Regulations.

Maze/Long Kesh Site: Listed Buildings

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether, at the time of listing of the retained buildings at the Maze/Long Kesh site, there was any architectural quality or interest in the physical fabric of the buildings, that was anticipated would exist by the then prevailing Planning Policy Statement 6, before a listing on the grounds of historical associations would be justified.

(AQO 4614/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Listing decisions are based upon Article 42 of the Planning (NI) Order (1991) which states that the Department shall draw up lists of buildings of 'special architectural or historic interest' i.e. there is no presumption that architectural interest is required to list a building.

Quoting from the version of PPS6 prevailing at the time that the Maze was listed - 'In the case of historical associations, there will generally need to be some additional quality or interest in the physical fabric of the building to justify listing'. It also went on to explain 'Either the building will have architectural merit in itself or it should be preserved in a form which directly reveals its historical associations.'

In this case, the buildings are preserved in a form which directly reveals their historical associations. However, the listing reports, which are published on the Northern Ireland Buildings Database also make clear that the structures are considered to possess architectural interest. For example, the evaluation of H Block 6, reads as follows 'A structure which represents a significant development in the construction history of British Penal architecture and a form which is synonymous with The Maze Cellular.' It also records that 'Its structural system and internal details are of interest' as well as noting that 'Its setting and surroundings add to its penal character.'

Planning: Three Rivers Project, Strabane

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment what actions he has taken to progress consideration of the application for the Three Rivers Project in Strabane.

(AQO 4615/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Three Rivers project is a proposed mixed-use development in Strabane which raises a number of fundamental planning concerns. These require careful consideration before a determination can be made. I have previously stated that I intend to make the right decisions as quickly as possible to ensure that planning delivers a better environment and stronger economy.

I met the developer and his agents last month to discuss the project and when I have fully considered all the aspects of the proposed development I will make a final decision on the way forward with this particular planning application.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Surveying of Properties Prior to Purchase

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has any plans to change legislation in relation to the surveying of properties prior to purchase.

(AQW 25397/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): I am assuming that this question relates to the commissioning of a survey, rather than the professional standards which may be expected of a surveyor.

There is no legislative requirement in Northern Ireland to have a property surveyed prior to purchase. However, because of the principle known as caveat emptor (buyer beware), and the general conditions of sale contained within the standard form property contract issued by the Law Society of Northern Ireland, a purchaser in Northern Ireland will generally be advised to obtain a survey prior to entering into contract. My Department is currently working on provisions which will give effect to the Northern Ireland Law Commission's recommendations in respect of the general land law. However, I have no plans to review conveyancing law in Northern Ireland.

Central Procurement Directorate

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline what efforts have been made within the Central Procurement Directorate, to take into consideration the aim of building community capacity, when addressing tenders for self-harm and suicide support services.

(AQW 25437/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) is the lead professional procurement body for Northern Ireland with responsibility for formulating policy proposals, reviewing procurement policy and disseminating policies and monitoring their implementation.

CPD also supports the NI Public Sector by helping NI Departments and their funded bodies obtain best value for money in the procurement of the supplies, services and construction works needed to deliver their Programme for Government and business objectives.

When a department requires CPD to undertake a tendering competition, the procurement process is carried out in line with NI Public Procurement Policy and the relevant legislation.

CPD would not be involved in building capacity within any sector likely to submit a tender for the contract.

The department commissioning the work may review several delivery options before deciding to go out to tender. These options could include whether the services could be funded by way of a grant. It would be at this point that building community capacity would be considered by the relevant department.

General Register Office

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) when the historic indexes of the General Register Office will become available online; and (ii) any costs associated when accessing the indexes.

(AQW 25449/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The General Register Office online genealogical facility is currently due to be launched in March 2014.

Charges for all services associated with access to and receipt of historic GRO records will be governed by Managing Public Money NI (MPMNI) guidelines. A Fees Order will be brought before the Assembly in due course which will include the detail of these.

Land and Property Services

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what mechanisms exist for Departments to challenge the advice received from Land and Property Services.

(AQW 25511/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: LPS provides such advice and guidance where options to acquire, lease, sell, transfer or refurbish property are being considered and in connection with applications for grant aid and social security benefits, claims for compensation following schemes of public works, the assessment of capital taxes, and many other statutory and extra-statutory schemes.

Where the advice is provided in connection with compulsory purchase or capital taxation, a third party may challenge it by referring the matter to the Lands Tribunal for Northern Ireland. Other valuation schemes either make no provision for formal challenge or provide for resolution of disputes by an arbitrator or other tribunal e.g. the Social Security Appeals Tribunal may determine the value of property owned by a claimant.

Where LPS advice is in relation to a discretionary transaction there will not normally be a formal challenge mechanism. Frequently however, preliminary valuation advice on a proposed discretionary sale or acquisition is sought from LPS for budgetary purposes. If the transaction is to proceed then LPS will be further instructed to negotiate the price. If the initial offer by LPS is not acceptable, then the third party may appoint their own valuer in order to seek a negotiated settlement.

A Department or Minister may also of course commission an independent review of any LPS valuation. All LPS valuers preparing market valuations are professionally qualified members of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors and are registered under the RICS Valuer Registration Scheme. The RICS Valuation Standards, 'the Red Book' provides guidance for members appointed to review another surveyor's valuation.

Productivity

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the overall productivity of (i) the financial services sector; (ii) the retail sector; (iii) the manufacturing sector; and (iv) the agri-food sector compared to the rest of the United Kingdom, since 2007.

(AQW 25530/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Official Productivity data for the UK is produced by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) but is not available for countries or regions of the UK disaggregated by industry sector. However, the Department for Business Innovation and Skills (BIS) publish regional information on Gross Value Added (GVA) per workforce job by broad industry sector<sup>2</sup> and figures are currently available up to 2009. Table 1 overleaf presents NI data expressed as a percentage of the UK estimate for 2007-2009.

Table 1: NI GVA per workforce job by broad industry sector as a percentage of the UK

Gross Value Added

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the geographical spread of Gross Value Added generated by local businesses.

(AQW 25531/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information on the geographical spread of Gross Value Added (GVA) is produced by the Office for National Statistics but is not available for countries or regions of the UK disaggregated by local and non local businesses.

However, information on approximate<sup>1</sup> GVA from locally owned businesses in the private sector by geographical spread in Northern Ireland is available from the Northern Ireland Annual Business Inquiry for 2011, the most recent information available. The statistics are presented in Table 1.

NUTS3	Approximate Gross Value Added (£million)	Coefficient of Variation <sup>2</sup>
Belfast	1,489	9.5
East	1,714	4.9
North	967	6.2
Outer Belfast	1,349	8.0
West and South	2,068	5.4

Source: NI Annual Business Inquiry 2011 Local Unit Results

1. The Annual Business Inquiry measure of GVA is referred to as approximate because it does not fully allow for some National Accounts concepts such as taxes, subsidies or income earned in kind. In addition, the National Accounts estimate of GVA covers the whole UK economy, whereas ABI does not include some parts of the agriculture and financial activities sector, or public administration and defence.
2. The coefficient of variation measures the variability of the values by expressing the standard error as a percentage of the parameter estimate. A larger coefficient of variation implies a larger variability.

Business Start-ups

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of local business start-ups compared to the rest of the UK, for each year since 2007.

(AQW 25545/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Inter-Departmental Business Register (IDBR) contains information on all businesses in the United Kingdom which are either VAT registered or operating a PAYE scheme. A business start-up is defined as a business that is active on the IDBR in the current year, but was not present (as an active business) in either of the previous two years. The location of the business is determined by the registered UK address for the business which is usually the main operating site or head office within the UK. Businesses operating in Northern Ireland will only be included (under Northern Ireland) if their registered UK address is in Northern Ireland

The number of business start-ups for Northern Ireland compared to the rest of the UK, for 2007 to 2011, is provided in Table 1 overleaf.

Country	Number of Business Start-ups
	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
United Kingdom	280,730	267,445	236,025	235,145	261,370
Northern Ireland	5,960	5,655	3,945	4,590	3,745
England	246,700	236,345	209,030	207,520	232,460
Scotland	18,165	16,225	14,725	15,530	16,940
Wales	9,905	9,220	8,325	7,505	8,225

<sup>1</sup> A business start-up is identified as a business that was present in year t, but did not exist in year t-1 or t-2.

Productivity

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline local productivity (output worked per hour) compared to the rest of the UK, for each year since 2007.

(AQW 25546/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Official regional productivity figures are published by the Office for National Statistics. Information on nominal Gross Value Added per hour worked for Northern Ireland, expressed as a percentage of the UK estimate for each year since 2007, is provided in Table 1 below.

Table 1: NI productivity relative to the UK – nominal GVA per hour worked

Year	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
NI/UK	80.7%	80.5%	79.7%	80.9%	84.0%

Innovation Active Firms

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the percentage of innovation active firms compared with the rest of the UK, for every year since 2007.

(AQW 25548/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The UK Innovation Survey (UKIS) runs on a biennial basis, with figures produced for a three year period in each survey cycle. Statistics are therefore not available on an annual basis. Table 1 presents findings from the Northern Ireland analysis.

Survey period	Percentage Innovation Active: NI	Percentage Innovation Active: UK
2008-2010	27%	31%
2006-2008	31%	38%

The definition of 'innovation active' for the period 2008-2010 (UKIS 2011) included businesses that had engaged in any of the following activities:

- Introduction of a new or significantly improved product or process;
- Engagement in innovation projects not yet complete or abandoned;
- New and significantly improved forms of organisation, business structures or practices and marketing concepts or strategies;
- Activities in areas such as internal research and development, training, acquisition of external knowledge or machinery and equipment linked to innovation activities.

The definition used for the period 2006-2008 (UKIS 2009) referred to businesses that had engaged in any of the activities 'a', 'b' and 'd'.

Stormont Estate: Parking

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel on why parking is no longer permitted along the driveway leading from Massey Avenue to Carson's Statue, Stormont Estate.

(AQW 25669/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Massey Avenue entrance is the busiest entry point to the Stormont Estate with over 2000 vehicles and 30 tour and sightseeing buses entering and exiting the Estate via this route on Assembly sitting days.

Prior to the current parking restrictions being introduced Massey Avenue had become extremely congested with parked vehicles on both sides of the road making passing difficult.

The Stormont Estate Management Unit monitors car parking on the Estate in order to ensure that effective usage is made of all spaces and if overspill parking for visitors to the Assembly is required this will be accommodated on the Prince of Wales Avenue.

The situation with Massey Avenue being designated as a no parking zone will be kept under ongoing review.

Bank Lending to Businesses

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has made any progress in obtaining the regional data on bank lending to small and medium-sized enterprises.

(AQW 25773/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As you may be aware, my Department currently receives a quarterly 'bank support for businesses in Northern Ireland' report on a confidential basis which provides high level data on deposits and lending to Small and Medium Sized Enterprises locally.

This data relates to the activities of the four main banks operating locally and my Department has been pressing for some time now for this to be widened to include other banks with a presence in Northern Ireland. We have also been calling for the scope of the data provided to be extended, and in particular for a sectoral breakdown to be provided.

And in this regard I met with the Chief Executive of the British Bankers Association (BBA) earlier this month to stress the importance of this data and to seek an update from him on when and how the banks could deliver on this. Mr Browne indicated to me that he hoped that an improved dataset would be available before the end of the year and that he would update me on the precise detail of this in due course.

Stormont Estate: Cycling

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what plans he has to make the Stormont Estate more facilitative for cyclists.

(AQW 25780/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department is currently working with the Department for Regional Development through its Travelwise NI initiative, and in conjunction with the Stormont Estate Travel Plan, to actively encourage staff who work on the Estate to consider all sustainable travel methods as alternatives to using cars to travel to work.

A survey will shortly be issued to all staff who work on the Estate to help identify their current travel means and to ask them that if relevant support services were available, whether they would cycle to work. If the results of this survey identify sufficient need my Department will act on providing support services.

Gross Domestic Product

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the rationale behind his conclusion that the public sector accounts for two thirds of Gross Domestic Product.

(AQW 25823/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Total Identifiable Expenditure in Northern Ireland as detailed in Treasury's Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis (PESA) stood at £19.2bn in 2010/11. This represented approximately 66 per cent of Northern Ireland's total Gross Value Added (GVA) - which is the standard measure of output at a regional level - in that year.

Barnett Consequentials

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what are the Barnett Consequentials of the Government announcement of £600 million for free schools meals in England.

(AQW 25941/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Deputy Prime Minister, Nick Clegg, announced on 17 September 2013 that all children in England in reception and year 1 & 2 will receive free school meals from September 2014. He also announced that the UK Government will extend free school meals to English disadvantaged students in further education and sixth form colleges. Together these two initiatives are estimated to cost approximately £600 million.

Discussions with HM Treasury indicate that the funding arrangements for these initiatives will not be determined until the Chancellor's Autumn Statement. It is therefore currently unclear how much, if any, of this is additional funding or indeed to be covered from within the English Department of Education's existing baseline. This will, of course, determine the extent of any Barnett Consequentials for Northern Ireland.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Tobacco

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of convictions there have been for the (i) illegal sale of tobacco; and (ii) sale of illicit tobacco, in the last three years.

(AQW 25590/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The enforcement of tobacco control legislation is the responsibility of district councils. Information provided by the councils in relation to part (i) of the question has indicated that between 2009/10 and 2012/13, there were a total of 70 convictions in Northern Ireland for the sale of tobacco products to children and young people under the age of 18.

In relation to part (ii), the issue of illicit tobacco is primarily a matter for HM Revenue and Customs. Information received from HMRC, through the Department of Justice, has confirmed that in Northern Ireland there have been 12 convictions for excise evasion in relation to tobacco in the last three years.

Cancellation of Clinics

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list the clinics which have been cancelled due to the annual leave of Health and Social Care Trust staff in each of the last twelve months, broken down by Trust.

(AQW 25593/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Quarterly Outpatient Activity Return (QOAR), which is the present methodology for the collection of consultant-led outpatient activity, was introduced by my Department's Hospital Information Branch from the beginning of 2008/09, as a direct result of a comprehensive review of collection of outpatient activity undertaken in 2007/08. Primarily the methodology changed from the reporting of the number of clinics held and cancelled to the reporting of the number of appointments held and cancelled.

Information on the number of hospital cancellations, in Health and Social Care Trusts in Northern Ireland, is collected and published broken down by regionally agreed reasons for cancellation. Cancellations due to the annual leave of HSC staff are sub-regional codes under the regional reasons 'Consultant unavailable' and 'Medical Staff/Nurse Unavailable'.

It should be noted that the variable on the Patient Administration System (PAS) that provides the breakdown of the variable 'reason for cancellation' was not a mandatory field until March 2013 and as such the rate of coverage varied across Trusts.

Information on the number of consultant-led appointments cancelled by hospitals due to the annual leave of Health and Social Care staff, in each of the twelve months of the financial year 2012/13, is shown in the table overleaf. This is the latest position for which official statistics are available.

Dentistry Graduates

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many dental graduates were awarded a Bachelor of Dental Surgery in 2013 from Queen's University, Belfast.

(AQW 25595/11-15)

Mr Poots: 52 dental graduates were awarded a Bachelor of Dental Surgery in 2013 from Queen's University Belfast.

Foundation Dentists

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the maximum number of funded practice-based training places available for Foundation Dentists.

(AQW 25597/11-15)

Mr Poots: The maximum number of practice based training places available in 2013 for Foundation Dentists was 34. NIMDTA aim to increase the number of training places from 34 in 2013 to 36 in future years.

Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety pursuant to AQW 23778/11-15, was there a Service Level Agreement or Memorandum of Understanding between his Department and the Central Investigation Service.

(AQW 25636/11-15)

Mr Poots: DARD's Central Investigation Service provides an investigation and counter fraud service which can be accessed by other Government Departments, providing specialist expertise and advice on fraud related investigations. There was no Service Level Agreement or Memorandum of Understanding between my Department and the Central Investigation Service.

Medicines Manufacturing

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to Health and Social Care Trusts that are listed on the Medicines Care Products Regulatory Agency's Register of Licensed Manufacturing Sites, (i) to list the Site Identification numbers and addresses of all Licensed Manufacturing Sites; and (ii) to list the (a) IV Fluids; and (b) other Pharmaceutical Products manufactured at, or imported to, each Licensed Manufacturing Site.

(AQW 25660/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) has confirmed that there are two types of licensed manufacturers. Companies who manufacture or import medicines which are the subject of a Marketing Authorisation do so under a Manufacturing and Import Authorisation (MIA) licence. Companies who manufacture or import medicines which are not the subject of a Marketing Authorisation and produce unlicensed medicines for a special clinical need, do so under a Manufacturing Specials (MS) licence.

- (i) The site Identification numbers and addresses of all Manufacturing Sites in relation to Health and Social Care Trusts that are listed on the Medicines Healthcare Regulatory Agency's Register of Licensed Manufacturing sites are set out at Tab 1.
- (ii) A list of (a) IV Fluids; and (b) other Pharmaceutical Products manufactured at or imported to, each Licensed Manufacturing site is set out at Tab 2.

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list (i) the name; and (ii) Licence Holder Number of any Health and Social Care Trust currently listed on the Medicines Care Products Regulatory Agency's Register of Licensed Manufacturing Sites.

(AQW 25661/11-15)

Mr Poots: The name and Licence holder number of the Health and Social Care Trusts currently listed on the Medicines Care Products Regulatory Agency's Register of Licensed Manufacturing Sites are set out in the table below.

Name of Health and Social Care Trust	Licence Holder Number
Belfast Health and Social Care Trust	MS 32485
Western Health and Social Care Trust	MS 33876
Southern Health and Social Care Trust	MS 33400

Health and Social Care: Compulsory Redundancies

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the amount spent on (i) Other Departures Agreed; and (ii) Compulsory Redundancies by each Health and Social Care Trust, in each year since 2009.

(AQW 25663/11-15)

Mr Poots: There have been no compulsory redundancies in Health and Social Care Trusts since 2009. Information on 'Other Departures Agreed' is not held centrally and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Directorate of Legal Services

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the Directorate of Legal Services; and whether he has any plans to contract out legal services through procurement.

(AQW 25683/11-15)

Mr Poots: The main function of the Business Services Organisation is to provide a range of support services, including legal services, to health and social care bodies, in line with the Health and Social Care (Reform) Act (NI) 2009. I have no plans to change this arrangement.

Rathmoyle Care Home, Ballymoney

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on what date was the last patient admitted to Rathmoyle Care Home, Ballymoney.

(AQW 25703/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Trust has advised that the last permanent resident was admitted on 17th December 2011 and the last respite resident was admitted on 8th September 2013.

Prisons: Prisoner Medication Policy

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether consideration has been given to prisoners being given medication in liquid form with supervised swallowing, particularly those who are vulnerable and/or at risk of being bullied for medication.

(AQW 25728/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health & Social Care Trust is currently running a trial of the administration of liquid medications for abusable/tradable supervised swallow medications in HMP Magilligan.

This trial has been in place from the beginning of September 2013 and has so far proven successful in reducing the potential diversion of these supervised swallow medications. Once this trial is complete, the Trust intends to roll this trial out to HMP Hydebank Wood and HMP Maghaberry.

Chronic Pain

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what his Department is doing to assist people living with chronic pain.

(AQW 25746/11-15)

Mr Poots: GPs provide appropriate treatment and support for patients presenting with chronic pain. If appropriate, patients may be referred to specialist pain management clinics, various support groups or practice counsellors. Pain management services are delivered in each Health and Social Care Trust area, with the Belfast Trust delivering specialist pain management services and procedures.

In April 2012, I launched "Living with Long Term Conditions", my Department's Policy Framework to provide strategic direction for the reform and modernisation of services for adults with long term conditions. The Framework is designed to be relevant across a wide range of long term conditions, including chronic pain. The Framework focuses on six key areas of care including supporting self management, medicines management and improving care and services.

A Regional Implementation Steering Group has been established and is in the process of developing an action plan identifying how the good practice outlined in the policy framework can be implemented and extended regionally and at a local level, working in partnership with the voluntary, community and independent sectors.

Child Obesity

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what new or additional strategies are being employed to combat the issue of child obesity.

(AQW 25782/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department launched the current obesity prevention strategy, known as "A Fitter Future for All" in March 2012. This framework encompasses the actions set out in the original Fit Futures Implementation Plan (which dealt specifically with childhood obesity) and includes outcomes designed to tackle obesity throughout the entire life course of the population of Northern Ireland.

This framework also makes links to existing and forthcoming strategies and policies that can have a beneficial impact on the issue of obesity including:

- Start Active, Stay Active – A report on physical activity for health from the four home countries' Chief Medical Officers – Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety (2011).
- Breastfeeding: A Great Start – A Strategy for Northern Ireland 2013-2033 DHSSPS.
- The new Public Health Strategic Framework (anticipated to be launched in 2013) DHSSPS.
- A new Food in Schools Policy – Department of Education (anticipated to be launched in September 2013)
- Sport Matters – The Northern Ireland Strategy for Sport and Physical Recreation 2009-2019 – Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure.
- An Action Plan for Active Travel in Northern Ireland 2012-2015 – Department for Regional Development.
- Play and Leisure Policy – Office of the First Minister and the deputy First Minister.

The Public Health Agency also fund a range of initiatives, programmes, and schemes delivered in local communities that seek to prevent and address obesity, these include: allotment schemes, programmes to support the development of cooking skills, and initiatives that promote walking, cycling and active play.

Child Protection

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what communication takes place between schools and social services in child protection cases or the suspicion of child protection issues.

(AQW 25786/11-15)

Mr Poots: Responsibility for schools in communicating child protection matters is outlined in the Department of Education Circular 9/99 Pastoral Care in Schools – Child Protection. My Department's expectations on how agencies should share information with social services, where there are child protection concerns, are set out in the extant Departmental guidance Cooperating to Safeguard Children (2003), (which is currently being revised) and the Area Child Protection Committee's Regional Policy and Procedures (2005).

One of the statutory functions of the Safeguarding Board is to develop policies and procedures for safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children. Once developed, these will replace the extant Regional Area Child Protection Committee's Policy and Procedures.

Western Health and Social Care Trust: Mental Health

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the process, and the timeline, to determine the location of the second acute mental health unit in the Western Health and Social Care Trust, including any remaining consultations with key stakeholders.

(AQW 25792/11-15)

Mr Poots: In my statement to the Assembly on 19 March 2013, I confirmed that the business case for the second acute mental health unit will examine fully the options for the location of the unit.

In line with this, the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) is currently undertaking an appraisal of the two suggested locations for the second Mental Health in-patient unit. Consultation has taken place with local clinicians, and further consultation is planned with the Western Local Commissioning Group which includes representation from local council, health professionals and the community and voluntary sector.

The HSCB are due to report to me with their advice before the end of December 2013.

Adoption: Legal Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has spent on legal costs associated with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission's challenge to adoption law since the papers were filed, and including the original High Court case.

(AQW 25824/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department has spent circa £40K to date. This figure includes the costs associated with the High Court proceedings.

Hospital Food

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there is a central departmental policy guiding Health and Social Care Trusts in how they produce hospital food and outsource catering services.

(AQW 25856/11-15)

Mr Poots: In April 2012 my Department published "A Strategic Framework for the Delivery of Health and Social Care Catering Services". This strategy sets out the Department's policy on the future development and delivery of catering services. Whilst this framework focuses on catering services to patients, staff and visitors on hospital sites, many of the principles are also applicable in community and day-care provision. The Strategy is fully accessible on my Department's website.

Child Protection

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department has taken since the publication of the Barnardo's report, which was commissioned by his Department in 2011, to protect children; and what measures his Department has taken to address the concerns contained in the report.

(AQW 25864/11-15)

Mr Poots: Since the publication of the Barnardo's report Not a World Away: The Sexual Exploitation of Children and Young People in Northern Ireland, which was published in 2011, a number of actions have been taken, the aim of which is to strengthen the protection arrangements for children in Northern Ireland and to address the concerns contained in the report. These include:

- the establishment of a statutory Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNi) which has agreed that a multi-agency plan on Child Sexual Exploitation should be developed;
- ongoing implementation of new statutory vetting and barring arrangements to prevent unsuitable individuals obtaining work and volunteering opportunities with children and vulnerable adults;

- ongoing revision of government's key children's safeguarding policy guidance, Co-operating to Safeguard Children, which is a Programme for Government commitment;
- through the Commissioning Plan Direction, directing the Health and Social Care Board to ensure that the most vulnerable in society are looked after effectively across all services. The Direction makes specific reference to looked after children and includes targets and performance indicators relating to looked after children;
- the introduction of a range of therapeutic support approaches across children's homes in Northern Ireland to assist social workers to develop a better appreciation and understanding of the complex needs of the young people in their care;
- the establishment of a new Sexual Assault Referral Centre, which accepts referrals relating to both children and adults from a range of sources, including self-referrals;
- the development of an untoward events reporting mechanism which requires each episode of a young person missing for over 24 hours to be reported to a single point in the Health and Social Care Board for review;
- a revision of the Delegated Statutory Functions reporting system, which now reports not only on young people missing for more than 24 hours but also on the number of contacts between a children's home and the police and the reasons for contact;
- increased funding of the Barnardo's Safe Choices project, which provides information, training and support to staff working in residential care and the direct provision of services to children who may be at risk of child sexual exploitation;
- investment by the Public Health Agency (PHA) to provide information support and signposting on drugs and alcohol, mental and sexual health and other matters as well as youth treatment, specialist drug and alcohol posts with Child and Adolescent Mental Health services, targeted education programmes for at risk young people and services for families;
- a revision of guidance (originally published in 2009) issued jointly by PSNI and the Health and Social Care Board in 2012 which sets out what action should be taken by the PSNI and the relevant Health and Social Care Trust when a child goes missing and what action should be taken when the child is located;
- new children's homes standards, which are in the process of being finalised;
- a major review by the Health and Social Care Board of residential care provision in Northern Ireland, which is in its final stages;
- the establishment of an Early Intervention Fund by April 2014 focusing on embedding early intervention into professional training and development, in our mainstream children's services and delivering an early intervention service portfolio, accessed through the Family Support Hubs, which are being put in place across Northern Ireland; and more recently
- the publication of a number of child sexual exploitation awareness-raising leaflets for children, parents/carers and professionals in contact with children and young people; and the establishment of a Helpline dedicated to responding to concerns about child sexual exploitation from children, parents and carers.

Direct Payments

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people in each Health and Social Care Trust area are in receipt of Direct Payments.

(AQW 25910/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not centrally available.

Information on the number of direct payments paid during each quarter and the amount paid can be found on the DHSSPS website at the following address: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/stats-cib/statistics\_and\_research-cib-guide/statistics\_and\_research-cib-direct-payment.htm

Rathmoyle Nursing Home

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in light of the closure of Rathmoyle Nursing Home, whether the Northern Health and Social Care Trust has secured new premises for its day care centre.

(AQW 25971/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Rathmoyle site has been earmarked for several years for a Supported Living facility and was subject to a previous consultation in 2009.

However, it is recognised that the development of this supported living facility may have implications for the attached day centre which also occupies the site. Before any final decisions are made my Department will seek the assurance of the HSC Board that suitable alternatives are in place for day care to meet the current and future needs of the local population.

Missed Appointments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many missed appointments there have been at GP practices, in the North Down, area in the last twelve months.

(AQW 26014/11-15)

Mr Poots: General Practitioners (GPs) are independent contractors who contract with the Health and Social Care Board to provide Primary Medical Services to their patients. As independent contractors, GPs are responsible for the day to day management of their practice, including patient appointment arrangements, therefore information on missed appointments is not collated centrally and therefore could only be available at disproportionate cost.

The issue of missed appointments is dealt with by practices on an individual basis.

Sexual Exploitation of Children and Young People

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to the Barnardo's report on 'The sexual exploitation of children and young people in Northern Ireland', to detail (i) when he received the report, either in draft or final form; (ii) the action he took as a result, including dates.

(AQW 26050/11-15)

Mr Poots: I received an invitation from the Director of Barnardo's Northern Ireland to speak at the launch of the Barnardo's research report 'Not a World away', the sexual exploitation of children and young people in Northern Ireland. The launch of the report took place on Monday 7 November 2011 in Parliament Buildings.

A draft of the report was received on 4 August and the final report received in the Department on 27 October 2011.

I attach a table which details both the actions taken to date and ongoing work by my Department, the Health and Social Care Board, Health and Social Care Trusts and the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland. All actions relate directly to the recommendations of the Barnardo's report.

Annex A

Barnardo's Report "Not a World Away" the sexual exploitation of children and young people in Northern Ireland – Recommendations, action taken to date and ongoing work by DHSSPS, HSCB, HSCTs and SBNI

Rec.	Recommendation	Action taken	Current Status
1	When established, the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland [SBNI] should, as part of its work plan, consider the issue of child sexual exploitation and the effectiveness of current responses to it.	The SBNI was established on 17 September 2012 and within 3 weeks (on 04 October 2012) wrote to Directors of Children's Services within all five HSC Trusts to seek information on prevalence of CSE, how Trusts identify it and respond to it in risk management terms and to ask Trusts to identify any particular problems experienced in connection with CSE. This information was used to inform the action plan now being taken by the SBNI. The SBNI draft Strategic Plan was issued for consultation in April 2013 with an end date in July 2013. This draft plan indicated that the SBNI would work with member agencies to develop a coordinated strategy and working model to protect and safeguard children who go missing from home and care and/or at risk of sexual exploitation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ A range of actions is now planned by the SBNI. They include:</li> <li>■ The Establishment of a sexual exploitation Strategic Partnership Group;</li> <li>■ The identification of the scale and nature of the problem in NI;</li> <li>■ The development of an awareness raising campaign for children, families and professionals (the launch of the leaflets is the start of the campaign);</li> <li>■ A review of the risk assessment tools currently being used;</li> <li>■ The development of an information sharing agreement for CSE;</li> <li>■ A review existing procedures / guidance to establish any gaps;</li> </ul>	Ongoing

Rec.	Recommendation	Action taken	Current Status
		Working with the Knowledge Transfer Hub to identify education requirements for children, parents and professionals Working with the Knowledge Transfer Hub to scope and research good models of practice and how this can be translated to Northern Ireland; Evaluating and/or piloting a co-located multi-disciplinary/ multi-agency team focusing on children who go missing.
2	DHSSPS should revise existing Safeguarding and Child Protection Guidance to explicitly reference the complex nature and impact of sexual exploitation. This should be supported by the development of detailed inter-agency procedural guidance for practitioners to assist them to respond appropriately to instances where the sexual exploitation of children or young people is confirmed or suspected. The latter will be a matter for the SBNI to consider when established.	There are a number of child protection guidance documents which the department is in the process of developing. They include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ A revision of extant Departmental guidance Co-operating to Safeguard Children, first produced in 2003. The revision is a Programme for Government commitment. This is due to be published by March 2015, after a period of public consultation. While this is a DHSSPS-led exercise, child safeguarding is a cross-government activity as effective safeguarding requires interdepartmental, multi-agency and multi-disciplinary support.</li> <li>■ This guidance will be supplemented by operational child protection policies and procedures, which will also deal with child sexual exploitation. This is a statutory responsibility of the SBNI.</li> <li>■ Departmental guidance on safeguarding children and young people who are sexually active is currently being developed by a multi-agency working group. The guidance will be issued for consultation by March 2014.</li> </ul> In addition: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ In April 2012, the HSCB published Regional Residential Child Care Policies issued By Health &amp; Social Care Board, which includes chapters on safeguarding, with a specific section on Child Sexual Exploitation, a section on misuse of substances which also assists in that it specifically addresses the relevant issues of Alcohol and Drugs counselling, and there is also a guidance chapter on Physical Restraint.</li> <li>■ In May 2012, the guidance document "Police Involvement in Residential Care Safeguarding of Children Missing from Home and Foster Care" was further revised by the HSCB, directly as a result of the Barnardo's report.</li> </ul>	Ongoing

Rec.	Recommendation	Action taken	Current Status
3	The HSC Board should progress the development of a targeted and fully resourced action plan on sexual exploitation that includes, but is not limited to, consideration of the following issues: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ data collection and monitoring</li> <li>■ professional competency and capacity</li> <li>■ best-practice models for responding to sexual exploitation, including the merits of a co-located inter-agency model of response</li> <li>■ regional implementation of the sexual exploitation risk assessment tool</li> <li>■ resourcing of a regional specialist support service.</li> </ul>	A number of fully resourced actions were taken by the HSC Board and HSC Trusts which respond to the elements of the action plan identified in this recommendation in the Barnardo's report. 1 Data collection and monitoring The Barnardo's report identifies a strong (although not absolute) link between children going missing and the risk of child sexual exploitation. In recognition of that fact, the Board collects data on missing children through the Delegated Statutory Functions reporting mechanism. The system of data collection was revised in April 2011 and again in April 2013. Information is now collected on the numbers of children who go missing and the number of times a child goes missing. Initially information related to periods of absence of more than 24 hours. Information is now recorded on contact between children's homes and the police relating to children who go missing for less than 24 hours, including absences of a relatively short duration. The Board has also introduced a Regional Untoward Events reporting mechanism which includes the provision of a report for each event where a young person is missing for more than 24 hours. These reports are collected centrally to allow for professional oversight and follow up on individual incidents and for data collation and analysis. Within Trusts, a range of data collection and monitoring systems have been established. By way of example, in the South Eastern Trust, a Safety, Quality and Experience project regarding missing children has been ongoing since October 2012. In the Western Trust, a Senior Management Risk Monitoring meeting takes place on a monthly basis to consider trends and patterns that come from the Team Health Checks; as a result of those meetings, corrective action is taken if necessary. Finally, data collection relating to identification of the scale and nature of the problem of child sexual exploitation will be taken forward under the auspices of the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland.	Ongoing
		2 Professional competency and capacity The HSCB and Trusts plan, commission and provide a wide range of training initiatives for staff working Children's Services based on identified priorities and service needs on an annual basis. The following are examples of the broad range of training which has particular relevance to child sexual exploitation (CSE) and the professional competence issues raised in the Barnardo's report. This is not an exhaustive list. Competence Child Sexual Exploitation Specific training by Safe Choices, commissioned by the HSCB, has been provided across all Trust on signs, symptoms and preventative strategies in respect of CSE. Such training has been commissioned since 2008. In 2012/13 356 staff and carers received this training. Safe Choices also provide detailed consultations on specific cases. Since 2007, over 4000 people in the statutory and voluntary sectors have received training on CSE by Safe Choices.

Rec.	Recommendation	Action taken	Current Status
		Individual Trusts have commissioned additional training in CSE including 'Keeping Safe Training' and 'CSE and Missing from Home'. Child Protection A wide range of child protection training is provided within Trusts. This includes recognition of signs and symptoms of all forms of abuse, responses to abuse and neglect and specialist training in joint protocol investigations with the PSNI. Missing From Home and Foster Care Training on implementation of HSC/PSNI regional guidance on Safeguarding Children Missing from Home and Foster Care. The link between children's increased vulnerability to CSE when missing is covered by the guidance.
		Therapeutic Crisis Intervention (TCI) Residential care staff are trained in TCI to develop professional competence in engaging with young people, managing the environment and de-escalation of crises as well as use of physical restraint (holds). All children in care will have an Individual Crisis Management Plan which indicates if the use of TCI physical restraint should not be used (eg. Medical conditions, re-traumatising the young person). TCI should not be used as a preventative measure, for example, to stop a child leaving a children's home without permission. However, if an angry outburst were to occur as a result of such a refusal, then TCI may be a legitimate response. Staff will use their professional judgement in response to each individual and the circumstances. Risk assessment, management and care planning All Trusts provide training for staff on assessing and managing risk and professional judgement/decision-making. Therapeutic approaches to working with children and young people Residential care staff have been trained in specific therapeutic approaches in working with children in care to develop professional competence in working with children who have experienced trauma and disadvantage and to develop understanding, skills and techniques in working with young people who present with challenging behaviour. This training was evaluated by the Social Care Institute for Excellence and QUB and findings indicated a positive impact on practice including more sensitive/appropriate use of language and improvements in managing challenging situations. A range of other training in specific therapeutic approaches and techniques including Motivational Interviewing, Model of Attachment Practice and Restorative Practice have also been provided to improve professional competence in working directly with young people. CSE Related Risk Factors A range of training on factors which can increase young people's vulnerability and risk generally but to CSE in particular is also provided by all Trusts – Substance Misuse; Internet/Social Media; Mental Health; Resilience.

Rec.	Recommendation	Action taken	Current Status
		Human Trafficking There have been a number of regional and local training initiatives to raise staff awareness about human trafficking. Postgraduate Qualifications in Child Care Each year, Trusts also fund a number of staff to undertake specific accredited post-graduate training leading to post graduate Certificates, Diplomas and Masters in Child Care Practice. Capacity Working in Children's Services, in particular in child protection and residential child care, is challenging and a number of actions have been taken to strengthen supports for all staff and improve retention of experienced staff in these areas. Such initiatives include: All newly qualified social workers (NQSW) must undertake an assessed year in practice to consolidate their professional competence. There are specific requirements including induction, training, supervision, managed workloads. Similar models for support of NQSW are now being rolled out elsewhere in the UK. Appointment of senior social work practitioners to undertake more complex work and to provide mentorship/consultation to less experienced staff. There are 222 senior practitioners in Children's Services; Appointment of 15 Principal Social Work Practitioners since 2009 in each Trust to ensure availability of expertise in specific practice areas, including with looked after children. NI is the first country in the UK to introduce a Principal Practitioner social work grade. Referrals to social services have been increasing over the past number of years. Workforce data indicates a 5.8% increase in numbers of social workers employed by Trusts over the past 3 years. The Department launched a Social Work Strategy in 2012 which identifies workforce capacity and employer supports as key issues for frontline social workers and team leaders. Work has commenced to review the use and deployment of senior and principal practitioners to inform future workforce planning.
		Similar to the findings from the Munro Review of Child Protection Services in England, the compliance culture and focus on procedures and targets at the expense of child-centred service provision have been identified in the Social Work Strategy as issues in NI. There is a similar commitment in NI for the Department and associated agencies to review reporting and regulatory requirements, reduce bureaucracy and re-establish the child at the centre of the social work process and relationships at the heart of practice. Work has begun on a number of small scale initiatives to reduce bureaucracy which will increase staff capacity to engage in direct work with children, young people and families.

Rec.	Recommendation	Action taken	Current Status
		Professional supervision is an important element of support for social workers in carrying out their work. Compliance in the provision of supervision with a regional policy and standards is monitored by each Trust. There are Departmental targets for training supervisors and funding to support such training across all Trusts. A regional caseload management model was developed and endorsed by the Department and was issued in February 2012. This model is designed to assist social workers and their managers in Children's Services in the HSC Trusts to allocate and prioritise cases and associated tasks within manageable workloads. The North/South Child Protection Hub is available to social workers in all Trusts – this provides a single portal to access information, up-to-date research and developments in child protection practice to support evidence-based practice and professional decision-making. There has been an increase in the funding of Barnardo's Safe Choices reflecting the rise in young people identified at risk of CSE by Trust staff. Looked after Children (LAC) Therapeutic Services provide services in each Trust delivered by a range of professionals including psychologists and SPs. Their role is provide specialist wrap-a-round therapeutic services for individual young people in the care system as well as expert advice to staff. A review of residential child care provision has been undertaken by the HSCB and Trusts and among its recommendations is one for smaller residential homes to accommodate no more than 4 young people. This will increase the staff/child ratio.
		Development of Family Support Hubs and increased investment in early intervention is intended to provide non-stigmatising help to families at an earlier stage and is part of an overall strategy to improve outcomes for all children by preventing the development and/or escalation of difficulties at an earlier stage in children's lives. The Children and Young Person's Strategic Partnership (established in 2011) brings together a range of statutory and voluntary sector agencies and aims to maximise the investment in services to children's and their families through more effective joined up working and collaboration. This contributes to increasing capacity in the system for early intervention and services for children in need.

		3 Best-practice models for responding to sexual exploitation, including the merits of a co-located inter-agency model of response There are now a number of best practice models in place. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ Co-location of police officers and social workers is one practice model for responding to cases of child abuse, including child sexual exploitation. The model has been used in the past and indeed in the present – the ongoing police investigation into child sexual exploitation is using a co-location model of practice. Social workers and police officers do not necessarily have to be co-located to work effectively together. We have a joint protocol in place which sets out how the police and social services work will together to investigate cases of child abuse and we have guidance in place which governs how the police and social services will respond to children who go missing from home and foster care.</li> <li>■ There are also a number of excellent Trust-specific models of practice which are reflective of the quality of the relationship between police and social services at a locality level. For example, in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area, each residential unit has a dedicated community police officer who regularly visits the unit and completes (in conjunction with residential staff) education programmes for children and young people, for example, keeping safe, drugs awareness and respect/citizenship programmes. Also, 'a Children Missing from Care' Special Interest Group has been established on which the South Eastern HSC Trust, the Belfast HSC Trust, PSNI, the Safe Choices Project and VOYPIC are represented. The Group meets on a bi-monthly basis and shares trends analysis, good practice and initiatives relating to child sexual exploitation.</li> </ul>
		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ In the Northern Trust, residential units hold quarterly meetings with PSNI to discuss the high-risk young people and the management of their cases. This is an acknowledgement of the importance of working relationships to try and protect as best we can these vulnerable young people. Also in the Northern Trust, an intensive support outreach team provides support to young people on the edge of care. This year, two of the team worked specifically on child sexual exploitation, producing leaflets and drama production (Break the cycle) which was ran in the Waterfront Hall.</li> </ul>

		4 Regional implementation of the sexual exploitation risk assessment tool A child sexual exploitation assessment tool, the same tool which was used in the course of the 'Not a World Away' research, has been implemented across all five HSC Trust areas. 5 Resourcing of a regional specialist support service <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ Between 2008 and 2011, the Department provided funding of around £222k to Missing Children's Project of the Barnardo's-run Safe Choices Service. [This is in addition to circa £142k provided to Barnardo's to undertake the 'Not a World Away' research.] The aim of the Missing Children Project is to reduce the risk of sexual exploitation of children and young people in care by reducing the number of missing episodes of children; to increase the skills and knowledge of staff in children's homes and foster carers in relation to the issue of sexual exploitation; and to develop and disseminate a risk assessment model to children's homes on the issue of young people missing from care.</li> <li>■ Funding for the Safe Choices Service was picked up by the Health and Social Care Board from April 2011. The Board has committed additional resources to the project to enable it to meet additional demand, including that generated by the ongoing PSNI investigation into child sexual exploitation. 		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ In addition, the Department invests in a Regional Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service, a Regional Secure Care Service and an Intensive Support Service, which operates across the region. A range of self harm services funded under the Protect Life Strategy are regionally available. This is in addition to a range of specialist supports to address alcohol and substance misuse, self-esteem issues and transitions out of care and into adulthood.</li> <li>■ In the Regional Secure Care Centre a therapeutic support service with a dedicated clinical psychologist and systemic social work practitioner is in place. There has been investment in a range of services aimed at tackling the drug and alcohol problems. The model was developed by the PHA following the establishment of four pilot projects in different areas across Northern Ireland (North Down and Ards, Enniskillen, Banbridge and East Antrim) to test a range of potential models. The pilots were positively evaluated, and the PHA subsequently tendered for a range of new one-stop-shops across Northern Ireland, primarily focused on areas that have a need and / or a lack of services. A network has also been put in place to spread learning between the services.</li> </ul> £2.5m has been invested in Services for Young People, Children and their Families. 5	The Public Health Agency should develop a campaign to raise public awareness of the sexual exploitation of children and young people.	Barnardo's will engage in discussions with the PHA in the near future, however. In advance of those discussions, the PHA has been involved in a number of initiatives relating to improving children's sexual health. They include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ The development of a Sexual Health Promotion Strategy and Action Plan covering the period 2008-2013. The aim of the Strategy/Plan is to improve, protect and promote the sexual health and well-being of the population of Northern Ireland. The Strategy recognises that some groups are particularly vulnerable and require particular action. They include young people under 25 years and children and young people who are looked after or leaving care.</li> <li>■ The establishment of a Regional Sexual Health Improvement Network in 2010. The Network has reviewed the evidence base related to reducing teenage pregnancy and the rates of STIs and HIV.</li> <li>■ PHA is a key funder of the HSC Knowledge Transfer Scheme, Improving the Impact of Research, which is based on the findings of the Barnardo's Research on Child Sexual Exploitation in Northern Ireland. The proposed impact of the project is: increased awareness and understanding of CSE amongst HSC professionals; increased consistency in identification and risk assessment; increased access to practice-based CSE resources; greater awareness of risk amongst young people; increased user services engagement; and greater inter-disciplinary working.</li> <li>■ With the establishment of the SBNI, on which the PHA is represented, leaflets to raise awareness of child sexual exploitation among parents, professionals and young people have been produced. Also, an NSPCC helpline is in place which will provide advice and support to parents, carers, and children and young people who have concerns relating to child sexual exploitation.</li> <li>■ Awareness-raising of child sexual exploitation is a core activity of the Barnardo's Safe Choices Project, which continues to be funded by the Health and Social Care Board. Prior to funding by the HSCB, the Safe Choices Project was funded directly by the Department. The PHA also provided £5k to Barnardo's in 2012/2013 to fund a Sexual Health Group Work project.</li> </ul>	Ongoing
6	The NI Policing Board should incorporate child protection (including sexual exploitation) as a priority in forthcoming Policing Plans, in reflection of the critical importance of this area of work.	This is a matter for the Policing Board.

Department of Justice

Legal Highs

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice to outline that action that he has taken, and the further action he is planning to take, to tackle the issue of legal highs.

(AQW 25384/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The issue of legal highs, more appropriately known as New Psychoactive Substances (NPS), falls within the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, which is a reserved matter for the UK Government.

The Northern Ireland Executive's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2011-16 (NSD), led by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, aims to reduce alcohol and drug related harm in Northern Ireland and identifies this issue as one of emerging concern. My Department has a number of drug related outcomes within the NSD and, to ensure consistency and continuity of activity in tackling drug related harm, those outcomes are also reflected in the Community Safety Strategy for Northern Ireland which I published earlier this year.

My Department works closely with DHSSPS, the Public Health Agency and the PSNI in the operation of an early warning system, the Drug and Alcohol Monitoring and Information System. It has been established to identify NPS and provides an opportunity for organisations to share information about new and emerging drugs of concern. This system also assists in identifying substances that may be made subject to a UK wide Temporary Control Banning Order, under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

This matter can only be tackled by working in partnership and I remain committed to continuing to work alongside key stakeholders.

Cyberbullying

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to companies or persons owning websites that permit cyber-bullying or internet trolling, what legislation does he intend to introduce to allow prosecution for (i) corporately causing and /or permitting the death of persons by suicide following online abuse; or aiding and abetting corporate manslaughter and/or unlawful killing; and (ii) corporately causing and/or permitting grievous bodily harm or aiding and abetting causing grievous bodily harm, as well as harassment, in cases of attempted suicide.

(AQW 25479/11-15)

Mr Ford: Legislation on internet services is a reserved matter under the Northern Ireland Act 1998. As indicated in my answer to AQW/25158/11-15, current legislation in Northern Ireland already allows for prosecutions in relation to protecting people from harassment or bullying whether directly or in the form of "cyber-bullying". Courts also have the authority to direct the removal of inappropriate or offensive material from websites.

Forensic Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, following criticism by judges in several jurisdictions as to the long delay in some cases currently awaiting analysis results and/or reports from NI Forensic Service, to outline the cause of the delay and whether a backlog has accumulated.

(AQW 25483/11-15)

Mr Ford: FSNI is currently issuing 98% of all criminal casework reports within the agreed overall target times with customers. This figure has remained fairly constant and therefore backlogs are not, in general, accumulating across the Agency.

However, PSNI and FSNI are working together on several fronts to best manage available capacity and to prioritise cases as necessary.

Compromise Agreements

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24920/11-15, to detail (i) why existing baselines can afford to fund the budget for effecting Compromise Agreements and if monies are (a) slippage; (b) transfers from within the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS); or (c) transfers from other Departments; and (ii) the Headings and the Accounting Notes that these monies are accounted for in NIPS annual audit sheets.

(AQW 25484/11-15)

Mr Ford: There was provision within NIPS Accounts for a number of payments, and the remaining monies were funded as a result of easements elsewhere within the HR Directorate as a result of under-spends.

The payments are included in the Annual Report and Accounts under the note 'Staff Numbers and Related Costs'.

Legal Services Commission: Pay

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the outstanding pay remits that are due to Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission staff, will these staff be treated differently by his Department to those agreed for the Probation Board Northern Ireland, and if so, to outline the reasons for any difference in approach.

(AQW 25501/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (NILSC) and Probation Board are separate employers and each is responsible for developing appropriate pay strategies and pay remits. It is NILSC's intention to advance a pay strategy similar to that in place for the Probation Board. The NILSC pay strategy will require Departmental and DFP approval.

Firearms Dealers

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to outline why it was necessary to abolish the category of Repair Firearms Dealer and increase the security storage specification on all firearms dealers in light of the current social climate and lack of threat posed by the previous arrangements.

(AQW 25506/11-15)

Mr Ford: Firearms Dealers' stocks of firearms are regulated by the Ministerial Directive of July 2009. There is a maximum number of handguns and rifles set down in the Directive that each category of firearms dealer may keep for any reason (including repair). The previous Directives did not have a repair dealer category as the Member suggests but rather a wholesale dealer category. At that time the number of handguns and rifles which could be held was significantly lower.

The Directive stated that there was no limit on the number of firearms that could be held for repair as long as the total holding (i.e. repair plus stock) did not exceed overall limits. As the 2009 Directive significantly increased the permitted holdings of handguns and rifles for category 1 and 2 dealers, the "wholesale" dealer category was removed (as now the smaller category 1 dealers could hold more than wholesale dealers could under the previous Directive).

It is the responsibility of the Chief Constable to determine the appropriate security measures required for each category of dealer.

Firearms Dealers

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether an impact audit was conducted on the viability of the trade of firearms dealers before proposals to change the firearms storage arrangements were introduced.

(AQW 25509/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is a matter for the Chief Constable of the PSNI to determine the appropriate firearms security arrangements for Registered Firearms Dealers. It would be for the PSNI to consider if any impact audit were required.

Drug-related Offences: Fintona

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of convictions for drugs related offences in the Fintona area, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 25518/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information requested is not available at levels below the Court Division in question (in this case, Fermanagh and Tyrone Court Division).

Drug-related Offences: Fintona

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of (i) his recent comments by District Judge Bernadette Kelly, referring to Fintona as "our drugs capital"; and (ii) the hurt and offence caused by these remarks to the residents of Fintona.

(AQW 25519/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is an accepted principle that the courts are completely independent and therefore it would be inappropriate for me to comment on any aspect of court proceedings including any comments made by the judiciary in court.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Justice to outline the outstanding approvals needed before work commences on the new Community Safety College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25529/11-15)

Mr Ford: As I stated in the Assembly on 24 September 2013 in my answer to your question, formal Executive approval is required if the project is to proceed.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Justice whether the construction contract has been awarded for the new Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25567/11-15)

Mr Ford: As I stated in the Assembly on 24 September, the Project is now at the point at which it requires formal Executive approval, having been given approval by my Department. It will then be a matter of the final details being sorted out in order for the construction contract to be awarded.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Justice to detail the latest date that construction contractors can be appointed within the current contract quotation for the new Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25568/11-15)

Mr Ford: The procurement process began on 21 December 2012. The formal period whereby the Preferred Bidder is committed to hold their tender prices lasts until 21 December 2013. Material costs have begun to rise and the forecast is for this trend to continue. The tenders are competitively priced, meaning that the contractor is under pressure to hold the original tender price against a backdrop of increasing material costs.

Legal advice is that it is not possible to insist on the preferred tenderer keeping his tender open beyond 21 December 2013. Nor would it be permissible to agree an increase in the preferred tenderer's price after that date. However if the preferred tenderer is happy to keep his price open for a reasonable period after that date, then, in the absence of any statement in the tender documentation to the contrary, there seems no reason why the authority is prohibited from entering into a contract with him at that price at a later date, provided there is no unfairness to other bidders.

Community Safety College, Desertcreat

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Justice when he expects the on-site work to commence on the new Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat.

(AQW 25569/11-15)

Mr Ford: As I stated in the Assembly on 24 September I have already approved the business case and sought Executive approval for the Desertcreat project by way of an Urgent Procedure. Assuming that it is approved in the immediate future, on-site works could begin in February 2014.

Prisons: Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24598/11-15, to outline (i) why the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) were not tracking and trending patterns of all self-harm incidents in prisons prior to 2010; and (ii) why it was not considered as a useful learning tool in an effort to reduce self-harm, given the continual increase of such incidents, the number of high profile cases and the copious number of external reports criticising NIPS on a regular basis.

(AQW 25571/11-15)

Mr Ford: Prior to 2010 the Prison Record Information System (PRISM) did not support the electronic recording of self-harm incidents.

Following the introduction of the Supporting Prisoners At Risk process in December 2009, PRISM was developed to initiate the recording of all incidents of self-harm with effect from January 2010. Managing self-harming behaviour within prisons is a very difficult and challenging issue. The implementation of a better recording system to capture important data on self-harm underpins NIPS commitment to reducing self-harm and keeping prisoners safe. NIPS continues to record all incidents of self-harm to allow for trends to be analysed and to support local operational decision-making.

Prisons: Safety of Female Prison Officers

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) to outline the steps that are being taken to ensure the safety of female prison officers working alone at night in the Sex Offenders wing at Magilligan Prison, with prisoners who have a key to their own room, commensurate with Health and Safety at Work Legislation, in which particular attention is drawn to the safety of employees working alone at night, and given the statements made by the Director General to the Committee for Justice on 16 May 2013 in relation to female colleagues; and (ii) whether the highest possible degree of protection for staff is paramount to best practice and that best practice is the aim of the Northern Ireland Prison Service; and (iii) for his assessment as to the removal of keys from prisoners.

(AQW 25573/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service ensures that equality of opportunity exists for all staff regardless of gender. (i) There are no circumstances whereby any prison officer would have to work alone at night in a residential landing when prisoners are unlocked. Procedures are in place to allow emergencies to be managed safely. (ii) The safety of NIPS staff is paramount. Procedures for the operation of all areas are risk assessed; these assessments take full account of the safety of staff and the security of the establishment. (iii) Prisoners who hold keys for their own cells are selected on the basis of risk. Staff are not required to enter alone any area where prisoners hold keys. In all cases staff may override the locking mechanism.

National Crime Agency

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, as the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) is being replaced by National Crime Agency (NCA) which is continuing the strategy established by SOCA on human trafficking, how this can be implemented effectively given Northern Ireland does not, and as matters currently stand will not, have the NCA; and for his assessment of whether this will create legal loopholes which could actively be exploited by human traffickers to operate locally and operate a portal to other jurisdictions.

(AQW 25574/11-15)

Mr Ford: The lack of agreement reached here on the National Crime Agency means that the NCA will be significantly restricted in Northern Ireland. I believe that we need a fully functioning NCA in Northern Ireland, which sits within policing structures here, and I have not given up on securing a wider role.

Northern Ireland is likely to lose out in terms of the international reach and specialist capabilities of NCA. However officials from my Department are currently working with law enforcement agencies and others to try and mitigate the effects of this.

The Organised Crime Task Force Immigration and Human Trafficking subgroup will continue to bring together statutory partners, whether devolved or non-devolved, to ensure a joined up response to tackling this crime. I will ensure that arrangements continue to be effective in protecting victims, disrupting the activities of traffickers and bringing them to justice.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) how many claims have been lodged by victims of human trafficking to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, broken down by year and type of exploitation since 2009; (ii) how many claims have been successful since 2009; and (iii) the average amount of compensation awarded in each year.

(AQW 25620/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- i. This information is only available from 2013 as prior to this Compensation Services' IT system did not identify this type of claim separately from other claims. From the beginning of 2013 a total of six claims has been lodged by alleged victims of human trafficking, four of which are recorded as labour exploitation and two for sexual exploitation.
- ii. These claims are still under consideration.
- iii. No compensation has been awarded to date.

Illegal Possession of Drugs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) any plans he has to ensure defendants caught and charged with suspected illegal possession of drugs, who await full forensic results to be provided before pleading guilty are made financially liable for the testing costs of their forensic results; and (ii) can he clarify that these costs are not currently met by Legal Aid if the defendant has been granted Legal Aid for their defence.

(AQW 25622/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently no plans to make defendants who await full forensic results financially liable for forensic testing costs.

I can confirm that forensic tests commissioned as part of a police investigation are not paid for from Legal Aid.

Noel Parker

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, following the temporary release of Mr Noel Parker to attend a wedding, were any concerns raised, reported or recorded by staff to any Northern Ireland Prison Service Department, including the Life Management Unit, into any aspect of his release.

(AQW 25624/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no record of any concerns being raised following the Accompanied Temporary Release of Mr Parker.

Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice if the Central Investigation Service in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development has ever been used to conduct an investigation in (i) the Public prosecution Service; or (ii) the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 25629/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service has used the services of the Central Investigation Service (CIS) in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development to carry out investigations on two occasions. The Public Prosecution Service (PPS) is independent from me as Minister of Justice but I am advised that PPS has not used the CIS to conduct an investigation.

Prison Population

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what is the prison population.

(AQW 25647/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 17 September 2013 the prison population was as follows:

Maghaberry	1089
Magilligan	541
Hydebank Wood (Female)	61
Hydebank Wood (Male Young Offenders)	171
Total	1862

A weekly population report is provided on the NIPS website at www.dojni.gov.uk/index/ni-prison-service/situation-reports.

Legal Services Commission: Pay

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, given the effect on staff morale within NI Legal Services Commission from the ongoing outstanding pay remits, as acknowledged in the latest annual report, when he will intervene directly to ensure that these outstanding pay remits are sent to the Department of Finance and Personnel.

(AQW 25649/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have made clear throughout this process that I want the pay strategy business case finalised and submitted to DFP for approval as quickly as possible. We are at the stage where final checks are being made to the business case with NILSC. Once those checks are complete and the business case finalised, the case can be submitted to DFP for their consideration.

Legal Services Commission: Pay

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice for an estimate of the time spent by departmental officials and those in the NI Legal Services Commission (NILSC), at Deputy Principal grade or above, on the outstanding NILSC pay strategy to date, broken down by grade.

(AQW 25678/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department does not record time spent by officials on specific projects in a way that would allow this question to be answered in the format requested. However, officials from the Department's Public Legal Services Division, Personnel and Office Services Division and Financial Services Division have been involved in supporting the NI Legal Services Commission in preparing a pay strategy business case.

Driving Without Insurance

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of convictions for driving without insurance in Fermanagh and South Tyrone Court Division, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 25698/11-15)

Mr Ford: Uninsured driving is an offence under Article 90(4) of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. The information requested is not available for the last two years. The most recent two years for which the information requested is available are 2008 and 2009.

In 2008, there were 599 convictions for this offence, in courts in the Fermanagh and South Tyrone Division. In 2009, there were 823 convictions for this offence, in courts in the Fermanagh and South Tyrone Division.

Note:

- 1 Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is convicted is included.
- 2 The figures provided relate to convictions for all classifications of the offence specified.

Magilligan Prison: Rebuilding

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to detail the timetable for the rebuild of Magilligan Prison.

(AQW 25713/11-15)

Mr Ford: Following my update to the Assembly on March 19th, NIPS Officials continue their work in developing the plans for all the projects included in the Estate Strategy including that of the rebuilding of Magilligan.

In the intervening period, a Strategic Outline Business Case for Magilligan's redevelopment has been prepared in-house and approved by colleagues in the Department of Finance and Personnel. NIPS Officials are in the process of developing the Outline Business Case (OBC) for the project with a deadline for completion by the end of this year. The future programme is dependent on the OBC being approved and capital funding being made available. Until the Business Case is approved and capital funding made available, I am unable to provide any further details of the timetable.

Access NI

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice what consideration he has given to the expense incurred by individuals as a result of multiple Access NI criminal records checks when applying for jobs.

(AQW 25733/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have accepted a recommendation made by Sunita Mason, the Independent Advisor for Criminality Information in England and Wales, that a system of portable disclosures and updated online checking be introduced in Northern Ireland. The change requires legislation provision and the introduction of changes to the current computer system. I am planning to introduce the former in the next Justice Bill. The work on the changes to the computer system has begun.

Once the change is implemented, citizens may not need to re-apply for an AccessNI check as they move between employers, thereby reducing cost for those that are currently required to pay for checks. It should be noted that those requesting a portable disclosure will pay an additional annual fee, except those who are volunteers.

Prison Service: Environmental Allowance

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) why there is a disparity in some prison staff receive the Environmental Allowance whilst others do not; and (ii) the percentage of prison staff that are in receipt of the allowance.
(AQW 25761/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are no prison grade staff (uniform grades or governor grades) in receipt of an Environmental Allowance.

There are 552 staff (35.5% of prison grades) who formerly received a Northern Ireland Prison Service Payment to reflect the special circumstances in which they worked. This was consolidated into salaries in 1994 (officers) and 2006 (governors) as part of a wider pay deal.

Prison Service: Emergency Allowance

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to Emergency Allowance payments to prison officers, to detail (i) the circumstances when payments are provided; and (ii) the number of officers in receipt of the allowance.
(AQW 25820/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are no prison grade staff (uniform grades or governor grades) in receipt of an Emergency Allowance.

There are 552 staff (35.5% of prison grades) who formerly received a Northern Ireland Prison Service Payment to reflect the special circumstances in which they worked. This was consolidated into salaries in 1994 (officers) and 2006 (governors) as part of a wider pay deal.

Prison Service: Alleged Misconduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 25020/11-15, whether the cost of the Northern Ireland Prison Service and Northern Ireland Civil Service supplying staff to investigate alleged and suspected misconduct for operational prison staff commensurates with annual averages against the employment of a small pool of retired police officers to draw from, required on a case by case basis.
(AQW 25865/11-15)

Mr Ford: Such a costing has not been made. The Northern Ireland Civil Service already has a large pool of staff to draw from so it would not be appropriate for the Department of Justice to employ retired police officers to investigate internal employment related matters.

Pritchard Test

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the criteria contained within the Pritchard test as applied for fitness to plead trial cases.
(AQW 25877/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Pritchard Test is a common law approach to determining a defendant's fitness to plead. In accordance with the test, fitness to plead is determined on the basis of the defendant's capability to comply with the following six criteria:

- Understanding the charges;
- Deciding whether to plead guilty or not;
- Exercising his or her right to challenge jurors;
- Instructing solicitors and counsel;
- Following the course of proceedings; and
- Giving evidence in his or her own defence.

If it is determined, on the balance of probabilities, that any one of the six criteria is beyond the capability of the accused, then he or she must be found to be unfit to plead.

Magilligan Prison: Rebuilding

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 25404/11-15, if he intends to bring the timetable for the rebuilding of Magilligan Prison on its existing site, as contained in the Outline Business Case, before the Assembly in January 2014.
(AQW 25999/11-15)

Mr Ford: Further to my response to AQW/25404/11-15, the timetable for the redevelopment of Magilligan Prison will be dependent on the Department of Finance and Personnel's approval of the Outline Business Case and subject to the availability of funding. Until the Business Case is approved and capital funding made available I am unable to provide any further details of the timetable.

Strategic Efficiency and Effectiveness Programme

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the progress of the Strategic Efficiency and Effectiveness programme.

(AQO 4631/11-15)

Mr Ford: The wider prison reform programme encompasses the 40 PRT recommendations and the work of the Strategic Efficiency and Effectiveness Programme (SEE). The Northern Ireland Prison Service is currently half way through this three year programme, which will run until April 2015. A clear pathway for delivery has been developed to ensure all recommendations are implemented, with the remaining recommendations due to be completed at various stages over the next 18 months.

To date, nine recommendations have been approved as complete by the Prison Review Oversight Group, which I Chair. The Group provides oversight and scrutiny of the reform programme and includes a robust and challenging independent element.

Prison Reform Oversight Group

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the Prison Reform Oversight Group.

(AQO 4637/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prison Review Oversight Group, which I chair, provides oversight and scrutiny of the prison reform programme and includes a robust and challenging independent element. The Oversight Group meets on a quarterly basis and provides an update to the Justice Committee after each meeting. These updates are also published on the Prison Service website.

Good progress is being made against the extensive programme of end to end transformational reform, guided by the 40 recommendations made by the Prison Review Team (PRT).

To date, nine recommendations have been approved as complete by the Prison Review Oversight Group.

Prisoners: Supervision

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice where, as part of the sentence imposed on someone convicted of a terrorist offence, the prisoner is subject to licence in the community, who actually provides supervision of the prisoner while on licence.

(AQO 4641/11-15)

Mr Ford: Where licence conditions are imposed on persons released from prison they are monitored by the Probation Board with support, where appropriate from the PSNI, Prison Service and my Department.

Individuals released on licence are subject to a combination of standard conditions set out in legislation, and where relevant, additional conditions. The aim of these conditions is to reduce the risk of harm to the public, reduce reoffending and support the resettlement of the offender.

A licence may be revoked and the offender recalled to custody where it is considered the risk of harm posed by an individual can no longer be safely managed within the community.

Parades Commission

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Justice how many meetings he has held with Parades Commission officials in the past six months.

(AQO 4630/11-15)

Mr Ford: At the outset I want to welcome the efforts of all those who are working to secure a peaceful outcome to the parading disputes. Resolution of contentious parades is possible. I hope that those who have influence will continue to show leadership and work with their communities and the police to ease tensions where they exist. We do not want to see violence, with the cost it brings to communities, to policing and to our image.

The talks, led by Dr Richard Haass, will provide an important focus as we attempt to resolve this and other contentious issues.

Within the past six months I have attended three meetings, chaired by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, at which the Chair and the Secretary of the Parades Commission were present.

Historical Enquiries Team

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Justice what discussions he has had with the Chief Constable on the impact of the HM Inspectorate of Constabulary report on the Historical Enquiries Team.

(AQO 4638/11-15)

Mr Ford: I met with the Chief Constable following publication of the HM Inspectorate of Constabulary report on the Historical Enquiries Team to discuss the report and its findings and to be updated on the work he is taking forward in conjunction with the Northern Ireland Policing Board Working Group

Department for Regional Development

East Bridge Street Junction, Belfast

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Roads Service have consulted with cycle groups regarding proposed changes to the East Bridge Street junction, Belfast.

(AQW 25259/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): My Department proposes to amend road markings and traffic lane designations at the junction of Oxford Street with East Bridge Street, Belfast.

This is a routine minor local amendment which is considered will benefit all road users and does not require legislative changes. In these circumstances, no specific consultation was carried out.

I would also advise the Member that I have recently instructed my officials to give increased and focused priority to the needs of cyclists, to encourage greater participation in this healthy and sustainable form of transport. To that end, I am establishing a new cycling unit to ensure cycling issues and initiatives are progressed in a more coherent and coordinated manner across my Department, in partnership with local government, voluntary bodies, public transport operators and the health and education sectors.

Cycling: Trains

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development if he has any plans to allow cyclists to bring their bicycle on to trains at all times.

(AQW 25264/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink's current cycling policy has been in place since 2005 and was developed following consultation with rail customers and key stakeholders. Translink has agreed to discuss these matters going forward with relevant stakeholders and did so recently when the Class 4000 trains were introduced.

Given the significant increase in rail passenger journeys since the policy was introduced, and the peak loadings carried before 09:30 each day, Northern Ireland Railways do not envisage a relaxation of the existing policy, as to do so would be at a significant detriment to current passengers. Furthermore in comparing its policy to that of National Rail, Translink is in line with other GB operators with regard to restrictions to cycle carriage before 09:30/10:00.

A comparison of the National Rail Cycle policy with that of Translink highlights the following:

- Like NIR, GB operators either apply restrictions to cycle carriage before 09:30/10:00 hours and during pm peak or alternatively make reservations compulsory.
- Like NIR, GB operators generally carry cycles free of charge.
- Most GB operators have a maximum cycle capacity of 2-4 compared to NIR's 4-8 cycles per train.

On very early trains and on contra-commute trains, i.e. trains operating out of Belfast in the mornings, Translink do already regularly carry passengers with bicycles. This is done at the Conductor's discretion and Conductors have been briefed to accept cycles where capacity permits, i.e. no expectation of standing passengers in the cycle area. However the majority of trains to Belfast operating before 08:00 are already carrying significant numbers of passengers. For information there are no travel restrictions placed on the number of folding bicycles which may be carried on trains. These may be carried at any time, including prior to the normal 09.30 restriction. In addition there are currently 208 bicycle storage spaces across the rail network. Currently this is more than adequate to meet demand.

In general, evening service loadings are more spread out than morning services. This means that NIR will generally seek to accept bikes without restriction in the evening commute. It is Translink's intention that they will seek to maintain this position where possible.

I am fully supportive of measures to facilitate cyclists but believe that the Translink policy has merit when we consider the overall needs of rail passengers.

Parking: Coalisland

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 24921/11-15, given that five years have lapsed since proposals were last provided and in view of recent concerns as to parking violations in Coalisland, if his officials will re-engage with the relevant Regeneration Partnership to review the current parking provision.

(AQW 25313/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I should advise that the Coalisland Regeneration Group has not met for over two years. Dungannon and South Tyrone Borough Council and the Department for Social Development consider this group to have been discontinued.

However, Roads Service has requested a meeting with the Dungannon and South Tyrone Borough Council's town centre manager and Coalisland area councillors to discuss parking issues in Coalisland.

Translink: Student Discounts

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to encourage Translink to address the disparity between student discounts offered to mature students, aged 23 years or older, and younger students on all Translink bus services.

(AQW 25343/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has attempted, as far as possible to harmonise the approach to discounts available to students through the yLink card. This provides all 16-23-year olds, student or otherwise, with one-third off on all bus and rail services (but not in addition to all other discounted fares types).

A range of Smartlink value/multi-journey/period and promotional fares are available to all passengers across the various modes of public transport including the Uni-Link bus service which offer mature students the same level of discount as those students who avail of the yLink card. There is therefore no disparity on bus services.

Public Transport Budget

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what percentage of the total roads budget was spent on public transport, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 25354/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Public Transport budget is not drawn from the Roads budget, they are two separate elements of the total Departmental budget.

However, the tables below show the percentage breakdown of the total of roads and transport. expenditure in terms of the total Departmental budget, excluding water, for each of the last nine years (2004/05 to 2012/13) together with the June Monitoring budget position for 2013/14.

Resource:

	04/05 %	05/06 %	06/07 %	07/08 %	08/09 %	09/10 %	10/11 %	11/12 %	12/13 %	13/14 %
Roads	73.2	71.6	69.4	69.3	70.1	67.3	66.7	68.5	68.0	71.9
Transport	26.8	28.4	30.6	30.7	29.9	32.7	33.3	31.5	32.0	28.1

Investment:

	04/05 %	05/06 %	06/07 %	07/08 %	08/09 %	09/10 %	10/11 %	11/12 %	12/13 %	13/14 %
Roads	66.6	63.9	71.4	62.0	75.1	83.3	82.0	60.5	73.2	87.8
Transport	33.4	36.1	28.6	38.0	24.9	16.7	18.0	39.5	26.8	12.2

It should be noted that the road network is an essential conduit for Public Transport in Northern Ireland; over 85% of Translink's total passenger journeys are made on roads. It is therefore essential that the road network is improved to ensure user safety and the reliability of journey times.

Rail Fares

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail how the price of a train fare from (i) Derry; (ii) Coleraine; (iii) Ballymena; and (iv) Ballymoney to Great Victoria Street, Belfast, compares to the cost of a car journey from the same starting point.

(AQW 25355/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: For each of the four rail stations Translink have provided a comparison against petrol and diesel cars for (a) weekly; and (b) monthly fares. The cost of a car journey is estimated based upon standard Automobile Association methodology for car running costs and excludes standing costs such as insurance and road tax. Even with these additional costs excluded, travelling by train is cheaper for each of the four stations.

The detailed analysis and the assumptions underpinning the calculations are shown below:

	Petrol £	Diesel £	Petrol £	Diesel £	Petrol £	Diesel £	Petrol £	Diesel £
Weekly Cost by Private Car (Travelling 5 Days per Week )	149.81	129.86	107.61	93.28	59.08	51.21	101.28	87.80
Weekly Ticket on NI Railways	58.00	58.00	55.00	55.00	50.00	50.00	53.00	53.00
Total Savings per Week	91.81	71.86	52.61	38.28	9.08	1.21	48.28	34.80

Monthly Ticket on NI Railways	195	195.00	187.50	187.50	175.00	175.00	182.50	182.50
Total Savings per Month	404.25	324.44	285.14	222.20	61.32	29.85	222.62	168.67

*A 33% reduction is available on all standard NI Railways Day Return tickets (adult or child).

Assumptions on which the figures in above table are based:-

Figures are based on AA basic running costs of a new car priced up to the value of up to £13,000 and current petrol prices of 135.7 pence per litre and diesel of 139.7 (NI cheapest price – Source CCNI as at 12 Sept 2013). Based on these details, the AA calculates a Petrol Car running cost of 21.10 pence per mile Diesel Car running cost of 18.29 pence per mile (including fuel, tyres, servicing & parts).

Speed Limits

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of roads that have a designated speed limit of less than 30mph.

(AQW 25359/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that a 20mph speed limit applies to 567 roads in Northern Ireland. In addition, three roads have a part time 20mph speed limit in the vicinity of schools. There are no other speed limits of less than 30mph which have been legislated for.

Speed Limits

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the criteria that is used when designating a speed limit of less than 30mph.

(AQW 25361/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: All speed limits, other than those on Restricted Roads, are made by order under Article 38 of the Road Traffic Regulation (Northern Ireland) Order 1997.

When designating any speed limit for a road, including those under 30 mph, Roads Service traffic engineers should comply with the Department's policy guideline document, RSPPG E051 Setting Local Speed Limits in Northern Ireland. This document is available to download from the Department's web site as part of its Publication Scheme.

Craigantlet Hills

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on proposed road works for the Craigantlet Hills area.

(AQW 25363/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware I instructed Roads Service to consider all of the alternative proposals for a road improvement scheme in Craigantlet which were put forward by local residents.

Roads Service has received a draft of the Consultant's report, which is currently being considered after which it will be finalised.

No further decisions will be taken before the findings of this report have been given careful consideration.

Cycling on Public Highways

Mr Storey asked Minister for Regional Development to outline the legislation that is applicable to cyclists on public highways.

(AQW 25394/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Highway Code for Northern Ireland contains a specific section entitled 'Rules for Cyclists' and these rules are in addition to subsequent sections in the Code, which apply to all vehicles. It also contains a section entitled 'You and your bicycle'. The Highway Code can be accessed from the NI Direct internet site at the following web address: <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/highway-code.pdf>.

Many of these rules are legal requirements and such rules are identified by the use of the words 'MUST/MUST NOT'. Where these words appear in a rule, an abbreviated reference to the legislation which creates the offence is provided at the end of the rule. An explanation of the abbreviations is provided on page 125 of the Code.

Cycling Infrastructure: Belfast

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department has invested in cycling infrastructure in Belfast, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25413/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The information requested by the Member is not available in the form requested, as my Department does not maintain details of investment in cycling infrastructure by individual Council area.

Public Transport Budget

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will increase the proportion spent on public transport in comparison to roads in future budgetary periods.

(AQW 25419/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In supporting the Executive's Programme for Government priority of 'Growing a sustainable economy and investing in the future'. DRD plays a lead role through improving the transport infrastructure within the available funding.

As part of the New Approach to Regional Transportation my Department is currently developing a Transport Spending Plan which will feed into the next Executive Budget process.

This will identify those transport schemes relating to roads or public transport which will best achieve the strategic objectives of the Executive.

Cycling Infrastructure: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any cycling infrastructure schemes are planned for North Down in the next three years.

(AQW 25420/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would remind the Member that information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information/cinformatioctype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

I can advise that the detailed budget for subsequent years has not yet been finalised and so it is not possible to provide details of future works programmes at this time.

Park and Ride: Dungiven

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he, or any departmental officials, have had discussions regarding the acquisition of a site for a Park and Ride facility in the Dungiven area.

(AQW 25451/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In 2010, my Department explored the possibility of acquiring part of the former controlled secondary school site on Main Street to provide a dedicated Park and Ride site. However, it became clear during initial consultations with local residents that there was strong opposition to the proposal and it was not developed any further.

As part of the development of the dualling of the A6 between Londonderry and Dungiven, opportunities to provide a number of Park and Ride sites have been considered. One of these is located on the eastern side of Dungiven, in the Magherabuoy townland, and would provide approximately 100 Park and Ride spaces. This facility would be developed along with the construction of the Dungiven Bypass element of the A6 scheme.

Bus Network: Ballycastle and Ballymena

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to improve the Ballycastle to Ballymena bus service.

(AQW 25469/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that the local bus operations management team meets with Moyle District Council on a quarterly basis to discuss services in the area.

One of the key services which is discussed is the Ballycastle to Ballymena corridor which, between services 131 and 217, provides 7 return journeys Monday to Friday, rising to 8 in July and August.

The possibility of increasing the service level on this corridor has been discussed at length at previous meetings and Translink has advised Council representatives that current patronage on this corridor would not justify additional journeys at present.

Translink has however agreed to keep this matter under review.

Railway Network: Derry and Great Victoria Street, Belfast

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of miles between each train halt between Derry and Great Victoria Street, Belfast.

(AQW 25470/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below provides the detail on the number of miles between each train halt between Londonderry and Great Victoria Street, Belfast as requested.

Station	Station	Distance between Stations (miles)
Londonderry	Bellarena	20.25
Bellarena	Castlerock	7.50
Castlerock	Coleraine	5.75
Coleraine	Ballymoney	8.25
Ballymoney	Cullybackey	17.00
Cullybackey	Ballymena	3.00
Ballymena	Antrim	11.75

Station	Station	Distance between Stations (miles)
Antrim	Mossley West	11.75
Mossley West	Whiteabbey	3.25
Whiteabbey	Yorkgate	4.50
Yorkgate	Belfast Central	1.25
Belfast Central	Botanic	1.00
Botanic	City Hospital	0.25
City Hospital	Great Victoria Street	0.50

Park and Ride: North Antrim

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans for a Park and Ride facility for commuters from North Antrim, including those travelling from the A44 Drones Road.

(AQW 25471/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I understand, based on the number of cars parking at various points along the road, there is evidence of the need for a Park and Share/Ride car park along the Glarryford to Drones Road corridor.

The proposed A26 Glarryford to A44 Drones Road dualling scheme will include the provision of a 50-100 space Park and Ride/Share facility. This will be located adjacent to the Drumadoon Road junction.

Although funding for construction of the dualling scheme is not currently provided for in the current budget period, my Department will continue to develop the A26 scheme to a procurement-ready position.

As you may be aware, following a Strategic Review of Park & Ride in 2011, my Department established a Park and Ride Programme Board which is responsible for co-ordinating and prioritising the implementation of 'Park and Ride' and 'Park and Share' projects, in line with the Department's strategy.

The Programme Board has produced a 'Park and Ride Strategic Delivery Programme 2013-15', which is a prioritised schedule of new Park and Ride projects with clearly defined responsibilities for funding, implementation, maintenance and operation. This Programme plans to create at least an additional 1,000 'Park and Ride' and 'Park and Share' spaces across Northern Ireland in the next two years. Details of the Programme are available on my Department's website at:

Funding has been secured for 'Park and Ride' projects in my Department's budget. However, the implementation of Park and Ride schemes will take place in a constrained budgetary context and this may impact on the ability to deliver all the priority projects identified in the Programme.

In relation to North Antrim, the Programme has recently delivered an additional 45 spaces at Coleraine Bus and Train Centre. Proposals for the delivery of additional spaces at Ballymena railway station and at Cullybackey halt are also being moved forward.

Parking Tickets

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development whether traffic wardens can cancel a parking ticket once it has been issued.

(AQW 25476/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A Traffic Attendant cannot cancel a Penalty Charge Notice (PCN) which has been issued. A PCN can only be cancelled by the Parking Enforcement Processing Unit.

Cycling Infrastructure

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department has invested in cycling infrastructure in (i) North Down; and (ii) Ards in each of the last five years.

(AQW 25487/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The information requested by the Member is not available in the form requested, as my Department does not maintain details of investment in cycling infrastructure by individual Council area.

Ballymenoch Park, Holywood

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether consideration has been given to implementing parking restrictions on one side of Ballymenoch Park, Holywood.

(AQW 25513/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I refer to the answers I provided to AQW25512/11-15 and AQW 25514/11-15.

Officials regard the parking situation in Ballmenoch Park as similar to Seapark Road and do not intend to provide waiting restrictions at this location.

Seapark, Holywood

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to commission a survey of residents in the Seapark area of Holywood to gauge if they would like (i) speed bumps on the Seapark Road; (ii) parking restrictions on one side of the Seapark Road; and (iii) parking restrictions on one side of Ballymenoch Park.

(AQW 25514/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my replies to his related questions, AQW25512/11-15 and AQW 25513/11-15. Given that officials have already considered these matters, I do not believe that a survey of residents is needed.

Street Lighting in Residential Areas

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) when the current policy regarding the removal of street lighting in residential areas came into effect; (ii) what consultation procedure took place; and (iii) what savings will be made as a result.

(AQW 25528/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member the policy for not renewing lighting on existing paths, which would no longer be eligible for lighting under the current policy, has been in place since at least 1994.

In 1994, there was no requirement for consultation on policy.

The estimated capital and operating savings per annum, based on an annual renewal of 200 lights that have reached, or are nearing, the end of their safe working life, is £313,000.

Railway Network: Damage to Track near Knockmore Junction

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the incident where 150 tonnes of embankment beneath a railway line near Lisburn, County Antrim, were washed away by rain in June 2012, why this line was used to provide a train service from Belfast to Portrush since it had not been in use for several years; and to detail the measures taken to ensure that (i) the inspection of earthworks and structures are carried out before journeys; (ii) adequate safety procedures are in place to deal with adverse weather conditions; (iii) a sufficiently formal communication system is place with the Rivers Agency; (v) Rail Accident Investigation Branch is informed rather than the current two-step approach; and (vi) adequate weed control is put in place.

(AQW 25532/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This incident occurred on the 27th August 2012 when a train carrying spectators to the Irish Golf Open at Portrush came upon a washed out section of line close to the Knockmore junction. As a result of the prompt action of the train crew on the day no injury arose to any passengers or crew and no damage was caused to the train. This railway line was used regularly over the past number of years for a combination of non-scheduled and scheduled services. It was, and is, frequently used by Northern Ireland Railways in driver training, for the movement of rolling stock for operational and maintenance purposes and as a relief line to be used for diversionary purposes. On this occasion, the railway line was being used to provide additional capacity and operational flexibility in response to high demand in passenger numbers for those attending the Irish Open. This incident was subject to an investigation and a report by the Rail Accident Investigation Branch (RAIB), the independent accident/incident investigator for the United Kingdom. In relation to the remaining points raised I would advise as follows:-

- (i) Earthworks, structures and track are inspected in accordance with National and Local Railway Standards.
- (ii) The RAIB report makes clear that the weather that gave rise to the incident was at least a 1 in 200-year event and that actual rainfall far exceeded weather predictions. Northern Ireland Railways has in place procedures and processes to manage a wide range of weather conditions to cope with weather-related risk. However as a consequence of the report Northern Ireland Railways has reviewed and where reasonably practicable has further strengthened its weather management procedures.
- (iii) With regard to drainage in and around the Brokerstown area, Northern Ireland Railways had not been made aware of a previous incident of flooding or of the Rivers Agency's Risk Assessment. Arising from the investigation and report Northern Ireland Railways have enhanced communication channels with the Rivers Agency and will keep these under review.
- (iv) Northern Ireland Railways in conjunction with other rail operators in UK conforms to reporting regulations and reports directly to RAIB. On this occasion, as the RAIB report shows, the matter was not initially correctly reported. My Department, as Safety Authority, the Health & Safety Executive and the RAIB jointly conducted Seminars with NIR to ensure a better understanding of reporting protocols.

- (v) Northern Ireland Railways has adequate weed control processes for mainline track and branch lines. When weather conditions are particularly wet such as occurred during the 2012 weed spraying programme, spraying is not effective. In those circumstances Northern Ireland Railways puts in place a risk-based priority spraying programme which ensures that weed on mainline track will be adequately managed by maximising any dry spells.

My Department, acting as the Safety Authority, will work closely with NIR on the implementation of the recommendations arising from the Report.

A5 Road Scheme

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any funding allocated to the A5 road scheme has been reinvested in cycling.

(AQW 25535/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the Court ruling on the A5 scheme, and in accordance with financial procedures, I declared a reduced requirement of £108m in relation to the A5 allocation to the Department of Finance and Personnel.

The A5 funding was reallocated in the June 2013 monitoring round for the 2013-14 financial year. I secured over £33m in funding for roads maintenance and for the purchase of around 80 new buses. In addition, around £40m has been agreed to enable work to start on the Magherafelt Bypass next year.

A proportion of the overall maintenance funding will be used to improve cycling provision. Road repairs and resurfacing generally will enhance safety and provide other improvements for all road users, including cyclists.

I made an unsuccessful bid in the June Monitoring Round for £4m for Local Transport and Safety Measures (LTSM), which includes cycling infrastructure measures, and a further bid of £3m has been included for LTSM in the October Monitoring Round. I have also promoted a bid of £1m in the 2014/15 Capital Budget Exercise, which relates solely to cycling infrastructure.

A decision on this funding will only be realised once the outcome of the budget reviews are announced by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

As the Member will be aware, I have recently instructed officials in my Department to give increased and focussed priority to the needs of cyclists, to encourage greater participation in this healthy and sustainable form of transport. I have also asked for a new cycling unit to be established, to ensure the effective progress of a range of cycling initiatives.

Giro d'Italia 2014

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department will ensure that the Giro D'Italia 2014 leaves a lasting legacy for everyday cycling.

(AQW 25537/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is represented on the Northern Ireland Local Steering Group, which is the overseeing committee organising the event. Officials from my Roads Service are involved in the operational aspects of the event through the Race Committee.

The delivery structure of the event has targeted 'legacy' as one of the primary objectives of the event. Whilst the Northern Ireland Tourist Board is leading this aspect of the event organisation, my Department will assist wherever possible.

Travelwise officials have contributed to a draft Legacy Plan which among other things seeks to encourage school's participation in the event and on-going promotion of Active Travel for the journey to school as well as to encourage the wider local population to engage with cycling as a means of transport and a fun activity to get fit.

Programme for Government 2011-15

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress has he made towards meeting the targets of children walking and cycling to school, as set out in the Programme for Government 2011-2015.

(AQW 25538/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department in partnership with the Public Health Agency has put in place an Active School Travel Initiative to engage with a range of schools across N Ireland to deliver a walking and cycling skills training programme.

The contract to deliver this initiative was awarded to Sustrans in July 2013 and involves the delivery of a programme of cycle and walking skills training to pupils in 180 schools across Northern Ireland over a three year period. The objective of this programme is to encourage school children to adopt cycling and walking as their main mode of transport to school which will help to increase numbers identified in the Programme for Government (PfG) target.

A robust programme of monitoring and evaluation is being developed to ensure compliance with the PfG targets and improved information.

Prior to award of this contract my Department commissioned a one year interim sustainable school travel proposal delivered to 40 schools which began the process of delivering increases in sustainable transport choices made by school children in advance of the introduction of the full Active School Travel Programme.

I aim to bid for £2m in October monitoring to support this programme with investment in infrastructure (often safety measures at schools) and I am keen to develop a long term marketing campaign to develop behavioural change to further promote the benefits of sustainable alternatives to the car.

My Department is also working with other Stakeholders in the forthcoming Giro d'Italia Big Start to ensure that it provides a lasting legacy for cycling among our school children.

Cycle Routes: Victoria Park to Holywood

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he has plans to develop a cycle route from Victoria Park to Holywood.

(AQW 25539/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that cycling facilities already exist along the A2 between Victoria Park and Holywood.

In the longer term, my Department's preferred option for improving the A2 Sydenham Bypass between the M3 Lagan Bridge Junction and the Tillysburn Junction proposes widening the existing carriageway from two lanes to three lanes in each direction. Pedestrian and cycle facilities will also be enhanced through a high quality shared-use facility on one side of the A2 Sydenham Bypass, adjacent to both the Belfast City Airport and Victoria Park. This shared-use footway and cycle track will be segregated from the carriageway by the provision of a barrier. However, the progression of this scheme is dependent upon the successful completion of the statutory procedures, a satisfactory economic appraisal and the availability of finance beyond the current budget period.

Cycling and Pedestrian Infrastructure

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the capital work schemes aimed at increasing (i) pedestrian; and (ii) cyclist travel in each of the (a) last; and (b) next five years.

(AQW 25542/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is committed to providing safer roads for the growing number of vulnerable road users, including cyclists and pedestrians, by utilising a range of measures. Such measures include: road safety engineering, education, traffic calming, and enhancement of the pedestrian and cycling network.

It would be impractical to list all the capital works schemes completed over the past five years, however, details of all the transportation and minor works schemes, aimed at improving safety for these vulnerable users, which have been carried out in each of the Council areas can be found in the 'Roads Service reports to Councils' page on the DRD website, www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information.htm

In respect of investment over the next five years, detailed budgets have yet to be determined for future years and as such, details of the specific programmes of works have not been finalised. I can confirm, however, that cycling and pedestrian schemes will continue to be identified and it is my intention to continue to invest in and improve the infrastructure as far as available resources permit.

As the Member will be aware, I have recently instructed officials in my Department to give increased and focussed priority to the needs of cyclists, to encourage greater participation in this healthy and sustainable form of transport. I have also asked for a new cycling unit to be established, to ensure the effective progress of a range of cycling initiatives.

Cycling Infrastructure: Ballymena

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how he plans to improve cycling safety and infrastructure in Ballymena.

(AQW 25543/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Sub Regional Transport Plan, published by the Department in 2007, contained blueprints to guide the future development of cycling infrastructure in a number of key towns including Ballymena.

Work completed in the Ballymena area to date includes the development of National Cycle Network (NCN) Route 97 from Ballymena to Glenarm, NCN Route 96 from Toome towards Ballymoney, and links along parts of the A26 Larne Road Link, Crebilly Road and Galgorm Road from County Hall to Gracehill.

Officials from my Department have been working with counterparts from Ballymena Borough Council over the past year to consider future cycle routes within the town and have agreed on three main routes to be developed as finance becomes available over the coming years. These routes will combine sections adjacent to existing roads with sections through council owned parkland and include:

- providing links to NCN Route 97 (Ballymena to Glenarm) via Fry's Road, Grove Road, Doury Road, Sentry Hill and The People's Park to Ballymoney Road;
- completing links to NCN 97 along parts of the A26 Larne Road Link; and

- linking route NCN 97 towards Route 94 Loughshore Trail via Moat Road, Pennybridge Footpath, Ballee Way and Ballee Road West as well as along the Antrim Road.

I am aware that cyclists are particularly vulnerable road users and their safety needs to be treated as a high priority. I am also aware that the perception of danger is a key factor that discourages greater use of cycling, as a mode of transport. I have therefore asked my officials to ensure the new cycling unit, which is being established in my Department, ensures greater priority and increased focus is given to safety issues, relating to cycling.

Electric Car Charging Points

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development, in relation to e-car charging points, to detail (i) the location of each charging point in Fermanagh-South Tyrone; and (ii) the number of times each has been used since their installation. (AQW 25572/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The data provided below represents charge point usage from the date of commissioning up until the 22nd of August in Fermanagh-South Tyrone.

yLink Applications

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the average length of time taken to process yLink applications; and how many have been issued since the introduction of the scheme.

(AQW 25608/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that it sub-contracts with a Bureau Service to produce all photo-personalised Translink Smartpasses including: yLink cards; Senior Smartpasses; 60+ Smartpasses; Blind Smartpasses, War Pensioner Smartpasses, Half-fare Smartpasses and TaxSmart cards.

Translink have a Service Level Agreement in place with the Bureau service that it will process 95% of all applications (regardless of card type) within less than 5 days from the date of receipt of the customer application form to the date it posts the card to the customer.

For the year 01 September 2012 to 31 August 2013 statistics for the processing of all cards, including ylink, were as follows:-

- Processes in less than 5 days = 97%
- Processed in 5-10 days = 1%
- Processed in more than 10 days = 2%

Since the y-link scheme started on 1 July 2012 a total of 11,290 yLink cards have been processed.

Velo-city Cycling Conference

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he has any plans to apply to bring the international cycling conference, Velo City, to Northern Ireland.

(AQW 25633/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have asked officials to consider the benefits and costs associated with this conference and looking at the possibility that it may be held in Northern Ireland in future years.

Main Street, Millisle

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development when the footpath at the shops in Main Street, Millisle will be replaced.

(AQW 25645/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would remind the Member that information on proposed and completed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information/cinformationtype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

As detailed budgets for subsequent years have not yet been finalised, I am unable to provide details of future works programmes at this time.

Masonic Avenue, Millisle

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development when Masonic Avenue, Millisle will be resurfaced.

(AQW 25646/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom\_of\_information/customer\_information/cinformationtype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

I can advise that the detailed budget for subsequent years has not yet been finalised and so it is not possible to provide details of future works programmes at this time.

Building an Active Travel Future for Northern Ireland

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development why there are no measurable targets on the percentage of cycling journeys in its publication, Building an Active Travel Future for Northern Ireland.

(AQW 25652/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Active Travel Strategy 'Building an Active Travel Future for Northern Ireland' is the result of the work undertaken by the inter-departmental Active Travel Forum informed by the results of the public consultation exercise and agreed by the Executive in 2012. It aims to provide a high level framework for a more integrated approach across government and in partnership with key stakeholders to deliver our vision for walking and cycling.

The Strategy should provide the foundations, over the longer term, to build a travel culture in which walking and cycling are seen as the natural choice for most of the journeys most of us make. Currently the proportion of trips made by bicycle in Great Britain is at least twice the level recorded in Northern Ireland. The proportion of trips by bicycle in Great Britain is set to increase to an as yet unspecified level. I wanted the Strategy to capture the aspiration for NI to rise faster to a comparable level over the next ten years, rather than limiting our ambition to achieving parity with current levels of cycling in Great Britain. For that reason, the Strategy sets a number of relative targets as follows:

- Increase the average distance cycled to be in line with our UK counterparts by 2020, and
- Increase the percentage of trips taken by cycling to be in line with our UK counterparts by 2020.

Our targets are not static and therefore will increase further over the lifetime of the Strategy, taking account of any future growth in cycling rates in Great Britain. While challenging, I believe this is the correct approach if cycling is to become the natural choice for most of the short journeys we make and if we are to avoid constraining our ambitions.

In addition, the Strategy also sets specific targets to increase the rates of cycling among school pupils as follows:

- by 2015, 36% of primary school pupils and 22% of secondary school pupils should be walking or cycling to school as their main mode of travel;
- by 2019, 40% of primary school pupils and 25% of secondary school pupils should be walking or cycling to school as their main mode of travel.

A great deal has already been achieved under the Active Travel Strategy. In support of the Strategy, the Active Travel Action Plan sets out measures that will be taken forward by government departments, local authorities and voluntary bodies over the next few years to encourage more cycling and walking and less dependency on private cars.

I remain determined to build on this and ensure a renewed focus on cycling within my Department. For that reason I recently announced the establishment of a new cycling unit in my Department. The unit will answer to me directly and will co-ordinate the wide range of initiatives within my department and engage cycling bodies and groups to ensure a clear focus on delivering my ambitions for cycling.

Cycling

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the initiatives in place to increase the percentage of journeys taken by bicycle.

(AQW 25653/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: When I launched the Active Travel Strategy in January of this year I undertook to publish an Action Plan which sets out actions that will be taken by government departments, local authorities and voluntary bodies to encourage more cycling and walking.

The Action Plan which was published at the beginning of August lists many of the initiatives planned up to 2015 and includes those delivered to-date such as:

- Opening of the Comber Greenway to Titanic Quarter Cycle Route;
- The Northern Ireland Civil Service "Cycle to Work Scheme" which has helped 700 staff to obtain bicycles;
- £2.4 million spent by my Department in providing 8km of new footway, 3.7km of cycle lanes, 22 new pelican crossings and 19 safe routes to school schemes.

My Department is also providing £4.3m to fund active travel Demonstration projects in Belfast, Londonderry, Craigavon and Strabane. I have also more recently committed £50k for my Department to undertake a Feasibility Study into a cycle / pedestrian footbridge over the River Lagan close to the gasworks site. Furthermore, my Department's Roads Service plans to implement around 4.5km of new cycle lanes.

Another very recent initiative is The Active School Travel Programme which will provide a programme of cycle and walking skills training to pupils up to 180 schools across Northern Ireland over a three year period. The objective of this programme is to encourage school pupils to adopt cycling and walking as their main mode of transport to and from school. We need to support this programme with investment in infrastructure (often safety measures at schools) to encourage participation. I aim to bid for £2m in October Monitoring to kick start this programme and I am keen to develop a long term marketing campaign to develop behavioural change.

I believe we need an increased focus on cycling if we are to keep pace. For that reason I recently announced the establishment of a new cycling unit within my Department that will answer to me directly and will co-ordinate the wide range of initiatives within my department and engage cycling bodies and groups to ensure a clear focus on delivering my ambitions for cycling

I look forward to the continuing co-operation of all interested stakeholders over the coming years to deliver our vision for walking and cycling, which is to put walking and cycling at the heart of local transport, public health and well-being.

Cycling Infrastructure

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans for strategic long term infrastructure for cycling.
(AQW 25654/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's three Transport Plans, the Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan (RSTNTP), the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan (BMTP) and Sub-Regional Transport Plan, set out the proposals for strategic long term infrastructure for cycling. These proposals, where they involve the roads infrastructure, are delivered primarily through the Local Transport and Safety Measures programme, as available resources permit.

My Department is committed to promoting cycling as a healthy and environmentally friendly mode of transport and will continue to work, in partnership with local government, voluntary bodies, public transport operators and the health and education sectors, to promote this pursuit across Northern Ireland and develop cycling initiatives further.

Recently, I have published an Action Plan for Active Travel, which will, in the period 2012-2015, promote walking and cycling across all Executive Departments and by local authorities and other interested bodies to take forward the Active Travel Strategy. This Action Plan includes a range of proposals to improve the infrastructure for cycling up to the end of the current budget period.

Beyond 2015, as part of the New Approach to Regional Transportation, my Department is developing transport spending proposals which will feed into the next Programme for Government budget process. This is being undertaken through a policy fit process which will identify those transport schemes which will best achieve the strategic objectives of the Northern Ireland Executive. The assessment process includes consideration of sustainable modes of travel, including cycling.

Also, I am establishing a new cycling unit within my Department, which will be tasked to identify and invest in new cycling schemes to complement the existing National Cycle Network in accordance with the Northern Ireland Cycling Strategy.

Waste Water Treatment Works

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Regional Development, in relation to Waste Water Treatment Works, to detail the number that (i) require upgrading due to overloading; (ii) will be upgraded; and (iii) have had additional connections refused due to the current system being overloaded, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 25668/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NI Water) that it operates and maintains a wide range of Wastewater Treatment Works (WwTWs), from septic tanks serving 2 or more houses to the large Belfast WwTW at Duncrue Street. NI Water collects and treats domestic wastewater, stormwater and trade effluent discharges which are measured in terms of the equivalent population (PE).

Out of the total of 1028 WwTWs, 250 WwTWs serve population equivalents (PE) greater than 250 people, 164 WwTWs serve populations between 250 and 50 and 614 WwTWs serve populations less than 50. The 778 WwTWs serving less than 250 PE serve less than 2% of the total population, generally in rural areas.

NI Water continues to invest in improving and maintaining wastewater treatment and is currently achieving its highest ever wastewater discharge compliance. In 2012 over 98% of the population was served by compliant works and this compares with 84.5% in 2007.

- (i) Of the 1028 WwTWs that NI Water operates, 130 currently require to be upgraded due to overloading. It is important to note that these works may be currently complying with their discharge consent but need to be upgraded due to increased risk to compliance or to provide additional capacity. These 1028 Works can be split into two distinct groups, those above 250 Population Equivalent (PE) (82no.) and those between 250PE and 50PE (48no.). With reference to the 614 WwTWs below 50PE it would be anticipated that headroom would be limited at many of these sites. However, given the rural nature of these very small works any significant new development is likely to require an increase in treatment capacity.
- (ii) The funding for the upgrades of the WwTWs is determined by the Utility Regulator during the Price Control (PC) process based on the public sector capital funding available. The funding available and the priority for investment is set out in the Social & Environmental Guidance prepared by the Department for Regional Development. For the PC13 period, 2013-2015, funding is available for the upgrade of 15 sites above 250PE that are currently overloaded and for 11 sites between 250PE & 50PE. For the PC15 period (2015-2021) NI Water plan to upgrade a further 34 sites above 250PE threshold that are currently overloaded and an additional 25 sites in the band between 250PE & 50PE. It should be noted that the final list of WwTWs to be upgraded during PC15 will be confirmed following further stakeholder engagement and a final determination by the Utility Regulator in December 2014.
- (iii) Additional connections have been refused at 70 of the 82 WwTWs above 250PE and 22 of the 48 of the WwTWs between 250PE and 50PE.
- (iv) The decision to permit or refuse development rests with Planning Service. NI Water's responsibility as a Consultee within the planning process is to consider the impact of additional loading on the WwTWs and the sewerage system and the impact on the ability of the WwTW to meet the discharge standards. Where NI Water does not recommend a connection to the system it is generally accompanied with a statement on alternatives such as the provision of a private treatment works by the developer, subject to NIEA approvals. Alternatively, if NI Water is confident of completing an upgrade at a WwTW where headroom constraints apply, and is within two years of substantial completion it will recommend connection to the system either in an unconstrained recommendation or with a negative condition approval whereby properties can be built but not occupied until completion of the WwTW upgrade.

The detail of WWTWs by constituency can be seen within the two tables attached:

A26 Dualling Scheme: Effect on Farming

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Regional Development how farmers will be accommodated adjacent to the new A26. (AQW 25672/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The A26 Dualling scheme will provide an all-purpose dual carriageway with landowners and farmers accessing it from either left in - left out junctions, or one of the adjacent full movement side road junctions.

Appropriate accommodation works will also be provided and will include the provision of fencing, hedging, gates and laneways.

Where land is required for the scheme, landowners will be compensated in accordance with the Land Compensation (Northern Ireland) Order 1982. The purpose of this monetary compensation is to ensure the landowner is put in a similar position to what he would have been had the land or property not been taken for the scheme. Compensation matters are dealt with directly by the Department of Finance and Personnel's Land and Property Services (LPS), on behalf of my Department.

A26 Dualling Scheme: Effect on Farming

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether underpasses will be made available to local farmers along the proposed A26.

(AQW 25675/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The provision of cattle creeps, which may take the form of either an underpass or an overbridge, have been considered as part of landowner accommodation works on the proposed A26 dual carriageway. The needs of individual farms, for example, their layout and management, as well as details of the frequency and type of movement of cattle, size of the herd, the degree of severance, the opportunity to share facilities and road user safety, have all been assessed.

I should explain my Department has no legal obligation to carry out accommodation works, as liability is limited to monetary consideration only. If, and when, accommodation works are carried out, the effect is to mitigate the compensation payable in respect of land taken and injurious affection to land retained by the landowner. In this respect, the cost of accommodation works, in terms of value to the property, is taken into account by DFP's Land & Property Services (LPS) in assessing the overall compensation payable in respect of land and/or rights acquired.

When taking all of this information into account, my Department concluded that the provision of any agricultural crossing for landowners along the proposed A26 road scheme would not be economically viable.

I am aware that requests by local farmers for agricultural underpasses were discussed at the A26 Public Inquiries in November 2012. My Department is currently giving consideration to the Inspector's recommendations and I hope to be in a position to publish the Departmental Statement soon.

Rail and Bus Network: Secure Bicycle Parking Spaces

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of secure bicycle parking spaces at each (i) train halt; (ii) train station; and (iii) bus station.

(AQW 25681/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The number of bicycle parking spaces at each train station and bus station is set out in the tables below. Translink's intention is to expand cycle storage capacity over the next year.

Cycle Proofing

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the plans she has to cycle-proof new transport policies. (AQW 25690/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's new Approach to Regional Transportation includes a policy fit assessment on future transport interventions which will identify those transport schemes which will best achieve the strategic objectives of the Northern Ireland Executive. The assessment process includes consideration of sustainable modes of travel, including cycling.

In addition I have recently decided to create a dedicated cycling unit within my Department. This unit will work closely with other government departments and key stakeholders to ensure cycling policies are effective and co-ordinated.

My Department will also continue to encourage the promotion of cycling and active travel solutions through the Active Travel Strategy and its subsequent Action Plan.

Roadworks

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration is given to the time of year when assessing the impact of roadworks.

(AQW 25707/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: When considering the impact of road works, my Department considers a wide range of factors including:

- the urgency/nature of the works, for example, emergency works, may have to be carried out at short notice;
- variations in expected traffic volumes and impact to road users, such as the impact of school holidays and the Christmas period;
- availability of finance, including additional in-year allocations;
- likely conflict with large public or security events, for example, the North West 200 or the G8 Summit;
- resources available to contractors, potentially meaning large programmes of work need to be spread throughout the year;
- co-ordination of works by utilities, such as BT, NIE etc., or other nearby road works; and
- the proximity of residential properties and/or places of worship when, considering night time or weekend working.

Reservoirs: Conlig

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development when NI Water plan to sell its reservoirs in Conlig.

(AQW 25712/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that while the reservoirs at Conlig have been declared surplus to requirements and are listed in its Annual Land Disposal Register, a timeframe for offering them to the market has not yet been identified.

In disposing of surplus assets, NIW must ensure that it obtains the best price, achieves value for money and maintains high standards of propriety. Any sale is dependent on a number of factors, not least the market conditions at the time of the sale and the level of expressions of interest. NIW is conscious of the amenity enjoyed by the local community at Conlig and other users of the facility, and will encourage any prospective purchaser to maintain this amenity. However, it is not NIW policy to include conditions of this nature within the contract for sale of any property.

Cycle to Work Scheme

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps he is taking to promote the Cycle to Work scheme.

(AQW 25717/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Cycle to Work Scheme is a HMRC scheme.

My Department through its Travelwise initiative promotes cycling as a sustainable mode of travel to work and school. Travelwise regularly promotes the Cycle to Work Scheme in its campaigns: including reference to the scheme in press and media releases highlighting cycling matters; in Workplace travel plans prepared on behalf of Travelwise for employers in all sectors; and at promotional events held in workplaces. We have also provided advice on the Cycle to Work Scheme to a range of employers in all sectors.

Sewerage: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of upgrading the sewerage system in the North Down area, in the last three financial years.

(AQW 25759/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that the cost of upgrading the sewerage system in the North Down area in the last three financial years, is as detailed in the table below.

Period	Expenditure (£000s)
April 2010 – March 2011	£1,036
April 2011 – March 2012	£734
April 2012 – March 2013	£877
Total	£2,647

Cycling

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of miles cycled in 2012 compared with 2011, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 25776/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Travel Survey for Northern Ireland (TSNI) contains information on the average distance travelled per person per year by bicycle, however, information is not broken down to constituency level.

For all TSNI analysis, as the sample size is relatively small, 3 years of data need to be combined to ensure that the analysis carried out is robust.

Currently available information is provided in Table 1 of the Headline Report (2010-2012) and Table 3.5 of the In-depth Report (2009-2011) both of which can be found at:

www.drdni.gov.uk/index/statistics/stats-categories/northern\_ireland\_travel\_survey.htm.

Annborough Waste Water Treatment Works

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the cost of repairing the damage caused by vandalism at Annborough Waste Water Treatment Works since 2010.

(AQW 25880/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that since 2011 there have been a number of incidents relating to trespass and vandalism at Annborough Wastewater Treatment Works. The total cost of repairs and remedial works arising from these incidents is approximately £32,000. There were no recorded incidents before 2011.

NIW has been working closely with the Police Service of Northern Ireland and has increased staffing levels at the Works to deter further incidents.

Trains

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of purchasing new trains, in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 25928/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below details the cost of purchasing new trains in each of the last three financial years.

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
	£31,059,916	£50,721,337	£422,846

The overall cost of the 20 new trains is estimated as £112m.

Buses

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of purchasing new buses, in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 25929/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below details the cost of purchasing new buses in each of the last three financial years.

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
New Buses	£6,432,876	£12,744,018	£19,870,989 *
New Tour Buses	£730,098 (Self Funded by Ulsterbus)

* includes £5.8m received through the European Sustainable Competiveness Programme Northern Ireland 2007-2013

Cycling

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department measures the number and percentage of people cycling; and to detail the latest figures.

(AQW 25967/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Travel Survey for Northern Ireland (TSNI) contains information on the percentage of people who have cycled in the last 12 months, broken down by age and gender.

Currently available information is provided in Table 5.4 of the TSNI In-depth Report (2009-2011) which can be found at:

www.drdni.gov.uk/index/statistics/stats-categories/northern\_ireland\_travel\_survey.htm.

Detailed information on survey methodology, data quality and guidance on using the data can be found in the User Information section of the In-depth Report while definitions and survey notes are included in Appendix A.

A separate Technical Report is published annually which provides greater detail on the survey methodology and this can also be found at the link above.

Bicycle Racks on Buses

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 25213/11-15, what assessment was made of the extent to which bicycle racks obscure driver vision and affect driving performance; and whether his Department considered the experiences of other countries that introduced bicycle racks when making this decision.

(AQW 26029/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised my officials that an assessment was carried out using a fixture provided by the cycle rack supplier which simulated the position of the rack on the front of a bus.

Translink also looked at similar cycle racks as fitted to buses in North America, U.S.A. and Canada, as at the time of the tests there were no equivalent applications in the UK or Ireland.

The main difference in North America was the design of the buses which had smaller windscreens and higher floor levels which meant that the racks did not interfere with the view of the driver when fitted.

Most buses in the Translink fleet have large windscreens which take up typically about two thirds of the frontal area of the bus. Approximately 1/3 of this area would have been obscured by the rack, which was deemed unacceptable for safety reasons.

Department for Social Development

Social Housing Developments

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the new build social housing developments completed in (i) 2012; and (ii) 2013 by (a) Clanmil; (b) Fold; (c) Apex; (d) Oaklee; and (e) Alpha Housing Associations, including the name of the development, the name of main contractor and the date of practical completion.

(AQW 25222/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive has provided the tables below setting out details of the new build only social housing projects developed by the Housing Associations in 2012 and 2013. They have also advised that Alpha Housing Association did not have any developments over this period.

The Housing Executive advises that the table may not include all schemes completed by these Housing Associations during 2012 and 2013. This is because Housing Associations manage on site construction contracts and they only notify the Housing Executive at the point of submitting a claim for final payment of Housing Association Grant.

Properties Excluded from Schemes in Ballymena, Ballymoney and Moyle Council Areas

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 22275/11-15, whether the Housing Executive has any plans to establish a scheme to deal with a number of houses in each of these council areas.

(AQW 25365/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the vast majority of tenants refusing to have work carried out relates to heating. In view of that, they operate a one off heating scheme each year to pick up on such properties at Change of Tenancy, or where appliances subsequently break down after the previous refusal of work.

Smoke alarm replacement refusals are rolled on each year until the replacement is completed.

External Cyclical Maintenance scheme work and kitchen refusals are kept under review by the Housing Executive's Area/ Local office and put forward for programming when appropriate.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on Neighbourhood Renewal in each year since its inception.

(AQW 25408/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below details my Departments expenditure in relation to Neighbourhood Renewal in each year since its inception. The budget for Neighbourhood Renewal in 2013/14 is £28m.

	Amount £000's
2003/04	727
2004/05	2,918
2005/06	7,880
2006/07	16,737
2007/08	22,084
2008/09	25,449
2009/10	27,355
2010/11	21,278
2011/12	25,467
2012/13	27,875

Notes:

- 1 A range of factors will influence expenditure including, the history of investment in the Neighbourhood Renewal areas from other initiatives or mainstream sources and the 'lead-in' period required to establish structures and produce Neighbourhood Renewal Action Plans will also impact on ability to utilise funds.

Areas at Risk

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on Areas at Risk in each year since its inception.

(AQW 25414/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below details my Departments expenditure in relation to Areas at Risk in each year since its inception. The budget for Areas at Risk in 2013/14 is £1m.

	Amount £000's
2006/07	379
2007/08	962
2008/09	1,000
2009/10	2.925
2010/11	729
2011/12	719
2012/13	343

Notes:

- 1 The 'lead-in' period required to establish structures and produce Action Plans will impact on ability to utilise funds and will influence expenditure.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to list the areas currently receiving Neighbourhood Renewal funding.

(AQW 25415/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below lists the 36 Areas currently receiving Neighbourhood Renewal Funding.

Andersonstown	Tullycarnet	Bangor
Colin	Upper Ardoyne / Ballysillan	Brownlow
Crumlin / Ardoyne	Upper Springfield / Whiterock	Coalisland
Falls / Clonard	Limavady	Coleraine Churchlands
Greater Shankill	Outer North Derry	Coleraine East
Inner East Belfast	Outer West Derry	Downpatrick
Inner North Belfast	Strabane	Dungannon
Inner South Belfast	Triax - Cityside	Enniskillen
Ligoniel	Waterside	Lurgan
Outer West Belfast	Armagh	Newry
Rathcoole	Ballyclare	Omagh
South West Belfast	Ballymena	Portadown North West

Housing Associations: Mergers

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, given that the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE) has undertaken to ballot its tenants about transferring from the NIHE to housing association landlords, why Housing Association tenants are not balloted when mergers of associations are proposed.

(AQW 25440/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Housing Association tenants are not balloted prior to mergers between Housing Associations because they are remaining within the same regulatory framework with all its associated protection.

Empty Homes: Upper Bann

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Social Development how many of the 32,000 empty homes that his Department has identified are in the Upper Bann constituency; and how many of these homes are in (i) Lurgan; (ii) Portadown; and (iii) Banbridge.

(AQW 25456/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Department of Finance and Personnel's Land and Property Services provided my Department with details of the number of empty homes across Northern Ireland. Of the 32,000 empty homes identified, 1,742 are in the Upper Bann constituency. My Department is seeking to obtain actual addresses of empty homes from Land and Property Services.

The table below shows a breakdown of the total number of empty homes in the Upper Bann constituency.

Council	Electoral Area	Number Empty
Craigavon	Central	342
	Loughside	267
	Lurgan	409
	Portadown	396
Banbridge	Town	186
	Knockiveagh	142
Total		1742

Empty Homes

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Social Development whether he intends to involve housing associations in developing his Empty Homes strategy.

(AQW 25457/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As stated in the recently published Empty Homes Strategy and Action Plan, I am determined to maximise all opportunities to bring empty homes back into use. It is highly likely that Housing Associations will be involved in this effort.

In addition, as noted in the Action Plan, consideration will be given to bring forward legislation to enable Housing Associations to lease empty properties and then let them.

Empty Homes

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Social Development what plans he has to involve local communities in regenerating empty homes in their area.

(AQW 25458/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department and the Housing Executive will work together to implement the Empty Homes Strategy and Action Plan. It is envisaged that local communities will be involved in this action. A Housing Executive website will be available shortly to allow citizens in Northern Ireland to report empty homes in their community.

Empty Homes: Crime

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Social Development what links his Department has established between empty homes and the incidence of crime.

(AQW 25459/11-15)

Mr McCausland: While I believe that bringing an empty property back into use can reduce anti-social behaviour my Department has not established any empirical links between empty homes and the incidence of crime.

You may wish to contact the Department of Justice to ascertain if it holds any data on incidence of crime around empty homes.

Red Sky

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development whether any departmental officials raised concerns about attending a meeting with Red Sky in June 2011.

(AQW 25480/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Officials provided full briefing in advance of the meeting. In full knowledge of that briefing, I decided to attend the meeting. Officials also attended the meeting along with me.

Housing Executive: Contractors

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development how many contractors have been released from their contracts with the Northern Ireland Housing Executive since 1 January 2011.

(AQW 25495/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that since 1 January 2011 six contractors have been released from Housing Executive contracts.

Community Workers

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many community workers posts are currently funded by his Department.

(AQW 25496/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department supports a broad range of services within the community through various programmes such as Neighbourhood Renewal, Areas at Risk, Small Pockets of Deprivation, Community Support, Community Investment and Housing Community officers. The Departments funding arrangements are to provide support for the delivery of services within the community and not to fund community posts therefore we are not the employer. However, as a result of this funding, 984 individuals are employed as community workers.

You may wish to note for the purpose of this response my Department has defined 'community worker' as a worker who works within the community and for the benefit of the community.

Village Regeneration Scheme, South Belfast

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) how much has been spent to date on the Village Regeneration Scheme in South Belfast; (ii) how much is still scheduled to be spent; (iii) when and how the remaining finance will be spent; and (iv) should the full original budget not be spent in The Village, then, where this will be spent.

(AQW 25599/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Expenditure on the Village Regeneration Scheme comprises of two elements:

- (i) vesting of existing properties, and a new build programme. The expenditure to date on both is:

Stage 1 Vesting

The estimated full cost of the Village vesting scheme is £50,859,000 with £42.248 million expenditure since 2008/09 as detailed below. Some of this will be an accrual but reflects the NIHE resources allocated to the project.

	£'000 expenditure per accounts including accruals
2008/09	3,898
2009/10	13,246
2010/11	20,071
2011/12	4,427
2012/13	562
2013/14 to date	44
Total	42,248

Stage 2 SHDP

The Village Regeneration Scheme is currently being delivered on the basis of five programmed new build/rehabilitation schemes by Fold Housing. These schemes will be delivered based on Housing Association Grant (HAG) supplemented by private borrowings by Fold Housing.

Housing Association Grant (HAG) across the 5 schemes is estimated at £8.1m (including public subsidy through transfer of Housing Executive lands).

£3.9m HAG has been paid to Fold Housing to date, in respect of the 3 schemes already started on site (see below for details).

Approximately £2.35m HAG remains to be paid to Fold Housing pending completion of the three phases on site. A further £1.8m HAG is estimated in respect of the two schemes programmed to start during this programme year 2013/14.

Three phases are currently on site and nearing completion. These are detailed below:

- Village Rehabs (9 units) onsite March 2013 and due to complete in January 2014 – Estimated total HAG £417,359 payable.
- Village Urban Renewal Area Phase 1 (37 units) onsite March 2012 and due to complete in December 2013. 21 units have been handed over already – Estimated total HAG £2,530,754 payable.
- Village Urban Renewal Area Phase 2 (50 units) onsite March 2012 and due to complete in February 2014. 11 units have been handed over already – Estimated total HAG £3,379,374 payable.

(ii) The amount that is still scheduled to be spent on the Village Regeneration Scheme is as follows:

Stage 1 Vesting

A balance of £8,611,000 relates to projected spend for compensation claims and will be spent over the next 2-3 years.

Stage 2 SHDP

A further two phases are programmed to start onsite before March 2014. These are:

- Village Urban Renewal Area Phase 3 (27 units) – Estimated total HAG £1,305,474 payable.
- Village Rehabs (11 units) – Estimated total HAG £529,579 payable.

- (iii) The remaining finance will be spent up to March 2014 as outlined in points (i) and (ii) above. Finance for the construction of the 134 social housing units currently programmed for delivery as described above is drawn from the Housing Association Grant (HAG) budget.
- (iv) Should the full original budget not be spent in The Village, any unused HAG funding will be allocated to progress other social housing schemes.

Work Capability Assessment Appeals

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of work capability assessment appeals; and the number of successful work capability assessment appeals, in each year since the assessments were introduced.

(AQW 25627/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Department is unable to provide the information requested, as it does not distinguish between appeals made against medical decisions (i.e. those based on the outcome of the Work Capability Assessment) and appeals made against non-medical decisions (e.g. failure to return medical questionnaires, excess income/capital etc). Employment Support Allowance was introduced in October 2008 and up to March 2013 41,360 appeals had been received. Appeals lodged with the Social Security Agency are subject to withdrawal or reconsideration and therefore not all appeals received will progress to The Appeals Service. Some appeals may be under consideration, awaiting further medical evidence or other supporting information. No Employment and Support Allowance appeals had been completed by the end of 2008/09, following introduction of the benefit on 27 October 2008. Of those that have proceeded to hearing in the last 4 years 6,601 were upheld in the claimant's favour and 11,670 in the Department's favour. The table below provides a breakdown of the total Employment and Support Allowance appeals received, along with outcomes:

Year	Appeals received	Appeals upheld in claimant favour	Appeals upheld in Department's favour
2008-09	133	0	0
2009-10	5,201	354	860
2010-11	6,498	1,410	3,374
2011-12	10,460	2,067	3,778
2012-13	19,068	2,770	3,658

Housing: Duke Street, East Belfast

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the total number of houses in Duke Street in east Belfast, broken down by those under the remit of (i) the Housing Executive; and (ii) a housing association; and the number of these houses that require roof maintenance.

(AQW 25662/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There are a total of 16 properties at Duke Street in East Belfast. There are no houses under the remit of the Housing Executive, 3 properties are owner-occupied and 13 are under the remit of Habinteg Housing Association.

The Housing Executive is currently engaged in a procurement process to fit protective roofing to owner-occupied properties at numbers 8, 11 and 12 Duke Street. These properties were previously owned by Habinteg Housing Association. Some Habinteg Housing Association properties have had their roofs replaced with metal cladding. No other properties under the remit of Habinteg Housing Association require roof maintenance.

Polyframe Ltd

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has met with representatives of Polyframe Ltd; when any such meetings took place; and for what reason.

(AQW 25677/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have had no meetings with Polyframe Ltd.

Fuel Poverty

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many households are in fuel poverty.

(AQW 25711/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Northern Ireland House Condition Survey 2011 reports that 42% of households in Northern Ireland are in fuel poverty.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rationale for the exclusion of project running costs as part of Neighbourhood Renewal through the North West Development Office.

(AQW 25724/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department's North West Development Office does not exclude project running costs as part of Neighbourhood Renewal funding.

Since the introduction of Neighbourhood Renewal in 2003, the North West Development Office has funded project running costs.

Accommodation: Elderly Tenants

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the Department for Social Development's current capability to meet the accommodation needs of elderly tenants.

(AQO 4574/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The NIHE as the Strategic Housing Authority for Northern Ireland carries out research on an ongoing basis into all aspects of the housing market. It has specifically carried out research into the future need and demand for appropriate models of accommodation and associated services for older people. This was published February 2011 and is available on the NIHE website - www.nihe.gov.uk. Current policy is to build to Lifetime Homes standard to ensure a home is flexible, adaptable and accessible which allows older people to continue living as independently as possible in the community.

The NIHE consider trends in both social housing supply and demand and project what is considered to be the housing need requirement. NIHE Regional Planners also consider the available waiting list data, trends in supply and the wider demographic trends. These assessments include information on the various household groups, including older persons.

NIHE seek to ensure that a suitable housing mix for general social housing is provided by Housing Associations. This would normally reflect the proportion of household groups including elderly households that are in housing stress, subject to any constraints of the site or proposed development. Generally any "level access" accommodation (ground floor or with Lift Access) can be considered suitable for elderly applicants and does not always include bungalows.

On occasion, Housing Associations propose specific accommodation designed and managed for the "active elderly". These types of scheme are proposed by Housing Associations in line with the Department for Social Development's Housing Association Guidance and are referred to as "active elderly" (Cat1) accommodation.

Accommodation suitable for "frail elderly" (Cat2), or those with conditions such as dementia requiring additional support or care provision (Cat3) is assessed by the various Health Service Boards and Trusts and planned for within the Supporting People commissioning regime. Supporting People Commissioning involves a collaborative approach to identifying local need for supported living accommodation for those with a variety of more complex needs.

The Supporting People "Housing Related Support Strategy 2012-2015" identifies a total current provision of 10,300 supported elderly housing units (425 schemes) across Northern Ireland.

New Supply – General Need & Supported Elderly:

The NIHE's current 3 year Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP) for Northern Ireland contains the following planned schemes / units exclusively classified for elderly applicants:

Client Group	Schemes	Unit Numbers
General Need Active elderly	5	81
Supported Frail Elderly etc	7	175

In addition to these exclusively elderly schemes, there is also a significant number of 1 & 2 bedroomed general need units programmed within the SHDP. Many of these may also provide suitable accommodation for elderly households. This is in keeping with current policy on providing independent living for as long as possible with care provided in the community. There are a total of just over 3,400 general need one and two bedroomed units either on site or contained on the current 3 year SHDP. (It is not possible to present a specific breakdown on the number of potentially "elderly suitable/level access" general need units on the SHDP).

In addition to the schemes contained on the SHDP, elderly households can be housed by a range of transfers or allocations to suitable existing properties.

Double Glazing Window Replacement Scheme

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development when the outstanding work on the double glazing window replacement scheme will be allocated.

(AQW 25783/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the low rise double glazing procurement is currently subject to a court injunction which has prevented them from proceeding. Work is underway to have the injunction lifted and the Housing Executive is hopeful that this will occur in the next week or so. If the Housing Executive is successful in having the injunction lifted they will proceed with the appointment to the Framework and in turn commence secondary competitions to award contracts as soon as possible. This should allow the programme to recommence during 2013/14.

It is still my intention to make sure that the commitment given in the Programme for Government to have double glazing installed in all Housing Executive properties by 2015 is achieved.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development what was the budget allocation for the Boiler Replacement Scheme in the 2012/13 financial year.

(AQW 25802/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The budget allocation for the Boiler Replacement Scheme for the 2012/13 year was £4 million with the overall budget allocation of £12 million over the three years of scheme.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the actual spend on the Boiler Replacement Scheme in the 2012/13 financial year.

(AQW 25804/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The actual spend on the Boiler Replacement Scheme for the 2012/13 financial year was £2.65m. The Department of Finance and Personnel agreed that the remaining £1.35m of the budget for the 2012/13 year could be carried forward to the 2013/14 year as the scheme only commenced mid way through 2012.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the uptake of the Boiler Replacement Scheme among people earning under £20,000 per annum (i) in the 2012/13 financial year; and (ii) from the beginning of the financial year 2013/14 to the end of August 2013.

(AQW 25809/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In the 2012/13 financial year 70% of those applicants who received a boiler replacement grant had an annual household income under £20,000. From the beginning of the 2013/14 to the end of August 2013, 68% of applicants who received a boiler replacement grant had an annual household income of £20,000. This indicates that those most vulnerable to fuel poverty are being helped with the cost of installing a new efficient boiler.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority

Medical Assessments

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development how many medical assessments have been made for each disability benefit in each financial year since 2006/07; and to list the organisations which carried out the assessments.

(AQW 25831/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is provided in the following table:

Year	Employment and Support Allowance*	Industrial Injuries	Disability Living Allowance	Attendance Allowance
2006/07	N/A	N/A	10,150	N/A
2007/08	N/A	N/A	9,713	N/A
2008/09	1,476	N/A	10,404	N/A
2009/10	12,924	1,424	10,619	N/A
2010/11	16,540	1,241	8,054	N/A
2011/12	42,789	1,504	5,808	N/A
2012/13	73,818	1,281	7,530	500

* Employment and Support Allowance replaced Incapacity Benefit on 27 October 2008.

** The Department is unable to provide the information requested in relation to Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit prior to 2009/10 due to system limitations.

*** Figures from 2006/07 to 2011/12 include examinations carried out for Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance. Information gathered for the majority of this period did not distinguish between Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance examinations. From 2012/13, it is possible to give a complete breakdown of medical examinations carried out for Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance.

Since June 2011, medical assessments conducted on behalf of the Department by have been delivered by Atos Healthcare. Prior to this, medical assessments were conducted by the Department's Medical Support Services.

Shankill Lurgan Foyer

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development whether any schemes similar to the Shankill Lurgan Foyer have been subject to a tendering process.

(AQW 25889/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Supporting People grant is not subject to procurement procedure at present and there have been no schemes including Shankill Lurgan Foyer that have been subject to a tendering process.

Capita Business Services

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development on what date did he agree with the Department for Work and Pensions to initiate the tender process for the contract with Capita Business Services; and on what date did he inform the Committee for Social Development of his Department's decision to outsource Personal Independence Payment assessments.

(AQW 25915/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department started to consider the specific procurement options for securing the Personal Independence Payment Assessment Provider in January 2012. On 30 April 2012, I agreed with the recommendation of my officials that my Department would run a joint procurement competition with the Department for Work and Pensions. This procurement competition for a Personal Independence Payment Assessment Service was formally launched on 2 May 2012.

At the 14th May 2012 meeting of the Executive Sub Committee on Welfare Reform, I presented a paper to Executive colleagues which provided an update on the work carried out on the introduction of the Personal Independence Payment. At that meeting I advised Ministerial colleagues that it was important to plan to have a Personal Independence Payment Assessment Provider contract in place for June 2013. I followed this up by writing to each member of the Executive Sub Committee on 6th June 2012 confirming that my Department had joined the procurement competition with the Department for Work and Pensions and setting out the reasons for the decision. I did not separately advise the Social Development Committee of these emerging developments at that time although at evidence sessions of the Social Development Committee, as early as late 2011, officials had made it clear that Personal Independence Payment assessments would be conducted by independent assessors and that my Department was engaged in a procurement exercise with the Department for Work and Pensions to procure an Assessment Provider. On 2 November 2012 my Department issued a press release announcing the award of the contract to Capita Business Services Ltd.

Capita Business Services

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development why his Department has signed a contract with Capita Business Services to provide PIP Assessments before the enacting of the Welfare Reform Bill; and whether his Department is now contractually obliged to pay Capita regardless of whether Personal Independence Payment are introduced as part of the Welfare Reform Bill.

(AQW 25916/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The contract to provide Personal Independence Payment assessments was awarded to Capita Business Services Ltd on 20 November 2012, at which point the Welfare Reform Bill had moved to Committee Stage. The Department's planning assumption at that time was that Personal Independence Payment would be introduced in Northern Ireland on 10 June 2013, the same date as in Great Britain. The award of the contract was necessary to allow Capita Business Services to begin essential preparation and planning to deliver an assessment service for the expected go-live date of 10 June 2013. The key elements of this work were recruiting and training qualified assessors, securing premises and putting in place the necessary ICT and administrative arrangements. The go-live date for the introduction of Personal Independence Payment in Northern Ireland has subsequently slipped as a consequence of delays in the passage of the Welfare Reform Bill. I can however, confirm, that contractual payments for services provided by Capita Business Services Ltd are informed by an exclusively output based financial model which means that Capita will only be paid for assessment reports that are provided when Personal Independence Payment is introduced in Northern Ireland.

Housing Associations: Valuations

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the valuation process for Housing Associations that wish to purchase private properties.

(AQW 25933/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Housing Associations who wish to acquire private properties for social housing and apply for Housing Association Grant (HAG) to fund such purchases must obtain a valuation of the property prepared by an independent valuer. The association may employ either the District Valuer, Land & Property Services or an independent qualified valuer.

Any valuation should be based on the valuation and reporting requirements laid down in the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors (RICS) 'Red Book'.

Housing Associations are required to brief the valuer on known conditions or constraints and provide a location plan. A valuation must be no more than 12 months old at the date of execution of the contract and at the date of Project Approval. The purchase price is negotiated between the purchasing Housing Association and the vendor and must not exceed the value of the property as assessed by the Valuer.

Properties acquired by Housing Associations for social housing are purchased either as:

- Existing Satisfactory Purchases (pre-occupied vacant properties); or
- Off-the-shelf (newly constructed dwellings purchased for first time occupation)

In order to secure Housing Association Grant, Housing Associations are required to submit an Application for Project Approval to the Housing Executive's Development Programme Group. Applications are assessed to ensure compliance with the requirements of the Housing Association Guide in terms of design, cost, value for money, and location (social housing need).

Brian Rowntree

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether there has been a response to the complaint by the Permanent Secretary to the Northern Ireland Office regarding Mr Brian Rowntree's role as Chairman of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Commissioners.

(AQW 25959/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Permanent Secretary did not make a complaint to the Northern Ireland Office (NIO), however he did draw to their attention a written report by the Internal Audit in the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and has been advised that the NIO will consider the report to determine whether or not it has any implications for Mr Rowntree's role as Chairman of the Civil Service Commissioners for Northern Ireland.

Tenancy Deposit Scheme

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development whether administrators for the Tenancy Deposit Scheme have been appointed for the Holylands area of Belfast.

(AQW 25996/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Tenancy Deposit Scheme administrators were appointed to operate across Northern Ireland.

All deposits taken in respect of a private tenancy on or after 1 April 2013 must be protected in an approved scheme. Contact details for scheme operators are available on the Departmental website.

Public Realms Work: Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the timetable for the start of the public realms works in Bangor.

(AQW 26016/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Over the past 18 months my Department has been working with representatives from North Down Borough Council, town centre management and the local community to develop a major public realm scheme for Bangor. The works will address all aspects of street design including paving, kerbstones, street furniture, lighting and planting. The total value of the works is estimated to be £8 million, with my Department investing £3 million and Council investing £5 million. A contractor is due to be appointed in December 2013, onsite construction work will start in late March early April 2014 and the scheme will take two years to complete.

Capita Business Services

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) whether the contract with Capita Business Services has commenced; (ii) when the contracts ends; (iii) when payments to Capita Business Services will be made during the contract; and (iv) whether any of the cost of the service provided by Capita Business Services will be met by the Department for Work and Pensions.

(AQW 26036/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) The contract with Capita Business Services Ltd commenced on 20 November 2012;
- (ii) The initial contract period ends on 19 November 2017;
- (iii) Contractual payments will be made only when the service commences. Capita will be paid for completed assessment reports monthly in arrears; and
- (iv) There may be opportunities where development costs associated with a change that jointly affects the service in Great Britain and Northern Ireland will be met by the Department for Work and Pensions.

The Venue, Derry: Running Costs

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of the decision to seek a private owner for the Venue in Derry, to outline the current running costs for the Venue, and the projections his Department has made on the future running costs.

(AQW 26272/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department will have invested an estimated £4.8m in the Venue over the lifetime of the project. This figure comprises all initial construction and set up costs, recurrent costs throughout 2013 and the cost of taking the structure down in January 2014.

The recurrent costs covered by the Department include rental of the structure, rates, day-to-day management of the Venue and the basic costs of running the Venue – for example, power and heating and line rental for telephones – when it is not being used for an event. Running costs for the days when the venue is not in use fluctuate depending on the time of year, but they have so far averaged at £5,800 per month. The costs incurred when the Venue is in use are covered by the event promoter. These costs vary quite significantly depending on the nature of the event.

Future running costs of the Venue would depend on whether the Venue is purchased or rented. Subject to planning permission and the agreement of ILEX/OFMDFM who own the site, the cost of renting the Venue at its current location on Ebrington would be £1.45 million per year. In addition to that figure, rates are estimated at £100,000 per year and around £70,000 would be needed to run the structure when no events are being held and a Venue manager would be required. In total, the Department estimates that £1.6 million would be required to retain the Venue on its current site for an additional year. Event related costs would be additional to that.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Restaurant Facilities in Parliament Buildings

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission for an estimate of the amount of money that would be saved if the restaurant facilities in Parliament Buildings were not obliged to remain open for late plenary sittings.

(AQW 25304/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): I refer to the Assembly question which you tabled for written answer, namely:

To ask the Assembly Commission for an estimate of the amount of money that would be saved if the restaurant facilities in Parliament Buildings were not obliged to remain open for late plenary sittings.

AQW (25304/11-15)

Within the most recent parliamentary session (2012/13), 22 plenary sittings exceeded the standard closing time (7pm) of the one restaurant facility that remains open for late plenary sittings, the Blue Flax restaurant.

The following table provides a breakdown of net income, Gross Profit return to the Northern Ireland Assembly and labour costs beyond 7pm for these occasions:

(a) Net Income	£2,018.13
(b) Gross Profit Return @ 58% of (a)	£1,170.51
(c) Total Labour costs (22 sittings)	£2,708.13
(d) Net Cost (c)-(b)	£1,537.62

Therefore, if this restaurant facility in Parliament Buildings was not required to remain open for late plenary sittings in the 2012/13 session, savings would have amounted to £1537.62 for the Northern Ireland Assembly.

In December 2010, a briefing paper to the Northern Ireland Assembly Commission on the structure of the "Support Services Contract and Pricing Mechanism" introduced potential opportunities that could result in cost savings. These included the review and reduction of opening hours and subsequent overtime labour costs in several catering outlets that remained open for late plenary sittings. These included the Members' Dining Room, Brasserie (now defunct), Members' Bar, Members' Coffee Lounge and Café Recess.

Following approval by the Commission, from March 2011, only the Blue Flax restaurant remains open for late plenary sittings (30 minutes after the House rises). It is estimated that this has generated savings of approximately £11,000 per annum based on 2010 figures.

Assembly Proceedings: Live Feed Application

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission whether it will consider providing a live feed application to enable members of the public to watch a live feed of the Assembly business, via tablets or smart phones, as is available in the Dáil.
(AQW 25429/11-15)

Mr Weir (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): A business case has been developed to procure a new internet video streaming service that will address the issue of smartphone and tablet compatibility so that the Assembly's video and/or audio streams can be made accessible on a wider range of devices and platforms. The new service will also increase the number of available feeds from two to three simultaneous live streams capable of carrying video and/or audio.

It is planned that the new service will be in place for the 2014/2015 session. Members will be advised via All Party Notice once the new service is available.

Parking

Mr Wells asked the Assembly Commission if it has given any consideration to permitting the temporary hardstanding area to the rear of Parliament Buildings to be used for parking until building work commences.
(AQW 25655/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: The temporary contractor's area to the rear of Parliament Buildings has been created to facilitate the major construction works associated with the roof project without impacting on the existing car parking provision.

Following the completion of the roof project it is planned to use the space created to rationalise and improve our recycling facilities, improve the delivery and access arrangements to the building and to provide some limited additional car parking space.

In the interim period, before the roof project begins, the Commission will give consideration to putting in place temporary arrangements for some of the benefits noted above, including temporary car parking, providing that it can be facilitated in a safe manner.

Cycling

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission what plans it has to promote cycling to people based in Parliament Buildings.
(AQW 25779/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: The Assembly Commission introduced a 'Cycle to Work Scheme' for Assembly Secretariat staff in February 2013 to encourage staff to cycle to work. The uptake on was encouraging with 15 people joining the scheme and it will run annually with new applications accepted during February and March.

In addition to this, Building Services Branch has actively promoted the annual '10 Minute Cycle Challenge' and 'Active Belfast Workplace Cycle Challenge' to all building users.

Further information on cycling is available to all staff via the Sustainable Development Office page on the Assembly intranet, AsslSt.

Cycling: Parking

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission if there are any plans to increase the cycling parking provision within Parliament Buildings car parks.
(AQW 25781/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: Currently there is cycle parking provision located in the Lower East car park and recently a bicycle rack was installed along the back wall of Parliament Buildings in the upper car park.

In addition to this there are numerous cycle parks throughout the Stormont estate to encourage all estate users to cycle to work as part of the sustainable travel plan.

Consideration will be given to increasing the cycle parking provision in the upper car parks, following completion of the roof project.

Free School Meals

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education how much additional funding per child is available to schools when a pupil avails of Free School Meals.

(AQW 25857/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Registered entitlement to Free School Meals is a key indicator used within the Common Funding Formula to distribute additional funding to schools' delegated budgets under the Targeting Social Need (TSN) factor. In the current financial year almost £60.7 million was distributed to schools under the TSN factor, of which £44.2m used free school meal entitlements as an indicator – in full or in part – of social deprivation and additional need.

The level of funding per child with a registered entitlement that is distributed to schools will vary, due to the progressive weighting applied under the main element of social deprivation funding within the funding formula, as well as the phase of education.

For a nursery-age pupil, funding per pupil ranges from approximately £670 to £1,340, averaging around £755 per pupil. For a primary-age pupil, funding per pupil ranges from approximately £340 to £680, averaging around £605 per pupil*. For a post-primary age pupil funding per pupil ranges from approximately £380 to £760, averaging around £440 per pupil.

Note * primary-age funding includes both weighted funding under the social deprivation element and a flat rate of £210 per pupil under the educational under-achievement element.

As I announced in June, I am making £30million of additional funding available, over the next two years, to target support for pupils and schools; to break the link between social deprivation and low educational outcomes. I have also announced an extension to the free school meals eligibility criteria that will see, by September 2014, an additional 15,000 children entitled to free school meals and support with uniform costs.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of the Environment why has the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan not been published, given that the public enquiry has been completed and passed to his Department.

(AQW 24720/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): I took the unprecedented step of publishing the Planning Appeals Commission Reports in June 2012. I plan to publish BMAP when the relevant processes are concluded shortly, including following the issue of a certificate of general conformity with the RDS 2035. I should also confirm that I unambiguously stand by the advice I provided on the retail element of BMAP to the now aborted Sprucefield Public Inquiry.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Drivers' Registration Details

Mr Ross asked the Minister of the Environment what importance is placed by the Driver and Vehicle Agency on drivers' data protection; and how his Department ensures the integrity of companies who pay for getting information on drivers.

(AQW 21814/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): Vehicle licensing is an excepted matter which is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Transport. It is not a devolved matter. It is administered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) under a formal agreement with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) of the Department for Transport.

In relation to the release of information, DVA is governed by the policy as set by DVLA. The relevant legislation permitting the release of information from the vehicles register is regulation 27 (1) (e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002 which states "(1) The Secretary of State may make any particulars contained in the register available for use - ... (e) by any person who can show to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that he has reasonable cause for wanting the particulars to be made available to him".

Some of the circumstances considered to be 'reasonable cause' include

- matters of road safety
- events that occur as a result of vehicle use
- the enforcement of road traffic legislation
- the collection of taxes

Enquirers are required to give full details of why they want the information and how it will be used and DVA evaluates this information very carefully, in line with procedures and on a case by case basis, before deciding if the information will be disclosed.

The evidence that enquirers are required to produce varies depending on the nature of the enquiry. For example, enquirers are asked to provide details of their Companies House registration, if applicable, and their Data Protection Registration Number. Enquirers may also be required to produce further supporting documentation, such as a court order, a copy of a finance agreement, or a copy of a landowner's agreement. If the enquirer is unable to provide the documentation required, the information is not disclosed and the application is rejected.

The DVA takes its responsibility to protect personal details on the vehicle register seriously and any complaints about alleged abuse of information supplied are investigated fully. Abuses would result in future requests being refused. Additionally, any legitimate complaints about information obtained unlawfully would be passed to the Information Commissioner to consider prosecution.

As a result of careful handling of these enquiries there have been very few legitimate complaints from customers in Northern Ireland, none of which have identified abuse of the facility to obtain information for unlawful or malicious purposes.

There is a particular arrangement entered into by DVLA in relation to the release of information to companies which manage car parks. Again, DVA is governed in this regard by the arrangement DfT have entered into. I have concerns about this arrangement – I met the BPA in London on 8 March 2013, together with one of their members (Civil Enforcement Ltd.). As I outlined my concerns including: punitive "fines", failure to properly advertise "terms and conditions", the appearance of the "demand" and its contents, no right of appeal (etc).

Since then, I have met the Chief Executive of BPA in Belfast and received unsatisfactory answers to a series of questions and issues. As a result, I have taken a series of further actions:

- Written to BPA repeating concerns that the approach of BPA is to protect its fee paying members, not the customer;
- Written to DRD suggesting that DRD should review its membership of BPA;

- Asked for Counsels advice on the legal basis on which BPA members issue and seek payment of "penalties";
- Sent a letter to DfT requesting a review by DfT of the code of practice issued by BPA and it's evident inadequacies and how the release of driven information should be handled meanwhile;
- A 'notice' has been drafted for release to the Northern Ireland public so that the public know more fully their entitlements.

I am determined that aggressive conduct is addressed and the industry better regulated and the customers protected.

Compliance, Improvement and Review Team

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 22037/11-15, on what legal basis he is withholding the reference numbers; and to detail the planning applications.

(AQW 25615/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): In response to AQW 22037/11-15 my predecessor (Minister Alex Attwood) indicated that there was an ongoing audit of minerals planning application files which had not yet been completed. The reference numbers, locations and descriptions of minerals applications forms part of this audit work which is still in the course of completion.

The Environmental Information Regulations 2004, Part 3, Regulation 12(4)(d) outlines the exception to the duty to disclose environmental information in this instance.

Tourist Attractions in County Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the top ten tourist attractions in County Down, in terms of visitor numbers; and (ii) the number of visitors each received, in the last available year.

(AQW 24731/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): I replied on 9 July 2013 to AQW 24731/11-15 in which you asked for details of (i) the top ten tourist attractions in County Down, in terms of visitor numbers; and (ii) the number of visitors each received, in the last available year.

NISRA have subsequently identified an error in the response submitted.

In the original response issued to the AQ the top ten tourist attractions in County Down during 2012 were identified as follows:

Attraction	Visitor Numbers 2012
Delamont Country Park	577,320
Dundonald International Ice Bowl	459,308
Newry Cathedral	200,000
Scrabo Country Park	180,000
The Saint Patrick Centre	91,780
Kilbroney Park	85,794
North Down Museum	69,148
Rowallane Garden	51,615
Newry and Mourne Museum	34,719
Ards Arts Centre	33,332

Having now identified and resolved the error in the initial response the top ten tourist attractions in County Down during 2012 were as follows:

Attraction	Visitor Numbers 2012
Dundonald International Ice Bowl	459,308
Pickie Fun Park	244,879
Newry Cathedral	200,000
Ulster Folk and Transport Museum	176,551
Castle Ward House & Demesne	161,339
Mount Stewart House and Gardens	158,500
The Saint Patrick Centre	91,780
North Down Museum	69,148
Hillsborough Courthouse	54,376
FE McWilliam Gallery/Studio (incl Tourist Information Centre)	50,466

For the purposes of NISRA's Annual Tourism Statistics publication 2012 country parks/parks/forests and gardens are separated into a category of their own. Responding country parks/parks/forests and gardens in County Down who did not wish their details to remain confidential are also provided separately as follows:

Attraction	Visitor Numbers 2012
Crawfordsburn Country Park	800,000
Delamont Country Park	577,320
Scrabo Country Park	180,000
Rowallane Garden	51,615

This information is sourced from the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency's Visitor Attraction Survey. It is important to note that the Visitor Attraction Survey is a voluntary survey and all data presented in the report is based solely on the visitor numbers provided by the attractions choosing to take part in the survey. Visitor numbers are accepted in good faith from the proprietor of the attraction.

I apologise for any inconvenience this may have caused.

I have copied this letter to the Speaker and all MLAs. A copy has also been placed in the library.

Department for Regional Development

Northern Ireland Water: Ernst & Young

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) whether Ernst & Young carried out any work, on an ex gratia basis, between July 2009 and July 2010 for, or in relation to, Northern Ireland Water; (ii) for whom was any such work carried out; (iii) who was the recipient of the work; and (iv) who instructed the work to be carried out.

(AQW 24830/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The information below replaces my previous answer on 8 July 2013, which advised that Ernst & Young had undertaken work on an ex gratia basis for or in relation to Northern Ireland Water (NIW). This was subsequently found to be incorrect.

I have been advised by NIW that it has no record of any work being carried out by Ernst & Young on an ex gratia basis between July 2009 and July 2010 at NIW's request.

Department for Social Development

Housing Executive: Double Glazing

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development to detail all the meetings he has had in the last year in relation to the Housing Executive double-glazing scheme; and who he met on each occasion.

(AQW 11512/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): I and the Chief Executive of the Housing Executive met with representatives of the Glass & Glazing Federation on 16 April 2012 to discuss double glazing specifications in Housing Executive properties in relation to the Glass & Glazing Federation's guidelines 'The Good Practice Guide for the Installation of Replacement Windows and Doors'.

I also met with Fusion 21 on 23 April 2012 to discuss generally their procurement model. Fusion 21 then raised the issue of the Housing Executive's double glazing programme with my officials who advised that, as this was an operational matter for the Housing Executive, they should contact the Housing Executive's Head of Procurement to discuss this.

I also met with DUP colleagues Ian McCrea, Mervyn Storey and Paul McLean on 15 May 2012 to discuss issues they had about the manufacture of double glazing units.

Public and Private Housing Stock: Single-skin Properties

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of single-skin properties in (i) public; and (ii) private housing stock, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 23130/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not specifically record this data, nor does it routinely collate information by Parliamentary Constituency.

However, in relation to (i), Table 1 below details Housing Executive properties such as Orlits, Easiform and No Fines, which have solid wall construction, as well as Rural Cottages and pre-1940s terraced housing which are likely to be single wall construction.
