When the advertisement goes out for the principal's post, I appeal for experienced educationalists to look at it favourably and ask themselves whether they can make the difference in Dundonald and make a significant mark in education in that community.

The board will be working with the school and my Department and I will be working with the board and the school to introduce support mechanisms to the school. If financial measures are needed, I will look at them and judge each on its own merits. The school and the community will have additional support mechanisms in place to assist the school in its journey.

Mr Spratt: I thank the Minister for his statement to the House this morning. Far be it from me to throw a spanner in the works, but it affects not only east Belfast but south Belfast, given that Newtownbreda has pupils from Sandy Row, Belvoir and the Village.

Given that the amalgamated school will have 1,000 pupils, will the Minister give some guarantees on future capital funding, and will he discuss the long-term future of a sustainable school in south Belfast? Will he meet with me and my colleagues to discuss the long-term plan for a school in this area?

Mr O'Dowd: I thank the Member for his question. I am acutely aware of where the population for the new school flows from and the historical reasons for that, including a number of amalgamations and closures.

I am more than happy to meet with the Member to discuss the issue further. This is a sustainable school. I said in my statement that we are looking at planning 20 years into the future. We have made an intervention on time for both schools and for the education of the community in that area. We can move forward confidently with a sustainable school. In terms of capital investment, I have to take each application on its merits. We have a significant backlog in building programmes that we are trying to work our way through. I want to see infrastructure follow on from amalgamations etc but I cannot commit directly to that now. However, I commit to the Member that I will engage with him and discuss how we will reach that point.

Mr Dunne: I thank the Minister for his statement, particularly as it concerns Holywood Priory. I welcome the increase in enrolment there to 500, although it is somewhat conditional.

Does the Minister now recognise the need for a newbuild in Holywood? I record my thanks to him for coming fairly recently to look at the Holywood situation and to see at first hand the need for investment. Does he recognise now that we need new buildings in Holywood? Priory is suffering. It is a substandard building in very poor condition, as are the primary and nursery schools. Is that the first step for getting a newbuild? Does the Minister recognise that it is very difficult to attract pupils to a building that is dilapidated and crumbling? In the case of Priory, such conditions make life most difficult for them.

Mr O'Dowd: I thank the Member for his question. I am considering requests from the various managing authorities for the next building programme. I have reached no decisions. I am acutely aware of conditions at Priory, which the Member and I visited. We need to make a decision on its future one way or the other, because it is the key to other developments in the area. There is almost a domino effect involved. I assure the Member that I am considering the proposal as part of other proposals that have come in from the managing authorities, and I will make a statement in due course on the next phase of the capital building programme.

Mr Allister: These schools are well outside my constituency, but I have been in receipt of representations from parents in Dundonald and about Ashfield. I very much welcome the Dundonald decision, but I am disappointed about Ashfield. Ashfield is fully subscribed. Orangefield is now going to close, yet the Minister gives no increase to the Ashfield schools, whereas to Priory, which has been stagnating in numbers for five years, he gives an increase. Is he not being unfair to the controlled sector?

Mr O'Dowd: If I were to make a decision on the Ashfield schools now, I would be being unfair to the controlled sector, because it would not be part of a thought-through process with sufficient research or information available to make an informed decision. I could make a decision about the Ashfield schools, which are sustainable, good schools that will be part of our education fabric into the future. However, that decision could have an impact on other controlled schools in that area. I think that it would be foolish to do that, because you do then end up with the Orangefields and other problems. Let us do this in a planned, organised way. I said in my statement that expansion will not take place now but in the future. I have a statutory duty to the integrated sector to promote and facilitate integrated education. I was conscious of that when I allowed Priory to expand. I have allowed the school to expand in a managed way.

On pupils leaving Orangefield, I said that I wanted the boards to engage with parents and pupils over how we manage pupil transfer to whichever schools parents and pupils express a preference for. We will manage it in that way. If I have to use my power to give additional numbers to a school, I will do so. However, I will work with the boards on the matter to ensure that pupils transfer in a managed way.

Mr Lyttle: I welcome the statement, the recognition that the Minister has given to community support for Dundonald High School and the commitment that he has given to develop high-quality education in the area. I also welcome the modest increase in year 8 admission numbers, from 85 to 100, that he has granted Priory Integrated College. However, I suggest that he underestimates the current demand for places at the school, as does Mr Allister, and I disagree with the language that he used, which — inadvertently, I hope — diminishes the significance of the school to pupils and parents in east Belfast. I ask him to reassure the House by telling us just how much account he has taken of his statutory duty to encourage and facilitate integrated education in east Belfast and beyond.

12.00 noon

Mr O'Dowd: I could not hear the Member's full comments. Is he suggesting that I have undermined Priory School? I am not saying that he did, but if I picked up that he is suggesting that I am undermining Priory School, I can tell him that that is certainly not the case.

I want to see Priory flourish and expand. I said in my statement that it is the board's responsibility first and foremost to manage and monitor the numbers at the school. If it is the case that the school continues to expand, even through year 8, there is nothing to stop the board from bringing forward a further development proposal to me. If the school's sixth form continues to expand, I can manage that from Department level and work with the school to do that.

However, if we were simply to accept the proposal on Priory that was initially published, we would find that, although the figures look good, you would end up with a school with a very large sixth form and that the numbers coming in through year 8 would not match the other end of the school. So, you would end up with a school that is unbalanced in its pupil demographics.

I am prepared to work with Priory, and I am prepared to ensure that it continues to deliver integrated education in the area. We will do that in a managed way with the school.

Public Service Pensions Bill: Consideration Stage

Mr Deputy Speaker: I call the Minister of Finance and Personnel, Mr Simon Hamilton, to move the Consideration Stage of the Public Service Pensions Bill.

Moved. — [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

Mr Deputy Speaker: Members will have a copy of the Marshalled List of amendments detailing the order for consideration. The amendments have been grouped for debate in the provisional grouping of amendments selected list. There are three groups of amendments, and we will debate the amendments in each group in turn.

The first debate will be on amendment Nos 1 to 7 and amendment No 16, which deal with pension boards, types of scheme and valuations. The second debate will be on amendment Nos 8 to 12, which deal with the normal pension age for members of schemes set up under clause 10. The third debate will be on amendment Nos 13, 14, 15 and amendment Nos 17 to 21, which deal with Assembly control of secondary legislation, consultation requirements for pension scheme regulations and transitional provisions for existing schemes.

Once the debate on each group is completed, any further amendments in the group will be moved formally as we go through the Bill, and the Question on each will be put without further debate. The Questions on stand part will be taken at the appropriate points in the Bill. If that is clear, we will proceed.

No amendments have been tabled to clauses 1 to 4. I propose, by leave of the Assembly, to group these clauses for the Question on stand part.

Clauses 1 to 4 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 5 (Pension board)

Mr Deputy Speaker: We now come to the first group of amendments for debate. With amendment No 1, it will be convenient to debate amendment Nos 2 to 7 and amendment No 16. Members will note that amendment No 2 is consequential to amendment No 1 and that amendment No 4 is consequential to amendment No 3.

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): I beg to move amendment No 1: In page 3, line 2, leave out from beginning to "workers)," in line 3 and insert

"(1) Subject to subsection (2), scheme regulations for a scheme under section 1".

The following amendments stood on the Marshalled List:

No 2: In page 3, line 6, leave out "must provide" and insert

"may make the provision required under subsection (1) above by providing".— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 3: In page 3, line 30, leave out "member representatives" and insert "trade union representatives".— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 4: In page 4, line 4, at end insert

“(10) In this Act a ‘trade union’ has the meaning set out in Section 1 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992.”— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 5: In clause 8, page 5, leave out lines 9 and 10.—

No 6: In clause 8, page 5, line 26, leave out “negative resolution” and insert “the affirmative procedure (see section 34(1))”.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 7: In clause 9, page 6, line 11, leave out “5” and insert “10”.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 16: In clause 13, page 9, line 20, after “qualified” insert

“and must not be
(a) an employee of the responsible authority;
(b) the scheme manager;
(c) a scheme member; or
(d) an employee of the Department of Finance and Personnel”.— [Mr McKay (The Chairperson of the Committee for Finance and Personnel).]

Mr Hamilton: Clause 5 relates to the governance of the new public service pension schemes created under the Bill. It requires each pension scheme made under the powers in clause 1 to establish a pension board. The board’s role is to assist the scheme manager in securing effective and efficient governance and administration of the pension scheme and any statutory scheme connected with it. In particular, the pension board will be charged with helping the scheme manager to ensure that the scheme is administered to an appropriate standard and in compliance with statutory requirements.

Amendment Nos 1 and 2 deal specifically with the constitution of the pension board for the local government pension scheme in Northern Ireland. The early draft of clause 5 provided that only the Northern Ireland Local Government Officers’ Superannuation Committee (NILGOSC) could act as the pension board for the local government pension scheme. Amendment Nos 1 and 2 will remove the requirement that NILGOSC must act as the pension board for that scheme and will specify that it may perform that function. The change was requested by the Department of the Environment. The amendment was developed and agreed in the course of the work of the public service pensions working group of officials from across the main public service pension schemes. The working group was established by my Department in 2013 to provide an interdepartmental forum to ensure that the provisions of the Bill adequately reflect policy requirements and local conditions for each of the schemes affected. The amendments achieve that by providing the same flexibilities for the local government pension scheme in Northern Ireland in the appointment of its pension board as exist for the other schemes created under the Bill.

The amendments are in line with the reform approach to deliver improvements in standards for scheme governance across all public service schemes and have been welcomed by the Department of the Environment and the Committee for Finance and Personnel during the scrutiny stage of the Bill. Therefore, I commend amendment Nos 1 and 2 to Members and seek their support.

I will now comment on the other amendments tabled in this group. I have already highlighted that the purpose of the reform is to deliver advances in standards for scheme governance for public service pension schemes. Amendment Nos 3 and 4 severely restrict the scope of those improvements by limiting the provision for the representation of public service pension scheme members on pension boards to those who are members of trade unions and within the limited definition of trade unions proposed by Mr Bradley. The illogical and perverse effect would be that the interests of scheme members could not be represented through the pension boards unless they are members of the particular trade unions on whose behalf Mr Bradley and Mr Rogers appear to have agreed to petition for in bringing forward these amendments.

It is wholly inappropriate to restrict scheme member representation to a defined trade union grouping in the primary legislation. The purpose of the provision is to provide employee representation. Trade unions are not employees. In fact, the danger of these amendments is that there is the potential that a scheme could be left in the scenario where a pension board cannot exist if it is not unionised, as the clause, if amended, would specify “trade union representatives”. The amendments also have the potential to discriminate against provision of member representation for pensioner members and other interest groups, which scheme members are free and entitled to be part of, including, for example, the Civil Service Pensioners’ Alliance (CSPA). That is an independent, non-party-political organisation with nearly 60,000 members across the United Kingdom. It has been campaigning on behalf of pensioners across the United Kingdom for over 60 years to protect and defend the value of members’ pensions. The Civil Service Pensioners’ Alliance is affiliated to the Public Service Pensioners’ Council representing the interests of retired public servants.

The provisions for representation on the pension board in clause 5 are already suitably and adequately constructed to describe the overall requirement for schemes to appoint the necessary range of persons who will be representative of scheme members to the pension board, including those scheme members who choose to be members of trade unions.

The secondary legislation process provides scope for Departments with scheme responsibilities and the various scheme member representatives, including trade unions, to further refine the constitution of pension boards on the basis of the existing provision in this clause, which is rightly inclusive and sensible. Therefore, I ask Members to oppose amendment Nos 3 and 4.

Amendment No 5 seeks to amend clause 8 and provides another example of a short-sighted and restrictive approach, which some Members have allowed themselves to become lobbyists for, to the purpose and intent of the reforms. The intention of the clause is to establish adequate flexibilities in the primary legislation to ensure the maintenance of adequate scheme designs that are sustainable and continue to deliver decent levels of income in retirement. This amendment would include an unnecessary restriction on the scope for future scheme designs to deliver these priorities, potentially to the detriment of future scheme members.

The broad power at clause 8 to create pension and benefit schemes of different designs is intentionally comprehensive, as it should be in primary legislation such as this. It includes capacity for defined contribution schemes and also allows appropriate scope, in principle, for positive advances in other scheme designs to be considered, should they arise in the future. The amendment would restrict the range of pension options already available to public service employees.

For individuals in a scheme such as the Civil Service partnership, they will, when the new career average revalued earnings schemes are introduced, have to join the new career average revalued earnings arrangements. The key point here is that the option for schemes to offer arrangements in the future, such as partnership, will be removed.

Defined contribution schemes already exist in the public service, such as the aforementioned Civil Service partnership scheme. It provides staff with choices for pension saving as an alternative to the main defined benefit scheme. A number of civil servants have elected to join this arrangement. By March 2012, there were 102 members in that Civil Service partnership scheme, which had been introduced in 2002. Its key attraction for members is that they do not pay employee contributions. However, this is only a stakeholder scheme with limited benefits. Nonetheless, the provisions for a scheme design at clause 8 therefore are designed to provide options, but there is no compulsion.

The policy intention of the Bill is that the new career average revalued earnings schemes, which are recommended by the Independent Public Service Pensions Commission as a replacement for final salary models, are designed to last for a generation at least. This is set out quite clearly at clause 22, which provides a commitment in primary legislation to protect elements of the career average revalued earnings scheme until 2040. The Bill includes effective protections for scheme members against the proposed introduction of any future scheme design that would compromise the 25-year commitment to the career average revalued earnings scheme design that I referred to.

Clause 22(2) states that the responsible authority must consult scheme members or their representatives with a view to reaching agreement with them and lay a report before the Assembly. This provides enhanced processes for the trade union side at consultation and for Assembly scrutiny, which will automatically be triggered to apply in the event of any proposal to change the career average revalued earnings scheme design. Changes to benefit accrual rates and members' contribution rates, which are outside the normal operation of the cost-cap mechanism, will be protected under the 25-year protected period.

It should be clear, therefore, because of the commitment to the Hutton principles for reform that this Bill is founded on, that there is no intention to provide defined contribution schemes or any other scheme design instead of the career average revalued earnings defined benefit schemes recommended in the independent commission's report. To some, that may appear to be a mixed message but, to be clear, there is no intention to provide defined benefits schemes at this time. I therefore ask Members to oppose amendment No 5.

Amendment No 6 seeks to amend the Assembly procedure for regulations to establish schemes, as detailed in clause 8. My response to the previous amendment should have demonstrated that the Bill incorporates sufficient protections to safeguard against the inappropriate use of the general power to make scheme designs, which clause 8 provides. The negative resolution procedure is entirely adequate here. Any proposed new design would be required to be implemented through scheme regulations, which are, as a matter of course, subject to the negative procedure and will require statutory consultation with member representatives under clause 21.

Again, it should be noted that any proposal for a change of scheme design of a kind that would propose to diverge from the career average revalued earnings model would engage the procedure, which I outlined, for protected elements at clause 22, and so require extended consultation with the trade unions with a view to reaching agreement on the proposal and would require a report to be laid in the Assembly. The negative resolution procedure allows appropriate Assembly scrutiny of the provisions of scheme regulations and the opportunity to debate those regulations, if the Assembly so wishes.

As the SDLP tabled amendment No 6, it may be of interest to it and other Members if I cite some examples of legislation brought forward by SDLP Ministers that include provision for negative resolution.

They include the Marine Act (Northern Ireland) 2013, section 43 of which states that regulations under the Act are subject to negative resolution; the Housing (Amendment) Act (Northern Ireland) 2010, which was brought to the House by the then Minister, Margaret Ritchie, in which article 6 had regulations that were subject to negative resolution; and, most significantly, the Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 and the Pensions (No. 2) Act (Northern Ireland) 2008, which were also brought forward by Margaret Ritchie when she was Social Development Minister. Sections 10 and 13 of the Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 are subject to negative resolution.

I should point out that the protocol for negative resolution was never changed for state pensions legislation made by DSD while the Department had an SDLP Minister. Indeed, the accepted practice has continued. Why does the SDLP now want a different approach for public service pensions in this Bill? It is rather inconsistent, to say the least.

Finally, any proposal for a change of scheme design outside of the career average revalued earnings model described in the Bill would engage the higher protections provided at clause 22 and require extended consultation with trade unions and a report to be laid before the Assembly. Once again, I ask Members to oppose amendment No 6.

I move on to amendment No 7, which is proposed to clause 9. The current provision for revaluation at clause 9 allows persons who have taken a break from pensionable service of up to five years to be treated, for pension revaluation purposes, as if they had remained in pensionable service in the scheme. The amendment seeks to double the five-year limit to 10 years. Five years is an appropriate level. It is in line with the general norm of terms for career breaks currently permitted in public service employment. A period of five years is considered reasonable, adequate and generous.

It is unfair to expect those who choose to stay in service or take standard-length breaks from service to foot the bill for those who choose extended breaks beyond the established norm and which this clause already makes adequate provision for. The secondary legislation provides scope for each relevant Minister to consider what variations may be possible and appropriate for each of their schemes, and they must ensure that the variances are accounted for within their overall scheme cost envelope. I ask Members to oppose amendment No 7.

Amendment No 16 is proposed to clause 13. This amendment relates to provisions for cost controls for the local government pension scheme for Northern Ireland. It seeks to make it explicit in the clause that the person appointed to check the aims of the valuation process in that scheme is suitably independent. As drafted, the clause requires the person appointed to be appropriately qualified in auditing terms, and that should imply the necessary independence. I believe that the existing provision is adequate and that this amendment is not required. However, this is a relatively minor issue, and I will leave the efficacy of amendment No 16 to the judgement of Members.

In summary, I ask the Assembly to support amendment Nos 1 and 2 in this group and to oppose amendment Nos 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Mr McKay (The Chairperson of the Committee for Finance and Personnel): Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I would first like to take a degree of latitude as Chairperson to refer briefly to the Committee's scrutiny of the Public Service Pensions Bill.

I have no doubt that all Members will be keenly aware of the implications of their decisions today and at subsequent stages of the Bill. Indeed, the Bill will have an impact on upwards of 216,000 employees in the public services, which represents over 30% of the total workforce across the North. Those affected will include civil servants, local government officers, teachers, health service workers, prison officers, police officers and firefighters.

Given the scale of the proposed reforms, the Committee undertook scrutiny at three levels. These covered the policy intention of the reforms; the structural and operational aspects of the provisions in the Bill; and the technical drafting of the Bill. This detailed work, which was informed by stakeholder evidence that was collected in advance of the Bill's being introduced to the Assembly and at Committee Stage, resulted in a wide range of issues being raised with the Department of Finance and Personnel. In that regard, the Committee acknowledges the contribution of the stakeholders, including the various trade union representatives, in informing the Committee deliberations and the responsiveness of the Department in seeking to provide clarification, explanation and assurances on issues arising from the evidence.

In its report on the Bill, the Committee agreed a number of key conclusions and policy recommendations aimed at providing sufficient safeguards and minimising, where possible, the impacts on our public sector workers. A key conclusion from the Committee's scrutiny noted the variability in the estimates of the financial penalty — between £262 million and £300 million per annum — that Treasury has confirmed will apply if the public sector pension reforms provided for in the Bill are delayed or not implemented in line with those in Britain. The Committee accepts that, given the existing financial framework for devolution, the direct reduction in the block grant as a result of not proceeding with the reforms would place a substantial pressure on the Executive's budget and, in particular, on the funding available for delivering priority front line public services in the North. That said, given the significance of the reforms in the context of the predominance of the public sector in the economy here, the Committee considers that, in expecting the Executive to follow parity on that devolved matter, the London Government should have provided a macroeconomic appraisal of the Hutton reforms at a local level. That would have ensured that decisions on the reforms could be taken on the basis of a more complete evidence base.

The Committee welcomes the amendments in group 1 to clause 5, which were indicated by the Department during Committee Stage. As the Committee did not consider amendment No 1 and the others tabled by the SDLP due to the timing, I cannot convey the Committee's position on them. However, I note that the issue addressed by amendment No 6, which is about negative resolution versus the affirmative procedure in clause 8(5), arose in the evidence to the Committee.

I will now turn to the Committee amendment to clause 13, which is listed in group 1 as amendment No 16. In the course of its deliberations, the Committee noted that clause 13 of the Bill specifies that employer contributions in defined benefits schemes with a pension fund, most notably the funded local government pension scheme (NI), are set at a level that is sufficient to ensure the solvency of the pension fund and the long-term cost-efficiency of the part of the scheme to which that fund relates. It also requires actuarial valuations of the fund and provides for the responsible authority to appoint a person to review whether such valuations are in accordance with the scheme regulations, consistent with other valuations and whether an applicable rate of employer contributions was set. The clause requires that the person appointed must, in the view of the responsible authority, be appropriately qualified.

The Committee noted that the explanatory and financial memorandum accompanying the Bill refers to the reviewer as an "independent person" undertaking an:

"independent verification of the assessment of the scheme's assets and liabilities and to confirm whether appropriate employer contributions will be paid to meet those liabilities."

However, it was also noted that clause 13 does not appear to include specific provision to ensure the independence of the appointed person. Although members acknowledged that the term "appropriately qualified" in clause 13(7) could be interpreted as implying independence, it was not deemed to be sufficiently clear. On raising that issue with departmental officials during oral evidence, the Committee was assured that the Department would consider enhancing the provisions in clause 13 to make it absolutely clear that the person appointed to undertake the review is independent. In its subsequent written response, the Department appeared not to be prepared to table an amendment to ensure the independence of the person appointed. It stated:

“this is a technical exercise where financial or actuarial expertise is the primary requirement rather than independence”.

As a consequence, the Committee agreed that an amendment, which would aim to ensure the independence of the person appointed would be drafted for consideration. The intention behind amendment No 16 is therefore to make explicit the requirement for independence in that regard.

In his response to the Committee's report, the Minister stated that the amendment:

“will not divert from the policy intentions of the Bill”.

I take note of his comments today that it is a minor issue in comparison with other aspects of the Bill in all three groups. I welcome that, and I call on other Members to support the Committee's amendment No 16.

I will speak very briefly on our party position. We support the ministerial amendment Nos 1 and 2, the Committee amendment No 16 and broadly support all the other amendments in group 1 that have been tabled by the SDLP. We look forward to the debate on that group. We realise that the thrust of the debate is probably in the second group of amendments, which will take place after Question Time. We broadly support the amendments that have been tabled by parties in the first group.

Mr Weir: I will try to keep my remarks brief. This is, obviously, a very important piece of legislation. As a member of the Committee for Finance and Personnel, I know that going through the evidence on this group of amendments was a very valuable exercise. We got submissions from a wide range of witnesses, and we had very good interaction with departmental officials. Sometimes, when one looks at the issue of pensions, unless you have a degree of expertise in the subject, a lot of the terminology can be a little bit confusing. It is important that, as a Committee, we were able to plough our way through the potential minefield that is there.

I will, obviously, make specific reference in the second group of amendments to the issue relating to firefighters and deal with it at that stage.

I will now turn to the first group of amendments. Amendment Nos 1 and 2 are departmental amendments. The DUP is very supportive of these amendments. The interesting thing, in many ways, about this legislation is that it is a mixture of creating a structure around public sector pensions with a certain level of enabling legislation. A lot of the detail and flexibility that will need to be put in place will be put into individual pension schemes, and, in many ways, it will be guided by Departments. This is very apposite particularly to amendment Nos 1 and 2, which deal specifically with the NILGOSC provisions. Maybe I should declare, if not quite an interest, a previous involvement as a former member of local government. To allow that degree of flexibility is useful; it is something, as I understand it, that was requested by the Department of the Environment. Amendment Nos 1 and 2 give us that level of flexibility, which, I think, seems to be fairly sensible.

I will now turn, perhaps less favourably, to some of the other amendments in this group. Mention has been made of amendment Nos 3 and 4, which deal with the issue of representation. The point that the Minister made is very appropriate. We are talking about member representation rather than trade union representation and, in many cases, that may end up being the same person; it may be somebody drawn from the trade unions. However, to try to tie it down and make it specifically that it has to be a trade union representative would be wrong for a number of reasons.

First, as was mentioned by the Minister, not everybody who is going to be part of the scheme will necessarily be a member of a trade union. Consequently, therefore, they may feel themselves to be unrepresented. Although a lot of good work has been done by a lot of trade union officials, I am sure that we have all come across occasions where there has been a degree of tension between former employees who see themselves as retired and those who are current employees. On occasions in different walks of life, and particularly in the public sector, we speak to retired people who are pensioners who do not feel necessarily that the trade union represents them any more. They are not a member of a trade union, and they feel at times, perhaps, that decisions are taken, understandably by a trade union, that are very much focused on a union's current members rather than its retired members. Consequently, there is a danger with amendment Nos 3 and 4 that people will feel a little bit left on the shelf and unrepresented. As I said, on a lot of occasions, it may well be that the representative of the members of that group is a trade unionist. I have no problem with that, but to restrict it to that is wrong, and consequently I will oppose amendment Nos 3 and 4.

Again, as has been indicated, there is a restrictive quality to amendment No 5. Different types of schemes will be permitted under the Bill. As indicated, a lot of the detail will have to be sketched out, quite often on individual schemes, by Departments. Therefore, to preclude particular types of schemes is wrong. In many ways, it interferes with the role that potentially is there through other Departments. There is not a particular intention to provide defined contribution schemes instead of the CARE-defined benefit schemes. We cannot have a crystal ball to gaze into the future or, indeed, gaze into other Departments as to what necessarily would be the case.

Again, as a lot of the legislation is ultimately meant to be enabling, I think that amendment No 5 is too restrictive.

12.30 pm

I will now deal with amendment No 6. An issue that quite often comes up is whether we do things here by affirmative or negative resolution. As someone who has seen large amounts of legislation go through the House over the past 15 years, I am often struck by what I think is a false dichotomy between those two types of resolution. Negative resolution has the advantage, because, if everything has to be by affirmative resolution, you clog up the system with large numbers of such resolutions that, despite in many cases being utterly uncontroversial, create a certain level of delay and add unnecessary time.

However, the idea that the affirmative resolution procedure provides much better and additional scrutiny is a false one. What we have to realise about the negative resolution procedure, particularly given the sensitivities around pension issues, is that, if a Committee — on this or any other subject — wishes to pray against an amendment, it will automatically come to the Assembly. There is that high degree of safeguarding. Therefore, in many ways, there is no additional advantage provided by affirmative resolution, on the basis that the safeguard is already built into the legislation. On the flip side of the coin, we may end up going through the motions time after time on a range of affirmative resolutions. That does not strike me as sensible.

Similarly, I think that amendment No 7 would shift the goalposts if “5 years” were to be replaced with “10 years”. If you look at the case for getting a career break in a lot of the branches of the public sector, be it for teachers, police, the Civil Service itself or prison officers, often a maximum of five years for a career break is granted. Indeed, I think that firefighters are restricted to a three-year career break. To expand that to 10 years would massively shift the goalposts and is not in line with current Civil Service practice.

There is an opportunity for some scope on behalf of Departments. They can look at individual circumstances and fit the scheme to what they believe to be best, but clearly, concerning the generosity of the scheme, there is a potential cost impact of a shift towards 10 years. I am certainly not persuaded on amendment No 7.

Finally, the Chair teased out where we as a Committee stand on amendment No 16. There is an argument to be made about whether it is strictly necessary, but, in many ways, it is a choice between what is implicit in the clause as it stands, and what can be read into from the explanatory and financial memorandum, and making the clause explicit. From that point of view, a reasonable argument has been made. The argument was, I think, accepted across the Committee that there is no harm in making the clause explicit. Therefore, although the argument can still be made about whether, strictly speaking, the amendment is necessary, it does no harm to make the clause explicit if it provides people with an additional reassurance. We on these Benches are therefore happy to accept amendment No 16.

I will make remarks on one of the other groups, but I commend amendment Nos 1, 2 and 16 to the House. I do not think that the implications of amendment Nos 3 to 7 are to the benefit of the Bill, so I urge the House to oppose them.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has arranged to meet immediately after the lunchtime suspension. I propose therefore, by leave of the Assembly, to suspend the sitting until 2.00 pm. The first business when we return will be Question Time. The Consideration Stage of the Bill will resume after Question Time.

The debate stood suspended.

The sitting was suspended at 12.34 pm.

On resuming (Mr Principal Deputy Speaker [Mr Mitchel McLaughlin] in the Chair) —

2.00 pm

Oral Answers to Questions

Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: We will start with listed questions. Question 10 has been withdrawn.

Sport: Stadium Development

1. Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether the funding is now in place to allow the redevelopment of Windsor Park to begin immediately. (AQO 5277/11-15)

2. Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the regional stadium development at Windsor Park, Ravenhill and Casement Park. (AQO 5278/11-15)

Ms Ni Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): I thought that we were doing topical questions first. Sorry. I think that everyone else thought that as well.

I take this opportunity to wish everybody a happy new year. With the Principal Deputy Speaker's permission, I will take questions 1 and 2 together. The IFA integrated supply team tenders have been assessed, and the most economically advantageous tender has been identified. As no challenges were received during the Alcatel period, the funding agreement was issued to the IFA, and the successful contractor, O'Hare and McGovern, was appointed in December 2013. The design development by the contractor is currently under way, and it is anticipated that works will commence on site in the next few months. Provided that significant delays in any potential legal challenges are avoided, the Windsor development can remain on programme, with the completion of the construction works planned for September 2015

Mr Elliott: I thank the Minister for that clarification. She indicated that the development was subject to any legal challenges being avoided. Does the Minister anticipate any legal challenges?

Ms Ni Chuilín: I certainly do not anticipate any legal challenges. I think that the Member and others will appreciate that we have come a fair distance with the work that is commencing on the three stadia. I think that it is good news for Windsor Park and Casement Park that not only were the funding agreements signed in December but full planning for Casement was given. So, I do not anticipate any legal challenges at this stage.

Miss M McIlveen: Is the Minister satisfied that, with the quite recent change in personnel in the Department and the departure of Noel Molloy as stadium project director, sufficient expertise remains in the Department to ensure that the three projects are delivered on time and within budget?

Ms Ni Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. Noel Molloy came in to the Department with a huge reputation after delivering Titanic and other significant projects.

That expertise will continue. We are certainly looking at whatever gaps there are, but, at this stage, I am more than content that the three programmes will be delivered on time. I am not really aware of other changes in the Department other than that involving the permanent secretary, but there have been seamless links, and I hope to continue that throughout these programmes.

Mr Humphrey: The Minister will be aware that, obviously, Windsor Park is the home of Northern Ireland. It is also the home of Linfield Football Club. Have officials from the Minister's Department met Linfield, and does she have any plans to meet the Linfield management committee?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am not aware of any officials having met Linfield, but that is not to say that they will not have done so. I anticipate that, starting from this year, the number of requests from Irish League football clubs to meet not only me but my officials will increase to find out what is happening on subregional stadiums. I will meet any club. However, I am not aware of having received any invitation from Linfield for a meeting.

Mr McCarthy: I wish the Minister of Culture a happy new year. Can she advise the House whether she is satisfied that Casement Park will progress, despite the enormous opposition that there was from residents? One can understand why residents would be concerned. Is the Minister satisfied that those concerns have been looked after?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his good wishes, and, as we say in Irish: gurb amhlaidh duit — same to yourself, Kieran.

The concerns that residents raised were considered fully as part of the application for planning permission, which was awarded on 18 December. I anticipate that with regard to not only Casement Park but Windsor and Ravenhill we will have more meetings with other stakeholders, particularly around benefits. I have no doubt that residents with concerns will be part of those meetings should they be requested.

I have to say — and it will come as no surprise to the Member — that I am also receiving more requests to meet groups that deal with the long-term unemployed and children and young people who are leaving school and looking for apprenticeships, local businesses, and other groups that are looking at some of the social benefits. All of their views will be taken into consideration.

South Antrim: DCAL Capital Projects

3. Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the major capital projects funded by her Department in the South Antrim constituency since 2012. (AQO 5279/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. I understand that he helpfully clarified what he means by "major capital investment". In this context, it means investment in excess of £250,000. I can report that, at this stage, no capital investment of £250,000 was funded in the South Antrim constituency since 2012. I am able to draw the Member's attention to smaller capital investments in his constituency that fall just below that threshold. He will be aware that, in 2011-12, Sport NI invested £245,000 in the Burnside Ulster-Scots Society and £233,000 in Crumlin United Football Club. More generally, I am sure that the Member will acknowledge that decisions on the location of capital investment are not made on the basis of constituency but rather reflect a number of factors.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call Ms Michaela Boyle; I am sorry, I call Trevor for his supplementary question.

Mr Clarke: I thank the Minister for her answer. I welcome the fact that both clubs got a considerable amount of investment for their projects. I accept that there are factors. However, the Minister will appreciate that need is one factor. I am sure that she will agree — as, I believe, she has told me previously — that there is great need for sports facilities, particularly for football, in South Antrim. What can her Department do to take a more proactive approach to encourage clubs to come forward and make applications for her Department to disperse that money.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I assume that the Member is not referring solely to sports needs but to sports and other needs in his constituency. I am more than happy to meet the local council, for example. I have met other local government representatives, be they council officials and councillors, and MLAs with regard to potential or future investment in the constituency. If the Member so wishes, I am happy to have a meeting to that end. I will certainly give advice. If it is about sport and other opportunities, I am happy to bring officials from some of the arm's-length bodies and facilitate a meeting.

I do not think for one minute that this has anything to do with an election in May, as Members raised the issue before; but, like many Members, I have received an increased number of requests in the new year to meet local representatives about potential investment in their communities. I am happy to do that.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

4. Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline how Strabane will benefit from the legacy of the City of Culture 2013. (AQO 5280/11-15)

7. Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, given her recent announcement of legacy plans as part of the City of Culture 2013, for an update on the departmental office in the Foyle area. (AQO 5283/11-15)

8. Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline her plans to maintain the legacy of the City of Culture 2013. (AQO 5284/11-15)

Ms Boyle: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle; ceist uimhir a trí. Question 3. I am sorry; ceist uimhir a ceathair. Question 4.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I am just seeing if you are paying attention.

Ms Ní Chuilín: Good stuff, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. You have them all on their toes. With your permission, I will answer questions 4, 7 and 8 together.

Recently, I announced my strategic vision for the City of Culture legacy, not just for the city of Derry but, indeed, the north-west. I have secured over £2 million for the period from January to March 2014 to support a continuation of key projects from the city's culture programme and to prevent the loss of key benefits and partnerships. That will also stimulate new collaborations between creative industries and businesses and provide strategic investment to sports facility development in the north-west.

I will also, as I have stated, make a further bid to the Executive for funding for the 2014 and 2015 financial years and beyond to support ongoing and new interventions which maximise City of Culture benefits across the north-west. That will also support the Executive's priorities in growing the economy and tackling poverty, social exclusion and inequality.

I am therefore keen to ensure that a DCAL office will be set up in Derry to further enhance focus in the north-west. That will have responsibility for coordination and oversight of culture, arts and leisure activity in the area, which will include Derry, Strabane, Limavady and Coleraine. My officials are preparing detailed arrangements and costs, and it is my intention to have the new departmental office in place for the start of the 2014-15 financial year.

Ms Boyle: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for her answer. I suppose that she has gone some way to answering my supplementary question. Further to that, it is important that Strabane benefits from the legacy of the City of Culture. Given that both councils will amalgamate into a regional council, will the Minister inform the House of the benefits of that in respect of generating new projects? What further assistance can her Department give to those councils?

I take this opportunity — I am sure that the Minister will join me in doing so — to wish Strabane Athletic all the very best. They drew with Ballinamallard, and there will now be a replay. I am sure that the Minister will agree about their success.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am happy, even though Tom Elliott is not, to wish Strabane FC and, indeed, Ballinamallard all the best.

I want to assure the Member that when we talk about looking at how we can expand the legacy of the City of Culture across the north-west — I mentioned Strabane, Limavady, Coleraine and other areas — we are doing just that. We are having meetings with key stakeholders in the community. We are also looking at opportunities for roadshows and information and consultation events. I have asked that Strabane in particular be one of the first areas visited in order to make links with the people there and to ascertain their opinions.

It is important to recognise that the legacy of the City of Culture — people in Derry city will say this — has been tremendous. However, we need to make sure that that is not just located in one geographical area. My experience of the city is that the people are very generous and are happy to spread all that love across the north-west.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh míle maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as na freagraí sin.

I thank the Minister for her lead answer in particular. I think that she is right: most people in Derry want to see the legacy spread beyond the city boundaries. She alluded to the fact that there will be premises in the city. Will she give us an update on that and perhaps outline how appointments to the new delivery mechanism will be made?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. He and others will be aware, given what I said just minutes ago and when we launched the legacy for the City of the Culture, that we want a DCAL office in the north-west. At the minute, we are scoping out where the office will be. We are looking at a couple of options and the costings.

My ambition — I have no reason to believe that this will not happen — is that the office will be open by the end of March or the beginning of April. Indeed, it is not just the physical office that will be in place around that time; I also hope to have the new cultural partners, the board and the staff in place by April or June. So, certainly by the end of this session — we are only back, and yet we are already talking about the summer — I hope to have that well in place.

Mr P Ramsey: The Minister clearly acknowledged the importance of the legacy to the north-west and to the wider region of Northern Ireland. Given the experience and capacity of staff in the Culture Company, will any of them be used to maximise the importance of the legacy?

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Member is aware and, I am sure, can appreciate that this is not a transfer of undertakings and protection of employment (TUPE) arrangement; it is not just about transferring staff from one body to another. We are two separate bodies, and they are employed by Derry City Council. I will say that — I am sure that Members and the staff know this — when the posts are advertised publicly, which they will be, anyone, regardless of their current employment status, will be entitled to apply. I am sure that the Member shares my aspiration of wanting the best possible people in post to make sure that the legacy of 2013 endures in 2014 and beyond.

2.15 pm

Mr Campbell: I see the Minister and the questioners overlook the fact that it was the UK City of Culture. She will be aware that "inclusivity" was the key word throughout the UK City of Culture year. What steps is she going to take to ensure that, as it spreads out from Londonderry, Limavady, Strabane and Coleraine, that key word is implemented in practice; that communities across the board can see it as a system and set of programmes that they can take part in; and there does not have to be the arguments, fights and disputes, as there was at the early part of the UK City of Culture, in order to get there?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. To be fair, the Member is the only person I know who is arguing and fighting about this whole thing. I am sure that he will support Derry's bid for Irish City of Culture in 2016. I look forward to his support in that.

The Walled City Tattoo and many other cultural events that happened in 2013 were inclusive. I know that people across the city, wherever they come from, have a sense of themselves, and they had a sense of what they were celebrating in 2013 and what they, collectively, hope to celebrate, beyond, in an inclusive way. The only people who I find have issues around inclusivity, really, are probably — well, probably you have the privilege of having that sole title. So, I look forward to your support for the bid for Irish City of Culture for 2016 and to you demonstrating full inclusivity.

First World War: Centenary

5. Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline what her Department is planning to do to commemorate the centenary of the Great War. (AQO 5281/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. The creative and cultural infrastructure and programmes already funded and supported by my Department will play a key role in telling the stories and different interpretations of the First World War and other important events in this decade of centenaries. For example, libraries are developing a programme of exhibitions, talks and book launches to commemorate the start of the First World War. Museums are also planning to outline access to collections and an exhibition and programming at the Ulster Museum and the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum. That will also involve cooperation with the National Museum of Ireland and the Imperial War Museum and National Portrait Gallery in London.

Mr Moutray: Thank you. Recently, the Government at Westminster allocated some £50 million for historical commemorations of the centenary of the Great War. Given that many young men went from all communities across Ulster to fight and to die in the cause of freedom, can the Minister tell us what discussions she has had with her UK counterpart, Maria Miller, to see what more can be done in relation to Northern Ireland and the Great War commemorations?

Ms Ní Chuilín: First, I have not had any discussions with Maria Miller in relation to that. I have had discussions with Ed Vaizey on other aspects of cultural heritage, and I intend to continue those. I also intend to work with the Member's colleague and my Executive colleague Arlene Foster in relation to taking forward not only the First World War but other very, very significant aspects that will arise for people here during the decade of centenaries.

The Member will be aware not only of what I have outlined, but certainly that PRONI and the Somme Heritage Centre, which we are also supporting, are also planning to mark this most significant centenary and to do it in a very respectful way.

Mr Brady: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for her answers. I think that she has answered part of my question. The Executive's statement of March 2012 specified that the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure would bring forward a programme for the decade. Has that been agreed?

Ms Ní Chuilín: In short, yes, that has been agreed. As I have said, and as Minister Foster has said, the principles underlying the Executive's approach have been agreed on the basis of mutual respect. A multitude of organisations across the island, not just here in the North, are marking this and other anniversaries. My officials, alongside officials from DETI, are looking at an online promotional platform to raise awareness of a broader range of activities about how we provide inclusivity and remember the past.

That work was to take on board recent policy developments linked to building a shared future and a united community and was to be informed by discussions before and certainly in the future. It is important that we do that. It is not about what we commemorate; it is about how we commemorate it in a respectful way.

Mr Kinahan: I thank the Minister for her answers so far. It is good to hear about the actions that she is putting in place for the decade of centenaries. Although she has hinted at this, bearing in mind the suffering and sacrifice of soldiers from both parts of the island in the First World War, does she not think that the best way of showing everyone our shared history and a shared future is by talking to Westminster? Working with them as well would be a great help.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. I assure him that I have no reason not to speak to anybody. We need collaborative approaches to make sure that we make them respectful events, regardless of how we feel about those periods of history. Even though none of us was born then, we seem to have an awfully long memory. It is really important that we, as Governments and representatives of many people across this island and other islands, try to work collectively. I have no issue with that at all. I have additional meetings coming up with Ed Vaizey and other British Ministers. I am happy to raise, as I was intending to do, how we can work collectively and collaboratively around centenaries, broadcasting, languages, sport and many other interests where we could probably do better if we maximised the opportunities that arise. We may not know what one another is doing. I assure the Member that I will talk to anyone, regardless of who they are, about learning lessons from the past. I am happy to do anything I can to provide better opportunities around inclusivity and respect.

Mrs D Kelly: Speaking as someone whose great-grandfather died at the battle of the Somme, I think that it is important that we recognise the contribution from many people right across the community, particularly the Catholic community. Will you join me in commending the good work of the Minister for Arts, Heritage and the Gaeltacht, Jimmy Deenihan, in recognising the contribution? Of course, the history books will show that many people joined because they believed in home rule and Redmond's army, if you like. Do you have any plans to meet or have you met the Minister to coordinate an all-Ireland response to the commemorations, particularly around 4 August, which was the date of entry into the war?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. It will come as no surprise that I have met Jimmy Deenihan about that, and I plan to have further meetings. The Member might not be aware that the public records offices of both jurisdictions are looking at ways in which we can use archives to add to centenaries or even learning and education. We are also looking at libraries. We have had conferences on those. We have had and will continue to have discussions around how we celebrate and work together, where possible, in celebrating, remembering and commemorating significant events throughout the decade of centenaries. I am sure that the Member has met Minister Deenihan, and she will also be aware of his enthusiasm to take that approach.

Mr McNarry: I always appreciate the Minister's upfront-ery, not her effrontery. Following the Minister's answers so far, is it possible that I am correct in surmising that we could be financing the commemoration of rebels and terrorists?

Ms Ní Chuilín: Given the context of the questions so far, which have been based on the First World War, that is a bit churlish of the Member. You are the only person today who has been affronted — apart from Gregory Campbell, but that is a given. [Laughter.] In the spirit of the Member's question, I will be upfront about being inclusive as much as I can. If I can add to, assist and complement better learning, better respect and more inclusivity, using the decade of centenaries to do that, I will. That is a genuine response. I know that the Member is keen to make sure that that will be the case for not just this year but the years ahead throughout the decade.

Libraries: Usage

6. Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action she has taken to increase the usage of libraries and their facilities. (AQO 5282/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. Libraries strategy for increasing library usage is set out in its 2013-14 business plan. That plan addresses barriers to library usage through targeted outreach work, partnership and working with local community organisations, charities and Departments. In keeping with my priorities, it also has a strong focus on increasing participation in libraries that serve those in the most deprived areas. However, our libraries are community hubs, and, to ensure that they have a good environment, an investment programme is under way to refurbish or replace a number of library buildings and vehicles. In addition, the £28 million e2 replacement IT system will provide faster broadband and Wi-Fi in every library for its users. The ongoing development of partnerships along with investment in staff, stock and facilities and increased community engagement is helping to realise the vision of providing a flexible and responsive library service that assists people to fulfil their full potential.

Mrs Dobson: Can the Minister give an assurance that, where libraries have been inappropriately closed, she is actively seeking resources and support to provide library services to those communities?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am not sure what the Member means by "inappropriately closed". We went through some detailed explanations and tried to engage more people in becoming members of the library, particularly in rural areas, to make sure that libraries and their future-proofing was sustained. That was not the case. We can only put public money into a service where there has been an identified need. Through previous correspondence from the Member about a particular library, I am conscious of the fact that we need to make sure that libraries and other community facilities, particularly in rural areas, are maintained and sustained throughout the future.

Ms Fearon: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. What exactly is being done to improve library services for users in rural areas?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. I suppose that it follows on from part of the answer that I gave to Jo-Anne Dobson. In September last year — I was unable to make it — the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development was part of the opening of a library in a rural area of mid-Ulster. That was one of the libraries under threat of closure. What it did and what other libraries have done in the Member's constituency, which is a city but certainly has outlying areas, and in counties including Fermanagh and across the North is to look at where they can join up with other service providers to provide a community hub. For example, Libraries has 28 branches located in rural areas, which also provide mobile library services and even home call services for people. As I mentioned previously, it is also about better access to broadband and that. I am acutely aware that we cannot have and I will not tolerate access to services by postcode in DCAL. I need to make sure of that and will fight to sustain services in rural areas, and that includes libraries.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: We are almost out of time, but I will call Karen McKeivitt, who may require a written answer.

Mrs McKeivitt: Thanks very much, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. In the past, during answers at Question Time, the Minister has encouraged communities, MLAs and so on to respond to the mobile library service strategy. Given that the consultation closed on 14 December, will she give us an update on where we are and what the responses were like?

Ms Ni Chuilín: To be totally honest, I have not had any discussion with the libraries branch in DCAL, but one of the actions that I need to take over the next fortnight is to get an update on what the responses were and what the intentions are and then to talk to Libraries to see what we do with that. I am happy to write to the Member individually, although she is a member of the CAL Committee, on those responses and what the propositions are.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Order. That brings the period for oral answers to listed questions to an end. I know that the Minister is anxious to get on to topical questions.

Fish Stocks

1. Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the contingency plans the relevant branch in her Department implemented to preserve fish stocks during the recent adverse weather. (AQT 541/11-15)

Ms Ni Chuilín: Like many others, DCAL had an operation in place, as in previous years, to look at preserving fish stocks. We ascertained at a very early stage that, because the fish farms were not in coastal areas, the threat was diminished. We had an action plan and other plans in place in the event of the weather taking a further turn for the worse and impacting on our stocks.

2.30 pm

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for her reply. It is reassuring to know that appropriate measures were taken. Can she say whether anybody from the angling community offered assistance and whether any engagement took place with the community during the crisis?

Ms Ni Chuilín: I thank the Member for his supplementary question. I am not aware of any specific discussions with the angling community, which is very active and has a very good working relationship with our fisheries branch. I will ascertain what, if any, discussions or requests were made and write to the Member.

Sports Facilities: Capital Funding

2. Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to confirm whether new capital funding for sports facilities will be made available through applications to Sport NI this month. (AQT 542/11-15)

Ms Ni Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. My understanding is that, as of yesterday, Sport NI is looking at new capital funding. At one stage, I believed that that would be in place by the end of January. It is looking at a possible cocktail of funding or a funding package with access on three levels for smaller, medium and larger projects. That will be brought to the Sport NI board in March for agreement, along with departmental agreement, and should be available for applications by April.

Ms Fearon: Will the Minister provide assurances that the opportunity will be evenly spread throughout the North so that there is better provision in rural areas and equal access?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I can assure the Member that we continue to look at need and inclusion, particularly social inclusion. I am aware that, in the Member's constituency, there has been ongoing criticism about a lot of money for the arts going to Belfast and, more so, Derry. I assure Members that we are looking at projects, particularly capital investment projects, that are based on need. That is a lengthy process, but I am happy to give the Member that assurance.

Child Obesity

3. Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, given recent media coverage on rising child obesity levels, to advise what action her Department is taking, in conjunction with the Department of Education, to address this matter. (AQT 543/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. This might be a result of better promotion, but there have been more newspaper articles written about the concerns around childhood obesity, particularly type 2 diabetes. Yesterday, at St Louise's College in west Belfast, in conjunction with the Minister of Education, I launched 'Your School, Your Club', which deals with sports and activities that are shared between schools and neighbouring clubs, such as GAA clubs, soccer clubs, rugby clubs and youth clubs. That will not only make sure that services are accessible after school hours but, as there is a lack of land and support in certain places, allow us to do all that we can to join everything up. It is about not just children and young people but our older generation, who also want to keep fit and active.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I remind Members about the House rules in respect of mobile telephones. There is quite a bit of interference.

Mr Dallat: Will the Minister confirm whether she is considering any business cases relating to this matter? If so, can we expect formal approval to be granted in the near future?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am not aware of any specific projects. That is not to say that schools, clubs or others have not come in, and I know that some have received Sport NI funding in the past. I am happy to bring the Member's request back to the Department, find out whether there are any projects and, if so, where they are. I will then update the Member in writing.

Boxing: Funding

4. Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she has reviewed the grants allocated to local boxing clubs and authorities to include those that did not previously receive funding packages. (AQT 544/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. The position on the funding for boxing remains the same. I am not aware of any club not being included. The situation has always been that clubs that are affiliated upon application are in the pool like everyone else.

The minor capital support was made from August to this month, and I believe that 83 clubs requested technical assistance for greater support and that 76 clubs had returned applications. Neither Sport NI nor I have made any decisions on those yet, but I am not aware thus far of any club requesting support and not receiving it.

Mr Elliott: I thank the Minister for that. Will she confirm that, following the independent working group's finding that Sandy Row Boxing Club had been discriminated against, that club will get funding?

Ms Ní Chuilín: The boxing club welcomed aspects of the report. I am not aware of Sandy Row applying for funding and funding being refused on that basis. I welcomed applications from everywhere, including Sandy Row. I am not too sure that the full report concluded what the Member is stating. I believe that the club, in conjunction with the independent panel, the Irish Amateur Boxing Association and the Ulster Boxing Council, is taking a can-do attitude for the future. I ask the Member and other Members to get behind the clubs and to give them support.

Casement Park: Social Clauses

5. Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when the social benefits relating to Casement Park will be announced. (AQT 545/11-15)

Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a freagraí go dtí seo. I thank the Minister for her answers up to now. I am happy to hear that planning permission has been granted for Casement Park.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The social benefits and social clauses should be announced at the beginning of February, and that will include the details. I have given a flavour in the past of what some of those social clauses may look like. We are looking to February for the launch of social clauses and from March and beyond for actions and an employment plan from the construction team.

Ms McCorley: Go raibh maith agat. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a freagra. Will the community and voluntary sector be invited to briefings on the social clauses when they are available?

Ms Ní Chuilín: In short, yes, the community and voluntary sector will be involved. In fact, I received a request from the community, through the MP for West Belfast, to meet a section of the community and voluntary sector and the partnership boards to look at the social clauses, when they would be launched and what the relationship through the construction phase of Casement Park would look like for the entire West Belfast constituency.

Poetry: DCAL Funding

6. Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what initiatives or funding her Department provides to encourage the uptake of poetry by young people. (AQT 546/11-15)

I am sure that the Minister will support me in taking this opportunity to congratulate Dr Sinéad Morrissey on the wonderful achievement of winning the prestigious T S Eliot prize this week for her poem 'A Matter of Life and Death'.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. The Arts Council in particular has dedicated members of staff for poetry and literature. I am not aware of any specific measure for poetry for children and young people, but I will find out.

I am sure that other Members will join us in congratulating Sinéad Morrissey on her prestigious title. I think that she is the first-ever Belfast poet laureate. I am glad that she is a woman. It was good news when I heard on the radio very late last night that she had won the award.

Mrs McKeivitt: Does the Minister have any plans to collaborate with her colleagues the Minister of Education and the Minister for Employment and Learning to ensure that opportunities are available to the general public, young and old, to take part in poetry readings and poetry classes?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I did not have any plans, but she has put an idea in my head. I am happy, as I said to other Members, to have further discussions, because maybe the Member has specific ideas about what this would look like. The Minister of Education has just walked in. Yesterday, he put me on the spot by offering me the opportunity to demonstrate trampoline skills to children and young people, so I will do the same with him, literally. We are happy to look at any scheme, event or initiative that includes the better use of and participation in literature, be it through poetry, storytelling or whatever, particularly for children and young people. We will certainly look at it positively. I know that Belfast City Council, through the mayor, Máirtín Ó Muilleoir, has spearheaded a campaign of having city laureates which, I think, is the best way of doing it.

Davagh Forest: Mountain Bike Trail

7. Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the funding her Department has made available to the mountain bike trail at Davagh forest in my constituency of Mid Ulster. (AQT 547/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I do not have details at hand, and I am not aware of them. We have made a significant investment in County Down, but I am not aware of the situation in Mid Ulster, which is the Member's constituency. As I have said to other Members, I am happy to find out the details and forward them to her. In conjunction with my colleague the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, I have taken presentations and attended meetings with stakeholders on this sport and others, particularly in rural areas. There is a growing trend in this. However, I am not sure of the figures; I will get them and write to the Member.

Mrs Overend: I appreciate the Minister's response. Considering the upcoming Giro d'Italia and the surrounding excitement, activities and opportunities that we have in Northern Ireland, does the Minister feel that there are opportunities in all constituencies across Northern Ireland? I wonder what her Department would like to do in support of that event to enhance cycling across Northern Ireland.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Member is right: interest in the Giro has been expressed in all constituencies across the North. In fact, you would be hard-pressed to throw a stone and find a constituency that is not involved in cycling. Her colleagues and mine from Armagh city have been very proactive in raising the opportunities and skills that they have, the interest in the Giro and cycling and the legacy of the Giro. Through Sport NI, I have received representations from the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI) subgroups on this. Again, I am happy to get the details for the Member and write to her. I thank her for her interest in cycling. We should learn what lessons we can to nurture, develop and sustain the legacy of the Giro, particularly with regard to cycling. It is very important, particularly in rural areas, that we have a good legacy and a good investment in sport and physical activity.

8. Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether any funding requests for the Giro d'Italia have been made, either to her Department or to Sport NI. (AQT 548/11-15)

Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I also welcome the Minister's response on this question.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. I know that many people have asked about the potential. As I said to Mrs Overend, I think that Armagh City and District Council is one of the groups represented on DETI subgroups with Sport NI to look at the potential. I am not aware that any funding requests have been made thus far, but that is not to say that they will not come.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for her answer. Will she ensure that any investment in this significant event will not be focused just in and around Belfast? I certainly welcome the fact that the Giro is coming to Armagh city and district.

Ms Ní Chuilín: God, you are awful hard on Belfast people, I have to say. I will ensure that. As with all funding opportunities, I have a statutory obligation under section 75 to make sure that funding and investment meets need. If need is demonstrated in the Member's constituency, he will be in the pot along with everyone else. We are looking at the provision of services and investment on the basis of demonstrated need, and I am sure the Member and other Members can assure me that people have done an awful lot of work to ensure that they are up there for any potential opportunity.

Education

South Belfast: Youth Services

1. Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Education for an update on youth services provision in the South Belfast constituency. (AQO 5292/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Youth provision in the South Belfast constituency is a matter for the Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) and the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB). The boards have advised that there are 64 registered youth providers in the area, of which 56 are voluntary and eight are statutory.

During November 2013, I announced that 53 schemes were successful in their applications for grant-aid funding as part of my youth capital funding scheme for voluntary organisations. Five fall within the South Belfast constituency, totalling £852,000 out of overall funding of £12 million. The successful bids came from the Boys' Brigade's Belvoir project; the Catholic Guides of Ireland Northern Region, Belfast; the Forthspring Inter Community Group; Rosario Youth Centre and St Peter's Immaculata Youth Centre.

Recently, I cut the first sod on a £1.4 million development of a new youth club for the Belvoir area, which is a major capital scheme in the controlled youth sector.

Mr Spratt: I thank the Minister for those details, but does he recognise — as he has recognised in the Boys' Brigade etc — the valuable work offered by other organisations such as the churches and the various community groups throughout? Will his Department encourage community groups to fully participate in youth service provision from here on in?

Mr O'Dowd: I agree with the Member about all the bodies that he referred to regarding the provision of youth services. The document on youth provision, 'Priorities for Youth', which was launched late last year, recognises the role played by uniform organisations and, indeed, church groups in the provision of youth services. I encourage them to continue to provide, under their auspices and through the use of their facilities, what are often in many areas the only youth services available. They encourage the education of young people in an informal setting. So, I congratulate them on the work conducted thus far and encourage them to continue to engage with the education boards on the provision of youth services.

Mr Maskey: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. The Minister recently attended the official opening of the excellent facility of the St Malachy's youth centre in the Markets area of Belfast. What does he expect the benefits of that centre to be?

Mr O'Dowd: The St Malachy's centre was a jointly funded project between my Department and DSD. It is an impressive building, from the outside and inside. It is a statement to the community that government and Departments are prepared to invest in their well-being. The drive and enthusiasm that keeps youth provision going, as I said to Mr Spratt, comes from the hard work often of volunteers in the community. The church was involved in that project.

I would not presume to be able to tell St Malachy's and other organisations what work they should be doing other than what is outlined in 'Priorities for Youth'. The action plan in 'Priorities for Youth' allows communities and organisers to adapt their facilities and work programmes to meet the needs of their communities. Given the wide range of participation of young people on the night of the opening, there is clearly a wide programme of work being undertaken in that youth centre.

Mr McGimpsey: In reference to youth provision and discussions that we had, Annadale and Haywood youth club in south Belfast has no premises. During discussions with the BELB, it was said that it was to provide mobile premises. Where does the money come from? The city council has promised to provide £150,000 to erect it, the Housing Executive will provide the site and planners will provide planning permission, but still we await action from the education authorities. Bearing in mind the actions that we have seen at Rosario and St Malachy's, which I welcome, we have young people in this community with nowhere to go.

Mr O'Dowd: We clearly want to improve youth facilities across all sectors. The statutory obligation for the provision of youth facilities is a matter for the Belfast Education and Library Board in these circumstances. If the Member wishes to write to me, I will be happy to raise the matter with the board and ensure that all proper policies and protocols have been followed. At the end of the day, from what I take from what the Member has said to me in this conversation, the decision will be a matter for the Belfast Education and Library Board. I have secured several million pounds worth of additional funding for youth services. I recently announced considerable investment in a capital programme for youth services, and I will continue to try to secure funds for resource and capital functions in youth services, because I believe them to be an integral part of our education system.

Ms Lo: Mr McGimpsey's question is similar to mine, but I want to further add to his comments about the difficulties with the Annadale youth project getting capital funding. I facilitated a meeting with the Belfast Education and Library Board, and it seems to be coming up against brick walls all the time. It is a good project, Minister. It is a cross-community project —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I remind the Member that this is Question Time.

Ms Lo: I just wonder what the Minister can do to help this group.

Mr O'Dowd: As your question is similar to Mr McGimpsey's, my answer is similar to the answer that I gave to him. If the Member writes to me with regard to the matter, I will be happy to raise it with the Belfast Education and Library Board and will familiarise myself further with the details around it, but it is a decision for the Belfast Education and Library Board.

Shared Education: Lisanelly

2. Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Education for an update on discussions regarding the shared education flagship project at Lisanelly. (AQO 5293/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The programme director and design team for the Lisanelly shared education campus have ongoing discussions and engagement with various stakeholders involved with the programme. Work on phase 1 of the programme has commenced on site. That includes the provision of a newbuild for Arvalee school and resource centre. The work also includes site-wide demolition and enabling works to allow for further phased developments on the campus. Construction work on Arvalee school is scheduled to commence in the autumn. I recently met representatives from Omagh High School who made clear their need for new facilities, which Lisanelly will provide.

Further phases of development are advancing through appropriate stages, and associated business cases have already been approved by government.

Mr I McCrea: Given that work has begun on the first school, which the Minister referred to, can the Minister give the House details about the current governance and accountability mechanisms that he has put in place to oversee the implementation of the project? What arrangements does he intend to put in place to ensure that governance, accountability, ownership and management of the site issues are properly dealt with?

Mr O'Dowd: I am in the process of establishing a programme board. I am awaiting confirmation of a number of names of people who I would like to sit on that board, who have skills that I think would greatly enhance the delivery of the project. I also wish to establish a stakeholder consultation group drawn from key stakeholders who will support the programme board and help to shape the final outcome of the Lisanelly campus.

Mr McElduff: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I suggest to the Minister that he might consider organising a public seminar, perhaps in Omagh, to explain things in a spirit of openness to companies, including local companies, who would be interested in tendering for works associated with the Lisanelly campus. There is an appetite for it in the community, and people are asking questions. I think that an open-ended seminar explaining the procedures and protocols for everybody interested would be a good thing. I have mentioned it informally to the project director Hazel Jones, but I would like the Minister's endorsement for it.

Mr O'Dowd: The suggestion is good, and I have no difficulty with it. Community support in and around the Omagh area for the Lisanelly project has proven vital throughout the course of its delivery, and at times when there were doubts and concerns about it, it was the community support that kept the project going. So, I think that it is only right and proper that we keep the local community fully informed of developments and how the project will proceed going into the future. So, we will make arrangements for such a seminar to take place.

Mr Kinahan: Will the Minister tell us what reassurances his Department gave to every participating school involved in the Lisanelly project that their individual ethos will be protected? Can he also give a commitment that the same assurances will be given to any new schools entering other shared campuses?

Mr O'Dowd: Shared education campuses are about bringing together schools of different character and ethos to work with each other. I will not give any individual reassurances to schools in the sense that one school gets this reassurance and another gets that one. A collective reassurance was given to participants in the Lisanelly project that their ethos and identity would be protected on the site. However, shared education has to be about breaking down barriers and working with each other as well as challenging yourself and others.

Shared Education: Update

3. Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the shared education campuses. (AQO 5294/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Last Friday, I announced the launch of the shared education campuses programme, which will contribute towards OFMDFM's Together: Building a United Community (T:BUC) strategy by delivering on the commitment to create 10 shared campuses. The programme will complement the work already under way within DE on shared education and area planning, and it will be targeted at infrastructure projects aimed at improving or facilitating sharing initiatives within local schools. It has the potential to bring together a range of schools and aid the sharing of classes, subjects, sports and extra-curricular activities.

The programme will consider project proposals that demonstrate that they meet the following essential criteria: number and management type of School; educational and societal benefits; endorsement from respective managing authorities; evidence of parental, pupil and community support; and context of area planning. Priority will be given to project proposals that demonstrate that they meet the desirable criteria of location and evidence of existing sharing. Shared education proposals that meet the criteria for the programme should be submitted to the Department before the end of March 2014, and those selected to proceed in planning will be announced by the summer.

Ms McGahan: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for his response. Will he outline how much money is available to his Department to progress with such shared education initiatives?

Mr O'Dowd: The T:BUC funding programme has yet to be confirmed. Executive parties are working together across a wide range of policy areas announced under Together: Building a United Community. I and my Department will no doubt have to make our own contribution towards that from our capital budget, but it will require Executive support into the future. We must wait to see which and how many projects come forward and their costings before we can confirm the budget required. However, it is an Executive commitment that my Department has signed up to, and I want to ensure that it is delivered.

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ucht a fhreagra. Ba mhaith liom ceist a chur air i dtaobh an laithreáin roinnte oideachais in Ard Mhacha. An raibh aon chruinniú aige leis na daoine atá ag iarraidh an laithreán sin a chur chun cinn?

I thank the Minister for his answers so far. Has he had any discussions with those promoting the shared education facility in Armagh? If not, is he open to discussions with them?

Mr O'Dowd: I met the proposers of the Armagh project several months ago. Indeed, I visited the proposed site for the campus in Armagh city. We had a very good discussion. The project developers have work to do, and I said that I would keep abreast of developments in relation to the campus etc. I am reluctant to go into the detail of my views on it, because it may be one of the projects to come forward under this scheme, and, at the end of the day, I will be one of the decision-makers about suitable applications, and I want to be able to keep an open mind on all the applications that come to my office.

Mr Beggs: I welcome the announcement and the call for applications for funding. However, some schools feel deeply frustrated that they have only two and a half months to put an application together, particularly as so much time has passed since the initial announcement. Does the Minister think that that is sufficient time for real engagements to occur in schools and local communities and to make an appropriate application?

3.00 pm

Mr O'Dowd: What we are doing here is recognising shared education projects that have been taking place for a period of time. There are many examples of schools that are involved in shared education projects and would benefit from shared facilities to move them further forward. This project is not about schools coming together to develop or begin a shared education project. This announcement is about facilitating projects that are either at an advanced stage having been running for a number of years and would benefit from a shared facility or from schools that have been engaging with each other over a number of years, understand each other's requirements and, therefore, can submit a bid within the time frame announced.

Mr McCarthy: Can the Minister assure us that shared schools will be a matter not just of a shared area but of shared classrooms and shared learning experiences, with different classes working together rather than separately?

Mr O'Dowd: That is an important point. It is not about facility A being used by school B for an hour, and, when they move out, school C moving in. Shared education has to be about young people engaging with each other, sharing facilities together, learning together and learning about each other together.

EU Funding: DE

4. Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education to outline how much EU funding his Department has secured over the past five years. (AQO 5295/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department's ability to access EU funding is directly linked to the applicability of EU funding streams to the core business of the Department. In the period in question, our main focus has been on maximising the support available from the EU's Comenius and Youth in Action programmes. The British Council is an agency for those two programmes. The education service here has been able to benefit from a total of £4.2 million drawn down by the British Council during the 2010-11, 2011-12 and 2012-13 financial years.

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Following on from that answer, will the Minister detail how often his officials engage with European colleagues to explore the potential for EU investment in local education projects and ensure that we maximise the potential of that funding stream?

Mr O'Dowd: I do not have the exact details in front of me about the number of meetings that have taken place. However, I can assure the Member that engagement has been stepped up in recent years. My Department has been proactively exploring the possibility of attracting EU structural funds in respect of the 2014-2020 funding round to build capacity in our pupil enhancement and enrichment intervention activities in relation to science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) and business education. Exploratory work concluded that the objectives of the European social fund's investment for growth and jobs programme provided the best fit for the Department's STEM and business evaluation programmes. We are also exploring which other programmes, under the potential Peace IV, my Department could benefit from.

Mr McGlone: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Mo bhúiochas leis an Aire as na freagraí go nuige seo. With reference to the EU work programme for 2014, what discussions have the Minister or his Department had with the Minister for Employment and Learning or his officials to ensure that our young people get the right education and skill set to avail themselves of opportunities that exist in the green economy?

Mr O'Dowd: I do not have the exact details of meetings etc before me. However, I can assure the Member that discussions have been taking place with DFP, the Executive office in Brussels, DEL as the managing authority for the European social fund and DETI as a managing authority for the European regional development fund. I will forward more specific information on the green economy to the Member.

Mr Elliott: Has the Minister explored any EU funding opportunities that may assist with current, or even new, shared education projects?

Mr O'Dowd: We are exploring how my Department could fit in under any Peace IV funding. We have had discussions on that matter with a range of bodies. I am also looking at funding from other quarters for shared education projects and hope to be in a position to make an announcement in the near future.

School Principals: Re-advertisement of Posts

5. Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Education what further steps are being taken by his Department to address the significant re-advertisement of principals' posts. (AQO 5296/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not recruit or employ teachers, including principals, and therefore does not hold information on the re-advertisement of posts. My officials have, however, sought the information from the relevant employing authorities.

Education and library boards have advised that, over the past three years, they have, on average, re-advertised approximately 10% of principal posts in the controlled primary sector and approximately 39% in the post-primary sector. The Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) has advised that, in the same period, it has re-advertised approximately 4% of principal posts in the Catholic maintained primary sector and approximately 11% in the post-primary sector. Although the figures do not indicate that there has been a significant re-advertisement of principals' posts in the primary sector, there appears to be an issue regarding the re-advertisement of principal posts, particularly across the controlled sector at post-primary level.

It is important to note that small numbers of principal posts have been re-advertised at post-primary level, which distorts the figures somewhat. Nevertheless, I have asked management side of the Teachers' Negotiating Committee, which is made up of employer representatives, to consider the issue. I recognise that the information relates only to the controlled and Catholic maintained sectors. The other sectors — voluntary grammar, grant-maintained integrated and Irish-medium — do not have employing authorities. It will take considerable time to collect and collate that information. However, I am content to do so and provide the Member with the information in written format in due course.

Mr Byrne: I thank the Minister for his answer. Does he accept that it is often quite difficult to get people to take up the onerous job of principal in a primary school? What remedial action can be taken to try to make the post more attractive, particularly for male principals of primary schools?

Mr O'Dowd: As I said, I have asked management side of the Teachers' Negotiating Committee to look at the matter to ensure that applicants come forward for posts once they are advertised. We are also reviewing how we develop and support new leaders into the future, and, at an earlier stage, how we identify those new leaders. That is quite a complex issue.

Being a principal is an onerous task, but it is also very rewarding. The responsibility of ensuring the educational well-being of our young people is a task that many of our principals relish. Of course it is difficult, given the responsibilities involved. My responsibility is to ensure that we have in place the resources and the capability to identify and encourage new leaders and to promote and ensure that there is continuous professional development. I have those matters under review and want to enhance them as we move forward.

Common Funding Scheme: Update

6. Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for an update on the revision of the common funding formula. (AQO 5297/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My proposals on the reform of the common funding scheme have been the subject of a widespread consultation, with around 15,000 consultation responses being received. I have previously stated that I will not make any final decisions until a full analysis of all those consultation responses and the equality impact assessment (EQIA) has been carried out. I will give careful consideration to the views of all those who responded. The changes to the common funding scheme for schools remain on track for delivery for the new financial year, and I intend to make my final decision and advise schools of their actual allocations as soon as possible.

I want to ensure that there is no unnecessary delay in reforming the common funding scheme and in directing additional support to the schools with the highest numbers of pupils from socially deprived backgrounds. It is unacceptable that children from socially deprived backgrounds, as shown by free school meal indicators, are only half as likely to obtain five GCSEs at A* to C, including English and maths, as their more affluent counterparts. I am sure that Members will agree that the situation cannot and should not be allowed to continue.

Mr Storey: I thank the Minister for his answer. Widespread concerns have been expressed about the proposals on the common funding formula by organisations such as the Children's Law Centre and many others. Will he give assurances to the House that the process will be set aside for this year and that the discussions can continue, in order to ensure that we get a properly structured process of funding for our schools that is based on educational disadvantage rather than very blunt social criteria?

Mr O'Dowd: Referring to and taking selected quotes from one consultation response is not the practice that I have been taking part in. We have had a very substantial review of the consultation responses, and a very detailed report on the way forward will be published for Members and the public to peruse. I am not setting aside changes to the common funding scheme. I am moving ahead, having taken into account the consultation responses, the debates in the Chamber and comments from Members and other bodies on the common funding scheme.

I believe that we can come forward with a scheme that meets the needs of our society through eradicating educational underachievement, given its association with poverty. I believe that the measures that we have in place for free school meals are robust. If others come forward in the time ahead with an equally robust or better system, I think that that should be taken into consideration moving forward. However, we have to move forward and we have to tackle the issue head on. I intend to do that in the time ahead.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for his answers thus far. In light of our post-primary children's recently publicised year 12 and year 14 examination results, does he remain committed, in any revised common funding scheme, to tackling the effects of poverty?

Mr O'Dowd: I do remain committed to doing so. Indeed, it is worth remembering that the Public Accounts Committee, which, as I have stated previously at Question Time is one of the most respected Committees of the Assembly, challenged my Department to tackle head-on the common funding scheme and the association of poverty with educational underachievement. The formula is the greatest single indicator of educational outcomes that we have. A child who is in receipt of free school meals has a 50% less chance of achieving an education than a child who is not. No Member who is opposed to me using that formula has come up with an alternative version or vision of it. I accept that the Committee for Education is planning or is involved in some work on that.

The common funding scheme can be changed year-on-year; the mechanism is there. If the Committee or other bodies come forward with a reliable measure of poverty, I will not be found wanting in using it. No one yet has dismissed the ability of the free school meals mechanism to identify a child's individual needs. Therefore, I will use that mechanism, and if others come forward with a better system, I will use that.

Mr Rogers: I thank the Minister for his answers thus far. At this stage, all schools will have agreed three-year financial plans with their education and library boards. What reassurance can you give small schools in particular that the level of small-school support will be safeguarded beyond 2014?

Mr O'Dowd: I made my views on small-school support known when I responded to Sir Bob Salisbury's common funding scheme. It is worth noting that Sir Bob wanted to remove it. It is also worth noting that tens of millions of pounds are involved in small-school support. I think that Members should refresh themselves about this: it is worth noting that it does not do exactly what it says on the tin.

When Members hear that there is small-school support, you imagine a small rural or small urban school with significantly low numbers of pupils. However, a school can be funded until it has 350 pupils at post-primary level and maybe beyond, and the numbers that are involved in primary schools are quite significant as well. However, I have committed to maintaining it. I believe that the matter needs further debate and discussion, but if Members seriously want to support small schools, there is a duty on us all to ask whether there is a better way of doing it. What is your definition of a small school? What is your understanding of a small school going into the future? I have committed to doing nothing until further work is done on the matter.

Mr Allister: In light of recent High Court decisions, will the Minister be referring any revision of the common funding formula, given that it is undoubtedly controversial, to the Executive?

Mr O'Dowd: I believe that I have conducted myself within my ministerial obligations and according to the ministerial code, and I will continue to do so.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: That ends questions for oral answer. We will now move on to topical questions. The first name listed has been withdrawn, so I call Mr Jim Wells.

3.15 pm

Dickson Plan

2. Mr Wells asked the Minister of Education what possible confidence the community of Upper Bann can have in him given the way he has behaved in his treatment of the Dickson plan, and although I do not represent the Upper Bann constituency, I have a deep personal interest in the Dickson plan and I note that, in the minutes of the Southern Education and Library Board on 26 June, it is apparent that the board took its decision about the Dickson plan while under duress and when the chief executive position became available on that board, the Minister parachuted in one of his officials to push through the decision. (AQT 552/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I suspect that the Member, like other members of his party, is not interested in the Dickson plan but in two schools in the Dickson plan: namely, Lurgan College and Portadown College. Your local representatives have no interest in the rest of the schools, so why should I suspect that you have an interest in them? Let us be honest with each other. Your concern is with the needs of two schools in the Craigavon area that serve a section of the Protestant community in that area.

The less well off in Upper Bann, those from Protestant working-class communities, are voiceless in this debate. No one from the DUP will speak up for them; no one from the Ulster Unionist Party will speak up for them. They are all concentrated on the needs of two schools that have a close relationship with a good friend of the DUP. That is another matter that I think deserves exploration.

You say that it is clear from the minutes of the Southern Education and Library Board meeting that it acted under duress. You did not want to clarify what the duress was or how it was clear in the minutes, but I am aware, as, no doubt, are your party colleagues, that there have been acts of intimidation, harassment and threats made against people who have stood up and said that they do not agree with the DUP or the UUP's vision on this and believe that there is another way of doing it. They have been subjected to threats and intimidation. The DUP and the Ulster Unionist Party have remained silent on that matter. So, if you want to look for duress and intimidation, you are looking the wrong way. You need to be honest about your intentions in that area. Your interests are in two schools. My interest is in the education of all young people in the controlled sector moving forward.

On your point that I jettisoned in one of my officials, I did not. The Southern Education and Library Board has been provided with support in the absence of a chief executive or a suitable applicant for the job. The board is perfectly entitled to advertise that post at any time.

Mr Wells: I can assure the Member that my interest is simply not in the two grammar schools. The vast majority of my family were educated in the two junior high schools. That was their commitment to all of the Dickson scheme. The Minister keeps commenting and making scurrilous remarks about the DUP and the Ulster Unionists, but those two parties represent the vast majority of people and families with children attending those schools. I also throw back in his face the view that they are so-called Protestant schools. Any child in the Craigavon area is entitled to attend either Lurgan Junior High or Lurgan College. There is no discrimination, unlike the other sector in Craigavon, which is purely for Roman Catholics. What confidence can the people of Upper Bann have in him, particularly as he represents the area, when he is trying to railroad this through against the wishes of the vast majority of parents in Upper Bann?

Mr O'Dowd: The Member states that he and his party represent the vast majority of the unionist community in Upper Bann, and he is absolutely right. Then start representing the vast majority of the people in Upper Bann on this matter, because your voices have remained silent on the poor educational outcomes afforded to the Protestant working class in that community. You need to stand up, make your voices heard and say that the current status quo is totally unacceptable.

I note that the Member avoided the points I made to him about the intimidation and the threats being made against those who are prepared to stand up and say something different from what his party and the Ulster Unionist Party are saying. He chose to ignore that fact. You have serious questions to ask yourselves about where you want to see education going in the future. Can the people of Upper Bann have faith in me? I have no proposal in front of me to make a decision on. The Southern Education and Library Board needs to publish a proposal on the future direction of education in the controlled sector. There is no published proposal.

If and when a proposal is published, I will allow that proposal to be fully debated. I will receive representations from all who wish to speak to me and make my decision based on the educational well-being of all young people in the controlled sector, not just the few.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I remind Members that no one should be pointing at other Members and remarks should be passed through the Chair.

Education: OECD Report

3. Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Education to outline the key findings of the recent OECD report into the education system here. (AQT 553/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I welcome the fact that the OECD has now reported. On Friday, we are bringing together educationalists for the OECD to come and make a presentation on the report and open it up to a debate on the way forward. I think that that will be a very useful engagement. The OECD report contains a wide range of findings across a range of areas, including 41 strengths inherent in our current evaluation and assessment arrangements, as well as 30 specific challenges. The report suggests 33 policy options, which include 15 recommendations. I tasked my officials to reflect on the report as part of the ongoing development of my policies here. I will not make a formal response to the report until after Friday's discussions with educationalists and further consideration of the report. However, I think that the OECD intervention and report will prove beneficial for our education system for many years to come.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister for his answer. Does the Minister have any plans to follow up with the OECD on this piece of work?

Mr O'Dowd: I do not think that such programmes of work should be a one-off. As I said, the OECD is coming back to engage with our educationalists and further with my Department. I would like to see a rolling programme of work with organisations such as the OECD. We subject our schools and a variety of areas in our society to inspection. I think it is useful to bring that out. At times, our debate on education can be very insular and sometimes focused on the needs of the few. It fails to break out of the narrow barriers of the North and learn from other experiences. The OECD allows us to examine our education system, and its strengths and weaknesses, on an international perspective rather than the sometimes narrow debate that we have in our society.

North Down: School Enrolments

4. Mr Cree asked the Minister of Education, given his earlier announcement of an increase in the enrolment at Priory Integrated College, which I thank him for, whether he has any plans to increase the enrolment at other continually oversubscribed schools in North Down. (AQT 554/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have no authority to increase the numbers of a school on a long-term basis. It is a matter for the board to publish a development proposal if it believes that a school's numbers should be increased in the long term. I can make increases in-year; if there is a specific demand on a school, I can make increases then. However, I believe that, if there is a recognition that a school is facing continuing demand higher than it can deliver, the best way forward is for a development proposal to be published and that mechanism to be gone through.

Mr Cree: I thank the Minister for his response. I thought that he would have taken a much more active interest in that because it has been going on for many, many years.

The schools in Bangor east are very popular and achieve good results. Bearing in mind the RPA situation, where we will have a different hinterland altogether, does that not encourage the Minister to try to take some action to resolve those problems?

Mr O'Dowd: It is not a case of the Minister not having taken an interest in the matter. I established area planning. I tasked the boards, as the managing authorities, and indeed CCMS, to come forward with area plans for post-primary and primary school provision. That is how we should map out our sustainable schools going into the future. If the Member has specific issues in relation to schools in the area, I would advise him first to raise them with the board and ask the board whether the demand continues to meet what it has outlined in its area plan. I have not avoided the issue. I am putting in place mechanisms to deal with that in the long term. If there is a short-term issue, there is a mechanism to deal with that as well.

Educational Underattainment: Shankill

5. Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made on the manifesto for education that my colleague Nigel Dodds MP presented to him, given that he will be aware of the educational underattainment in the greater Shankill area and across working-class areas of Belfast. (AQT 555/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I had a meeting with Mr Dodds just before Christmas, and we had further discussions on the Shankill manifesto and on its appeal for an education action zone to be declared in that area. I have tasked my officials to investigate the matter further. Only yesterday, I had discussions with my officials on this matter. I am exploring it further to see what educational benefits there would be in me declaring such a zone and what actual real impact it would have in the area, or whether there are other ways of achieving the same goal that the manifesto sets out.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Minister for his answer. I assure the Minister that, having met the principals of post-primary and primary schools before Christmas, I know that the view among that group of people is that something needs to be done. That is the view of the community, of the governors — I speak as a governor of two schools — and of parents. Something has to be done to address this issue, not only across the greater Shankill but across the city of Belfast in working-class areas. Can the Minister put a timescale on, and some resource into, delivering for those communities and tackling and addressing this issue, which has been running for many, many years?

Mr O'Dowd: It is worth noting that the common funding scheme that I am proposing would put significant amounts of additional money into the very schools that you are talking about, but, yet and all, you oppose it. You cannot have it both ways. You cannot seek additional resources and then, when I put in a mechanism for additional resources, say, "No, we do not want you to do that". I have identified how we can achieve additional resources for the very schools that you talk about, but declaring an education action zone does not in any way mean that there is no longer responsibility in the schools or in the boards of governors or in the principal's office.

Mr Humphrey: I did not say that.

Mr O'Dowd: I am not suggesting that you are saying that. I am telling you what my views on the matter are, as you requested.

There is a responsibility —

Mr Humphrey: I did not.

Mr O'Dowd: You asked me a question, so you must be seeking some view from me.

Mr Humphrey: Well, then, answer the question I asked you.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: No speaking from a sedentary position.

Mr O'Dowd: The way that this process works is that I do not get to decide what questions you ask me, and you do not decide how I answer them. It is a very democratic process.

Mr Humphrey: You are not supposed to not answer the question.

Mr O'Dowd: When you stand behind one of these Boxes, you will decide how to answer questions, if you ever stand behind one of these Boxes.

The responsibility rests with the schools and the boards of governors, and, as was recently found out from the inspection reports in the area, there are challenges in the schools. The formal intervention process will have to be followed through, whether we declare an education action zone or not. The work that is being done by the Greater Shankill Partnership is, in effect, an action zone, because it is dealing with the socio-economic issues in the community and trying to improve people's lives that way. If you improve the socio-economic background of someone, you will also improve their educational outcomes. The West Belfast Partnership Board is also drawing down funding in relation to education matters, and I have encouraged the Shankill partnership to further engage with the West Belfast Partnership Board on that. In short, I will not make a decision simply to make a decision. I will call for an education action zone if I believe that it will have benefits for the young people it will serve. I will not call for it for the sake of calling it.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Speaking from a sedentary position, having presented your question, really only victimises other Members who are waiting to get asking questions.

Newtownbreda High School

6. Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Education to please explain why, in his statement this morning, in which he talked about schools being at the heart of a community, he announced his decision to close such a school, Newtownbreda High School, which has the full support of families, pupils and staff, is looking to go forward, is ahead of the enrolment numbers and is successful. (AQT 556/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have decided to close it under a technicality. It is reopening under a new guise. It is a school that will reopen as a new school in partnership with and serving the entire community of that area. Our education system cannot be built on the needs of institutions. It has to be built on the needs of pupils. I believe that the decision that I announced this morning is the correct decision. The amalgamation of Newtownbreda and Knockbreda is the right way forward for serving that community, now and into the future.

If I had not taken action now, we might have seen the loss of Knockbreda completely. No one knows how sustainable Newtownbreda would have been into the future. We now have a sustainable school going forward with high hopes for the future.

3.30 pm

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: That concludes Question Time.

Mr Allister: On a point of order —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Let me finish. Time is up. We will now return to the Consideration Stage of the Public Service Pensions Bill. What is your point of order?

Mr Allister: During his answer to Mr Wells, Minister O'Dowd claimed to have knowledge of instances of threat and intimidation. Of course, threats and intimidation involve criminality. Is it in order to ask whether, with that knowledge, the Minister has reported such matters to the PSNI, as he might be expected to do in his public role and obligation to uphold the rule of law and not to withhold information?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: In addressing the circumstances of this session of the Assembly, the Member has strayed well off the point. I do not accept that as a valid point of order. However, I will refer the matter to the Speaker's Office because an allegation of coercion was also made from this side of the House, and that was not substantiated. I think that it should be examined.

Mr Storey: Further to that point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, with regard to the comments that were made by the Education Minister, will you refer this matter to the Speaker? The Minister's comments were inaccurate in his representation of my party's interest in all schools in the Craigavon area. It was totally unfactual and untrue. I also want the issue to be referred so that the references that were made to intimidation can be investigated by the police, the Minister is questioned on what he knows and the issue is resolved, so that we know the truth, rather than what, I have to say, are very regrettable comments that were made by the Minister in the House today.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: My view is that that is not a valid point of order. It is not for the Speaker to decide what is the Minister's opinion on any set of circumstances. However, I have already indicated that I will ask the Speaker's Office to refer to the Hansard report of the session and to decide whether there are any issues that need a response.

Mr Humphrey: On a point of order. To be fair, having listened to what the Minister said, I think that he did not express his opinion; he made an allegation, which is somewhat stronger than simply stating an opinion across the Chamber. He made an allegation of intimidation.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I am sure that the Member does not wish to challenge the Chair's authority to decide on this. My view is that it is not for the Speaker's Office to determine what the Minister's opinion should be.

The House may take its ease while we change the top Table.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair)

Executive Committee Business

Public Service Pensions Bill: Consideration Stage

Clause 5 (Pension board)

Debate resumed on amendment Nos 1 to 7 and 16, which amendments were:

No 1: In page 3, line 2, leave out from beginning to “workers),” in line 3 and insert

“(1) Subject to subsection (2), scheme regulations for a scheme under section 1”.— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 2: In page 3, line 6, leave out “must provide” and insert

“may make the provision required under subsection (1) above by providing”.— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 3: In page 3, line 30, leave out “member representatives” and insert “trade union representatives”.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 4: In page 4, line 4, at end insert

“(10) In this Act a ‘trade union’ has the meaning set out in Section 1 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992.”.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 5: In clause 8, page 5, leave out lines 9 and 10.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 6: In clause 8, page 5, line 26, leave out “negative resolution” and insert “the affirmative procedure (see section 34(1))”.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 7: In clause 9, page 6, line 11, leave out “5” and insert “10”.— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 16: In clause 13, page 9, line 20, after “qualified” insert

“and must not be
(a) an employee of the responsible authority;
(b) the scheme manager;
(c) a scheme member; or
(d) an employee of the Department of Finance and Personnel”.— [Mr McKay (The Chairperson of the Committee for Finance and Personnel).]

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Tá áthas orm páirt a ghlacadh sa díospóireacht seo ar an Bhille um phinsin phoiblí. I am pleased to have the opportunity to participate in the debate on the first group of amendments on pension boards, types of scheme and valuations. I begin by declaring an interest as a member of the Northern Ireland teachers’ pension scheme, albeit that I will not be affected by these measures because of the transition arrangements. Nonetheless, I feel for those affected by the Bill. The SDLP has put down five amendments in this group, and I would like to take some time to discuss the rationale for each of them in turn.

We recognise the need for pension boards that are responsible for assisting the scheme managers with governance and administration. However, we believe that it is essential that there is strong trade union representation on the new boards. I think that the Minister accused me of being in cahoots with the trade unions. I do not know whether that is the actual term that he used, but I think —

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): It was worse than that.

Mr D Bradley: Worse than that. Well, I can tell the Minister that I make no apology for that. We have consulted widely with a range of stakeholders, including the trade unions, and taken cognisance of their views, quite rightly, in my view.

NICICTU’s public service pensions group has stated that it has grave concerns over fairness and transparency due to the fact that scheme information is controlled by the Department and, ultimately, the Treasury. Therefore, we have tabled amendment Nos 3 and 4 to ensure clarity and best practice by guaranteeing that representatives are actually representative of scheme members by virtue of referencing trade unions. We have referred to the definition of a trade union in the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1992. The Minister made the point that some pensioners were not included in that definition, but I take issue with that, because many trade unions continue to represent pensioners’ groups after their members have retired. It is my belief that the definition included in the Act is wide enough to encompass a wide range of representative bodies, not just trade unions.

Mr Weir: Does the Member accept that some retired members will often have differing views on the trade unions that supposedly represent them? Some pensioners and former employees often feel, not unnaturally, that the trade union — this can vary from trade union to trade union — is representing existing employees and members sometimes to the detriment of retired members. There are mixed views out there. It is not one size fits all. That is the problem with the amendment: it is effectively a straitjacket, and some of those people may effectively feel unrepresented.

Mr D Bradley: I thank the Member for his intervention, but I take issue with his point. Many members of representative bodies are not content with the representation they get; that is another issue. I believe that the definition in the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1992 is, as I said, wide enough to encompass a wide range of representative bodies. I draw the Member’s attention to the fact that, in England, the case has already arisen where Ministers have hand-picked chosen individuals to sit as employee representatives on boards. Unfortunately, that has often involved the selection of individuals who are not representative of the interests of employees and, indeed, pensioners. Currently, the people who negotiate on behalf of public servants with the Department on matters of pay, conditions of service etc are the trade unions. There is no provision in the Bill to negotiate in the normal way, so strengthening the presence of trade unions is an important element that we should consider.

Earlier, we heard from the Committee Chair that the Bill would affect 210,000 public service employees. That is around 30% of the workforce in Northern Ireland. That is a huge number of people, and we need to ensure that their interests are best protected in the provisions that we make. The amendments that we have put down are aimed at providing that best protection. The unions do not believe that there has been sufficient engagement and consultation from the Department, so it is essential that their voice is well represented on the boards.

I move now to amendment No 5. It is our intention to prevent the change from defined benefit schemes to defined contribution schemes. That is important. Defined benefit schemes allow people to know what they will get at the end of their working life. That is not the case with defined contribution schemes. The London coalition Government are often quoted as providing a 25-year guarantee to public sector workers on pensions, but, sadly, they have already begun to renege on that promise. The unions fear that clause 8 provides further potential for broken promises by providing for other types of scheme. Hence our amendment restricts the potential for the development of such schemes, other than defined benefit schemes.

In the light of the already broken promises, amendment No 6 provides further protection from changes to pension schemes by way of ministerial regulation. We believe that it is necessary to legislate that the affirmative resolution procedure be applied when changes are made to the defined benefit schemes in the future. Several Members, including Mr Weir, made the point that the affirmative resolution procedure would clog up the system here. We all know too well that the main complaint from people in the Assembly and, indeed, outside the Assembly is that there is not enough legislation going through the House, not that there is too much of it. There is ample time to deal with matters that come under the affirmative procedure. That, of course, means that any future Minister would be required to bring changes by regulation to the House, allowing for democratic debate of all proposed changes. Using the affirmative procedure is an important element in holding the Department to account. We are here, and it is our role to hold the Minister and the Department to account. Amendment No 6 is one way in which we can do it on a very important issue, which, as I said, affects 210,000 public servants.

I do not know whether the Minister would call the British Medical Association (BMA) a trade union — a representative body, perhaps. The BMA put the argument for this approach most succinctly in its briefing on the Bill by stating that stronger amendments to the Bill are necessary to:

“curtail sweeping new powers that would allow successive Executives to make unilateral and retrospective changes to accrued benefits in public sector pension schemes” and utterly undermine the settlement for a generation, as proposed by the UK Government.

Amendment No 7 is our final amendment in the group. It relates to gaps in public pensionable service. The motivation behind the amendment is equality. Although we recognise that there are few individuals who have gaps in service that are greater than five years, given that the current maximum career break in the public sector is five years, those who do are more likely to be female employees who have taken longer career breaks to raise their children. We believe that such people should be catered for in the Bill. The amendment that we have tabled to allow 10 years helps to do that. We believe that no individual should be discriminated against in that regard.

Therefore, we have tabled an amendment to allow the gap in pensionable service to be up to 10 years.

I will leave it at that. I urge the House to support our amendments, which we believe strengthen the Bill and the future of 210,000 public service employees here in Northern Ireland.

3.45 pm

Mr Cree: I am pleased to speak on the Consideration Stage of the Bill today.

The Committee has undertaken considerable work in scrutinising the Bill's provisions since its Second Stage in June 2013. At the outset, I pay tribute to the Committee staff and, indeed, to the Assembly Research and Information Service for all their hard work. The report on the Bill was published in November, and it considered all 37 clauses and nine schedules. Much evidence has been gathered on all the key issues. The Committee was broadly content with the provisions, with a few exceptions. I am pleased that the Minister has been able to agree to amend some of the clauses accordingly. The main contention was in clauses 5, 10 and 13, and parties have drafted amendments to them for debate today.

Amendment No 1, to clause 5, which the Minister proposed, is acceptable and, indeed, improves the Bill. Similarly, amendment No 2, which also relates to clause 5, is acceptable and will be supported by the Ulster Unionist Party. Amendment No 3, however, is trivial or maybe a bit more than trivial. It certainly has potentially contentious content. It would change “member representatives” to “trade union representatives”. I do not intend to go into an academic debate about whether that is the case, but I remind Members that we are still seeing the fallout from the equal pay situation, which the unions were working on. A great proportion of their members were most dissatisfied with what happened with that.

Amendment No 5, to clause 8, would restrict scheme regulations. We cannot support that. Amendment No 6, to clause 8, would change negative resolution to affirmative. Again, that has been discussed here at some length. I am happy enough to oppose that as well. Amendment No 7, to clause 9, seeks to change the provision of a pensions gap in pensionable service from a maximum of five years to 10. The reality is that that is likely to be very costly, but we do not have any figures at this point in time. It would certainly be most unusual in pension circles to have such a gap admissible. The Chair has tabled amendment No 16, to clause 13, on behalf of the Committee for Finance and Personnel, and it has my party's support, given that it clarifies a very important part of the clause.

Mrs Cochrane: I, too, welcome the opportunity to speak on this stage of the Bill. I should also declare an interest, as I am a member of the Civil Service pension scheme, so I will be affected by the changes that come along.

As I said at an earlier stage of the Bill, it is not perhaps legislation that we would enact if it were entirely up to us. However, parity with Westminster raises its head once again. My colleague Naomi Long MP voted against the changes at Westminster. The decisions that we face today are very focused on the direct financial impact that we will face if we fail to implement these reforms.

I turn to the amendments relating to pensions boards, types of scheme and valuations. Amendments Nos 1 and 2 relating to clause 5, which the Minister tabled, allow flexibility for the body appointed to play a role in scheme governance for the local government pension scheme. We will be happy to support that. As for amendment Nos 3 and 4 to clause 5, it would be inappropriate to restrict employee representation to trade unions, as not all scheme members are members of a union. In the past, I have seen that that has been for very good reasons.

We will also oppose amendment Nos 5 and 6 to clause 8 because removing a defined contributions scheme or a scheme of other description could limit the options available to public sector workers in the future. We also think that the negative resolution procedure would allow for appropriate Assembly scrutiny in this situation.

As for amendment No 7 to clause 9, five years is in line with the typical maximum career break and is a fair provision for those who have had a break in pensionable service. I am not sure exactly what the financial implications would be if we were to break parity on that. Maybe the Minister could answer that later.

The Minister said that it is not necessarily very important to have amendment No 16 to clause 13, but, to ensure explicit independence, I support it for the reasons already outlined by the Chair of the Committee.

Mr I McCrea: Like others, I will be brief. To some extent, there is not a lot of controversy in this group of amendments. The Minister has dealt with amendment Nos 1 and 2. They are his amendments, and it is no surprise that I support them. I think that he explained his reasons for them better than I would and, therefore, I will not spend any time dealing with them.

It is important to deal with amendment Nos 3 and 4, which have been tabled by the SDLP. As the Chair and others said, the Committee did not have the opportunity to look at the amendments and therefore has not made a decision on where it stands on them. I find that the amendments standing in the names of Dominic Bradley and Sean Rogers are ill thought-out and, if you really look at the detail, somewhat discriminatory towards member representatives. The current wording in the Bill adequately covers membership eligibility for appointment to the pension board, which can include trade union representatives as the Minister said and as referred to by my colleague Peter Weir. These two amendments, if agreed, would exclude the right to membership of the pension board of anyone who is not a member of a union. Therefore, as others said, I do not believe that the amendments are necessary.

Amendment No 5 has been dealt with by the Minister. One comment he made about it was that it provides:

“another example of a short-sighted and restrictive approach” to these reforms.

I do not believe that there is any need for amendment No 6. Negative resolution often adequately allows the Assembly to scrutinise legislation. The Minister outlined some examples of where SDLP Ministers introduced legislation that included negative resolution, but, again, I suppose it is OK if it is an SDLP Minister.

Amendment No 7 makes me wonder whether people give much thought to their amendments or just pluck a figure out of the air and put it in for a change, just so they can say that they have suggested an amendment. They are suggesting a 10-year career break in a career of 40 years, which is nonsensical. As it states clearly in the explanatory notes, five years is adequate, and I did not hear any good reasons for making it 10 years. I will not support that either.

The Committee considered amendment No 16, and, as other Members said, we will not oppose that amendment.

As others said, we will support amendment Nos 1, 2 and 16. I hope that we reject the others.

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin: I did not expect to be called to speak on this group of amendments. In any event, the position was set out by Members who spoke previously.

The SDLP amendments are an attempt to appropriately amend the Bill on its way through the Assembly. However, my sense of the issue is that the Department and the Minister have responded to the arguments that were presented in the Committee's report, and I am content to support those amendments.

Mr Hamilton: I begin by thanking Members for their contributions to the debate on this group of amendments. I also thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker, for the opportunity to conclude the debate on the first group of amendments. It was perhaps remiss of me not to do so earlier, but I take the opportunity now to acknowledge and thank the Committee for Finance and Personnel for its work to ensure that the Bill was dealt with in a timely manner and for adhering to the quite tight legislative timetable that we had to stick to.

The Bill is complex, and, as I address as many of the contributions to the various amendments as I can, I will briefly remind Members of the purpose of each clause. Indeed, doing that will be helpful in addressing some of the contributions. I will also do that to aid understanding of the policy intent as we work our way through each clause.

As was outlined during the debate, clause 5 deals with the composition of pension boards and is intended to provide for efficient and effective governance and administration of the pension scheme. I again commend amendment Nos 1 and 2 to the House. I tabled those for the reasons that I have articulated, and they were welcomed by everybody in the House. This will give the necessary flexibility to the local government pension scheme in Northern Ireland, as was requested by the Department of the Environment, which, of course, has responsibility for the scheme. The amendments were also sought by the Committee for Finance and Personnel. I note that, in their contributions, the Chair, on behalf of the Committee, Mr Weir, Mr Cree and Mrs Cochrane spoke in support of the amendments, and I am grateful for the support that has been demonstrated on all sides, I think, for the points that have been made.

I do not accept the arguments made by Mr Bradley on amendment Nos 3 and 4 to clause 5. I concur completely with the points made in opposing the amendments. Various Members, including Mr Weir, Mr Cree, Mrs Cochrane and others, spoke against the amendments and stated that they do not support giving additional powers to the trade unions in that respect. It is my view that there is simply no need for amendment Nos 3 and 4.

As I have stated, the thrust of the Bill and clause 5 is to enhance good governance for public service pension schemes. That certainly does not mean promoting the role of the trade unions, which is what amendment Nos 3 and 4 would result in. I entirely take on board the point that Mr Weir made about the tensions that sometimes exist between members of trade unions, including ex-members, and their former trade unions. I think that Mr Cree referred to another situation that we will all have very vivid memories and recollections of; indeed, it is not even a recollection for me but is very current. That was in an entirely different area of policy, but there is a tension between current members of trade unions and the representation that they receive from their trade unions. There is also tension between former members of that trade union — pensioners in fact — and that union because of the representation they received. That was a fair point for Mr Weir and Mr Cree to make.

I reiterate my previous point that not all areas of work in the public sector are unionised or as unionised as others. In effect, amendments Nos 3 and 4 say that the proposer of the amendments does not care about those areas of work or the people in those areas of work and that, whether they like it or not, they should have trade union representation on the pension board for their pension scheme. That is wrong.

4.00 pm

If the intention of Mr Bradley and his colleagues is to be representative, they need to be representative of everybody as best they can. As not all people in the public sector are members of trade unions — in fact, a substantial number are not — it is not representative to have solely trade union representatives on pension boards. To restrict membership of pension boards to only trade union representatives could be deemed as being discriminatory against the greater volume of people in our public sector who are affected by all these various schemes and are not members of trade unions. I am sure that the Member would not in any way want to be seen as being discriminating against one section of workers in favour of another.

I noticed the comments he made about Ministers across the water hand-picking representatives of their pension boards in the schemes that they were responsible for. A process of appointment will be established in the scheme regulations at the secondary legislation stage, and it is for individual Ministers, including his party colleague, to decide how representation on pension boards is ultimately decided. That could be done in a variety of ways, but there is sufficient flexibility for Ministers to do that. The Member's proposal would severely restrict the flexibility available to the Ministers who are responsible for schemes.

I also noticed a comment he made when explaining why he tabled his amendments. He said that there was a perception amongst some unions that there was "insufficient consultation" between my Department and the trade unions. I assure the Member and the House that there has been beyond sufficient consultation, and I am sure that some of my officials would be staggered by the idea that they have not engaged in sufficient consultation with the trade unions. There have been umpteen engagements, and just because the trade unions have not got the outcome that they wanted from those engagements, that does not mean that there has not been sufficient engagement. So, I do not accept the arguments that have been put forward.

Mr D Bradley: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Hamilton: Yes, I will give way.

Mr D Bradley: During the various evidence sessions at Committee Stage, I got the distinct impression that engagements between officials and the trade unions were in fact not umpteen, but few and far between.

Mr Hamilton: We can trade, "Yes, there was"/"No, there wasn't", but it will not get us any further. Whether the Member or members of trade unions think that there was sufficient engagement is not something I can decide — it is a matter for them — but I can assure everyone that there was serious ongoing engagement, and there will continue to be engagement, particularly at scheme level, between various Departments and trade unions to make sure that the schemes that we have to develop are developed in the not-too-distant future. So, we can discuss whether there was or there was not, but it will not get us any further: it would not even close the gap between me and the Member.

The point that I made remains and has not been answered by the Member, in his contribution or his intervention, and I am happy to give way if he wishes to provide clarification.

Mr D Bradley: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Hamilton: Let me make the point that I would like the Member to address, if possible.

Restricting pension board membership to trade union representatives discriminates against a sizeable proportion, and probably the majority in many cases, of the members of that pension scheme. I am sure that that is not what the Member wants to do, but perhaps he could explain how the amendments that he has put forward do not discriminate against the greater volume of pensioners.

Mr D Bradley: In my initial contribution, I explained that, under the definition in the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, there is sufficient scope for a wide range of representative bodies. I also made the point, in response to what the Minister said, that most trade unions have organisations that represent pensioners who were previous members of their schemes. The equal pay issue came about, not as a result of trade union representation or a lack of representation, but as a result of the regulations laid down by his Department.

Mr Hamilton: In my view and, I am sure, that of many Members, the Member has still not adequately addressed the issue that was put to him. I am sure he would accept that not every member of the public sector is a member of a trade union. I hope that he would accept that very basic, fundamental point.

Mr D Bradley: They should be.

Mr Hamilton: Whether they should be or not is a matter of conscience for the particular member of the public sector. Many people, for very valid and good reasons, choose not to join public sector unions. They are entitled not to join, not to pay their money and not to have that representation. What the Member is trying to do with his amendments is restrict representation on the pension board to only those who choose to join a trade union, only those who are members of various bodies. Even though he made a right flippant remark that they should be, I am sure that the Member would accept that not everyone is, and, therefore, to restrict membership of the pension board only to those who are members of trade unions is discriminatory and excludes the greater number of members of the pension scheme.

Mr D Bradley: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Hamilton: I will, one more time. I will give you one more chance to answer.

Mr D Bradley: Certainly, it is not my intention to exclude anyone. Our intention here is to give the best possible voice to the 210,000 public servants. In our view, the best way to do that is to strengthen the union role in these boards.

Mr Hamilton: I disagree with that point. However, at least the Member is nudging towards accepting that, even if it is not his intention, the effect of amendment Nos 3 and 4 is that they would exclude a sizeable number of members of the public sector, in whatever guise they work, who are not members of trade unions, for whatever reason they choose. They would not be represented. Their views may well be represented, but they would not always have the guarantee that they would have their views accurately reflected on a pension board, if they were represented only by trade unions. We have talked about some other examples that highlight that there can often be, even between members of trade unions and their trade union, a dichotomy of views on whether the quality of the representation that they get is good enough. Therefore, I do not think that there is a need to have amendment Nos 3 and 4, and I think that, whatever the intention of the Member, they would have a very detrimental effect and would be very exclusive and discriminatory in how they would treat certain public sector workers.

Clause 8 deals with types of schemes. Again, we have debated amendment Nos 5 and 6, which were proposed in the names of Mr Bradley and Mr Rogers. You will not be surprised to hear that I do not accept the arguments that were put forward by Mr Bradley. It is apparent to me from the debate on amendment No 5 that SDLP Members simply do not understand, comprehend or appreciate what this Bill seeks to do. The Public Service Pensions Bill is enabling framework legislation that provides flexibilities, where necessary, for the subsequent secondary legislation that will be brought forward by each scheme. The SDLP Members appear to want to constrict and constrain the provisions. It is important that the Ministers who are responsible for each of the pension schemes have such flexibilities.

Again, no attempt was made to address the point that I made, that, at this minute — whatever the Member's personal or party view on defined contribution schemes — there are members of the public sector who have joined a Civil Service partnership scheme that is a defined contributions scheme. They have done that through choice. I am not sure whether this was the intention of the amendments, but their effect would be that that choice would be withdrawn from those members who have freely chosen to join that scheme. It does not take into account that that is what those members wanted to be a part of when they joined the Civil Service. My question to Mr Bradley and his colleagues is: what would you do with those pensioners who are already within those schemes, which they have chosen to be members of?

There was also a comment in which — I cannot recall now who was being quoted; I think it was the BMA, in fact — there was talk of unilateral action being taken to move people who are on a defined benefits scheme onto a defined contributions scheme. I refer the Member, once again, without labouring the point, to the provisions that are in clause 22 of the Bill, which I outlined in depth in my contribution earlier, which ensures that there cannot be — to use his term — unilateral action taken to move people from one scheme to another. People have chosen in some cases to be a member of a defined contribution scheme, but the Member seems to want to withdraw that option for those individuals.

Amendment No 6 seeks to change the process for secondary legislation from negative to affirmative resolution. The SDLP Members are being rather inconsistent on this matter as it is clear from the examples that I gave in my earlier contribution that they have been content to use negative resolution for legislation that their Ministers brought forward. The Member of the House to his left, when he was Minister of the Environment, had clauses in the Marine Bill, which is now the Marine Act, that were subject to negative resolution at Second Stage. I made the point, and will reiterate it for effect, about the inconsistency — there has been no answer from the Member to the charge of inconsistency — of why, when his party colleague Margaret Ritchie was Minister for Social Development, the Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 had several clauses with aspects to be affirmed by negative resolution on state pensions. Yet here we have another piece of pensions regulation where suddenly there has been some conversion to affirmative resolution and everything must be done by affirmative resolution when, in the past, his own colleagues sitting beside him and those who are no longer in this place were happy to bring forward legislation supported by the Member and his colleague, indeed supported by the whole House, that were full of negative resolutions. So, there has been no response to that charge of inconsistency. I am happy to give way if there is a response now. Oh, yes, there is.

Mr D Bradley: Simply because negative resolution is contained in one Bill does not necessarily entail that it should be used in every subsequent Bill.

Mr Hamilton: Of course that is the case. Of course that is right, but that does not answer why another piece of pensions legislation in 2008, brought forward by a Member of his party when they were in ministerial office, was full of negative resolutions. Why in one piece of pensions legislation but not in another? I see somebody is coming from the Bench to assist the Member, so I will give way out of charity.

Mr Attwood: First of all, I welcome the fact that the Minister is engaging so much in debate across the Chamber. I remember in the month of June, when the Member was a Back-Bencher rather than a Minister, sat and sat and sat and sat and did not engage at all when it came to the Planning Bill and matters that I challenged him and his colleagues on. So, I now welcome the fact that the Minister has found his voice. He now wants to speak up and tell the world what he thinks about various pieces of legislation. I welcome that he now recognises that he is inconsistent — inconsistent in June being silent and now having found his voice, so I welcome that.

Let me explain why it is entirely appropriate that this piece of legislation should have affirmative resolution. Why? Because this piece of legislation rewrites in a fundamental way the law on pensions. When there are members of pension schemes in this part of the world and in Britain who have grave suspicions about what might next come in pensions legislation, it is entirely appropriate that when it comes to the powers of a Minister in relation to future pension provisions that they come to this House by way of affirmative resolution for what they are proposing. The level of suspicion and concern requires domestic legislatures here and, in my view, in Britain also to proceed by way of affirmative resolution. That is why the scale of what is being proposed now is so much greater than we have seen before, and with a Tory Government with ambitions that we have not seen before, it is entirely appropriate to proceed in this way.

Mr Hamilton: There you go, Mr Deputy Speaker. That is a bit more like it. That is a better answer. Look, the Member will not be surprised that I am not convinced, even by his flourish of rhetoric. It still does not answer the fundamental point. I accept the point that pensions legislation at the time was not proposing changes as broad or as wide-ranging as this Bill proposes, but they were none the less significant. They had umpteen clauses that in secondary legislation were to be affirmed by negative resolution. All of a sudden there has been a conversion to being against the negative resolution procedure, yet it is something that the Member's party has put forward before. Given his previous experience as Minister, the Member will be mindful of the fact that there are options in the House if a party, a Committee or a series of parties is unhappy with the secondary legislation. It can be prayed against, and the legislation then comes to the House. Having something decided simply by negative resolution as opposed to affirmative resolution does not restrict debate in the House. If the Member and his party colleagues are so annoyed at anything that comes forward in secondary legislation, those options are available to them, as they are available to everybody in the House. I am not satisfied that moving towards having every scheme regulation brought to the House is the efficient way in which to deal with the issue. I am not convinced by the argument that has been put forward —

4.15 pm

Mr Attwood: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Hamilton: No. Hold on.

I am not convinced by the argument that has been put forward as to why, after the Member and his party have put forward piece of legislation after piece of legislation that has included the negative resolution procedure, we should suddenly back down now.

Mr Attwood: Will the Member give way?

Mr Hamilton: I will give way one more time on clause 8.

Mr Attwood: I now think that the Minister is being inconsistent, because Hansard will confirm that the Minister has just accepted that the scale of what he is proposing in this Bill is bigger and greater than what happened in 2008. What happened in 2008 was under a so-called Labour Government; this is definitely a right-wing Tory Government. Therefore, given that he has accepted that the scale of this is much greater than what went heretofore, I put it to the Minister that, in order to build reassurance with members of trade unions and members of pension schemes who are not members of trade unions, he should now go that wee bit further and give a greater degree of confidence by accepting the amendment from my colleague Mr Bradley. Given that you have accepted the point of principle that this is bigger, bolder and, in my view, more threatening than anything that we have seen before, will you not now concede the point?

Mr Hamilton: I do not accept the point. There are sufficient protections in the legislation before the House today. I mentioned clause 22 and fundamental changes that might be made. It is not a case of any Minister who is responsible for a scheme, including the Member's party colleague, bringing forward scheme regulations that can make fundamental changes willy-nilly, which is perhaps what he and others might fear. I reiterate the fact that there is a process here that allows Members, parties and Committees, if they are dissatisfied with a particular scheme regulation, to bring it to the House, where it can be properly debated and voted on by Members.

I will move on to clause 9, which deals with revaluation. We have had a debate on the clause as a result of amendment No 7, which was tabled by Mr Bradley and Mr Rogers. Again, I do not accept the arguments put forward by Mr Bradley. I welcome the points made by Mr Weir, Mrs Cochrane and Mr McCrea, among others, against amendment No 7.

Pension schemes need to be operated on a basis that is fair to all members — those who have no breaks from service and those who, for whatever reason, have breaks from service. Costs must be controlled, and, indeed, the costs will influence and determine the benefits that can be paid to all members. Mrs Cochrane asked how much it would cost. It is hard to determine exactly how much, but there would be a cost involved. There is the principle of fairness across the board. Why should some members of a pension scheme who do not take a career break or take a shorter career break subsidise those who take, as is suggested in the amendment, a 10-year career break, which, as Mr McCrea pointed out, might be upwards of a quarter of somebody's entire working career? It is untenable that anyone would even consider it, as it is eminently and apparently utterly unfair to change from five to 10 years the period for which a gap in pensionable service will be regarded as pensionable.

Finally, we debated amendment No 16, which was tabled by the Committee. It relates to clause 13, which deals with employer contributions in a funded scheme. When I was speaking to this group of amendments, I said that I did not believe that amendment No 16 was entirely necessary, but, in the grand scheme of things, it is a minor issue, and there is broad support for it across the House, so I am content to see it pass.

In supporting this amendment, Members commented on the requirement to make explicit what the term "qualified" means in regard to the person who is appointed to consider a valuation. I am unconvinced by the arguments that the person appointed would not be, and I consider that the term "qualified" already encapsulates all the points that the amendment seeks to make. However, as I said, I would be content to see it passed, given that it is a minor issue and that there is broad support for it.

In conclusion, I ask Members to support amendment Nos 1 and 2 in this group, which refer to clause 5, and to oppose amendments Nos 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Mr Deputy Speaker: I ask Members to take their ease for a minute while we change the top Table.

Mr P Robinson: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. I wonder if you could help us. We lost 20 minutes of our lives with the vote on amendment No 1, which was an amendment moved by my colleague the Finance Minister at the request of the Department of the Environment. Yet the Minister of the Environment, who was in the Chamber, did not support his Department’s amendment and his party voted against his Department’s amendment. Can you give us some help in understanding the thinking that went into the Minister and his party’s decisions?

Mr Deputy Speaker: I am very happy to tell the First Minister that that is not a role for the Chair. [Laughter.]

Clause 10 (Pension age)

Mr Speaker: We now come to the second group of amendments for debate. With amendment No 8, it will be convenient to debate amendment Nos 9 to 12. Members will note that amendment Nos 10 and 11 are mutually exclusive. I call Mr Dominic Bradley to move amendment No 8 and to address the other amendments in the group.

Mr D Bradley: I beg to move amendment No 8: In page 6, leave out lines 15 and 16 and insert “65.”.

The following amendments stood on the Marshalled List:

No 9: In page 6, line 16, at end insert

“(1A) Subsection (1) does not apply in relation to a person under a scheme under section 1 whose normal pension age is specified by scheme regulations for the scheme.

The normal pension age for such a person must be the age specified by the scheme regulations; and such regulations may specify any age less than state pension age, but not less than 65.”— [Mr McKay.]

No 10: In page 6, line 17, leave out subsection (2) and insert

“(2) Subsection (1) does not apply in relation to fire and rescue workers who are firefighters.

The normal pension age for such persons under a scheme under section 1 must be the age specified by the scheme regulations for the scheme; and such regulations may specify any age not exceeding 60, but not less than 55.

(2A) Subsection (1) does not apply in relation to members of the police service.

The normal pension age for such persons under a scheme under section 1 must be 60.— [Mr McKay.]

No 11: In page 6, line 21, at end insert

“for members of the police service and no more than 60 for fire and rescue workers who are firefighters.”— [Mr D Bradley.]

No 12: In page 6, leave out lines 24 to 33 and insert “65.”— [Mr D Bradley.]

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I am pleased to contribute to this second group of amendments on pension age. I listened carefully to the Minister outline the purpose of the Bill when he was summing up on the previous group. I understand the Minister's position: this is not a Bill of his making but one that has been foisted on him by the coalition Government, and I have some sympathy for him having to advance legislation that he is not fully committed to. When he talked about the purpose of the Bill, what came to my mind was the effect of the Bill. Largely, the effect of the Bill for public servants will be to pay more, work longer and get less at the end. Retirement may become a thing of the past.

In any case, I will move on to the amendments in the group. It is to be welcomed that we are at least able to debate the legislation. The original intention was that we would adopt the Westminster legislation by means of a legislative consent motion. It is largely due to the insistence of my colleague Mr Attwood, when he was a Minister, that the Executive decided to have a local Bill. That is a good thing, because it increases accountability and adds to the democratic process. All that is left for us to do is shape the Bill into the best possible instrument for those who are affected by it. Therefore, I welcome the fact that we have the opportunity to discuss a Bill here and can attempt to modify it.

The Bill as it stands ties the age at which public sector workers receive their pension in full — the normal pension age — to the state pension age. As we know, the state pension age, as a result of previous legislation on pensions, will increase to 68 in the coming years. Amendment Nos 8 and 12 would ensure that a link is not made for either the normal pension age or the deferred pension age. That will prevent adverse effects for all public sector workers aged 34 or below and will prevent the potential for further adverse increases in the future.

The impact of increasing the pension age on the Northern Ireland economy will be significant, but sadly no proper assessment has been done of that. We hear the constant refrain about the impact on the block grant of not sticking rigidly to the Westminster proposals. However, as with many matters, that fails to take account of the distinctly different circumstances in Northern Ireland.

Let us face it: the Department of Finance and Personnel has not really provided us with any proper costings to assist our decision-making on the Bill. In fact, it referred the matter to the Government Actuary's Department (GAD), which came back with a variation in cost of £100 million. On that basis, it is difficult to come to correct figures about the cost of the measures in the Bill.

On a base level, the proposals will lead to less money circulating in the Northern Ireland economy, as the financial power of retiring public servants, sometimes described as the “grey pound”, will be reduced. That is all happening in the context of the cost of public sector pensions being driven down from 1.9% to 1.4% of GDP by 2060. Therefore, increased numbers of public servants working longer can only mean a reduction in job opportunities for young people.

5.30 pm

We can look at the number of fully qualified teachers who, at the moment, have never been in full-time employment. The Minister of Education assesses that number to be around 6,000. We can only imagine what that figure will be in the future. Current circumstances will define the problems of youth unemployment, and these measures will do little to ease that situation. For the period from August to October last year the unemployment rate for 18- to 24-year-olds was estimated at 23.8%. Currently, we risk the development of a lost generation. Large numbers of young people are again being forced to leave these shores to find work. Why should we seek to perpetuate this problem? I do not believe that we should.

As we discuss these potential increases, it is important to remember that pension is simply deferred pay. Changes of this nature leave a bitter taste in the mouth of public servants, especially given that the London Government are reneging, as I said, on the promise of a 25-year guarantee on pensions. Public sector pensions are not gold-plated in the way that is often unfairly portrayed. Over half of public service pensions are less than £5,600 per annum, and for civil servants the average yearly pension is less again — £5,400, with a quarter getting less than £2,000 annually. Notably, when considering the impact of the proposed pension changes, we see that the average NILGOSC pension for women is less than £3,000 a year.

Through amendment No 11 we have sought to make the case on behalf of firefighters and police officers. Many public servants — nurses, teachers, doctors and paramedics, to name a few groups — face demands during their employment that could be described as particularly physically, mentally and emotionally demanding. We can comfortably predict that increasing the pension age for over 45,000 public servants will result in increasing numbers of ill-health retirements and more people being forced out of work on capability grounds. Nowhere is that more obvious than in the case of the firefighters and police officers. Working beyond 55 is not attainable by most current firefighters, and working beyond 60 is a serious ask for police officers. Between half and two thirds of current firefighters would not be fit enough to work beyond 55, and, because of the small size of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service, redeployment to back office jobs is not possible for that number of individuals. Additionally, because of equality legislation, it would simply not be possible to present older firefighters with such jobs, and, sadly, substantial numbers of firefighters could end up being dismissed through capability procedures. The change to the normal pension age will discriminate against women firefighters. It risks driving out most women firefighters and undermining decades of equality work that is only now beginning to come to fruition. There is no doubt that such an imposition will upset industrial relations and affect morale.

I welcome the fact that Sinn Féin has also acknowledged this problem by tabling amendment No 10, which we cannot support alongside our own amendment. However, I encourage Sinn Féin and others to support the SDLP amendments. As I said, I ask the House to think seriously about the important points that I made during this contribution, and I ask Members to support the amendments that we have tabled.

Mr McKay (The Chairperson of the Committee for Finance and Personnel): Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Because of the timing of the debate, the Committee has not considered the amendments in this group, similar to the case with the previous debate. These amendments relate, in different ways, to the evidence presented to the Committee and to its related findings and recommendations.

It is clear that one of the most contentious impacts of the reforms arises from clause 10, which establishes an automatic linkage between normal pension age and state pension age for public servants generally and would set the normal pension age at 60 for firefighters and the police. Members need to be aware of two key implications of clause 10 as drafted. First, subsection (1) pre-empts any future decisions by the Executive and the Assembly on whether the linkage with state pension age should be maintained for public servants generally when the Westminster Government increase it to 68 or even beyond, for that matter. Secondly, Members need to be mindful of the inflexibility of clause 10 in failing to address circumstances in which public servants do not wish or cannot afford to take early retirement but find the completion of their duties impossible because of age-related decline. Evidence to the Committee highlighted that, under clause 10, such individuals are likely to face actuarially reduced pensions or capability dismissals.

The Committee noted from the research and evidence that, aside from firefighters and police officers, certain other physically or emotionally demanding public service roles — for example, prison officers, teachers, paramedics and mental health nurses — have been identified as being potentially problematical with respect to the consequences of an automatic linkage between normal pension age for their respective roles and future increases in the state pension age.

When taking evidence from the Fire Brigades Union (FBU), the Committee noted that a key finding of the Williams review indicated that up to 85% of firefighters aged between 55 and 60 would not be able to maintain the fitness standards required to conduct their duties effectively. Moreover, in responding to Committee queries on the scope for such firefighters to move to back office roles or community fire safety, the FBU pointed out that it had written confirmation from its employers on at least two occasions stating:

Hence the risk of capability dismissals. Effectively, even if firefighters want to go into a back office role, as police would have a greater opportunity to do, the option is simply not there. Although the Committee acknowledges that the Bill does not require firefighters to work to age 60, clause 10 means that, if a firefighter retires before 60 years of age, that could result in an actuarial reduction in the overall pension entitlement of approximately 4% for each year.

To understand the potential impact on public safety, the Committee agreed to write to the Health Minister for information on the options for firefighters to retire early with actuarial reduction and whether scope exists to redeploy into other roles in the wider public sector firefighters who are unable to meet the fitness standards. In response, the Health Minister advised the Committee that the position in the North was unclear regarding the potential number of firefighters affected and that the available information was incomplete. He also advised that, as regards scope for redeployment into the wider public sector, employment legislation meant that retired firefighters could not be provided with a more advantageous position that allowed them to compete for employment in the wider public sector regardless of their individual circumstances. Faced with such barriers, affected firefighters will have little option but to retire with a financial penalty or face dismissal on the grounds of capability.

In light of the concerns raised, the Committee was unable to agree to clause 10 as drafted. The Committee believes that there is a need for sufficient flexibility to enable evidence-based decisions to be taken at a scheme level on whether certain public service roles, especially that of firefighters, should have a lower normal pension age than is set in clause 10. That being the case, the Committee called on the Finance Minister to table the necessary amendment to clause 10 to provide that flexibility on the basis that any costs arising from future decisions to vary from parity in this area at a scheme level will be met by the responsible Departments in the Executive. In respect of the latter condition, it was noted that clause 3(5) provided the necessary safeguard, whereby scheme regulations will require the Department of Finance and Personnel's consent before being made.

Given the weight of evidence presented, it is disappointing that the Minister has not seen fit to table an amendment as recommended by the Committee. Instead, in his response to the Committee report, the Minister states that this is an enabling Bill designed to offer flexibilities at scheme level. He is of the view that the secondary legislation stage is the most appropriate time to finalise the scheme design for specific workforces, following consultation with staff and trade unions. If that is so, why is it necessary to stipulate pension age in the primary legislation in such a rigid way? That is the view of the Committee.

In the case of firefighters, the Minister states that the Williams review did not recommend a change to the current pension age of 60, but it recommended that a review of the pension age should take place once fitness standards had been determined and sufficient data collected to assess the impact of such standards. The Minister also cites the fact that the current pension age for firefighters recruited since 2006 is already 60 and that an amendment to provide for an earlier normal pension age would introduce a conflicting provision to the current requirement. Yet, surely that can be addressed with new scheme arrangements if, following the review and on the basis of evidence, it is established that a normal pension age of less than 60 is appropriate for firefighters.

I will move on to other areas. There may also be a need for flexibility on pension age for certain other public servants. In evidence to the Committee, the BMA highlighted the ongoing Working Longer Review being undertaken by a tripartite partnership review group comprising NHS trade unions, NHS employers and representatives of the Department of Health, who will consider, among other things, the evidence of the impact of working beyond 60 years of age.

In that regard and in the context of the second group of amendments, the Committee position is that clause 10 should be amended to enable a more flexible approach, which will enable the responsible Departments to take account of emerging evidence on specific roles and to adjust pension age accordingly in necessary cases going forward. That is the Committee view.

From a party perspective, I echo the Committee's position on a lot of the issues that have emerged around clause 10. The Fire Brigades Union impressed on the Committee that the cart was very much being put before the horse in regard to the consideration of evidence and the making of a decision in regard to the firefighter NPA. It is clearly the case that there is a need for more evidence to be taken and more issues to be considered before a final decision is made in regard to that case.

In a recent independent report, information was gathered from four fire and rescue services across the water, and it found that two thirds of those aged between 55 and 60 were below the recommended fitness standards. We need to be cognisant of that kind of information, and, if we go ahead with the decision in respect of pension age for firefighters to be raised to 60, if it is the case here that two thirds of firefighters do not meet fitness standards, how does that impact on the valued public service that firefighters provide, and how does that impact ultimately on people's lives?

5.45 pm

It also warns that a substantially larger proportion of women will find it hard to maintain fitness at the required level, which will lead to a disproportionate number becoming unfit for firefighting before age 60. On the basis of that finding, we should also be concerned about the impact that this will have on the number of female firefighters in the local Fire and Rescue Service, an issue of representation that needs to be addressed anyway. We need to encourage more women to apply for those jobs. Obviously, the implementation of such a decision on pension age could put off more females from applying to the service.

In pension terms, we are living longer, but life expectancy is an entirely different thing from fitness levels, which must be considered in this case, especially in life-and-death situations that firefighters and others face daily. The consequences of getting this wrong could be highly significant, and that is why we should take a longer-term view of all of this.

What we propose in our amendments relating to the firefighters is broadly similar to the SDLP proposal: it is to take a commonsensical approach to this issue, and, in our case, ensure that there is flexibility through regulations so that the Department can consider fully the case of firefighters. The problem is that, if we introduce this in primary legislation, it will become a lot harder to undo, should we encounter any future implementation problems. So, when this comes into play, if we find that there are difficulties in the provision of public services, we should not have to return to primary legislation; it should be something that is easily amended through regulations. Given the importance of the public service that the fire service provides, we should be in a position to change it quickly to ensure that that public service is held up to the highest standard.

I will speak briefly on Sinn Féin's second amendment, which would provide an option for a normal pension age for those under clause 1 of the Bill to be specified through regulations. At Committee Stage, there was much discussion about flexibility and the need to create wriggle room by putting this into regulations. So, there are similarities between this and the firefighters' issue as well. My party colleague will speak to those issues later in the debate. At this stage, I certainly favour amendment Nos 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Mr Girvan: Really, we are all here as a result of legislation that has gone through Westminster and could have been dealt with as a legislative consent motion. However, it was worthwhile having a Committee Stage and getting the evidence from the trade unions and those affected. Trade unions were not the only people who presented; other stakeholder groups felt that it was important to give evidence. In doing so, we identified that some of the information that we were working to from actuaries indicated that there could be a cost of up to £262 million of delivering any variances that we would have if we did not implement the legislation as presented. At the request of the unions, we went back to ask for more information on that matter, and the increased estimate that came back was that it could cost Northern Ireland up to £300 million of its block grant if we did not make changes. The evidence was helpful in showing how some accommodation could be made. I appreciate that, as has been said, certain flexibility exists for Departments and funders to make adjustments in their own schemes.

However, they would have to meet that cost and adjustment from their own departmental budget as opposed to asking for money from the centre.

I come back to the amendments. One of the groups that presented to us and was met with widespread support is the Fire Service. A unique set of tests are put forward in the Fire Service in that you have to achieve a certain fitness level. Unlike other jobs in which you do not necessarily need to be 100% fit to carry out the function, you have to be fit to be a fireman. The Fire Service also identified the lack of back-office opportunity for men who reach the age of 55 and perhaps cannot attain the required fitness standard. There is lack of opportunity for, and accommodation of, those people in the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service. As a consequence, it is suggested that this should apply to a 55-60 age range. We will support amendment No 10 because we believe that it addresses the issue and allows for flexibility to exist in the fire service. The Police Service will have the same opportunity.

I want to go back to amendment No 8, which states that we should leave out two lines and just insert "65". Some people might think that I am being somewhat cynical in the way that I say that. However, that removes the flexibility either to decrease or increase the retirement age. We all know the way that that will probably go. It is more likely to increase than decrease. Making that amendment would mean having to do that.

We will oppose amendment Nos 8, 9, 11 and 12 and support amendment No 10; that is the stance that we will take. In a lot of ways, amendment No 12 really is very similar to amendment No 8. Therefore, we feel that that accommodation has been made. However, I think that it was worthwhile going through the process of getting the evidence. Unfortunately, meeting the time frame and getting this through the House within the required window before penalties are incurred could be a difficulty.

We have had to move it forward to this stage, and I think that it was helpful. It has also given us an opportunity to see what flexibility could be worked into the scheme. There are probably those on the other side of the Irish Sea at Westminster who feel that some accommodation and further negotiation would have helped them at the initial stage of bringing forward the Bill there. We have a very difficult case on which to work and move forward. I am sure that we have all been lobbied heavily. I am sure that every civil servant in the country has been in contact with one of us at some stage, whether through petitions or a series of letters that were circulated. We have had to take all that into consideration.

It is not an easy step to take. It has been alluded to that people will work longer, pay more and get less. In many areas, that is probably true. We are dealing with a difficult financial future for not just our country of Northern Ireland but Great Britain as a whole. As a consequence, adjustments have had to be made. The accommodations that have been put forward in some of the amendments will help to address a number of the concerns that were raised at Committee.

Mr Cree: Sometimes the more I sit here and listen, the more firmly I am convinced that a legislative consent motion would have been the way to go. However, we are where we are. Although it is a great idea to have flexibility, I have not seen much flexibility here today.

Amendment No 8 addresses pension age and seeks to make it 65 years only. We cannot support that change in the current economic situation and, indeed, in the knowledge that most people are living a lot longer and because of the existing public service scheme costs. I do not think that it has been mentioned, but one of the big issues in all pension provision is the cost of providing same. Indeed, I know from my experience that there are very few final salary or equally attractive schemes in the private sector any more, simply because they cannot be afforded.

Amendment No 9 is similar to amendment No 8, and the Member who spoke previously covered that.

Amendment No 10 also attempts to change normal pension age but restricts the age for firefighters and police. We have sympathy for those changes and have supported the principles in discussions at Committee. The difficulty is that amendment No 11 from the SDLP addresses the same clause 10 issue, probably, to be fair, in a much neater way. So, we have a contrast between those amendments, and we have to decide, after hearing what else is said, which of them is the more suitable.

The final one, amendment No 12, seeks to make 65 the deferred pension age under clause 1. Again, I have difficulties with that.

Mrs Cochrane: The amendments tabled for clause 10 are significant and require careful consideration, and I am sure that all Members have been lobbied strongly by the various unions and the employees who will be affected by the proposed changes. It is important that we establish the impact that the Bill will have on those affected. However, we need to balance that by also considering the context in which the changes are proposed. As Mr Cree said, statistics show that life expectancy is going up and people are living longer. In the 1970s, if a person retired at 60, they might have been expected to have lived a further 18 years. By 2010, life expectancy post-retirement had increased to 28 years. That means that the cost of public service pensions is increasing. Indeed, it has increased by a third in the past 10 years to £32 billion, and, without reform, that is unsustainable. We have to be realistic.

Clause 10 sets the normal pension scheme ages at the same level as they are for other public service workers in the UK. If life expectancy continues to rise, we will need to continue to monitor the proportion of adult life spent in retirement, and, therefore, amendment Nos 8 and 12, which remove the link to state pension age, would be very unwise. Amendment No 9 may initially seem appropriate, but it also allows the option in secondary legislation to stray away from state pension age, and we must ask ourselves whether that would simply bump the issue down the road where it will still have to be dealt with.

We should recognise that, even with the reform, those enrolled in public sector pension schemes are receiving a significant employers contribution and still have confidence that it will actually pay out. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for many private sector employees, the vast majority of whom already must work to state pension age, and many will have to work long beyond that due to the collapse of many private pension schemes through no fault of their own.

Amendment No 10 seeks to ensure that the pension age for the firefighter scheme is specified in secondary legislation, and that may be unnecessary given that the current pension age for firefighters recruited since April 2006 is 60 and that clause 10, as drafted, includes provisions to retain that position. However, as those emergency public service workers are already afforded exemptions, it would be appropriate to support that amendment.

Mr Weir: I will try to keep my remarks reasonably brief. The amendments in group 2 fall into two categories: amendment Nos 8, 9 and 12 and the separate issues with the firefighters' position. I will look at each of those. I have listened to the proposers, particularly on amendment No 8, which follows through to amendment No 12, and the same tone goes in many ways with amendment No 9. It has a slightly more nuanced position and is maybe a bit better dressed up, but, from a practical point of view, it will effectively mean the same thing. The reality is twofold. First, as indicated by Mrs Cochrane and others, given the position in the wider sphere of state pensions, those amendments would have the impact of detaching from the issue of state pension age and normal pension age and decoupling the two. The simple reality is that, however much we may dislike this, and considering its broad affordability as we move ahead, all the demographics in society that relate to people living longer and being able to enjoy retirement for a longer period, and the financial implications of that, are further becoming unsustainable. That is why the Hutton commission was set up in the first place.

6.00 pm

Whether we like it or not, we are inevitably moving into a situation in which retirement age is something that cannot be fixed across the board at 65, because it is something that is moving. From that point of view, there is a degree of common sense at work, and, with the best will in the world, we are creating a false picture for people if we simply believe that that is something that can be set in stone.

Similarly, whatever is said about spending powers, the reality is that, although people can disagree with the Government Actuary's Department about the exact amount of money, mention has been made of £262 million or £300 million. That will be the impact on the block grant. There is no point in simply saying that, if such-and-such happens, it will mean that there will be a reduction in spending power in Northern Ireland. We cannot simply conjure that money out of thin air. If we are talking about that level of reduction and effectively going out on our own, that money will have to be found from within the block grant. That is a simple reality and something that, with the best will in the world, is simply unaffordable.

Consequently, amendment Nos 8, 9 and 12 would all have a very similar effect. They undermine the central premise of the legislation in the first place, but they also put us into cloud cuckoo land when it comes to the realities. That, ultimately, if they are being honest with the public, is something that Members have to face up to.

I will now turn to the amendments relating to the firefighters' situation. Of all the witnesses among the various lobby groups that came to the Committee, the firefighters were impressive and put forward a very cogent case. There are particular special circumstances for the firefighters that have been outlined by others, including the needs for levels of fitness. Looking around the Benches on all sides, I suspect that very few of us could pass the required fitness tests at 35 or 45. I note that the Chairperson of the Committee, who is a very keen cyclist, may well be able to pass the firefighters' fitness test, but I suspect that he might be on his own in the Chamber, with the obvious exception of the Speaker, who, I am sure, would be more than capable.

There are specific circumstances for firefighters. Rightly, society needs them to have a particular level of fitness and physical ability. That is a clear issue that goes to the heart of health and safety concerns and saving people's lives. It is undoubtedly the case that that means that, when it comes to standards, there is a requirement on firefighters that is simply not there in most other public sector realms. Consequently, theirs is a unique case.

Additionally, the clear-cut point that the firefighters made is that, unlike in many other parts of the public sector, if they are not able to perform their firefighting duties, it is not as easy as it would be in other parts of the public sector simply to transfer them somewhere else. There is very little in the way of back-room jobs that could be made available for those who are physically not in a position to pass the fitness test. A unique, cogent and impressive case has been made for the firefighters, and we should take cognisance of that across the House. I suspect that it will be an issue that will be raised when discussing amendment No 10. The House can largely unite behind that amendment, and I believe that it can be accepted across the board without rancour. I would like the Assembly to unite behind our vote of support for the particular position of firefighters in amendment No 10 and not divide the House on the issue. That is the position that the DUP will take on it.

So, from that point of view, I think that there are clear problems with amendment Nos 8, 9 and 12. I think that a more unified approach could be adopted on amendment No 10, which the Chair and others tabled.

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I note that the tenor of the discussion on this group reflects what I thought was a very focused discussion at the Committee, which carried out some substantial work. I do not think that any ideological positions were adopted at the Committee. People recognise that reform can be a necessary process to go through if it addresses issues such as value for money, cost benefits and giving better protection. That is also the case if reform has not only good governance but transparency and responsiveness or flexibility in the individual cases that can be made. I think that the firefighters and the police are two very obvious examples, as are paramedics. Those categories are not best served by embedding an approach in primary legislation that then, de facto, changes the thresholds.

Also, the body of the Bill does not provide any future-proofing for how different Administrations, such as a different Administration at Westminster or a different Executive formulation with different Ministers, would approach those issues. I think that that informed our approach, and I should say that I am speaking in favour of and formally moving amendment Nos 9 and 10 on behalf of Sinn Féin.

Given what I said about what reforms are intended to do, it could not be the case that people were either willy-nilly or even deliberately creating that type of invidious pressure on people who are regarded as public servants. They are members of the public sector, and the departmental witnesses accepted that. They may not have the categorisation or job description that specifies that they are civil servants or that they are this, that and the other, but, to take firefighters as an example of the point that I want to make, they are highly skilled people who do a very dangerous job. They are recognised right across the spectrum of our community — there are many things on which our community divides and disagrees — for the incredible work that they do.

Why should they be faced with a Hobson's choice of retiring before the state pension age and their normal pension age on the basis of their ability to meet the job's physical requirements? We do not give them any safety net through reallocation to back office work or whatever. We actually confront them with a very invidious choice between retiring early on a reduced pension or facing dismissal on capability grounds.

I do not see or hear any party adopting the position of saying, "Tough; that is life. That is the way that it goes, and we cannot extend that to every other member of the public sector". We are talking about very specific exceptions, for which very specific exceptions have to be made. There is no one size fits all in this. That is why I was disappointed that the Minister did not opt for the secondary legislation route, because that is how we could have addressed those individual circumstances.

Taken as a category, none of that is going to create the type of doomsday scenario that the Government Actuary's Department presented. The first time that we asked, it said that the figure was £260 million, so we went back and said, "We are not satisfied with guesstimating. Could you do it again?" It came back with another estimate but bumped it up by £40 million. It became £300 million the second time that we asked, and I think that it cost the Department. I should give credit to the Department, because at least it obliged or responded to the Department by agreeing to finance that second and wider assessment of the various schemes that we have in the public sector.

The point I am making is not that we should just disregard the fact that there is an impact on the block grant, or even have an argument that there will be an impact, because there will be. However, nobody, but nobody, is operating on the basis of an evidence-based figure. We are given guesstimates. They are very significant guesstimates, which can have the effect of people saying that we cannot afford this. However, for a start, we do not actually know how much it is going to cost us. That is no way to run a business.

It is unsatisfactory that we are presented with guesstimates when we ask for evidence. We are then being asked to consider the best way to take the issue forward. We have to take into account the issues that will affect the public sector here. Other Members have addressed in their contributions the fact that we are talking about almost a quarter of a million workers. We are also talking about their families. These issues are very, very significant.

We cannot guarantee that the Executive, given their resources, can actually afford to break parity. Sinn Féin does not have the same allegiance to parity with Westminster as some other parties — that goes without saying — but, in this case, we are not arguing that we forget parity and dig into our own pockets. It cannot be done. We know and recognise that. For that reason, we have, maybe through gritted teeth, gone along with many of the arguments presented for sustaining the Bill.

We made a constructive contribution to the Committee report. I was very proud of the way in which the cross-party group went about its task. We did not agree on everything, but we had a fundamental problem with clause 10. We asked the Department to explore the issue. We asked the Health Department whether it could offer comfort regarding options after operational fitness reports perhaps rule firefighters out of front line activity. We were told that there was insufficient capacity to give that assurance.

We asked that the wider public sector here be consulted. We were told that, for reasons that were not made clear, employment legislation would not allow that to happen and that it would infer some kind of advantage. It is not an advantage; it is recognition of years of dangerous work on the front line of public services on behalf of the Executive and our society. We should not be confronting people with Hobson's choice in these circumstances: early retirement on a reduced pension or being dismissed because of lack of physical capability. I ask again that the Minister give some assurance that this is something that merits some thought. It would not incur penalties; it would allow us to lay down the principles on which we are going to proceed, and it would allow us sufficient time to reflect on what we can do.

If there is common commitment, I think that we can overcome the issues about whether we can reallocate functions and roles in the Fire Service. If that is not possible, and if there is insufficient capacity — and I am prepared to listen to the evidence — let us consider other options in the wider public sector. These are obviously very capable, experienced individuals. Whether it is giving lectures on fire safety in our schools or working for local authorities on fire prevention measures and so on and so forth, I think that we could offer firefighters the opportunity to enjoy the full span of their career.

We want to reflect the reforms in the public sector that are already law. In her contribution, Judith Cochrane referred to the changes already in place. There are sensitivities. Some people joined the Fire Service long before the reforms were introduced. They are working on a different set of conditions. However, the logic of diminishing returns is that, over a period of time, it will level itself out. We are not looking to rewrite the legislation; we are asking that we retain as much flexibility as possible in our primary legislation to allow our Minister, on our behalf, to introduce innovative, imaginative responses to the approach that is being adopted in Westminster. I do not know what will happen with that system. I do not have enough information, but I think that we can take responsibility for exploring what we can do more than is represented in this Bill as is presented. On that basis, I very strongly ask Members to look again at amendment No 9, because it is an enabling change that then makes our amendment No 10 effective. We would not have introduced that had we been able to deal with this matter by secondary legislation, but that choice is not before us today.

Mr Agnew: The problem for me with this Bill is that it is an accountant's Bill. The numbers may work, but the real question is this: at age 68, potentially, will the people be able to work? Of course, the numbers have to add up. That is a major component of the Bill, and we cannot ignore that. Equally, we have to ensure that it makes sense in reality. Balance sheets are all fine and well, but, if the reality on the ground with workers does not match what the numbers want it to, we cannot expect the workers to be slaves to accountancy. Life expectancy is rising, and, of course, that puts pressure on the pension pot, but it is not rising equally across all areas. In Belfast, someone born today will have a life expectancy of 73 compared with that of 85 in Kensington. Of course, Kensington is a much more affluent area than Belfast, and, essentially, as things stand with this legislation, we will be asking the people who have lower incomes and who are likely to live shorter lives to subsidise the pensions of the people in Kensington. Although none of the amendments in this group can completely mitigate that, I believe that the amendments put forward by the SDLP and Sinn Féin can help us to move towards a much more equitable pensions Bill.

We talk about numbers, and they are given weight because you can see them on a paper, you can add them up, you can total them, you can match them off and it seems real, but we have to look at some of the numbers that affect real people's lives and working conditions. There has been so much talk of life expectancy, but we have not looked at health expectancy. That has to be absolutely key. There is no point in requiring someone to work until they are 68 or whatever the Government may decide the state pension age should be because we cannot expect them to work if they are unfit and unable and not well enough to work. Currently, half the people who are within three years of the state pension age do not work. There will be myriad reasons for that, but there is no doubt that a significant proportion of it will be due to ill health and unfitness to carry out the profession that they were engaged in. That is a key issue. We cannot ignore the reality of people's lives in all this. Anybody who has studied maths, accountancy or economics, as I have, will know that there are many different ways and many different formulae that can get you to the same conclusions. We have been passed the line that it is the only way that it could have been done at Westminster and it is the only way that we can do it. I do not accept that. I think that different options can be considered, and I think that we can, if we accept these amendments, make it work.

That issue is particularly significant when we come to consider physically arduous jobs such as those in the Fire and Rescue Service. I welcome the fact that there seems to be a degree of consensus on that. Indeed, the amendments include those working in the Police Service.

I worry that other groups have been left out, such as paramedics. I remember during one of the pension protests I was at the Ulster Hospital, and a paramedic asked whether you would want a 65-plus-year-old paramedic to lift your relative who weighs 20-plus stone down the stairs if they took a heart attack. Those are the realities that the numbers, sometimes, cannot illustrate. As it looks as though the particular conditions of firefighters and police are will be taken into consideration at this stage, I hope that, at Further Consideration Stage, having accepted the rationale for certain jobs that require physical strength and fitness, we will look at others that may face the same challenges and ensure that they are included and there is equity and fairness in the Bill.

The particular effect of the Bill on women has to be looked at. When we looked at the Fire Service, there was a sense that the proposals would impact on women considerably more. I ask the Minister what equality impact assessment has been done and what conclusions it made about the impact of the Bill as a whole on women. Again, to ensure that there is fairness and that the Bill works for the common good, we have to look at the various groups that may be affected by the proposals.

Physical health has been mentioned. With regard to the ageing process, I wonder what evidence has been looked at on mental well-being and fitness for particular roles as age kicks in. I want to be clear: that is not to say that every older worker's physical health or mental well-being will deteriorate beyond the point of their being able to perform their job. Everyone will have a different experience. Again, even when we talk about firefighters, sometimes the term "fitness" can be misleading. People think that it is maybe just the case that somebody has not been doing the proper training. It is about the wear and tear and the physical injuries that people can suffer over their career and how they can affect their fitness to do the job, rather than the basic understanding that we may have of the term "fitness". Therefore, I would like to see more research. I am aware that NHS research on the Longer Working Review, I think it is, has not concluded. I will wait to see that research. There needs to be scope in secondary legislation that gives us flexibility to respond to the evidence as it comes forward.

I said that there are other ways to add up the numbers. That is where I am concerned that the Bill has perhaps not done enough to look at other options, particularly the macroeconomics of some discussions. We have the figures that were presented by the Government and the Department here on these proposals. However, we do not have figures on the alternatives, which makes it hard to consider and make decisions that take into account all possibilities. So, whilst much has been made of the cost that the increase in life expectancy has added to pensions, little has been made of the cost of the potential increase in youth unemployment through people working longer and to an older age. Undoubtedly, there will be a knock-on effect. It is not quite as simple as one person works longer and another person does not get employed; I accept that. However, there is no doubt that, if more people work later in life, it will have an effect on youth employment. There will, of course, be an associated cost if there is a resultant increase in youth unemployment.

Other figures have not been factored into the calculations and have not been presented, such as the increases that we gain in productivity through improved innovation in technology. We never hear about the benefits of that, such as working less and increased output. There is no doubt that there have been and are year-on-year productivity increases. Over the past number of decades, the workforce has been increasing not just through population growth, which, of course, means an increased requirement for pensions, but through a change in culture, whereby we have shifted from a scenario where the norm was that one adult per household worked to the expectation now that two adults per household will work. Nobody says, "Because of the increased numbers joining the labour force, let us factor in the increased contribution to the pension pot and see what savings we are making". Those figures do not fit the agenda of either the Westminster Government or the Executive here, so they are less talked about and less transparent.

As I say, I welcome the amendments in this group. I am not wedded to the SDLP or Sinn Féin proposals, although others discussed their merits. However, I believe that the principle of keeping the retirement age at 65 and 60 for firefighters and police officers is correct. Again, other imaginative solutions could have been looked at in the Bill, such as moving away from the cut-off point of a set retirement age. Tapering retirement, reducing working hours and staging the introduction of pension payments are more creative ways of allowing those who wish to and can stay on at work to do so while allowing those who may be unfit to retire at a reasonable age and live out a reasonable retirement. Again, I come back to the issue of health inequality between the regions. If the pension age is increased to 68 and your life expectancy is 73, that is not what I consider to be a full and fulfilling retirement deserved by someone who has worked all their life. As

I see it, some people can, will and should work longer because that is what they wish to do, but I do not believe that we should punish those who cannot do so for reasons of ill health or unfitness to work.

We need a pensions Bill that is realistic, affordable and serves the common good. I believe that the unamended Bill ticks only one of those boxes. The amendments in this group bring us closer to ticking all three boxes and will make a significant improvement to the Bill, though they will certainly not right all its wrongs.

Mr Attwood: I am not inclined to look to the Bible for guidance about what I should say on many matters, but I have to say to those on the Benches opposite that they have now had their road to Damascus conversion moment. It was not very long ago that Ministers from the party opposite were, as has been conceded today by a number of Members, arguing for a legislative consent motion when it came to pension legislation. Yet, we hear this afternoon — I welcome these comments, which were genuinely made by Mr Girvan — that the fact that we did not go by a legislative consent motion but, rather, through the full Committee process has been, to use his word, worthwhile.

6.30 pm

My question is to the current Minister of Finance. Given that his previous boss, as Minister of Finance, was the person who argued for an LCM when it came to pensions legislation, was that the advice that he gave to the then Minister of Finance, given that he was Assembly Private Secretary at the time? Was the advice of the current Minister, if he gave any advice to the then Minister on this legislation, to proceed by way of an LCM? I am prepared to give way to the Minister of Finance if he wants to answer that question, once he has finished his conversation with his current Assembly Private Secretary. It is a question that deserves a bit of an answer. We will wait to hear if one is forthcoming.

The point I make is this: in this year of all years, when there will be a vote on independence in Scotland in the autumn and a conversation at that time around “devo max” as a way forward for enhancing the powers of the devolved arrangements, in Northern Ireland, in Britain, it seems to me — it was revealed, in my view, by the attitude of the former Minister of Finance — that there is not a “devo max” approach in this part of these islands. There is actually a “devo minus” approach. When it comes to fundamental issues of public policy and the needs of citizens and communities, the attitude of some, displayed by the previous Minister of Finance around this legislation, is not “devo max” but “devo less”. That is why I welcome the Damascus conversion that we have heard this afternoon from the DUP Benches, where legislation that was fundamental to the interests of our citizens and our workers was not treated by way of an LCM but was subject to the full interrogation of the Assembly processes. That is why it is an important question to ask the Minister of Finance. What was his view, previously, in relation to this legislation? Was it to proceed by the LCM model or by way of full scrutiny?

That point is also confirmed by the considered comments made by Mr McLaughlin, who essentially asked whether some flexibility should be built into primary legislation that deals with and touches on fundamental issues of public policy, when it comes to the future approach being taken by this devolved Administration. That was the essential question that he put to the Minister of Finance. He expressed disappointment that we were not going to build into the body of this primary legislation the flexibility to deal with future events that might require that flexibility. If we are taking this legislation — it appears from what the DUP has said that it is prepared to build into the primary legislation flexibility when it comes to the interests of firefighters — why are we not taking the opportunity, as argued by Mr McLaughlin, to build into it the option of flexibility when it comes to future categories of workers? Is it not the case that there are probably a lot of Ministers and MPs in Westminster, at the moment, who regret that they did not build that flexibility into the primary legislation in the Public Service Pensions Act 2013? Is that not why the Fire Brigades Union is now on strike? It does not agree with the primary legislation that has seen its workers disadvantaged in Britain, just as we are going to advantage them here in this legislation, if the amendment that has been proposed is accepted.

In Britain, they have closed the doors on flexibility. We are arguing — it seems to have been accepted on the Floor — that there will be flexibility when it comes to at least one or two categories of workers. Why are we not building future flexibility into the legislation? Is it not common sense? Would it not show some loyalty to categories of workers who might need that in the future? If we accept the point of principle about flexibility now, why do we not give ourselves a general power of flexibility in future? We are closing the door on categories of workers who might need our support in the future. In that way, we pass legislation that is in one way anti-worker, because it does not legislate for future circumstances. The point from Mr McLaughlin was well made in that regard.

I do not know whether this point is unparliamentary. If it is unparliamentary, I withdraw it in advance. There was an intervention from the First Minister earlier. I do not want to second-guess the man, but he was probably one of those who argued for a legislative consent motion previously on this legislation. He intervened and made a pretty typical sneering remark — if that is unparliamentary, I withdraw it — about the position of the SDLP on amendment Nos 1 and 2. When I was a Minister, I advised my group to vote in ways contrary to the way in which I was voting when it came to legislation, because, although I had a departmental responsibility that I was prepared to honour, the party, from a position of integrity, would take a different position. Perhaps those principles of some honour and integrity are foreign to one or two Members on the opposite Benches, and, if that is unparliamentary, I withdraw that remark as well. [Laughter.] You can, as a party, have a position of integrity that means that you do not slavishly follow the view of your Minister, and too right. If we end up in a situation in the Chamber and in our society in which we do not encourage the right to dissent when there is much to dissent from, we are not in a very good or healthy place when it comes to our parliamentary democracy. In any case, put that all aside. I do not take it from the First Minister when he gets to his feet to make sneering comments, given his approach to certain issues. The point is relevant, Mr Speaker. I will come back to the Bill, because I know that I am probably testing your patience again.

I remember reporting to the Executive about the efforts being made to protect the jobs up in Coleraine. I remember the First Minister, in a sneering way, looking at me and saying, "Well, won't that be a bit of a waste of time?" That was two and a half years ago, and we are still fighting to save the jobs in the DVA. God knows, perhaps this month we will win that battle — we will know very soon — because of the good work done by the current Minister. When somebody gets up on his hind feet, makes remarks and does not recognise the value of dissent —

Mr Speaker: As the Member and other Members will know, when it comes to Bills, I give Members quite a bit of latitude. I am trying to help the Member, but he should come back to the amendments under discussion.

Mr Attwood: To conclude on that matter, perhaps Mr Hamilton, as Finance Minister, might want to be a bit more cautious about tipping off the First Minister about what is happening in the Chamber. Sometimes things come back in your face.

I have said in the Chamber before that the Finance Minister is more thoughtful than his predecessor. He demonstrated that in some of the funding decisions that he has made — not what he did on pillar 1 and pillar 2, but what he did with heritage-led development moneys, for example. Why do we not build into the legislation a bit of flexibility so that in future we can protect workers who need protection? I want to know whether he has crossed the Rubicon, the Rubicon in this case being that legislative consent motions should be an option used in only a very restricted way. They should certainly not be an option for significant issues of public policy, never mind a pensions Bill.

Mr Hamilton: I will do my best to address some of the specifics of the amendments, and my comments will be in stark contrast to those of the Member who spoke previously. However, before I do, I want to pick up on a point that I think will be useful. I will reiterate some of the points that other Members made about the context. I think that Mrs Cochrane was the first person to elaborate on the context in which we find not just this group of amendments but the entirety of the Bill. There are two contexts: one is that people are, thankfully, living longer lives, which is a good thing, but related to that is affordability.

In moving the amendment, Mr Bradley spoke about the Bill being foisted on me. Whether it has been foisted on me or is everything that I would want it to be, I am sure that the Member will understand that many pieces of legislation come before the House that have their roots in or owe their origins to parity. One way or another, they may not always be everything that we would want them to be. However, we are where we are, and, whether the Bill has been foisted on me, on the House or on Northern Ireland and its public sector workers, we have to recognise the context that people are living longer lives. That then has a knock-on impact on affordability and on the economic situation that our nation finds itself in. The intention of this legislation, whether one likes it or not, is in part to make pensions affordable for everyone in the longer term and not to take a short-term view on affordability, which is, of course, a critical matter.

Many Members raised costings. Mr McLaughlin, who is unfortunately not here at the minute, raised that matter, as did Mr Bradley, along with some other Members. At some cost to itself, which Mr McLaughlin acknowledged, the Department of Finance and Personnel commissioned two actuarial studies of the recurring annual costs of delay or failure to make the required reforms. It is worth noting that the latest study showed a total cost of £300 million, of which £110 million was attributed to the health and social care scheme, £60 million to the teachers' scheme, £60 million to the principal civil service scheme, £10 million to the fire and rescue scheme and £60 million to the PSNI scheme. The fact is that there would be a penalty. We could have some debate about the quantum of that penalty, although it would not get us very far. However, when he spoke on behalf of the Committee, the Chair acknowledged that these were costs that:

"Treasury has confirmed it will apply".

Although we do not have —

Mr Agnew: I thank the Minister for giving way. For clarity, when you say "penalty", you are referring to money that would come out of our block grant. However, am I right in saying that it would go to the people in Northern Ireland who would receive those pensions, so it would be offset to some extent? Perhaps I have got that wrong, but I am happy to receive clarification.

Mr Hamilton: It would not be offset, because it would, as the Member rightly identified, come off our block grant. If we were to continue to pay pensions at the same rate, we would have to find that money, whether it is £262 million, £300 million or whatever it may be, from elsewhere in the block grant. The consequence of that would have an effect on public services. That point has been somewhat missed. We can talk about it, and it can get quite emotional; indeed, some people spoke quite emotionally about some members of public services and the work that they do. One recognises that, of course, but, in some ways, this is a moot debate, given that there is general acceptance that penalties would apply. Had we not proceeded, the impact of those penalties would be seriously detrimental to public services in Northern Ireland, with very little additional benefit.

Finally on this point, the fact we do not have absolute ironclad certainty about what the cost would be does not mean that we should dismiss the cost issue. Whether the figure is £262 million or £300 million, it seems quite a lot to me. In that sense, it is an important point to remember, although perhaps it is in an immaterial debate.

It will be no surprise that I oppose all the amendments to clause 10 that have been tabled. I note that we have had a wide-ranging debate on this important clause. The clause has two main elements: the linking of normal or scheme pension age to state pension age; and the pension age for the parts of the public sector that are exceptions to that provision, namely, the police pension scheme. It is worth noting that the police were always separate, and the amendment does not give any additional or new provision for them than the Bill already provides. There is, of course, the much-mentioned fire and rescue pension scheme. I welcome the fact that many Members have spoken against the amendments. Members are clearly more sympathetic to firefighters — I understand that sympathy — and they have taken a stance on the issue through their support of amendment Nos 10 and/or 11.

I will deal with the issue of linking normal scheme pension age to state pension age first. This relates to amendment Nos 8, 9 and 12. I want to be clear on the purpose of the Bill and on the provisions in clause 10 for scheme pension age specifically. I hope that these points will concentrate Members' minds on how unreasonable it would be for them to consider supporting amendment Nos 8, 9 and 12.

The purpose of clause 10 is to safeguard good, sustainable pension schemes so that, as I mentioned, they can continue to provide decent retirement income for public service workers in the longer term and do so in ways that are fair for all public service workers and are affordable to the taxpayer. To achieve that there is a compelling requirement for a number of actions to be taken now. We need to adapt scheme pension ages to take account of trends for increased life expectancy and manage rising public service pension costs. Why do we need to do that now? The actions must be taken to ensure the continuing viability and existence of public service pension schemes. As I and others have noted, people are living longer, which means that public service pensions are being paid for much longer than was expected when the schemes were designed. The evidence was examined in detail by the Independent Public Service Pensions Commission in its extensive review of UK public service pensions, which was carried out between June 2010 and March 2012.

Many of the current public service pension design features, including pension ages, date back nearly 200 years. In 1841, someone who reached the age of 60 might expect to live a further 14 years on average, but most did not. By the early 1970s, when some elements of pension scheme design were reformed, the life expectancy of a 60-year-old had increased to an extra 18 years. At the time of the Hutton interim review of public service pension provisions in 2010, it had risen again to around 28 years more. As you would expect, the cost of providing pension benefits has also been increasing. Figures highlighted by Lord Hutton in his review show that, by 2010, the cost of public service pensions in the UK had risen by more than a third over the previous 10 years to £32 billion a year. I think that that was a point that Mrs Cochrane made. The bulk of the extra cost has fallen directly to the taxpayer.

The case for increasing longevity and the need for change in the normal pension age has been recognised in the state pension system. The state pension age is due to reach 65 for men and women in 2018 and rise to 66 by 2020 and 67 by 2028. Some of us are wondering whether we will ever get to state retirement age. The state pension age is being increased beyond 65 across the European Union. For example, in the Republic of Ireland the state pension was standardised at 66 from 1 January and is being increased to 67 in 2021 and 68 in 2028. In France, the retirement age will increase from 65 to 67 between 2006 and 2018, and the retirement age in Germany is continually increasing and will reach 67 by 2029. Italy and Spain are increasing in a similar vein and will reach a pension age of 67 by 2021 and 2027 respectively.

It will not be sufficient to set scheme pension ages for the public service at 65. For most of the existing schemes, the pension age for new entrants was changed to 65 over five years ago. Past reviews and reform measures have not been sufficiently rigorous in meeting the requirements for sustainability in the future. The early reforms did not fully address all the underlying pressures of cost, including increased longevity, in providing public service pensions. Rather, the focus was on changing provisions for new entrants and not existing members. That was clearly not going to provide for the fundamental reform that is now necessary.

This is not in any way a new issue. Members have been made fully aware that there would be inevitable and significant financial consequences of diverging from the policy to link scheme pension age with state pension age in line with the recommendations of the Hutton commission and the general policy that was announced by the coalition Government in Budget 2011.

The policy to link public service pension ages to the state pension age is already established in the remainder of the UK in the Public Service Pensions Act 2013 and has already been agreed in Northern Ireland by the Executive.

The Executive considered the issue and took a fully informed and binding decision on the overall reform policy to link scheme pension age with the normal pension age on 8 March 2012. The Executive also agreed to implement those reforms consistently with the equivalent schemes in Great Britain.

The provisions in clause 10 are also now a core requirement for each of the new public service pension schemes in Great Britain, which will take effect in April of this year and April 2015. Historically, the provisions in our equivalent public service schemes have always been virtually identical to those schemes. Any divergence from the policy in clause 10 would therefore be contrary to the Executive's agreed policy on pension reform of 8 March 2012.

Any amendment to clause 10 that means spending more on public service pensions in Northern Ireland in ways that are more generous than the public service provisions that apply in the rest of the UK will have direct and inevitable financial implications for the Northern Ireland funding made available from HM Treasury. There would be a consequential diversion of available funding from important public services, which I believe the Assembly will be unable to justify to the electorate in the long term.

We must take similarly responsible and forward-looking decisions for the Northern Ireland public service schemes in line with those already taken for public service schemes in the United Kingdom generally in order to manage the inevitable costs associated with increased longevity, safeguard decent and sustainable pension provision in the longer term and ensure that the cost of schemes cannot be made a drain on valuable resources that are required to fund the important services delivered through our public service.

Under this clause, normal scheme pension ages will only be set at the same levels that apply to other public service workers in the United Kingdom and to the vast majority of non-public service workers generally who must already work to the state pension age.

No one will be compelled to work to the state pension age under the legislation. Clause 10 sets the high-level requirement based on the published evidence for increasing longevity, the recognised need to manage costs and the recommendations of the independent commission on guaranteeing sustainable schemes.

The Bill makes important provision for scope at the secondary legislation stage for flexibilities in the design of each scheme to suit individual workforces. It will accommodate those who wish to retire earlier and provide options for early departure with minimal disadvantage for those who are unable to work to normal pension age.

The Bill already makes adequate provision for flexibilities at scheme level — this is a point that was missed entirely by the last Member to speak — to allow evidence-based decisions to be taken on early departures in cases where employees may be unable to remain in service until the normal pension age specified in clause 10.

This is framework legislation, which contains the high-level requirement for the public service in general. That is an important point. The appropriate arenas for the consideration of scheme flexibilities to suit individual workforces, including the provision of options to accommodate existing staff who wish to retire earlier and for early departure with minimal disadvantages for those who are unable to work to normal pension age, are scheme level discussions with employee representatives at the secondary legislation stage.

Even with the unavoidable changes in pension age, the public sector defined benefit schemes will still be among the best available and will be significantly more valuable to workers than the defined contribution offerings that are generally the only choice available to private sector workers. The majority of private sector workers would jump at the chance to join a defined benefit career average employer funded pension scheme. Niki Cleal, the director of the Pensions Policy Institute, said in respect of the changes that are being proposed:

“even after the Coalition’s proposed reforms the benefit offered by all four of the largest public service pension schemes remains more valuable, on average, than the pension benefit offered by Defined Contribution (DC) schemes that are now most commonly offered to employees in the private sector”.

Not everyone in the public service will be affected by clause 10. The Bill contains important and valuable transitional protections, which will benefit those public servants in service who are closest to retirement. Under clause 18, those within 10 years of their current normal scheme pension age as of April 2012 will see no change. For those up to four years outside the 10-year limit, there is an additional sliding scale of protection, where staff can remain in their previous arrangements for an extended transitional period. It is undeniably a time of change for some, but the changes to scheme pension age are long-sighted, evidence-based and necessary to guarantee decent retirement incomes for a generation of public servants in schemes that are fair, affordable and sustainable.

The policy intent of the Bill is to put in place the steps needed to have sustainable public service pension schemes. By providing for career average rather than final salary schemes, the Bill will mean that some of the higher-paid, who traditionally benefited from having moved up the promotion ladder, may not be so well off in retirement. However, a career average scheme is beneficial to lower-paid staff who, in some sectors, tend not to benefit from promotion opportunities. In final salary schemes, those with rapid salary progression could benefit up to twice as much per £100 of pension contributions paid into the scheme than lower-paid staff with a flatter salary profile through their working life. This is relevant as it is an example of how the Bill, along with the move from final salary to career average, also sets fairer and sustainable parameters for the payment of public service pensions. This is critical to the costs that we, as taxpayers, all fund for public service pension schemes.

There is no rationale — and certainly none that I have heard today — for treating public sector workers differently from those in the private sector, many of whom depend on their state pension and do not have an occupational pension. Those in the fishing industry, for example, will have to work until they get their state pension, along with many in other strenuous physical and demanding occupations, such as farmers.

On those important points, I ask the Assembly to strongly oppose amendment Nos 8, 9 and 12.

I turn to the issue of amendment Nos 10 and 11, which deal more specifically with firefighters. Clause 10 will not set a link with state pension age for all sectors. This is a point that has been missed entirely: for all firefighters recruited since 6 April 2006, the current pension age is already 60. Clause 10 includes provisions to retain that position. Amendment No 10 would mean that firefighters would have a normal pension age not exceeding 60 but not less than 55. Amendment No 11 seeks to amend the wording so that the normal pension age would be no more than 60; however, that amendment does not specify a requirement to set a lower limit. Although I have issues with both — and I want to come to some of those considerations and issues in a moment — I consider amendment No 11 to be poorly drafted because it sets no lower limit. That being the case, amendment No 10 is a better amendment.

However, I want to address some considerations and issues not taken into account so far in the debate. I want to highlight them not least because those issues will be part of the discussion that will take place at the stage of secondary legislation. Any proposed amendment to the Bill to provide for an earlier normal pension age for firefighters in primary legislation would introduce a conflicting and regressive provision to the current requirement. There would inevitably be a financial penalty in Northern Ireland funding from Her Majesty’s Treasury if the retirement age for firefighters is less than 60, as it will be 60 in England, Scotland and Wales, with effect from April 2015. Once again, I want to emphasise that, in 2006, the retirement age for firefighters joining the service in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland changed to 60.

We all acknowledge, as many Members have done already, that firefighters perform a vital role in the emergency services. There are obvious public safety issues that mean that standards of fitness for the role for those in the Fire and Rescue Service should be in place and should be met. Where there might be age-related factors or concerns about possible correlations between pension age and fitness, it is right that they should be investigated and subject to regular review. However, the available evidence does not support a change to the current pension age of 60 for firefighters. The latest review of firefighters’ pension age was published in a report by Dr Anthony Williams in January 2013. The Williams report made numerous recommendations concerning a future fitness regime in the fire services across the UK but, importantly and interestingly, it did not recommend a change to the current pension age of 60 for firefighters.

The main recommendations contained in that report included: the establishment of a common measure for fitness standards across all the United Kingdom fire services; regular fitness training and fitness assessments for all fire and rescue services to ensure that fitness for role is maintained; and that fire services should consider informing applicants at recruitment that those whose fitness is close to a predetermined threshold are unlikely to maintain fitness to normal pension age unless they are able to increase their level of physical activity and/or reduce their body mass index. The Williams report has quite rightly, therefore, identified that, for the future regime for firefighters, fitness assessment and maintenance must be the fundamental guiding principle, not age.

The Williams report does recognise that there will be firefighters now in service who will have difficulty maintaining fitness to the current normal pension age of 60. It makes recommendations for terms for early payment of pension benefits to be incorporated in pension schemes at secondary legislation to accommodate scheme members who may leave service before the normal scheme pension age as a consequence of failure to meet the required fitness standards.

Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service introduced fitness testing in 2011. To date, one firefighter in the age range 55 to 60, and I understand that 34 firefighters are in that age range, initially failed the fitness test but subsequently met the standard having been provided with a personal fitness regime.

Mr Agnew said something along the lines — and I apologise if I am misquoting him — that we cannot have someone who is not fit to do the job doing a job. Of course, I agree with that, and nothing in this Bill will change the fact that people who are unfit to work can be medically retired. That is not affected at all, so it is not right to say that this legislation would mean that those who were unfit would be forced to work up to retirement age.

The intention of the Williams report is to introduce a standard capability test for firefighters across the UK. Under the Public Service Pensions Bill, a proportion of this group will benefit from transitional protections provided for at clause 18 and will, therefore, see no change in their expected pension age.

For existing employees who do not qualify for transitional protection, the approach taken in the Bill provides scope for the development of scheme designs for firefighters at the secondary legislation stage that are in line with the recommendations made in the Williams report to provide options for early retirement with minimal financial reduction to accommodate those now in service who may no longer meet the fitness requirement to the normal pension age. The appropriate stage for finalising this scheme design is through consultations with trade unions at the secondary legislation stage for the individual firefighters' scheme.

Discussions have already been taking place on this important issue between Department of Health officials and member representatives for the firefighters' scheme. I received an assurance in writing from Minister Poots. I am glad that Mr McLaughlin is back in the Chamber because he talked about seeking to finally engage with the firefighters' union to find innovative and imaginative solutions to the problem. I can assure him and the House that correspondence that I received from Minister Poots confirms that officials and representatives of the firefighters' pension scheme have engaged in positive discussions. I would encourage those discussions to continue so that, at secondary stage, the flexibilities and imaginative and innovative solutions that he was talking about, so long as they are within the overall cost envelope of the scheme, can be arrived at. That is something that I want to see. However, I can confirm that Mr Poots is firmly committed to ensuring that the proposals for the 2015 firefighters' pension scheme provide the best possible outcome for local firefighters, and he has communicated this to the Fire Brigades Union. Consultation is continuing between officials and the FBU.

As I highlighted, secondary legislation stage will provide scope for my colleague Minister Poots to consider what variations might be possible and appropriate for the firefighters' schemes. At this stage, variances can be accounted for within the overall cost envelope for the firefighters' pension scheme. Members should note that normal pension age for firefighters will remain subject to regular reviews. The Williams report recommended that the next review of firefighters' pension age should be undertaken once fitness standards for fire services across the United Kingdom are determined and sufficient data collected to measure the effect of implementing those standards. The report states that it is unlikely that the next review will have sufficient data until at least 2016.

It would be premature to pre-empt the outcome of that review by introducing in primary legislation an unnecessary and prohibitively costly amendment to the current normal scheme pension age for firefighters, especially one that cannot be justified by the current expert opinion on this important matter. For those reasons, I ask the Assembly to consider those points and to oppose those amendments.

I reiterate the point that where there are compelling reasons or evidence to review scheme pension age at the primary legislation stage for any employment sector in the future, this should be fully considered. However, there is currently no evidence-based justification to depart from the agreed general policy that clause 10 gives effect to.

There is adequate flexibility in the Bill to allow evidence-based decisions to be taken at scheme level to accommodate current employees who, for whatever reasons, may be unwilling or unable to remain in service until the normal pension age specified at clause 10. For those reasons, the amendments to clause 10 should be opposed.

Mr Rogers: The SDLP welcomes today's opportunity to discuss the Public Service Pensions Bill. From the outset, we argued that it was not acceptable to simply apply legislative consent to a Westminster Bill. That has been acknowledged by Members across the Floor. The SDLP believes that the Northern Ireland Assembly was correct to take the opportunity to fully scrutinise the legislation, which proposes such major reform to public sector pensions. That said, if we fail to make any changes to the Bill as initially drafted, we might as well sing karaoke to Westminster legislation, to paraphrase what my colleague Mark Durkan said. This is something that we cannot support. Our three MPs in Westminster — Alasdair McDonnell, Mark Durkan and Margaret Ritchie — have all fought against the damaging nature of the Bill as it passed through the Commons.

There has been a lot of debate here today, so I will now take us back to some of the points made by Mr Bradley earlier. The cost of the Bill to the people of Northern Ireland could be significant, both directly through the impact on public sector workers and indirectly on the rest of the population as a result of the damage to our economy. Unfortunately, the Minister has not seen fit to adequately scrutinise the impact on Northern Ireland. It is because of those failures and the likely negative impact that we seek, through amendment Nos 8 and 12, to retain the pension age and deferred pension age at 65.

I acknowledge that Sinn Féin, through amendment No 9, has also attempted to alleviate the impact of the Bill. However, its amendment ties the public sector pension age to the rising state pension age, unless a future Minister wants to decide otherwise. I declare an interest as a member of the teachers' pension scheme. This provides no recognition of the fact that many public sector workers, such as teachers and nurses, to name but two groups, work in particularly physically, mentally or emotionally demanding jobs, and so should have their normal pension age capped at a lower age.

A lot of people talked about the reality of the situation, but the reality of the situation for teachers is that they will have to work for 42 years to get a full pension. We must think of the consequences on teachers' health and the stress that it would cause if a 66- or 67-year-old teacher were in the classroom. Although many people would be quite capable at that age, we have to consider the quality of education for our children. We also have to empower our young teachers. Where are they going to get jobs?

Amendment Nos 10 and 11 deal with specific concerns regarding police and firefighters. Those are two groups that undoubtedly work in particularly physically, mentally and emotionally demanding jobs and so should have their normal pension age capped at a lower age. The Minister talked about fitness assessments. You can have all the fitness assessments you like, Minister, but when people reach the age of 60, they do not have the same limb capacity to go up and down ladders etc. I am glad to say that Sinn Féin's amendment supports the intention of the SDLP amendments, and we will be happy to support it. That said, it is astonishing that the Minister cannot see fit to acknowledge the particular arguments made around the Chamber for firefighters.

I congratulate all the contributors to the debate today. Many common themes came out. Flexibility was mentioned by many Members. The Minister did not rise to my colleague Alex Attwood's challenge, so I will ask him the same question again: why are we not building flexibility into this system? We need future flexibility.

Other comments were about life expectancy. I acknowledge the comment from Steven Agnew that the amendments that the SDLP and Sinn Féin have put have helped to move the Bill forward.

Clause 10, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 11 (Valuations)

Mr Speaker: We now come to the third group of amendments for debate. With amendment No 13, it will be convenient to debate amendment Nos 14 and 15 and amendment Nos 17 to 21. Members should note that amendment No 14 is consequential to amendment No 13 and that amendment Nos 19 and 20 are consequential to amendment No 18. I call the Minister of Finance and Personnel to move amendment No 13 and to address all the other amendments in the group.

Mr Hamilton: I beg to move amendment No 13: In page 7, line 27, at end insert

“(4A) Before giving directions under this section the Department of Finance and Personnel must consult such persons (or representatives of such persons) as appear to the Department likely to be affected by the directions.”

The following amendments stood on the Marshalled List:

No 14: In page 7, line 31, leave out “(4)” and insert “(4A)”.— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 15: In clause 12, page 8, line 30, at end insert

“(10) Before giving directions or making regulations under this section the Department of Finance and Personnel must consult such persons (or representatives of such persons) as appear to the Department likely to be affected by the directions or regulations.”— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 17: In clause 14, page 9, line 24, after “is” insert “a”.— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 18: In clause 18, page 11, line 26, at end insert

“(5A) Scheme regulations may also provide for exceptions to subsection (1) in the case of
(a) persons who were members of a public body pension scheme specified in the regulations, or who were eligible to be members of such a scheme, immediately before 1 April 2012, and
(b) such other persons as the regulations may specify, being persons who before that date had ceased to be members of a scheme referred to in paragraph (a) or to be eligible for membership of such a scheme.”— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 19: In clause 18, page 11, line 27, after “(5)” insert “or (5A)”.— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 20: In clause 18, page 11, line 37, after “(5)” insert “, (5A)”.— [Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel).]

No 21: In clause 24, page 13, line 34, leave out from “if” to the end of line 3 on page 14.— [Mr D Bradley.]

Mr Hamilton: With amendment No 13, I will also speak to amendment Nos 14 — [Interruption.]

Mr Speaker: Order, Members. Leave the Chamber in an orderly fashion.

Mr Hamilton: With it, I will speak to amendment Nos 14 and 15 and amendment Nos 17 to 21. Amendment No 13, which relates to clause 11 on valuations, will introduce a requirement for consultation with members and/or member representatives on directions for valuations before being made. Amendment No 14 is a technical consequence to amendment No 13. This is a new provision. The Department of Finance and Personnel agreed this position to consult on the new directions during its engagements with stakeholders, including trade union representatives, on the collective consultation working group for the Bill. The DFP function in making these directions is equivalent to that carried out by Her Majesty's Treasury for the public service schemes in Great Britain made under the Public Service Pensions Act 2013. The directions deal with the technical processes for how and when valuations are carried out, the type of data used and relevant demographic assumptions used to inform them. The amendment has been welcomed by trade unions and the Committee for Finance and Personnel. It evidences the Department of Finance and Personnel's commitment to good practice in departmental consultation processes.

I move to amendment No 15, which is to clause 12. Similar to amendment No 13, amendment No 15 will introduce a requirement at clause 12 for consultation with members or member representatives on directions and cost cap regulations before being made. Again, these directions and regulations deal with the technical processes for cost controls in schemes equivalent to those that will be made by Her Majesty's Treasury for the schemes made under the Public Service Pensions Act 2013. The Department of Finance and Personnel agreed this position to consult on the new directions during its engagements with stakeholders, including trade unions, on the collective consultation working group for the Bill, and the change has been welcomed by the trade unions and the Committee for Finance and Personnel.

I move to amendment No 17, which is a wholly technical amendment to clause 14, and it deals with information about benefits and corrects a drafting error. The amendment inserts the letter "a" where it has been omitted at clause 14(1). Given that we have had some contentious debate, I trust that this one does not prove contentious.

I move to amendment Nos 18, 19 and 20, which are to clause 18 on the restriction of existing pension schemes. Amendment No 18 is technical and will ensure that appropriate transitional protections are given in the new Civil Service scheme where members transfer into that scheme from a public body scheme. Amendments Nos 19 and 20 are technical consequences of amendment No 18. Amendment No 18 and the consequential amendments Nos 19 and 20 correspond with equivalent amendments that will be made to the Westminster Public Service Pensions Act 2013. The policy, both in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, permits some of the pension schemes operated by smaller public bodies to access into the new Civil Service pension scheme. Where these smaller schemes are admitted to the new Civil Service pension scheme, this amendment will allow members to receive the appropriate transitional protections available to other scheme members.

The change is in line with the reform principle to make the Civil Service pension scheme more accessible generally and to remove the need for smaller public bodies to set up and maintain their own pension schemes. Amendment Nos 18 to 20 ensure that new members that transfer into the scheme are not disadvantaged when it comes to transitional protections.

7.45 pm

Amendment No 21 was tabled to clause 24. The clause deals with the legislative procedure for making secondary legislation for public service pension schemes. We debated the issue earlier, so I do not intend to rehearse all the arguments at this stage in proceedings, suffice it to say that negative resolution is entirely appropriate to deal with the issue.

I ask the Assembly to support all seven DFP amendments in the group, which are amendment Nos 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19 and 20, and to oppose amendment No 21.

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Given the concerns that were raised in evidence about the need for DFP's regulatory powers in the Bill to be tempered with robust consultation requirements, the Committee pressed the Department on making further enhancements in that regard. Officials subsequently notified the Committee of the Minister's intention to table amendment No 15 to clause 12, which would require the Department to consult with relevant stakeholders before exercising the direction and regulation-making powers under the clause. Although not sighted on the Minister's amendments to clause 11— amendment Nos 13 and 14 — the Committee would no doubt also welcome the duty to consult being applied to the direction-making powers of DFP on the valuation provisions in clause 11. Again, that addresses a concern that was raised by the Committee about why clause 11 as drafted requires DFP to consult only with the Government Actuary.

As it pointed out in its report on the Bill, the Committee will monitor the practical outworking of the duty to consult, with careful scrutiny, including at the SL1 stage of the secondary legislation process, of the extent and outcome of the consultation that is undertaken on proposed regulations arising from the Bill. There will be an expectation that the Department will follow the Gunning principles as a good-practice approach to consulting on proposed statutory rules and directions.

As to amendment No 17, following the conclusion of the Bill's Committee Stage, the Department wrote to the Committee to confirm that the Minister would table an amendment to correct a typographical error in clause 14 that had been identified by the Committee. The Department also indicated that it intended to table amendments to clause 18 and explained the rationale for that. I am, however, unable to convey an agreed Committee position on those amendments, because, owing to the timing, it did not have the opportunity to consider the Department's correspondence.

Finally, on amendment No 21 to clause 24, which was tabled by the SDLP, although the Committee has not considered it, I perhaps should provide some background on the Committee's deliberations on the clause. The Committee noted that clause 24 requires the affirmative resolution procedure only for scheme regulations that amend primary legislation; that make retrospective amendments that appear to the responsible authority to have significant adverse effects for scheme members; or that relate to holders of judicial office. The clause therefore applies the negative resolution procedure in any other case.

Arising from its consideration of whether the Bill provides for sufficient checks and balances on departmental powers to make pension scheme changes under subordinate legislation, the Committee noted that there is a balance to be struck in requiring the higher level of Assembly scrutiny, in the form of affirmative procedure, for subordinate legislation to deal with more substantive and potentially controversial issues, while avoiding the inefficient use of plenary sitting time to debate minor or routine changes. DFP also emphasised that, under the negative resolution procedure, Committees or individual Members would have the option to table a motion for annulment to pray against scheme changes that have given rise to concerns. In that regard, however, for clause 24, the Committee recommends that stakeholders, including trade unions, that have concerns with any future scheme changes ensure that those are brought to the attention of the applicable Committee at the earliest opportunity.

The Committee called for further assurance from DFP that it will observe the 21-day rule for any proposals that it makes for negative resolution regulations that make scheme changes under the Bill. As such, the Committee is likely to welcome the Minister's recent assurances that it is the Department's intention to observe the rule, and, as is highlighted in the Committee's report, I advise other applicable Committees to seek similar assurances on the issue from their respective Department.

Mr McQuillan: I support the amendments in group 3, with the exception of amendment No 21. The Bill represents a significant change to public service pensions in the United Kingdom and ensures parity with the rest of the United Kingdom, which is something that I am very keen to maintain. I support the Minister in his endeavours to see that this legislation sees the light of day. I appreciate that some may take issue with some of what is in the Bill. However, I welcome the amendments that the Minister and, indeed, the Committee tabled. Although some in the House may not be happy with all aspects of the Bill, I believe that we, as a Committee, have struck the right balance and added our own perspective to the Bill.

I welcome that the Bill will allow for the existence of a single universal pension scheme in the Civil Service and the public service, because, at present, there is some variation across the service, with some organisations having their own schemes. I feel that it is important that we have a universal scheme for all public servants. That makes it fairer for all who are members of the scheme.

I acknowledge the work of public servants today who help to keep Northern Ireland moving, all of whom provide the general public with an excellent and fair service. I want to specifically mention staff at the DVLA office in Coleraine, based in my constituency, who work hard on behalf of the people of the United Kingdom, especially in ensuring fairness and efficiency in service provision.

Amendment No 13 will ensure that the relevant stakeholders are consulted on valuations. Amendment No 14 is a technical consequence of that. I think that that is positive and welcome.

Amendment No 15 similarly requires consultation with relevant stakeholders on the direction of cost cap regulations before being made. Amendment No 17 is a mere technical change, correcting an error in the Bill, which I, of course, support.

Amendment No 18 will provide for the appropriate transitional protections that are given in the new Civil Service scheme, where members transfer into the new scheme from another public body scheme. Amendment Nos 19 and 20 are a technical consequence of that.

These amendments, which I support, will allow for universal access to a single scheme and ensure that no one is less well off as a result of the change.

I oppose amendment No 21 on the grounds that I do not feel that the measures that it proposes, which are the need for all changes to be subject to the voting procedures of the House, are necessary. Any major measures that are proposed in the scheme regulations will, in line with normal practice, be subject to the approval of the House regardless. The clause, as it stands, is normal practice and allows for operational efficiency.

Therefore, I am generally supportive of the amendments in the group, with the exception of amendment No 21. I am content to allow them to pass at this stage with my support.

We have no objection to the other amendments in the group, namely amendment Nos 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19 and 20, and we are prepared to support them as well.

Amendment No 21 is an important amendment. We believe that it increases the accountability that is afforded to the Assembly on these issues. It is important, given that the changes affect the pensions of huge numbers of public servants, that we have the maximum possible accountability. We believe that the power lies fundamentally with the citizen, and it is important that our citizens have the power to change governments and to hold Ministers fully to account. We cannot simply provide the Department with the power through the Bill to make regulations forever more without direct recourse to the Assembly.

Legislating for the use of affirmative procedure only is an important action, and I believe that it brings greater transparency to the process. We discussed these arguments previously. I outlined the salutary experience of the London coalition Government already renegeing on the 25-year guarantee to public sector workers on pensions. That sounds a note of caution to us all.

That is why we are proposing that future regulations under the Bill, which will have a major impact on so many people, be subject to affirmative procedure, which we believe is the strongest possible measure in the Assembly in these circumstances to hold the Department to account.

Mr Cree: I will be brief. Amendment No 13, which relates to clause 11 was tabled by the Minister of Finance and Personnel and clarifies the position on the Department's requirement to consult with those who may be affected by directions, and is an improvement. Amendment Nos 14, 15, 17, 18, 19 and 20 have been submitted by the Minister to improve the Bill and should be supported. The purpose of the final amendment, amendment No 21 from the SDLP, as we have just heard, appears to limit scheme regulations that are subject to affirmative procedure. I cannot support that.

Mr Hamilton: He was, indeed, brief. He is a man of his word. Thank you, Mr Speaker, for the opportunity to make a winding-up speech on the debate on the amendments in group 3. In the interests of time and brevity, which others have stuck to, I will not speak in detail again on the amendments that I am bringing forward.

I note that there is general acceptance of these amendments, with one notable exception. I, therefore, ask Members to support amendment Nos 13 and 14, which relate to clause 11. They will have the effect of strengthening the requirement to consult on valuations. Likewise, amendment No 15 strengthens the requirement to consult on the provisions of clause 12, which deals with the employer cost cap. Amendment No 17 inserts the letter “a” to correct a minor drafting error in clause 14. Amendment Nos 18, 19 and 20 relate to clause 18 and provide for transitional protection to be extended to those who are eligible to join the Civil Service pension scheme.

I ask Members to oppose amendment No 21, which has been tabled in respect of clause 24. Clause 24 deals with the legislative procedure for making secondary legislation for public service pension schemes, as stated earlier at some length. We have already debated the issue, so suffice it to say that negative resolution is entirely appropriate to deal with making regulations in general and provides the opportunity for the Assembly to debate scheme changes where it determines that it is appropriate.

Adjournment

Downe Hospital: Emergency Department Weekend Provision

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The proposer of the topic will have 15 minutes, and all other Members who speak will have approximately five minutes.

Mr Rogers: I thank the Business Office for permitting me to table this topic for the Adjournment debate tonight. I welcome all those who have travelled here for this very important debate. Minister, I hope that you get a sense of how critical the restoration of 24/7 A&E provision at the Downe Hospital is to the people of south Down. I apologise for my colleague John McCallister, who cannot be here because of family commitments. He is fully supportive of the debate.

I praise the tireless work of the front line healthcare staff. Without their dedication and professionalism, this critical situation could be much worse. It was a true testimony to its staff that our hospital campaigner and former MP, Eddie McGrady, decided to spend the last days of his life in the care of the Downe. Eddie, I know you are with us in spirit tonight.

Patients deserve better, but the whole community in south Down deserves better from the trust.

I also share the concerns of many that services are being disrupted at Lagan Valley Hospital, even services beyond A&E such as radiology.

The people of Down and Mourne worked hard to secure a hospital. There has been a hospital in the area for the past 300 years. It is a major economic driver, attracting many families who have settled locally.

The community feels vulnerable, isolated and worried. Despite a new state-of-the-art building, we have wards that have not been commissioned. The Downe Hospital has borne its fair share of cuts. Each cut happens because of a situation that has arisen. This situation has been allowed to happen by the trust. The trust instigates the action, and the community feels the pain. It is a vicious circle, and the Downe Hospital does not have a chance.

If you remove services from a hospital, there is less need for skilled intervention. That results in the university reducing the hospital's status as a teaching hospital, which affects the ability to attract staff.

I commend the local GPs who, up until two weeks ago, manned the A&E at night. Why has that been pulled?

The pressure on ambulance cover is horrendous. The idea of an extra ambulance is very misleading: after its first trip to Belfast, it is called into service to meet the needs of the wider Belfast area and is lost to Downpatrick and south Down. How long must the people of the Downpatrick area have to wait on a 999 ambulance? Whether it comes from Kilkeel, Newry or Bangor, it takes 45 minutes to arrive, and it takes another hour to get to an emergency unit. What about the golden hour? That is the window of opportunity in which medical intervention can save life or significantly increase the chance of a full recovery.

I will tell you the story of a colleague's father. He was playing golf in Ardglass in the summer and had a stroke. He called 999, was admitted to the Downe and got his care. He is as fit as a fiddle today with no after effects.

Where does this decision sit with Government policy? The promises of Transforming Your Care ring very hollow with the people of Downpatrick and the surrounding areas. The document talks about building:

"a system of health and social care which would place the individual, family and community that use it at the heart of how things are done."

It refers to:

"planned change ... that can ... improve care"

and states:

"the professionals providing health and social care services will be required to work together in a much more integrated way to plan and deliver consistently high quality care for patients".

Minister, you endorsed Transforming Your Care. When are you going to sort this out?

Where does this situation sit with the recommendations in DARD's rural White Paper, particularly with respect to access to services in rural areas? Research shows that the timeliness of an accident and emergency response is critical to the survival of the patient. Trauma patients in rural areas have a greater likelihood of needing advanced care and less likelihood of receiving it.

The unique geography and roads infrastructure of the area must be taken into consideration. You know it is not BT1. You cannot compare south Down to other areas. You cannot compare driving 35 miles on a rural road with 35 miles of motorway driving. It can take one hour to get from Ardglass to here, and, in weather like this, it can take even longer. There is not one mile of dual carriageway. Without an A&E unit in Downpatrick, if there is a major trauma incident in the district, it could take an ambulance over an hour to arrive at a Belfast hospital, even if it were to arrive promptly.

During the winter period, if a major incident happens in the Mourne or in Down district, Daisy Hill or Craigavon hospitals might not be options, and we do not have an air ambulance. Senior trust officials did not see the big issue about closing at the weekend, but the likelihood of needing accident and emergency cover increases at the weekend. For example, the increased number of visitors on the narrow country roads increases the likelihood of accidents. When you look at the occurrence of major road traffic accidents, the overwhelming majority are on rural roads. In sporting events, for example, there are over 1,000 young players involved in the Newcastle and Downpatrick league and a similar number are involved in GAA activities. There are thousands on the mountains and hundreds involved in local running clubs, numerous cycling events and at Downpatrick race meetings. It is vital that people, locals and visitors, can rely on accessible local services at the point of delivery.

Any potential or partial closure, or watering down of A&E services at Downe Hospital will no doubt pressurise other A&E departments across the North. That was exemplified by the chaos that we witnessed at the Royal Victoria Hospital (RVH) in Belfast on the evening of Wednesday 8 January, where staff came under enormous pressure. The SDLP previously warned of such outcomes if A&E services were stripped. It also has an effect on other hospital services and that is exemplified by constituents' emails. Not only is A&E affected, but it has that knock-on effect. Let me quote from an email:

"I was recently scheduled for a tonsillectomy, in the RVH. Due to the closure of Downe & Lagan Valley a&e's, the RVH had no bed for me and the operation has to be rescheduled. Myself & my mother had both taken time off work, meaning we both have lost earnings."

And so on.

Then we come to consultation. There has been no consultation, either with staff, unions, the community, or politicians. We were all kept in the dark. In fact, it looks as though the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust was also kept in the dark. For example, take the agenda of the trust's board meeting of Wednesday 28 November 2013. We knew that problems were there long before that date, but there is no sign of any mention of the major crisis in getting staff for Downe Hospital. It is not in that. Was it buried in "Any Other Business"? Was it discussed? Minister, I would like to know, when you respond to the debate, when you knew about it.

With respect to staffing, we have been told that this is not a money issue. Minister, you reminded us of this yesterday. It is because middle-grade doctors cannot be secured. We are told that doctors do not want to travel to Downpatrick. What type of contracts does the trust give these doctors? I can only compare it to my background in education. It is like appointing a senior staff member to the Southern Regional College (SRC) in Lisburn, and then them telling you, "I do not want to go to SRC in Downpatrick". What type of leadership or planning allows this to happen? Yesterday, Minister, you told us that hospitals in England also have this problem. Minister, your job is to sort this out in Northern Ireland. Last year, you intervened in the residential home debacle. I ask you now to intervene to ensure that Downe's accident and emergency services are restored to 24/7 operation. Mr McCaughey avoided one of my questions at Down District Council before Christmas when he was asked how often those posts had been advertised in national and international medical journals. Between 2008 and 2010, they were advertised twice, once before one of my colleagues asked an FOI and once after.

When asked how many applicants answered the last ad, I was told that there were three, but that two were from outside the UK. If there is a will to appoint middle-grade doctors, there is a way to get them. If they are from outside the UK, I am sure that those applications need some level of upskilling, which I am sure that Queen's University medical school could facilitate. Have you, as Minister, as well as the trust, sat down with Queen's medical school to discuss issues such as the upskilling of doctors who have not been trained under the NHS? Have you investigated how our young doctors can be encouraged to take up positions in A&E medicine? Many medics do not believe that doctors cannot be secured in post. In fact, many in the community believe that very few will turn down over £100,000 a year.

When one looks at how Downe has been treated over the years, the only conclusion that one can arrive at is that the decline of Downe is the only thing that the trust is strategically managing, rather than the provision of a state-of-the-art health service for the people of south Down.

I will look at some statistics from the 'Northern Ireland Hospital Statistics: Emergency Care (2012/13)' report. Minister, before I do that, I will say that I hope that you never need A&E services. I did. You talk about a time of 12 hours. However, that does not include the time from the incident occurring until you get to A&E. I will take just one or two statistics.

Table 5 in the statistics, entitled 'Waiting times of new and unplanned review attendances at emergency care departments', shows waiting times of over 12 hours by trust areas. At the Ulster Hospital, the figure was 2.5% of people, which resulted in 3,297 people having to wait for over 12 hours. At Downe, the figure was 0.8%, which equates to 165 people having to wait for more than 12 hours.

Table 9 of the same document looks at the number of people seen within four hours. Dundonald has 73% seen within three hours and Downe has 87%. It does not exactly give us confidence in an alternative when Downe is not open.

Mr McCaughey tells us that the Ulster is a South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust hospital, but 41% of his patients come from the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust. So, who pays for that? Is that Belfast or is it out of the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust budget?

I ask you, Minister, to ensure that the trust meeting of 29 January is moved to Downpatrick to allow the trust to get a feel for the level of concern in the area. Minister, do you support that call?

I will refer to one or two of your comments from yesterday. In answer to a question from Mr McCallister, you said:

"I am very, very clear on the issue that the South Eastern Trust needs to ensure 24/7 access to the Lagan Valley and Downe hospitals because I believe that it is in the best interests of the public." — [Official Report, Bound Volume 90, p279, col 1].

Minister, we are not talking about the hospital door being open 24/7; we are talking about accident and emergency being available 24/7.

You must intervene and put in place an effective strategy that deals with the demand for A&E services. Hospital units cannot be stretched to breaking point. We need democracy returned to the health service and engagement with the public. We need services at the Downe extended, not reduced. You need to find a solution for medical understaffing to ensure high-quality and speedy services for rural communities and the people of Belfast.

The staff must be found to allow accident and emergency units to operate effectively in the best interest of patients across this region. Minister, this is a matter of life and death.

Mr Wells: When I was first elected to this House in October 1982, I found that the first item of importance in my in tray was Downe Hospital. Here we are, 32 years later, and what is the most important item in the in tray? The Downe Hospital. It has been a long saga, and you could cover several football pitches with the headlines of crises appearing in that area. All of us welcomed the provision of an excellent new hospital facility for Downpatrick, but, even on the day the hospital opened, there was a crisis about services being provided, and, unfortunately, ever since, there have been further crises.

8.30 pm

I attended a special meeting of Down District Council, which had to be held on 23 December, and I cannot help but think of the phrase used at 9/11 that it was a good time to bury bad news, because it is quite apparent that the crisis was looming since at least June 2013, yet the announcement was made literally in the mouth of Christmas.

I congratulate Down council for having the initiative to call an emergency meeting at a terribly difficult time of the year. I used the analogy at that meeting, and I will repeat it again: this is an essential service in the same way as policing is an essential service. Can you imagine the situation where a sergeant, who is a middle-grade officer, in Bangor is told by the Chief Constable, "We need you in Downpatrick", and that sergeant says, "No, I am not going because I get a much wider breadth of criminal in north Down to hone my skills on than I get in Downpatrick. I get the full range. I get middle-class crime, I get upper-class crime and I get drugs. I would not get that full range of criminals in Downpatrick. Therefore, my skill level will be depressed". That would never be permitted. The sergeant would be told, "I am sorry; you are needed in Downpatrick, and you are going, full stop. No questions asked". Yet, we have the situation in Northern Ireland in which the British Medical Association (BMA) tail wags the national health dog. The BMA dictates and decides where its staff are going to go.

The outcome of that, unfortunately, is that middle-grade doctors and consultants gravitate towards the big hospitals in the greater Belfast area. That is inevitable, if we allow it to happen. The fundamental reason why we are in this particular predicament is simply that doctors who are needed in Downpatrick are refusing to go there. I believe that powers need to be given to the Department to say to doctors, "You are needed there, and you will go". The inevitable outcome of what is happening in Northern Ireland at the moment is that we could be left with four or five A&E hospitals simply because we cannot attract the staff that we need to man or "woman" — because it is becoming a very feminised workforce — hospitals.

I listened with great interest to Hugh McCaughey and Seamus McGoran at that meeting, and I have to say that I accepted their argument that they were having enormous difficulty in attracting the staff required to man the A&E in Downpatrick. Clearly, they had made efforts. Mr Rogers will say that they did not make enough effort, but it was quite clear that they were having real problems. Indeed, if they had not taken the decision, albeit in the mouth of Christmas, they may well have had to have the emergency situation of closing down the A&E. Until they have the power and control to ensure that staff are moved to Downpatrick to carry out the essential service, we will continue to be in this situation.

The situation is not unique to Downpatrick; it is also very evident in Lagan Valley, where there has been a problem attracting middle-grade staff, and in all the hospitals in Northern Ireland outside the big four or five.

Mr Givan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Wells: I certainly will.

Mr Givan: I appreciate the Member mentioning Lagan Valley. I want to show my support to the people in South Down because we face the same issues. In Lagan Valley, the trust has been saying that it will deliver 24/7 front door access to an emergency department. Two years later, it has failed to do so, and local political confidence in the trust and in its management to achieve that is at an all-time low. While the Minister wants 24/7 access, local confidence in the trust to deliver that is at an all-time low. At what point will the Minister lose confidence in the trust's ability to do what he wants for the people of South Down and Lagan Valley, and what action will he take?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Wells: When the Minister was made aware of this, he also indicated his great concerns about what was going on and is determined to try and address the issue. It is unfair to blame the Department or the Minister, because they are on the same side as the local community. We have a really difficult problem here. It intrigues me that if we cannot even get staff to go to Lisburn, which is literally 10 minutes down the motorway from the Royal or the City, we can see why we are having difficulties getting them to go to places such as Craigavon, Downpatrick or Enniskillen. We simply cannot allow that situation to continue. The Department needs to see what powers it can gain to take control of the situation and to ensure that the number of staff required are available to meet the need. Otherwise, we will be in the very undesirable situation of making these mad dashes late at night to the Ulster Hospital, Belfast City Hospital or the Royal.

What has made this problem more difficult is that, since the announcement was made, there have been real question marks over the capacity of the Belfast-based hospitals to take the extra demand imposed upon them by these decisions. We had the situation only the other day of the Minister again having to intervene quickly because the Royal was showing considerable stress, and we are aware of the 12-hour waiting situation in the Ulster Hospital. If those hospitals had large enough capacity to take the extra patients, I would feel more confident. However, all the evidence indicates that that cannot happen; therefore, we need to start moving staff to where they are needed.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call Mr Chris Hazzard, and I just point out that you should point your microphone towards yourself.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank my colleague Sean Rogers and extend a further word of thanks to all public, elected and trade union representatives and to the local community health committee members, who have remained unbowed and unbroken for decades in their campaign for local services for local people. I especially thank the people of the wider south Down community, who, through no fault of their own, face yet another cut to their local hospital. This time, it is a severe and unwarranted cut to their 24-hour A&E services; a cut that is not dictated by finances, best clinical practice or a lack of local uptake of services but is the result of the failure of the South Eastern Trust and the Health Minister, Edwin Poots, to successfully secure the staff required for a 24-hour A&E facility.

A community health nurse put it quite succinctly to me this morning: the failings of the Minister and his officials to successfully implement appropriate workforce planning has resulted in severe consequences, not for the culprits but the community — the people of south Down. To repeat what I said to the media last week: if the Minister and his officials do not get a grip on this crisis, we are likely to see fatal consequences. I have no doubt that people's lives are being threatened by these cuts. Only two years ago, an elderly patient died while waiting for a trolley at an emergency department. That was followed, six months later, by the death of a patient waiting for a bed in a similar emergency department. This is not propaganda or political fiction; these are the facts of the matter. They are the severe consequences of a health crisis and a Minister who appears totally incapable of implementing the reform required to sustain vital health services for local rural communities such as that of south Down.

We are told that an unfortunate shortage of emergency doctors leaves the trust with no choice. We can choose to believe that, but the people of south Down do not. The question for the Minister and for the trust is this: why is there a shortage and what is being done? Mr Wells recognised that this is an obviously difficult situation, and, to a certain extent, it is. However, the last recruitment advertisement went out in June last year. If this is such a crisis, what happened between June and Christmas to remedy the situation? Also, recruitment experts in this field have contacted the campaign team to let it know that this problem can be sorted within two years and the supposed staffing shortage addressed far quicker than that.

I also want to know what negotiations or discussions the Minister has had with the Minister for Employment and Learning to talk about whether something can be put in place where, as these medical doctors are trained, they do a certain number of years in rural constituencies such as South Down. That happens in Canada, elsewhere in Europe and in Asia. Why can it not happen in the North of Ireland? One of the main reasons why it cannot happen is because there is a political leadership vacuum in the Health Department. Given the vacuum of effective leadership and strategic planning on the part of the Minister and the trust, we are witnessing the insidious whims of consultants and doctors who dictate the parameters of their employment at the expense of people in south Down. Doctors and consultants are instructing the trust where and when they will work. It is an absolute disgrace and a damning indictment of those who prefer not to stray too far from the leafy suburbs of Belfast and north Down.

As Jim Wells outlined, can you seriously imagine members of the PSNI, Fire Service or any other vital service dictating to their management where and when they will work? It is absolute and pure madness, and the Minister and his officials must find ways to smash the cosy consensus that has developed with the BMA, again, at the expense of the south Down community, which is expected to suffer the consequences and travel to Belfast to access these vital services. There is also a question for the Minister here: why are the people of south Down expected to be mobile but the doctors and consultants are not? Unlike most other counties in the North, south Down does not have one inch of carriageway or a single stretch of motorway. Those who expect residents in rural areas of Lecale or east of the Mourne to travel to Belfast are simply not living in the real world. It is not plausible, and it is not fair. The notion of fairness is key. Where is the equality for rural communities in this decision? Who in the trust or the Department put themselves in the shoes of the elderly lady in south Down who, last week, sat through the night in her home with life-threatening chest pains so that she could attend her local A&E when the sun rose in the morning? Again, Minister, this is the clear and present danger of your failing to tackle this crisis. It is not propaganda or fiction but the harsh reality of ineffective leadership at the very top of the Department of Health.

Another aspect of this debacle is the ongoing shortage of ambulance cover. That was demonstrated at its very worst on Boxing night when an elderly woman was forced to wait four hours for an ambulance in Castlewellan: not good enough. So, not only faced with the closure of A&E facilities at the Downe —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Hazzard: — local people are being asked to put up with abject ambulance cover. It is simply not good enough and something else that the Minister needs to address, and address quickly. If you are not able to do this, Minister, you need to seriously consider whether you are fit for the job. [Interruption.]

Mrs Dobson: I, too, thank Mr Rogers for bringing forward this Adjournment debate. As we know, the Downe Hospital is over 40 minutes from Belfast and serves a large rural population. The news just before Christmas that services are to be reduced will have come as a bitter blow to the area. Although not everyone can have a hospital on their doorstep, everyone should have confidence that, if they ever need emergency medical assistance, it will be there for them within a reasonable distance. That confidence has been severely damaged. The people of south Down are, therefore, justifiably angry at this decision. They are even more so given that the decision is centred around the availability of doctors and not the safety of the service.

From the very outset, let me say that I fully accept that A&E should only ever operate if they have enough staff and resources to do so in a safe and responsible manner. However, it is deeply regrettable that, once again, we have found ourselves in a position where the loss of a small number of critical staff, as was seen in November when two A&E doctors in the Downe left, virtually cripples the future delivery of these services. I ask the Minister to clarify what exactly happens when potential staff shortages are identified. Can he tell us whether he believes that absolutely everything that can be done in the intervening period is done and, in this case, was done? Does he believe that the management of the hospital and the trust did absolutely everything that they could to redress this staffing issue?

It just baffles me to see that so many hospitals, such as the Downe, Lagan Valley and Belfast City, are so often at the apparent will and instability of changing staffing patterns. I fully recognise that recruiting and retaining middle-grade doctors in A&E departments is difficult, but although we know the problem, I would ask the Minister to detail what specific action he has taken to address it since taking office. I just have an inherent suspicion about the reduction of services in the Downe, even if the Minister or the trust try to claim that it will only be temporary. We need to remember that that is what they said regarding Lagan Valley when it had its services reduced to daytime and weekends only in the summer of 2011. Of course we know that, instead of reinstating full service, the trust and the Minister have continued to reduce it. I fear that these staffing concerns and so-called temporary reductions are an attempt at creeping towards closure through stealth.

To give one example, on 20 July 2011, Edwin Poots said that he wanted major structural changes to the strategic delivery of A&E services within Belfast. Within months, it was announced that the A&E unit in the Belfast City Hospital was closing temporarily and, just like the Downe, staffing concerns were conveniently cited. Of course, it was later to close for good. So, Minister, I am asking you openly: what does the future hold for Downe in the short, medium and long term? Can you give a commitment that you will do everything in your power to seek the reinstatement of a full service? With Transforming Your Care slowly stumbling along and draining more and more resources wherever it can, not least in the monitoring rounds, the future of acute services provision is still under great uncertainty, but so-called staffing issues should not determine the future provision of A&Es.

8.45 pm

In conclusion, I call on the Minister to be honest about the future of the Downe Hospital. If, as he says, the decision was taken solely on staffing grounds, I would call on him to do everything in his power to find a resolution. But, if there are any other reasons behind these reduced services, I would call on him and the trust to stop hiding behind excuses and be honest about it. The people of south Down certainly deserve no less.

Ms Ruane: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I commend Sean Rogers and all the Members who have spoken about this essential service for south Down. The removal of it places a huge strain on the community and creates risk to lives in Downpatrick and the surrounding areas.

People have talked about the poor road network and the long distances. It simply is not good enough that this Minister is trying to centralise services into an already busy Belfast A&E. That is what is happening here. No matter what way you try to look at it, that is what is happening here. The exact opposite should be happening. There should be strategic thinking in the way we place our hospitals network. Daisy Hill, the Downe, Craigavon and all the hospitals need to get the proper support that they deserve rather than this myopic thinking that you bring everything into cities and leave rural communities without the services that they need and deserve.

What we have got are excuses, and the excuses change all the time. Jim Wells talked about being involved in the campaign. We have all heard the excuses. The first excuse is, "Oh, they are not getting enough people to it". Why were they not getting enough people? Where were ambulances being told to go? There was a deliberate attempt to downgrade the Downe Hospital. That is what happened here.

The next excuse we hear is, "Oh, we cannot get doctors". I am sorry, but that is simply not a good enough excuse. If the Minister is doing his job properly, he will get the doctors, he will take on the vested interests. We had meetings with the Minister months ago about the issue. We advised him to look at the contracts. Did he listen? Has anything been done? No. And if it has, I would love to hear what he has done about contracts, because the points made by Members who spoke previously about what you write into people's contracts are correct. You cannot have someone picking and choosing where they go and saying, "I will not go to Downpatrick; I will go to Belfast" or saying, "I will go to Lisburn, but I will not go to Ardglass". It is absolutely ridiculous. This is not the way to build a health service, an education service or any service. Can you imagine if John O'Dowd in the Department of Education said, "I cannot find the principals, so we will bus everyone into Belfast"? Or can you imagine if Michelle O'Neill in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development said, "Vets are busy people; bring all the animals by truck into Belfast"? Can you imagine? It is nonsense.

This is not the way to build our public services, and we need clear, strategic thinking without a fear of taking on the vested interests, and that is the problem here. The Minister is afraid to take them on. He is being led by the nose, and that should not be happening. That might have happened under direct rule, but it should not be happening under devolved government. We were brought here to bring about changes and take on vested interests. I was happy to take them on in education, and my colleague John O'Dowd is happy to take them on and take whatever flak there is about that because that is the job of work that needs to be done. We were proud to do that.

This Minister has big choices to make. We do not want excuses. How hard have we really tried to get doctors? I am sorry, but the people of the area do not believe that excuse. I was in Castlewellan the other day, and that is what they were saying. I was in Downpatrick a few weeks ago, and that is what they were saying. So, Minister, the report card says, "Must do better". We want to see your plan of action to get this A&E open.

The Downe Hospital is a beautiful hospital. It is there because of a courageous decision taken many years ago by Bairbre de Brún when others in the Department would have preferred that the Downe was not built. She set it in train, and she took the courageous decisions, and that is why, along with all the lobbying from all the different parties, we have that beautiful hospital. Do not disappoint the people of south Down. You have squandered public money, denying equality to the gay and lesbian community. You are happy to do that, yet you will not put the money where it needs to go.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mrs McKeivitt: I also thank Sean Rogers, my party colleague, for tabling this Adjournment topic and enabling us to debate an issue that, as we have heard from all the contributors, is of great importance to the people of Down and the wider local area.

Over the past number of years, we have all heard worrying reports about staff shortages in our hospitals, overworked nurses and doctors and longer waiting times for patients. I recognise that the current Health Minister has taken certain steps in an attempt to address those reports, but I do not believe that closing A&E units is the way to deal with staff shortages. Undoubtedly, the closure of an A&E department would put the remaining accident and emergency departments under immense pressure, which is evidenced by the recent crisis in the Royal's accident and emergency department.

The public are deeply concerned. The people of south Down have been told that their local A&E will be closed during the weekend periods and that they will have to attend alternative accident and emergency departments. They then read in the newspapers that those other accident and emergency departments are oversubscribed and that there is a backlog of patients, as was the case on Wednesday 8 January, when a major incident was declared at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

We need to take action to restore public confidence. The reason given for the closure of the A&E departments at the Downe Hospital and Lagan Valley Hospital at the weekends is a lack of middle-grade doctors. Patient safety must be a priority when making decisions regarding healthcare provision, but the safety of patients from the Down area has been put in jeopardy by this decision. The Minister must look at ways to attract middle-grade doctors to the A&E departments.

Since being elected as a public representative, I have fervently campaigned for the provision of automated external defibrillators (AEDs) in sporting clubs, schools and public buildings. Sudden cardiac arrest can happen to absolutely anyone at any time, regardless of their age, gender or creed, and survival rates are increased where there is access to AEDs and the emergency services. Time is everything; it is a numbers game, and the Minister and the Health and Social Care Board are playing fast and loose with lives. God help the patients who have a heart attack or a stroke on a Friday, a Saturday or a Sunday.

The bottom line is that Downe Hospital needs an A&E open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. I implore the Health Minister to explore every option to reopen this life-saving service during the weekend period. The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust should not be allowed to let staffing situations arise that put lives at risk when they are in the business of saving lives. Minister, you should not accept the argument of staff shortages as an excuse. You should challenge the trust, get the cover and reinstate the A&E for the people of south Down and Lagan Valley. If you do not, Minister, mistakes will, potentially, be buried in the graveyard. [Interruption.]

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: It is very important that the people in the Public Gallery listen to the contributions, including that of the Minister. This is your Assembly and your representatives are doing their business. Please give them the courtesy to hear the contributions and the responses. Thank you.

Mr McKinney: As the SDLP's health spokesperson, I welcome the opportunity to speak on this topic. There are few issues that provoke as much passion as those around health provision. We all, and I include the Minister in this, want to see a health service that best provides for our people. The SDLP is proud that its policy is health provided free at the point of need, consistent with the founding principles of the NHS. Where we and the Minister disagree is on the best way forward.

I take the passion and the anger as read. We can see the commitment from the people in the south Down area who have travelled tonight to listen to the debate. I share my colleagues' view that those people feel vulnerable and worried, and they are right to feel so. What we need to do is focus on the decision-making process that has led to what those people find wrong and that has impacted so negatively elsewhere.

Let us look first at the history of how we got here. We cannot ignore the long and deep cuts in the health service. We also cannot ignore the cutbacks that have continued at Downe Hospital. They too have been long and deep and have done enormous harm in undermining confidence. The reductions in service had an impact long before the doctor shortage. In fact, some people might say that they helped contribute to it. What ambitious young doctor wants to work in a part-time A&E? He or she would want to be part of an active, learning-focused emergency department.

Yesterday, we listened to the Minister blame a shortage of doctors. He said that he cannot ignore a trust when it comes to him on the basis that it cannot find doctors and, therefore, cannot provide a safe service. That, to the SDLP, is a crisis. It is a crisis for Downe and Lagan Valley and, in our view, it has also helped to provoke further crises at emergency departments elsewhere. We believe that there has been an impact. Up to 60 people who attended the Royal last week during the major incident process were from areas other than greater Belfast. So cuts, closures and reduced public confidence converged and put pressure on Belfast.

There may be a strategic decision to compensate for the shortage of doctors, but the people of south Down are right to say that that decision does not appropriately provide for them in rural areas and may in fact be contrary to other strategic decisions around emergency health service provision. So we and the public are right to ask how those decisions are actually taken. For example, did the trust take the decision and then inform the Minister that it could not run a safe service? We understand that extra resources were offered to other trusts to compensate, but could extra ideas have been brought to the table? We are right to ask what further actions other than closure could be considered. My colleagues have alluded to those.

The Minister and the Department are keen to deny that there is a crisis, and they point to lots of statistics about how people were treated within certain time frames. That is a process argument and it does not restore confidence. What that says to us is that we managed within a crisis, not that there was not or is not one. We heard lots of blame shared out yesterday. The media, politicians and even the public themselves were blamed. What the public in south Down and those negatively impacted elsewhere need to see is a proper strategic approach to the problem. That will restore confidence.

Yesterday the Minister hit us with a headline about regular attenders. Those substantial figures have built up over a year and, I assume, have taken place at similar levels in other years. What was done to manage those situations over that time? Meanwhile, the Health Committee has tried to get to the bottom of consultant-led cancellations of appointments. They run to tens of thousands, but there has been no in-depth analysis of what is happening. How can you manage a situation that you do not understand?

We are all familiar with lengthy GP waiting lists. Are they impacting on the extent to which people are turning up at A&E? Are people using A&Es as doctors' surgeries? We have also known about doctor shortages for a long time. What has been done at board and ministerial level to sort that problem out? We actually got a worrying answer in Westminster today in response to a question from South Down MP Margaret Ritchie. There have been no talks between the Northern Ireland Minister and the UK Government about those issues, yet we hear that it is a UK-wide problem. There have been no requests from you, Minister, to the UK Minister.

If the problem is UK-wide, should we not at least think about talking about UK discussions and solutions?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr McKinney: In short, the public need an answer on what is being done to stop crisis management.

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): I thank Mr Rogers for bringing the debate to the House. I think it is useful that we have it. I also think that it is useful that we operate on the basis of facts and information, as opposed to disinformation and attempts to mislead people one way or the other.

9.00 pm

Some people have decided to go down a course of trying to politicise this matter tonight. I will not respond in kind, because I do not think that that would add value to the debate. I certainly want to have the best possible care available right across Northern Ireland, including for people who are living in the south Down area and those who are cared for in the Downe Hospital. I was deeply and profoundly disappointed when I received the news that there was a proposal to close the facility at weekends. That was not something that I supported, and I have made that very clear to the trust's chiefs. It is something that I wish that they would turn around, and I have made it very clear to them that I have an expectation that they will turn it around.

Those people who wish to target me politically on the matter are barking up the wrong tree. That is because I actually support the service in the Downe Hospital being open at the weekend. I do not support its closure. Nonetheless, I understand the reason for its closure, and people do have to make decisions that are based on safety. They cannot service an area if they are going to do it in an unsafe way; that would be irresponsible.

Shortly before Christmas, I was advised that the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, in the light of severe staffing difficulties, would not be able to continue with the current emergency department opening hours at the Downe Hospital. The trust advised that the situation had worsened over the previous six weeks, due to the departure of two specialist doctors and a worsening position on locum recruitment. It was only the goodwill of existing staff, who came forward to cover vacant shifts at short notice, that prevented unexpected closures over that period or, indeed, at an earlier point. For the previous six weeks, the trust had been reliant on seven of its 11 emergency department (ED) consultants covering vacant shifts. That was not a sustainable position, and it could not continue. I accept that that was the case. The trust had 15 shifts to cover in December 2013, with approximately 70 shifts to cover in January 2014 across the Lagan Valley and Downe sites. The trust stated that it had major difficulties securing locum cover and did not believe that that would improve in the immediate future.

I note that Mr Hazzard said that someone could sort it out in two years. I am very keen to hear that proposal and about how someone could help us to achieve that situation. I hope that it could be done much more quickly than that, if possible.

The position in December 2013 was that the Downe Hospital emergency department had been reliant on locums to cover 50% of shifts. It had been experiencing increasing difficulty in securing the necessary cover. The current staffing position at the hospital is that there are 3.73 whole-time equivalent permanent middle-grade doctors in post. The Downe Hospital emergency department is not recognised for junior doctor training, so it cannot rely on that support.

The minimum staffing that is required to maintain the service between 8.00 am and 10.00 pm, seven days a week, is eight middle-grade doctors to deliver a rota of one in four. However, recruitment agencies are reporting a substantial shortage of suitably qualified locums, and all trusts are experiencing difficulty with covering vacant shifts. It had become a weekly occurrence that trusts were struggling to ensure that they had weekend cover, and they were reliant on consultants to cover the shortfall. As a result, the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, in considering a series of options for addressing service provision in the Downe Hospital ED, opted for restricted hours from 8.00 am to 8.00 pm, Monday to Friday, and for closure at weekends. On Monday 23 December, the trust issued a public statement advising that, from the weekend commencing Saturday 4 January, hours of operation would be reduced accordingly.

It is important that we make ourselves aware of the efforts that have been made in recruitment. Although they have not been successful, efforts have certainly been made. Specifically, the trust trawled more than 30 agencies, locally and nationally, for short-term and long-term locum staff. It used job finder agencies to source suitably qualified staff with the correct skills. It maintains links with emergency care consultants throughout the Province to ascertain whether any suitably qualified staff are available. As well as that, the trust used conventional recruitment methods by placing advertisements in the local press, which proved to be the most unsuccessful method of recruitment for this staff group. In addition to the standard recruitment processes, the trust entered into a regional agreement in an attempt to attract staff from eastern European countries. In 2011, the trust interviewed staff in Romania and London for emergency department posts. No appointments were made, because the standard of applicants was deemed to be not of the appropriate level for emergency medicine.

The trust also set up a contract with a Dublin-based recruitment agency in an attempt to attract international junior doctor training posts and, again, no recruitment was possible. The trust also worked with European agencies to recruit staff and, after a trial period, secured a specialty doctor from the Czech Republic who worked in the Downe Hospital for one year. We understand that, in the most recent recruitment exercise in July 2013, the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust had nine vacancies that were advertised for middle-grade doctors across the three emergency departments. Only three applications were received for all of the nine posts, and they were all applications for the Ulster Hospital. The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust was only able to fill two of the posts, and both people were candidates who had previously worked in the Ulster Hospital as locums.

Members have said that there has not been an effort made and that more needs to be done, but this is a demonstration that considerable effort has been made and that we are dealing with a problem in emergency departments that exists across the UK and, indeed, in Ireland in recruiting emergency doctors and practitioners for our emergency departments.

We must recognise the facts of how we got here. There have been no cuts in money; let us nail that particular lie. This is not to do with finances; it is about having doctors to man the facilities. If I get the doctors, that facility can be open this weekend. That is a commitment that I am very happy to make; but, at this time, we are finding it challenging to get doctors.

In the meantime, I have asked that a number of steps be taken. First, all appropriate and feasible steps should be taken to ensure that the consequences of these changes are managed in a way that minimises the risk of unmanageable pressures on emergency departments at the Ulster, Royal Victoria and other affected hospitals. I recognised that as soon as the trust came to me with this as a potential problem. We are taking these steps so that patient safety and the quality of the patient experience is not compromised. The trust and the HSC Board have assured me that the number of attendances and admissions likely to arise at other sites will be manageable; and, as I have already said, the contingency arrangements appear to have been working over the weekend, although the Royal did hit particular problems in the middle of last week, and I think that we need to recognise that.

Secondly, I have asked the HSC Board and the trust to accelerate the work to develop and implement the new model of care at Lagan Valley Hospital that will enable many of the people affected by the changes to resume receiving services locally in the short term. Alongside that, work to sustain the model of care in place at the Downe will be no less important.

Thirdly, I have asked that fresh efforts be made to secure medical staffing for both sites. Fourthly, I have required that the HSC Board and the South Eastern Trust bring forward a detailed plan for the future of the Downe and Lagan Valley hospitals, with an implementation plan, to secure confidence in the community that the best possible steps are being taken.

I recognise that confidence has been damaged and diminished in local communities and, indeed, with local representatives as a result of this. I believe that the trust has an important duty to seek to restore that confidence and to ensure that the community believes that it is acting in its best interests at all times. Therefore, I have made it very clear to the trust that it needs to ensure that every effort is made to enable people to access the Downe Hospital and the Lagan Valley Hospital on a 24/7 basis. I know that some people were quite reluctant to accept the service that was being offered at night in the Downe Hospital. I know that people in Lagan Valley really desire that service, because it ensured that, in particular, the elderly population and people with chronic illnesses could have access to the hospital with particular ease.

A series of things need to be done. I recognise the recruitment issue. Continuing efforts will be made on that particular front. I have insisted that the trust makes specific efforts to seek to recruit more staff. However, we need to be cognisant of the fact that we are operating in an arena where it is problematic not just here, in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, but in Northern Ireland, Ireland and the British Isles. We have a major issue here with recruiting doctors for emergency departments. People can ask why. There is a whole series of reasons for that. We need to recognise that that is an issue. We cannot operate in a vacuum separately from everywhere else.

There is a commitment to seek to support the Downe Hospital to provide services for its local community. It is not to do with finance; it is to do with getting the appropriate number of doctors.

Common Agricultural Policy: Transfer of Moneys from Pillar 1 to Pillar 2 Budget

Published at 11.30 am on Friday 20 December 2013

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): I wish to make a written statement to the Assembly to advise Members of my decision regarding the transfer of monies from the Pillar 1 to the Pillar 2 budget of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) within the north of Ireland.

The average transfer rate which I intend to apply is 7% for the 2014-2019 years. This will result in a total transfer of €137,482,128 from the Pillar 1 to the Pillar 2 budget.

The issue of a transfer between Pillars 1 and 2 of the CAP was part of my Department's consultation on the proposals for the Rural Development Programme 2014 – 2020, which was out for public consultation for 16 weeks from the 1st of July to the 21st October 2013. In addition, my officials gave presentations on these proposals at a series of consultation events across the north, and held several meetings with stakeholders and other interested parties to provide more detail on our proposals, and listen to their views.

In making my decision, I have considered carefully the range of opinions from stakeholders on whether funds should be transferred between Pillars 1 and 2 of the CAP. I have looked closely at how any transfer would affect the budget available to both Pillar 1 and Pillar 2, and the sources of funding that could be available to a future rural development programme.

The CAP is structured along two distinct Pillars. Pillar 1 provides for direct payments to farmers, such as the Single Farm Payment. Pillar 2 provides funding to the Rural Development Programme, which is a wide ranging package of measures that supports our agri-food industry, protects and enhances our environment and countryside and helps to improve the quality of life in rural areas.

The European Union's proposals for rural development provide for the option of transferring annually up to 15% of the Pillar 1 budget to Pillar 2. There is also an option to transfer up to 25% of the Pillar 2 budget to Pillar 1. Rates of transfer between the Pillars of the CAP for the years 2014 to 2019 must be declared by Member States to Europe by the 31st December 2013. If a Member State does not meet this deadline, there is a further option to declare a rate to Europe for the years 2015 to 2019 before the 1st August 2014. However, the declaration must be made on a Member State basis, and as England, Scotland and Wales all intend to declare their rates by the 31st of December, for that reason I must take a decision on the rate for the north of Ireland now too.

Under the European regulations, I have the option to revise the rates for scheme years 2018 and 2019 in 2017. However, the rates may only be revised upwards.

I consider the Rural Development Programme to be a key mechanism in delivering positive change in our rural areas and it is important that it is adequately funded. Similarly, I know how important direct payments are to our farm businesses. The Rural Development Programme will benefit our farmers through ensuring funding for farm capital investment and other farming facing measures, it will allow me to continue to protect our natural environment through a well funded agri environment scheme, and continue to provide support to our rural businesses and voluntary organisations, which are so vital to our rural communities.

Published at 5.00 pm on Friday 20 December 2013

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): On 25 September 2013, I announced that an independent expert-led Inquiry and a Thematic Review by the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI), both relating to child sexual exploitation, would be undertaken. On 5 November 2013, I announced that the Inquiry would be led by Professor Kathleen Marshall and advised members of the Terms of Reference of the Inquiry. At the same time, I indicated that I would make a further statement on the SBNI Thematic Review following the agreement of the Terms of Reference. The SBNI Review is being directed by my Department under section 4 of the Safeguarding Board Act (NI) 2011. As my Department is required in law to do, draft Directions were forwarded to the SBNI for consultation and, where relevant and appropriate, the comments of SBNI member agencies have been reflected in the final Directions, which include, in the Schedule, the Terms of Reference for the Review.

The final Directions were issued to the SBNI on 10 December 2013 and came into operation on 11 December. As a consequence, both the independent expert-led Inquiry and SBNI Thematic Review are now underway. It is estimated that both will take approximately one year to complete. Given the scope of the Inquiry, the Chair will report to me and the Ministers of Justice and Education. The SBNI Review, which will focus on the handling of 22 cases involving children in or previously in state care, will report solely to me.

Under the Terms of Reference of the Thematic Review, the SBNI has been asked to examine and evaluate:

- the extent to which SBNI member agencies acted in accordance with established policy procedure and guidance governing the welfare and safeguarding of children from the first point of entry by all of the 22 children into the care system;
- the effectiveness of any action taken by SBNI member agencies to safeguard the 22 children and promote their welfare during their time in care, taking into account whether or not steps taken were in accord with existing policy, procedure or guidance;
- the effectiveness of communication and co-operation between SBNI member agencies in accordance with relevant guidance ; and
- the effectiveness of engagement with and nature of relationships of SBNI member agencies staff with young people.

In particular, the Review will consider the following key issues -

- the nature and quality of the assessments carried out in respect of each of the 22 children and how these assessments informed initial decisions to place each child in care and any other placements which may have occurred subsequent to the initial placement, taking account of each child's previous life experience and any specific factors which influenced the decision to place him or her in care;
- the effectiveness of the care planning, risk assessment, risk management and review processes and how those processes took account of those factors which increase a child's vulnerability to risk of harm, including being absent from any placement without permission;
- the adequacy and effectiveness of the provision of care, including therapeutic and specialist services, to the 22 children in any placement or setting;
- the adequacy, effectiveness and timeliness by SBNI member agencies response to any of the 22 children being reported as absent from any placement or setting without permission and their response to allegations of criminal offences being committed against any of the 22 children. This includes any action taken by SBNI member agencies to put a stop to such activities, any preventative measures which were taken and the reporting of allegations to the PSNI;
- the effectiveness of reporting and information-sharing systems employed by SBNI member agencies and their adequacy in securing the safety and wellbeing of the 22 children who are the subject of this Review; and
- the involvement and support provided by senior management to frontline staff in the management of, or responses to any of the 22 children.

Also, taking account of the ongoing police investigation and the need to preserve the integrity of that process, the SBNI has been directed to seek the views of:

- each of the 22 children involved, taking account of each child's willingness to participate in the Review, the need to protect their anonymity and guard their need for confidentiality;
- the families of the young people; and
- key staff involved in the care or protection of any of the 22 children and any other personnel who played a significant role in their lives during the period they were in care.

The SBNI has specifically been directed to identify key learning points and opportunities for improvement. Where relevant, the Review will also feed into the wider Inquiry process. Should learning emerge in the course of the Review, which needs to be acted upon more quickly, the SBNI will advise accordingly. My aim in directing the SBNI to conduct this Review is to ensure that in future children and young people in care are offered the best possible protections from individuals who ruthlessly exploit them.

Committee Stage

Committee for Finance and Personnel
4 December 2013

Financial Provisions Bill [NIA 22/11-15]

Members present for all or part of the proceedings:

Mr Daithí McKay (Chairperson)
Ms Michaela Boyle
Mr Leslie Cree
Mr Paul Girvan
Mr John McCallister
Mr Ian McCrea
Mr Adrian McQuillan
Mr Peter Weir

Clause 1 (Repeal of the Development Loans (Agriculture and Fisheries) Act (Northern Ireland) 1968)

The Chairperson: No issues were raised in the evidence to the Committee about the clause.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, mindful that the Committee for Agriculture and Rural Development does not have any concerns with its provisions, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee is content with clause 2, mindful that the Committee for Agriculture and Rural Development does not have any concerns with its provisions, put and agreed to.

New Clause

The Chairperson: The new clause is on the rating of owners instead of occupiers in certain cases.

Question, That the Committee is content with the new clause, for which the Minister will table an amendment at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 1, put and agreed to.

The Chairperson: The new clause is on the repeal of articles 23 and 24 of the Rates (NI) Order 1977.

Question, That the Committee is content with the new clause, for which the Minister will table an amendment at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 2, put and agreed to.

New Clause

The Chairperson: The new clause concerns the power of the Department of Finance and Personnel to require information for rating purposes. An issue was raised about the clause, to which DFP responded. The Committee was content with the clarification provided.

Question, That the Committee is content with the new clause, for which the Minister will table an amendment at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 3, put and agreed to.

New Clause

The Chairperson: The new clause is to do with a discount on rates on dwellings.

Question, That the Committee is content with the new clause, for which the Minister will table an amendment at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 4, put and agreed to.

Mr Girvan: May I just clarify one point? That is to allow those with vacant properties to take advantage of the discount, is that correct?

The Committee Clerk: Yes.

Mr Girvan: That is OK.

Clause 3 (Provision as to payment of interest on funds in court)

The Chairperson: The Committee was content with the clarification provided by the Department. The Department will bring forward an amendment to clause 3 too.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the amendment to be tabled by the Minister at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 5 and mindful that the Committee for Justice has no concerns with its provisions, put and agreed to.

Clause 4 (Power of Northern Ireland Housing Executive to recover certain costs)

The Chairperson: The Committee was content with the clarification provided by the Department.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, mindful that the Committee for Social Development has not expressed any concerns with its provisions, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee is content with clause 5, mindful that the Public Accounts Committee and the Audit Committee do not have any concerns with its provisions, put and agreed to.

Clause 6 (Expenditure on bodies providing services for the police, etc.)

The Chairperson: The Committee was content with the clarification provided. The Department will bring forward an amendment to the clause.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the amendment to be tabled by the Minister at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 6 and mindful that the Committee for Justice does not have any concerns with its provisions, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee is content with clause 7, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee in content with clause 8, subject to the amendment to be tabled by the Minister at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 7, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee is content with the schedule, subject to the amendment to be tabled by the Minister at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 8, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee is content with clause 9, put and agreed to.

Question, That the Committee agree the long title of the Bill, subject to the amendment to be tabled by the Minister at Consideration Stage to read as per the wording provided at addendum 9, put and agreed to.

The Chairperson: A working draft report has been tabled for Committee consideration. Members are being asked to consider the report and forward any comments to the Committee Clerk before close of play on Friday. The Committee is required to report to the Assembly by 12 December, in accordance with the timetable for the Committee Stage of the Bill. Are members content?

Members indicated assent.

The Committee Clerk: In the tabled papers, there is a short working draft of the report. The first section is background information on the Committee's approach to the evidence taken. There is then a section on the consideration of the Bill's provisions. That narrates the different issues that were identified by members of this Committee and any of the other applicable Committees, as well as the clarifications and explanations provided. There is then a section on clause-by-clause consideration, which will be added to based on the minutes of this meeting. There is then a possible generic conclusion and recommendation, acknowledging the input from other Committees and the Department in responding to and addressing the issues raised by the Committees. The draft report highlights the fact that financial provisions Bills, by their very nature, tend to be catch-all vehicles for different Departments to add provisions, and sometimes that can lead to late amendments, as in this case. Therefore, there is a recommendation to DFP to be mindful of that, going forward.

This is just for members' initial consideration. If there are any thoughts on it, I ask you to relay them to me for Friday. I will provide a final draft for formal consideration next week.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Sexual Orientation Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the sexual orientation strategy is due to be published; and what is the reason for the delay.

(AQW 25072/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): Together: Building a United Community includes our commitment to publish the Sexual Orientation Strategy.

Public consultation is a key stage in the development of the Sexual Orientation Strategy. A draft consultation document to inform public consultation is under consideration within the Department. Consultation will begin as soon as this is finalised.

Civil Service: OFMDFM Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many Civil Service posts existed in their Department on 1 January 2012 and 1 January 2013 at (i) Administrative Assistant; (ii) Administrative Officer; (iii) Executive Officer 2; (iv) Executive Officer 1; (v) Staff Officer; (vi) Deputy Principal; (vii) Grade 7; and (viii) Grade 6 levels, broken down by local council area.

(AQW 28062/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The number of OFMDFM posts are provided in the tables below.

1 January 2012

Grade	Local Council Areas
	Belfast	Belfast, Castlereagh	Armagh	Derry/ Londonderry

Social Investment Fund: Tendering

Mrs D Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the tendering process for the administration of the Social Investment Fund, including the criteria and methods used for selection; and to detail the number of applications received and the successful candidates.

(AQW 28198/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The administration of the Social Investment Fund (SIF) thus far has been provided by OFMDFM officials, therefore there has not been any tendering process for administration.

Social Investment Fund: Payments

Mrs D Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to list the payments made to each company or individual for the administration of the Social Investment Fund, including the dates.

(AQW 28199/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The administration of the Social Investment Fund (SIF) thus far has been provided by OFMDFM officials, therefore there have been no payments made to companies or individuals for the administration of SIF.

Social Investment Fund: Update

Mr Lunn asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Social Investment Fund.

(AQO 5010/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Strategic area plans were received by the Department on 28 February 2013. Each zone submitted economic appraisals for up to ten projects within their area plans. A significant number of the projects have concluded internal appraisal and discussions are ongoing with the steering groups as to the implementation and roll out of the successful projects.

Commissioner for Older People

Mr D McIlveen asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the work of the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland.

(AQO 5011/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Commissioner for Older People's main aim is to safeguard and promote the interests of older people. The Commissioner has made an impact in the Social Security Agency's "Make the Call" campaign and at the Department's invitation, chairs the Ageing Strategy Advisory Group, which has significantly shaped the developing draft Active Ageing Strategy.

Following extensive consultation with older people, the Commissioner is currently undertaking a number of major projects including raising awareness of the positive contribution of older people to our society and publishing and providing information on valuing an ageing workforce.

The Commissioner is also reviewing the adequacy and effectiveness of the law and policy relating to older people. This is in addition to her work with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Health and Social Care Trusts, the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority and other relevant bodies to ensure that standards and quality of care are at the heart of services provided to older people.

Gender Equality Strategy

Ms Fearon asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Gender Equality Strategy.

(AQW 28440/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A review of the Gender Equality Strategy (GES) and its associated cross departmental Action Plans is currently nearing completion. The Review considered how effectively the Strategy has performed against its objectives; assessed the effectiveness of the Action Plans; and has made recommendations for the aims, objectives and delivery of the Strategy and Action Plans in the years remaining – 2014-16.

A revised GES is currently being developed in consultation with the Gender Advisory Panel (GAP). The GAP is made up of key stakeholder representatives. It is intended that the revised document will be published in January 2014.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Slurry Spreading

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the above average rainfall in the week leading up to the cut off date for the spreading of slurry had an adverse effect on farms.

(AQW 28190/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): While weather conditions were difficult at the start of this year and spring was very late, there has been generally good weather since then. It has been the driest summer in six years, and therefore field conditions have been suitable for slurry spreading.

My Department has consistently advised farmers to spread slurry when grass growth is greatest from spring through to late summer. This will help to maximise the yield response to slurry nutrients and ensure that slurry tanks are empty well ahead of the cut off date for slurry spreading in preparation for winter housing period.

Farms are required to have a minimum of 22 weeks slurry storage capacity, and the closed spreading period is some 16 weeks long. This is to ensure that farms have sufficient storage capacity to allow for times when weather and field conditions are unsuitable either before or after the closed spreading period.

Given these circumstances, any above average rainfall in the week leading up to the cut off date for slurry spreading should not have had any significant adverse effect on farms.

Lough Neagh Working Group

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for a progress report on the inter-departmental/ministerial group on the future ownership of Lough Neagh.

(AQW 28265/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In December last year, I shared the Inter-Departmental Working Group report with ministerial colleagues whose officials had contributed to the report through membership of the Working Group.

Since then, the Minister for Culture, Arts and Leisure has been considering the value of additional research to complement the findings in the report. I intend to meet Minister Ní Chuilín shortly to discuss the findings of this work and how they might add value to the Inter Departmental Working Group Report. I will then assess next steps, including putting recommendations to the Executive as soon as possible probably in the early part of next year.

North Down: Woodland Cover

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the areas in North Down in which her Department plans to increase the tree population.

(AQW 28275/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Woodland cover in North Down is 8.6 % of land area compared with an average of 8 % in the north of Ireland. I remain committed to increasing the extent woodland cover by provide support to landowners under the Rural Development Programme to encourage creation of new woodland. During the Programme period 2007-2013 funding of almost £10 million supported the establishment of over 1,400 hectares of new woodland. This Programme is now closed to new applicants and my officials are developing new afforestation schemes in consultation with stakeholders in preparation for the 2014 -2020 Rural Development Programme. Stakeholders have told us that they wish to see support continuing for creation of a wide range of woodland types, that new woodland is particularly suited to land of limited agricultural productivity and that forestry schemes should be integrated, where possible, with the delivery of Agri-environment Schemes.

Japanese Knotweed: Legislation

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether Japanese Knotweed will be listed as a noxious weed by an affirmation order under Article 3 (2) (a) of the Noxious Weeds (Northern Ireland) Order 1977.

(AQW 28321/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Japanese knotweed is prescribed under The Wildlife Order (NI) 1985 which makes it an offence for any person to intentionally plant or otherwise cause this Invasive Alien Species to grow in the wild. As there are existing legislative controls available my Department do not see a requirement to introduce new subordinate legislation listing Japanese knotweed under the Noxious Weeds (NI) Order 1977.

North/South Animal Welfare and Transport Working Group

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the work of the North South Animal Welfare and Transport Working Group

(AQW 28345/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In my answer to AQW 26710/11-15 I advised that I raised the issue of wild animals in travelling circuses at the North South Ministerial Council (NSMC) Agriculture meeting on 10 July 2013 and subsequently my officials met officials from the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine (DAFM) under the auspices of the North South Animal Welfare and Transport Working Group on 5 September 2013.

Minister Coveney and I received an update on the issue at the NSMC Agriculture meeting on 13 November.

There are no circuses based here but there are a number of circuses registered in the south of Ireland, some of which travel here. I can advise that DAFM officials have contacted stakeholders and are scheduled to meet them to discuss this issue in the near future.

Officials will report back to Minister Coveney and I once they have met all relevant stakeholders and have had an opportunity to consider the available evidence and information.

Tobacco: Import Inspections

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what role her Department plays in the inspection of tobacco entering Northern Ireland.

(AQW 28368/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Plant Health Order (NI) 2006 does not require tobacco leaf to be inspected at the point of entry. Tobacco in its dried leaf form presents no plant health risk to the north of Ireland and therefore my Department does not routinely inspect imports of dried tobacco leaf.

Countries that grow tobacco as a commercial crop and countries outside the EU which buy cigarettes and other tobacco products produced in the north of Ireland may request Phytosanitary certificates to accompany export consignments. To facilitate this trade officials from my Department produce Phytosanitary certificates in support of exports and undertake inspections at premises to check for the presence of pests including tobacco beetle.

Equine Industry: Research and Development

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what funding arrangements are in place to help the equine industry with research and management issues.

(AQW 28387/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DARD's Evidence and Innovation Strategy is the overarching framework for all DARD funded research and development to underpin evidence-based policy and delivery and promote innovation in agri-food, farming, forestry and other rural businesses, including equine businesses. There is on-going engagement with stakeholders, including through an annual stakeholder conference, to help inform the identification and prioritisation of research needs. The Equine Council NI, (ECNI), the industry representative body for the equine sector in the north that is taking forward the industry's equine strategy, is involved in this process.

DARD's Research Challenge Fund (RCF) is a key element of the DARD Evidence and Innovation Strategy. It gives small and medium sized businesses from the agri-food and other rural sectors an opportunity to get help with research. It aims to encourage industry-led consortia to get involved in research projects, by providing grant of up to 50% assistance (to a maximum value of £250k) with research funding.

My Department's CAFRE also provides a wide range of education and training programmes to meet the needs of the equine industry. Further and Higher Education programmes for new entrants are delivered at Enniskillen Campus and training programmes for those working in the industry are delivered at out-centres throughout the north.

The equine provision currently includes full-time programmes at Level 2 Diploma, up to BSc (Hons) level, farriery programmes and short courses. Higher Education programmes are validated by the University of Ulster.

Enniskillen Campus has a strong ethos of "learning by doing". Several innovative 'learning by doing' projects are used to support delivery of education programmes, including Equine Breeding, Horse Racing and Equitation Units.

DARD engages closely with ECNI and provided start-up funding to ECNI following its establishment, for the two year period to 31 March 2013. This funding was extended for six months to allow ECNI further time to make its arrangements for self-funding and I recently met ECNI to hear about its plans for future direction and funding.

Greyhound Racing: Legislation

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 25696/11-15, whether there are further plans to meet with (i) Hope 4 Hounds; (ii) Greyhound Rescue NI; (iii) The Dogs Trust; (iv) Mid-Antrim Animal Sanctuary; (v)

ASSISI; (vi) Rainbow Animal Rescue; (vii) Causeway Coast Animal Rescue; and (viii) any other organisations to discuss legislation relating to Greyhound racing and welfare.

Mrs O'Neill: Although my Department is not responsible for greyhound racing, my officials and I from time to time meet greyhound organisations in fulfilment of our policy and legislative responsibility for the welfare, control, identification, licensing and breeding of dogs. For example, in December 2012 my officials met Homes for Unwanted Greyhounds and Dogs Trust, and in April this year the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, Carál Ní Chuilín MLA, and I met the Irish Coursing Club to discuss greyhound-related issues.

I do not at present have further meetings planned on this issue but many of the organisations that you mention are consultees with which my Department engages when considering policy and legislative changes relating to dogs or animal welfare. This includes: Dogs Trust; Mid Antrim Animal Sanctuary; Assisi Animal Sanctuary; Rainbow Rescue Centre; and also Greyhound Action NI and Greyhound Rescue NI.

I also sought input from the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) on this issue. My ministerial colleague Carál Ní Chuilín MLA has advised that she has not met any of the groups detailed to discuss legislation for greyhound racing.

National Dairy Council: Loss of Business

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she is aware of any local agri-food company that has lost a contract in the Republic of Ireland due to the stance taken by the National Dairy Council.

(AQW 28537/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am aware that a number of our major milk processors have lost significant business in the south due to the National Dairy Council's campaign.

While country of origin labelling is legal, I am concerned about any loss of business by our processors. I strongly believe that in the current economic climate fostering all Ireland trade would benefit producers in both north and south.

Bovine Tuberculosis: Update

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the current levels of Bovine Tuberculosis.

(AQO 5084/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Bovine TB annual herd incidence has declined from its peak of 7.46% at 31 October 2012 to 6.47% at 30 September 2013.

During 2013 to date there have been 1,021 new TB breakdowns compared with 1,214 in the same period in 2012, which represents a 15.9% reduction.

During 2013 to date there have been 5,785 TB reactors removed to slaughter compared with 7,888 in the same period in 2012, which represents a 26.6% reduction.

While this reduction is welcome I am not complacent and wish to see further progressive reduction in TB levels with the ultimate aim of TB eradication.

Rural Development Programme: Capital Grant Scheme

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has for a capital grant scheme in the new Rural Development Programme that will help farmers improve their farms.

(AQO 5082/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My proposals for a capital grant scheme in the new Rural Development Programme were outlined in a consultation document published on 1 July 2013.

The document detailed proposals for a Business Investment Scheme which aims to improve the competitiveness, efficiency and sustainability of agriculture by providing grant support to:-

- Introduce new technologies and/or processes;
- Upgrade or replace buildings and/or equipment to provide better nutrient management, biosecurity, disease prevention and improved welfare conditions for animals;
- Improve storage facilities for the horticulture and/or arable sectors to provide better bio security and improved crop quality standards on farms; and
- Establish renewable energy technologies on-farm to ensure that farm resources are used to provide a secure energy supply and improve farm income.

My Department consulted on proposals to introduce a single scheme with a 3-tiered funding structure, with a maximum grant amount of £250,000 available, at a grant rate of 40% of total project costs. It was proposed that the requirements of the application process would increase in line with the level of funding sought.

The period of public consultation on the next Rural Development Programme closed on 21 October 2013 and my officials are considering the responses received.

Single Farm Payment: Timeline

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what assurance she will give that 90 per cent of Single Farm Payments for the scheme year 2013 will be made by the end of December 2013.

(AQO 5083/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: 37,629 claims were submitted to the 2013 Single Farm Payment (SFP) Scheme. EU legislation permits DARD to release full rate payments on verified claims from 1 December 2013 providing that all eligibility checks, including on-farm checks on the land eligibility inspections which were required in respect of the 2013 year, have been carried out.

Within this legislative framework, our objective is to pay as many claims as possible at the earliest practicable stage.

The total budget for the 2013 Single Farm Payment Scheme is £265.25 million. To keep farmers and the industry informed and to help manage expectations on the flow of payments, the payment timeline was published on 20 November setting out the processing targets for the first three months of the SFP payment window.

We are aiming to finalise 85% of the claims submitted to the scheme in December 2013. The vast majority of farmers will receive their payments before Christmas. This is an increase of 5% on the December 2012 target, and an increase of 2.2% on payments actually achieved in December 2012. We also aim to finalise 95% of claims by the end of February 2014.

Whilst we have improved our payment performance, farmers can help us go further by submitting their claims online. This reduces the volume of manual processing involved and helps us pay claims more quickly. If 40% of farmers submitted their applications online, we could pay 90% of claims in December of that year.

With regard to inspection cases the objective is to finalise the majority of payments by the end of February 2014, which is four months ahead of the position on inspections for 2012.

South Antrim: Forest Service

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much revenue her Department received from the Forest Service in South Antrim in each of the last three years.

(AQO 5085/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service is an Agency of the Department and all Agency income and expenditure is contained within the DARD Estimates and accounted for through both the DARD and Agency Resource Accounts.

The Forest Service revenue in the South Antrim constituency is called Operating Income and comes from its operating activities in the area. This was £33,227 in 2010/11, £214,574 in 2011/12 and £109,322 in 2012/13.

Fishing: Ardglass/Kilkeel/Portavogie

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when her Department will produce a fishing development plan relating to the ports of Ardglass, Kilkeel and Portavogie.

(AQO 5086/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I met with fishing industry representatives on 5 November 2013 and we agreed to meet early in 2014 to discuss the challenges facing the industry from now to 2020 and how it might adapt. As part of the preparations to implement the new European Maritime and Fisheries Fund my Department will be required to develop an investment plan for fisheries for the period 2014-2020. This will be developed in consultation with the fishing industry and is likely to be published by the end of 2014.

Horse Passports

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the effectiveness of the European horse passport system in monitoring the recording and traceability of horses.

(AQO 5087/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Under Commission Regulation (EC) No. 504/2008, it is a requirement for all horses and ponies (and other forms of equidae) within the EU to have a passport identifying the animal. The Regulation is implemented in the north by the Horse Passports Regulations (NI) 2010, on the identification of equidae.

In response to the recent horse meat fraud, the Commission wrote to Member States with its 5 Point Action Plan, which contains a number of measures in relation to food fraud, country of origin labelling and actions in respect of horse passports.

On horse passports, the Commission proposes to amend Commission Regulation (EC) No. 504/2008 to make mandatory the recording of horse passports in a central national database and to transfer the issuing of horse passports entirely to the competent authorities. It also proposes to reduce the number of passport issuing bodies in the forthcoming proposal on Zootechnics.

DARD officials are working with counterparts in Defra, Scotland and Wales with a view to improving the quality of horse passports and producing new efficiency guidelines for Passport Issuing Organisations (PIOs). PIOs have been consulted on the guidelines and it is hoped to have them in place during February 2014.

DARD officials are also working with counterparts in Dublin to explore the possibility of having an all island horse passport centralised database and to enhance the security of the equine identification system.

Given the all-island nature of the equine industry it is important that we co-operate on the arrangements we put in place to strengthen the horse passport system and help to prevent food fraud throughout the island.

Agrifood: Careers

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what she is doing to ensure that younger people enter the agri-food industry as a career.

(AQO 5088/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department's College, CAFRE, provides support through its education programmes to those who are preparing for a career in the agri-food industry. I am pleased to report that enrolments are at a five-year high.

CAFRE makes contact with all secondary schools and DEL Careers' Advisers to promote careers in the agri-food industry to young people. During the last academic year over 70 percent of secondary schools hosted a career's talk, arranged for their students to have work experience at CAFRE or participated in a curriculum support activity at one of CAFRE's campuses.

I am conscious that the decision for young people to enter farming in particular can be complex as it impacts on the whole farm family. For this reason, as part of the Rural Development Programme, my Department developed the Family Farm Options programme. This programme provides the family with an Agriculture Mentor who helps them consider the key business issues.

In looking to the future, as part of the local implementation of the reformed Common Agricultural Policy, my Department is consulting with industry stakeholders. The main areas affecting young farmers include additional support through the Basic Payment Scheme and a top-up to financial support available to support investment.

As Minister, I am focussed on encouraging young people to enter the agri-food industry and to helping them build a successful career which will assist the industry achieve its full potential.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Events Company: Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether the Central Investigation Service has investigated any aspect of the service delivered by the Northern Ireland Events Company.

(AQW 24629/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The Central Investigation Service has not been required to investigate any aspect of the service delivered by the Northern Ireland Events Company.

Following the disclosure of the financial deficit in the Company, the Department engaged a number of other experts to investigate specific aspects of its affairs. Subsequent to this, Company Inspectors were appointed by the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment to carry out a comprehensive investigation into the affairs of the Company.

Ulster Museum: Union Flag

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the current policy on flying the Union Flag over the Ulster Museum, Belfast.

(AQW 25444/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: No flags are flown over any NMNI sites.

Sports Stadia: October Monitoring

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if she will bid for further funds for sub-Regional Sports stadia in the October Monitoring Round.

(AQW 25446/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: No bids were submitted in the October Monitoring Round.

Irish Football Association: Windsor Park

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the discussions she had with the Irish Football Association (IFA) in the weeks prior to her recent statement regarding the need for appropriate governance at the IFA before the redevelopment funding for Windsor Park could occur.

(AQW 25754/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Contact with the IFA in the weeks prior to my statement in the Assembly on 10 September 2013, was primarily conducted by my senior officials in the Department however I did have a direct conversation with Mr Patrick Nelson, IFA Chief Executive Officer on one occasion.

Football Clubs: Capital Funding Programme

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the timeframe for the provision of tranches of capital funding for football grounds.

(AQW 26626/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arm's length body of my Department, is currently developing a new capital funding programme aimed at multisport, multi-agency partnerships community projects in areas of deprivation and to which football clubs may be eligible to apply.

The programme has an anticipated launch date of Spring 2014 and it is planned that information workshops and further communication will occur from January 2014 onwards. To receive timely information in relation to the development of the programme it is advised that potential applicants register on the Sport NI website at <http://www.sportni.net/Funding+registrations/Funding+Registrations.htm>

Sport NI, has advised that currently there is no capital funding programmes available for football clubs to apply to.

Football Clubs: Capital Funding Programme

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a timescale on the distribution of funds to Irish League soccer clubs for capital projects.

(AQW 26682/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arm's length body of my Department, is currently developing a new capital funding programme aimed at multisport, multi-agency partnerships community projects in areas of deprivation and to which football clubs may be eligible to apply.

The programme has an anticipated launch date of Spring 2014 and it is planned that information workshops and further communication will occur from January 2014 onwards. Civil Service: DCAL Recruitment

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 26139/11-15, given the significant under representation of those from the Protestant community in applications for posts to her Department, to outline the steps she will take to increase applications.

(AQW 26806/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Recruitment to the NI Civil Service, including DCAL, is regulated by the NI Civil Service Commissioners, who have a statutory duty to ensure that all appointments are made on merit on the basis of fair and open competition.

The three DCAL led competitions referred to in AQW 26139/11-15 were initiated and progressed in compliance with the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code and in accordance with the NICS Recruitment Policy and Procedures Manual, which may be accessed via the following link.

NICS Recruitment Policy and Procedures Manual Version 13

The Manual includes details of the outreach measures already taken in order to create a welcome for all who might consider a career in the NICS.

In compliance with Article 55 of the Fair Employment and Treatment (NI) Order 1998 all proposed recruitment competitions are referred to the Department of Finance and Personnel's Equality & Diversity Branch for advice on the inclusion of statements in job advertisements welcoming applications from identified under-represented groups. The inclusion of such a statement was not deemed necessary for the three competitions referred to.

Glentoran Football Club: Funding

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to clarify the reported promise of £10 million to Glentoran Football Club by her predecessor, including where funding for the Club now stands, in terms of quantum and timescale.

(AQW 27504/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department is neither bound by, nor committed to, any notional or specific award of funding to any club's development plans at this stage. As any funding for sub-regional stadia development still needs to be secured in the next CSR, subsequent possible bids will be considered on the basis of evidenced need and demonstrable outcomes for society. Therefore no decisions of any kind on funding to assist the development of particular stadiums, has been taken.

Commonwealth Games 2014: Ulster Hockey

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail what assistance her Department has provided to the Ulster Hockey team in its endeavours to enter a Northern Ireland team in the Commonwealth Games 2014.

(AQW 27843/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for entering teams from the north of Ireland, into the Commonwealth Games 2014, rests wholly with the NI Commonwealth Games Council (NICGC).

Neither my Department, nor Sport NI - an arms length body of my Department, has been approached by Ulster Hockey or the NICGC to provide assistance in this matter.

However, over the last 5 financial years, Sport NI has provided almost £4.2m of exchequer and Lottery funding towards the development of the sport of hockey across the north of Ireland. During the period 2009-2013 Sport NI provided £1,000,303 to the Ulster Hockey Union through the Investing in Performance Sport Programme.

Furthermore, Sport NI has agreed to invest £840,440 into Ulster Hockey through the Performance Focus Programme for the period 2013-2017.

Legal Action: DCAL Costs

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail how much her Department spent on (i) legal costs; and (ii) paying damages or compensation as a consequence of legal actions, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 27960/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The information requested is provided in the table below.

Year	Legal costs (£)	Damages/compensation paid as a consequence of legal actions (£)
2008-09	10,672	-
2009-10	63,396	-
2010-11	85,317	-
2011-12	43,756	36,465
2012-13	94,141	-

Lough Erne: Anglers with a Disability

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on sourcing an alternative access to Lough Erne for anglers with a disability, given the continuing difficulties experienced reopening the Garvary jetty.

(AQW 28023/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has been involved in a series of discussions with land owners regarding access to the Garvary jetty and there are indications of progress towards a positive resolution.

Officials will continue to explore options for additional access to Lough Erne for anglers and in particular for those with a disability.

Fish Deaths: Electricity Supply Board

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what discussions her Department has had with the Electricity Supply Board on the recently reported death of fish at the dam on the River Erne.

(AQW 28070/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials met with representatives of the Electricity Supply Board (ESB) on 3 October in Enniskillen to review the operation of the "Trap and Truck" arrangement for the conservation of eels on the Erne.

During the meeting, officials raised reports about recent fish deaths at the dam on the River Erne. ESB officials advised that they had undertaken an investigation but had not found any evidence to substantiate the claims.

ESB has agreed to provide regular updates on the numbers of salmon passing upstream (including any fish that die in the pass) to allow DCAL to monitor Erne salmon runs.

Lough Neagh: Nets

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the number and type of nets permitted on Lough Neagh; and (ii) the monitoring system in place to check the size and grade of nets.

(AQW 28074/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

- (i) There are five types of nets permitted on Lough Neagh and these are detailed below:
- Bait net for the taking of freshwater fish other than trout or rainbow trout for use as bait;
 - Eel draft net exceeding 118 metres;
 - Draft net for the capture of salmon and freshwater fish;
 - Single wall set net or trammel net for the capture of trout;
 - Single wall set net or trammel net for the taking of freshwater fish other than trout or rainbow trout.
- (ii) DCAL Fisheries Protection Officers (FPO's) undertake patrols both on and around Lough Neagh to detect, disrupt and deter those involved in illegal fishing activity. FPO's regularly carry out net checks to ensure that these are properly marked, of legal construction and being fished in accordance with legislation.

Nets found to be in breach of legislation may be seized and if the owner is identified the matter will be reported with a view to prosecution. If the owner is not identified the Department will make application to the Courts to issue a destruction order for the nets.

Library Services: Inner South Belfast

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of whether library services are delivering to their full potential for inner south Belfast.

(AQW 28174/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Library services to inner south Belfast are delivered by the Ormeau Road, Lisburn Road and Belfast Central Libraries. Mobile and Homecall services are also provided within the area. The provision of services to any particular area is an operational issue for the Board of Libraries NI.

In line with my Department's 2013/14 business plan, Libraries NI is prioritising resources to those libraries serving the 10% most deprived Super Output Areas, as measured by the NI Multiple Deprivation Measure 2010. These redeployed resources are to enable the release of experienced front-line staff to undertake outreach and community engagement activity in deprived areas. As inner south Belfast contains 5 Super Output Areas that are recognised to be within the top 10% most deprived areas, the area stands to benefit from this approach.

Libraries NI has responded to feedback from community engagement in inner south Belfast by starting regular Rhythm and Rhyme sessions and story-time sessions for mother and toddler groups at both the Markets and Donegal Pass Community Centres. A reading group is also being set up from Lagan Fold and discussions have taken place with Shaftesbury Community Centre in relation to establishing a book group, regular story sessions for children, literacy skills support and a junior reading gang.

Library Services: Demand

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether library services meet demand.

(AQW 28176/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The demand for library services in the north of Ireland was assessed by Libraries NI between 2009 and 2011 as part of its Strategic Review of the Libraries' Estate. It was further assessed by the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) in 2012/13 as part of a wider review of the success of the Department's policy for the public library service, Delivering Tomorrow's Libraries.

Both these reviews have shown that the public continues to value the public library service. In order to increase participation and strengthen related demand, Delivering Tomorrow's Libraries contains a number of Public Library Standards designed to improve access to and usage of the library service. Work on meeting these standards is being taken forward by Libraries NI through its annual business plans. In line with the recommendations of the Delivering Tomorrow's Libraries review, DCAL is also in the process of reviewing the existing Public Library Standards with a view to creating new Standards on participation, customer satisfaction, access and usage of libraries by people suffering from poverty and social exclusion. Work on the development of these new Standards is expected to be completed in the New Year.

Library Services: Inner South Belfast

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the demand for library services in inner south Belfast, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28177/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Demand for library services is measured by Libraries NI on the basis of a range of indicators, namely Issues & Renewals, Active Members, Public Access Computer Sessions, Activities¹ and Visits. The branch libraries serving inner south Belfast are Belfast Central, Lisburn Road and Ormeau Road. Mobile and Homecall Services are also provided within the area.

The tables below detail the demand for library services at these branches over the last 3 financial years:-

Lough Erne: Fish Surveys

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when the results of the Lough Erne Netting Survey Report will be published.

(AQW 28182/11-15)

1 Activities include class visits, Got IT? sessions, Reading Groups, Rhythm & Rhyme, Storytime, Knit & Natter groups, Job Clubs

Ms Ní Chuilín: A draft report on the recent survey of pike stocks in spawning areas of Lower Lough Erne is currently under consideration by my Department and is expected to be released to the public shortly.

This initial survey and report are part of a wider, on-going body of fish stock scientific monitoring and assessment of the Lough Erne fishery. The results of the full surveys will be available early in 2014.

Derry: DCAL Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 27945/11-15, why no civil servants from her Department are based in Derry.

(AQW 28244/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department is the main funder of the City of Culture's Cultural Programme of projects and events during 2013. While my officials were not permanently located in Derry, the Head of 2013 Projects Team spent much of the year working with project partners in the City. Regular oversight and project management meetings were also held in Derry which included representation up to Permanent Secretary level.

As part of City of Culture legacy plans, I recently announced that DCAL wishes to widen its focus after 2013 to the North West area. A delivery structure including a new delivery body will be required to take forward future support and development of DCAL's objectives in the North West.

As part of this new delivery structure, DCAL will establish a DCAL North West office to provide support with the establishment of the new body, establish effective governance within the new organisation and continue to work with community organisations and stakeholders to deliver DCAL's key objectives of tackling poverty and social exclusion in the region.

Detailed arrangements and costs for the new DCAL North West office and delivery body have not yet been finalised.

Windsor Park: Redevelopment

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the Windsor Park redevelopment project.

(AQW 28282/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The IFA IST tenders were returned on 23rd September 2013 and are currently being assessed with regard to compliance to budget and specification. In addition DCAL are working with the IFA to be assured that appropriate governance and accountability structures are in place.

I remain confident that these issues will be resolved and that any delays around any legal challenges are avoided, and that the Windsor Park development will remain on programme.

Capital Projects: DCAL

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, following the concerns over the contract awarded for the rebuilding of the Lyric Theatre, to detail (i) the changes that have been made to how her Department manages capital projects; and (ii) whether the recommendations made by the NI Audit Office have been implemented.

(AQW 28344/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

- (i) The following changes to managing major capital projects have been made:
- The Department now requires capital projects to adhere to the best practice project management structure of "Achieving Excellence in Construction".
 - Capital projects will undergo either a full Gateway Review or a Gateway Healthcheck.
 - A senior departmental official will be appointed as Investment Decision Maker (IDM) or joint IDM.
 - A Senior Responsible Owner will be appointed for each project and will be a representative from the contracting authority. The SRO reports to the Investment Decision Maker and is accountable for the project delivery.
 - Each project is required to have rigorous management structures in place at different levels. A Project Board is put in place that will meet at least bi-monthly and take a strategic overview of the project.
 - Each capital project must also have a steering group which meets on a monthly basis to address technical and financial issues and provide funders with an update on how potential risks will be managed.
 - The Department engages the services of CPD. The CPD client advisor provides procurement advice from the beginning of the project and on-going technical and project management advice throughout the life of the project through to Post Project Evaluation.
 - The use of CPD as the COPE is included in letters of offer, for capital projects, issued by the Department as a condition of funding.
 - New guidance and procedures in relation to Post Project Evaluation (PPE) within DCAL were launched in June 2011. The Department has made compliance with this guidance a condition of funding.
 - A benefits realisation plan must be in place for every capital project.

- It is the Department's policy to retain all contract documentation in line with public sector practice. The Department is also amending procedures to ensure the requirement to retain contract documentation in line with public practice is communicated to all partners engaged in the delivery of capital projects.
- (ii) Five of the nine recommendations made by NIAO have already been implemented, three are partially implemented and one is not implemented. The Department has drafted procedures that will ensure all of the recommendations are fully implemented prior to the end of the financial year.

City of Culture 2013: Contingency Fund

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why AQW 26871/11-15 remains unanswered.
(AQW 28397/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The answer to AQW 26871/11-15 was issued to the Member on 20 November 2013.

Antrim/Ballyclare: Library Membership

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of members of (i) Antrim; and (ii) Ballyclare libraries, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 28472/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The number of active members of i) Antrim ii) Ballyclare libraries, in each of the last three years is as follows:

	1st April 2011	1st April 2012	1st April 2013
(i) Antrim Library	4,098	4,111	4,147
(ii) Ballyclare Library	2,759	2,659	2,516

Commonwealth Games 2014: Ministerial Attendance

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what plans she has to attend the Commonwealth Games 2014 in Glasgow.
(AQW 28482/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My diary commitments for July and August 2014 have not yet been planned.

EU Funding: DCAL

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the EU funding surrendered by her Department in each of the last two financial years.
(AQW 28494/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has surrendered no EU funding in each of the last two financial years.

Performing Arts Framework: Further and Higher Education

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what discussions she has had with the Minister for Employment and Learning about developing a Performing Arts Framework for Further and Higher Education.
(AQW 28496/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have not had any discussions with the Minister for Employment and Learning about developing a Performing Arts Framework for Further and Higher Education.

Broadcasting Powers: Devolution

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what discussions she has had with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on the devolution of broadcasting powers.
(AQW 28497/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have had initial discussions with DCMS Ministers, most recently with Ed Vaizey around the potential devolution of broadcasting.

Cycling: Velodrome

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she would consider commissioning a business case for a velodrome.
(AQW 28498/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for bringing forward proposals for the development of a cycling velodrome rests in the first instance with the governing body of the sport, Cycling Ireland.

A Business Case for such a facility would have to demonstrate value for money, and would need to be considered within the wide context of the Executive's priorities, my Departmental priorities for sport, including those set out in Sport Matters, and as part of a clear co-ordinated strategy for the sport, developed by the governing body.

The first stage in considering DCALs potential role in the development of a velodrome is through a feasibility study which I would ask my officials to consider.

Any proposal would need to set out how any such facility would be sustainable going forward.

Lough Neagh/River Bann: Commercial Fishing Licences

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the current commercial fishing licences granted for Lough Neagh and the River Bann.

(AQW 28520/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The following commercial fishing licences for Lough Neagh and the Lower Bann have been issued in the current year up to 22 November.

Long line for eels Lough Neagh (less than 1200 hooks)	91
Long line for eels Lough Neagh (more than 1200 hooks)	6
Eel draft net	47
Eel weir - Toome	1
Eel weir - Portna Upper Row	1
Draft net for L Neagh	24
Single wall set net or trammel net for the capture of trout	73
Single wall set net or trammel net - coarse	128
Bait net	73

With the exception of the eel weirs, commercial fishing is not permitted in the River Bann.

Waterways Ireland: Religious Monitoring

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of staff employed by Waterways Ireland, broken down by religion.

(AQW 28562/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The total number of staff employed by Waterways Ireland is 333. There is no legal requirement for Waterways Ireland to monitor the religion of the 249 staff working in the South. Currently Waterways Ireland employs 84 staff in the North. Of these one is employed from a recruitment agency and as such details relating to religion are not available.

Of the remaining 83 employees, 29 are Protestant, 51 are Roman Catholic and 3 declared as other.

Ulster-Scots Agency: Religious Monitoring

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of staff employed by the Ulster Scots Agency, broken down by religion.

(AQW 28564/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The total number of staff employed by the Ulster Scots Agency is 16 of which 14 are based in the North.

There is no legal requirement to monitor the religion of the 2 staff working in the South.

As there are only 14 staff based in the North and less than five of those are in one of the categories it would not be appropriate to provide a breakdown by religion in this case.

Irish Language: Strategy

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the implementation of the Strategy for Protecting and Enhancing the Development of the Irish Language.

(AQW 28583/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Now that the consultation process – including with Executive colleagues' Departments – has closed, and views have been taken into account, I am currently considering next steps in relation to delivering a Strategy to Enhance and Protect the Development of the Irish Language, in line with my Department's 2011-2015 Programme for Government commitment.

City of Culture 2013: DCAL Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28672/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has allocated a total of £12.6m (£6.5m for 2012/13 and £6.1m for 2013/14) to Derry City Council for the 2013 City of Culture's cultural programme of events.

Derry City Council has responsibility for awarding any tenders and providing funding to organisations for events as part of the cultural programme.

C S Lewis: Fiftieth Anniversary

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department and its arm's-length bodies publicly commemorated the fifty year anniversary of the death of C.S. Lewis.

(AQO 5097/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: To commemorate the anniversary, Libraries NI is running a programme of events including exhibitions, talks and readings. These are centred around Holywood Arches library and Belfast Central library both of which are close to where CS Lewis was born.

The Arts Council contributed to the commemorations by acting as an adviser on aspects of the inaugural C.S. Lewis Festival. As part of the Festival, Replay Theatre, a funded client of the Arts Council, toured an interactive adventure inspired by C.S. Lewis' The Lion, The Witch and The Wardrobe. The Belfast Film Festival, which is funded by NI Screen, participated by screening the Through Joy and Beyond documentary and PRONI displayed copies of some original C.S. Lewis material over the course of the week of the festival.

In addition my Department, through the Ulster Scots Agency, was involved in a joint project with Tourism Ireland on the production of a book that records Lewis's Ulster Scots ancestral links. These links can be traced back to James II of Scotland and include connections to the Hamilton and Montgomery story. This connection has been endorsed and welcomed by the Hamilton Rowan's of Killyleagh while the Ulster Historical Foundation has confirmed the validity of the Lewis link to Scotland and to the royal lineage.

River Mourne: Anaerobic Digester

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if she proposes to make a submission to the Planning Appeals Commission in relation to the proposal to construct an Anaerobic Digester on the River Mourne in Sion Mills. [R]

(AQO 5098/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The appropriate siting and the granting of planning permission for anaerobic digester plants are a matter for DoE and the Planning Service.

The River Mourne is an important salmon river. As Fisheries Minister, I will want to be assured that any potential impacts on salmon and their habitats are properly considered and my officials are liaising with the Loughs Agency to submit a statement to the Planning Appeals Commission.

My officials have also been liaising with DARD on this application. DARD has provided comments to Planning Service in relation to the protection of animal health, the requirement for approval under animal by-products legislation and the location of the proposed digester close to a floodplain.

Ulster-Scots Dictionary: Public Money

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much public money has been spent by her Department on the provision of an Ulster-Scots dictionary.

(AQO 5099/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has spent £25,673 on preparatory work for an Ulster-Scots dictionary. £20,673 was for the development of an Ulster-Scots "Spelling and Pronunciation Guide" and "Word Glossary" under the auspices of the Ulster-Scots Academy Implementation Group in 2011, £13,523 of this money was spent by the Ulster-Scots Academy Implementation Group and £7,150 by the Ulster-Scots Agency. The Ministerial Advisory Group Ulster Scots Academy has provided a further £5,000 to the Ulster Scots Language Society for completion and publication of the "Spelling and Pronunciation Guide" and "Word Glossary" and their subsequent launch in March of this year. Their publication included an invitation for consultation feedback. These documents will make an important contribution to the aim of the Ministerial Advisory Group – Ulster Scots Academy to develop an Ulster-Scots dictionary. This will first require agreement on the orthography of Ulster Scots. This will be a step by step process based on consensus across the Ulster Scots sector and is likely to take some time to develop. Preparation of an Ulster-Scots dictionary is an important piece of work to be taken forward by the Ulster-Scots academy.

Fish: Hydroelectric Schemes

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what are the current specifications for the installation of fish passes on hydro-electric schemes.

(AQO 5100/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: All hydro electric planning applications are submitted to DCAL Inland Fisheries Group, as a statutory planning consultee. Each application is assessed as to compliance with Section 54 of the Fisheries Act (NI) 1966 (as amended) which requires adequate and appropriate fish passage arrangements for impoundments in watercourses.

Assessment of proposed fish passage arrangements is carried out by a Technical Assessment Group (TAG) consisting of Senior Fisheries Officers and Fisheries Scientists. The TAG uses best practice guidance as detailed in technical manuals used by DEFRA, the Environment Agency and the Food and Agriculture Organisation. These run to hundreds of pages and are available on the appropriate websites. A recommendation is then made by the TAG on whether DCAL should approve the proposed fish passage arrangements based on the information provided. Section 54 of the Fisheries Act requires that all fish passes must be approved by DCAL.

The TAG also considers the potential impact of the abstraction operation on the existing fisheries ecology and fish passage opportunities within the depleted channel.

Casement Park: Redevelopment

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, given that Casement Park is currently closed, what plans she has to provide assistance and support to other grounds during any re-development period.

(AQO 5101/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The redevelopment of Ravenhill and the planned redevelopment of Windsor Park allow for the use of the Stadiums to be maintained during the construction period.

The situation with Casement Park, due to its complexity means that the use of the Stadium, during the redevelopment cannot be maintained.

Whilst the UCGAA are responsible for developing proposals and alternatives for this situation, my officials are willing to engage and consider any request for assistance and support which may develop.

Currently no assistance or support has been requested during the redevelopment phase, but proposals are being reviewed and considered for post completion phase.

Department of Education

Education: Optimising Achievement

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how he proposes to take forward the recommendations contained in the final pilot evaluation report on the Regional Training Unit project Optimising Achievement through a whole school approach to Wellbeing. (AQW 28139/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The report on the evaluation of a pilot training course about the 'Optimising Achievement' materials has only recently been forwarded to my Department. The report reflects the feedback from staff from 15 schools immediately following the 3 days of training completed in early March. Until I have had an opportunity to consider the evaluation report and its wider implications, there will be no decision on the place which the 'Optimising Achievement' approach to pupils' emotional health and wellbeing has within the overall 'iMatter' Programme.

Nonetheless, the priority at this time within the 'iMatter' Programme is the development and piloting of an audit tool for use by schools to assess their current approach to promoting pupils' emotional health and wellbeing and how that might be improved.

Education and Training Inspectorate: Focused Inspections

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many (i) full; and (ii) focused inspections were carried out in schools by the Education and Training Inspectorate, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 28203/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

Academic Year	'Full' inspections	'Focused' inspections *
September 2003- August 2004	63	-
September 2004- August 2005	113	-
September 2005- August 2006	114	-

Academic Year	'Full' inspections	'Focused' inspections *
September 2006- August 2007	117	-
September 2007- August 2008	123	75
September 2008- August 2009	104	49
September 2009- August 2010	133	49
September 2010- August 2011	128	73
September 2011- August 2012	168	65
September 2012- August 2013	155	53

Note: 'focused' inspections are a subset 'full' inspections.

Note:

- The figures provided are for primary, post-primary, independent and special schools.
- The inspection figures in the table above do not take account of any follow-up inspection work, survey evaluation visits or district inspection visits.
- A 'focused' inspection is a 'full' primary inspection. Note: 'full' inspection includes all inspections, involving an evaluation of quality of provision for learning, leadership and management, achievements and standards, and overall effectiveness.
- Prior to 2007, inspection data was held manually. The number of 'full' inspections has been included in the response; however, the cost of providing a more detailed breakdown of 'focused' inspections would be disproportionate.

Education and Training Inspectorate: Inspection Grades

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many inspections were graded (i) outstanding; (ii) very good; (iii) good; (iv) satisfactory; and (v) inadequate, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 28204/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

Academic Year	Inspection grade: 'Outstanding'	Inspection grade: 'Very Good'	Inspection grade: 'Good'	Inspection grade: 'Satisfactory'	Inspection grade: 'Inadequate'
September 2008 – August 2009	18	65	82	63	18
September 2009 – August 2010	30	73	85	60	14
September 2010 – August 2011	36	86	83	57	15
September 2011 – August 2012	23	110	122	55	17
September 2012 – August 2013	34	114	121	73	20

Schools: Crossing Patrols

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many assessments have been made on a school crossing patrol being retained, in each of the last five years; and how many of these assessments resulted in the removal of the patrol.

(AQW 28214/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have advised that the number of assessments made on a school crossing patrol being retained, in each of the last five years, and how many of these assessments resulted in the removal of the patrol, is as follows:

Year	Number of assessments of school crossing patrols	Number of patrols removed
2009	219	10

Year	Number of assessments of school crossing patrols	Number of patrols removed
2012	222	15
2013	213	9

North Down: Classroom Assistants

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of classroom assistants in each school in North Down. (AQW 28423/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details the number of classroom assistants (headcount) in schools in North Down.

Literacy and Numeracy: Delivering Social Change

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what training and support is in place for teachers who have been appointed as part of the Signature project.

(AQW 28475/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Over 270 additional teachers will be in 300 schools as part of the Delivering Social Change Literacy and Numeracy Project. A wide programme of support has been put in place to support both the additional recent graduate teachers and the teachers seconded to provide the support to pupils.

General information about the project and contact details of officers in the implementation team (CASS and HR) and local ELB CASS Officers has been provided to all schools in hard copy and via the WELB website.

A dedicated website NISPLAN has been set up to provide specific help and support. This includes an online help facility. All queries submitted via the help facility are responded to by the relevant specialist and CASS Officers in each ELB provide support by telephone, email and school visits (as required).

All the recent graduate teachers who are beginning teachers (BT) or in Early Professional Development (EPD) are being supported through the Beginning Teacher/EPD programme, already provided by the ELBs.

All Teacher Tutors (teachers in school who provide support in house to BTs/EPDs) are provided with support and training through the BT/EPD programme.

A specific training programme has been developed and is being delivered to all centrally recruited recent graduate teachers who will provide the direct support to pupils. A specific training programme has been developed and will be delivered over December and January 2014 to all the experienced seconded teachers.

Youth Organisations: Funding Criteria

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what criteria was used to determine need in relation to the investment of £12m in the youth sector.

(AQW 28476/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: To be eligible for grant-aid funding, the youth organisation must be registered with and have the support of an education and library board or receive funding from Youth Council for Northern Ireland. The organisations must also demonstrate they operate a Youth Service Programme for a minimum 9 hours per week over at least 30 weeks per year.

All eligible applications which met the above criteria were then scored and weighted against: creating access and facilities for the disabled; carrying out essential Health & Safety work; fire safety; child protection; meeting the needs of young people within section 75; collaboration, partnership, sharing facilities/resources; existing use by youth; and cost effectiveness/value for money.

Youth Capital Funding Scheme

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to list the projects which have benefitted from the announcement of capital investment in the youth sector; and to detail the funding allocated to each project.

(AQW 28477/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my announcement on 14 November 2013, 53 schemes were successful in applying for grant-aid from the Youth Capital Funding Scheme for Voluntary Organisations for 2013/2014. I have enclosed a table listing the successful schemes and the approximate costs that the Department of Education (DE) has been asked to contribute. The actual cost for each scheme and DE's contribution will be dependent on Departmental approval of detailed drawings and costings.

Schools: Governor Appointments

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how he will ensure that nominees for Boards of Governors, as part of the current reconstitution process, will be empathetic to the ethos of the various schools.

(AQW 28479/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Applicants for governor appointments to be made by the Department or the education and library boards are invited to describe on their application forms their commitment to the ethos of the schools or types of schools in which they would prefer to serve. The information on the form will be considered for the purpose of ensuring that governor appointments comply with statutory requirements.

Education Bill: Political Meetings

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28068/11-15, to detail (i) the dates on which he has met with political representatives or parties; (ii) the name of each political party at each meeting; (iii) the attendees at each meeting; (iv) the purpose of each meeting; and (v) the outcomes from each meeting.

(AQW 28613/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My diary does not record details of political meetings. I have met with a large number of political representatives regarding the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority (ESA). The establishment of ESA is raised at most meetings with educational and political stakeholders as a matter of course.

South Eastern Education and Library Board: Special Educational Needs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education whether the South Eastern Education and Library Board will be allocated extra resources due to an anticipated increase in numbers of children with special education needs.

(AQW 28679/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The majority of special educational needs (SEN) expenditure is met from the Board's block grant and resulting pressures/easements are considered in conjunction with other block grant pressures/easements. The South Eastern Education and Library Board 2013-14 budget is currently being assessed, in conjunction with the bids submitted by the Board, as part of the January 2013/14 Monitoring exercise.

Education: CEO Salaries

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to detail the salaries of the CEO of (i) each Education and Library Board; (ii) the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools; (iii) the Irish Medium support body; and (iv) the Integrated Education support body.

(AQW 28732/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not give details of individuals' salaries or other payments.

The remuneration for CEOs in each public body sponsored by the Executive is published annually by OFMDFM in the Public Bodies Annual Report. The latest report available (2011/12) can be viewed at <http://www.ofmdfmi.gov.uk/public-appointments-annual-reports>.

Comhairle Na Gaelscolaíochta and the Council for Integrated Education were designated as public bodies in 2012/13. Information on these bodies will be included in the 2012/13 report when published.

Department for Employment and Learning

Work Contracts: Zero Hours

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the differences for people employed on a zero hours contract compared with those with a twenty hour contract in terms of redundancy, maternity/paternity pay/leave, sick pay, holiday pay, tax credits, housing benefit and other such rights or benefits.

(AQW 27973/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): I have grouped the answers to these three questions together for ease of reference.

I am not aware of any official type of contract called a "twenty hour contract". I therefore am assuming that the question refers to a part-time worker contract.

The main difference between a zero-hours contract and a part-time worker contract is that for the former, a person agrees to be available for work as and when required, but has no guaranteed hours or times of work. A part-time worker on a twenty hour per week contract, for example, does have guaranteed hours of work.

It is difficult to address the general rights of people on zero-hours contracts, as there are a variety of cases and situations in which these contracts can be used. For example, most people on a zero-hours contract are workers who operate under a contract, and are entitled to:

- the National Minimum Wage;
- rest breaks, paid holiday and night work limits;
- protection against unauthorised deductions from pay;
- statutory maternity, paternity and adoption pay (but not leave);
- protection under Public Interest Disclosure law;
- protection from unlawful discrimination;
- Health and Safety protection; and
- additional rights under the Agency Workers Regulations (NI) 2011.

Whilst most people on zero-hours contracts are 'workers', a 2012 employment tribunal case in Great Britain, Pulse Healthcare Ltd -v- Care Watch Care Services Ltd, found that six individuals employed on zero-hours contracts were 'employees'.

Employees have all the rights of workers, plus:

- maternity, paternity and adoption leave;
- unfair dismissal rights; and
- eligibility for statutory redundancy pay.

Therefore, if a zero-hours contract worker is, by the terms and conditions of his/her appointment an employee, they would receive these additional rights, as would a part-time worker in a similar contractual position.

Zero-hours contracts generally do not provide a worker with sick pay. A part-time worker would receive sick pay under the provisions of the Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000, if, as is likely, a comparable full-time worker receives sick pay.

HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has advised that Working Tax Credit (WTC) is a work incentive measure to top up the earnings of workers on low incomes and is available only to people who are in qualifying remunerative work. Remunerative work is defined as work done for payment (or in expectation of payment) for at least 16 hours a week or a higher figure depending on a person's circumstances. An additional requirement is that the work must be expected to last for at least 4 weeks from the date of claim.

In principle, HMRC treats zero-hours contracts similarly to how it treats other contracts. HMRC asks a WTC claimant to advise how many hours of paid work they normally do each week. If a claimant normally works more than the qualifying number of hours, with only the occasional week dipping below, they are treated as eligible. If, on the other hand, their working pattern is unpredictable and they regularly work less than the qualifying number of hours, then they would not be regarded as normally working the qualifying number of hours and they would not be treated as eligible.

The Department for Social Development (DSD) has advised that Social Security benefit claimants on a zero-hours contract can claim, in the same way as other part-time workers, for hours that they can work, and for payment disregards for paid employment. In order to claim Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support, a person must not be working, or working less than 16 hours per week. As a rule, claimants who are receiving Employment Support Allowance are not permitted to work; however, there are some exceptions which apply to certain categories of claimants.

DSD has also advised that partners of claimants who are receiving Income Support, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance or income-related Employment Support Allowance can work up to 24 hours a week. For claimants receiving contribution-based Jobseeker's Allowance, or contribution-based Employment Support Allowance, the hours that the partner works do not affect the claimant's claim.

Zero-hours contracts have no impact on Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, but I assume that the question refers to the impacts of zero-hours contracts on the various categories of person listed in Section 75, particularly women and young people.

Seasonally unadjusted figures from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) suggest that in the period October to December 2012, there were 76,000 persons aged 16-24 in the UK employed on a zero hours contract, out of a total of around 200,000. The same figures stated that there were 78,000 people aged 25-49, and 47,000 people aged 50 and over, on zero-hours contracts.

The ONS figures also stated that of the 200,000 people estimated to be on zero-hours contracts in October to December 2012, there were 96,000 men and 104,000 women. There does not appear to be a disproportionate impact on women or young people.

I have no immediate plans at present to regulate or legislate on zero-hours contracts. I am aware that the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has reviewed the use of zero-hours contracts in GB, and may be producing legislation. I will monitor developments there, and will await the production of quantitative and qualitative research on the position in Northern Ireland, before making decisions on any potential regulation or legislation here.

Work Contracts: Zero Hours/Section 75

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the impact that zero hour contracts may have on Section 75 legislation, given that they are predicted to be more common amongst women and young people
(AQW 27974/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have grouped the answers to these three questions together for ease of reference.

Work Contracts: Zero Hours/Legislation

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail any plans to regulate or legislate for zero hour contracts. (AQW 27975/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have grouped the answers to these three questions together for ease of reference.

Childcare Strategy

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline (i) the opportunities for alignment between initiatives, programmes and strategies for employment and training support; and (ii) the 15 key actions associated with a childcare strategy, including information on the 4 key actions in respect of workforce development.

(AQW 28145/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Executive's Bright Start programme provides an opportunity for a number of key Departments to undertake greater partnership working in order to better support and develop the childcare sector.

My Department's main contribution concerns the four actions under the programme's 'Workforce Development' theme. Support for these actions will directly support the delivery of many of the other actions in the programme, including the provision of additional childcare places.

In particular, we will continue to work with the NI Social Care Council and employers, largely through the SkillsActive Sector Skills Council, to help address skills demand, and support the development of greater capacity and better quality provision to support the sector's expansion. The Department's on-going work with the sector will give a particular priority to addressing the issues highlighted in Bright Start.

Many of my Department's services and programmes already support clients who wish to pursue a career in the childcare sector. In addition, we recognise the need for accessible entry points to the childcare workforce for those who are unemployed or economically inactive, including young people. Therefore, my Department's Bridge to Employment Programme will provide a route to help unemployed people gain the necessary skills to enable them to compete for specific vacancies on an equal basis with others.

To help address the need for initiatives to encourage greater diversity in the childcare workforce, my Department provides funding for ESOL courses for people who do not have English as their first language. My Department is also open to exploring with OFMDFM colleagues, with regard to their equality remit, the opportunities for better support for minority ethnic communities.

Learning Disability: DEL Statistics

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail why there is no specific section or addendum inclusion for learning disability provision on his departmental website under the Statistics section of Training and Employment Programmes.

(AQW 28150/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Statistics section of the Department's website contains information produced by its Analytical Services Unit. Each of the main areas in the 'Training and Employment Programmes' sub-section contains a breakdown of participation from Section 75 groups, including disability. There is no further breakdown into those with a learning disability as they are not always separately identifiable and if they are, the numbers are often small and potentially disclosive.

Analytical Services also publishes an article in its Labour Market Bulletin detailing the equality breakdown of participants in a wide range of the Department's provision, including participation by those with a disability.

Programmes specifically for people with a disability are managed by the Department's Disability Employment Service. Whilst statistics on this provision are not currently published, Analytical Services and the Disability Employment Service are currently working together to develop official statistics in relation to disability employment related matters to be published on the Department's website in due course. The decision has yet to be taken as to whether learning disability will be separately identified, but if there is a user need to do so and the numbers are robust, then it is likely that statistics will be produced.

University of Ulster: One Plan

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail any discussions he has had with the University of Ulster regarding the One Plan target of 9400 students by 2020.

(AQW 28272/11-15)

Dr Farry: I and my officials have discussed the expansion of the University of Ulster's Magee campus on various occasions in the past few years. The focus of those discussions was the One Plan's interim target for an additional 1,000 undergraduate places by 2015.

Within the resources available to me for higher education, I have been able to allocate an additional 652 undergraduate places to the University of Ulster which it has undertaken to locate at Magee. These will be in place by 2015.

I will continue to bid for resources for additional higher education places for Northern Ireland and I would hope to be able to move the University close to, if not achieve, the interim target by 2015.

University of Ulster: Transfer of Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether there are any plans to relocate University of Ulster staff from Magee to any other campus.

(AQW 28273/11-15)

Dr Farry: This is not information that my Department would normally hold. However, further to the response given to you in AQW 28279/11-15, the University has informed me that it has no plans to transfer any posts from Magee to any other University of Ulster campus

South West Regional College: Learning Disability

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning in relation to learning disability provision within South West Regional College and specifically the Dungannon & Cookstown campuses, what consideration was given and consultation took place in relation to difficulties of Post-19 students from the Dungannon area accessing the Cookstown Campus.

Dr Farry: I will refer the member to my response to AQW 25350/11-15 and AQW 25524/11-15, when I provided details of the collaboration between South West College (SWC) and Transitions Officers, Day Opportunity Workers and the Principals and staff of Sperrinview and Kilonan schools.

As advised previously, SWC have informed my Department that the College has well-established links with Transitions Officers and Day Opportunity Workers. As a result of these links, provision for young adults with learning difficulties and/or disabilities has been expanded at the Cookstown campus, during the last 5 years. During this period, the College used meetings, open days and celebration of achievement events to discuss opportunities with students, parents and school managers.

North West Regional College: Code of Governance

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to provide an update on the Colleges Code of Governance incorporating the McConnell Recommendations, and a date for its completion.

(AQW 28655/11-15)

Dr Farry: The McConnell report identified issues relating to the modus operandi of the Governing Body. Specifically, these were around the conflicts of interest associated with the role of the staff and principal on the Governing Body and the scope of debate of Governing Body discussions. Mr McConnell understood that there was work ongoing on a Code of Governance. The work on the Code had in fact concluded and the Code was in place in 2012. It originated from the Review of Governance and its purpose was to provide clarity around the roles and responsibilities of the Governing Body, the Principal, and the Department.

The discussions which led to the Action Plan identified that the Governing Body would benefit from further training on the Code. It was the intention to provide this at a scheduled meeting of the Governing Body in September. However, this was postponed in order to prioritise the implementation of other recommendations from the review of industrial relations at the college. It will be held at a Governing Body meeting in early 2014.

The Department has already presented and discussed the Code with the North West Regional College Governing Body in February 2012. The further training will underpin this and specifically examine the roles of staff and principal members of Governing Bodies and the accountability lines between the Governing Body and the management team of the college. This session will be used to identify any lessons learned from the issues in NWRC and the Code will be amended, if necessary, after this session.

European Social Fund: DEL Drawdown

Mr Attwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the current drawdown of European Social Fund monies for programmes within his Department, and the measures that are being put in place to maximise this resource. (AQO 5120/11-15)

Dr Farry: The level of drawdown from the European Social Fund is largely determined by the actual spend for each of the individual projects assisted by the Northern Ireland European Social Fund Programme, 2007-13.

Since the commencement of the European Social Fund Programme in 2007, my Department has achieved all annual spending targets set by the European Commission. This has ensured that there has been no de-commitment or loss of funds to the programme.

A total of €71 million of European Social Funding has been drawn down from the European Commission since from the start of the programme, with a further €25 million to be drawn down before the end of December 2013.

My Department has taken action to increase the capacity of the European Social Fund Programme through the appropriate utilisation of under-spends in other European funds, and through additional funding made available by the NI Executive.

The initial allocation of €166 million from the European Social Fund was augmented by the transfer of €24 million from the European Regional Development Fund.

This additional funding has enabled my Department to increase the number of projects assisted by the programme, and the actual number of individual participants that will be supported by the fund.

My Department has fully committed all available funding and anticipates that all funding still to be drawn down will be fully utilised over the duration of the Programme, which runs until 31 March 2015.

Employment Law Review: Consultation

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many responses were received to the consultation on the Employment Law Review. (AQO 5124/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department launched a 16-week consultation on a review of employment law in July this year, in order to fulfil a commitment in the Executive's Economic Strategy. The consultation, which closed on 5th November, elicited 41 responses. In the interest of obtaining as much evidence as possible, extensions have been given to a small number of stakeholders who did not meet the deadline.

The responses received provide a significant amount of information and comment on the Department's initial proposals. My officials are analysing the responses at present, and are drafting the Department's response.

The Departmental response will outline the firm proposals for reform which I intend to bring forward, and I plan to publish this response early in the New Year.

However, many of the policy proposals will require primary and secondary legislation. I will therefore arrange for the Assembly Committee to be briefed on the outcomes of the public consultation early in the New Year. As soon as possible thereafter, I plan to present final policy proposals to the Executive.

Universities: Research Funding

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his efforts to support university research. (AQO 5125/11-15)

Dr Farry: Under "Graduating to Success my Department's Higher Education Strategy", I have introduced a new model which directs funding towards research which makes a meaningful contribution to the economy of our region and the wider community.

This model distributes £48.7 million to our Universities and I have recently approved a £3 million increase to core research funding for the current academic year.

Critically, our universities are punching above their weight compared to their UK counterparts with income from business and community interaction.

Contributory factors to this strong overall performance are:

- Income from collaborative research – 3.6% of UK total;
- Income from intellectual property – 6.9% of UK total,
- The number of spin-off companies still active after 3 years is now standing at 48 which is 4.8% of the UK total.

In view of this strong performance, I have increased recurrent funding for Knowledge Transfer, through the Higher Education Innovation Fund, by £2.68m to £11.68m.

My Department has also supported 12 leading edge, tri-national project through the US-Ireland R&D Partnership.

Furthermore, the European Commission's Framework 7 programme will shortly be succeeded by Horizon 2020 which will run from 2014-2020 with a budget of €77 billion¹.

Together with the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment, my Department has developed a £1.8m Higher Education EU Support Fund for 7 Northern Ireland Contact Points who provide specialist support to academics and businesses across areas of economic relevance to us, such as energy, advanced materials and transport technologies, information and communication technologies and connected health.

In order to offer our students a wider range of postgraduate opportunities here, I have committed also to a substantial increase in the number of directly funded PhD places.

As a first step I have identified funding to support an additional 350 PhD places over the next three Academic Years towards the target in the Strategy of 1,000 postgraduate awards by 2020.

The Research and Development undertaken by our Universities will continue to play a critical role in successfully rebuilding our economy and, moving forward, funding, at least at current levels is necessary for them to develop and sustain a world-class research base in Northern Ireland.

¹. Confirmed on 21 November 2013

Parental Leave: Shared

Ms Fearon asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the shared paternal leave proposals. (AQO 5121/11-15)

Dr Farry: Public consultation dealing with shared parental leave and pay, and a proposed extension of the right to request flexible working, formally closed on 23 August.

A majority of the 28 substantive responses received by my Department supported the introduction of a Northern Ireland system of shared parental leave and pay that corresponds with that currently being taken forward in Great Britain. There was also support for extending the right to request flexible working to cover all employees.

Shared parental leave and pay are intended to afford working parents greater choice and flexibility around how they share between them caring responsibilities following the birth or adoption of a child.

Extending the right to request flexible working will support the wider recognition of changing patterns in family life and the shift away from the 9 to 5 workplace.

The Committee for Employment and Learning was briefed on the outcome of the consultation on 25 September and the proposals were further considered by the Executive on 7 November, when agreement was given to draft an Assembly Bill.

Once drafting is complete and the necessary approvals have been secured, my objective will be to introduce the Bill in the Assembly in March 2014, with regulations to follow. Ultimately I intend to make the rights available from April 2015.

Jobs: Vacancies

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many employment vacancies are on display through Jobs and Benefits Offices compared with unemployment figures. (AQO 5123/11-15)

Dr Farry: As at Monday 18 November 2013, the total number of vacancies listed on JobCentre Online was 1,607. JobCentre Online displays all vacancies notified to the Department.

The number of vacancies notified to the Department increased by 21% to 58,890 in 2012/13 in comparison with 48,658 notified in 2011/12. The claimant count at October 2013 was 60,119 which makes up 6.6% of the workforce. This is a decrease of 3% from the previous month and a decrease of 5.3% from the previous year.

F G Wilson/Caterpillar: Retraining

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what retraining his Department has offered people affected by redundancies at FG Wilson/Caterpillar. (AQO 5126/11-15)

Dr Farry: Retraining was offered to all employees affected by the redundancies at FG Wilson /Caterpillar.

My Redundancy Advice Service delivered a tailored package of support to staff across all three FG Wilson/Caterpillar sites in Larne, Monkstown and Springvale.

In addition, my officials worked with the company's appointed out-placement provider, Lee Hecht Harrison, represented locally by Gilpin Executive Search and Development, to organise a job fair and a training and recruitment fair, at each of the sites. My Department offered retraining to all individuals who needed reskilling or up-skilling to facilitate a move into a new role. A number of recruiting companies participated in the job fairs. One example was the retraining offered in relation to 28 posts identified in the food processing sector, mainly with Moy Park.

The training and recruitment fairs provided an opportunity for workers facing redundancy to find out more about relevant opportunities and pathways into a different career. Northern Regional College, South Eastern Regional College and Belfast Metropolitan College participated in these fairs, along with the relevant Sector Skills Councils and a number of private recruitment agencies.

At November 2013, of the 244 former employees who initially made a claim for Jobseekers Allowance, 72 are still in receipt of benefit. All individuals receive help and support from the Employment Service and advice on training and employment programmes. Our records indicate that former FG Wilson employees are availing or have participated in the Steps to Work Programme, Jobclubs and Short Accredited Training Programmes, to assist them return to work.

North West Regional College: Industrial Relations

Mr McCartney asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the McConnell Review of Industrial Relations in the North West Regional College Report.
(AQO 5127/11-15)

Dr Farry: There has been notable progress in the implementation of the recommendations of the Review of Industrial Relations in North West Regional College.

After the report had been published, the college developed a plan detailing the actions required to implement the report. This was developed and agreed with stakeholders, including the University and College Union. The production of the action plan demonstrated the commitment of the Governing Body and senior management to a process of change in the college.

The college subsequently appointed a Change Manager to implement the action plan. I am pleased that all parties have been engaging with the change manager and have been working to implement the report.

There have been some notable actions, which have already been completed. In particular, the college has agreed a revised Course and Performance Review system with the University and College Union. This has been implemented with effect from this academic year.

The Human Resource Services Department of the college has also made significant progress addressing recommendations, and is currently consulting on a new draft strategy.

Finally, the Change Manager has been brokering negotiations between the University and Colleges Union in the college, and the Governing Body and senior management of the college, with the aim of them rejoining the local liaison forum.

It is important to note that the report stated that it would take between three to five years to change relationships in the college. Therefore, the full benefits of the changes in the college will only be realised in the longer term. Nevertheless, the Department will continue to monitor and hold the college to account for the ongoing implementation of the report.

Unemployment: Young People

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the unemployment rate for 18-24 year olds as outlined in the latest labour market figures.
(AQO 5128/11-15)

Dr Farry: The latest unemployment rate published in the monthly Labour Market Report is derived from the Labour Force Survey. The survey is a small sample of 3,000 households. I have previously stated in response to oral question AQO 4935/11 – 15 that, as the young unemployed group is a subset of the overall sample, there is a sampling error associated with the Youth Unemployment rate of plus or minus 5.8%. The November report estimates the unemployment rate for 18 to 24 year olds at 24.7%, an increase of 5.5 percentage points over the year. As I said in my previous answer on this subject, while I would not want to underplay the level of youth unemployment, it is important to note that this change over the year is not statistically significant.

In terms of the Northern Ireland claimant count, at October 2013 there were 16,286 under twenty-fives claiming benefit, representing a decrease of 6.3% over the month and a decrease of 11.3% over the year. This is a real change which is not subject to sampling error. While the number of young persons claiming benefits remains high, at 27.1% of all claimants, I welcome the decrease of over 1000 claimants this month and the decrease of over 2000 in the past twelve months.

My Department continues to implement and review policies and programmes to address youth unemployment. Pathways to Success and our Youth Employment Scheme provide employment and skills incentives to assist young people. A post implementation review of the Youth Employment Scheme has resulted in enhancements being introduced, at the end of September, to increase the participation of both young people and employers.

Apprenticeships: Cross-border Portability

Mr Milne asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the level of portability of apprenticeships across the border.
(AQO 5129/11-15)

Dr Farry: Every apprentice funded by my department follows an apprenticeship framework, approved by the relevant Sector Skills Councils; this framework sets out the appropriate national occupational standards and qualifications, which must be achieved by the participant.

Framework qualifications must appear on the Register of Regulated Qualifications.

Over the years, the Qualifications' Regulators across the UK and Ireland have sought to gain a better appreciation of the comparability of qualifications offered in the different countries. This joint working has resulted in the publication of a reference leaflet: Qualifications can cross boundaries: a rough guide to comparing qualifications in the UK and Ireland.

The leaflet provides a better understanding of how qualifications in the UK and Ireland are organised, and makes it possible to compare qualifications across national boundaries. It also allows comparisons to be drawn between the UK and Irish frameworks, and the European qualifications frameworks.

The fourth edition of the leaflet was published in July 2013 and is available to view or download from the Regulators' websites.

Finally, as the member will be aware, back in February I announced a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. The review process has included discussions with Ruari Quinn, TD Minister for Education and Skills, about mutual apprenticeships reviews, co-operation on training opportunities, and qualifications.

The outcome of the apprenticeship review, which will be announced shortly, considers the issue of portability by examining how to ensure that an apprenticeship in Northern Ireland is seen internationally as a substantial achievement, with a recognised currency.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

European Regional Competitiveness and Employment: Funding

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to list the programmes under her responsibility which have received funding from the current round of European Regional Competitiveness and Employment funding.

(AQW 28103/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment):

1 Programmes under my responsibility, listed by Intermediate Body (IB) are:

Intermediate Body	Programme
Invest NI	Business Improvement Agent
Invest NI	Business Information Centre
Invest NI	Compete
Invest NI	Design Development Programme
Invest NI	Envirowise
Invest NI	NI Symbiosis Programme
Invest NI	Product and Process Development

Consumer Council: Future Arrangements

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether a decision on the future of the Consumer Council would have to be taken at Executive level, given the cross-cutting nature of its functions.

(AQW 28107/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I will bring my recommendations on the future arrangements for consumer representation to the Executive for consideration in 2014.

Health and Safety: Building Sites

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there are plans to introduce legal powers to compel the administrators of construction companies to make building sites safe and meet health and safety requirements.

(AQW 28109/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has responsibility for oversight of the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI).

Whilst HSENI has a legal remit on a construction site where there is a work activity being carried out, I am afraid that the power to compel administrators of construction companies to make building sites safe and meet health and safety requirements is outside their remit and there is no intention of introducing such legal powers at this time.

Hydraulic Fracturing: Ministerial Meetings

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the people and organisations that have contracted her requesting a meeting to discuss their concerns regarding hydraulic fracturing; (ii) the requests she has accepted; and (iii) which people/organisation she has subsequently met.

(AQW 28112/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In light of Data Protection considerations, it is not appropriate to name specific individuals but I can confirm that three people contacted me requesting a meeting to discuss their concerns regarding hydraulic fracturing:

- (i) a Belfast resident;
a fellow MLA; and the Director of a Development Media Workshop based in Northern Ireland;
- (ii) of these requests, one was accepted;
- (iii) a meeting with the MLA took place on 28 May 2012.

I have met a number of people and groups as a local constituency representative.

Carbon Trust Loan Scheme: Renewable Heat Incentive

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the Carbon Trust Loan Scheme is compatible with the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive.

(AQW 28127/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The issue of whether the Carbon Trust Loan Scheme is compatible with the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive is currently being considered by my Department under the Renewable Heat Incentive dispute resolution procedures. The outcome of the review will be published on the DETI website in due course.

Renewables Obligation Certificate

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the amount paid in subsidies for wind turbine energy production, in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 28133/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Support for renewable electricity generation is provided under the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO) in the form of Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation Certificates (NIROCs). As the NIRO is a market-based support mechanism, the actual value of a NIROC to a generator will depend on the supply and demand for NIROCs during a given obligation period, and the individual arrangements reached between generators and the supplier or other person to whom they sell their NIROCs. Table 1 sets out the approximate value of NIROCs issued in each of the last three financial years for wind generation. Totals for all three Renewables Obligations (NIRO, Renewables Obligation Scotland and Renewables Obligation England & Wales) are provided in brackets.

Table 1

Year	NIROCs issued*	ROC value (buyout price plus 10%)	Total
2010-11	694,828 (7,683,275)	£40.68	£28,265,603 (£312,555,627)
2011-12	1,127,027 (11,661,386)	£42.55	£47,954,998 (£496,191,974)
2012-13	1,059,842 (12,181,066)	£44.78	£47,459,724 (£545,468,135)

Electricity: Renewable Sources

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the research and assessment carried out on the capacity of the electricity grid to receive the resulting flow, prior to the Executive embarking on incentives to induce 40 percent of electricity production from renewable sources; and why there is such a volume of non-viable approvals.

(AQW 28220/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive's decision to set a target of 40 percent electricity consumption to come from renewable sources by 2020 was informed by a number of assessments, one of which was the 2008 All Island Grid Study. The Study was a comprehensive assessment of the ability of the electrical power system on the island to absorb large amounts of electricity from renewable sources.

The study concluded that it was technically feasible for up to 42 percent of electricity demand to come from renewable generation. It was envisaged that the majority of this would come from large scale onshore wind which is the least cost renewable generation option. The study recognised that significant capital investment in the grid would be necessary in some areas to accommodate the anticipated higher levels of renewable generation. The scale and timing of grid investment is a matter for Northern Ireland Electricity and the Utility Regulator through the price determination regime.

Unprecedented demand for small scale renewable generation connections has put a strain on the 11kV distribution network. Under current arrangements approved by the Utility Regulator, the cost of connecting small scale generation to the 11kV network is met by the generator. This means that the cost of upgrading 11kV lines to connect individual generators in certain circumstances may be prohibitive.

Electricity: Renewable Sources

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many approved renewable schemes, in number and their capacity, have not been implemented due to a lack of a viable/affordable connection to the electricity grid.

(AQW 28221/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No information is held by the Department on the reasons why individual developers may decide not to proceed with renewable electricity projects.

Electricity: Grid Overload

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action has been, and will be, taken to address the overloading of the electricity grid.

(AQW 28222/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Energy policy for Northern Ireland is set out in the Strategic Energy Framework which has been endorsed by the Northern Ireland Executive and which establishes energy priorities to 2020.

Approval for investment in the electricity grid is a matter for the Utility Regulator under the Price Determination regime.

However, DETI is currently in discussion with the Regulator, Northern Ireland Electricity and the System Operator (SONI) to examine the potential to use some European funding, with the aim of supporting investment in the grid to enable the integration of greater renewable electricity generation. Discussions which are at an early stage, are subject to securing the necessary approvals and the quantum will be small in relation to the scale of requirements in the current NIE price determination.

Tourist Board: Review

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there is a requirement to periodically review the Northern Ireland Tourist Board, and if so, when the most recent review was completed.

(AQW 28249/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive, in its 2011-15 Budget, committed to undertake periodic reviews of Arms Length Bodies to ensure Ministerial priorities and statutory commitments continue to be delivered in the most cost-effective manner. The review of NITB and wider tourism structures is a continuation of this process of ensuring value for money in the use of public funds and the delivery of services to the Northern Ireland public. The last Departmental review of NITB took place in 1997.

Petroleum Exploration Wells: Monitoring

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of times that abandoned petroleum wells have been inspected, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 28250/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI currently has no programme of on-going monitoring of petroleum exploration wells after they have been permanently plugged and abandoned in accordance with a specification approved by the Department.

South Antrim: Invest NI

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the manufacturing and engineering companies in South Antrim that are clients of InvestNI.

(AQW 28255/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Manufacturing Sector includes a range of industries, one of which is Engineering. Therefore to answer the question, Table 1 contains the names of manufacturing businesses located in the South Antrim Parliamentary Constituency Area that have been supported by Invest NI between 1st April 2010 and 31st March 2013. The table also highlights those businesses, whose primary activity is engineering.

Electricity: Small-scale Generation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail any improvements made in the local electricity network to ensure it can receive surplus electricity from small generation schemes.

(AQW 28268/11-15)

Mrs Foster: On 25 October 2013, Northern Ireland Electricity (NIE) announced that it had been granted investment approval by the Utility Regulator of up to £2.3 million to facilitate additional small scale generation export from the 11 kilovolt (kV) network to the 33kV network. This approval covers investments at 40 primary (33kV) substations, which will enable reverse power flow from the 11kV network to the upstream 33kV network when generation levels are high.

DETI is currently in discussion with the Utility Regulator, NIE and the System Operator (SONI) to examine the potential to use the European Regional Development Fund to support investment in the grid to enable the integration of greater renewable electricity generation, including small scale. Discussions which are at an early stage, are subject to securing the necessary approvals and the quantum will be small in relation to the scale of requirements in the current NIE price determination.

Energy Market: Hedging Policy

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how she intends to improve public perception and understanding in relation to energy companies hedging investments in energy stocks.

(AQW 28293/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Hedging policy relates to the detailed operations of the energy market. As such, it is a matter for the energy companies, not my Department, and I have no plans to undertake such work.

Energy: Retail Tariffs

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she will take to reduce the ability of energy companies to sharply increase or decrease their prices, allowing domestic and non-domestic customers to prepare for predicted energy costs.

(AQW 28294/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Energy companies which operate in Northern Ireland are licensed and regulated by the Utility Regulator, and where appropriate, this includes the regulation of retail energy supply tariffs.

The Utility Regulator carries out tariff reviews, on at least an annual basis, of the incumbent electricity and natural gas suppliers, and encourages energy suppliers to have suitable hedging policies in place to reduce the likelihood of significant price changes.

However, wholesale energy costs in world markets largely dictate final retail prices, and such markets react to external political, environmental, economic and financial impacts, which can sometimes result in sharp changes in retail energy prices.

Upper Bann: Jobs Promoted

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of jobs that have been promoted in the Upper Bann constituency in each of the last five years.

Mrs Foster: The table below shows the number of jobs promoted by Invest NI in the Upper Bann constituency area in each of the five years between 2008-09 and 2012-13.

Year	Jobs Promoted
2008-09	357
2009-10	780
2010-11	197
2011-12	224
2012-13	519

Upper Bann: Invest NI

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many businesses have been assisted by InvestNI in the Upper Bann constituency, in each of the last three years.

Mrs Foster: Table 1 below shows the number of businesses which have been assisted by Invest NI in the Upper Bann Parliamentary constituency area (PCA) in each of the years between 2010-11 and 2012-13.

Table 1: Number of Businesses Offered Support in Upper Bann PCA (2010-11 to 2012-13)

Year	Number
2010-11	155
2012-13	201

In addition, Invest NI offered support and guidance to individuals wishing to start a business through the Regional Start Initiative (RSI), formerly known as the Enterprise Development Programme. These are detailed in Table 2 below.

Table 2: Number of Individuals in Upper Bann PCA Offered Support Through RSI (2010-11 to 2012-13)

Year	Number
2010-11	164
2011-12	150
2012-13	75

Note: A number of individuals receiving RSI offers went on to avail of further Invest NI support. These individuals are removed from Table 1 and counted in Table 2 above.

In addition, Invest NI launched its Boosting Business initiative on 14th November 2011.

This initiative identifies the range of support and advice available to local businesses and provides accessible contact points, via telephone, email and social media. Invest NI now has a dedicated full time Business Support Team in place to deal with enquiries from businesses across Northern Ireland. Since its inception there have been 533 additional enquiries from the Upper Bann area.

South Down: Programme for Government Jobs Target

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the Programme for Government 2011/15 commitment to increase levels of employment by supporting the promotion of over 25,000 new jobs, in particular the number of jobs promoted in South Down.

(AQW 28354/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Despite the difficult and uncertain economic climate, we are continuing to make excellent progress towards our Programme for Government target of promoting over 25,000 new jobs by 31 March 2015. The most recently available figures show that, at the end of September 2013, a total of 17,201 jobs had been promoted, 612 of which were promoted in South Down.

Agri-food Loan Scheme

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment with regard to the Agri-Food loan scheme, to detail (i) the aim of the scheme; (ii) how long it will run; (iii) who can apply; and (iv) the application process.

(AQW 28395/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) The aim of the Agri-Food Loan Scheme is to enable the local agri-food industry to maximise the significant opportunity presented by the decision of several major retailers to stock only UK sourced meat. The scheme will help local food producers, who form part of an integrated supply chain, to access the finance they need to invest in the farm buildings necessary to increase supply of the primary produce for processing. A key objective of the scheme is to help producers to overcome difficulties in accessing bank finance, an issue which was identified in "Going for Growth", the Strategic Action Plan developed by the Agri-Food Strategy Board.
- (ii) Given the aim of reacting to this market opportunity it is intended that the scheme will operate for a limited period only and is not expected to be open for new business beyond 2015. The first phase of the scheme will be open to broiler (poultry) producers and we in Government are working with the banks with the aim of, where it is shown to be feasible, rolling out subsequent phases of the scheme to other agri-food sectors; with a commitment to examine the potential to extend the scheme to pork, red meat, dairy and eggs by March 2014.
- (iii) & (iv) Producers will apply through their usual bank channels, with processes in the banks and Invest NI co-ordinated to ensure that applicants will only be required to submit one application for finance. For the impending poultry scheme the participating banks have prepared, for applicants, a standard checklist of information required in making an application to them under the scheme. While anyone may apply, ultimately, those applicants that are part of an integrated supply chain are likely to have the greatest chances of making a successful application – in practical terms for this first phase of the scheme, this will be those producers with a supply contract for their poultry produce. Standardised contractual arrangements will also be in place for the poultry scheme to further simplify the process.

North Down: Invest NI

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the manufacturing and engineering companies in North Down that are clients of InvestNI.

(AQW 28412/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Manufacturing Sector includes a range of industries, one of which is Engineering. Therefore to answer the question, Table 1 contains the names of manufacturing businesses located in the North Down Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA) that have been supported by Invest NI between 1st April 2010 and 31st March 2013. Narrow Water Bridge: DETI Meetings

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of meetings held by her office relating to the Narrow Water Bridge project, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 28539/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have not held any meetings relating to the Narrow Water Bridge project in the last twelve months.

Energy: Domestic Prices

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the actions she intends to take to make domestic energy more affordable.

(AQW 28557/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has no direct role in the setting of energy prices which are mainly driven by wholesale costs set on global markets. Energy companies which operate in Northern Ireland are licensed and regulated by the Utility Regulator, and where appropriate, this includes the regulation of retail energy supply tariffs.

The Utility Regulator carries out regular tariff reviews, of the incumbent electricity and natural gas suppliers, and my Department works with the Regulator and the energy sector to improve competition and provide options for consumers to reduce bills by switching supplier.

There are a number of active suppliers in the domestic electricity market in Northern Ireland, and there is competition in the domestic gas market in Greater Belfast. The domestic gas market outside Greater Belfast will be open to competition from April 2015.

It is also my intention to give consumers additional energy choice by extending the availability of natural gas to towns in the West and North-West, and to other areas where gas extension is economically viable. I am also working to extend the Renewable Heat Incentive to the domestic sector before Spring of next year and already have a premium payment scheme in place to assist with the capital cost of the transition to renewable forms of heat.

I also await the outcome of the ETI Committee review of electricity policy and pricing, including any recommendations the Committee may make.

Energy: Industrial and Commercial

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the level of competition within the local industrial and commercial energy supply market.

(AQW 28588/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Utility Regulator reports that there are currently five active domestic electricity suppliers and eight active industrial and commercial suppliers in Northern Ireland. A number of these suppliers have entered the market in 2011 and 2012, suggesting that the level of competition continues to evolve.

Department of the Environment

Planning: Non-farming Rural Dwellers

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what options are available to non-farming rural dwellers who wish to build a home in the countryside; (ii) whether he plans to carry out a fundamental policy review; and (iii) what assessment he has made of the kinship method carried out in the south of Ireland for non-farming rural dwellers.

(AQW 27681/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): In relation to point (i) regarding the options available to non-farming rural dwellers to live in the countryside I can advise that PPS 21 'Sustainable Development in Countryside' already provides significant opportunities for non-farming rural dwellers wishing to live in the countryside. It does this by providing for:

- Replacement dwellings;
- The conversion and reuse of non-residential buildings as dwellings;
- New dwellings within an existing cluster or ribbon of buildings;
- Social and affordable housing schemes;
- Development within designated Dispersed Rural Communities; and
- A dwelling to meet compelling personal or domestic circumstances.

In relation to points (ii) and (iii) you will be aware of the work of my predecessor Alex Attwood MLA on the review into the operation of PPS21. In his July statement to the Assembly on the outcome of that review he expressed the view that PPS21 was working more effectively, and therefore the issue of a fundamental review did not arise at that time.

I am satisfied that in the period since the previous Ministers statement the policy continues to applied more flexibility to ensure that it meets the needs of rural dwellers. The most recent published statistics support this view. Figures for the first quarter of 2013/14 reveal an approval rate for new single dwellings in the countryside of 90.1%. This is up from 88.8% in the equivalent period the year before. In relation to replacement dwellings the approval rate in the first quarter stood at 93.3%, up from 92% on the equivalent period last year.

However, given the continued interest on the issue of non-farming rural dwellers, I will give further consideration to this matter as part of work on the development of a new single Strategic Planning Policy Statement. As part of this process I will also reflect on what lessons can be learned from the South of Ireland in relation to kinship.

Civil Service: DOE Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of the Environment how many Civil Service posts existed in his Department on 1 January 2012 and 1 January 2013 at (i) Administrative Assistant; (ii) Administrative Officer; (iii) Executive Officer 2; (iv) Executive Officer 1; (v) Staff Officer; (vi) Deputy Principal; (vii) Grade 7; and (viii) Grade 6 levels, broken down by local council area. (AQW 27953/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The number of full-time equivalent (FTE) Northern Ireland Civil Service posts in DOE on 1 January 2012 and 1 January 2013 broken down by specified grades, including analogous grades, and local council area are as follows:

Number of Posts (FTE)– January 2012

Carrier Bag Levy: Low-cost Reusable

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether research has been completed on the impact of consumer behaviour as a result of a levy on low cost reusable carrier bags.

(AQW 27965/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department's research in this area has focused on the environmental consequences of not extending the carrier bag levy to low cost reusable bags. In these circumstances, the relatively low price of low cost reusable bags could lead some people to treat them as single use bags – and discard them prematurely, with significant adverse impact on the environment.

Emerging evidence from Phase 1 appears consistent with this conclusion. That evidence reveals a significant fall in single use bag numbers – but a huge increase in sales of low cost reusable bags.

The Department had anticipated that the levy on single use bags would generate an increase of approximately 70% in annual sales of low cost reusable bags, in the period before the levy was extended to cover them. However data supplied by a number of retailers operating across Northern Ireland suggest increases in excess of 850% in the first six months following the introduction of the single use carrier bag levy.

This data comes from a total of 168 outlets across the region and shows that since April this year those retailers have sold over 1.5 million re-usable bags that are not currently subject to the levy. Moreover a recent local survey, carried out for the Department in June 2013, shows that only 56% of shoppers in Northern Ireland regularly reuse their carrier bags – and evidence from Scotland and Wales suggests that even this figure may overstate the actual percentage of shoppers regularly reusing their carrier bags. Clearly such trends, if they continue unchecked, would diminish the environmental benefits of the carrier bag levy.

Just as the 5 pence levy on single use bags encouraged greater reuse of carrier bags and reduced the number of single use bags being dispensed, I believe that applying a 5 pence levy to low cost reusable bags should help significantly reduce unnecessary purchases of these bags, encourage even higher levels of reuse and generate substantial environmental benefit.

Councils: Community Planning

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to outline how community planning structures for new council structures will take on board the views of young people; and support their participation in civic life.

(AQW 27978/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Local Government Bill that I introduced into the Assembly on 23 September 2013 provides the legislative framework for council-led community planning. This framework provides that a council and its community planning partners must ensure that arrangements are made so that the community has the opportunity to express its views on community planning and the production of the council's community plan.

To support the operation of community planning, provision is made for my Department to issue statutory guidance. Based on experience elsewhere, this guidance will, among other issues, provide advice on the arrangements that a council could put in place in relation to its engagement with the community, including children and young people. It will be a matter for each council to determine how best to undertake this engagement.

Magherafelt/Cookstown: Wind Turbines

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of single wind turbines which have received planning permission in (i) Magherafelt; and (ii) Cookstown District Council areas. in each of the last five years.

Mr Durkan: The table below identifies all Single wind turbine applications that have been approved from 2008/09 to 30th September 20131

	Decision by Financial year
	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14 (up to 30/09/20131)

Illegal Waste: Mobuoy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the extent and potential toxicity of pollution from the illegal waste site on Mobuoy Road, Co. Londonderry.

(AQW 28007/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The criminal investigation involved the collection of 35 samples of liquid that was either present in the infilled waste (leachate) or collected from liquid on the surface of the infilled areas. The detailed results of the analysis of these samples is being utilised currently and will form key evidence when the prosecution case is submitted to the Public Prosecution Service.

The investigation noted that the waste was actively producing leachate and landfill gas which are generally grossly polluting in nature.

Taxis: Illegal Activity

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27141/11-15, and given that this figure appears disproportionately low for a two year period, and in view of complaints, representations and, in some cases, clear evidence of infringements, what action he will take to address this issue.

(AQW 28010/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver and Vehicle Agency continues to seek to improve compliance levels within the taxi industry by targeting its resources to those areas where greatest impact can be made. This has included focussing resources across a range of activities within the taxi industry, including ensuring taxi operator licensing has been implemented and illegal activities are detected and addressed.

Over the last few months, the Agency has directed more enforcement resources towards addressing the problem of taxis illegally plying for hire, and there has been a significant increase in the detection of PSV Licensing offences committed within the city limits of Belfast, with additional fixed penalty notices continuing to be issued during the period 1st July 2013 to 30th September 2013.

Further to this, I have instructed the Agency to ensure there is a sustained focus on deterring and detecting taxis illegally plying for hire.

Statistics that relate to the period 1 June 2013 to 30 September 2013 cannot be made available until the next publication of official government statistics which is planned for 28 November 2013.

Carrier Bag Levy: Projections

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what projections his Department has made of carrier bag usage in each of the next three years, based on the single use plastic bag levy remaining at 5 pence.

(AQW 28014/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department estimates that around 300 million new single use carrier bags (paper and plastic) were dispensed in Northern Ireland each year prior to the introduction of the single use carrier bag levy in April 2013. Since the introduction of the levy, the number of new carrier bags being dispensed by registered retailers has fallen dramatically.

Declarations from retailers provisionally indicate that 18.4 million new single use bags were dispensed in the first quarter from 8 April to 30 June 2013. Retailer declarations received so far for the second quarter provisionally indicate around 18 million new single use bags were dispensed between 1 July and 30 September 2013.

While it is not possible to accurately forecast the final annual figure for carrier bag use, because of a number of factors such as seasonal variation, data from the first two quarters suggest that the final annual figure for 2013/14 will be in the region of 80 million single use carrier bags. The Department anticipates that the bag use figures for 2014/15 and 2015/16 will be of a similar magnitude.

The Department intends to provide validated statistics for 2013/14 next year.

Carrier Bag Levy: Ministerial Meetings/Correspondence

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment to list the phone calls, meetings and correspondence since he took up office relating to the single use plastic bag levy.

(AQW 28015/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table attached at Annex A provides a summary of the meetings I have been involved in and correspondence I have received in relation to the single use carrier bag levy since taking office on 16 July 2013. The information has been grouped into Assembly Questions (oral), Assembly Questions (written), correspondence cases, invitations and meetings.

The figures cited in the table relate to correspondence and meetings in which carrier bag issues have featured either exclusively or substantially. There may well be other instances where references have been made to bags issues; however it is neither practical nor appropriate to keep records of these.

The Department does not log individual phone calls and for this reason it is not possible to provide a list of the phone calls that I have received in relation to the single use carrier bag levy since taking office.

Planning Applications: Wind Turbines

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the number of planning applications (i) received; and (ii) approved for single wind turbines between 1 May 2010 and 1 November 2013, broken down by generator output levels of (a) 0kW to 50kW; (b) 51kW to 100kW; (c) 101kW to 200kW; and (d) 201kW to 250kW.

Mr Durkan: The number of planning applications received and approved for single wind turbines between 1 April 2010 and 10 September 2013 is included in Table 1 below.

The Department does not, however, actively seek information on the output level of proposed renewable energy devices. The applicant may provide this information as part of the applications submission; however we have no independent means to verify this information. It is therefore not possible from the information held on the database to provide validated statistical data in relation to the request for output levels.

Taxis: Video Evidence

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27215/11-15, what assurances he can give that all video evidence gathered by Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers in these circumstances is viewed, assessed and examined; and what grades of staff are involved in the process.

(AQW 28046/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers use video footage to assist them with the collection of information and evidence that may be considered during the course of an investigation.

The responsibility for viewing, assessing and examining evidence rests with investigating officers who are required to follow set standards and procedures contained within the Criminal Procedure and Investigation Act (CPIA). The Act regulates the investigation process and provides assurance that any evidence gathered is considered in accordance with best practice.

The investigating officer would normally be a Traffic Examiner or a Professional and Technical Officer. Where case files are prepared for prosecution, these are signed off by the relevant Team Manager (High Professional Technical Officer) and submitted to the Public Prosecution Service for consideration.

Rates Convergence: Fermanagh/Omagh

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment how much of the funding set aside to deal with the issue of rates convergence will be allocated to the Fermanagh and Omagh District Council area.

(AQW 28075/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Earlier this year the Executive agreed to provide councils with a reform funding package of £17.8 million over the 2013 to 2015 period, with a commitment of up to £30 million for rates convergence beyond 2015.

The funding will be made available for managing rates convergence as a consequence of councils merging and other boundary changes arising from implementation of the local government reform. DFP and DOE continue to work on the design of a transitional rates relief scheme, within the cost envelope of £30m, which will protect those ratepayers who otherwise would face sudden and excessive increases as a direct consequence of councils merging or due to other boundary changes. The precise model for how this £30 million will be administered and over what period of time has not yet been finalised.

The preferred option is a district rate adjustment at bill level. This would involve a lower rate being applied to the individual rates bills of those ratepayers who would otherwise face sudden and excessive increases. Under this option, the rate relief that will apply to a District Council area will depend on the rate increases faced by ratepayers as a result of the level district rates settle at in the initial years of the new council. As the rates for the new councils have not yet been set, it is too early to estimate the rate relief that will apply.

The primary legislative powers to give effect to a rates convergence scheme is included in the Local Government Bill.

Taxis: Video Evidence

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27215/11-15, whether his Department or the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) accept non-DVA video footage as evidence in these circumstances.

(AQW 28116/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Criminal Procedure and Investigation Act requires 'all reasonable lines of enquiry to be pursued' in the course of an investigation. DVA investigators are required to consider all relevant evidence that may prove or disprove a criminal offence, including video evidence tendered by a third party.

Glen Lyon Park, Hollywood: Red Squirrels

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment why his Department are not taking action to protect the Red Squirrel population at Glen Lyon, Hollywood.

(AQW 28118/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Glen Lyon in Holywood is owned and managed by North Down Borough Council. My Department has provided advice to council staff in relation to the conservation of red squirrels in the past. Further advice is publically available through the Northern Ireland Environment Agency's (NIEA) website http://www.doeni.gov.uk/niea/biodiversity/northern_ireland_squirrel_forum.htm

or through the Northern Ireland Red Squirrel Forum should the local council wish to become involved.

My Department is currently supporting projects which favour red squirrel protection on two landholdings adjacent to Glen Lyon.

Areas of Special Scientific Interest: Compensation

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment what compensation arrangements exist for farmers suffering loss from having lands designated as Areas of Special Scientific Interest.

(AQW 28155/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI) are declared and protected in accordance with the Environment (Northern Ireland) Order 2002 (the Order). Written consent from NIEA is required before notifiable operations are undertaken by the owner or occupier and applications for such consent must be considered and reported on by NIEA in the context of the statutory requirements imposed by the Order.

The Order does not provide for compensation in the event of consent being refused.

Areas of Special Scientific Interest: Wind Turbines

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether there are any limitations on wind turbines being located within an Area of Special Scientific Interest; and if not, how many turbines are located in such areas.

(AQW 28156/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department's policy for assessing windfarm proposals does not distinguish explicitly between Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI) and other undesignated landscapes. However, it is a policy presumption that development will not be allowed where this will result in an unacceptable adverse impact on visual amenity or landscape character of that area.

The Department does not hold information on wind turbines or wind farms that are located within ASSIs; however it can provide the numbers of applications that have been approved within those areas.

Between April 2002 and September 2013, 2 applications for single wind turbines were approved within the boundaries of an ASSI, while 8 applications for single wind turbines were approved within a 50m buffered area around an ASSI.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan: Planning Appeals Commission

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment, given that some recent Planning Appeals Commission's decisions have indicated that the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan (BMAP) is an aspiration, how much weight the Planning Service can place on BMAP; and whether the Planning Appeals Commission been informed of the Planning Service's stance.

(AQW 28159/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer you to the Joint Ministerial Statement published in January 2005 which clarified the weight that should be given to a draft plan in making planning decisions. Paragraph 21 states that planning applications will continue to be considered in the light of both current policies and policies in emerging development plans that are going through the statutory processes. It further states that the weight to be attached to policies in emerging plans will depend upon the stage of plan preparation, increasing as successive stages are reached.

I can confirm that the final stages of BMAP have been reached, and that on the 21 October 2013 the Department for Regional Development awarded the Plan a certificate of general conformity with the Regional Development Strategy 2035. Planning officials will advise the PAC of the current status of the Plan at any appeal hearings where BMAP is a consideration.

In many circumstances the Plan already carries significant determining weight, particularly following Minister Attwood's statement of June 2012 when he published the PAC Reports into BMAP.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan: Status

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment what is the current status of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan; and when he expects it to be signed off.

(AQW 28160/11-15)

Mr Durkan: After extensive assessment of the recommendations made by the Planning Appeals Commission, my Department recently submitted BMAP to the Department for Regional Development for assessment of the Plan against the Regional Development Strategy 2035. I can confirm that the Plan was awarded a Certificate of General Conformity on 21 October 2013 and I am now considering the next steps in the process.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27215/11-15, (i) whether Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers have taken any video evidence to date; (ii) if so, why the decision was taken not to prosecute; and (iii) who is responsible for deciding whether to prosecute.

(AQW 28201/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers used video footage to capture the manner in which taxi services were being provided at Ravenhill rugby ground. The purpose of the video footage was to gain a better understanding of the issues that had been previously highlighted by Belfast Public Hire representatives.

The Department has since determined that the provision of taxi services at Ravenhill rugby ground is compliant with the requirements of the Taxi Act (NI) 2008 and other related legislation and as such no prosecutions are being pursued.

Planning Applications: Parking Surveys

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment how the Planning Service ensures that surveys relating to planning applications, such as parking surveys, are validated by the relevant statutory agency.

(AQW 28202/11-15)

Mr Durkan: When processing a planning application any supporting information which is submitted for consideration is forwarded to the relevant authority as part of the consultation process. This allows the appropriate authority to validate and comment on the information. Supporting information and consultation responses are material considerations which are available for public inspection on the Planning Portal Website.

In the case of parking surveys accompanying planning applications, they are forwarded to Roads Service, as the appropriate authority, for their consideration and comment.

The planning authority will take into account the consultee's advice. However, it is ultimately for the planning authority to make the decision and decide if an application should be approved (with or without conditions) or refused. The planning authority is therefore the final arbitrator in deciding what weight is to be attached to all material considerations.

Flags: DOE Buildings

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of the Environment to outline his Department's policy on the flying of flags on buildings and property under its control.

(AQW 28210/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I can confirm that my Department flies flags in accordance with the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 which makes provision for specified government buildings to fly flags on designated days and this includes the Driver & Vehicle Agency Test Centres across Northern Ireland.

The Premises Management team of each building is responsible for ensuring that the regulations within the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 are adhered to.

Planning Applications: Environment Agency

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what is the average time taken by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to respond to a consultation on a planning application.

(AQW 28212/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Between 1st January 2011 and 19th November 2013, DoE Planning consulted the Northern Ireland Environment Agency 17,974 times on planning applications with 16,831 responses having been received. Out of the 16,831 responses, there was a median response time of 12 working days.

It should be noted that in many planning applications further information is required which often results in multiple consultations and responses on an individual case.

It must be noted that these figures are provided from Planning administrative systems and do not form part of published and validated DOE Official Statistics.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan: Update

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment for an update, including the timeframe, of announcements on the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan.

(AQW 28219/11-15)

Mr Durkan: After extensive assessment of the recommendations made by the Planning Appeals Commission, my Department recently submitted BMAP to the Department for Regional Development for assessment of the Plan against the Regional Development Strategy 2035. I can confirm that the Plan was awarded a Certificate of General Conformity on 21 October 2013 and I am now considering the next steps in the process.

Taxis: Insurance

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27263/11-15, in respect of insurance cover in these instances, whether departmental officials will review this matter as any invalidation of insurance under public liability matters in relation to the incorrect management of obtaining passengers/fares (i) puts the public at risk; and (ii) would reflect detrimentally on the licence issuer and controller.

(AQW 28259/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In terms of insurance, each situation where a private hire taxi obtained a fare through plying for hire without a pre-booking would be considered individually, and would be a matter for the individual insurer to consider.

However, in terms of public liability, the 6th Motor Insurance Directive requires Member States to make provision for a body to guarantee that victims of road traffic collisions will not remain without compensation where the vehicle which caused the accident is uninsured (or incorrectly insured) or unidentified. In the UK, this body is the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB). The Uninsured Drivers Agreement (between the Department and MIB) requires the MIB to meet unsatisfied Civil Court Judgements against identified motorists who may not have been insured as required by the Road Traffic Act 1988.

If, as a result of a Civil Court Judgement, it became apparent that a taxi was operating without appropriate insurance, this would be taken into account when considering the repute of a taxi operator.

Planning Permission: A-boards

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether 'A' boards, or similar advertising structures located outside commercial premises, require planning permission.

(AQW 28271/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Advertisements are dealt with under the The Planning (Control of Advertisement) Regulations (NI) 1992 (as amended). "A" Boards, as a type of advertisement, do not benefit from the deemed consent or express consent within this and therefore require planning permission.

The only exception would be under Class 6 for an advertisement on a forecourt where the advertisement can be displayed on the forecourt providing that:

- it does not exceed in aggregate 5sqm in area;
- is not illuminated
- no character or symbol on the advertisement is greater than 0.3m in height
- no part of the advertisement is more than 5m above ground level

Drumclay Crannog, County Fermanagh: Review

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the internal inquiry into the difficulties protecting Drumclay Crannog.

(AQW 28292/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Review Team, led by Professor Gabriel Cooney Chair of the Historic Monuments Council, the statutory advisory body to the Department on historic monument matters, has now submitted its final report. This report was passed to me on 23 October.

The Review is welcomed as an objective assessment of what happened at the site, and, as you will appreciate, I wish to give the Review and its recommendations careful consideration before deciding on the next steps.

It is my intention to distribute copies of this review to the Minister for Regional Development, the Committee for the Environment, and; the Committee for Culture, Arts and Leisure, plus; elected representatives for this area, and yourself included once I have had the opportunity to give it my initial careful consideration.

Flags: DVA Test Centres

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of the Environment to outline his Department's policy on the flying of the Union Flag at MOT test centres.

(AQW 28323/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I can confirm that my Department flies flags in accordance with the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 which makes provision for specified government buildings to fly flags on designated days and this includes the Driver & Vehicle Agency Test Centres across Northern Ireland.

The Premises Management team of each building is responsible for ensuring that the regulations within the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 are adhered to.

European Charter of Local Self-government

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment why Northern Ireland is the only region out of 47 member states that does not subscribe to the European Charter of Local Self Government; and what steps he is taking to address this situation.

(AQW 28324/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The European Charter for Local Self-Government is a matter for the UK Government. In 1998 when the UK Government ratified the Charter it acknowledged that the Charter enshrines the basic principles reflected in the United Kingdom system of local democracy. At that time, however, it was decided that the Charter would not apply to councils in Northern Ireland, given the lesser range of functions then assigned to those councils, compared with the other regions. The right was reserved to review this position.

The issue of whether the Charter should apply to Northern Ireland, through the UK Government adding the region to its ratification of the Charter, will need to be considered following the transfer of additional functions to councils, as a result of the reform of local government.

Councils: Capital Assets

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the value of the capital assets of each council.

(AQW 28340/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The most up-to-date information for the value of the capital assets of each council, as at 31 March 2013, is set out in the table below. It should be noted that the capital assets are the net book value of the fixed assets as at the 31 March 2013, taken from the certified accounts of 25 councils and the uncertified accounts of Craigavon Borough Council for 2012/2013.

Driver and Vehicle Agency, Coleraine: Update

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the discussions over the retention of jobs at the Driver and Vehicle Agency in Coleraine.

(AQW 28363/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I met Robert Goodwill, the recently appointed Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Transport, on 6 November 2013. At the meeting, I emphasised the potentially very damaging impact on the economy of Northern Ireland, and on Coleraine in particular, of the potential loss of 300 jobs in the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA). I also pointed out that such cuts would be totally inconsistent with the UK Government's commitments to supporting the NI Executive in developing the local economy.

Mr Goodwill acknowledged the robust arguments put forward to support the retention of these jobs in DVA and the significant level of opposition to centralisation in Swansea from public representatives in Northern Ireland. It was very clear from our discussions that the Minister undoubtedly understands the significance of this decision and appreciates the unique factors applicable to Northern Ireland.

I reminded Mr Goodwill of the exemplary performance of staff in DVA, the clear wish of motorists here to be able to deal with DVA staff and the inevitable reduction in the standards of service that centralisation in Swansea would bring.

Mr Goodwill drew attention to the pressure on public sector expenditure and to the centralisation programme in Britain and to the need to extend new services to motorists in Northern Ireland. I pointed out that these services should have been delivered here many years ago through proper investment locally by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and I emphasised that the use of new services presents no justification for centralising all work in Swansea.

I reminded the Minister that, with access to the new IT system, staff in DVA could continue to deliver high quality services to customers in Northern Ireland and, for the first time, would also be able to deliver vehicle licensing services to customers anywhere in the UK.

I am satisfied that the strongest possible case has been made for the retention of vehicle licensing services in DVA and I remain hopeful that the right decision will be made for motorists in Northern Ireland and for the staff in DVA.

Mr Goodwill indicated that a decision is likely to be made early next year.

Taxis: Illegal Activity

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27215/11-15, how many convictions have been secured in the absence of video footage since enforcement officers began these investigations.

(AQW 28364/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Private hire taxis being used to illegally ply for hire will be in breach of condition of licence which falls within the scope of a generic PSV licensing offence.

This offence would normally be dealt with by way of a £30 fixed penalty ticket although depending on the specific circumstances may be pursued through court. Whilst the Driver and Vehicle Agency holds records relating to convictions for PSV licensing offences, those records do not distinguish which convictions relate to drivers who used their vehicle's to illegally ply for hire within the city limits of Belfast.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27856/11-15, whether such a report exists; and if so, to place a copy in the Assembly library.

(AQW 28378/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As confirmed in my response to AQW 27856/11-15, careful consideration was given to the provision of private hire taxis at Ravenhill rugby ground, which included assessing a number of sources of evidence and advice. A report of the findings was not produced but rather the final determination of the legal position as regards the provision of private hire taxis at Ravenhill was compiled and was attached to the response to AQW 27856/11-15.

North Down: Listed Buildings

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the names of the listed buildings in the North Down constituency.

(AQW 28390/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Based upon the 1974 ward boundaries, which is how the department holds such records, the total number of listed buildings in the North Down Borough Council (NDBC) area is 287. The North Down constituency also includes two electoral wards of Ards Borough Council in Donaghadee, which contain a further 58 listed buildings (highlighted in bold in the attached table). This gives a total of 345 listed buildings in your constituency.

It should be noted that North Down is being reviewed currently under the second survey process, and this figure may change again, when all records have been reviewed.

To provide the detail of all of these listed buildings by hard copy would be unwieldy; however, the information that you have sought may be accessed electronically at the following link www.doeni.gov.uk/niea/other-index/content-databases/content-databases-build.htm.

Once you have accepted the terms and conditions of the site, a search may be carried out by Council area – in this case Ards and North Down.

You will be aware, however, that there have been boundary changes since 1974, and as a result the figures should not be taken as definitive, in relation to the current boundaries. For that reason I have appended, for your information, a table which shows the number of the listed buildings within each ward of the North Down and Ards Borough Council Areas.

You may also wish to note that NDBC - which is a statutory consultee in the listing process - has been provided with a copy of each listing in its area, since the introduction of the legislation in the early 1970's.

Planning Applications: Bombardier

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of the Environment when he will make a decision on Bombardier's proposal to build their own energy plant at Queen's Island.

(AQW 28402/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department received the Addendum to the application on 4th November 2013.

As required by the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessments) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 this information has been advertised and sent to relevant consultees for comment.

When this statutory process is complete I will be in a position to make a final decision. I anticipate I will be able to do this by the end of the calendar year.

Planning Applications: Sunset Park, Portstewart

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the (i) current status of planning permission; (ii) number of proposed dwellings; and (iii) the expiry date of, the vacant premises at Sunset Park, Portstewart.

(AQW 28420/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

- (i) There are currently two live planning permissions on this site for alternative residential development proposals.
- (ii) Planning application Ref: C/2007/0618/F, granted on 23rd February 2009, provides for a total of 18 residential units comprising 10 replacement apartments and 8 townhouses. Planning application Ref: C/2013/0019/F, granted on 19th September 2013, provides for a total of 18 residential units comprising 6 replacement apartments and 12 semi-detached houses.
- (iii) Planning application Ref: C/2007/0618/F expires on 22nd February 2014, and planning application Ref: C/2013/0019/F expires on 18th September 2018.

Planning Applications: Environmental Statements

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 26973/11-15, how many of the 8 applications requiring an Environmental Statement were retrospective; and to detail these 8 EIA cases.

(AQW 28463/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Subsequent to AQW 26973/11-15, of the 8 applications accompanied by an Environmental Statement, 1 application is retrospective in nature (ref: J/2011/0272/F).

Details of the 8 applications are as follows;

1 C/2009/0806/F

Proposal: Northerly and westerly extension to Cam Quarry with restoration to conservation habitats

Location: Whitemountain Quarries, Cam Quarries, 39 Cam Road, Macosquin, Coleraine, BT51 4PX

Department of Finance and Personnel

Civil Service: Permanent Secretaries

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail how many Permanent Secretaries are currently employed within the Civil Service; and how many are female.

(AQW 27998/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): There are 12 members of staff at substantive Permanent Secretary level currently employed within the Civil Service, of whom 1 is female.

Civil Service: Grade 5

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail how many Grade 5 Civil Servants are currently in post; and how many are female.

(AQW 27999/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There are 163 substantive Grade 5 civil servants currently in post, of whom 69 are female.

Civil Service: Grade 3

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail how many Grade 3 Civil Servants are currently in post; and how many are female.

(AQW 28001/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There are 39 substantive Grade 3 civil servants currently in post, of whom 9 are female.

Pay: Median Hourly Rate

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the average hourly rate of pay for each year since 2003. (AQW 28114/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information on the median hourly rate of pay for each year since 2003 is provided in Table 1 below, from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) conducted by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA).

The ASHE is based on a 1% sample of employee jobs taken from HM Revenue and Customs pay as you earn (PAYE) records and the reported estimates therefore have an associated degree of sampling error.

Table 1: Median hourly pay (excluding overtime) for all employee jobs¹ - Northern Ireland 2003-2012

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Western Health and Social Care Trust: Home Helps

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there are any plans to make redundant all Western Health and Social Care Trust employees who operate as Home Helps.

(AQW 28011/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The Western Trust does not plan to make home help staff compulsorily redundant.

The Trust is in the process of reforming its domiciliary care services and intends to accommodate home help staff within the reform process. Throughout the process, the Trust is engaging with staff and with their unions.

If staff cannot, or choose not to be accommodated within this process, then other options such as redeployment will be explored.

Children: Foster Care

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of children (i) in foster care; and (ii) awaiting foster care; and the number of children in each category in each of the previous five years.

(AQW 28058/11-15)

Mr Poots: Table 1 below details the number of children in foster care at 31st March in each of the previous five years. These figures can be found in 'Children's Social Care Statistics for Northern Ireland 2012/13' published on the Department's website at the following link: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats_research/stats-cib/statistics_and_research-cib-pub/children_statistics/stats-cib-children_order.htm

Independent Ambulance Service: Trust Usage

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what use each Health and Social Care Trust has made of the Independent Ambulance Service since May 2011.

(AQW 28098/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department is aware of the need to ensure that appropriate safety and care standards are applied by the private ambulance sector and the standards of service identified by each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust are described below. Information on the usage of the Independent Ambulance Service (IAS) in respect of each HSC Trust is as follows.

The Northern Ireland Ambulance Services (NIAS) does not use and has not used the IAS, however NIAS has used Voluntary Ambulance Services (VAS) i.e. St John's Ambulance, Red Cross and Order of Malta in the event of a major incident and as part of business continuity plan on certain occasions (such as over the Christmas period, Halloween and other periods of significant patient demand). Under the direction of NIAS Command and Control, the VAS has responded to 579 calls since May 2011. In the context of overall activity this represents an exceptionally small proportion of responses undertaken.

NIAS has a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the VAS which outlines nationally agreed personnel, driving, vehicles, medical supplies, medical records and training standards that must be in place within the VAS to be able to support NIAS. However, information on training courses available for staff within the VAS or IAS is not centrally held by NIAS.

NIAS is currently developing an exacting specification which will clearly outline the standards and quality expected in future from the IAS and the VAS including the skills, qualifications of staff, the roadworthiness of vehicles, standard of equipment as well as the performance monitoring and management arrangements to be followed.

The South Eastern HSC Trust has not used private sector/independent ambulance services since May 2011.

The Northern HSC Trust has used private/independent sector ambulances for 485 hospital discharges or transfers during the period May 2011 until August 2013 (inclusive), although the Trust cannot confirm what percentage of its total ambulance usage this is.

The Trust does not tender for independent ambulances and do not manage any contracts for independent ambulances. The Procurement and Logistics Service (PaLS) within the Business Services Organisation (BSO) assists the Northern Trust in procuring this non-direct care transport.

The Belfast HSC Trust provides on average 110 journeys per month by private sector/independent ambulances, this equates to 7% of overall ambulance use for transfers and discharge.

Staff providing the service must be suitably trained to carry out the requirements of the role. All drivers and escorts are to have a minimum level of training in basic first aid to include:

- Basic life support with BVM including adult & child CPR
- Defibrillation using an automatic defibrillator
- Airway management & oxygen therapy.

They must also be trained in:

- Moving and handling including the moving of bariatric patients
- Infection and prevention control
- Customer care.

In addition drivers are to have completed a recognised driving course appropriate to the vehicle. Transport providers were required to provide evidence of training that was evaluated as part of the contract award process.

The Trust's contract specification for the supply of non-emergency patient transport services imposes standards on the type and condition of the vehicle used. It also identifies the required standard for staff in relation to safeguarding adults; training; patient care; and presentation and conduct while providing a service for the Trust.

As part of the contract award process the suppliers were evaluated on technical capacity; quality assurance; staff training; health & safety arrangements; booking & response standards. They provided details of policies and operating arrangements that gave the Trust assurance that the required standards could be maintained. There is no formal compliance monitoring in place other than for verification of invoices.

The Western HSC Trust uses private ambulances to transfer patients to their own homes, private nursing homes and other hospitals especially when NIAS cannot provide this on a timely manner due to limited capacity. This is done through the patient flow manager who then makes contact with the relevant parties. Trust records are unable to give a breakdown of instances where the Trust has used this service or the percentage of total ambulance work.

Ambulance staff who provide the service are expected to be trained in basic life support. Under the terms of the contract, the providers must provide staff with a suitable level of training. The British Red Cross are quality-assured by CQC, the English quality standard body.

CPNI/paramedics have provided documents outlining the requirements of their vehicles/training of staff and levels of service they can provide. The contracts department also hold information regarding St John's, Order of Malta and British Red Cross.

The Southern HSC Trust uses St John's Ambulance, aside from NIAS. Since May 2011 there have been 778 runs using private ambulances, although the Trust cannot confirm what percentage of its total ambulance usage this is.

Training received by all staff includes:

- Induction courses parts A&B
- Child and vulnerable adult protection course
- Operational first aid course
- Automatic external defibrillator course
- Patient moving and handling for first aiders
- Supervised public duty.

The Trust has a contract in place with St John's covering this arrangement.

The Trust receives yearly service history from St John's Ambulance, Portadown division, on equipment service history, MOT, insurance. The Trust requests each member's qualifications and hold record of same.

Independent Ambulance Service: Safety

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he will take to ensure that private ambulance services are safe and undertake a professional and patient care centred approach.

(AQW 28099/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department is aware of the need to ensure that appropriate safety and care standards are applied by the private ambulance sector and the standards of service identified by each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust are described below. Independent Ambulance Service: Training

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what training courses are available for staff in the Independent Ambulance Service.

Mr Poots: My Department is aware of the need to ensure that appropriate safety and care standards are applied by the private ambulance sector and the standards of service identified by each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust are described below. Information on the usage of the Independent Ambulance Service (IAS) in respect of each HSC Trust is as follows.

The Northern Ireland Ambulance Services (NIAS) does not use and has not used the IAS, however NIAS has used Voluntary Ambulance Services (VAS) i.e. St John's Ambulance, Red Cross and Order of Malta in the event of a major incident and as part of business continuity plan on certain occasions (such as over the Christmas period, Halloween and other periods of significant patient demand). Under the direction of NIAS Command and Control, the VAS has responded to 579 calls since May 2011. In the context of overall activity this represents an exceptionally small proportion of responses undertaken.

NIAS has a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the VAS which outlines nationally agreed personnel, driving, vehicles, medical supplies, medical records and training standards that must be in place within the VAS to be able to support NIAS. However, information on training courses available for staff within the VAS or IAS is not centrally held by NIAS.

NIAS is currently developing an exacting specification which will clearly outline the standards and quality expected in future from the IAS and the VAS including the skills, qualifications of staff, the roadworthiness of vehicles, standard of equipment as well as the performance monitoring and management arrangements to be followed.

The South Eastern HSC Trust has not used private sector/independent ambulance services since May 2011.

The Northern HSC Trust has used private/independent sector ambulances for 485 hospital discharges or transfers during the period May 2011 until August 2013 (inclusive), although the Trust cannot confirm what percentage of its total ambulance usage this is.

The Trust does not tender for independent ambulances and do not manage any contracts for independent ambulances. The Procurement and Logistics Service (PaLS) within the Business Services Organisation (BSO) assists the Northern Trust in procuring this non-direct care transport.

The Belfast HSC Trust provides on average 110 journeys per month by private sector/independent ambulances, this equates to 7% of overall ambulance use for transfers and discharge.

Staff providing the service must be suitably trained to carry out the requirements of the role. All drivers and escorts are to have a minimum level of training in basic first aid to include:

- Basic life support with BVM including adult & child CPR
- Defibrillation using an automatic defibrillator
- Airway management & oxygen therapy.

They must also be trained in:

- Moving and handling including the moving of bariatric patients
- Infection and prevention control
- Customer care.

In addition drivers are to have completed a recognised driving course appropriate to the vehicle. Transport providers were required to provide evidence of training that was evaluated as part of the contract award process.

The Trust's contract specification for the supply of non-emergency patient transport services imposes standards on the type and condition of the vehicle used. It also identifies the required standard for staff in relation to safeguarding adults; training; patient care; and presentation and conduct while providing a service for the Trust.

As part of the contract award process the suppliers were evaluated on technical capacity; quality assurance; staff training; health & safety arrangements; booking & response standards. They provided details of policies and operating arrangements that gave the Trust assurance that the required standards could be maintained. There is no formal compliance monitoring in place other than for verification of invoices.

The Western HSC Trust uses private ambulances to transfer patients to their own homes, private nursing homes and other hospitals especially when NIAS cannot provide this on a timely manner due to limited capacity. This is done through the patient flow manager who then makes contact with the relevant parties. Trust records are unable to give a breakdown of instances where the Trust has used this service or the percentage of total ambulance work.

Ambulance staff who provide the service are expected to be trained in basic life support. Under the terms of the contract, the providers must provide staff with a suitable level of training. The British Red Cross are quality-assured by CQC, the English quality standard body.

CPNI/paramedics have provided documents outlining the requirements of their vehicles/training of staff and levels of service they can provide. The contracts department also hold information regarding St John's, Order of Malta and British Red Cross.

The Southern HSC Trust uses St John's Ambulance, aside from NIAS. Since May 2011 there have been 778 runs using private ambulances, although the Trust cannot confirm what percentage of its total ambulance usage this is.

Training received by all staff includes:

- Induction courses parts A&B
- Child and vulnerable adult protection course
- Operational first aid course
- Automatic external defibrillator course
- Patient moving and handling for first aiders
- Supervised public duty.

The Trust has a contract in place with St John's covering this arrangement.

The Trust receives yearly service history from St John's Ambulance, Portadown division, on equipment service history, MOT, insurance. The Trust requests each member's qualifications and hold record of same.

Independent Ambulance Service: Standards

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the standards that must be met by the staff and vehicles of the Independent Ambulance Service; and what procedures are in place to ensure that these standards are met.

(AQW 28101/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department is aware of the need to ensure that appropriate safety and care standards are applied by the private ambulance sector and the standards of service identified by each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust are described below. Information on the usage of the Independent Ambulance Service (IAS) in respect of each HSC Trust is as follows.

Domiciliary Care: Spend

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much each Health and Social Care Trust has spent, in real terms, per person on domiciliary care, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28104/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not available in the format requested.

Emergency Medicine: Consultants

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to ensure an increase in the number of emergency medicine consultants.

(AQW 28230/11-15)

Mr Poots: There are currently fifty five consultant posts in emergency medicine across the five Health and Social Care Trusts. Out of the fifty five posts there are three vacancies and these are being filled by locum consultants. Any increase in the number of consultant posts in emergency medicine is a matter for the Health and Social Care Board as commissioner of services. HSC Trusts are working closely with the Health and Social Board on current staffing levels including the number of consultant posts required in emergency medicine.

Allergy NI: Funding

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the financial support provided to Allergy NI. (AQW 28287/11-15)

Mr Poots: Allergy NI is a registered local charity and receives no financial support from my Department. My Department has no plans at present to provide core funding to voluntary organisations in respect of new applications for funding.

Allergy Services

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to develop the provision of allergy services.

(AQW 28288/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board, which commissions services on behalf of the Health Service in Northern Ireland, has just completed an in-depth assessment of need for paediatric asthma, allergy and anaphylaxis services as part of the local implementation of recent NICE guidance which has been issued on food allergy (CG116) and anaphylaxis (CG134).

The Board has allocated over £400k recurrent funding for these services to the Health and Social Care Trusts to start addressing waiting lists. Much of this funding will meet the needs of children with allergy specifically.

Active Tremor: Public Awareness Campaign

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department has taken to raise public awareness of Essential Tremor.

(AQW 28326/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised by the Public Health Agency that active tremor is not a condition which they have identified as benefiting from a public awareness campaign.

Dementia Strategy

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he has taken, in line with his Department's Dementia Strategy commitments, to address the significant differential in dementia diagnosis rates.

(AQW 28371/11-15)

Mr Poots: The regional dementia strategy, which I published in November 2011, addresses the importance of early diagnosis, and includes an action for the HSC Board in collaboration with the Public Health Agency and HSC Trusts to draw up criteria and clear protocols for referral from GP practices to memory services. This will assist in the assessment and diagnosis of dementia. Work is underway to complete this action, as part of the wider implementation of the strategy. .

You may also be aware that the Alzheimer's Society study entitled 'Mapping the Dementia Gap' shows that Northern Ireland has a diagnosis rate of 63% (11'800 people) which is just marginally below Scotland (64.4%) and well above the UK average of 46%. This is based on the number of people on GP dementia registers.

Broken down by area, the Belfast HSC Trust rates are highest in UK.

South Belfast: Registered Carers

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of registered carers who are over the age of 60, in the South Belfast constituency.

(AQW 28448/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not available.

Health and Safety: Fire-rated Glass

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the actions his Department has taken to protect public safety with regards to the claims that Glassworks Ireland Ltd was installing supposedly fire-rated glass, which wasn't recognised, approved or certified as fire-rated.

(AQW 28457/11-15)

Mr Poots: In response to information received from the PSNI and with their agreement, a safety alert was issued to all HSC bodies by the Northern Ireland Adverse Incident Centre (NIAIC) on 29th August 2013. The purpose of this alert was to notify HSC bodies and the wider health and social care community of the possibility that counterfeit fire rated glass may have been installed in their facilities. The alert advised of the action required to manage this risk for ensuring the safety of the public, staff and service users within the health and social care environment.

As part of the ongoing PSNI investigation to identify the extent of possible locations where the counterfeit glass is installed, the PSNI have issued appropriate information through the broadcast and print media in both Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Northern Health and Social Care Trust: Bretten Hall

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 27937/11-15, given that a business case is still being developed, why a decision has been announced; and whether any staff have been transferred.

(AQW 28469/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is not uncommon for a decision on the way forward to be announced prior to business case approval for any associated expenditure. The decision to relocate leads to development of the business case quantifying and seeking approval for any expenditure commitment which may be required. The Northern Trust Board has approved the proposal to locate the Trust senior team at Bretten Hall. The business case is being revised to take account of the emerging solution which also includes a move of some staff from the Business Services Organisation.

A small number of senior staff moved to Bretten Hall in May 2013 at the time of the appointment of the turnaround team and prior to the decision to locate the Trust HQ at Bretten Hall.

Bangor Community Hospital: Minor Injuries Unit

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to address the temporary closure of the Bangor Minor Injuries Unit at weekends.

(AQW 28506/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the minor injuries unit at Bangor Community Hospital will be closed at weekends starting from Saturday, 23 November 2013 until further notice. This is a temporary measure due to a staff shortage and the South Eastern Trust is exploring a number of options to address this. In the meantime, the minor injuries unit will be open from Monday to Friday, 9am to 5pm.

Northern Health and Social Care Trust: Bretten Hall

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the proposed relocation of the Northern Health and Social Care Trust headquarters to Bretton Hall, Antrim Area Hospital will go ahead; and what is the cost of this proposed move.

(AQW 28519/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust Board has agreed to relocate its senior management team to Bretten Hall on the Antrim Hospital site.

A revised business case is currently being developed by the Trust to address the emerging solution. This will take account of all of the costs involved in the proposed organisational moves and final costs will not be known until the business case has been completed.

Autism: DHSSPS Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28542/11-15)

Mr Poots: All visitors to government buildings are treated with courtesy and respect by staff. Where possible, details of visitors are notified to reception in advance of their arrival. Where visitors with disabilities, including those with autism spectrum conditions, advise of additional help and support to cater for their needs, every effort will be made to ensure this is provided for them. All visitors who are attending by invitation, or notify us in advance, are met at reception and are accompanied to their destination.

As required by the Autism Act (NI) 2011, my department led on the development of the cross departmental Autism Strategy and Action Plan, which is currently with the NI Executive for approval. The Action Plan contains proposals for autism awareness training for frontline staff in NICS. Subject to Executive approval, I anticipate being able to launch the Strategy and Action Plan for publication before the end of the year.

South West Acute Hospital: Pseudomonas

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in light of the recent Pseudomonas outbreak at the South West Acute Hospital, Enniskillen, to outline the steps his Department is taking to prevent further outbreaks.
(AQW 28550/11-15)

Mr Poots: There has not been an outbreak of pseudomonas in the South West Acute Hospital.

The recent temporary closure of the neonatal unit in the South West Acute Hospital was a precautionary measure taken by the Western Trust. On routine inspection one infant was found to be carrying pseudomonas – known as colonisation – but was not infected or ill.

With regard to the prevention of cases of pseudomonas infection, through the RQIA I commissioned an independent review of the pseudomonas incidents of December 2011 and January 2012 at the earliest opportunity, in February 2012, in order to identify as quickly as possible any lessons that needed to be learned and acted on to minimise the risk of further tragedies. Professor Pat Troop and her team produced two reports: an interim report published on 31 March 2012 and the final report published on 31 May 2012. The reports contained a total of 32 recommendations, which I accepted immediately. All the recommendations have been implemented. The implementation of two of them has not been completed yet as they involve significant building work, which is progressing.

Social Care Council: Judicial Review

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the ruling by Mr Justice Treacy on his decision not to appoint a trade union official to the Northern Ireland Social Care Council.
(AQW 28612/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department has received the written judgment on 9 November 2013 on the outcome of the judicial review. We will wish to consider the detail of the judgment and consult our legal representatives before making any further comment.

Protect Life: Provision of Services

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether any Health and Social Care Trusts intend to apply, as part of the Protect Life strategy, to carry out services that would normally have been tendered and carried out by the community sector.
(AQW 28617/11-15)

Mr Poots: Under EU Procurement Regulations the Public Health Agency is required to go to public tender for the provision of services such as those currently being delivered under the Protect Life Strategy by the community sector. In line with the Regulations, public tenders must be open to applications from all organisations, including statutory bodies. Health and Social Care Trusts are, therefore, entitled to apply.

It has not been possible to establish all Trusts' intentions on this issue within the time available. However, I can confirm that, at this stage, the Belfast and Western HSC Trusts have no plans to tender for services currently provided by the community sector.

Department of Justice

Prisoners: Suicide/Self-harm

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27245/11-15, whether he is satisfied that first aid is an appropriate intervention in cases of vulnerable prisoners who are at risk of suicide and self-harm attempts and cannot access Accident and Emergency facilities or similar immediate response services.
(AQW 27906/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Prisoners who are at risk of suicide and self-harm will be managed under the Supporting Prisoners At Risk procedures, where they are reviewed by a multi-disciplinary team.

At Maghaberry and Magilligan Prison and Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre the Samaritans provide the peer support Listener Scheme – a confidential service available to prisoners 24 hours a day. At Hydebank Wood Prison Samaritans volunteers provide 'one to one' emotional support during their regular visits. A dedicated Samaritans helpline is also available 24 hours a day to prisoners in distress and in need of support.

Vulnerable prisoners have access to a range of other support measures including CRUSE bereavement counselling; abuse counselling; prison chaplaincy; family support and diversionary activities. The Donard Programme in Maghaberry Prison provides a range of therapeutic interventions for the most vulnerable offenders including individually designed programmes delivered on a multi-agency basis.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust are responsible for providing healthcare within Northern Ireland Prisons, including any appropriate healthcare interventions required by prisoners who are at risk of suicide or self-harm, which may comprise of an assessment and treatment through the mental health team.

All prisoners can request to see a nurse at any time and prison healthcare staff will decide whether treatment required will be given in the prison or at outside hospital.

Prisoners: Terrorism Offences

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 22062/11-15, to detail (i) the number of prisoners, serving a sentence for terrorism offences, that have been granted home leave this year, broken down by prison; (ii) how many total periods of home leave have been granted by prison; and (iii) the number of days that have been granted as release by prison. (AQW 28064/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below outlines, by prison, the information requested.

Prisoners serving a sentence for terrorism offences

	Maghaberry	Magilligan	Hydebank Wood
Number of prisoners granted home leave	7	4	0
Total periods of home leave granted	11	18	0
Number of days that have been granted as release	25	41	0

Prisoners: Accommodation on Release

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice what support is provided to offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties to find accommodation when released from prison. (AQW 28084/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice is committed to supporting prisoners to access appropriate accommodation on release from prison. Those who need housing upon release are referred to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. A key element of resettlement planning includes assessment of offenders needs, such as mental health, learning disabilities and addiction problems.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive jointly fund a Housing Advice in Prisons Project providing information, advice and advocacy to those in custody. This work is carried out in partnership with the prisoner and other relevant parties such as Probation Board for Northern Ireland, voluntary services partners who run hostels, and private landlords. Before a prisoner is released every effort is made to secure accommodation appropriate to their needs.

Prisoners: Support on Release

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice what facilities are available, with supervision, to support offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties when released from prison. (AQW 28085/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice and a range of other organisations and agencies, work together to support offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties, prior to and on their release from prison.

My Department and other criminal justice organisations are major contributors to the outcomes defined in the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2011-16. These outcomes include the development of a care pathway for prisoners leaving prison to return to the community and discharge procedures, involving both in-prison health services and Voluntary and Community agencies, to ensure that on release prisoners have access to services and support across Northern Ireland.

The Probation Board for Northern Ireland (PBNI) currently delivers substance misuse interventions for those under its supervision. PBNI also funds a number of organisations across Northern Ireland which provide support services for addiction problems. If deemed appropriate, offenders will be referred to these services on release from prison.

Prisoners: Interjurisdictional Cooperation on Release

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department works with other jurisdictions to find suitable facilities for offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties when released from prison.

(AQW 28086/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am committed to working in close co-operation with Ministers from other jurisdictions to share experience, knowledge and best practice. On 15 November, I, with Alan Shatter TD, opened the 4th Partnership Working for Public Protection conference (PPAG). PPAG provides an excellent annual opportunity for the Probation Board for Northern Ireland the Probation Service to discuss strategic issues of mutual interest.

My Department also continues to work closely with a range of agencies, in a number of other jurisdictions, in designing and developing interventions to ensure a co-ordinated approach to dealing with offenders with complex needs and inform the implementation of best practice programmes.

Prostitution: Research

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice when the timetable for the review into prostitution will be published.

(AQW 28153/11-15)

Mr Ford: As I announced in September, I am commissioning research into the extent and nature of prostitution in Northern Ireland. Work on the tendering process is underway, in line with Northern Ireland Civil Service procurement guidelines, and I anticipate that the advertisement seeking tenders will be issued within the next few weeks. Tenders will then be evaluated and the award of contract will follow.

Police Ombudsman: Historical Cases

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the average time taken for the Office of the Police Ombudsman to complete a historical investigation; and the average cost associated with investigations.

(AQW 28165/11-15)

Mr Ford: Due to the varying nature and complexity of individual cases, it is difficult to provide an accurate figure for the average time taken. Some cases have been completed within three to four months; others have taken a number of years to complete. My Department has provided additional funding for historical cases and the Office of the Police Ombudsman is now confident that 75% of these cases can be completed within one year of their commencement. Although the Police Ombudsman's Office does not individually cost investigations, it is anticipated that the average cost of each historical case will be over £65,000.

Police Ombudsman: CJINI/McCusker Reports

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail how the Office of the Police Ombudsman has changed following the Northern Ireland Office and the Criminal Justice Inspection reports.

(AQW 28166/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since the McCusker Report, commissioned by me as Minister of Justice, and the Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland (CJINI) Report commissioned by the then Police Ombudsman in 2011, there have been very significant changes in the Office of the Police Ombudsman (OPONI).

A new Police Ombudsman was appointed in July 2012 and a new Chief Executive Officer took up post in January 2013. They have overseen significant changes to the management structure and governance of the organisation, focusing on improving policies, procedures, and quality assurance processes.

CJINI published a report of its follow up review of the independence of the Office in January 2013. The Chief Inspector referred to there having been "a sea change" within the organisation since the report of September 2011. The review concluded that substantial progress had been made and that it was satisfied that the issues identified in the 2011 report had been remedied to such an extent that it was happy that the Office should recommence the investigation of historical cases.

In particular, the report recognised that "new structures and processes" had been put in place "focused on providing comprehensive and robust quality assurance of investigations into historical cases and the subsequent production of public reports."

Police Ombudsman: Inspections

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline how many inspections by Her Majesty's Inspectorate have taken place since the formation of the Office of the Police Ombudsman.

(AQW 28168/11-15)

Mr Ford: As the Office of the Police Ombudsman is not subject to inspection by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, no such inspections have taken place. The Office falls under the remit of Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland, which has carried out two inspections.

Police Ombudsman: Budget

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to provide a breakdown of the increases in budget allocated to the Office of the Police Ombudsman since its formation.

(AQW 28169/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details the budget allocated to the Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland since its formation and the increase, or decrease, from year to year.

Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland Budget Allocation since 2000

Year	Budget Allocation (£'000s)	Increase/Decrease (£'000s)
2000/2001	3,518
2001/2002	6,585	3,067
2002/2003	6,635	50
2003/2004	6,825	190
2004/2005	7,233	408
2005/2006	7,200	-33
2006/2007	8,170	970
2007/2008	8,676	506
2008/2009	8,827	151
2009/2010	9,059	232
2010/2011	8,797	-262
2011/2012	9,658	861
2012/2013	9,524	-134

Police Ombudsman: Public Prosecution Service

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total number of cases the Police Ombudsman has submitted to the Public Prosecution Service; and how many have resulted in prosecutions in respect of (i) serving officers; and (ii) retired officers.

(AQW 28170/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since 1 April 2009, the Police Ombudsman has submitted 3,938 cases to the Public Prosecution Service (PPS). There were recommendations for prosecutions in 48 cases. The PPS has directed 18 prosecutions in respect of serving officers and none in respect of retired officers.

Illegal Fuel: Laundering

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of fuel laundering plants that have been discovered since he took office; (ii) the number of arrests in connection with the discoveries; (iii) the number of related convictions during this period; (iv) the number of landowners, where laundering activities were taking place, were identified; (v) the number of landowners that have been brought before the courts in relation to fuel laundering on their property; and (vi) the number of cases that are pending as a result of allegations of fuel laundering.

(AQW 28185/11-15)

Mr Ford: HM Revenue and Customs, which has responsibility for fuel fraud offences, has provided the following information:

- (i) HMRC has identified and dismantled 99 laundering plants since 01/04/2010 (20 in 2010/11; 29 in 2011/12; 22 in 2012/13 and 28 to date in 2013/14);
- (ii) HMRC Criminal Investigation has recorded 58 arrests in respect of all fuel fraud cases since 01/04/2010 (specific records for laundering operation are not kept) and these are split as 18, 12, 8 and 20 across the years;
- (iii) Convictions for fuel fraud (not solely related to laundering plants) total 22 during the period 01/04/2010 to date;
- (iv) HMRC does not hold this data;
- (v) HMRC does not hold this data; and
- (vi) There are 32 individuals with cases pending in respect of fuel fraud.

Kristoff Alauya

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of occasions Kristoff Alauya has committed an offence whilst a remand or sentenced prisoner, including (i) the date of offence; (ii) the nature of the offence; and (iii) the relevant disposal. (AQW 28194/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information requested constitutes sensitive personal information as defined at section 2 of the Data Protection Act 1998. To release such information would be in breach of the first and second data protection principles.

Noel Parker

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 24552/11-15, to answer part (i) of the question. (AQW 28196/11-15)

Mr Ford: The investigation found specific documentation relating to the prisoner's accompanied release from custody, in both typed and hand-written form.

None of the documents indicated the relationship between the prisoner and the bride as being that of a father and a daughter.

Hydebank Wood: Governor

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27080/11-15, given the previous recommendations on this matter have not been implemented, why the appointment of a new Governor at Hydebank Wood is relevant, particularly as the post has been vacant for some time and a replacement would be a mandatory requirement for the Northern Ireland Prison Service. (AQW 28252/11-15)

Mr Ford: This was relevant in the context that at the time of the inspection a permanent Governor and Deputy Governor had not been appointed.

Criminal Justice: Case 13/091473

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the Preliminary Enquiry for the prisoner in case number 13/091473 at Craigavon Magistrates Court on 4 October 2013, to detail (i) why the committal hearing took place in a court house cell and not in the court room; (ii) why notification was not given to the media in advance of the hearing alerting them reporting restrictions were to be sought as per the guidance from the Lord Chief Justice following the judgement of 8 July 2013 on Anonymity Orders; (iii) why, despite media representatives being in attendance in the courtroom, they were not permitted to be present at the hearing; (iv) under what grounds reporting restrictions were granted, given the name and case in question has been reported widely since the first appearance and there is no nexus to the alleged victim; and (v) whether this matter will be reviewed. (AQW 28258/11-15)

Mr Ford: The location of the hearing and the ordering of reporting restrictions are judicial decisions. The reporting restrictions in any case may be reviewed by the Judge when the case is next listed for hearing.

Prisoners: Female Released

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the circumstances leading to the erroneous release of a female prisoner in early November 2013, including (i) the nature and date of conviction; (ii) the tariff imposed; (iii) the court in question; and (iv) the error in release. (AQW 28260/11-15)

Mr Ford: Although reported as such in certain media, I can confirm that no female prisoner was released in error by the Prison Service in early November.

A female prisoner appeared at Belfast Crown Court on 4 November for sentencing in respect of charges for which she had been convicted in September. Although on bail in respect of these charges, she was in prison serving a sentence for other offences. This sentence was due for expiry on 5 November.

On 4 November, the judge imposed a Determinate Custodial Sentence of two years – one year in prison and one year on licence. The prisoner was returned to prison and in accordance with the warrant issued, the legal document on which sentence calculation is based, was correctly released from prison on 5 November.

However, when the judge became aware that the prisoner had been released, he amended the order to reflect his wish that the sentence he imposed on 4 November should run consecutive to the existing sentence, rather than concurrently, and the individual was returned to prison.

There are reporting restrictions on this case that limit the level of detail which can be placed in the public domain.

Police Ombudsman: Historical Cases

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the duration the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland anticipates it will take to complete their investigations into cases related to the Troubles.

(AQW 28319/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland anticipates that its current workload of historical cases will be completed within six years, by 31 March 2019.

Police Ombudsman: Historical Cases

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice how many cases related to the Troubles the Police Ombudsman has opened in the last six years, including the number that remain ongoing.

(AQW 28320/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Ombudsman has opened 206 historical cases since 1 November 2007. Of these, 162 are ongoing.

Prison Service: Code of Conduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the suggestion by Independent Arbitrators, Dr Carol Ackah and Liam Deane, contained at 13.4 of their December 2009 Report that 'the use of an officer other than the Adjudicating Governor to present the Northern Ireland Prison Service management case at disciplinary hearings may serve to reinforce the impartiality of the decision maker' is to be incorporated into disciplinary hearings under the Code of Conduct 2013, particularly in cases of gross misconduct, and if not, to provide his rationale for doing so.

(AQW 28329/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to my answer to his similar question AQW/27817/11-15.

Pro Bono Costs Orders

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the development of Pro Bono Costs Orders.

(AQW 28334/11-15)

Mr Ford: My officials met and discussed initial proposals to expand the current provision for Pro Bono Costs Orders with interested groups in July 2013. These proposals are being further considered by the interested groups.

Access to Justice

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice what consideration has been given to the Law Society's proposal for a fundamental review to identify inefficiencies in the legal system prior to any further cuts in Legal Aid.

(AQW 28346/11-15)

Mr Ford: I recently announced to the Law Society my intention to commit to Phase 2 of the Access to Justice Review. The exact scope of the Review setting out precisely what issues it should address is currently being developed, and I will bring this to the Assembly in due course. It is my intention the review will not interrupt the reforms already underway but rather build on these reforms setting an agenda to shape Access to Justice in the future.

Legal Aid: Costs

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the reasons for the increase in spending on Legal Aid; (ii) how these factors were assessed; and (iii) the rationale for the proposed cuts to Legal Aid.

(AQW 28347/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Legal Aid is demand led and there are a number of factors which contribute to the increase in spending on Legal Aid. These include changes in the volumes of disposals of cases, more prompt submission of bills and their taxation and the disposal and assessment of costs in long running cases which have an impact on the overall level of Legal Aid expenditure.
- (ii) Many of these factors are outside the direct control of the Legal Aid system and are monitored by trends and expenditure profiles. For instance, from 2008-2012 the overall volume of Children Order applications dealt with by the courts increased by 50%, which will have increased spend in civil legal aid. Similarly, in respect of criminal legal aid, expenditure has increased this year as a result of the appointment last year of an additional judge to conduct Crown Court work. The Department has established a forecasting forum to enhance Legal Aid forecasting and has also published proposals for the introduction of standard fees for legal representatives in civil cases similar to the existing standard fees for criminal cases. One of the key benefits of introducing a standardised fee is that it enhances the capacity of the Legal Services Commission to forecast civil legal aid expenditure in future years.

- (iii) Through the access to justice reform programme, the Department aims to create an effective, sustainable, affordable and accessible legal aid system. The current proposals for reform of Legal Aid are about ensuring that the people who need help receive levels of advice and representation that are appropriate and affordable.

Sexual Offences Prevention Orders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail how many people from outside Northern Ireland, including from Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland are currently (i) within the court system under application for Sexual Offences Prevention Orders; and/or (ii) subject to a Sexual Offences Prevention Order after it has been discovered they were convicted of a sexual offence in their native country, prior to arrival in Northern Ireland and for which, if committed locally, would have resulted in a Sexual Offences Prevention Order and/or have acted in such a way as to have an Order imposed.

(AQW 28349/11-15)

Mr Ford: Applications to the courts for Sexual Offences Prevention Orders are an operational matter for the Chief Constable who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board.

You may therefore wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Prison Service: Reform

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27655/11-15, to address the first part of the original question, particularly to detail the main obstacles in implementing reform to bring the Northern Ireland Prison Service facilities in question up to standard.

(AQW 28350/11-15)

Mr Ford: Reforming our prisons is a key priority and implementing the necessary change will take time and money. Reform must be delivered within the current financial restrictions; progress is dependent on securing approval of Business Cases and necessary funding.

Kenneth Douglas

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27762/11-15 (i) given it is not within the scope or power of any Department, agency, or officer to 'pre-empt' these circumstances, could instead have been prevented had due consideration to previous offending behaviour and risk combined with diligence been applied; and whether using the term 'pre-empt' is disingenuous in reviews such as this as it is unattainable and cannot be disproved.

(AQW 28351/11-15)

Mr Ford: The comprehensive Review taken forward by the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Probation Board for Northern Ireland has adequately considered all the issues in respect of this case. I do not agree that my previous response was disingenuous in respect of the outcome from that review.

Prison Service: Independent Research

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27593/11-15, whether it is within the remit of the Director General of the Northern Ireland Prison Service to prevent Professor Phil Scraton access for independent research or admit him only on pre-set terms of what is documented.

(AQW 28352/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prison Service encourages independent research within prison establishments and accommodates research proposals which meet the requirements of the researcher and which will prove of value to the Prison Service in terms of delivery of its core objectives.

Sexual Offences Prevention Orders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many Sexual Offences Prevention Orders, in place in each of the last three years, have been breached; and of these, how many were breached on more than one occasion, broken down per court division.

(AQW 28376/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details the number of Sexual Offences Prevention Orders (SOPOs) breached during the period 2010 to 2012 by County Court Division and includes the number of orders breached on more than one occasion.

Number of SOPOs breached by County Court Division during 2010 to 2012

County Court Division	2010		2011		2012
	Number of SOPOs breached on at least one occasion	Number of SOPOs breached on more than one occasion	Number of SOPOs breached on at least one occasion	Number of SOPOs breached on more than one occasion	Number of SOPOs breached on at least one occasion	Number of SOPOs breached on more than one occasion

Frances McKeown

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27727/11-15, (i) given the Prisoner Ombudsman is the author of the report and that any subsequent dealings on its content fall within the remit of the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) and his Department, why he is unwilling to address this matter; and (ii) whether his Department or the NIPS have input into the decision not to publish this report.

(AQW 28431/11-15)

Mr Ford: As I explained in my response to AQW/27727/11-15, the Prisoner Ombudsman is an independent office holder and the Member may wish to write to him directly about this matter. The decision on whether or not to publish the report is taken solely by him and neither I nor the Northern Ireland Prison Service has any input into whether or not the report should be published.

Prisoners: Temporary Release

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Justice to detail the average time spent on temporary release in the community of prisoners serving a life sentence, prior to reaching the minimum tariff period determined by the court, since 2010.

(AQW 28452/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost.

Parole Commissioners: Victim Consultation

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Justice to outline the mechanism used by the Parole Commissioners for Northern Ireland to consult with victims prior to considering the release of prisoners serving a life sentence.

(AQW 28454/11-15)

Mr Ford: Parole Commissioners are independent office holders and the Chief Commissioner has suggested that you write to her directly on this issue. However, I can advise that the Probation Board for Northern Ireland provide Victim Impact Statements to Parole Commissioners for consideration.

PSNI: Service Medal

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department is considering a proposal to spend over £300,000 on a medal for PSNI staff, and if so, to detail how this proposal came to the Department, including the view expressed by the Policing Board.

(AQW 28464/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have received a proposal from the Chief Constable to introduce a PSNI Service Medal, the cost of which is estimated at £316,000.

The Northern Ireland Policing Board resolved to support the Chief Constable's proposal for a PSNI Service Medal.

Kenneth Douglas

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27708/11-15, why the Public Protection Arrangements in Northern Ireland has not been notified of this matter; and whether he will instruct this agency to conduct their own review into the handling of this case since the first release.

(AQW 28490/11-15)

Mr Ford: Mr Douglas was not subject to the Public Protection Arrangements in Northern Ireland because he did not receive a qualifying sentence. The Review taken forward by the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Probation Board for Northern Ireland has already comprehensively and satisfactorily considered all the issues in respect of this case.

Prison Service: Intelligence Reports

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27855/11-15, why this information cannot be provided on the grounds of personal security when information was provided in the answer to AQW 27854/11-15, which relates to personal security.

(AQW 28547/11-15)

Mr Ford: Any intelligence reports that NIPS receive, including those that relate to the personal security of staff, are confidential. The details of any such intelligence reports including how many have been received cannot be shared. I am content that information regarding the Special Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings can be released as this will not identify any persons nor breach confidentiality.

National Crime Agency: Political Agreement

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice what his Department will do to ensure Northern Ireland is not disadvantaged by the National Crime Agency not having appropriate power.

(AQW 28552/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am continuing to work to secure political agreement for the NCA to operate in Northern Ireland in the devolved arena with all the necessary powers available to it. That operation would be subject to appropriate oversight from our policing architecture. Engagement with political parties is ongoing.

If the NCA is not empowered to operate in the devolved arena then Northern Ireland will be at a disadvantage.

Mediation: Funding

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the publicly funded assistance available for (i) family mediation cases; (ii) collaborative law cases; and (iii) the Bar Mediation Service in individual cases.

(AQW 28614/11-15)

Mr Ford: Under the Assistance by Way of Representation and Civil Legal Aid Schemes, the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (the Commission) funds Family Mediation in applications under the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 as directed by the court.

The Commission does not currently fund Collaborative Law Cases.

The Commission does not fund cases under the Bar Mediation Service.

Department for Regional Development

Roads: Cancelled Projects

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost to his Department of cancelled road projects in each of the last two financial years.

(AQW 26059/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I would advise the Member that no road projects have been cancelled in the last two financial years.

Fivemiletown: Traffic Attendants

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of days, excluding Sundays, that traffic attendants were patrolling in Fivemiletown; and (ii) the (a) minimum, (b) maximum and (c) average number of attendants patrolling on these days, in the last 12 months.

(AQW 26669/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In the period from 1 October 2012 to 30 September 2013, Traffic Attendants patrolled in Fivemiletown on 120 days, Monday to Saturday.

In providing these patrols, the minimum number of Traffic Attendants deployed per visit was 1 and the maximum number was three. The overall average was 1.4.

Regional Development Strategy 2035

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what action is being taken to address the certificate of general conformity for the Regional Development Strategy 2035, which is currently delaying the publication of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan.

(AQW 26763/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Prevailing planning legislation requires my Department to decide whether or not a plan is in general conformity with the RDS within the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which it received the formal request from DOE. That request was submitted to my Department on 19 September 2013 and I can confirm that officials within my Department have completed the assessment within this statutory timeframe.

Vehicles: Pothole Damage

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of claims his Department has received for damage to vehicles caused by potholes, in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 26764/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of claims received by my Department for damage to vehicles caused by potholes, in the last three financial years, are set out in the table below.

Year	Claims for damage caused by potholes
2010/11	2,101

A26: Upgrade

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the recent announcement by the Minister for Finance and Personnel regarding the upgrading of the A26, what steps he will take in preparation for the remainder of the scheme in future years.

(AQW 27581/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased, that having made the case for the A26 project, to have secured funding of around £8 million in 2014/15 for the A26 Frosses Road Dual Carriageway scheme, which will enable construction to commence in late 2014.

I have now considered the Inspector's Report into the Public Inquiry for the scheme and tasked Roads Service to progress the project, taking into account the Inspector's recommended amendments. This will enable the Statutory Orders to be made and the procurement process to be publicised. It is anticipated the scheme will take 24 months to complete at an estimated cost of £65 million.

Cycling: Transport Hub

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how cycling will be catered for in the new Integrated Transport Hub.

(AQW 27666/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised me that, although its Transport Hub project team is currently undertaking a procurement exercise to appoint an Integrated Design Team, there is no specific design for the Hub at this point. However, cycling will be recognised as an important transport mode to be catered for within the Hub facility and the design brief will be drafted to reflect this.

Railways: Waterside Station

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the potential for passenger growth on the Belfast - Coleraine - Londonderry rail line when the new Waterside passenger terminal is completed and the passing loop near Ballykelly is operational.

(AQW 27889/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The timing and scope of a new station at Waterside have not yet been finalised. A range of options are currently going through feasibility review, costing and Economic Appraisal.

Any Economic Appraisal on Waterside Station will not include passenger forecasts, as stations do not drive demand in quite the same way as service frequency.

In relation to the passing loop, the Translink 2007 New Trains Two Economic Appraisal projects a 90,000 passenger uplift once an hourly service has been delivered to Londonderry. Phase 2 of the Londonderry to Coleraine track relay which will facilitate this is currently planned to complete by the end of 2016.

Transport: Dungannon Integrated Pilot Scheme

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the Dungannon Integrated Pilot Scheme. (AQW 27925/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased to be able to confirm that the pilot project in the Dungannon area is making good progress. My Department is co-ordinating the pilot, the aim of which is to prove that the concept of integrated planning and delivery of passenger transport can be achieved and offers better value for money and better services for passengers. There have been a number of notable achievements to date, including the rationalisation of a number of school services involving the Southern Education and Library Board and Translink in Dungannon and the introduction of an improved service to Craigavon Area Hospital involving Translink and community transport. The implementation of this new service has been supported by improved passenger information giving details to people living in rural areas on how they can avail of community transport to connect to the main Translink hub in Dungannon to travel to and from the hospital. This is exactly the type of integration that the pilot project is seeking to deliver and it is planned to build on this type of improvement to service delivery throughout the pilot period. The pilot will also assess other opportunities including an extended role for community transport in school transport provision in rural areas and in accessing healthcare facilities where there is a specific requirement. It is also planned to examine integration opportunities in the very complex area of special needs transport provision in the Dungannon area and to extend the analysis of school transport services to the Cookstown area and the remaining schools in Dungannon that have not been considered so far.

At the same time as planning and implementing the pilot, my Department is preparing for the development of an economic appraisal which will examine the totality of travel needs and develop proposals on how integrated planning and delivery of services could be delivered on a wider scale. The economic appraisal will consider the many issues that will need to be addressed across all the organisations involved. I am firmly of the view that a systematic and phased approach should be adopted for both the pilot and any subsequent wider implementation. This is the best approach to develop a sound evidence base for an integrated and sustainable service delivery model for the future. It will also enable participating organisations to consider the impacts on the services that they fund and enable proposals on the way forward to be agreed by Departments and the other organisations involved.

Mineral Extraction: Mobouy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the extent to which Mobouy Road, Derry has been undermined by unauthorised mineral extraction; (ii) when unauthorised mineral extraction took place; (iii) whether this poses any danger to road users; and (iv) why his Department did not act to prevent this. (AQW 28016/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has no information indicating that Mobouy Road has been undermined by unauthorised mineral extraction. However, there may have been a threat to Mobouy Road some time ago and it is understood DOE Planning may have taken action to address that situation. There are no visible defects to Mobouy Road that suggests undermining and there is no perceived danger to road users.

Roads: Pothole Repairs

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development how pothole repairs are prioritised. (AQW 28021/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Article 8 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 places a duty on Roads Service to maintain all public roads in a reasonable condition. In recognition of its duty of care, Roads Service has put in place a set of Maintenance Standards for Safety. These standards, which are designed to ensure a consistent service level and a safe highway while offering value for money, are based on best practice, research and consultation with both the public and other professional bodies and Industry.

Essentially, the standards and procedures currently in operation, establish frequencies for road inspections which are dependent upon traffic volumes and specify response times for the repair of defects, including potholes. Inspection frequencies vary between daily cycles for motorways to four monthly cycles for carriageways carrying low volumes of traffic. Response times specified for the repair of defects, including potholes, are dependent upon the severity of the defect and range from one calendar day to routine inclusion in the next work programme for that particular route. If the relevant response time cannot be met, Roads Service has the option of installing signs to warn road users of a possible danger.

Moirá: Traffic Volume

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the daily volume of traffic passing through Moira. (AQW 28026/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department collects data from automatic traffic counting sites located throughout Northern Ireland. Details of the Annual Average Daily Traffic (AADT) flow information recorded at two locations on the main route running through Moira, the A3, are provided in the table below:

Census Point	Route	Location	Channel 1	Channel 2	Total (7 day AADT)
235	A3	Moira Road, Lisburn, West of Lissue Industrial Estate	To Lisburn - 5,512	To Moira-5,725	11,237
409	A3	Magheralin - Moira	To Magheralin - 6,579	To Moira-6,491	13,070

Toome: Traffic Volume

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the volume of traffic recorded in Toome in (i) 2003-2004; and (ii) 2004-2005.

(AQW 28027/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Traffic counts on the bridge in Toome taken during December 2003 indicated an average 7 day traffic volume of 22273 vehicles per day, whereas those in September 2004 indicated an average volume of 7121 vehicles per day.

The significant reduction in traffic volumes can be explained by the opening, in March 2004, of the Toome By-pass, which accommodated much of the through traffic.

Winter Weather: DRD Contingency Plans

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of weather indicators predicting a colder than average winter for 2013/14, what his Department is doing to (i) prepare for this; and (ii) ensure there is enough grit, sand bags and other essential materials for all eventualities.

(AQW 28029/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service is well prepared for the incoming winter season and will be able to provide a high standard of service delivery for the salting of roads.

Prior to the start of each winter service period, Roads Service carries out a significant amount of planning to ensure a state of readiness for the coming season. In addition to a number of routine pre-season checks, planning includes ensuring adequate staffing arrangements are in place, including training for new staff, where required, and ensuring all winter service equipment is in working order. Every night, from the end of October 2013 until the middle of April 2014, Roads Service will have almost 300 people on standby ready to salt main roads, helping drivers across Northern Ireland cope with the wintry conditions.

At the start of this season, Roads Service salt barns were at full capacity, with stocks in excess of 70,000 tonnes. Additional salt stock resilience, totalling 38,100 tonnes, is held at six strategic locations throughout Northern Ireland. The current Winter Service salt contract also provides for the supply of a further 15,000 tonnes per month from October 2013 to April 2014, if required.

During periods of heavy rainfall, my Department's primary objective is to deal with the impact of roads-related flooding caused by blocked or overwhelmed infrastructure, such as gullies or other road drainage systems, for which it has responsibility. I am satisfied sufficient quantities of sandbags are in store for emergency purposes and, in line with current policy, my officials will continue to assist other bodies deal with flooding incidents. This includes, for example, the prompt deployment of sandbags, particularly where properties are at risk of flooding.

Members of the public with concerns about flooding can contact the Flooding Incident Line on 0300 2000 100. This service provides a single number to report serious flooding and is available 24 hours per day, 7 days per week.

Craigantlet Hills: Road Proposals

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on proposals for the Craigantlet crossroads.

(AQW 28076/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As you will be aware, I asked officials in my Department's Roads Service to consider all the alternative proposals put forward by local residents.

It is likely a consultation exercise will be required, to gauge the views of the local community, as well as the wider North Down travelling public, on the advantages and disadvantages of the options under consideration.

I would not, therefore, expect to be in a position to make any decision until this process is completed.

Craigantlet Hills: Crossroads

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the work that is currently being carried out at Craigantlet crossroads.

(AQW 28079/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service is currently carrying out essential carriageway resurfacing to improve the structural integrity and ride quality at Craigantlet crossroads. In addition, some associated footway, kerbing and minor drainage improvement works are also being undertaken to strengthen the carriageway at the junction and the approaches to it.

Craigantlet Hills: Resurfacing Costs

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the estimated cost of the work that is currently being carried out at Craigantlet crossroads.

(AQW 28080/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The estimated cost of the resurfacing scheme currently being completed at Craigantlet crossroads is £160k.

Spencer Street, Holywood: Resident-only Parking

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the steps his Department is taking to implement resident only car parking for Spencer Street, Holywood.

(AQW 28115/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My officials are currently pursuing the introduction of Residents' Parking schemes within the four areas of parking restraint identified in the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan 2015 (BMTP).

Efforts are currently being concentrated on schemes in inner Belfast and it is hoped, in due course, that residents' parking schemes will be progressed in Bangor, Carrickfergus and Lisburn. The timing of schemes outside Belfast will be dependent upon the progress of those being developed at present and a future prioritisation of the remaining areas.

Although Holywood is not specifically identified within the BMTP in this respect, a number of requests have been received for the provision of residents' parking in residential areas of the town centre, including Spencer Street. Accordingly, officials have added these locations to its list of areas for future consideration, once all areas identified within the BMTP have been addressed.

As I have previously advised, I had asked officials to carry out an initial assessment of the eligibility of residential streets within Holywood town centre. Officials indicate that surveys of a number of the residential streets in Holywood town centre, including Spencer Street, to determine if they would benefit from the introduction of residents' parking schemes, should be completed by the end of January 2014.

Cycling Unit: Budget

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total budget of the new departmental cycling unit.

(AQW 28128/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I announced the establishment of a new cycling unit in August 2013 to deliver the effective co-ordination and management of a range of cycling initiatives. The unit was formally established in November this year.

Senior officials in my Department are currently exploring budget and resource requirements to ensure the necessary funding is secured to deliver the Department's objectives. Given that the Unit has been set up in-year, the annual budget is estimated at around £800K for staffing and promotional costs. Discussions are also underway to identify what additional resource budget is required and the capital funding required for infrastructure measures.

Bangor: Car Parking

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to review car parking charges in Bangor.

(AQW 28129/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware I announced a freeze on any further increase to car parking charges in early November 2012 for the remainder of the current budget period; that is, up until 2015. This announcement also provides for a freeze on the introduction of charges in existing Roads Service operated car parks during this period.

Giro d'Italia 2014: Cycling Infrastructure

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the steps he is taking to ensure cycling infrastructure is in place ahead of the Giro d'Italia 2014.

(AQW 28131/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is represented on the Northern Ireland Local Steering Group, which is the overseeing committee organising the event. Roads Service is involved in the operational aspects of the event through the Race

Committee and officials have been liaising closely with the race organisers in agreeing the route of the 2014 Giro D'Italia in Northern Ireland.

Based on an inspection, the organisers were very content with the condition of the roads to be used for the three stages taking place in Northern Ireland. Whilst there are a small number of issues to be addressed by my Department prior to the event, no upgrades have been requested.

The delivery structure of the event has targeted 'legacy' as one of the primary objectives of the event. Whilst the Northern Ireland Tourist Board is leading this aspect of the event organisation, my Department will assist wherever possible.

NI Water: Charges Scheme

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 26977/11-15, on what basis the proposed charging scheme was calculated.

(AQW 28167/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water's annual Charges Scheme sets out the charges the Company makes for the services it provides. This includes notional household charges based on property capital values as recommended by the Independent Water Review Panel. The Executive has made a commitment that there will be no additional water charges for households during this Programme for Government period. As a result my Department pays a subsidy to NIW in lieu of domestic consumers' contributions.

NI Water: Charges

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) whether he is satisfied with the methodology used to determine water charges for domestic customers as published on NI Water's website; (ii) what representations he has had about that methodology; (iii) whether these representations will be made public; (iv) whether he will instruct NI Water to make changes next year; and (v) whether any consultation will take place on the charging methodology.

(AQW 28173/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Executive has made a commitment that there will be no additional water charges for households during this Programme for Government period. Therefore, the questions of the methodology for household charging does not arise.

Park and Ride: Facilities

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the Park and Ride facilities for which his Department has direct responsibility in (i) Strangford; and (ii) the rest of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 28178/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is not responsible for any Park and Ride facilities in Strangford.

The Park and Ride facilities located across the remainder of Northern Ireland, for which my Department has direct responsibility, are as follows:

- Limavady Bus Station, Station Road;
- Ballee Park and Ride, Ballymena;
- Millbrook Park and Ride, Larne;
- Paradise Walk Park and Ride, Templepatrick;
- Dunsilly Park and Ride/Share;
- Ballygroobey Park and Share;
- Toome Park and Ride;
- Drumahoe Park and Ride;
- Lough Road Park and Ride, Lurgan;
- Portadown Road Park and Ride/Share, Armagh;
- Sheepbridge Park and Share, Newry;
- Forkhill Road Park and Share, Cloghogue, Newry;
- Clough Roundabout Park and Share;
- Cairnshill Park and Ride, Saintfield Road, Belfast;
- Blacks Road Park and Ride, Upper Lisburn Road, Belfast;
- Sprucefield Park and Ride (adjacent to M1 motorway);
- Northside Park and Ride, Great Georges Street, Belfast;
- Eastside Park and Ride, Middlepath Street, Belfast;
- Hillhead Road Park and Ride, Castledawson;
- Magherafelt Road Park and Ride, Castledawson;
- Crevenagh Road Park and Ride, Omagh;
- Maghera Park and Ride; and
- Tullybryan Road Park and Ride, Ballygawley.

Planning Applications: Parking Surveys

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of parking surveys attached to planning applications that have not been validated by NI Roads service staff in the last twelve months; and (ii) how his Department will ensure that all future surveys are properly validated.

(AQW 28183/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Information on the number of parking surveys attached to planning applications that have not been validated is not readily available. It would require a lengthy and resource intensive exercise scrutinising the relevant database containing the consultation responses to obtain the information requested.

Officials are reminded of the importance of validating information received from applicants during the planning process and managers carry out a randomly 10% check of responses for quality assurance purposes.

A5 Western Transport Corridor/A32

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any bids for funding originally made for the A5 Western Transport Corridor have been redirected for the upgrade of the A32 servicing the South West Acute Hospital in Enniskillen and the new local Enhanced Hospital in Omagh.

(AQW 28211/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the court ruling in April of this year which delayed the A5 Western Corridor dualling scheme, I wrote to the then Finance Minister in May, highlighting other schemes that could commence construction in 2014/15. Unfortunately, none of the A32 schemes were included as they were not sufficiently developed and were not subsequently bid for in the 2014/15 Capital Budget Exercise.

The Member will be aware three schemes have already been completed along the A32 servicing the South West Acute Hospital in Enniskillen and the new local Enhanced Hospital in Omagh. These include:

- the £2m improvement scheme at A32 Drumskinny, which was completed in early 2012;
- the £7.3m realignment scheme at A32 Shannaragh, which opened to traffic in December 2012; and
- the £17m A32 Cherrymount Link in Enniskillen, which opened in June 2013.

Together these schemes have improved the quality of the route, enhanced road safety and reduced travel times for all road users.

Development work is progressing on a number of other proposed schemes along the A32 route, including at Cornamuck and Esker Bog. Delivery of these projects will, however, be dependent upon future budget settlements.

Cycling Unit: Staff

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to increase the staff complement of the departmental cycle unit.

(AQW 28218/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In order to give increased focus and priority to the needs of cyclists and to encourage greater participation in this healthy and sustainable form of transport, I established a new cycling unit early in November 2013 to ensure the effective progress of a range of cycling initiatives.

My officials are exploring how the new cycling unit can co-ordinate all cycling related matters in a coherent manner and are drawing up a work programme for the unit. The work programme will set out the staff requirements to carry out the programme.

Initially, I plan to keep the resourcing requirements of the unit under review and intend to carry out a formal review during 2014 which will consider whether it is adequately staffed or if additional resources need to be allocated to complement the new unit.

North Down: Weed Spraying

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of spraying weeds in North Down in each of the last twelve months.

(AQW 28236/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not maintain an analysis of expenditure incurred specifically on weed spraying on a Constituency area basis.

Car Parking: Limited Waiting

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27711/11-15, if a driver parks in an area where parking is restricted to 1 hour, with no return within 2 hours, at 10:00 in the morning and leaves at 10:59 then returns at 13:00 and is observed by a traffic warden at 10:50 and 13:10, is the driver liable for a parking ticket, and if so, on what legal basis is the parking ticket issued.

(AQW 28243/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The enforcement of limited waiting is based on a Traffic Attendant's (TAs) first and subsequent observations in association with wheel valve positions. Independent Adjudicators have accepted that noting wheel valve positions is the most practical method for determining if a vehicle has moved from its original parking position.

In the situation described above, the TA will have made his/her first observation at 10:50, noted the wheel valve positions and carried on patrol. Upon returning to the vehicle which is in the same position at 13:10, the TA will note the wheel valve positions and if they have remained in the same position then a PCN will be issued for over-staying the maximum time. If the wheel valve positions have changed, then the vehicle will have been considered as being re-parked and this will also mark the commencement of a new first observation.

Kilcooley Estate, Bangor: Fence Repairs

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to repair fencing along the Bangor to Belfast Road at Kilcooley Estate, Bangor.

(AQW 28274/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: You will be aware the fencing around the Kilcooley Estate, Bangor, was erected by the roads authority at the time the Belfast Road/West Circular Road, Bangor was being constructed. It was to provide accommodation works, delineation of the road boundary and to afford protection to footway users, where there is a difference in level between the footway and the adjoining property.

Responsibility for the fence would have reverted to the landowner abutting the road, namely, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, who would be best placed to advise if any repairs are planned.

North Down: Salt Bins

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail how many grit boxes have been allocated in the North Down constituency, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28285/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of salt bins provided by my Department in the North Down area, in each of the last five winter seasons, are provided in the table below:

Season	Number of Salt Bins
2009/10	Details not available
2010/11	172
2011/12	188
2012/13	184
2013/14	184

Fivemiletown: Roads Service Car Park

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the appropriateness of a publicly owned car park in Fivemiletown being used as a location to burn an effigy.

(AQW 28295/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I do not condone or support the unauthorised use of my Department's land or other property, for any purpose. The Road Traffic and Vehicles Off-Street Parking Order (NI) 2000 does not permit the lighting of fires in Roads Service car parks, however, it appears no physical damage occurred to the surface of the car park.

Roads: Surface Life Span

Mrs Overend asked the Minister for Regional Development what guidance is provided by Roads Service on the life expectancy of resurfacing work carried out on A and B roads.

(AQW 28306/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department generally accepts that structural maintenance in the form of resurfacing should be carried out on all roads once every 20 to 30 years. However, actual requirements vary from location to location, dependent upon a range of factors, such as traffic volumes, openings by utilities etc. Interim treatments, such as surface dressing, are frequently used to extend the serviceable life of a road, although these are not appropriate in all circumstances.

Whilst all road surfaces have finite life spans, research and observations carried out over many years have shown that roads generally do not deteriorate in a uniform way over their serviceable life. New and properly constructed roads show little deterioration over the first half of their design life, but then deteriorate at an increased rate to a level where they are no longer fit for purpose and ultimately require reconstruction.

The most cost effective practice is to plan structural maintenance in the form of resurfacing work, towards the end of the first half of a carriageway's expected lifespan. Otherwise, additional reactive maintenance, normally in the form of patching, will become necessary.

Unfortunately, due to historical funding shortfalls, my Department has generally been unable to undertake the level of structural maintenance that has been independently assessed as necessary to maintain the integrity of the road network. Therefore, the actual lifespan for road resurfacing often far exceeds the recommended treatment frequencies.

NI Water: CEO Appointment

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the process for the appointment of a chief executive of NI Water, including whether it is a board appointment that is subject to ministerial approval; and why an advisor has been appointed, and by whom, in respect of the selection.

(AQW 28366/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water and the Department are currently working together closely to determine the way forward on this issue. A recruitment consultant had been appointed by the company to assist with the initial recruitment process, however at this stage no further advisors have been appointed.

The NI Water Chief Executive is a member of the Board of the company, a role which is subject to Ministerial approval.

Transport: Easibus

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the cost of operating the eleven Easybus services in Belfast; and (ii) the total revenue raised by the service, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28403/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below provides (i) the operating costs and (ii) revenue in relation to Easibus services for the last five years.

Year	Operational Costs	Fare Revenue
2009	£163,354.52	£32,228.23
2010	£163,354.52	£31,770.23
2011	£163,354.52	£33,146.28
2012	£166,495.97	£31,824.66
2013*	£94,242.99	£18,215.15

* Year to date, i.e. up to end Period 7 (27.10.13)

Clogher: Car Parking

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of parking tickets issued in the vicinity of the Clogher livestock mart, Co Tyrone on each Saturday, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 28555/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The parking restrictions in place near Clogher Cattle Market are on Station Road and Tullybroom Road. The parking restriction on Saturday applies from 8.00am to 6.00pm.

In the past twelve months, a total of 65 Penalty Charge Notices have been issued in the vicinity of the market.

Translink: Christmas Contingency Plans

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development what action he can take to tackle overcrowding on trains travelling from Ballymoney via Ballymena to Belfast, leading up to the Christmas period.

(AQW 28627/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink officials have advised me that plans have already been put in place to operate a number of additional trains and longer trains on NIR's network over weekends running up to Christmas, commencing Saturday 30 November 2013.

Having subsequently experienced unprecedented passenger numbers on Saturday 23 November, timetable plans have been further enhanced.

On the Belfast-Coleraine-Londonderry line a number of Friday evening trains and the majority of Saturday and Sunday trains will be increased from 3-car to 6-car to meet anticipated loadings. Additionally 2 spare trains and crews will be rostered to provide auxiliary services where required.

Two additional trains will operate this Saturday night, 30 November 2013, from Londonderry to Coleraine and to Belfast to facilitate those attending the Lumiere event in Londonderry.

Service enhancements will also be implemented on Friday evenings, Saturdays and Sundays over the rest of the network.

Department for Social Development

Soft Services: DSD

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27129-11-15, to detail (i) the total number of staff currently employed in the Soft Services function; (ii) the location of each office that delivers Soft Services functions; (iii) the number of Soft Services staff in each office; and (iv) whether these staff will be redeployed within the Department after the planned outsourcing exercise.

(AQW 27641/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): Soft services is a term which refers to Facilities Management activities which relate to services within a building or a business, for example security, cleaning and catering functions; as opposed to hard services which relate to services relating to the building itself; for example maintenance or engineering.

Soft services is a term which refers to Facilities Management activities which relate to services within a building or a business, for example security, cleaning and catering functions; as opposed to hard services which relate to services relating to the building itself; for example maintenance or engineering.

The soft services to be included in the current procurement exercise for the NICS Security and Ancillary Services Contract relate to messengerial services across my department. Given their nature, these functions are undertaken across the Department rather than delivered from a particular office.

The attached table contains the detailed information requested. 150 posts across 48 sites will be directly affected by the outsourcing of these functions. 138 of these posts are currently filled via temporary contracts which will expire in advance of the transfer of function to a new provider. The 12 permanent NICS staff currently in post have the option to seek transfer to a similar role in another NICS department or to an administrative role in my department or to opt to transfer to the new contractor. Any who remain in post when the new contract becomes operational may transfer to the contractor under the terms of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 (TUPE).

Housing Executive: Internal Audit

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how many staff were in Internal Audit section of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive five years ago compared to current staffing levels; and how the resulting staff costs compare.
(AQW 28030/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that they had 14 staff in Internal Audit in 2008 and at the end of November 2013 they had 13 staff in post and a further two positions covered by Agency employees. Costs now are broadly similar to those in 2008.

Housing Executive: Community Safety and Relations

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how many Northern Ireland Housing Executive staff are engaged in community safety, community relations and good relations; and what is the annual budget for this work area.
(AQW 28031/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that there are currently twelve staff engaged in community safety, community relations and good relations and that the annual budget for this work area is £763,000.

Housing Executive: Social Housing Reform Programme

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what additional staff have been taken on by, or on behalf of, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive as part of its Social Housing Reform Programme; and at what cost.

(AQW 28032/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that a Director of Transformation has been appointed by the Strategic Investment Board to lead the Housing Executive in its change programme and to prepare for any potential changes arising from the DSD Social Housing Reform Programme. The Housing Executive has further advised that a team will be established internally to support the work of the new Director at a projected total cost of approximately £500,000 per annum, which includes the Director's salary.

Housing Executive: Applicants Registered as Homeless

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of Housing Executive applicants registered as homeless in each district office.

(AQW 28143/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that at 1 November 2013 there were a total of 12,270 Full Duty applicants. The table below details this number by Housing Executive District Office: -

NIHE District Office Area	Registered as Homeless (Full Duty Applicants)

As regards the definition of homelessness it is important to remember the legislative context as to how it is defined. The statutory definition of homelessness and threatened homelessness is at Article 3 of the Housing (NI) Order 1988 (as amended) and reads as follows:

- 3(1) A person is homeless if he has no accommodation available for his occupation in the United Kingdom or elsewhere.
- (2) A person shall be treated as having no accommodation if there is no accommodation which he, together with any other person who normally resides with him as a member of his family or in circumstances in which it is reasonable for that person to reside with him –
- is entitled to occupy by virtue of an interest in it or by virtue of an order of a court, or
 - has an expressed or implied licence to occupy, or
 - occupies as a residence by virtue of any enactment or rule of law giving him the right to remain in occupation or restricting the right of another person to recover possession.
- (3) A person shall not be treated as having accommodation unless it is accommodation which it would be reasonable for him to continue to occupy.
- (4) Regard may be had in determining whether it would be reasonable for a person to continue to occupy accommodation, to the general circumstances prevailing in relation to housing in Northern Ireland.
- (5) A person is also homeless if he has accommodation but –
- he cannot secure entry to it, or
 - it is probable that occupation of it will lead to violence from some other person residing in it or to threats of violence from some other person residing in it and likely to carry out the threats, or
 - it consists of a movable structure, vehicle or vessel designed or adapted for human habitation and there is no place where he is entitled or permitted to place it and to reside in it.
- (6) A person is threatened with homelessness if it is likely that he will become homeless within 28 days from the day on which he gives written notice to the Executive that he is threatened with homelessness.

Housing Executive: Temporary Accommodation

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of Housing Executive applicants waiting for temporary accommodation in each district office.

(AQW 28144/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that they do not maintain waiting lists for temporary accommodation. Temporary accommodation is provided in response to their statutory homelessness duties where required by homeless applicants.

Housing Executive: Temporary Accommodation

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of properties used as temporary accommodation in each Housing Executive district office.

(AQW 28147/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below provides, by Housing Executive District office, the number of properties which the Housing Executive can use in response to their homelessness duties. The Housing Executive has advised that the temporary accommodation bureau is fluid and properties can be removed and others added at any time.

Housing Executive: Pay Increase

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development why employees of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive have not yet received the pay increase of 1 per cent that was awarded in July 2013.

(AQW 28152/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Approval for the 1% pay increase has been granted by the Finance Minister on 14 November 2013. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is making arrangements to pay the increase, backdated to April 2013, to all staff as soon as possible.

Social Security: Vehicle Purchase

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of foreign nationals who have received a cheque from a Social Security Office to purchase a vehicle, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28161/11-15)

Mr McCausland: No cheques have been issued in the last three years by Social Security Office/Jobs and Benefit Office to any benefit claimants for the purpose of purchasing a vehicle.

Social Security: Benefit Fraud

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Social Development what was the cost of welfare fraud in each of the last five years; and what these figures represent as a percentage of the total welfare bill in each year.

(AQW 28175/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The most recently published information is set out in the tables below. Table 1 shows the estimated cost of benefit fraud for benefits administered by the Social Security Agency. Table 2 shows the estimated cost of Housing Benefit fraud. The estimated levels of benefit fraud are shown in terms of losses and also expressed as a percentage of benefit expenditure.

Table 1: Social Security Benefits: - estimated cost of Benefit Fraud

	2008 £ million	2009 £ million	2010 £ million	2011 £ million	2012 £ million
Total benefit expenditure	£3789	£4176	£4352	£4456	£4681

Estimated benefit fraud %	0.3%	0.4%	0.5%	0.4%	0.4%

The fraud levels reported in Table 1 in respect of Social Security Benefits are the responsibility of the Social Security Agency

Table 2: Housing Benefit: - estimated cost of Benefit Fraud

	2008 £ million	2009 £ million	2010 £ million	2011 £ million	2012 £ million
Total benefit expenditure	£467.9	£538.5	£606.8	£598.5	£653.2
Estimated benefit fraud	£3.0	£5.0	£1.7	£3.2	£10.0
Estimated benefit fraud %	0.6%	0.9%	0.3%	0.5%	1.5%

The fraud levels reported in Table 2 in respect of Housing Benefit are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive

Flags: DSD Buildings

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the buildings under his departmental remit on which the Union Flag has been flown in the last three years; and on which days, in each of these years, the flag has been flown.

(AQW 28223/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Arrangements for the flying of the Union flag from government buildings are contained in the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000, as amended by the Flags Regulations (NI) Amendment 2002. The designated days for hoisting the Union flag on government building are set out in the Regulations.

Annex 1 provides a list of Departmental offices where the Union flag was flown on all designated days unless otherwise noted. This information covers the financial years 2011/12 and 2012/13 and the period 1 April to 31 October 2013.

Flags: DSD Buildings

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has personally issued a Ministerial direction that the Union Flag be flown on designated days on all buildings under his departmental remit; and if so, on what date this direction was issued. (AQW 28224/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have not issued a Ministerial direction that the Union flag be flown on designated days on all DSD buildings.

Flags: DSD Buildings

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Social Development how the flying of the Union Flag on buildings within his departmental remit is in line with his responsibility to ensure a neutral political environment for staff working in, and customers using, these buildings.

(AQW 28225/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Arrangements for the flying of the Union flag from government buildings is contained in the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000, as amended by the Flags Regulations (NI) Amendment 2002. My Department complies with these regulations.

My Department takes its responsibilities under the NICS Dignity at Work policy seriously and fully complies with its requirements.

Flags: DSD Buildings

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Social Development whether the practice of flying the Union Flag on buildings under his departmental control is undertaken in-house or through private contract; and if the latter, to provide a breakdown of the costs involved.

Mr McCausland: Private contractors facilitated the flying of the Union flag at nine DSD premises during the period 1 November 2012 – 31 October 2013 at a cost of £2158.85.

Departmental staff facilitated the flying of the Union flag at 24 DSD premises.

Housing Executive: Rent and Arrears Recovery

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27514/11-15 and given the differential in average between highest and lowest in arrears, what steps are being taken by the Housing Executive to reduce the overall arrears problem. (AQW 28229/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that they have seven specialist Accounts Units situated across Northern Ireland, who are dedicated to the collection of rent and arrears recovery. Staff in these Units apply the policy and procedures of the organisation, which aim to ensure that prompt and appropriate action is taken when tenants fail to pay their rent and fall into arrears.

The appropriate actions taken to recover the arrears include early intervention through contact by letter and personal contact. Systems are in place to ensure that staff are prompted to take action at different levels where arrears continue to increase. At all opportunities, through various communications and personal contact, tenants are offered the services of specialist independent debt advice service, provided in partnership with Advice NI.

At all stages in the arrears recovery process, Housing Executive staff work with tenants to endeavour to come to a suitable voluntary repayment agreement. However, where arrears continue to increase and tenants continue to break agreements, it may be necessary to take legal proceedings to recover possession of the property and the debt. Repossession is taken only as an action of last resort,

Income collection and arrears recovery is a key landlord function and to ensure focus on performance, key performance indicators are reported on a monthly basis at corporate and divisional level across the Housing Executive's seven Accounts Units.

The Housing Executive is committed to continually reviewing processes to seek improvements in income collection and arrears recovery, and this involves sharing best practice and working both internally and externally with others to ensure effective service delivery.

Housing Executive: Pay Increase

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development (i) why the 1 percent pay increase awarded to Northern Ireland Housing Executive staff in July 2013 has not been implemented; (ii) when staff will receive the pay rise; and (iii) whether it will be backdated.

(AQW 28247/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Approval for the 1% pay increase has been granted by the Finance Minister on 14 November 2013. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is making arrangements to pay the increase backdated to April 2013 to all staff as soon as possible.

Soft Services: DSD

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 26721/11-15, how many people are employed by his Department in Soft Services; and how many will be employed after the outsourcing takes place.

(AQW 28248/11-15)

Mr McCausland: 'Soft services' is a term used to refer to Facilities Management activities which relate to services within a building or a business, for example security, cleaning and catering functions; as opposed to hard services which refer to services relating to the building itself; for example maintenance or engineering.

The soft services to be included in the current procurement exercise for the NICS Security and Ancillary Services contract relate to messengerial services across my Department.

There are currently 150 messenger posts in the Department. The number of staff employed on messenger services under the outsourced contract will be a matter for the contractor to determine.

South Antrim: Housing Executive Occupancy Rates

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the occupancy rates for Northern Ireland Housing Executive houses in South Antrim, broken down by (i) Antrim; (ii) Newtownabbey 1; and (iii) Newtownabbey 2 offices.

(AQW 28256/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below details the current stock and the number of voids in the Housing Executive's District Office areas of Antrim; Newtownabbey 1 and Newtownabbey 2 which covers South Antrim.

District Office	Awaiting Imminent Relet	Difficult to let *	Undergoing Major repairs Improvements/ Decanting	Pending Sale	Pending Demolition	Squatters/ SPED	Total	Gross Housing stock
Antrim	6	18	19	2	1	4	50	2,364
Newtownabbey 1	1	5	84	1	13	0	104	2,160
Newtownabbey 2	7	2	4	0	0	3	16	2,134
Totals	14	25	107	3	14	7	170	6,658

* Under Rule 68 of the Housing Selection Scheme a property is deemed to be difficult to let if it meets the following criteria: -

- 1) It has been void for at least four weeks; and
- 2) No eligible Applicants have applied for it.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Housing Executive: Rent and Arrears Recovery

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27476/11-15, to outline the actions his Department is taking to reduce the number of Northern Ireland Housing Executive tenants that are in rent arrears.

(AQW 28264/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that they have seven specialist Accounts Units situated across Northern Ireland, who are dedicated to the collection of rent and arrears recovery. Staff in these Units apply the policy and procedures of the organisation, which aim to ensure that prompt and appropriate action is taken when tenants fail to pay their rent and fall into arrears.

The appropriate actions taken to recover the arrears include early intervention through contact by letter and personal contact. Systems are in place to ensure that staff are prompted to take action at different levels where arrears continue to increase. At all opportunities, through various communications and personal contact, tenants are offered the services of specialist independent debt advice service, provided in partnership with Advice NI.

At all stages in the arrears recovery process, Housing Executive staff work with tenants to endeavour to come to a suitable voluntary repayment agreement. However, where arrears continue to increase and tenants continue to break agreements, it may be necessary to take legal proceedings to recover possession of the property and the debt. Repossession is taken only as an action of last resort,

Income collection and arrears recovery is a key landlord function and to ensure focus on performance, key performance indicators are reported on a monthly basis at corporate and divisional level across the Housing Executive's seven Accounts Units.

The Housing Executive is committed to continually reviewing processes to seek improvements in income collection and arrears recovery, and this involves sharing best practice and working both internally and externally with others to ensure effective service delivery.

North Down: Housing Executive Gas Installations

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties in North Down that have had gas installed, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28266/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the number of gas installations in the last five years, through major heating schemes and Disabled Persons Adaptations heating were as follows:-

2008/09	11
2009/10	55
2010/11	186
2011/12	209
2012/13	13

North Down: Housing Executive Gas Installations

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the (i) location; and (ii) timescales of plans to install gas in Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties in North Down.

(AQW 28267/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that gas heating is being installed during 2013/14 financial year in the following estates in North Down:

Bloomfield/Rathgill	69 dwellings
Conlig	4 dwellings
Groomsport	12 dwellings
Kilcooley	88 Dwellings
Hollywood	29 dwellings
Whitehill	2 dwellings

The Housing Executive has also advised that during 2014/15 financial year a small number of gas back boiler units and 15 year old oil systems will be replaced but these have not been programmed yet.

Housing Executive: Pay Increase

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development when staff from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive will receive the one percent pay increase that was awarded in July 2013.

(AQW 28270/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Approval for the 1% pay increase has been granted by the Finance Minister on 14 November 2013. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is making arrangements to pay the increase backdated to April 2013 to all staff as soon as possible.

Citizens Advice/Advice NI

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to outline how the roles of the Citizens Advice Bureau and Advice NI differ. (AQW 28302/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Citizens Advice is made up of a Regional Office and 28 Citizens Advice bureaux across Northern Ireland which are affiliated to Citizens Advice NI. These local bureaux provide a holistic advice service on topics including benefits, debt, employment, consumer, money and housing issues.

Advice NI is a membership organisation that provides a range of infrastructure support and development services to independent advice and advocacy organisations across Northern Ireland. Advice NI has 70 member organisations who provide a range of generalist and specialist information, advice and advocacy services to the public in the areas of social security, debt, housing, consumer issues, employment, tax, older people, people with disabilities, ex-offenders and their families, carers and victims.

Citizens Advice NI and Advice NI regional offices both provide support services to their members including provision of accredited training courses, social policy support, ICT and communications support. To maximise potential and the skills and individual expertise of both Citizens Advice NI and Advice NI these organisations, in partnership with the Law Centre NI, have formed The Northern Ireland Advices Services Consortium. The Consortium is funded by my department to deliver a range of regional support services to frontline advice providers.

Derry: Housing Waiting List

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27763/11-15, what actions his Department has taken to reduce the Common Waiting List in the (i) Waterloo Place; (ii) Waterside; and (iii) Collon Terrace Housing Executive District Office areas.

(AQW 28330/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that from April 2012 - March 2013, 184 units of social housing were delivered and there were 456 units of social housing under construction across their Waterloo Place, Waterside and Collon Terrace District areas. Additionally, there are 788 units in the current Social Housing Development Programme 2013/14-2015/16.

The Housing Executive carries out annual housing need assessments and each year the Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP) is reviewed to take account of changing trends. While the Housing Executive project over a five year period, the budget for the SHDP is set within a three year period. Housing need over and above what is listed in the SHDP is contained within the unmet housing need prospectus. The prospectus is intended to guide housing associations in their search for sites. Waterloo Place, Waterside and Collon Terrace District Office areas are among the locations identified in this prospectus.

The Housing Executive is also actively reviewing land that it owns with a view to bringing forward land with development potential into the SHDP. A Housing Association is due on site for Phase 1 of Nelson Drive (17 unit scheme in the Waterside) while another Housing Association is working Housing Executive sites at Nixon's Corner and Fahan Street (combined 20 units in Waterloo Place) and another Housing Association has submitted planning for a 17 unit scheme at Glen Court/ Cedar Court in Waterloo Place.

Additionally, the Housing Executive monitor public sector surplus land trawls to identify any opportunities for the development of social housing on surplus public sector sites. They are working with their colleagues in the City Council of Londonderry in relation to additional land at Glen Court/Cedar Court and Corrody Road, with a view to delivering additional social housing in these locations.

Village Area, Belfast: Housing Waiting List

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development (i) how many people are on the housing waiting list for the Village area; and (ii) how many have been removed from the waiting list since the commencement of the decanting associated with the housing regeneration scheme.

(AQW 28336/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Waiting List for the Donegall Road Common Landlord Area is set out below.

	Singles	Couples	Families	Elderly	Total
All Applicants	116	8	71	19	214
Housing Stress	48	3	21	10	82
Allocations Year to March 2013*	22	1	14	3	40

* These figures do not include the new build properties which have been allocated since March 2013.

87 New social dwellings have been completed or are nearing completion in the Village area. To date, 73 of these have been handed over and occupied, and the remaining 14 will be occupied before Christmas 2013. All of these properties have been allocated to applicants on the Donegall Road Common Landlord Area waiting list.

This information will be reflected in the next annual waiting list analysis.

Village Area, Belfast: Regeneration

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development what efforts his Department has made to garner interest in developing private housing within the Village Regeneration area.

(AQW 28338/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Two development phases of social housing are complete or nearing completion in the Village Regeneration area, with a third phase submitted for planning approval. It is the intention to develop the remaining land for affordable private sector housing, in consultation with the local community, once planning approval for Phase 3 is granted.

A scheme has also been introduced to support owner occupiers living in redevelopment areas who wish to return to the area post regeneration. This provides the opportunity to purchase a new home with any difference in the value of their old home and new home being carried by the relevant housing association. My Department is currently developing an information leaflet for distribution by the Housing Executive and community organisations in the Village area to increase awareness of this scheme.

Village Area, Belfast: Regeneration

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development to detail any discussions his Department has had with private construction or development companies regarding the sale of land or development of private housing within the Village Regeneration area. (AQW 28339/11-15)

Mr McCausland: It was always intended that the development of social housing in the Village Regeneration area would be progressed first to meet rehousing requirements. Two development phases are complete or nearing completion with a third phase submitted for planning approval.

It is the Housing Executive's intention to develop the remaining land for affordable private sector housing and it will commence this process in consultation with the local community once planning approval for Phase 3 is granted, as this will determine the amount of land available.

At this time the Housing Executive will also continue to monitor the social waiting list demand and should this position change it will review the land use.

There have been no discussions with private construction or development companies or estate agents to date. The Housing Executive normally releases such land via an open development brief process.

Licensing (Conditions for Mixed Trading) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1997

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the timeline to amend the Licensing (Conditions for Mixed Trading) Regulations (NI) 1997. (AQW 28355/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A public consultation on "Proposed changes to the law regulating the sale and supply of alcohol in Northern Ireland" ended on 12 November 2012. The consultation sought views on a wide range of proposals, including changes to the Licensing (Conditions for Mixed Trading) Regulations (NI) 1997 which set out the conditions under which alcohol is sold in supermarkets and other premises in addition to household goods.

A large volume of responses were received which highlighted a wide range of strongly held views from a variety of key stakeholders, including the alcohol industry, health bodies and the general public.

I am currently considering the content of the final report on the outcome of the above consultation in advance of making a decision on the way forward. The challenge is finding an appropriate balance between the promotion and protection of population health while not disproportionately interfering in the market or affecting competition.

Alcohol: Online Sales

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development what measures are in place to regulate alcohol sales online. (AQW 28356/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Under the Licensing (Northern Ireland) Order 1996, alcohol may only be sold by retail in Northern Ireland in certain licensed premises. Any person wishing to sell alcohol to the public for consumption off the premises, including online sales, must hold a pub or an off-sales premises licence. Any person selling alcohol online in Northern Ireland without a licence is liable to a fine of up to £5000, or imprisonment for up to 6 months, or both.

Furthermore any person who sells alcohol online in Northern Ireland to a young person under 18 is committing an offence, as is any young person under 18 who attempts to buy alcohol online.

Derry: Neighbourhood Renewal Capital Spend

Notes:

- Figures include; Neighbourhood Renewal Investment Fund capital expenditure, expenditure from physical regeneration programmes (Urban Development Grants, Comprehensive Development, Environmental Improvements Schemes and Public Realm).
- Caution is advised in making comparisons of expenditure across Neighbourhood Renewal Areas. The expenditure is influenced by factors such as; the population of the area, the historic expenditure and/ or proposed capital investment in an area from other initiatives or mainstream sources, geographical location and proximity to existing services and the needs identified in Action Plans.
- Triax Neighbourhood Renewal Area encompasses the city centre and this has a significant impact on the level of expenditure reported for the area.
- 'Funding allocated' has been defined as the accrued spend based upon resource accounting principles. Figures also include monies transferred to other statutory bodies to carry out work on the Department's behalf.
- Included under the heading 'Other (accounting transactions)' are accounting adjustments arising from under-spends in previous year allocations.

Derry: Neighbourhood Renewal Revenue Spend

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27896/11-15, to detail the (i) organisations that received revenue funding in the (a) Triax; (b) Outer North; (c) Outer West and (d) Waterside Neighbourhood Renewal Areas in 2012/13; and (ii) funding allocated to each organisation.

Notes

- Caution is advised in making comparisons of expenditure across Neighbourhood Renewal Areas. The expenditure is influenced by factors such as; the population of the area, the historic expenditure, the revenue investment in an area from other initiatives or mainstream sources, and the needs identified in Action Plans.
- 'Funding allocated' has been defined as the accrued spend based upon resource accounting principles. Figures also include monies transferred to other statutory bodies to carry out work on the Department's behalf.
- Included under the heading 'Other (accounting transactions)' are accounting adjustments arising from under-pends in previous year allocations. For funding to bodies spread across a number of Neighbourhood Renewal Areas, allocations have been made based upon the population as a proportion of the total area population.

Village Area, Belfast: Regeneration

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development whether he would consider further development of social housing in the Village Regeneration area, should private interest not be forthcoming.

(AQW 28400/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Based on current waiting lists, a third planned phase comprising 27 social dwellings will meet future social housing need in the Village area. Any additional social housing provision will require a review of the original Economic Appraisal as this will deviate significantly from the original approval.

It is the Housing Executive's intention to develop the remaining land for affordable private sector housing, and it will commence this process in consultation with the local community once planning approval is granted for Phase 3 the Housing Executive will also continue to monitor the social waiting list demand and should this position change it will review the land use.

North Down: Social Housing Newbuilds

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many new build homes are planned by housing associations in the North Down constituency.

(AQW 28428/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Table attached details the social housing new builds that are currently programmed to be delivered within North Down over the period 2013/14 – 2015/16.

The Social Housing Development Programme is managed on the basis of a three year rolling programme. The Housing Executive is currently in the process of formulating the new draft Social Housing Development Programme for the period 2014/15 – 2016/17 which, subject to my approval, will be published on the Housing Executive's website early in 2014.

Civil Service: DSD Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28013/11-15, whether the information requested is available by constituency; and if so, to provide the information in this format.

(AQW 28435/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information in response to AQW 28013/11-15 on the number of Civil Service posts that existed in the Department for Social Development on 1 January 2012 and 1 January 2013 at (i) Administrative Assistant; (ii) Administrative Officer; (iii) Executive Officer 2; (iv) Executive Officer 1; (v) Staff Officer; (vi) Deputy Principal; (vii) Grade 7; and (viii) Grade 6 levels, is not available by constituency.

Employment and Support Allowance: Medical Reports

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development what guidance has been issued to medical staff, including GPs and consultants, on what is required when completing reports on, or letters in support of, patients who are applying for Employment and Support Allowance, in particular the information that decision makers depend upon when considering such applications; and if there has been no such guidance, will he undertake to issue guidance.

(AQW 28438/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department published detailed guidance for healthcare professions titled “ESA Medical Reports – A guide to Completion,” at the time of the introduction of Employment Support Allowance in 2008.

The guidance provides comprehensive advice to medical professionals in relation to the provision of medical evidence requested for Employment and Support Allowance claimants and the completion of the ESA113 medical questionnaire. The guidance is maintained on the Departments internet site at:

<http://www.dsdni.gov.uk/index/ssa/ssa-projects-and-initiatives/ssani-esa/esa-healthcare-professionals.htm>

South Belfast: Warm Homes Scheme

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development how many homes benefitted from the Warm Homes Grant Scheme in the South Belfast constituency, in the last 12 months.

(AQW 28449/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive does not collect statistical information at constituency level. The parliamentary constituency of South Belfast falls within the district council areas of Belfast and Castlereagh. In the 12 months from November 2012 to October 2013, a total of 1,088 homes in those 2 council areas received help under the Warm Homes Scheme.

Mortgage Debt Advice Service

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people that have contacted the Mortgage Debt Advice Service in each month since it was established.

(AQW 28458/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The number of people who have contacted the Mortgage Debt Advice Service in each month since the establishment of the formal contract in May 2011 are as follows:

May 2011	72
June 2011	100
July 2011	73

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development, given comments made by a departmental official at a recent meeting of the Committee for Social Development where it was indicated that the aim of the scheme was to make boiler replacement available to more households to stop them from entering fuel poverty and that the most vulnerable people should be picked up through the scheme, whether replacement boilers are available through the Warm Homes Scheme.

(AQW 28459/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Officials from the Department briefed the Social Development Committee on 14 November about the Boiler Replacement Scheme. Officials pointed out that the Boiler Replacement Scheme was targeted at low income households and was both an energy efficiency improvement scheme and a fuel poverty prevention scheme. Officials commented that households on lowest incomes could have old and inefficient boilers replaced through the Warm Homes Scheme and this was a reference to the Affordable Warmth Pilot which replaces boilers free of charge for households who receive Pension Credit.

Derry: Social Housing Development Programme

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development whether all the new build schemes programmed for 2013/16 in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013 have planning permission.

(AQW 28466/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Social Housing Development Programme is subject to change. From the point of publication of the Derry District Housing Plan in June 2013 there have been some amendments to the proposed 3 year SHDP for the Derry City Council Area. The table attached shows the schemes currently proposed for delivery from 2013/14 to 2015/16 including their planning status. The delivery mechanism for a number of the supported housing schemes in later years has yet to be determined. Therefore it is possible that they may not require planning permission.

Derry: Social Housing Development Programme

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development whether finance is in place to construct all of the new build schemes programmed for 2013/16 as detailed in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013.

(AQW 28467/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The budget for the Social Housing Development Programme has been agreed for the financial years 2013/14 to 2015/16. It should however be noted that the gross programme is subject to change, e.g. in the event that planning permission is not secured for proposed sites in the programme.

Welfare Reform Bill: Ministerial Meetings

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQO 5055/11-15, to detail which parties he met with on each of the dates listed; and the attendees at each meeting.

(AQW 28505/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The political parties I and my officials met with and the attendees at each meeting are set out below:

Date	Meeting
28/01/13	Executive Sub Committee on Welfare Reform: Attendees: Sammy Wilson MLA, Jennifer McCann MLA, Stephen Farry MLA, Danny Kennedy MLA
25/02/13	Executive Sub Committee on Welfare Reform: Attendees: Jennifer McCann MLA, Stephen Farry MLA, Danny Kennedy MLA, Edwin Poots MLA
19/03/13	Meeting with Mike Nesbitt MLA and Michael Copeland MLA to discuss Welfare Reform
22/04/13	Meeting with Sammy Wilson MLA to discuss implications for NIHE/HMRC NI staff re Universal Credit
03/06/13	Meeting with Margaret Ritchie MP to discuss Housing Benefit Reform
02/07/13	Meeting with Alex Maskey MLA, Paula Bradley MLA and Michael Copeland MLA to discuss the Launch of Discussion Paper: Welfare Reform and the Value of Independent Advice

The membership of Executive Sub Committee on Welfare Reform is represented by the following political parties: DUP, SDLP, Sinn Feinn, UUP, Alliance.

Housing Executive: Valuations

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what method is being used to calculate the value of the homes to be transferred to housing associations; and to detail the extent to which overhanging debt payments or gap funding is required.

(AQW 28526/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE) use Land and Property Services to provide valuations (both market value and Existing Use Value Social Housing) for dwellings, and any associated land, in a stock transfer scheme.

In relation to debt, it is not possible to determine separately what portion of the current NIHE loan debt balance relates specifically to the properties included in the potential transfers. In the past, the NIHE raised loans on an annual basis and not for specific new build and improvement schemes. The debt, if any, will remain with the Housing Executive. The arrangement for rent arrears for any property in the stock transfer programme is that all arrears due to the Housing Executive from the tenants at the date of transfer will remain with the Housing Executive.

In terms of the economic viability of the transfer proposals, each scheme will be subject to an economic and technical appraisal and approval process to demonstrate that the proposed refurbishments deliver the necessary value for money.

Street Drinking: Prosecutions

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in each council area have been prosecuted for street drinking in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28701/11-15)

Mr McCausland: While my Department is responsible for confirming bye laws made by councils prohibiting the consumption of intoxicating liquor in designated streets and public places, prosecution of offenders is a matter for the relevant district council. My Department does not hold records of prosecutions; the relevant information may be obtained from individual councils.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Parliament Buildings: DEC Rating

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to detail (i) the Energy Performance Certificate rating of Parliament Buildings; and (ii) what action is being taken to improve this rating.

(AQW 28309/11-15)

Mr Weir: The Display Energy Certificate (DEC) rating for Parliament Buildings is currently D, which is a creditable achievement for a building of its nature. I have enclosed a copy of the certificate for your information.

Our Environmental Services Manager works closely with the DFP's Energy Unit in order to ensure that all reasonable steps are being taken to maintain and improve the energy performance of the building.

In addition, the forthcoming major roof refurbishment project will include a range of measures that will positively impact on the building's energy performance, including replacement of the roof insulation and replacing and/ or refurbishing and upgrading all of the existing roof mounted mechanical and electrical service plant.

I would be happy to provide you with further specific detail, particularly with regard to the roof project proposals, if you feel that would be helpful.

Parliament Buildings: Sustainable/Renewable Energy

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission what consideration has been given to heating Parliament Buildings using sustainable and renewable forms of energy.

(AQW 28310/11-15)

Mr Weir: The Assembly Commission will shortly undertake a major project to repair the roof of Parliament Buildings during which all the existing roof mounted mechanical and electrical services will be replaced and/ or refurbished. The opportunity has been taken to consider appropriate sustainable and renewable initiatives to be incorporated in the project and these will include solar thermal tubes and photovoltaic panels.

The boiler plant in Parliament Buildings has been converted to dual fuel and natural gas is used to supply the majority of heat to the building, with oil as a back-up. The remainder of the heating in the building is by means of electrical convection heaters.

While it is not currently possible to obtain natural gas from a sustainable source, the electricity supply to the Stormont Estate does come from 100% renewable sources.

Consideration was previously given to the installation of a biomass boiler but difficulties with storage and supply for the boilers meant that this was not deemed to be a viable option.

I hope this provides you with the information that you require. Please do not hesitate to ask if you require anything further.

Northern Ireland Assembly: Private Member's Bills

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to detail the annual budget allocated for drafting legislation for Private Members' Bills from 2007/08 to 2015/16.

(AQW 28311/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane: The table below sets out the actual annual expenditure incurred on drafting Private Members' Bills in each of the financial years from 2007/08 to 2012/13. It also includes the budget allocation that was made available in each financial year. These costs are those associated with drafting the legislation only. It may be helpful to note that they do not include any costs incurred by Members' on consultation, etc. as these can be claimed from a Members' Office Cost Expenditure and, as such, are not recorded in a consolidated manner.

Financial Year	Actual Expenditure	Budget
2007/08	£0	£30,000
2008/09	£0	£40,000
2009/10	£20,874	£45,000
2010/11	£84,923	£84,923
2011/12	£2,925	£20,000
2012/13	£25,620	£33,850
2013/14 (to date)	£3,565	£80,000
2014/15	-	£70,000

The excess of Budget above Actual expenditure for 2007/08 to 2013/14 was largely re-allocated to other expenditure categories through the in-year monitoring processes. The figures for 2010/11 include £39,301.10 towards drafting a Committee Bill - Assembly Members (Independent Financial Review and Standards) Bill. Similarly, the 2012-13 figures include £1,536 towards drafter's advice in relation to a proposed Ombudsman Bill being developed by OFMdFM Committee. The budgetary allocations listed for the current and next financial years are intended to include expenditure on Committee Bills as well as PMBs also. The budget for 2014/15 corresponds to the final year of the Spending Review 2010 and the figure for 2015/16 has not yet been finalised.

The work undertaken in drafting Private Members' Bills is cyclical in nature and as such should be considered in the context of a full Assembly mandate rather than the amount of expenditure incurred in each financial year. The majority of Private Members' Bills are drafted in the second half of an Assembly mandate, due to the time required to draft proposals, conduct research and consult fully.

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Family Support and Social Enterprise Incubation Hubs/Nurture Units

Mr Flanagan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the location of the (i) ten family support hubs; (ii) ten social enterprise incubation hubs; and (iii) twenty new and seven existing children's nurture units contained within their announcement of 10 October 2012; and who will be taking the lead in each of these projects.

(AQW 15374/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety is taking forward the establishment of ten Family Support Hubs. These Hubs are a multi-agency network of statutory, community and voluntary organisations providing co-ordinated referral services for families needing early intervention services.

Two Family Support Hubs have been established in the Northern Trust area in Coleraine/Ballymoney/Moyle and Magherafelt/Cookstown and work is ongoing to bring a third Hub online in Newtownabbey. Seven Family Support Hubs are planned for the Belfast Trust area and work is ongoing to identify potential locations. The initial four Hubs will be located in North, South, East and West Belfast.

The Department for Social Development along with the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment have been tasked with taking forward the development of ten Social Enterprise Incubation Hubs. An additional eleventh Hub has recently been identified for establishment under the Programme. These Hubs will tackle the lack of local employment in areas of multiple deprivation by encouraging social enterprise business start-up within local communities. The locations of the eleven Hubs are as follows:

- Belfast North
- Belfast South
- Belfast East
- Belfast West
- Enniskillen
- Downpatrick
- Lurgan
- Strabane
- Derry~Londonderry
- Ballymena
- Lisburn

The Department of Education and the Department for Social Development have been working together to establish an additional twenty Nurture Units within Primary School settings. These units will help address barriers to learning among children arising from social, emotional and behavioural difficulties. The Primary Schools in which the new Nurture Units are located are as follows:

Blackmountain	Belfast
Currie	Belfast
Edenbrooke	Belfast
St Patrick's	Belfast*
Harmony	Belfast
Holy Trinity	Belfast
John Paul 11	Belfast
St Clare's	Belfast
St Joseph's	Belfast
St Malachy's	Belfast

Taughmonagh	Belfast
Fountain	Derry/Londonderry
St Oliver Plunkett, Strathfoyle	Derry/Londonderry
St Paul's, Slievemore	Derry/Londonderry
Tullygally	Craigavon
St Malachy's	Newry
Ballycraigy	Antrim
Hapurs Hill	Coleraine
Harryville	Ballymena
West Winds	Newtownards

* formerly Edmund Rice Primary School. Now amalgamated with Star of the Sea Primary School

 formerly St Aidan's Primary. Now amalgamated with St Bernadette's Girls' Primary School

In October 2012, the Department for Social Development was supporting seven Nurture Units through its Neighbourhood Renewal Investment Fund, as follows:

Rathcoole	Newtownabbey
Kilcooley	Bangor
Ballysally	Coleraine
Good Shepherd	Belfast
St Kieran's	Belfast
St Colmcille's	Downpatrick
Tullycarnet	Belfast

Following an announcement by the Education Minister, John O'Dowd, on 14 February 2013 that nurture unit provision in these seven schools would continue until at least the 2014/15 school year, the provision of financial support to four of the Nurture Units has since transferred to DE (Rathcoole, Ballysally, Good Shepherd and St Kieran's). DSD currently continues to fund the remaining three Nurture Units. Nurture Unit provision was also extended under the Education Minister's announcement to an additional three Primary Schools, making a total of thirty Nurture Units operating in schools. The three additional Primary Schools are:

St Luke's	Belfast
St Brigid's	Derry~Londonderry
Holy Family	Derry~Londonderry

The aim under the Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes is to have interventions across all Social Investment Zones.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Durkan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 24074/11-15, which projects their Department intends to fund in order to continue the legacy of the City of Culture; and whether they have considered assisting with the continuation of the Venue pavilion as part of any commitment made by their Department after 2013.

(AQW 24897/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The purpose of the Venue's temporary pavilion, duration of operation and removal remains the responsibility of DSD as stated in AQW 24074/11-15. Continuance or otherwise of the Venue is not part of any commitment made by our Department. An announcement was made by the Minister for Social Development on 24 October 2013, advising that due to the lack of public sector interest in retaining the Venue, the structure would be dismantled, as planned in early January 2014.

The Council is in the process of developing the North West Regional Sports Campus in St Columb's Park which will have a capacity of 2,000 people depending on layout, and will have performance capability.

In supporting the development of the One Plan, our Department is providing support through Ilex the Urban Regeneration Company to develop out the Ebrington site to house creative industry organisations and provide an open air performance venue. In addition, Ilex will monitor and report on the economic and social impact of the City of Culture programme and events to stimulate an increase in tourism, growth in the economy of the region and deliver a lasting legacy to the city.

Together: Building a United Community: Urban Villages

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the process and criteria for identifying the four urban villages identified for action within Together: Building a United Community.

(AQW 27771/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The process and criteria for identifying the four urban villages will consider a number of options. These could include, but would by no means be limited to, community readiness; area need; geographical spread; and overall cost considerations.

We are currently considering areas that could potentially become sites for the urban villages and will make decisions and announcements on those in the near future.

Shackleton Barracks: Development

Mr G Robinson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the potential uses for the former Shackleton Ministry of Defence base at Ballykelly.

(AQO 5012/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM is planning to carry out a 'soft market testing' exercise for the Shackleton Barracks site. Preparatory work is underway; the exercise started on 18 November and is due to be completed by the end of January.

When the exercise is completed and the level of interest is determined, a decision will be taken as to the potential suitability to go forward with development plans and to invite and assess applications for the future development of these areas of the Shackleton site.

Ballykelly: Expressions of Interest

Mr Dallat asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what steps will be taken to ensure all interested parties, including adjacent landowners, local residents and community groups are kept fully informed of any potential sale of the former army barracks at Ballykelly.

(AQW 28443/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: On Monday 11 November each of the MLAs from the East Londonderry constituency and Limavady councillors were sent a letter notifying them of the 'expressions of interest' process.

All parties who have expressed an interest in the Shackleton Barracks site to OFMDFM or BTW Shiells, including local farmers and residents groups, were sent details of the 'expressions of interest' process on Thursday 14 November. In addition, local residents living adjacent to the site received a hand delivered letter, also on 14 November.

Officials have, on an ongoing, basis, met with local landowners, the local council and community groups to inform them of the position in relation to the site and to listen to their views. It would be our intention to continue with this dialogue as we move forward.

Social Investment Fund

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given that £41.5m of the funding allocated for the Social Investment Fund has been returned to the centre, whether the Fund still has a budget of £80m.

(AQW 28470/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Whilst funding has been re-profiled, £80 million remains ring fenced for the Social Investment Fund and delivery of strategic area plans.

Victims and Survivors: Monitoring/Evaluation

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they aim to achieve a full record of victims and survivors and a comprehensive audit of their needs.

(AQW 28636/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Our aim is to provide the best service possible to victims and survivors. To help achieve that aim there must be a way to assess how effective the assistance is and how well the system is working. The monitoring and evaluation system is currently being reviewed to ensure that it meets the requirements necessary to achieve this goal.

Social Investment Fund

Mr Attwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the necessity for the allocation of Social Investment Fund monies to be governed, in law and in practice, by the principle of need.

(AQO 5103/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We have now agreed the allocations for the nine Social Investment Fund Zones. In coming to this decision we considered both the scale of need and identification of need in each zone, under the objectives of the Fund using the original set of criteria below as a guide:

- Areas within the top 10% most deprived Super Output Areas on the multiple Deprivation Measure 2010.
- Areas within the top 20% most deprived Super Output Areas on the key domains of income, employment, education and health.
- Areas which can provide independently verified and robust evidence of objective need linked to the 4 strategic objectives of SIF.

The approach we have set out will focus the funds we have available to meet the objectives of this Programme and clearly target the major areas of deprivation that exist in each of the zones, as well as ensuring that funding is disbursed across all areas of deprivation, regardless of scale and not just those with concentrated urban problems. This approach means that we will tackle deprivation in the areas of high and durable need but also allows us to reach into smaller, less publicised areas of smaller numerical significance but of equal importance to the people who live there.

Steering Groups have now been informed of allocation decisions.

Minority Ethnic Development Fund

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for a timetable for the implementation and delivery of the proposed crisis fund element of the Minority Ethnic Development Fund.
(AQW 28714/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Options are currently being considered with a view to having the crisis fund up and running in the 2014-15 financial year.

Victims and Survivors: Truth and Justice

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in relation to victims and survivors, for their assessment of the importance of truth and justice in bringing a sense of closure for each person involved.
(AQO 5107/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: It is important that all Victims and Survivors feel that their need for truth and justice surrounding past events are being met and we all have a role in ensuring appropriate mechanisms are in place to help them find closure.

We look forward to the outcome of the current work of the Panel of Parties.

Over the coming months a working group, drawn from the Victims and Survivors Forum, will discuss their shared experience of dealing with and acknowledging the past. The group will also look at ways of building for the future and have already liaised with people who work directly and indirectly with victims to address complex issues. The group will ultimately provide the Commission for Victims and Survivors with an advice paper on its findings.

The process to gain closure will be different for each person but our overarching aim is to help everyone achieve this and move forward to a positive future.

North Belfast: Strategic Good Relations Programme

Mr G Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on Good Relations funding for North Belfast.
(AQO 5111/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In this financial year 2013-14, £770,000 has been allocated through the North Belfast Strategic Good Relations programme to twelve contract holders for the delivery of a range of Good Relations programmes across North Belfast.

The aim of the programme is to tackle issues that hinder the development of good community relations across adjoining interfaces. The programme is based on three core themes: citizenship, leadership and good relations. Programme delivery is through clusters of organisations and partnerships but with sufficient flexibility to take account of the needs of individual areas within the community.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Rural Development Programme: Farm Diversification

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the areas open for funding grants from applicants for farm diversification under the current Rural Development Programme.
(AQW 28393/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): I interpret your question to relate to currently open calls for applications under measure 3.1. At this point in time no calls are open.

Tree Disease: ObservaTREE

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether Forest Service will work in partnership with the Woodland Trust in support of the 'Observatree' initiative.

(AQW 28406/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is committed to tackling tree disease through a collaborative approach with a wide range of interests including the general public, farmers, landowners, environmental organisations and the industry in identifying and reporting possible tree disease symptoms.

The ObservaTREE partnership includes British government bodies (Fera, Forestry Commission) the Woodland Trust and National Trust and aims to develop a Britain and north of Ireland integrated tree health warning system as a web based tree reporting tool. This is a welcome initiative and, as my priority is to address tree and plant health issues on an all-Ireland basis, DARD officials will continue to work co-operatively with the Woodland Trust and other partners, and with colleagues in the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine, to explore a range of web based tree health reporting mechanisms which have application on an all-Ireland basis.

Farming: Extreme Weather

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what advice and support she is offering farmers in advance of any extreme weather.

(AQW 28407/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The extremes of weather experienced over the last two years and the extended period of unfavourable growing and grazing weather last spring caused considerable difficulties for our farmers.

In order to address any potential difficulties facing livestock farmers in the forthcoming winter I established the Fodder Taskforce. This Taskforce, made up of representatives of farmers and associated industries along with DARD and AFBI, identified a wide range of issues and produced an action plan to mitigate their effects. A major concern of the industry was the availability and quality of fodder available. CAFRE and AFBI launched a comprehensive programme of training, open days, technical bulletins and press articles to help farmers ensure that they would have sufficient fodder for the winter period. The support focussed on grassland management, forage assessment, feeding efficiency and budgeting. Along with the improvement in weather over the summer, fodder stocks on most farms have recovered to levels which are in balance with projected requirements with some showing a surplus, and our assessment is that farmers are now well prepared for the winter.

There are a number of other steps farmers can take in preparation for extreme winter weather. Many of these steps are normal management practice for the vast majority of farmers but I am encouraging all farmers to reassess them now before the winter sets in. I welcome the NI Water "Beat the Freeze Campaign" and the specific advice for farmers on the NI Water website. I fully endorse their advice on preventing problems from occurring or minimising their impact if they do happen.

Farmers should also keep a close check on weather forecasts and make appropriate adjustments where severe weather is expected. Measures such as moving stock to less exposed fields and securing vulnerable buildings are basic steps that would help lessen the effects of severe weather. Farmers are also advised to check and consider the insurance cover they have for livestock and farm buildings.

CAFRE will reinforce advice to farmers on preparing for winter in the coming weeks through press articles and face to face contact.

Agri-food: Promotion of Local Products

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what work her Department is doing to encourage consumers to buy local produce.

(AQW 28408/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department's Regional Food Programme enables organisations to promote quality local products produced by our farmers and processors. This allows them to send out a strong message to consumers that local food is good quality and wholesome. The 2013/14 programme offered a total of £230k supporting a variety of sectors throughout the North.

Financial support is provided in the following four key areas – regional fairs and shows, information programmes, award ceremonies, seminars and workshops.

My Department also administers the EU's Protected Food Name Scheme on behalf of applicants. This provides a system for the protection of food names on a geographical or traditional basis and can be used as a valuable promotional tool to take advantage of increased consumer interest in regional food. The quality mark symbol increases consumer awareness of the product provenance. To date three local products have achieved this status and work is on-going to attract more products to this scheme.

The Agri-Food Strategy Board identified high quality traceability systems as a major marketing tool for local produce on export markets. My Department's Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) system for recording cattle movements, disease and post mortem data provides consumers with assurance of the integrity of locally produced products through extensive traceability controls

My Department also works closely with Invest NI, which has the lead responsibility for marketing our food to export markets, through a range of supply chain and market intelligence initiatives to support local producers.

Equality Impact Assessments/Consultations: DARD

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much her Department has spent on Equality Impact Assessments and consultations over the last three years.

(AQW 28493/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Section 75 statutory duties make equality and good relations central to the whole range of public policy decision-making. Therefore the cost of carrying out Equality Impact Assessments and consultations are not maintained separately and cannot readily be disaggregated.

Autism: DARD Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what provision is made within her departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28512/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are arrangements in place throughout the buildings occupied by my Department to treat visitors with courtesy and respect and provide assistance to those who may have specific requirements. Visitors with specific needs, such as autism, can notify staff of any additional help or support they may require, either in advance or on arrival, and every effort will be made to ensure that this is provided.

Staff involved in Reception/Customer service duties have been trained to deal with disability issues and my Department has also contributed to the development of the cross Departmental Autism Strategy and Action Plan, which contains proposals for autism awareness training for frontline staff in the NICS.

Single Farm Payment: Felling/River Fencing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the steps being taken to encourage farmers to preserve trees on their land in response to the incentive which exists for farmers to enhance their single farm payment by felling trees and increasing the amount of grazable land; and (ii) what action can be taken to encourage farmers to fence off rivers from grazing cattle, as this could lead to a reduction in their single farm payments.

(AQW 28524/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) My Department does not offer an incentive to farmers to enhance their Single Farm Payment (SFP) by felling trees. Trees are an important landscape feature and are protected by the Department's Cross-Compliance requirements. All farmers claiming direct payments such as SFP must meet the cross-compliance requirements, which protect hedgerow trees and broadleaf woodland in semi-natural habitats by limiting their removal and destruction. For example, a farmer must not cut hedgerow trees inside the hedge cutting closed period (1 March to 31 August) and if hedgerow trees are removed on rotation for timber, young saplings must be left to grow as replacements. A breach of these requirements may result in a penalty being applied to the farmer's SFP and any other area-based subsidy claims made in that year. There are exceptions to these requirements which allows for tree cutting where health and safety is an issue, for example at a roadside, unless a Tree Preservation Order is in place. Trees protected under a Tree Preservation Order must not be damaged.
- (ii) DARD encourages farmers to fence off rivers from grazing cattle through the delivery of Agri-environment (AE) Schemes. These are voluntary schemes which offer funding in return for positive habitat management such as riparian zones, which are the marginal areas along a waterway. These may be planted with native trees and when managed appropriately on farmland, riparian zones can act as a buffer, reducing pollution of water bodies by fertilisers and pesticides. Currently there are approximately 200 hectares of land under riparian zone management in Agri-environment Schemes.

DARD's rules on land eligibility for SFP do not include permanently fenced narrow strips (less than 0.1ha) along a riparian zone. However, if the fenced strip of grassland is greater than 0.1 ha in size and clear evidence exists of active management through 'eligible agricultural activity' for the full calendar year, it may still qualify for SFP. Agricultural activity is defined as the production, rearing or growing of agricultural products including harvesting, milking, breeding animals and keeping animals for farming purposes, or maintaining the land in good agricultural and environmental condition.

There is also an exception to the SFP eligibility rules, where land that was eligible and on which SFP was paid in the 2008 scheme year, may be planted in trees under an EU Agri-environment Scheme or an EU Forestry Scheme after 2008 remain and still eligible for SFP.

Bovine Animals: Ownership

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the average number of times a bovine animal changes ownership.

(AQW 28541/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) does not record who owns a bovine animal. It does record who is the keeper of a bovine animal and in the vast majority of cases the keeper of a bovine animal is also likely to be the owner. APHIS records the movement history between keepers of individually identified cattle.

My Department has calculated that the number of changes of keepership over the average lifetime of a bovine animal is 2.3.

Lough Neagh Working Group: Report

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the report produced by the Lough Neagh Working Group.

(AQW 28618/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In December last year, I shared the Inter-Departmental Working Group report with Ministerial colleagues whose officials had contributed to the report through membership of the Working Group.

Since then, the Minister for Culture, Arts and Leisure has been considering the value of additional research to complement the findings in the report. I intend to meet Minister Ní Chuilín shortly to discuss the findings of this work and how they might add value to the Inter Departmental Working Group Report. I will then assess next steps, including putting recommendations to the Executive as soon as possible, probably in the early part of next year.

Lough Neagh Working Group: Research

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether any additional consultancy work is being carried out following the production of the report by the Lough Neagh Working Group to further consider the issue of future ownership; and if so, to detail the (i) rationale; (ii) cost; (iii) who is carrying out this additional work; and (iv) when work will conclude.

(AQW 28619/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In December last year I shared the Inter-Departmental Working Group report with Ministerial colleagues and since then the Minister for Culture, Arts and Leisure has been considering the value of additional research commissioned by her Department to complement the findings in the report. (There has been no further consultancy work commissioned by my Department)

I intend to meet Minister Ní Chuilín shortly to discuss the findings of this work and how they might add value to the Inter Departmental Working Group Report. I will then assess next steps, including putting recommendations to the Executive as soon as possible probably in the early part of next year.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Exploris

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, following the decision by Ards Borough Council to defer the closure of Exploris for two months, to outline her Department's plans to assist in securing the facilities.

(AQW 26534/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): I recognise that Exploris is an important tourism, educational and environmental resource Centre.

While my Department has no remit for aquariums or the marine I have asked the Council for a copy of its business plan on the future management and funding of Exploris.

I hope that a sustainable future can be secured for the Centre.

Lough Neagh Working Group: Report

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the findings of the Lough Neagh Working Group; (ii) when she received the findings; and (iii) what action has been taken in relation to these findings.

(AQW 27885/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL was a member of the Interdepartmental Lough Neagh Working Group led by DARD and contributed to the fact finding and analysis undertaken by group members.

A draft report was received on 11 December 2012.

DCAL Officials will shortly meet with the DARD Minister to take matters forward.

Kevin Lynch's Hurling Club, Dungiven: Grants

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the grants, or other assistance, that have been offered to the Kevin Lynch Hurling Club, Dungiven in the last two years.

(AQW 27890/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, has not offered any grants or other assistance to Kevin Lynch Hurling Club in the last two years.

Equality Impact Assessments/Consultations: DCAL

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much her Department has spent on Equality Impact Assessments and consultations over the last three years.

(AQW 28495/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have provided at Annex A the details of spend on Equality Impact Assessments and consultations over the last three years.

In relation to the cost of each consultation it is not possible to disaggregate staff costs from the overall policy development process.

Annex A

DCAL Equality Impact Assessments & Consultations April 2010 to date

Date of consultation (i.e. month)	Name of consultation	Cost
June 2010	Museums Policy for Northern Ireland	£1209.62
June 2010	DCAL Disability Action Plan 2010-2013	£1612.98
December 2010	DCAL Draft Budget Consultation 2011-2015	Nil
January 2011	Cultural Awareness Strategy	£1970
February 2011	Revised Equality Scheme	£1636.84
May 2012	Salmon Conservation Measures in DCAL Jurisdiction.	£1,143.40
July 2012	Draft Strategy for Protecting and Enhancing the Development of the Irish Language	£18,910
July 2012	Draft Strategy for Ulster Scots Language, Heritage and Culture	£1,694
November 2012	Ministerial Advisory Group (MAG) – Ulster Scots Academy development and research strategy and associated grant scheme	£1,595
August 2013	Consultation on DCAL Draft Disability Action Plan 2013-15 & Five year Review	£1840.08
Aug/Sept 2013	Salmon Conservation Regulations Consultation	£1,931.53

Lough Neagh/River Bann: Fish Stocks

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether an assessment has been carried out to ascertain whether commercial fishing in Lough Neagh and the River Bann has had a detrimental impact on fish stock.

(AQW 28521/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The long term sustainability of the Lough Neagh fishery is a key priority for my Department and to that end I have commissioned the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) to undertake research throughout the catchment. AFBI's work provides an important scientific basis to my Department's role in the conservation and protection of the fishery and will inform the development of the Lough Neagh Fishery Management Plan.

Conservation measures are in place in respect of eels and further measures are proposed in respect of salmon.

There is currently no scientific evidence on other fish stocks that would confirm that any factors, including commercial fishing, are having a detrimental effect on stocks.

AFBI is currently carrying out a research project on Lough Neagh that will provide information on the location and population levels of all fish species in the Lough. AFBI is also undertaking genetic studies on brown trout stocks in the Lough Neagh catchment. These reports will be completed by the end of this year.

In addition, AFBI is undertaking important research on stock status of salmon and brown trout across the DCAL area, which includes the Lough Neagh catchment.

The habitat in and around Lough Neagh is important and DCAL is undertaking habitat survey work on the tributaries flowing into Lough Neagh. This will identify areas where poor habitat is limiting fish stock levels and where further remedial work is required. DCAL officials will meet with stakeholders in considering how best to progress this work.

With the exception of the eel weirs at Toome and Portna, commercial fishing is not permitted in the River Bann.

Foras na Gaeilge: Religious Monitoring

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of staff employed by Foras na Gaeilge, broken down by religion.

(AQW 28566/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The total number of staff employed by Foras na Gaeilge is 57 of which 8 are based in the North.

There is no legal requirement to monitor the religion of the 49 staff working in the South.

There are only 8 staff based in the North and as this is less than 10 staff it would not be appropriate to provide a breakdown by religion in this case.

Ulster-Scots Academy: Ministerial Advisory Group

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the linguistic qualifications of the people advising the Ministerial Advisory Group on the Ulster-Scots Academy.

(AQW 28584/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ministerial Advisory Group (MAG) – Ulster Scots Academy has appointed a panel of expert language advisors on 1 November 2013 following a public appointment process. This panel, called the Advisory Panel on Ulster-Scots Orthography, will assist the (MAG) – Ulster Scots Academy and DCAL by advising on the next steps of the implementation and development of an orthography for Ulster-Scots, considering the responses to the Ulster-Scots “Spelling and Pronunciation Guide” and “Word Glossary”, collaborating with key stakeholders in the development of knowledge and skills concerning Ulster-Scots orthography and helping to give effect to Ulster-Scots policy objectives in the public interest.

Applicants were required to meet the following criteria;

Essential Criteria

- The applicant must be professionally qualified in a relevant discipline or have made an outstanding contribution to research or practice in one or more of the required subject areas. The subject areas are linguistics, orthography, phonology, morphology, syntax, lexicology and editorial expertise.
- Demonstrable interests in orthography including;
 - Practical interests/experience in issues of orthography such as devising or drawing up an orthography for a language and/or editorial work on dictionaries;

OR

 - Theoretical interests in issues of orthography such as a linguistic background of orthographic systems, an interest in phonology, morphology, syntax and/or an interest in lexicology.
- Evidence of working in the arena of publications, including evidence of publications in relevant areas of lexicography, dialectology and linguistics.

Desirable Criteria

- Evidence of academic contributions, including publications, conference contributions and editorial work relating to Ulster Scots.

The selection panel recommended the appointment of three members to the Advisory Panel on Ulster-Scots Orthography based on a structured assessment against the selection criteria. However as the selection criteria did not require applicants to list their formal linguistic qualifications, DCAL does not hold complete lists of this information for the successful applicants.

North/South Language Body: Accounts

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the discussions she has held with her counterpart in the Republic of Ireland in relation to the publication of the accounts of the North South Language body within one year from when they are agreed.

(AQW 28585/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The North South Language Body is made up of the Ulster Scots Agency and Foras na Gaeilge. It is a statutory requirement that the annual reports and accounts of both the Ulster Scots Agency and Foras na Gaeilge are consolidated and published together as the North South Language Body annual reports and accounts.

As the original accounts for 2000 were not signed off and laid in the respective Houses until 2005, this created a backlog in clearing and approving the subsequent annual accounts, as both the Northern Ireland Audit Office and the Comptroller and Auditor General will only audit accounts in chronological order.

At each NSMC language meeting, Ministers have emphasised the need to clear the outstanding accounts as soon as practicable and have instructed both Agencies to make this one of their strategic priorities. This was reiterated by Ministers at the NSMC Language Body meetings held on 6 March, 19 June and 20 November 2013.

To date the accounts for the Language Body have been laid and published up to 2010. It is anticipated that the 2011 accounts will be laid by the end of 2013 and the 2012 accounts will be laid by Spring 2014. From then on, the Language Body will be up to date and in a position to meet its annual statutory requirement. NSMC Ministers will continue to monitor the situation at each meeting.

Autism: DCAL Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism; and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28631/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: All visitors to DCAL offices are treated with courtesy and respect by staff. Where possible, visitor details are notified to building reception staff in advance of their arrival. For visitors with disabilities, including those with autism spectrum conditions, every effort is made to ensure help and support is provided to them during their visit. DCAL staff especially those who are responsible for front-line services are encouraged to avail of Disability Awareness training, which includes information on autism.

Sport: Student Funding

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the funding opportunities that are available to students studying Sports related subjects at university level that need to complete coaching courses in areas such as athletics, gymnastics, swimming and games.

(AQW 28677/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for third level education, including funding opportunities, rests with the Department of Employment and Learning.

However, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, has advised that a number of district councils offer grant assistance to individuals or local clubs to support the completion of coach education courses. Therefore, any student wishing to complete a coach education course may wish to contact their local councils' Sports Development Unit for further information on what grant assistance that may be available to them.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the consultations that have been held, and with whom, in advance of the announcement of the three year legacy plan for Londonderry following the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28717/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials have been working closely with stakeholders in the North West to prepare outline plans which I announced on 20th November.

My officials will continue to work with these stakeholders as these plans are finalised.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the estimated salary and other overhead costs associated with the company she announced would take forward the three year legacy plan for Londonderry following the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28718/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials are currently preparing detailed plans and costings for the establishment of the City of Culture Legacy body and DCAL North West Office during this financial year. Further details will be released in due course.

Angling: Strategic Review

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the outcomes of the strategic review of angling.

(AQW 28785/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: A strategic review of angling has been taken forward by Sport NI and advised by a Steering Group comprising the Loughs Agency, NITB, DCAL, Ulster Angling Federation, Irish Federation of Sea Anglers Ulster Provincial Council and the Ulster Coarse Fishing Federation.

The review provides information on the scale and characteristics of angling and the potential that exists to promote the development of the sport, to contribute to the economy through angling tourism and to promote equality, tackle poverty and social exclusion.

The review looks at the current challenges and opportunities and the role that the various Departments, agencies and angling interests can play in realising these benefits.

I welcome the completion of the review and the Steering Group's work in informing the development of a new angling strategy for the North of Ireland.

It is proposed that the review will be published in early 2014.

Irish: DCAL Languages and Waterways Ireland Branch

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many fluent Irish speakers are employed in her Department's Language Diversity Unit.

(AQW 28929/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Within Languages and Waterways Ireland Branch there are two fluent Irish speakers who work on the DCAL Líofoa Campaign.

Department of Education

St Columbanus' College, Bangor: Newbuild

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Education for an update on the timescale and issues inhibiting the delivery of a new school building for St Columbanus' College, Bangor.

(AQW 27816/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): No timescale has been set for the delivery of a new school building for St Columbanus' College, Bangor. My officials have been in liaison with the Trustees, CCMS and representatives from the school to discuss the current accommodation needs at the school. Full clarity is required on the final pattern of Maintained provision for the Bangor and Ards Peninsula area, including how St Columbanus' College would contribute to a pattern of viable and sustainable education provision in the area going forward, before any decision on a new build could be made.

I will continue to examine the case for capital investment across the estate and, subject to the structure of maintained provision in the area being clear, any proposal for St Columbanus will be considered alongside other priorities as part of any future capital announcement.

Education Bill: School Ethos

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how the Education Bill will make it easier for a school to transform its ethos.[R]

(AQW 27878/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The ethos of a school is not something that is prescribed in law. However, in developing the Education Bill, the representatives of many schools expressed a strong desire to reflect the ethos of their schools formally in the governance and employment arrangements. The Education Bill will provide a means to do so in the form of Schemes of Management and Employment Schemes. These will be prepared by schools, and submitted to the Education and Skills Authority for approval. A school wishing to change its ethos is free to do so at any time, and can have this recognised formally by submitting revised schemes.

Teachers: Flu Vaccinations

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Education, in the event of a flu pandemic, (i) what provisions are in place to help school teachers avoid the flu; (ii) what consideration has been given to providing standardised vaccinations for teachers to mitigate the disproportionate cost of providing substitute staff to cover periods of illness, and the resultant disruption to pupils; and (iii) what level of consultation he has had with the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety regarding these issues.

(AQW 28197/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has no specific role in the avoidance of illness (including pandemic or seasonal flu) for teachers as a group. These are considerations for the employing authorities, i.e. the Education and Library Boards and Council for Catholic Maintained Schools. These organisations are represented on the Flu Vaccine Co-ordinating Group, which meets annually.

In the event of a flu pandemic, the department would work closely with colleagues in DHSSPS to ensure any and all measures are put in place subject to advice from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) guidance.

Bloomfield Road, Bangor: Football Pitches

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to outline any plans he has for the football pitches, owned by the Department, on the Bloomfield Road, Bangor.

(AQW 28425/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The football pitches on the Bloomfield Road, Bangor are the responsibility of the South Eastern Education and Library Board. At present the SEELB lease the pitches to North Down Borough Council. This lease has recently expired and the Council has asked the Board to enter into a new 5 year lease. The SEELB is currently progressing this request, with the terms being set by Land and Property Services.

Kilcooley Estate, Bangor: Educational Needs

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education what plans he has to address educational needs in the Kilcooley Housing Estate, Bangor.

(AQW 28430/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since coming to office I have continued to implement policies to raise standards and tackle underachievement. These policies are realising improvements at Key Stage 2, GCSE and A Level. However, we still have room for improvement, in particular to close the gap in achievement that exists between our most and least disadvantaged young people.

Alongside the implementation of these policies, additional funding is being made available to specific programmes to target educational underachievement in areas of social deprivation such as the Kilcooley housing estate.

These programmes include the Delivering Social Change (DSC) literacy and numeracy project to employ additional teachers, a community education initiatives programme and a literacy and numeracy Continuing Professional Development (CPD) Key stage 2/3 project. Kilcooley Primary School (PS) is entitled to an additional 0.2 of a full-time equivalent teacher under the DE expansion of the DSC literacy and numeracy and all the non-selective post-primary schools in the North Down area are entitled to additional teaching support through the DSC project. The SEELB Curriculum and Advisory Support Service (CASS) works with Kilcooley PS to support the development, implementation and evaluation of the school's post-inspection action plan including support for numeracy linked to the DSC project.

Kilcooley PS currently qualifies for the funding through the Department's Extended Schools programme and has been allocated funding totalling £23,237 in 2013/14.

The SEELB's Education Welfare Service (EWS), which has a satellite office based in Kilcooley PS, will continue to provide a support service to children, families and schools in Kilcooley and across North Down. This includes working with local schools to improve levels of attendance. In addition, the SEELB Youth Service works with a range of youth providers in the area to provide educational services for the young people.

Kilcooley PS also provides a nurture room to support a child's social, emotional and behavioural development and to help the child become more receptive to learning and be reintegrated with their mainstream class. DSD currently funds this resource however this funding is due to end in March 2015. DE has committed to sustain the nurture provision to June 2015 to enable Kilcooley and other primary schools with established nurture units to be involved in research which will inform DE's future policy position on this form of intervention.

A SEELB CASS officer works with the local community on Neighbourhood Renewal projects. Recent projects in Kilcooley PS include the provision of additional IT equipment for the school and the provision of additional support to pupils transferring from the primary school into Year 8 at local post-primary schools.

Parents have an important role to play in supporting their child's education. I launched the Education Works campaign in September 2012. The campaign is intended to impact upon attitudes within the home by providing parents with consistent, authoritative information on the importance of education and the steps they can take to support their child in achieving good educational outcomes. Year 2 of the campaign launched on 1 October continues the focus of Year 1 on children in Early Years, Foundation Stage and Key Stage 1 with a widening of the target audience to those with an influence on parents, for example grandparent, the wider family circle and those with influence in local communities.

As regards area planning for primary schools, the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB) draft Area Plan for Primary Schools (March 2013) states that a local area solution is to be explored for Kilcooley PS and that a number of issues in the school and/or local area have been identified and need to be addressed.

- Pattern of increasing enrolment
- Number of unfilled places in the local area

The SEELB published a Development Proposal (DP) on 12 September 2013 proposing the decrease of Kilcooley Primary School's approved enrolment number from 567 to 205 and admissions number from 81 to 29 pupils with effect from 31 August 2014 or as soon as possible thereafter. The consultation period for the DP ended on 12 November 2013. Officials are currently considering the proposal.

Common Funding Scheme: Consultation

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, in the light of the concern over the proposals for the revision of the Common Funding Formula, whether he will consult on any revised proposals.

(AQW 28478/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The consultation exercise on the reform of the Common Funding Scheme which ran for nearly four months ended on 25 October 2013 and received almost 15,000 responses.

A full analysis of all responses is currently underway and until this process has been completed I will not be making any decisions on the way forward.

Towerview Primary School, Bangor: 3G Pitch

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education what support his Department will provide towards a proposed new 3G sports facility at Towerview Primary School, Bangor.

(AQW 28551/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As Towerview Primary School is a controlled primary school in Bangor, the South Eastern Education & Library Board (SEELB) is responsible for capital works at the school. There is no provision in the Department of Education (DE) Building Handbook for any pitches (including 3G pitches) at primary schools. The school is, however, welcome to make a minor works application to the SEELB for a 3G sports facility.

I understand that the minor works application process is currently open for 2014/15, with a closing date for applications of 13 December 2013. The SEELB has advised that all applications received by the closing date will be assessed and prioritised using the published criteria in the 'General Guidelines on Applications for Minor Capital Projects' document.

Common Funding Scheme: Educational Outcomes

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education how changing the Common Funding Formula will improve overall educational outcomes. (AQW 28589/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since coming to office I have continued to implement policies to raise standards and tackle educational underachievement. These policies are realising improvements for all our young people as evidenced by improved outcomes at Key Stage 2, GCSE and A Level. However, despite these improvements, there still remains too large a gap in performance between pupils from socially disadvantaged areas and those from more affluent areas. We need to tackle this inequality.

Local and international studies show that socio-economic background is the single greatest determining factor on a child's educational outcome. Our GCSE outcomes show that pupils entitled to free school meals are twice as likely to leave school not having achieved at least five GCSEs A*-C (inc equivalents) including GCSEs in English and mathematics.

The PAC report on Improving Literacy and Numeracy Achievement in Schools stated that the large gap in attainment between pupils who receive Free School Meals and those who don't cannot continue. As a result, they strongly recommended that DE undertake a full review of the current Common Funding Scheme (CFS). I couldn't agree more which is why I commissioned an independent review of the CFS in June 2012, the findings of which I received in a report in January 2013.

The review of the CFS is designed to tackle this inequality and to ensure that the pupils who stand to benefit most from education receive the support they need. My proposed change to direct additional funding towards targeting social need is fully supportive of the Programme for Government's target to focus on growing the economy and tackling disadvantage.

It should be remembered that investment in schools is on the way up rather than on the way down. The aggregated schools' budget is set to increase by £15.8m next year, and I have already announced my intention to inject an additional £30m into it over the next two years, targeted at social deprivation.

City of Culture 2013: DE Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28673/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education has not awarded any tenders or provided any funding to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

Universities: Pupil Grants for Open Days

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education whether any grants are available for pupils from disadvantaged backgrounds to attend university open days outside Northern Ireland.

(AQW 28684/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not make grants available to pupils to attend university open days outside or inside the north of Ireland. Under the Local Management of Schools arrangements, every grant-aided school receives a fully delegated budget. It is for the Board of Governors of each school to determine expenditure priorities incurred in the delivery of the curriculum for all pupils enrolled in their school.

South Antrim: Preschool Availability

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Education how many free pre-school funded places there are in South Antrim.

(AQW 28710/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the 2011-15 Programme for Government my Department is committed to ensuring that at least one year of pre-school education is available to every family that wants it.

For admission to pre-school in September 2013, 99.8% of children, whose parents engaged with the pre-school admissions process to the end, obtained a funded pre-school place. This included all of the parents in the South Antrim constituency .

In the 2013/14 school year there are 1198 funded pre-school places in the South Antrim constituency, broken down as follows:

Statutory nursery school / nursery unit	(full time)	260
Statutory nursery school / nursery unit	(part time)	468
Voluntary / Private Pre-School Settings		470

There are still a number of places available in voluntary/private settings if additional children in their final pre-school year apply.

Officials will continue to work with colleagues in the North Eastern Education and Library Board to maintain sufficient provision in the area.

Children: Failure to Send to School

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education how many cases of parents or guardians failing to send children to school in the 2012/13 academic year were prosecuted in each Education and Library Board.

(AQW 28720/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that the number of cases of parents or guardians failing to send children to school in the 2012/13 academic year that were prosecuted in each ELB is as set out below.

ELB	Number of Prosecutions
Belfast ELB	*
Western ELB	33
North-Eastern ELB	68
South-Eastern ELB	*
Southern ELB	67

* denotes fewer than 5 cases, figure suppressed to avoid possible identification of individuals

Kilrea/Garvagh: Youth Clubs

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to detail his Department's spend on (i) youth club; and (ii) after school club activities in (a) Kilrea; and (b) Garvagh, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28741/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: During the last three years the Department of Education, via the North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB), has supported one controlled youth club and five voluntary youth clubs in Garvagh and two voluntary youth clubs in Kilrea.

In 2011/2012 NEELB allocated a total of £1,380 to youth clubs in Kilrea and £20,700 to youth clubs in Garvagh. In 2012/2013 the total figure for Kilrea was £3,292 and for Garvagh was £20,365. So far in 2013/2014 £1,080 and £4,463 has been provided to clubs in Kilrea and Garvagh respectively.

DE does not have responsibility for funding after school activities which operate outside the Extended Schools (ES) programme. Information is therefore only held on after school activities which are funded through the ES programme.

Schools qualify for ES funding if they have 51% or more pupils drawn from an area of social disadvantage or 37% or more of pupils with a Free School Meal Entitlement. During the past 3 years no school located in either the Kilrea or Garvagh Ward areas have met the ES eligibility criteria.

Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance: Funding

Mr Lytle asked the Minister of Education whether he is considering ring fencing funding for Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance in schools.

(AQW 28753/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I consider high quality, timely Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance (CEIAG) to be essential for all our young people, particularly in the fast changing world in which we live and work.

That is why it is part of the statutory curriculum, with an explicit minimum content at Key Stage 3 and 4. That is why I welcome both the planned review of my department's joint strategy with the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) "Preparing for Success", and the DEL Committee's Inquiry on the structure and effectiveness of CEIAG here.

Under the Local Management of Schools arrangements, every grant-aided school receives a fully delegated budget. It is for the Board of Governors of each school to determine expenditure priorities, including staffing and other day-to-day running costs, incurred in the delivery of the curriculum for all pupils enrolled in their school. Ring fenced funding is time bound and, in the challenging context of restricted budgets, not necessarily realistic. This is the context in which future resources must be considered and this will be done as part of the Preparing for Success review process.

Holocaust: Teaching

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what plans there are to increase teaching about the Holocaust.
(AQW 28776/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education has no plans to increase teaching about the Holocaust. There are opportunities for schools to explore the Holocaust and related issues through a number of Areas of Learning within the revised curriculum.

The revised curriculum provides teachers with greater flexibility over how they deliver the curriculum to meet pupils' needs. The minimum content to be taught in each Area of Learning is set out in legislation. In line with the flexibility provided by the revised curriculum, the specifics of what is taught, and how it is taught under each Area of Learning, is a matter for each teacher and school.

Shared Education: Funding

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of Shared Education funding in (i) 2009; (ii) 2010; (iii) 2011; (iv) 2012; and (v) 2013; and to list the recipient organisations. [R]
(AQW 28806/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Recent surveys indicate that over 70 % of respondents reported that they had been involved in shared education with another school during the last academic year. Survey results indicate that this work has been funded through department funding streams (such as CRED and Entitlement Framework funding), external funding sources or from within their own school budget.

In addition, the Extended School policy encourages schools to partner or cluster with one or more other schools for the delivery of extended services.

'Transformation: An Information Pack for Schools'

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 27877/11-15, whether he intends to update the Department's Transformation – An Information Pack for Schools document. [R]
(AQW 28807/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The current version of the "Transformation- An Information Pack for Schools" document continues to provide accurate and relevant information and advice, and sets out the necessary procedures and requirements for schools to achieve successful transformation to integrated status.

The Department is keen to ensure that the information provided, in terms of details of the integrated schools, reflects the current position and I have asked the appropriate Team within my Department to ensure that the details are fully up-to-date.

Sex Offenders: Accommodation Location

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what steps his Department can take to help ensure that people charged and convicted of serious sexual offences are not housed in close proximity to schools.
(AQW 28817/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The management of the risk to children and young people presented by a person convicted of a serious sexual offence is dealt with under the Public Protection Arrangements for NI (PPANI). I am advised that risk management plans are individually tailored to address the specific risks identified on a case by case basis. All relevant factors, including location, are taken into consideration in the approval of suitable accommodation. Where it is assessed that the accommodation best suited to managing the risk presented by an individual happens to be in the vicinity of a school, the school authorities are advised by the local Public Protection Unit and given advice on how pupils, parents and staff might be informed about keeping safe.

After-school Clubs: Funding

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Education what funding is available for after-schools clubs.
(AQW 28858/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department (DE) does not have responsibility for funding after school clubs which operate outside the Extended Schools (ES) programme.

The ES programme provides additional funding, £12m in 2013/14, for those schools serving the most disadvantaged areas to provide for a wide range of services and activities outside of the normal school day. Where assessed as needed by schools, this may include after school clubs.

Education Bill: School Ethos

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education how the Education Bill will facilitate school transformation from one ethos type to another. (AQW 28874/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer the Member to my answer to AQW 27878/11-15 tabled by Steven Agnew and published in the Official Report on 2 December 2013.

Holocaust Educational Trust

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education whether he received any requests to meet with the Holocaust Educational Trust; and if so, to provide further details. (AQW 28928/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have not received any direct requests to meet with the Holocaust Education Trust (HET).

In January 2013, Sammy Wilson MP MLA asked me to consider a funding request for the "Lessons from Auschwitz" Project, and at that time suggested a meeting with the Holocaust Educational Trust's Head of Public Affairs. My reply to him explained that the Department of Education no longer receives an allocation from the Treasury to fund participation in the project by schools in the north of Ireland. In view of the lack of funding for the project I did not consider it appropriate to engage in a meeting with the Trust.

The curriculum in place in all schools in the north of Ireland provides opportunities to explore the Holocaust and related issues. In line with the flexibility provided by the revised curriculum, it is a matter for individual schools to decide on their involvement with outside organisations, such as the Holocaust Educational Trust, to assist in their delivery of the curriculum.

Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance: Funding

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what funding is provided to schools for careers education information, advice and guidance. (AQW 28938/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the Local Management of Schools (LMS) arrangements, the Board of Governors of every school receives a delegated budget to enable them to deliver all aspects of the curriculum including careers provision. It is a matter for each school to determine how best to utilise their delegated funding in delivering their statutory requirements, which includes careers. Careers teachers also work in partnership with the Department for Employment and Learning's careers advisers to offer advice to young people.

In addition to funding under LMS, the Department provides funding to the Education & Library Boards for specific programmes that are a priority for the economy such as the STEM Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance (CEIAG) programme. The focus of this programme is to promote and raise pupils' awareness and aspirations in STEM-related careers through focused projects, activities and resources, capacity development, and embedding STEM CEIAG within the school curriculum.

Schools: Boards of Governors

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education when the re-constituted Boards of Governors will be brought into operation. (AQW 28967/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I expect the reconstituted Boards of Governors to be in operation in the 2014/15 school year.

Schools: Mentoring of Head Teachers

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education what opportunities exist for the mentoring or coaching of new head teachers by current head teachers, or those who have recently retired. (AQW 28980/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As a key element of Every School a Good School, the Regional Training Unit (RTU) has revised its induction programme for newly appointed head teachers to include mentoring for each of them by a high quality serving head teacher, ie one of RTU's Leadership Development Partners (LDPs). All LDPs will within the last three years have received an inspection grade in relation to their leadership of either outstanding or very good and, they are trained and accredited by RTU as formal mentor/coaches using the European Charter on Coaching Competences framework.

LDPs undertake a number of roles for the RTU including mentoring of newly appointed head teachers and trainee head teachers, (ie those undertaking the Professional Qualification for Headship), and mentoring of head teachers working in challenging circumstances, as part of the RTU's support for schools in formal intervention.

Recently retired teachers are not used by the RTU in the delivery of its induction programme for newly appointed head teachers.

Omagh High School: Lisanelly

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Education to give an indication of a time frame when Omagh High School will receive its new build on the Lisanelly campus site.

(AQO 5135/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Based on the latest procurement timetable for the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus Phase 2 of construction, which includes Omagh High School, is due to commence in the summer of 2016 and complete in 2019.

There are five schools and a number of shared education centres included in Phase 2 of the project and at this stage of planning no decision has yet been taken on the order in which they will be constructed.

I am meeting with Omagh High School in the coming weeks and will discuss the plans for Lisanelly with the School's representatives at that time.

Common Funding Scheme: Reform

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Education whether he has included the £15.8 million rise in school budgets, and the premises factor, into any new revised Common Funding Formula Scheme.

(AQO 5136/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My proposals on the reform of the Common Funding Scheme have been the subject of a widespread consultation. I will not be making any final decisions until a full analysis of all consultation responses has been carried out.

Indeed I would be criticised if I made these decisions in advance of considering the nearly 15,000 responses my Department received.

I cannot therefore say what the actual detail of the revised Common Funding Scheme and Formula will be but, as I have already stated on several occasions, they will reflect the increased £15.8m added to the ASB for next year.

Actual allocations for the 2014/15 financial year will be notified to schools early in 2014.

Schools: Examination Proposals in England

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the proposed changes to the English proposals to measure schools' examination results by awarding each grade achieved an individual score, rather than assessments based on the number of pupils achieving A*-C grades.

(AQO 5137/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are fundamental differences between the approach taken here and the approach taken in England given that we do not use league tables.

The Department for Education in England is at liberty to take forward changes to its performance measures and there may be lessons that we can draw upon from its research.

The English proposals will continue to be based on exam results and we have a number of questions about the impact the proposed measures may have on decisions relating to pupils' subject choices and examination entries.

I agree that the range and nature of accountability measures should be under continual review.

My Department is currently considering a number of options in this area and it is likely that I will wish to consult on these in due course.

Common Funding Scheme: Implementation of Changes

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Education when he will announce his final decision on changes to the Common Funding Formula.

(AQO 5138/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The changes to the Common Funding Scheme (CFS) for schools remain on track for delivery for the new financial year.

The consultation generated huge interest, with nearly 15,000 responses received by the closing date.

It has always been my intention to implement the changes in time for next year and I want to ensure that everyone's views are taken into account before I make my final decisions on the way forward.

Indeed the Education Committee has asked for an assurance that the outcome of the CFS review is not pre-determined and that I will take account of the views of all those who responded to the consultation before coming to my final decisions.

I can give an assurance today that I intend to do just that.

I intend to announce my final decisions and advise schools early in 2014. Crucially, I want to ensure there is no unnecessary delay in reforming the CFS and in directing additional support to those schools that need it most.

A Levels: National Standards

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education what steps he is taking to ensure local students seeking places in English universities are not disadvantaged by his decision not to conform to national standards in A-level specifications.

(AQO 5139/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Education is a devolved matter and this Assembly expects me to take decisions that are in the best interests of pupils here. I am determined to ensure that our A level standards are maintained through challenging content and robust assessment.

In terms of the steps I am taking, Michael Gove announced a number of changes to A levels in England. In advance of making any changes here, I wanted to consult widely with stakeholders, particularly with school leaders.

Following consultation, I concluded that it is appropriate that A levels should continue to include both an AS and A2 element.

It came through strongly in consultation that the AS level has an important role in providing a bridge between GCSE and A level.

I also decided that the number of assessment opportunities should be reduced. This was again supported in consultation because schools indicated that mid-year assessments disrupted teaching and learning.

These decisions will ensure that our A Level qualifications remain fit for purpose and are equitable, robust and portable, and, most importantly, credible in the eyes of Higher Education Institutions and employers.

Following the current consultation on the Fundamental Review of GCSEs and A levels, I will make further decisions on the way forward in the New Year.

Education: Optimising Achievement

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education, in light of the pilot of the Regional Training Unit's Emotional Health and Well Being project last year, whether his Department has any plans to make this available to all schools.

(AQO 5140/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has no immediate plans to make the 'Optimising Achievement' materials developed by Barnardo's and the Regional Training Unit available to all schools.

The report on the evaluation of a pilot training course about the 'Optimising Achievement' materials has only recently been forwarded to my Department. The report reflects the feedback from staff from 15 schools immediately following the 3 days of training completed in early March. Until I have had an opportunity to consider the evaluation report and its wider implications, there will be no decision on the place which the 'Optimising Achievement' approach to pupils' emotional health and wellbeing has within the Department's overall 'iMatter' Programme.

The priority at this time within the 'iMatter' Programme is the development and piloting of an audit tool for use by schools to assess their current approach to promoting pupils' emotional health and wellbeing and how that might be improved.

Youth Services: Investment

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education to outline the steps he has taken to invest in local Youth Services in the last 12 months.

(AQO 5141/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: During 2013-2014, I invested £33 million in frontline youth services to support a wide range of generic and targeted youth activities. This included an additional £4million to support those within disadvantaged areas who may be at greater risk of social exclusion, marginalisation or isolation because they experience a combination of barriers to learning.

Capital budget allocations for 2013-14 were £6.4 million across the youth sector, which included commencement of a new £1.4 million stand alone controlled youth facility in Belvoir.

As you will be aware, I recently announced a further £12 million capital investment in the voluntary youth sector for 53 projects.

Rathfriland High School: Newbuild

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has any plans for a new build for Rathfriland High School.

(AQO 5142/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: At present, there are no specific plans for a new build project for Rathfriland High School.

The Southern Education & Library Board remains committed to supporting Rathfriland High School, as confirmed in the SELB Post Primary Area Plan, however the school is not its highest priority for new capital build at this time.

While the school will be disappointed that it has not been included in my capital investment announcements, this in no way implies that it will not be considered for funding at a later stage within the on-going area planning process. The reality is that many schools are in need of investment and competing for limited capital funding.

I will continue to examine the case for capital investment across the estate and any proposals for Rathfriland High School will be considered with other priorities as part of any future capital announcement.

Education: North and West Belfast

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education what support his Department provides to the North and West Full Service Community Network approach to education provision.

(AQO 5143/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In 2013-14, my Department provided funding of £376k to support both the Full Service Schools programme operating in North Belfast and the Full Service Community Network in West Belfast.

Youth Sector: Funding

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education what criteria were used when determining the projects that received funding in the recently announced £12 million voluntary youth sector investment.

(AQO 5144/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the Youth Service (NI) Order 1989 the Department may pay grants to voluntary youth organisations towards approved expenses in providing facilities for the Youth Service.

To be eligible to apply for funding an organisation must be registered with the local Education and Library Board or receive funding from the Youth Council for NI and must also be able to demonstrate the operation of Youth Service Programmes for at least 9 hours per week for a minimum of 30 weeks per annum.

All eligible applications which met the above criteria were then scored and weighted against: creating access and facilities for the disabled; carrying out essential Health & Safety work; fire safety; child protection; meeting the needs of young people within section 75; collaboration, partnership, sharing facilities/resources; existing use by youth; and cost effectiveness/value for money.

All schemes scored met the pass mark and are being taken forward by the Department.

Gifts and Hospitality: DE Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how many entries his Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 29009/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Special Advisor has made no entries in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mental Health/Learning Disability: Definition

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 26916/11-15, whether these definitions are adopted by Further Education Colleges; and if not, will he ensure this is actioned at the earliest possible opportunity.

(AQW 28188/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): The definitions identified in answer AQW 26916/11-15 are legal definitions (from the Mental Health Order 1986) and may be used by clinical and social care practitioners. However, they will always be used on occasions when compulsory admission to hospital for assessment and/or treatment is being considered for an individual patient. In such circumstances, the individual is more likely than not, to have a significant and possibly severe clinical condition which warrants detention in hospital for further investigation and/or treatment. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) has advised that the provision of clinical and social care is not based on definitions, but rather on the assessed needs of the individual, their family and carer.

As I have mentioned in previous answers, further education (FE) colleges are bound by the definitions stipulated within the Disability Discrimination Act (1995) and more particularly, the Special Educational Needs and Disability (Northern Ireland) Order 2005 (SENDO). This Order makes it unlawful for institutions of further and higher education to treat students with disabilities less favourably, without justification, for a reason which relates to their disability. It also places a duty on institutions to make reasonable adjustments to ensure that people who have a disability are not put at a substantial disadvantage (compared to people who do not have a disability) in accessing further and higher education.

In doing so, these institutions adhere to a pan disability approach, which ensures that support for students is based on need, rather than category of disability. This is in alignment with the approach taken by DHSSPS, in their provision of clinical and social care, as outlined above. I remain confident that this approach, operated by colleges, is the most fair and equitable way of meeting the additional educational support needs of all students, irrespective of the category of their disability. Therefore I do not consider it appropriate to make any changes.

University of Ulster: Campuses

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether there are plans in place to relocate any schools from Magee to any other University of Ulster campuses.

(AQW 28279/11-15)

Dr Farry: This is not information that my Department would normally hold. However, the University of Ulster has informed me that in the academic session 2010/11 the University conducted a restructuring exercise the principal aims of which were to: achieve efficiency savings following a reduction in the core teaching and research grants received from DEL; increase full-time undergraduate places at the Magee campus whilst maintaining full-time undergraduate places at the University's other campuses (this net increase in places was made possible by the additional MaSN places allocated to the University by DEL); and, increase full-time undergraduate places in the STEM areas.

In the context of the Magee campus this entailed: an increase in student places in computing; an increase in student places in creative technology; the transfer of pre-registration nursing places from Coleraine to Magee; the transfer of Irish from Coleraine to Magee; the transfer of History from Magee to Coleraine; and, the establishment of a new Centre for Engineering and Renewable Energy at Magee.

This has resulted in a net transfer of staff to Magee and the establishment of new academic posts at Magee. Staff transfers associated with the above transfer of student places are being phased as courses are phased out on one campus and established/increased at another campus.

Further to the above, the University has no plans to relocate any schools from Magee to any other University of Ulster campus.

Education Maintenance Allowance: Fraud

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail in each of the last five years (i) the number of prosecutions there have been for fraudulent Education Maintenance Allowance claims; and (ii) the amount overpaid.

(AQW 28358/11-15)

Dr Farry: There have been no fraud prosecutions in relation to the means tested Education Maintenance Allowance in the last five years and therefore no associated overpayments.

Adult Apprenticeships: Funding

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the rationale in only providing fully funded QCF/NVQ Diplomas in Health and Social Care to those up to the age of 25 and restricting access to qualifications that will produce care workers, particularly in light of Transforming Your Care.

(AQW 28527/11-15)

Dr Farry: Apprenticeships

In September 2011 and August 2012 I initiated changes to the provision and funding arrangements for adult apprenticeships. This was to ensure resources were targeted more effectively on the priority skill needs of the local economy, the specific needs of adults, and that a proportionate balance was achieved in contributions to adult training by Government, employers and the individual.

My priorities are clear. Funding for apprenticeships must be focused primarily on our young people to enable them to acquire the new knowledge and skills needed to make a difference to their lives and to the NI economy. This position is supported by research conducted by IFF Research on behalf of the Department for Business Innovation and Skills in 2012. The research shows that younger apprentices are more likely to report positive impacts on their skills levels than their adult counterparts. Unfortunately, the previous funding of adult apprenticeships was not sustainable.

As the member will be aware, back in February I announced a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned, and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Further Education Provision

My Department's further education curriculum policy has been developed to ensure that colleges have a strong focus on provision that supports the economy, strengthens workforce development and advances an individual's skills and learning.

Individual colleges design and deliver a curriculum offering that meets the needs of learners and employers in their areas. Colleges do not restrict access to qualifications that produce care workers and they do not impose age restrictions other than the school leaving age requirement.

The specific needs of adult health and social care workers will continue to be met through the Department's programmes and services ensuring they have the right skills to support our journey in transforming the health and social care service.

Working Group

As a result of the "Task and Finish" Group's recommendations, my Department has joined a group exploring the skills development needs of the domiciliary social care sector. This group includes representatives from DHSSPS, Invest NI, Health and Social Care Council and Belfast Metropolitan College as well as representatives from my Department's Skills and Industry Division. Its first meeting was on 5 October when it established a sub group to examine the detail and devise recommendations.

Research Excellence Framework: Submissions

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 27940/11-15, given his Department's responsibility overseeing the Research Excellence Framework and should Prof Gallagher be included, what action does he intend to take.

(AQW 28528/11-15)

Dr Farry: It is up to each institution to determine which research they put forward as part of their submission to the Research Excellence Framework.

South West Regional College: Questions Referred to Director

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 27225/11-15, AQW 26532/11-15, AQW 26467/11-15 and AQW 26381/11-15, to clarify in what format and the date each question was referred to the Director of South West Regional College; and if confirmation of each correspondence was received.

Dr Farry: AQW 27225/11-15

My Department issued a letter, via email, to the Director of South West College (SWC) on 31 October 2013. This letter provided details of the question tabled and asked the Director of the College to respond to the Member, directly. My Department received a copy of the response, from SWC to the Member, on 6 November 2013.

AQW 26532/11-15, AQW 26467/11-15, and AQW 26381/11-15

My Department issued a letter, via email, to the Director of SWC on 11 October 2013. This letter provided details of all three questions tabled and asked that the Director of the College respond to the Member, directly, with the information sought in the three questions. The College received the e-mail on 11 October 2013.

My Department has contacted SWC to ascertain if a reply has been issued by the College. SWC have advised that the request had been overlooked due to a misunderstanding. However, the College has now issued a response to the Member and my Department has received a copy of this reply.

Autism: DEL Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28544/11-15)

Dr Farry: Staff who regularly meet the public such as Employment Service staff, Careers Officers and Tribunal staff have received specific training about autism to enable them to communicate appropriately and positively with customers and visitors. If having previously made officials aware that they have been diagnosed with autism, customers attending the Department's Jobcentres and Careers Resource Centres can have arrangements made to be accompanied by an advocate or request access to private interview room facilities where their specific environmental needs can be addressed. The pace of the interview and journey towards employment will be tailored to individual customer needs where possible. Customers with autism who are in receipt of Employment and Support Allowance are contacted by Departmental staff in advance of their first work focused interview in order to discuss accommodation needs and to ensure that the engagement with Employment Service staff is appropriate and effective.

For the purposes of tribunal proceedings at Killymeal House, a party with autism will be afforded any reasonable adjustment required to facilitate participation. Customer Service training and equality training is available to reception staff in Adelaide House and Gloucester House which focuses on meeting the needs of the customer including those with a disability.

Universities: Protestant Students

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail what his Department is doing to ensure Queen's University and the University of Ulster are welcoming protestant students.

(AQW 28554/11-15)

Dr Farry: As I advised in my responses to both your Oral Assembly question and subsequent Written Assembly question in May.

The research evidence presented on participation in Higher Education by Northern Ireland students indicates that there were very few negative perceptions of Northern Ireland institutions among school leavers. In fact, most respondents reported that Northern Ireland institutions were very welcoming to all groups in terms of religion, disability, ethnicity and socio-economic status.

I continue to be delighted that our Universities offer a genuine option for integrated education.

Higher Education: Law Graduates

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of law graduates, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28572/11-15)

Dr Farry: The number of law graduates from Northern Ireland Higher Education Institutions, in each of the last three academic years is detailed in the table below:

Year	Total
2011-12	814
2010-11	729
2009-10	755

Source: Higher Education Statistics Agency

Notes:

- 1) The latest available data on Higher Education qualifications are for 2011/12.

Employment: Law Graduates

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of law graduates that are unable to find employment.

(AQW 28573/11-15)

Dr Farry: In 2011/12, of the law graduates from Northern Ireland Higher Education Institutions whose destinations were known, 42 indicated they were unemployed.

Source: Higher Education Statistics Agency

Notes:

- 2) The latest available data on graduate destinations are for 2011/12.
- 3) This information comes from the Destination of Leavers Survey. It provides details of the destinations of leavers from HE who obtained qualifications in HEIs during the 2011/12 academic year. The survey was carried out approximately six months after graduation and had a 78% response rate.

Southern Regional College: Poppies

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline any investigation being conducted into a direction from staff in the Regional College in Armagh that students should remove their poppies and whether the Department is satisfied that equality policies are being properly applied in the college.

(AQW 28598/11-15)

Dr Farry: Southern Regional College has confirmed that it has received a number of enquiries regarding the alleged direction given to students at its Armagh Campus that it was not permissible to wear the poppy.

Southern Regional College permits the wearing of non-political marks of remembrance, celebration or commemoration such as poppies or shamrocks during specified periods in the year. In response to these enquiries, it requested the names of students who had allegedly received such an instruction and the details of any staff members who issued such an instruction. No such information has been received in relation to complaints pertaining to the Armagh campus. Without this information Southern Regional College cannot proceed to investigate further.

Southern Regional College, like all colleges in the further education sector, is required to promote good relations between members of categories set out in Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, and it is monitored by the Equality Commission in its discharging of this duty.

Education Maintenance Allowance: Fraud

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 28158/11-15, what scale of fraud has been detected.

(AQW 28599/11-15)

Dr Farry: No fraud has been detected in relation to the means tested Education Maintenance Allowance.

Higher Education: Strengthening the All-island Research Base Programme

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to provide an update on “Strengthening The All-Island Research Base” programme; and to detail the areas of research taking place currently under this programme.

(AQW 28676/11-15)

Dr Farry: With a strategic investment of £17.2 million from late 2008 / early 2009 to March 2011, the Strengthening the all-Island Research Base programme enabled the two universities to establish twelve major projects to build additional and sustainable research capacity and capability that would contribute to the development of the “All Island Research Infrastructure”.

The twelve projects were supported to the end of Financial Year 2010/11 after which they aimed to become self-sustaining, per the requirement in the Department’s “Call for Proposals”.

An independent evaluation of the Programme has recently been published, and it concluded that all twelve projects have been able to secure funding to pursue further research as a direct result of work funded through, and building on the outcomes of, the DEL-funded programme.

The areas of research continuing to be pursued as a result of this programme are mobile wireless systems, transport sustainability, agri-food, cancer research, diet and obesity, novel therapeutics for infections and chronic diseases, biomedical informatics, energy storage, sensors and nanotechnology, functional biomaterials, computational neuroscience, and nutrition and bone health.

Sport: Student Funding

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the funding opportunities available to students studying Sports Studies at University level that need to undertake coaching courses in fields such as athletics, gymnastics, swimming and games.

(AQW 28678/11-15)

Dr Farry: The eligibility of higher education students for financial support in terms of tuition fees, grants and loans is determined under the Education (Student Support) (Northern Ireland) Regulations 2009 (as amended). I can advise that students studying higher education courses in Sports Studies are determined for financial support in the same way as other undergraduate students under the Regulations.

There is no additional higher education funding specifically aimed at students undertaking coaching courses.

Apprenticeships: Skills Areas

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the skills areas of all apprentices currently under training in all establishments funded by his Department.

(AQW 28722/11-15)

Dr Farry: The most recent edition of my Department’s ApprenticeshipsNI Statistical Bulletin provides key information on the ApprenticeshipsNI programme and contains data to July 2013. The Bulletin is published on a quarterly basis with the statistics presented covering a range of topics including starts, occupancy, leavers and outcomes for participants on ApprenticeshipsNI.

An extract from the bulletin, detailing programme participation, aligned to apprenticeships frameworks, has been placed in the Assembly Library and on the DEL website on http:// www.delni.gov.uk/. A full copy of the Statistical Bulletin can be viewed by following the link below.

<http://www.delni.gov.uk/index/publications/r-and-s-stats/apprenticeshipsni-statistical-bulletins.htm>

As the member will be aware, back in February I announced a major review of my Department’s apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned, and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Apprenticeships: Allocation

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail by skills area, the basis on which the numbers in apprentice training are allocated.

(AQW 28724/11-15)

Dr Farry: The ApprenticeshipsNI programme is an employer-led provision, with employers creating apprenticeship positions in line with their future business needs. It is therefore individual businesses in each “skills area” who determine the number of apprentices in that business sector.

My Department funds the ‘off-the-job’ training element of an apprenticeship through the ApprenticeshipsNI programme.

As the member will be aware, back in February I announced a major review of my Department’s apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned, and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Apprenticeships: Employment

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail by skills area, how many apprentices, have progressed into employment in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28726/11-15)

Dr Farry: The ApprenticeshipsNI programme is an employer-led provision, with employers creating apprenticeship positions in line with their future business needs. Apprentices are employed “from day one”.

My Department funds the ‘off-the-job’ training element of an apprenticeship through the ApprenticeshipsNI programme.

Over 23,000 individuals have started ApprenticeshipsNI funded training over the past three years. A full breakdown of starts, aligned to Apprenticeship Frameworks, has been placed in the Assembly Library and on the DEL website on <http://www.delni.gov.uk/>.

As the member will be aware, back in February I announced a major review of my Department’s apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned, and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Apprenticeships: Insurance/Small Firms

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail any assistance his Department gives small firms in relation to the insurance costs of taking on apprentices.

(AQW 28781/11-15)

Dr Farry: Responsibility for the payment of insurance costs for apprentices lies with the employer in line with the employer’s obligations to all of their employees.

My Department funds the ‘off-the-job’ training element of an apprenticeship through the ApprenticeshipsNI programme. An apprentice should be covered by both the employer’s and training supplier’s public liability insurance when availing of directed training.

Apprenticeships: Female Participation

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail how many female apprentice trainees are currently on apprenticeship courses, broken down by skills area.

(AQW 28786/11-15)

Dr Farry: As of July 2013 (the most recent published data) female occupancy on the ApprenticeshipsNI programme stood at 3,377. A full breakdown of gender occupancy, aligned to apprenticeship frameworks has been placed in the Assembly Library and on the DEL website on <http://www.delni.gov.uk/>.

As the member will be aware, back in February I announced a major review of my Department’s apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned, and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Apprenticeships: Food Engineering Pilot Programme

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the Food Engineering Apprenticeship program.

(AQW 28847/11-15)

Dr Farry: I launched the Food Engineering Apprenticeship Pilot Programme in September 2013 in response to concerns raised by local food manufacturing and processing businesses that they were finding it difficult to recruit engineers to work in this sector.

Officials in my Department have worked closely with industry and their counterparts in Department of Agriculture and Rural Development and Southern Regional College to develop a flexible programme in line with industry requirements.

Eight local food manufacturing and processing employers are committed to the pilot offering a maximum of 21 apprenticeships. These companies are geographically spread out, thereby offering the opportunities presented to young people from across Northern Ireland. The employers involved have developed the content of the qualification and made key decisions affecting how it will be delivered.

Applicants completed two psychometric tests to assess their capability to achieve an engineering qualification. At present, the participating companies are interviewing the applicants who have successfully completed both tests and those recruited will begin the initiative on 6th January 2014 with an intensive orientation programme at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise.

Apprenticeships: Figures

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many people have entered apprenticeships in each of the last 3 years.

(AQW 28848/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department funds the 'off-the-job' training element of an apprenticeship through the ApprenticeshipsNI programme.

Over the past three academic years, the numbers of individuals entering ApprenticeshipsNI provision are:

- 2010/11 - 8,948;
- 2011/12 - 7,884; and
- 2012/13 - 6,345 (up to July 2013).

My Department's ApprenticeshipsNI Statistical Bulletin provides key information on the ApprenticeshipsNI programme and contains data to July 2013. The Bulletin is published on a quarterly basis with the statistics presented covering a range of topics including starts, occupancy, leavers and outcomes for participants on ApprenticeshipsNI.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Economy: Impact of British GDP/Irish Economy

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) how she plans to ensure that the local economy benefits from the recent increase in Britain's Gross Domestic Product ; (ii) how she plans to ensure that the local economy benefits from recent improvements in the southern economy; (iii) how the impact of the increase in Britain's Gross Domestic Product on the local economy is measured; and (iv) how the impact of the increase in the economy of Ireland on the local economy is measured.

(AQW 27983/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment):

- (i) & (ii) I welcome the recent improvements in UK Gross Domestic Product and the improvements in the economy of the Republic of Ireland, both of which are key markets for external sales and tourism.

The Executive's Economic Strategy is outward-looking, with a focus on export-led economic growth, and one of the key themes relates to competing in the global economy. The improvements in Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland will therefore be captured through the continued implementation of the Strategy.

The Economic Strategy identifies a range of commitments, expected to deliver job creation and growing employment levels in Northern Ireland. The Executive has made considerable progress towards delivery of commitments made for this budget period. An update on the implementation of the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy Action Plan was published on 25 October and can be accessed on the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy website at: www.northernireland.gov.uk/economic-strategy.

The delivery of these actions is establishing the foundations for future economic growth.

- (iii) & (iv) The published GDP figures for the UK include Northern Ireland. We do not specifically measure the impact of growth in Great Britain or the Republic of Ireland on the Northern Ireland economy, as this would be extremely difficult to quantify.

There are four main areas which contribute to growth in the economy, these are: consumer spending; investment; net trade; and, government spending. As the Republic of Ireland receives over a third of our exports it has a significant impact on our net trade. Given the way Northern Ireland is funded, changes to government spending in Whitehall has a significant impact on level of government spending locally. Other factors from both economies have influence on all of these areas.

However, it is important that the Northern Ireland economy diversifies, so that it is not as reliant upon growth in Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland, given that growth in these regions is forecast to be lower than in other economies, such as emerging economies. This is another important aspect of the Executive's Economic Strategy.

Craigavon/Banbridge/Armagh Councils: DETI Work

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the work between her Department and (i) Craigavon Borough Council; (ii) Banbridge District Council; and (iii) Armagh City Council, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28298/11-15)

Economy: Promotion of Shopping

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what work her Department is doing to encourage shopper numbers.

(AQW 28409/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In 2012, NISRA carried out the Northern Ireland Passenger Survey which surveys outbound passengers through the Northern Ireland airports and ports. Of the spend by these GB and overseas passengers (£346 million), an estimated 15% was on shopping. In addition, domestic overnight shopping trips contributed a further £2 million to the local economy.

My Department, through the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) and Tourism Ireland, continues to explore and develop opportunities to encourage visitors to Northern Ireland with shopping identified as a potential activity of interest.

NITB has undertaken a series of annual marketing campaigns in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland; to increase the number of short breaks taken; with the NITB Autumn/Christmas 2013 campaign specifically promoting shopping at the Christmas market.

Tourism Ireland's Autumn 2013 campaign is further targeting late season bookings to Northern Ireland. The campaign is well underway in Great Britain, United States of America, mainland Europe, Australia and other key emerging markets; focussing on attracting visitors to Northern Ireland where they can enjoy a variety of short breaks.

North Down: Invest NI

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many businesses have been assisted by InvestNI in the North Down constituency, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28413/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Table 1 below shows the number of businesses which have been assisted by Invest NI in the North Down Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA) in each of the years between 2010-11 and 2012-13.

Table 1: Number of Businesses Offered Support in North Down PCA (2010-11 to 2012-13)

Year	Number
2010-11	65
2011-12	101
2012-13	100

In addition, Invest NI offered support and guidance to individuals wishing to start a business through the Regional Start Initiative (RSI), formerly known as the Enterprise Development Programme, delivered in conjunction with Enterprise Northern Ireland. These are detailed in Table 2 below.

Table 2: Number of Individuals in North Down PCA Offered Support Through RSI (2010-11 to 2012-13)

Year	Number
2010-11	111
2011-12	80
2012-13	38

Note: A number of individuals receiving RSI offers went on to avail of further Invest NI support. These individuals are removed from Table 1 and counted in Table 2 above.

In addition, Invest NI launched its Boosting Business initiative on 14th November 2011. This initiative identifies the range of support and advice available to local businesses and provides accessible contact points, via telephone, email and social media. Invest NI now has a dedicated full time Business Support Team in place to deal with enquiries from businesses across Northern Ireland. Since its inception there have been 538 additional enquiries from the North Down area.

Business: Female Entrepreneurship

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the action that her Department has taken to encourage women in business and female entrepreneurship to realise the potential for the economy.

(AQW 28434/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Women remain the largest under-represented group when it comes to enterprise in Northern Ireland and represent a huge pool of untapped potential.

Invest NI currently supports female entrepreneurship through a variety of targeted marketing initiatives, sponsorship of business networks and business awards. Through this activity Invest NI aims to support more women to set up and run their own business successfully and to promote opportunities for business growth in export markets.

Alongside sponsorship support to Women's business networks, Invest NI is a sponsor of the International Women's Business Conference scheduled for May 2014. With the theme of "Creating a New Economy", the conference presents an opportunity to showcase Northern Ireland's business potential as well as celebrate and promote the potential of business women on a local and global scale.

Health and Safety: Fire-rated Glass

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the actions the Health and Safety Executive has taken to protect people in the workplace regarding the claim that Glassworks Ireland Ltd was installing fire-rated glass, which was not recognised, approved or certified as fire-rated.

(AQW 28456/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Other than in Crown Premises, enforcement of issues relating to workplace fire safety falls under the jurisdiction of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service.

In relation to Crown Premises, HSENI is in discussion with the Department of Finance and Personnel in relation to this matter.

InterTradelreland: Religious Background of Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of staff employed by InterTradelreland, broken down by religion.

(AQW 28529/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As at 22 November, 2013, the number of staff employed by InterTradelreland broken down by religion is:-

Protestants	8
Roman Catholics	31
Non-Determined	1

National Dairy Council: Loss of Business

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and whether she is aware of any local agri-food company that has lost a contract in the Republic of Ireland due to the stance taken by the National Dairy Council.

(AQW 28540/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am well aware that a number of local dairy companies have been affected by the National Dairy Council campaign.

I have brought the campaign to the attention of the North South Ministerial Council, the European Commission and retailers based in the Republic of Ireland. I will continue to work in an effort to minimise any potential losses to our local economy.

Electricity: Security of Supply

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the surplus electricity that is required to ensure security of supply.

(AQW 28558/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has been liaising with the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation and the electricity system operator SONI to consider the post 2015 security of electricity supply margin for Northern Ireland, including if there is likely to be a requirement for any additional conventional generation, and these discussions remain ongoing.

Moyle Interconnector: Mutual Energy

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether Mutual Energy require permission from (i) the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation or (ii) her Department before carrying out extensive repair or replacement works to the Moyle Interconnector.

(AQW 28560/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Mutual Energy proposals for interim and permanent repairs to the Moyle Interconnector have been endorsed by the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation and discussed with my Department.

As work to restore the Moyle to full capacity is advanced by Mutual Energy, their further engagement with the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation and my Department may be necessary in relation to particular aspects of the proposed works.

Lough Neagh: Oil/Gas Exploration

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the advice on which she based her claims during her evidence to the Committee for Enterprise, Trade Investment on 9 May 2013 when she stated that the licence will state what type of exploration is foreseen in the Lough Neagh basin area. I am not an expert in geology and I do not pretend to be, but I am told by my officials from the Geological Survey of Northern Ireland that the geology does not lend itself to hydraulic fracturing, and, therefore, it will be conventional exploration.

(AQW 28561/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My comments were in relation to Petroleum Licence Application PLA1/13 by CHx LLC. The advice was based on the applicants proposed exploration work programme which is directed towards identifying conventional oil or gas targets.

A work programme forms an integral part of any Petroleum Licence and significant changes to the programme cannot be made without my Department's consent.

The Geological Survey Northern Ireland has also advised that, from a geological perspective, the presence of significant unconventional oil or gas resources in the Lough Neagh and Larne sedimentary basins remains hypothetical at best.

E-Synergy: Update

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the work of E-Synergy.

(AQW 28586/11-15)

Mrs Foster: E-Synergy has been managing the NISPO suite of Funds since April 2009 and the active investment period will end on 31 March 2014. The Funds have a ten year life and E-Synergy will continue to manage the Funds until 2019; this will enable follow on investments to be made and investments to be realized. All of the money invested through the Funds has been provided by Invest NI, and over the life of the Funds this will amount to £14million.

Circa £8.8million of Invest NI money has been invested to date as follows:

Fund	Amount invested (£'000)	SMEs supported
Invest Growth Fund	3,500	26
University Funds	1,300	7
Proof of Concept Grant Fund	4,000	175
Total	8,800	208

All figures above are provisional.

The Investment Readiness Programme, a training and support programme, continues to provide a broad range of events to help young companies to become investment ready. The workshops, including the most recent CEO Leadership programme, are aimed at management teams in high growth potential companies. This programme is well received in the market place.

DETI Press Releases/Photographs: DUP Website

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the number of press releases drafted, or photographs taken, by departmental officials that have subsequently been published on the Democratic Unionist Party website or social media sites; (ii) the estimated time it took departmental staff to do this; and (iii) the total cost to her Department. (AQW 28587/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) Press releases are drafted by DETI officials to communicate departmental key messages and achievements. Once issued by the Executive Information Service, press releases and photographs are free and available to use by print and online outlets, including social media sites.
- (ii) None.
- (iii) Zero.

St Patrick's Trail: Irish-language Signage

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, with regards to point 5 (iii) of the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) minutes of the meeting on 14 March 2013, (i) whether a reply has been provided by her Department to the NITB; and (ii) whether Down District Council can add the Irish language to signage for St. Patrick's Trail at their own expense. (AQW 28592/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) A reply was provided by My Department to the Northern Ireland Tourist Board on 17th April 2013.
- (ii) That is a matter for Down District Council.

City of Culture 2013: DETI Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013. (AQW 28675/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) The Northern Ireland Tourist Board did not award any tenders to organisations in Londonderry to deliver the UK City of Culture 2013. The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) was responsible for the delivery of the UK City of Culture 2013 and hence was the main funder and responsible for any tenders.
- (ii) The Northern Ireland Tourist Board provided £750,000 of funding to The Culture Company 2013 in Londonderry to deliver five UK City of Culture 2013 tourism events, namely:

The Return of Colmcille	£166,500
Fleadh Cheoil 2013	£167,000
The Walled City Tattoo	£ 50,000
The Turner Prize	£166,500
Lumiere	£200,000
Total	£750,000

In addition, The Northern Ireland Tourist Board provided £60,000 of funding to 5 other organisations in Londonderry who applied for support under the NITB Tourism Event Funding Programme 2013/14 towards tourism events taking place during the UK City of Culture year 2013.

Power NI

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the current value per annum being derived by the consumer from the remaining contracts in place between Power NI Energy Ltd and electricity generators. (AQW 28757/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This is a matter that falls under the remit of the Utility Regulator. The Regulator has advised that for the tariff year 2013-14 these contracts are estimated to be worth £2.6 million to consumers. The figure is calculated each year.

Power NI

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps she is taking, in conjunction with the Northern Ireland Utility Regulator, to ensure that the remaining contracts in place between Power NI Energy Ltd and electricity generators continue to deliver best value for money for energy consumers.

(AQW 28758/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This is a matter that falls under the remit of the Utility Regulator. The Regulator carries out a regular review of the forecast value of these contracts to consumers. If these contracts are forecast to become a cost to consumers at some stage in the future, they can be cancelled. As part of any cancellation process the Utility Regulator will issue a public consultation on the matter.

Carbon Trust Loan Scheme: Renewable Heat Incentive

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why people in receipt of a Carbon Trust loan are unable to access the Renewable Heat Incentive.

(AQW 28803/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The issue of whether the Carbon Trust Loan Scheme is compatible with the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive is currently being considered by my Department under the RHI dispute resolution procedures. The outcome of the review will be published on the DETI website in due course.

Renewable Heat Incentive: Grants

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given that regulations published for the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive prohibits grant aid but not loans, why applications are being refused from people who have taken out loans.

Mrs Foster: I refer the Member to the answer previously given to AQW 28127/11-15.

In addition, Regulation 23 of the Renewable Heat Incentive Scheme Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 states that systems cannot be accredited under the scheme where a grant from public funds has been paid (or will be paid) or other public support has been provided. Under the regulation "public support" is defined as a financial advantage provided by a public authority.

Moyle Interconnector: Update

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the current status of the Moyle Interconnector.

(AQO 5157/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As a result of a cable fault, the Moyle Interconnector is currently operating at 250 Mega Watts, providing 50% of its normal transfer capacity.

Mutual Energy, owners of the Moyle, are taking forward interim and permanent repair options for the interconnector, and these will be subject to consideration of environmental impacts and other consenting requirements.

It is expected that the Moyle will be restored to full transfer capacity through completion of the interim repair during 2014, with the permanent repair to be completed in 2017.

Fuel Pricing: Groceries Code Adjudicator

Mr Lynch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to confirm whether she had any engagements with the Groceries Code Adjudicator regarding the issue of supermarket fuel pricing, including how it impacts customers locally.

(AQO 5153/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Groceries Code Adjudicator's remit extends to Northern Ireland, however, petrol is one of the products excluded from the provisions of the Groceries Code.

I have written to the Groceries Code Adjudicator seeking a meeting but have not yet had a reply.

Energy: Tariff Increases

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps she will take to help mitigate the effects of the recently announced increase in energy prices on vulnerable households.

(AQO 5154/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am, of course, concerned about any increases in energy tariffs and particularly the impact these have on our business, domestic and vulnerable consumers. Hence my Department works with the Regulator and the energy sector to improve competition and provide options for consumers to reduce bills by, for example, switching supplier.

There are now a number of active suppliers in the domestic electricity market in Northern Ireland, and there is competition in the domestic gas market within Greater Belfast. From April 2015, the domestic gas market outside Greater Belfast will also be open to competition.

It is also my intention to give consumers additional energy choice by extending the availability of natural gas to towns in the West and North-West, and to other areas where gas extension is economically viable.

Furthermore, I am working to extend the Renewable Heat Incentive to the domestic sector before Spring of next year and already have a premium payment scheme in place to assist with the capital cost of the transition to renewable forms of heat.

Tourism: European Visitors

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the steps her Department is taking to attract more European visitors.

(AQO 5155/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Mainland Europe is a key market for us.

In order to grow our visitor revenue we need to increase the focus on key European markets and maximize promotion around events and emerging stories in 2014 such as the Giro d'Italia, the Game of Thrones and the Clipper Yacht race as well as our iconic products such as Titanic Belfast and the Giant's Causeway.

In addition we continue to lobby for increased air access from Europe, fund co-operative marketing campaigns with carriers and have agreed a new programme with Tourism Ireland for 2014-2016 to encourage more tour operators to include Northern Ireland in their itineraries.

Going for Growth: Implementation

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on how her Department plans to implement the Food Strategy Board Report: Going for Growth.

(AQO 5156/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Going for Growth contains over one hundred recommendations with responsibility falling to many Executive Departments and associated Agencies, as well as the industry itself.

A draft response to Going for Growth has been prepared for consideration by the Executive. The draft response sets out the actions required by Government to deliver the aims and objectives of Going for Growth, timescales for delivery and potential funding sources.

Subject to Executive endorsement, the actions in the draft response will become fully integrated within the relevant Departments' Strategic and Business Plans. In addition, it is envisaged that the Agri-Food Strategy Board will remain in place until at least early 2015 to advise on implementation of Going for Growth.

DARD and DETI will monitor progress and ensure that the Agri-Food Strategy Board receives regular reports on progress against actions and targets to assist the Board in its oversight role.

Tourist Board: Review

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when the final Tourism Strategy will be published.

(AQO 5158/11-15)

Mrs Foster: A review of the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and wider tourism structures is underway to ensure we have the right structures in place to deliver on my and the industry's aspiration to grow tourism into a £1 billion industry by 2020. I await the outcome of the review to inform future plans.

My focus to date has been on action. 2012 and 2013 have been crucial years for Northern Ireland tourism and my priority has been to deliver on the tourism product, key events and global marketing campaigns to ensure success and bring maximum economic benefit to the local economy.

Green Investment Bank: DETI Funding

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the funding her Department has assisted in drawing down from the Green Investment Bank.

(AQO 5159/11-15)

Mrs Foster: To date the Green Investment Bank (GIB) has committed £20 million funding towards Evermore Renewable Energy to develop a combined heat and power plant in the Port of Londonderry.

Invest NI has been working with the Green Investment Bank to raise awareness and earlier this year held an information session and round table discussion between Green Investment Bank and Northern Ireland companies which may seek to access Green Investment Bank funds.

Any company seeking funding should approach the Green Investment Bank directly.

In addition it has been highlighted that the funding threshold being used by Green Investment Bank may be too high for some of the emerging projects in Northern Ireland. This issue has been raised with senior officials of Green Investment Bank and they have committed to review this situation and to revert to us with possible solutions which may include aggregation and local management of smaller projects to enable them to be funded by Green Investment Bank.

Department of the Environment

South Belfast: Area of Special Advertisement Control

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment whether he would consider implementing 'areas of special advertising control' in locations such as the University area of Belfast, to curtail the widespread misuse of 'to let' signage, whereby letting agents would be required to erect signage that is sympathetic to the character of the area.

(AQW 27967/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Implementation of 'Areas of Special Advertising Control is something I have asked my Department to look at.

While areas of this nature have yet to be introduced in Northern Ireland, the Department currently possesses powers to restrict the display of estate agents' advertisements which otherwise would be granted "deemed consent" by the Regulations. However, before exercising these powers, I would need to be satisfied that removing the "deemed consent" currently available for estate agent signage would not inhibit legitimate commercial activity and would not place unnecessary costs and bureaucratic burdens on businesses and householders.

I am fully aware that there is a proliferation of this type of signage in the University Area and acknowledge that this can have a detrimental impact on amenity. However, in the current economic climate, I wish to be cautious and not unduly undermine support for the business community

In the Department's experience the majority of estate agents display "for sale" and "to let" boards within the parameters set out in the Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations 1992. However, difficulties arise, particularly in areas where properties are in multiple occupation or in flats. In these situations signage can remain in place for a considerable period of time, as boards do not have to be removed until 14 days after all units/rooms are let.

In relation to enforcement, the Planning Office undertook a survey of signage in the Stranmillis Area in April 2013, with follow up action by enforcement staff who wrote to almost 40 estate agents and property owners in April 2013, reminding them of the Regulations and advising them of their responsibilities to remove all signs which were in breach of the regulations. This resulted in the removal of a number of signs.

An extended survey, covering the wider University Area, as defined in the Belfast HMO Subject Plan is currently underway and letters have already issued to estate agents and property owners.

I have asked my officials to update me at regular intervals and also to explore the possibility of co-operative working on this matter with Belfast City Council, ahead of the transfer of planning functions (including the control of advertising) to local authorities.

I will however continue to pursue appropriate enforcement action to reduce the amount of signage and will monitor the situation closely.

Planning Applications: Fair Road, Greencastle, County Down

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on a planning application for an Activity Centre at Fair Road, Greencastle, Kilkeel.

(AQW 28242/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have had the opportunity to visit the site in the company of planning officials. I have taken the time to ensure that all of the issues have been fully considered. and I have concluded that the proposal is acceptable in planning terms. Planning permission has now issued.

Carbon Reduction: Funding for Councils

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what funding options are available for councils wishing to invest in carbon reduction measures.

(AQW 28305/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I, like my predecessor, am fully committed to ensuring that Northern Ireland plays its full part in minimising greenhouse gas emissions and will explore all options which will help us to achieve that aim. However, my Department alone cannot deliver these aims, and I am looking to Executive colleagues and other stakeholders, including local government, to contribute to these objectives.

My Department currently offers a number of funding streams to councils to provide assistance in meeting sustainability and carbon reduction obligations.

Two Rethink Waste funds were launched in May 2010, providing funding to Councils, amongst others, for initiatives which boost waste prevention and recycling in order to meet EU targets. The Rethink Waste (Capital) Fund assists councils to increase levels of recycling by providing funding to cover the capital costs of improving or extending their existing waste collection, re-use and recycling infrastructure. Only Councils and Waste Management Groups can apply for the capital element of the Fund. In the last 4 years nearly £8.9 million has been allocated to capital projects. The Post Project Evaluation (PPE) for 2010/11 shows 6,900 tonnes of carbon savings achieved. PPEs are not available for other years as yet. The Fund will run to 31 March 2015.

Councils may also apply for funding under the Rethink Waste (Revenue) Fund. Applicants can apply for revenue funding for initiatives which will improve resource efficiency and boost waste prevention, recycling and re-use activity. In the last 4 years nearly £1.5 million has been allocated to revenue projects. PPEs are not available yet. The Fund will run to 31 March 2015.

My Department also provides access to a range of EU funding options available to councils wishing to invest in carbon reduction measures through the Barroso Team. Structural funds such as the INTERREG 4A programme are currently being used by a significant number of Northern Ireland councils to support projects such as: Smart Eco Hub, a cross border cluster organisation for the sustainable energy sector; the STEM Project, supporting businesses wishing to implement environmental management systems; and East Border Region, which promotes innovative, cross border economic development in the areas of agriculture, industry, commerce and tourism. Although full details are not yet available, the INTERREG 5A programme is due to commence in 2014 and is expected to continue in the same vein.

Councils may also access a number of EU competitive funding streams which provide grants or loans to eligible projects. An example of this type of funding is the RENEW project, funded through the INTERREG 4B North West Europe programme, whose aim is to deliver innovations for the waste supply chain by promoting the recovery of valuable materials from waste. Belfast City Council and DOE are full partners in this project.

I have been advised by the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment that Councils can reduce overall energy costs and carbon emissions by generating their own power and heat from renewable sources. Renewable electricity is incentivised through the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO) which provides a revenue stream for electricity generated by a range of technologies in the form of Renewables Obligation Certificates (ROCs). In addition to receiving support under the NIRO for all the electricity generated, generators can also sell any unused electricity to the grid.

The Renewable Heat Incentive is a scheme that provides financial incentives for non-domestic generators of renewable heat. Payments are for the lifetime of the technology (to a maximum of 20 years) and are dependent on the amount of heat generated and the size and type of technology. Technologies supported include solar thermal, biomass boilers and ground source heat pumps.

Both incentive mechanisms are designed to cover the additional costs involved in renewable energy technologies as well as providing a rate of return on the investment.

South Antrim: Planning Appeals Commission

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment, in each of the last five years, (i) how many planning applications within South Antrim have had to be reviewed after going to the Planning Appeals Commission; (ii) the total cost; and (iii) the outcome of these decisions.

(AQW 28373/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department routinely reviews all decisions made by the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC).

The Department is currently judicially reviewing the PAC decision on the Easi Park enforcement appeal at Crooked Stone Road, Antrim. This case is currently ongoing and therefore the total cost and outcome are not yet known although it is estimated these will not exceed £10,000.

No other decisions made by the PAC on planning applications or enforcement notices within South Antrim have been judicially reviewed in the last five years.

Easi Park, Crooked Stone Road, Antrim: Planning Appeals Commission

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment how much public money has been spent defending the planning application for Easi Park, Crooked Stone Road, Antrim.

(AQW 28374/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are no planning applications at this site. The legal costs associated with defending a recent appeal to the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) against the Department's Enforcement Notice at Crooked Stone Road (Easi Park), were approximately £7,000.

The other cost to the Department would be in relation to staff costs. However, it is not possible to gauge the number of man hours that can be attributed to an individual case such as this.

Easi Park, Crooked Stone Road, Antrim: Judicial Review

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the estimated cost to his Department of taking a judicial review case against the Planning Appeals Commission's decision on a planning application for the Easi Park, Crooked Stone Road, Antrim.

(AQW 28375/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department is currently judicially reviewing the decision of the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) on an enforcement notice at Easi Park, Crooked Stone Road, Antrim, not on a decision associated with a planning application.

It is estimated that the legal costs associated with the action of the Department to judicially review the decision of the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) in this case should not exceed £10,000.

Taxis: Taxi Act Team/Private Hire Taxi Companies Meetings

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the (i) number of meetings held between the Taxi Act Team and Private Hire Taxi companies, excluding the two largest companies; (ii) dates and times of same; (iii) agenda for each meeting; (iv) attendees, either individually or as representatives; and to place the minutes of the meetings in the Assembly library.

(AQW 28379/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Taxi Act Team has attended 24 meetings with Private Hire Taxi companies, excluding the two largest companies (denoted by number of drivers on respective operator licences) since March 2009. These meetings are in addition to ongoing engagement with taxi operators and other industry stakeholders via phone calls, emails and a number of formal public consultations, as well as supporting the Minister in engagement with industry representatives who asked to meet him.

The table below shows the dates and times of the meetings along with attendees. For data protection reasons it is not possible to list the names of individual industry attendees. In the main, these meetings did not have formal agendas, nor were minutes taken. However, where possible, I have outlined the nature of the topic to be discussed as contained in the industry request to meet. There are two meetings which have formal minutes and these will be placed, as requested, in the Assembly Library.

Councils: Judicial Reviews

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the (i) number of Judicial Reviews applied for by each council, in each of the last two years; (ii) number granted; and (iii) costs per council to date.

(AQW 28380/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The information requested is not held by the Department, and was obtained from individual councils.

The information received from 23 of the 26 councils indicates that there have not been any judicial reviews applied for by any council in each of the last two years. No response was received from North Down Borough Council, Newry and Mourne District Council or Armagh City and District Council.

Taxis: Revoked Licences

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27815/11-15, how many individual taxi depots or depot licence operators these figures represent in each year.

(AQW 28414/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Taxi Operator Licensing was introduced in September 2012. Transitional arrangements provided for the issue of Temporary Licences initially to enable taxi companies to continue to operate their business while the influx of applications for taxi operator licences was processed. Under these transitional arrangements, temporary licences did not include the affiliation of drivers or taxis. Full licences issued subsequently and included these affiliation details.

Therefore, it is not possible to associate revoked taxi driver licences with operators before March 2013.

Environment Agency: Woodland Trust/ObservaTREE

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department's Environment Agency will work in partnership with the Woodland Trust in support of their 'Observatree' initiative.

(AQW 28415/11-15)

Mr Durkan: NIEA works closely with the Woodland Trust to deliver woodland nature conservation across Northern Ireland and regards the Observatree initiative as an important means to engage the public with emerging plant health issues through the mechanism of citizen science.

NIEA will continue to support the Woodland Trust in order that it can deliver the Observatree initiative. In this regard Mr Patrick Cregg, the Woodland Trust Director for Northern Ireland, gave a presentation to Agency staff on 30th September 2013 in which he described the Observatree initiative as a key future priority for his organisation.

A meeting took place between Government Officials and the Woodland Trust on 9th October 2013 at which the Observatree initiative was discussed. An official from the Woodland Trust briefed those present on how they intended to implement the initiative in Northern Ireland and asked for the support of all present.

NIEA will continue to work with DARD Forest Service, DARD Plant Health, The Woodland Trust and other NGOs involved in the initiative to further all aspects of tree health in Northern Ireland.

Road Safety: Driving and Mobile Phones

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment what his Department is doing to highlight the dangers of mobile phone use whilst driving.

(AQW 28417/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety, and within the context of the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy, does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, including road safety public information campaigns and education programmes.

My Department has a number of on-going activities to highlight the dangers of using a mobile phone whilst driving. Action Measure 104 in the Road Safety Strategy sets out: "We will educate and inform people about the dangers of using any mobile phone while driving, including hands free kits."

DOE's hard-hitting campaign addressing driver carelessness and inattention, entitled "Moment", dramatises several circumstances where the driver is distracted; with the final scenario showing a driver checking his text, with fatal consequences. The core message is "One Lapse Can Last a Lifetime" and is underpinned by the law: "If you kill someone through careless driving, you could go to prison for up to five years." This campaign runs regularly and was recently aired in September.

This "Moment" campaign was recently re-edited to concentrate solely on the dangers of using a mobile phone whilst driving; with the added warning "You are one call away from being a killer." This first ran during the summer and has been incorporated into my Department's portfolio of road safety campaigns.

My Department has a suite of messages that make up its 'Crashed Lives' campaign. These consist of real-life accounts and include the story of 'Shannan' as told by her bereaved parents. Shannan died just a few months after passing her driving test and her story refers to speeding and mobile phone use. Shannan's story will run on television again during December, alongside other real-life accounts in the 'Crashed Lives' suite of ads.

Shannan's story has also recently been developed into an education pack, part of a 'Crashed Futures' package, for post-primary schools and youth organisations. This education pack focuses heavily on the consequences of using a mobile phone and speeding while driving, and is both poignant and hard-hitting. This pack is also aimed at pre-drivers or those who have recently past their test.

My Department has also developed the "Moment" campaign into an education pack which focuses on the dangers and consequences of using a mobile phone whilst driving. The message here highlights the real danger of killing someone whilst distracted by a mobile phone, and explains the vigorous police investigation which follows a serious collision. Subsequently, the audience is also provided with a glimpse of life in a Young Offenders Centre, where young drivers would end up should they be found guilty of causing death by careless driving through the use of a mobile phone. This education pack is currently being piloted and will be ready to roll out to schools Northern Ireland wide in the coming months.

In DOE's recent advertisement, 'Excuses', launched last year, the need for wider road user responsibility is highlighted. The key message is that over 95% of crashes where someone is killed or seriously injured are due to human error. The ad depicts several tragic scenarios along with common excuses used by drivers and riders. In one scene the danger of using a mobile phone is referenced when the seriously injured victim recalls the driver's excuse as "The driver said he thought the text was important." This campaign is underpinned by the strap line "Kill the Excuses. It's no Accident!"

In early November, a new leaflet was completed which explains the dangers of using a mobile phone whilst driving and the consequences. The messages contained in the advertisements are supported by the advice in the Highway Code and clearly explain the dangers of such a distraction. The leaflet is available on request from DOE and to download online from NI Direct.

DOE also continues to support Allstate NI's 'X the Txt' programme which is delivered in over 30 schools across Northern Ireland each year. Supported by DOE and PSNI, 'X the Txt' is one of Allstate's Corporate Responsibility initiatives and the messages delivered are consistent DOE's messaging.

Advice on the use of mobile phones and in-vehicle technology is provided in the Highway Code under rule 149.

Research shows that driver carelessness and inattention is the biggest cause of road casualties in Northern Ireland; this includes using a mobile phone whilst driving. With this in mind, these activities play a part in our ambition of working towards zero road deaths in Northern Ireland.

This aspiration means that we do not accept that anyone should ever die on our roads; and the above initiatives support this by encouraging the community to adopt safer behaviours on the roads by not using a mobile phone whilst driving. All road users can sign up to a pledge supporting this at www.sharetheroadtozero.com

I recognise the continuing challenges of mobile phone use whilst driving and as such my Department will continue to address the issue through various activities.

Councils: Minority Groups

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will make local councils aware, prior to the new councils becoming operational, of the need to take account of minority groups when taking controversial or sensitive decisions which will be subject to a minority threshold vote in the new councils.

(AQW 28418/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Local Government Bill contains provisions for the protection of minority interests. It introduces a call-in procedure whereby 15% of the members of a council can request the reconsideration of a decision, or committee recommendation, either on the grounds of alleged procedural deficiencies, or that it would have a disproportionate adverse impact on a section of the community in the local government district. The Bill also introduces qualified majority voting whereby certain council decisions, to be specified in subordinate legislation, will have to be passed by 80% of the members present and voting – this will include where the adverse impact call-in has been used.

I intend, subject to the agreement of the Assembly, to apply these provisions to the incoming councils, during the shadow period. I am also ensuring that training on the operation of the new governance arrangements, including the call-in procedures, is provided to elected members, council officers and staff transferring from Executive departments and all other organisations, is provided to during the shadow period prior to the councils taking up their full range of responsibilities on 1 April 2015.

This will ensure that the ability to request the reconsideration of a decision, on the grounds of adverse impact on a minority community, and the qualified majority vote mechanism will be available to the new councils in advance of them becoming fully operational on 1 April 2015.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27856/11-15, how many test cases took place in this particular instance, including any issues of touting or plying for trade by private hire taxis.

(AQW 28436/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 23 August, four private hire taxis were used by Driver and Vehicle Agency staff in order to gain a better understanding of the issues raised by Belfast public hire taxi representatives in respect of the provision of taxi services at Ravenhill rugby ground.

The purpose of the test purchases was to assess the manner in which taxi services were being delivered to inform the Department's consideration as to whether the services provided were compliant with the current tax legislation. The issue of touting or plying for trade was considered and legal clarification and advice sought from the Departmental Solicitors' Office. It was determined that the arrangements at that time at Ravenhill rugby ground did not constitute touting or plying for trade.

Taxis: Wheelchair Users

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27214/11-15, and in respect of service users with a disability and their representative organisations, (i) what concerns were expressed regarding Private Hire taxis operators charging enhanced fares for wheelchair access passengers compared to non-wheelchair access passengers; and (ii) whether this practice is a breach the Disability Discrimination Act.

(AQW 28439/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since the outset of the review of the Northern Ireland taxi industry in 2005 representative groups for wheelchair users have raised the issue of the over-charging of the people they represent. This has also been an issue that the Equality Commission has raised with the Department and addressed with taxi operators.

The Equality Commission has advised that DDA legislation makes it unlawful for organisations such as transport service providers, including taxi operators, to discriminate against disabled people in the way in which they provide or do not provide their services. For instance, a taxi operator is not permitted to charge a wheelchair user more than a non-wheelchair user for the use of an accessible 7-seat taxi. However, if the operator charges more for the use of a 7-seat taxi regardless of whether the person is a wheelchair user, then this would not be deemed as less favourable treatment and is, therefore, not discriminatory.

You will wish to note that, upon the introduction of Regulations around the maximum taxi fare and taximeters in Northern Ireland, this position will improve. Firstly, the Regulations will make it an offence to charge more than the maximum fare, irrespective of what type of vehicle is being used. Secondly, given the requirement for all taxis in Northern Ireland to provide the customer with a printed receipt, all wheelchair users will be in a much better position to challenge instances of over-charging as they will have first hand evidence of the total price being levied.

It is intended that these measures will help reduce the likelihood of the overcharging of all users and allow action to be taken against the driver and their operator if this were to occur.

Planning Applications: Wind Turbines/Farms

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 22405/11-15, (i) how many of the applications in North Antrim have been approved; (ii) how this compares with the percentage passed in Northern Ireland; and (iii) to explain the rationale for any differential in these approval rates.

(AQW 28445/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Table 1 below provides figures for the number of approved applications between 2008/09 and 31 August 2013 in the North Antrim parliamentary constituency and for Northern Ireland as a whole, broken down to single wind turbines and wind farms.

While approval rates between the two areas are broadly similar, percentages based on a small number of cases, as in the case of North Antrim approval rates, are prone to significant random fluctuations. This makes it difficult to reach any firm conclusions when comparing with other more robust rates, such as at the approval rates at Northern Ireland level.

Mineral Extraction/Waste Disposal: Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, in light of the news of the dumping of toxic waste from the British Oxygen Company around Lettershandoney village, County Londonderry, whether (i) any such sites exist in the (a) Mobuoy Road; (b) Fincairn Road; or (c) Rosstown Road areas; (ii) whether the mineral extraction and dumping which has taken place at Mobuoy Road has impacted on, or disturbed, any such sites; and (iii) whether he intends to order an assessment of the health risks to local residents and the wider population of Derry whose water supply is abstracted downstream of this area. (AQW 28461/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In 1996, a very detailed survey and assessment was carried out on behalf of the Department by an environmental consultancy group, ENTEC, on all known and potential BOC (British Oxygen Company) tarry waste disposal sites, comprising 29 sites in total. Of these 29 suspected sites, the presence of waste was confirmed at ten sites. This included two confirmed sites at Mobuoy Road and one confirmed site at Rosstown Road. There is one unconfirmed site at Fincairn Road (referred to as Fincairn Glen in the report). These sites are at the specific locations highlighted in the question.

Two tarry waste disposal sites are confirmed to be present on the Mobuoy Road, one is located at a waste management facility (closed landfill) and the other at a sandpit area. This material will have been disposed at these locations during the period of 1967 – 1973 when acetylene was produced by BOC at its Maydown plant.

My Department has no evidence to suggest that the mineral extraction and waste disposal activities have impacted or disturbed either of the Mobuoy Road tarry waste sites.

On the third point in this question, I have asked Derry City Council, as the statutory body for Environmental Health to undertake a review of the tarry waste disposal sites within its jurisdiction including site inspections to detect any statutory nuisances prejudicial to health.

This review will take account of the risk assessments and recommendations for each site in the 1996 ENTEC report and provide information regarding potential risks and the risk management actions taken and/or required. It will consider the water supplies for the area taking into account any potential contaminant pathways from the tarry waste pits. My Department, through NIEA, is committed to working with the Council, the Public Health Agency and others to determine if there any current risks to health and the wider environment.

Mineral Extraction: Environmental Impact Assessment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27976/11-15, whether subsequent enforcement proceedings initiated against the site affected by withdrawn retrospective planning application A/2009/0400/F, included an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) screening, as required by Regulation 22 of the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1999; and whether that EIA screening was positive or negative. (AQW 28462/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Subsequent enforcement proceedings initiated against the site affected by A/2009/0400/F, in accordance with Regulation 22 of The Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (NI) 1999 were subject to an EIA determination before an Enforcement Notice was issued and it was determined that the unauthorised development was EIA Development (Positive).

Pursuant to Regulation 22(2) the Enforcement Notice was accompanied by a Notice, referred to as a Regulation 22 Notice.

Planning Permission: Extant

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to define, in regard to the extraction and processing of minerals, what his Department considers an extant planning permission. (AQW 28465/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An extant planning permission is any planning permission which is still in existence ie has not expired.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27856/11-15, and in view of his Department's legal position on the provision of taxis prior and subsequent to the specified date and location deeming it compliant, to provide (i) the dates and times of all meetings, correspondence and communication with legal advisors; and (ii) copies of all legal advice requested and received.

(AQW 28485/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As a result of Departmental operational activity, officials sought and received legal advice on the operation of taxi services around Ravenhill Rugby Ground. As a result, it was determined that those services fell within the relevant legislation and therefore no offences were being committed.

The concept of legal professional privilege safeguards the rights of a person or organisation, including the Department, to obtain legal advice on a confidential basis and not to disclose such information in the interests of the wider administration of justice. It has been the settled view that in this context, legal advice is not disclosed and that privilege applies to the information sought in parts (i) and (ii) of the questions. The Department is, therefore, unwilling to waive the legal professional privilege vested in it, and provide the information sought.

Taxis: Fixed Penalty Notices

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27263/11-15, whether there is a cap on the number of Fixed Penalty Notices any one Private Hire Taxi driver or operative can receive before enhanced penalties are imposed, or court action instigated.

(AQW 28486/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver and Vehicle Agency's operational policy and guidance determines that a maximum of three Fixed Penalty Notices can be issued to a driver per encounter but only one of those can be for an endorsable offence. However, there is no cap on the number of Fixed Penalty Notices that can be issued to any one driver based on multiple encounters with enforcement staff. Prosecution files are generally reserved for more serious offences which cannot be dealt with by means of a Fixed Penalty Notice.

A holder of a taxi driver licence is required to be a fit and proper person to hold such a licence. While this requirement is not defined in law, the Department can review a taxi driver's conduct at any time and does so when a first application or application to renew a taxi driver licence is received. The imposition of an excessive number of fixed penalties would be one factor that could be taken into account when assessing fitness to hold a licence.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Advanced Certificate in Investigative Practice

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27716/11-15, to provide a copy of the relevant training module in respect of Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement staff carrying out duties to detect illegal activities of taxi operators.

(AQW 28487/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The accredited 'Advanced Certificate in Investigative Practice' is designed to give staff, with an investigative role, the necessary knowledge and skills to competently carrying out their duties.

The certificate is modular based and the modules entitled 'Law, Evidence, Procedure and Best Practice' and 'Advanced Statement/Report writing' provide formal training to enforcement officers in gathering and submitting evidence to support investigations.

A copy of the brochure detailing the 'Advanced Certificate in Investigative Practice' has been placed in the Assembly Library.

Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008: Phased Implementation

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment on what evidence he based his decision to bring forward a staggered implementation of the Taxis Act.

(AQW 28499/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In June 2013 the Environment Committee indicated that they shared my predecessor's desire to implement in September 2014 the remaining elements of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008, with the suite of changes coming into operation together, as a cohesive and coordinated package.

I asked for a series of meetings with industry representatives and consumer organisations in October, during which I was able to explore the issues surrounding implementation of the legislation on the various elements of the taxi industry.

Whilst keenly aware of the concerns of the industry, I am also conscious of the need to modernise and streamline the Northern Ireland taxi industry and the Environment Committee's expressed desire to see the new legislation operative as soon as possible.

Having listened to key stakeholders and taken the views of the Committee, I decided that a partially phased approach strikes the correct balance, being mindful of the benefits the changes will bring, alongside the additional costs being placed on taxi operators. This decision will effectively stagger the cost impacts over an 18 month period whilst still creating the overarching legislative framework on time.

Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008: Implementation Costs

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department has taken to inform the taxi industry of the cost implications of the Taxis Act, since work began on the legislation.

(AQW 28500/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My officials have undertaken extensive engagement with taxi industry stakeholders since the initial review in 2005, including hosting roadshows around Northern Ireland, as it was recognised that the proposed changes would result in significant changes for the industry. Each consultation on the various aspects of the taxi reform programme contained, and sought comments on, a partial Regulatory Impact Assessment of the impact of the policy options in terms of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposals. Each of the consultations has been publicised widely in the taxi industry.

As the detailed outworkings of the new suite of Regulations have become clearer in the last 12 months, the Department has been working to mitigate the impact of these costs to the industry.

I acknowledge the importance of continued effective communication within the industry around all aspects of the implementation of the Act. The communication group which the Department has established as part of the implementation of the Taxis Act programme has been charged with planning the key messages required to be delivered to both the taxi industry and to the general public. The timing of all communication will be determined to ensure all stakeholders have the information they need in time to prepare for the changes.

Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008: Phased Implementation

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment what assurances he can give that Single Tier Licensing will not be included in the staggered implementation of the Taxis Act and that it will come into effect in September 2014.

(AQW 28501/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since taking office, I have met with a range of taxi industry stakeholders and from those discussions, and engagement with the Environment Committee, decided on the staggered implementation of a number of specific elements in the taxi reform programme with the aim of spreading the financial impact of the measures on the taxi industry in the prevailing economic climate.

The key change from a system with two regulatory frameworks, private hire and public hire, to a system with a single regulatory framework in which all taxis will be included, and which allows all taxis to ply for hire, is a core strand of the programme and, as such, the timing of its introduction will not be affected.

My Department is working to ensure that the necessary legislation will be made and operative in September 2014 as planned.

Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008: Phased Implementation

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment, given that the full implementation of the Taxis Act seeks to provide a safe, fair and fit for purpose taxi industry, what investigations have been undertaken to discover the detrimental impact on consumers of further delays due to staggered implementation of the Act.

(AQW 28502/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I fully acknowledge that prompt implementation of the remainder of the provisions of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 will help provide a safe, fair and fit for purpose taxi industry and that is why I have continued with my predecessor's commitment to have the legislation in place in September 2014.

However, having listened to stakeholders since taking office, I have decided that a partially phased approach strikes the correct balance, being mindful of the benefits the changes will bring, alongside the additional costs being placed on taxi operators. I have listened carefully to representatives of consumer and disability groups in determining how to bring forward a timetable that strikes an appropriate balance; the representatives indicated to me that they understand the need for a balance, and are content with the proposals I have brought forward.

Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008: Communication

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department will take to inform the public when sections of the Taxis Act will be implemented, in order to avoid confusion among consumers.

(AQW 28503/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I acknowledge the importance of continued effective communication within the industry and to the public around all aspects of the implementation of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008.

As part of the implementation of the Taxis Act programme, a communication group has been established within my Department. This group has been charged with planning the key messages required to be delivered to both the taxi industry and to the general public. The timing of all communications will be determined so as to ensure all stakeholders have the information they need in time to prepare for the changes and to avoid confusion.

Taxis: Bus Lanes

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with the Minister for Regional Development on the (i) implementation of Single Tier Licensing; and (ii) necessity of an 'all in or all out' policy for taxis in bus lanes to ensure the avoidance of confusion among consumers.

(AQW 28504/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have not yet had the opportunity to discuss issues around taxis and bus lanes with Minister Kennedy since taking office. I have, however, requested a meeting and expect it to take place within the next few weeks, and the issues you have raised are likely to be on the agenda.

Taxis: Roof Signs

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of the Environment why some self-employed taxi drivers who have a valid operator licence, but sub-contract to larger firms, cannot operate unless they remove the illuminated roof signs of the sub-contracted company.

(AQW 28548/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Public Service Vehicles (Conditions and Fitness, Equipment and Use) Regulations 1995, Regulation 51, prescribes the requirements for Taxi Roof Signs.

The licensee or driver of every taxi used in standing or plying for hire or carrying passengers for hire must display a compliant roof sign on the roof of the taxi.

One of the aims of Taxi Operator Licensing is to make the link between the consumer's experience and the responsible operator stronger and more visible. To ensure that this link is realised it is important that we do not expect consumers to travel in a taxi with a roof-sign that does not reflect the operator with whom the journey is being taken.

It could be construed as misleading if a self-employed taxi driver carries a passenger under their own operator's licence whilst displaying the roof-sign of a different operator.

Therefore, where a person is trading under their own Taxi Operators Licence they must display their own trading name or the word taxi on the front of the sign and a phone number or the word taxi on the rear of the sign.

Where DVA Enforcement detect a taxi with a non compliant roof sign a number of sanctions are available ranging from advice and warning for a first minor non compliance to issuing a defect notice or a fixed penalty for repeated or blatant non compliance.

Planning Applications: Letters of Withdrawal

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27976/11-15, whether his Department acted lawfully in issuing formal letters of withdrawal on retrospective planning application A/2009/0400/F on 28 June 2010.

(AQW 28600/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As I confirmed in my previous answer the legal status of the application is that it is deemed refused. The withdrawal letters issued in June 2010 have no effect on that status.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Civil Service: DFP Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many Civil Service posts existed in his Department on 1 January 2012 and 1 January 2013 at (i) Administrative Assistant; (ii) Administrative Officer; (iii) Executive Officer 2; (iv) Executive Officer 1; (v) Staff Officer; (vi) Deputy Principal; (vii) Grade 7; and (viii) Grade 6 levels, broken down by local council area.

(AQW 27954/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The table below details the information as at 1 January 2012 and excludes staff on a career break.

Peace III: Pettigo/Tullyhommon/Termon Project

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel in relation to the PEACE III Pettigo Tullyhommon Termon Project, to detail (i) the total amount spent on the project; (ii) whether any of the work commissioned remains unfinished; and to provide (iii) an itemised breakdown of how the funds were allocated.

(AQW 28054/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The total PEACE III funding allocated to the Pettigo Tullyhommon Termon project is €8,123,841, as broken down in the following table:

Budget Item	Total Grant (€)
Capital costs	7,066,813

Budget Item	Total Grant (€)
Salaries and Wages	338,633
Goods and Services	76,538
Programme Costs	641,857

The total amount spent on the project to 31 October 2013 is €4,122,610. A number of elements supported in the allocated funding are yet to be completed.

Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal: Complaints

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel who has authority to investigate a complaint made against the Secretary to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal.

(AQW 28179/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel does not have a direct role in complaints made against any member of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal. The Law Society of Northern Ireland has authority to consider a complaint against the Secretary if the complaint relates to conduct which as a solicitor is alleged to bring the solicitors' profession into disrepute. The Department also understands that a complaint in relation to how the Secretary discharges his or her duties can be made to the President of the Tribunal.

Law Society: Complaints

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel who has authority to investigate a formal complaint made by a solicitor and member of the Law Society against the Chief Executive and Deputy Chief Executive of the Law Society,

(AQW 28180/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department understands that the Chief Executive of the Law Society has the authority to determine a formal complaint made by a solicitor and member of the Law Society about a member of the senior management team, including the Deputy Chief Executive.

In relation to a complaint made against the Chief Executive, the Department also understands that the Law Society has in place a process under which the President of the Society investigates and determines any complaint made against the Chief Executive.

Legal Profession: Complaints

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of whether the Chief Executive and Deputy Chief Executive of the Law Society as well as the Secretariat to the Solicitors' Disciplinary Tribunal not being accountable to investigation, following formal complaints identified by their membership, undermines transparency and is not in the interest of continued self-regulation of the legal profession.

(AQW 28181/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department understands that both the Chief Executive and Deputy Chief Executive of the Law Society are accountable to investigation by the Law Society by way of internal processes governed ultimately by the Law Society Council.

The Department further understands that the Secretary to the Tribunal is accountable to that Tribunal and may also be accountable to the Law Society as a member of the solicitors' branch of the legal profession in relation to his or her conduct.

In relation to the broader question of self-regulation of the legal profession, the Department is now consulting on a draft Legal Complaints and Regulation Bill with a view to bringing legislation for consideration by the Assembly. The Department will consider carefully all submissions regarding the regulatory framework for the legal profession.

Public Contracts: Zero Hours

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of employees that are on zero hour contracts arising from public contracts and public expenditure.

(AQW 28192/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am unable to answer this question as DFP does not hold the information.

Economic Inactivity: Constituencies

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the economic inactivity rate for those aged 16-64, broken down by constituency area.

(AQW 28245/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Estimates of the numbers of economically inactive by Northern Ireland (NI) Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA) are sourced from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) Local Area Database, with the most recent data available for January – December 2012. These estimates are based on the residency of an individual.

Please note that LFS estimates at PCA level are based on relatively small sample sizes and are subject to a higher degree of sampling variability than for NI level results.

The requested breakdown of economic inactivity by PCA is shown in Table 1 overleaf.

Table 1: Economic Inactivity Rate by Parliamentary Constituency Area, January – December 2012

Parliamentary Constituency Area	Economic Inactivity Rate % of 16-64 Population

Ballymena/Ballymoney/Ballycastle: Vacant Non-domestic Properties

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) how many business premises are currently vacant in (a) Ballymena; (b) Ballymoney; and (c) Ballycastle; and (ii) how many premises in each of these towns are occupied by charities with rates exemption.

(AQW 28281/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information is collated at district council and ward area level.

The numbers of vacant non-domestic properties in (a) Ballymena, (b) Ballymoney and (c) Moyle District Council areas at 31st October 2013 are (a) 495, (b) 212 and (c) 109 respectively.

Information for part (ii) is not available in the form requested. The numbers of non-domestic properties granted some element of rate exemption in (a) Ballymena, (b) Ballymoney and (c) Moyle District Council areas at 31st October 2013 are (a) 380, (b) 190, and (c) 176 respectively. These include churches, halls and some local authority properties which are for public use.

Ballymena/Ballymoney/Moyle Councils: Vacant Domestic Properties

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of vacant domestic properties, based on rating records, in the (i) Ballymena Borough Council; (ii) Ballymoney Borough Council; and (iii) Moyle District Council areas.

(AQW 28283/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: At 30th September 2013 a total of (i) 708, (ii) 396 and (iii) 460 domestic dwellings in the respective council areas of Ballymena Borough, Ballymoney Borough and Moyle District were recorded as vacant.

Public Sector Jobs: Constituencies

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of public sector jobs broken down by constituency. (AQW 28286/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The table attached details the total number of employee jobs in the public sector, broken down by each Parliamentary Constituency. The figures refer to the number of employee jobs at the 3rd September 2012.

Table 1: Northern Ireland Employee Jobs by Parliamentary Constituency Area

Parliamentary Constituency	Public Sector Employee Jobs
Belfast East	17,153
Belfast North	14,759
Belfast South	35,662
Belfast West	15,272

Government Properties: Energy Performance Operational Rating

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of properties within the government estate that fall within each category of the Energy Performance Operational Rating from A-G; and (ii) the properties that are rated (a) G, (b) F and (c) E.

(AQW 28308/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel manages 88 office accommodation properties which have Energy Performance Operational Rating.

Other NICS Departments manage their own specialised accommodation. I would advise the Member to contact each Department for relevant energy ratings.

In response to (i), the number of properties within each category is given in brackets after each rating: B(3), C(22), D(46), E(13), F(4) and G(0).

In response to (ii), the properties rated in categories E, F and G are named below:

E rating

- Banbridge Crown Building;
- Boaz House, Omagh;
- Castle Court (SSA), Belfast;
- Clare House, Belfast;
- Coleraine County Hall;
- Dungannon Crown Buildings;
- Falls Road SSA;
- Goodwood House, Belfast;
- Kilkeel Crown Building;
- Omagh County Hall;
- Omagh Crown Building;
- Rosepark House; and

- Strabane Crown Building.

F rating

- Craigantlet Buildings, Belfast;
- Marlborough House, Craigavon;
- Road Transport Licensing Division, Belfast; and
- Roads Service Office (Enniskillen at Castle Barracks)

Business: Turnover less than £500,000

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of businesses that have an annual turnover of less than £500,000 and/or employ fewer than fifty people; and (ii) the location of the sales and exports of these businesses, including the value and proportion of trade.

(AQW 28312/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: At March 2012 there were 69,275 Northern Ireland businesses which were either VAT registered or operating a PAYE scheme, with an annual turnover of less than £500,000 and/or employed fewer than fifty people.

Comprehensive information relating to the location of the sales and exports of these businesses is not available. However, information relating to the estimated value and location of sales for such businesses in the manufacturing sector only is provided in Table 1.

Information on the total value of tradable services exports from such companies in (i) Construction (ii) Manufacturing and (iii) a "High Export Potential" group is provided in Table 2. Broad destination data is available for the latter group only.

Table 1: Broad destination sales and percentage of total sales from Northern Ireland manufacturing businesses with fewer than 50 employees or with turnover less than £500,000 in 2011/12

	Value of Sales (£m)	% of sales
Total Sales	2,841	100.0
NI Sales	1,500	52.8
GB Sales	576	20.3

Employment: EU Nationals

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people currently employed are EU Nationals, excluding British Nationals.

(AQW 28335/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There were an estimated 1 39,000 EU nationals (excluding British Nationals) aged 16 and over in employment in Northern Ireland, based on respondents' reported nationality in the July - September 2013 Labour Force Survey (LFS), conducted by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA).

1 Since the LFS is a sample survey, these estimates are subject to sampling variation.

Forensic Science Northern Ireland: Procurement

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the requirements placed on Forensic Service Northern Ireland for open and competitive tendering for external service provision, post-devolution of Policing and Justice powers.

(AQW 28383/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Forensic Science Northern Ireland is subject to the Executive's Northern Ireland Public Procurement Policy. It is required to carry out all procurement in line with this policy which is based on twelve guiding principles. These include Competitive Supply, which provides that procurement should be carried out by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary, and Transparency which requires public bodies to ensure openness and clarity on procurement policy and its delivery.

The policy also requires departments and their sponsored bodies to carry out their procurement activities by means of a documented service level agreement (SLA) with a Centre of Procurement Expertise. The Department of Justice has an SLA with Central Procurement Directorate.

Business: Vacant Non-domestic Properties

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the vacancy rates in business premises in each of the largest thirty towns, broken down by percentage.

(AQW 28424/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The information requested is not available.

Employment: EU Nationals

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQO 4979/11-15, how many of the European Union Nationals in employment were born outside the United Kingdom.

(AQW 28427/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In Northern Ireland there were an estimated 1 57,000 EU nationals aged 16 and over in employment that were born outside of the UK, based on respondents' reported nationality and country of birth in the July - September 2013 Labour Force Survey (LFS), conducted by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA).

1 Since the LFS is a sample survey, these estimates are subject to sampling variation.

Senior Civil Service: Gender Breakdown

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide a gender breakdown of senior civil servants.

(AQW 28429/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There are 215 substantive senior civil servants, of whom 136 are male and 79 are female.

Rating of Empty Homes: Sunset Park, Portstewart

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail any rating payments that have been made in respect of the vacant properties at Sunset Park, Portstewart since the rating of empty homes became operational in October 2011.

(AQW 28437/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There have been no rating payments made in respect of the vacant properties at Sunset Park, Portstewart, since the Rating of Empty Homes policy became operational in October 2011.

Salaries: Company Directors

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the average salary for company directors; and (ii) comparable information for Britain and the Republic of Ireland, for the most recent five years for which data is available.

(AQW 28441/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information on average salary for Corporate Managers and Directors in the private sector in Northern Ireland and the UK is provided in the attached table, from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) conducted by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA).

The information provided uses the Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) for all Corporate Managers and Directors. It is not possible to disaggregate this information further to provide separate estimates for company directors due to sample size constraints in the ASHE.

Comparable information is not available for the Republic of Ireland.

Table: Median¹ Annual Gross pay for all² private sector Corporate Managers and Directors³ - 2008-2012

Year	Northern Ireland (£)	United Kingdom (£)
2008	28,010	37,056
2009	28,795	37,443
2010	27,544	37,583
2011	28,434	37,000
2012	28,921	38,242

Source: Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE)⁴

- 1 The median is the value of earnings below which 50% of employees fall.
- 2 Employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence.
- 3 Job description is based on Standard Occupational Classification code 11. This definition changed from 'Corporate Managers' for 2008-2010 to 'Corporate Managers and Directors' for 2011-2012.
- 4 The ASHE is based on a 1% sample of employee jobs taken from HM Revenue and Customs pay as you earn (PAYE) records and the reported estimates therefore have an associated degree of sampling error.

Note: The heavy black line in the table indicates discontinuities arising from methodological changes and care should be taken when making comparisons between such periods (see background notes in http://www.detini.gov.uk/northern_ireland_ashe_2012_bulletin-revised_22-11-12.pdf).

Senior Civil Service: Cars

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number and make of the cars available for use by senior civil servants; (ii) the annual cost; and (iii) the conditions upon which the cars are made available.
(AQW 28442/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Each department is responsible for the management of their own cars for official use.

The Department of Finance and Personnel has two Skoda Superb cars for official use. When not required for Ministerial business, cars are available for other Departmental use including the transport of officials. It is not possible to disaggregate these costs from normal Ministerial use.

Autism: DFP Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.
(AQW 28513/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department has not made any specific provision within DFP buildings in regard to receiving visitors diagnosed with autism.

Narrow Water Bridge: DPF Meetings

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of meetings; and (ii) attendees at the meetings to discuss funding for the Narrow Water Bridge project.
(AQW 28531/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have not had any meetings with either Ministers, or officials, to discuss funding for the Narrow Water Bridge project.

G8 Summit: Expenditure

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide a full breakdown on all expenditure incurred as a result of the G8 Summit taking place in Fermanagh, broken down by (i) department; (ii) arm's length body; and the purpose of the spend.
(AQW 28559/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department does not hold information on all expenditure incurred in respect of the G8 event. Detail on actual spend incurred by the NI Executive should be requested from the relevant departments involved with delivering the G8 Summit.

Special EU Programmes Body: Religious Background of Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of staff employed by the Special EU Programmes Body, broken down by religion.

(AQW 28563/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The religious background of staff currently employed by the Special EU Programmes body is:

Protestant	19
Roman Catholic	33
Other	3

These figures apply only to staff employed in the SEUPB's Belfast and Omagh offices. The SEUPB is not legislatively required to monitor the community background of staff employed in its Monaghan office.

Grocery Stores: Figures

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of grocery shops broken down by council area in each of the last fifteen years.

(AQW 28621/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The number of grocery stores for Northern Ireland and each Local Government District, in September of each year from 2006 to 2013, is the attached table.

This data has been sourced from the Inter-Departmental Business Register (IDBR). The IDBR contains information on all businesses in the United Kingdom which are either VAT registered or operating a PAYE scheme.

IDBR data is only available by Local Government District for the last 8 years.

Table: Number of Grocery Stores in Northern Ireland by Local Government District, September 2006 –September 2013

Home Civil Service/Northern Ireland Civil Service: Salaries

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the salary of Administrative Officers in the Northern Ireland Civil Service; and (ii) the salary of the equivalent Officers in the Home Civil Service in Great Britain, working outside Greater London.

(AQW 28778/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This information is available in the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency's statistical bulletin entitled: Pay Statistics for the Northern Ireland Civil Service 2012: http://www.nisra.gov.uk/publications/Pay_Statistics_for_the_NICS_2012.pdf.

The next pay bulletin is expected in December.

Home Civil Service/Northern Ireland Civil Service: Salaries

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the salary of Principals in the Northern Ireland Civil Service; and (ii) the salary of the equivalent grade in the Home Civil Service in Great Britain, working outside Greater London.

(AQW 28779/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This information is available in the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency's statistical bulletin entitled: Pay Statistics for the Northern Ireland Civil Service 2012: http://www.nisra.gov.uk/publications/Pay_Statistics_for_the_NICS_2012.pdf.

The next pay bulletin is expected in December.

Executive: Cash Reserve

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline any discussions he has held with his UK and Welsh counterparts concerning the idea of a "cash reserve" for the Northern Ireland Executive, similar to that announced for the Welsh Assembly Government by the UK Government on 18 November 2013.

(AQW 28780/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The concept of the Welsh cash reserve is to provide a mechanism to manage the volatility of any new devolved tax revenue streams. The flexibility for the NI Executive to save surplus revenues in a cash reserve is, therefore, one of the options that will need to be considered should responsibility for corporation tax be devolved.

Although the impact on the Block Grant of a devolved and reduced rate of corporation tax was examined at a high level by the Joint Ministerial Working Group on Rebalancing the NI Economy, I have not yet had any detailed discussions on specific mechanisms to manage volatility. Detailed discussions will only take place once there is a greater clarity on the expected design of a devolved corporation tax regime and the UK Government has made its decision on whether to transfer responsibility for the tax.

Welfare Reform Bill: Financial Penalties

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the financial position in January 2014, following comments by the Minister of State, Mike Penning MP, regarding imminent reductions of £5 million per month from the block grant while welfare reform legislation remains unresolved.

(AQW 28846/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am increasingly alarmed by the ongoing delay in moving forward the Northern Ireland Welfare Reform Bill. Indeed, I met with the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 18th November where he reinforced his intention to impose penalties should the Northern Ireland Executive and Assembly not progress the Welfare Reform Bill.

It is now critical that the Welfare Reform Bill is progressed. Failure to do so will have grave financial consequences for the Northern Ireland Executive both in this financial year and beyond. Without progress in the Welfare Reform Bill in this financial year, the Executive would be faced with a £15 million pressure in its January Monitoring Round. This would be to the detriment of public services here.

Barnett Consequentials

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the Barnett consequentials which follow as a result of the spending by the UK Department of Education in England on the Lessons from Auschwitz programme.
(AQW 28927/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Barnett Formula ensures the Northern Ireland Executive receives a population-based proportion of changes in planned spending on comparable Government services in England, England and Wales or Great Britain as appropriate.

This means that the Northern Ireland administration would have received Barnett consequentials associated with allocations to the Department of Education in England in past UK Spending Reviews. Importantly, funding allocated through the Barnett Formula is unhypothecated, meaning it is for allocation locally in line with the Northern Ireland Executive's priorities.

Fiscal Powers: Review

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update of the review of Fiscal Powers.
(AQO 5177/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: DFP continues to undertake a scoping exercise to examine the Scottish Calman and Welsh Silk Commission reports, and the positions taken in respect of the possible devolution of each individual tax or duty in those.

Since this question was last asked, the UK Government have published their full response to the Silk Commission. It confirms the devolution of Landfill Tax and Stamp Duty Land Tax. The UK Government made it clear that they will not agree to all requests for tax devolution by refusing the devolution of direct long haul Air Passenger Duty to the Welsh Government.

North/South Ministerial Council: DFP Update

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on his recent engagement with his counterpart at the North South Ministerial Council.
(AQO 5175/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The deputy First Minister gave a statement in the Assembly on the 12th November updating members on the last North South Ministerial Council meeting which I attended on 8th November.

The main plenary session, which was also attended by both Michael Noonan (Minister for Finance) and Brendan Howlin (Minister for Public Expenditure and Reform), focused on our shared economic challenges.

I also met separately with Brendan Howlin. We had no formal agenda for that and discussions focussed mainly on the economy, the recent Irish budget, the public expenditure outlook and opportunities for new approaches to public sector reform.

Financial Transactions Capital

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what measures he will take to prevent the Executive's 2013-14 allocation of Financial Transaction Capital being surrendered back to Her Majesty's Treasury should the allocation not be spent.
(AQO 5182/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Over recent months I have, along with my Scottish and Welsh colleagues, been lobbying the Chief Secretary to the Treasury for End Year Flexibility in respect of Financial Transactions Capital. I am pleased to confirm that such a scheme has now been agreed amongst Treasury and the Devolved Administrations.

This scheme will allow the Northern Ireland Executive flexibility to carry forward unspent Financial Transactions Capital funding across each of the next two financial years. This flexibility amounts to 20% carry forward of unused Financial Transactions Capital funding into 2014-15 and 10% into 2015-16. This will ensure that we have more time to develop suitable schemes and will significantly reduce the risk of any funding being surrendered to Her Majesty's Treasury.

A5: Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the current position on the A5 monies.
(AQO 5183/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Executive took swift action to address the ongoing delay to the A5 road project. In my Statement to the Assembly on 21 October I detailed a significant reallocation of funding which had become available as a result of, amongst other things, the delay to the A5 project.

An easement of £115 million in relation to the A5 project contributed to resources available, which enabled allocations of some £177 million to be announced for 2014-15. These allocations will enhance our long term economic growth prospects and will also provide an immediate boost for our construction sector.

South Down: Vacant Non-domestic Properties

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many business premises are vacant in each council area in South Down.

(AQO 5184/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: At 31st October 2013, the numbers of vacant non-domestic properties in Banbridge, Down and Newry & Mourne District Council were (i) 373, (ii) 549 and (iii) 909 respectively.

European Investment Bank

Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the role that the European Investment Bank has in local investment.

(AQO 5185/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I believe that there are opportunities within Northern Ireland to avail of funding from the European Investment Bank and I am keen to explore how this may help finance regional infrastructure improvements.

Public Contracts: Living Wage

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, given the gap between static wage levels and rising household overheads, what consideration he has given to making the use of a living wage a requirement of public sector contracts.

(AQO 5186/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department has looked in detail at whether the payment of a living wage could be made a condition of public contracts. While the payment of a living wage can be encouraged the introduction of such a requirement within public sector contracts would present a significant legal risk.

This was confirmed by the European Commission in responding to a request for clarification from the Scottish Government. The Commission stated that any requirement to pay a living wage is unlikely to be compatible with European legislation.

Air Passenger Duty

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the study on the impact of a change in Air Passenger Duty Rates.

(AQO 5187/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Firstly, I would point out to the Member that this study is much broader than he suggests and is considering what more can be done by the Executive to improve our air connectivity including both APD and non-APD measures.

The first scoping study stage is now complete. It examined what research has already been undertaken in this area, and in particular, in relation to the factors that influence airlines in route planning decision making, and the opportunities and barriers that might exist in this regard. It also identified the information available on Northern Ireland's relative connectivity.

Welfare Reform Bill: Financial Penalties

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps he is taking to manage any reduction in the £5 million a month penalty, starting January 2014 should the Executive fail to agree a welfare reform package.

(AQO 5188/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I met with the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 18th November where he reinforced his intention to impose penalties should the Northern Ireland Executive and this Assembly not progress the Welfare Reform Bill. I cannot emphasize enough the critical importance of now moving the Welfare Reform Bill forward.

The January Monitoring Round will provide an opportunity for the Executive to strategically assess all of the pressures and easements in the current financial year, including the potential impact of any penalties applied by Her Majesty's Treasury for delay to welfare reforms locally.

'Report on DCAL: Management of Major Capital Projects'

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what action he has taken in response to the Public Accounts Committee Report on Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Management of Major Capital Projects.

(AQO 5189/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Both I, and separately the Minister for the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL), together with our officials are in the process of considering the Committee's report, and in line with accepted practice a response, in the form of a Memorandum of Reply, will be presented to the Assembly in the New Year.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Prisoners: Health and Social Care Transfers

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what supervised facilities are available to support offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties once they leave prison. (AQW 28055/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Once prisoners leave custody, the responsibility for their health and social care transfers from prison healthcare staff in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust (SET) to the various HSC professional teams in the community across all five HSC Trusts. Prison healthcare staff in the SET liaise fully with their community colleagues to share all appropriate health and social care information prior to discharge.

In addition to the transfer arrangements between the HSC Trusts, the Department of Justice (DoJ) and a range of other organisations and agencies, work together to support offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties, prior to and on their release from prison.

The DoJ and other criminal justice organisations are major contributors to the outcomes defined in my Department's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2011-16. These outcomes include the development of a care pathway for prisoners leaving prison to return to the community and discharge procedures, involving both in-prison health services and voluntary and community sector agencies, to ensure that on release, prisoners have access to services and support across Northern Ireland.

The Probation Board for Northern Ireland (PBNI) currently delivers substance misuse interventions for those under its supervision. PBNI also funds a number of organisations across Northern Ireland which provide support services for addiction problems. If deemed appropriate, offenders will be referred to these services on release from prison.

Northern Health and Social Care Trust: Stairlift Contracts

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the Northern Health and Social Care Trust is stipulating that those tendering to supply domestic stairlifts must have a notation figure of £500,000. (AQW 28369/11-15)

Mr Poots: Northern Ireland Public Procurement Policy requires that Departments and their arms length bodies undertake a financial check as part of the supplier evaluation process. For construction contracts this financial check is carried out using Constructionline, the UK's register of construction related contractors and consultants prequalified to work for public sector clients.

In order to be eligible to tender for a project an Economic Operator's Constructionline Category Value (notation for a particular category of work) must be at least equal to the projected annual spend under the contract. This will be assessed on a pass/fail basis (e.g. a £10m project over 24 months would require a Category Value of £5m).

The number and value of stair lift installations is driven by service demand within the Northern Health & Social Care Trust (NHSCT) which is not known at the outset of the contract period. The NHSCT calculated the cost based on spend over the two years of the previous contract and added a 5% uplift to reflect the potential increase in stair lift installations as a result of the introduction of the "Transforming Your Care" Initiative which has an aim of treating more people in domestic settings (see table on next page).

NHSCT Stair Lift Contract Spend Calculation

July 2011 – June 2012	£551,753.89
July 2012 – June 2013	£401,764.50
Sub - Total	£953,518.39
5% Uplift due to TYC Initiative (Assumed)	£47,675.92
Projected Total Spend Over Two Years of Contract	£1,001,194.31
Projected Annual Spend	£500,597.16
Constructionline Financial Notation	£500,000.00

Anorexia

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to detail the number of inpatients diagnosed with anorexia in each year since 2007; (ii) to detail the treatment plan for inpatients; and (iii) whether there are any specific facilities and specially trained medical and support staff.

(AQW 28381/11-15)

Mr Poots: Inpatients diagnosed with anorexia

The number of inpatient admissions by HSC Trust in Northern Ireland with a diagnosis of anorexic nervosa in each of the last six years is detailed in the table below. This is based on the number of admissions, not the number of patients.

HSC Trust	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Belfast	11	21	15	14	18	18

Treatment Plan for inpatients

Depending on the patient's clinical presentation individualised care plans are developed. The following interventions are available:

- A comprehensive bio psychosocial assessment.
- Containment and reduction of any compensatory behaviours.
- Management of any co-existing psychiatric or medical problems.
- Specialist Dietetic and medical input overseeing the re-establishment of a normal diet and weight regain (re-feeding).
- Psychological input from nursing staff.
- Special nursing observations.
- Specific input from a ward based Occupational Therapist
- Assessment and advice from Physiotherapy when deemed appropriate will be requested.
- On-going weekly therapy with the dedicated Eating Disorder Practitioner from the eating disorder service.
- Weekly discussion with Eating Disorder Team in attendance at ward based Multidisciplinary Meeting. The ward team are also invited to the Eating Disorder team meeting to discuss care planning.

Facilities and specially trained medical and support staff

Eating Disorder Services are provided by specialist community-based teams in each Health & Social Care Trust area. The Belfast Trust provides these services for the South Eastern Trust. In addition to the Health Service provision a number of voluntary and community groups also provide valuable support services.

The Eating Disorder teams include Consultant Psychiatrists, Eating Therapists and Dieticians.

There are no specialised inpatient facilities for the treatment of Anorexia Nervosa in Northern Ireland. Adult inpatient treatment for eating disorders is provided in each Trust area in beds managed by specially trained medical/psychiatric staff, supported on an in-reach basis by staff from community based eating disorder teams.

If a patient requires intense specialist treatment for anorexia Trusts can access beds in England, Scotland and Ireland through the Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) process. Developments in local Eating Disorder Services in recent years have resulted in a significant reduction in the number of ECRs for eating disorders.

Inpatient care for children and adolescents with eating disorders is provided at Beechcroft, the Regional Child and Adolescent Mental Health Inpatient Unit, which has a consultant who specialises in the treatment of eating disorders.

Staff, including ward based mental health nursing staff, have received a range of training including Queens University Cognitive Behaviour Therapy (CBT), CBT for eating disorders (CBT-E), the University of Ulster certificate in Eating Disorders, the Beeches Unit of Management Introduction to Eating Disorders.

Dementia Strategy

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline each Health and Social Care Trust's programme for dementia diagnosis; and how each programme is in line with the Dementia Strategy.

(AQW 28421/11-15)

Mr Poots: The regional dementia strategy, which I published in November 2011, addresses the importance of early diagnosis, and includes an action for the HSC Board in collaboration with the Public Health Agency and HSC Trusts to draw up criteria and clear protocols for referral from GP practices to memory services. This will assist in the assessment and diagnosis of dementia. Work is underway to complete this action, as part of the wider implementation of the strategy.

A multi-disciplinary / agency working group has been established by the HSC Board to carry forward this work. It should also be noted that the additional funding that was secured last September was directed towards service enhancement / development in memory services. This group expects to complete the first phase of its work in relation to care pathways and service standards by the end of this year. Phase 2 will address issues related to training, information and support.

East Antrim: Prostate Cancer Incidence

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will carry out an investigation into the reasons why East Antrim is high risk area for prostate cancer; and to publish the findings.

(AQW 28422/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised that the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry at Queen's University Belfast has provided a report that determines that the incidence of prostate cancer in the East Antrim Coastal area is within the range which could be attributed to natural variation, and would therefore not meet the criteria to be considered a cancer cluster.

However, the incidence rate is at the upper end of the range and further examination will take place when more up to date data becomes available. The data used for the report mentioned above was based on figures for 2007 – 2011.

The Northern Ireland Cancer Registry report is attached for reference.

Royal Victoria Hospital: X-rays

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people are awaiting x-ray results from the Royal Hospital, Belfast.

(AQW 28484/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been informed by the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust that the information is not available in the format requested.

The Belfast Trust has provided the number of x-ray examinations awaiting a report, which they advise is the same as the number of reports for which people are awaiting x-ray results. The reporting turnaround time is the interval between the completion of the diagnostic test and the results of that test being verified or dispatched to the referring clinician.

The number of x-ray examinations awaiting a report within the Royal Victoria Hospital radiology department, as at week commencing Monday 18th November 2013, was 1,771.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Relocation of Services

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he will take to ensure there is not a gap in specialist mental health provision between the closure of facilities in Downpatrick and the commencement of specialist provision at the Ulster Hospital.

(AQW 28516/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Trust is not yet at the stage of developing detailed plans, but in doing so, they will ensure that the process is as inclusive as possible to make the transition as seamless as practicable. This will include service users and carers; community and hospital clinicians and managers.

The proposed development at the Ulster Hospital will comprise 72 acute inpatient beds and 4 psychiatric intensive care beds, which matches current bed capacity. Given that the remodelling of beds has been achieved, the Trust does not anticipate any difficulties in this regard and does not envisage the closure of beds in the lead up to this transition.

The South Eastern Trust's previous successful management of the relocation of acute mental health services from Ards Hospital to the Ulster Hospital, and from the Downshire Hospital to the new Downe Hospital will be brought to bear with this future transition.

Allergy NI: Funding

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration he has given to providing financial support from his departmental budget to Allergy NI; and what improvements he is making in Health Service allergy service provision.

(AQW 28522/11-15)

Mr Poots: Allergy NI is a registered local charity and receives no financial support from my Department. My Department has no plans at present to provide core funding to voluntary organisations in respect of new applications for funding.

The Health and Social Care Board, which commissions services on behalf of the Health Service in Northern Ireland, has just completed an in-depth assessment of need for paediatric asthma, allergy and anaphylaxis services as part of the local implementation of recent NICE guidance which has been issued on food allergy (CG116) and anaphylaxis (CG134).

The Board has allocated over £400k recurrently to these services. Much of this funding will meet the needs of children with allergy specifically. This funding has already been allocated to the Health and Social Care Trusts for them to start addressing waiting lists.

Derry: DHSSPS Decentralisation

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to 27955/11-15, to detail (i) why there are only 2 civil servants from his Department based in Derry and (ii) whether he intends to decentralise any functions to Derry to aid economic growth in the North West region.

(AQW 28538/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) Under the Review of Public Administration, 31 DHSSPS posts based in the Derry City Council area (Waterside House) were permanently transferred to the Health and Social Care (HSC) Business Services Organisation on 1 April 2009

In accordance with the DHSSPS RPA Staff Transfer Scheme, civil servants working in these posts were transferred to the employment of the HSC under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (TUPE) Regulations 2006, while remaining in the same location. Two posts were not TUPE transferred and remain DHSSPS posts.

- (ii) My Department has no plans to relocate any posts to the North West region.

Allergy NI: Funding

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what improvements are planned for patients who suffer from allergies and whether extra funding will be provided to Allergy NI.

(AQW 28567/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board, which commissions services on behalf of the Health Service in Northern Ireland, has just completed an in-depth assessment of need for paediatric asthma, allergy and anaphylaxis services as part of the local implementation of recent NICE guidance which has been issued on food allergy (CG116) and anaphylaxis (CG134).

The Board has allocated over £400k recurrently to these services. Much of this funding will meet the needs of children with allergy specifically. This funding has already been allocated to the Health and Social Care Trusts for them to start addressing waiting lists.

Allergy NI is a registered local charity and receives no financial support from my Department. My Department has no plans at present to provide core funding to Allergy NI.

Fermanagh: Health and Care Centres

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail any proposed capital improvements to primary care facilities in County Fermanagh.

(AQW 28582/11-15)

Mr Poots: The consultation document on 'Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action' included an illustrative model of 'hub and spoke' Health and Care Centres. These are proposed primary care facilities across the region, including County Fermanagh.

The Health and Social Care Board, through its Local Commissioning Groups and in association with the HSC Trusts, has been undertaking detailed analysis to determine the most appropriate locations for the various hubs and spokes and identify priorities for the associated primary care infrastructure requirements. This work is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

Following that process, an exercise will be undertaken to develop business cases and prioritise within the available funding which will determine how work on individual hubs and spokes will progress.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Smear Test Results

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the average time taken to receive the results of a smear test in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28591/11-15)

Mr Poots: Smears from women resident in the South Eastern Trust area are sent to the Cytology Laboratory in Belfast Health and Social Care Trust for analysis. It is not possible to provide the information solely for women in the South Eastern Trust Health and Social Care Trust and the table below details the turnaround time for all smear tests sent to the Belfast Cytology Laboratory in September 2013.

Turnaround Time	Number Of Samples	%
0-2 Weeks	3053	90%
3-4 Weeks	309	9%
5-6 Weeks	12	0%
7-8 Weeks	1	0%
9 Weeks or more	0	0%

The nationally agreed guidelines for cervical smear tests is 80% of samples reported within 4 weeks from time sample is taken. The latest statistics for the month of September 2013 for all smear tests sent to the Belfast City Laboratory reflects 99% samples reported within 4 weeks, and 90% of results are generated within 2 weeks.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Cancelled Operations

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many operations have been cancelled in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last four years.

(AQW 28593/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of operations cancelled in the South Eastern Trust is presented in the table below. South Eastern Trust have advised that it has not been possible to provide 2009/10 data as the data were collected from August 2009 only.

Cancelled operations by reason of cancellation, 2010/11 – 2012/13

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Cancellations for non-clinical reasons	549	490	666
Cancellations for clinical reasons	715	798	928
Patient cancellation	2,604	2,755	2,812
Total cancellations	3,868	4,043	4,406
Total scheduled operations	29,462	32,297	33,054

Bangor Community Hospital: Minor Injuries Unit

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why, and for how long, the Bangor Minor Injuries Unit will be closed at weekends.

(AQW 28594/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that this is a temporary measure due to a staff shortage. The Trust is exploring a number of options to address this. In the meantime, the minor injuries unit will be open from Monday to Friday, 9am to 5pm. The Trust has advised that the temporary arrangement will remain in place until staff numbers return to a level where the service can be delivered over seven days.

Dental Specialty: Consultants

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 28148/11-15, to detail the number of consultants with a dentistry speciality based at (i) Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children; (ii) School of Dentistry; (iii) Antrim Area Hospital; (iv) Braid Valley Hospital; (v) Causeway Hospital; (vi) Mid-Ulster Hospital; (vii) Ulster Hospital; (viii) Craigavon Area Hospital; (ix) Daisy Hill Hospital; (x) Altnagelvin Hospital; and (xi) the South West Acute Hospital.

(AQW 28610/11-15)

Mr Poots: Headcount and whole-time equivalent numbers for consultants with a dental speciality based in the specified hospitals are shown in the table below. These figures include only consultants with a defined whole-time equivalent at the relevant hospital; other services are detailed in the notes below.

Hospital	Headcount	Whole-time Equivalent
Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children 1	3	1.5
School of Dentistry ¹	19	12.2

Hospital	Headcount	Whole-time Equivalent
Antrim Area Hospital ²	1 (trust-wide in NSCHT, including Causeway) Excludes visiting consultants see note below.	1.0
Braid Valley Hospital ²
Mid-Ulster Hospital ²
Causeway Hospital	1 (visiting consultant)	0.2
Ulster Hospital	4	4.0
Craigavon Area Hospital ^{3,4}	1 (excludes visiting consultant see note below)	1.0
Altnagelvin Hospital	5	3.8
South West Acute Hospital	2 (including 1 visiting consultant)	0.4 (including 0.2 visiting consultant)

Source: Health & Social Care Trusts

Notes

- 1 RBHSC and School of Dentistry figures include joint appointments with Queens University Belfast, hence the reduced whole-time equivalent.
- 2 Not included in the Northern Trust figures are visiting Consultants within the Oral Surgery specialty from South Eastern HSC Trust covering Antrim, Braid Valley and Mid Ulster Hospitals.
- 3 Daisy Hill and Craigavon Hospitals are also served by two visiting Consultant Oral-Maxillofacial Surgeons from the South Eastern Trust, both providing a full day each week.
- 4 A visiting Consultant in Paediatric Dentistry from the Belfast Trust also works at Craigavon Area Hospital for one day every second week.

Housing Executive Applications: Medical Records

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether a medical professional may charge a patient a fee to provide medical records in connection with the patient's Housing Executive application.

(AQW 28611/11-15)

Mr Poots: Under the terms of the Data Protection Act 1998 a fee of between £10 and £50 may be charged for providing medical records.

A charge of £10 may be made if the information is held exclusively in electronic format. If the information is held partially or wholly by any other means a charge of up to £50 may be made.

Bangor Community Hospital: Minor Injuries Unit

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many staff are currently on leave or sick leave at Bangor Minor Injuries Unit.

(AQW 28630/11-15)

Mr Poots: Due to the small numbers of staff working in the Bangor Minor Injuries Unit it is not possible to release details of those on sick leave as this could result in personal identification.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Nursing Vacancies

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current level of nursing vacancies in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28632/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vacancies in HSC organisations are collected in the biannual Northern Ireland HSC Vacancy Survey. The most recent report (vacancies as at 31st March 2013) is available at http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/vacancy_survey_march_2013_web-2.pdf.

At 31st March 2013, there were 37 (28.8 whole-time equivalent) nursing & midwifery vacancies and 2 (1.7 whole-time equivalent) consultant vacancies in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

The Report as at 30th September 2013 is currently underway, and will be published early in 2014.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Consultant Vacancies

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current level of consultant vacancies in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28633/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vacancies in HSC organisations are collected in the biannual Northern Ireland HSC Vacancy Survey. The most recent report (vacancies as at 31st March 2013) is available at http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/vacancy_survey_march_2013_web-2.pdf.

At 31st March 2013, there were 37 (28.8 whole-time equivalent) nursing & midwifery vacancies and 2 (1.7 whole-time equivalent) consultant vacancies in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

The Report as at 30th September 2013 is currently underway, and will be published early in 2014.

Organ Donor Register

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he has taken in the last twelve months to increase the number of people on the organ donor register.

(AQW 28641/11-15)

Mr Poots: On 11 July 2013 I formally launched the NHSBT UK-wide organ donation and transplantation strategy, Taking Organ Transplantation to 2020 – a UK Strategy. The Strategy, which my Department was involved in developing in conjunction with NHSBT and the other UK Health Administrations, aims to ensure a continued focus on increasing organ donation.

At my request, the Public Health Agency (PHA) is currently developing a public information campaign to enhance awareness and understanding of organ donation, to encourage everyone to sign the organ donor register and to tell their loved ones their wishes. This campaign will be launched in 2014 and follows a major survey of public opinion by the PHA to establish attitudes towards organ donation in Northern Ireland

Emergency Departments: Underage Alcohol-related Attendance

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children under 16 years old have attended Accident and Emergency Departments on multiple occasions suffering from alcohol intoxication, over the last three years.

(AQW 28644/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not routinely collected by the Department and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Emergency Departments: Underage Alcohol-related Attendance

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in each of the last three years, how many children under 16 years old, who attended Accident and Emergency suffering from alcohol intoxication, have subsequently been found to have engaged in substance abuse.

(AQW 28645/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not routinely collected by the Department and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Emergency Departments: Underage Alcohol-related Attendance

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in each of the last three years, how many children under 16 years old have attended Accident and Emergency with physical injuries were also under the influence of alcohol.

(AQW 28646/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not routinely collected by the Department and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Derry: Health and Care Centre Network

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what progress has been made on the Health and Social Care campus for cityside in Derry.

(AQW 28650/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board, through its Local Commissioning Groups and in association with the HSC Trusts, has been undertaking detailed analysis to determine the most appropriate locations for the various hubs and spokes which will form the basis of the health and care centre network. This work will provide an evidence base for the locations and will replace the illustrative model in the "Vision to Action" consultation document. It is expected that this work will be completed by the end of this year.

Following that process, an exercise will be undertaken to develop business cases and prioritise within the available funding, which will determine how work on individual hubs and spokes will progress.

Downe Hospital: Fire and Rescue Service

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on how many occasions, since the opening of the Downe Hospital in June 2010, the Fire Service has been called out to the hospital; and how much these incidents have cost.
(AQW 28658/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) have attended 86 incidents at Downe Hospital since June 2010, at an estimated total cost of £108,478.

Downe Hospital: GP Unit

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the 1st Floor location of the GP Unit in the centre of the Downe Hospital, (i) to outline the risks of having a GP Unit in the middle of a hospital; (ii) how many hospitals have a GP Unit located in the middle of their facility; and (iii) what procedures have been put in place to mitigate the impact of cross-infection and other related health risks.
(AQW 28660/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) All hospitals, whether they include a GP unit or not, are subject to the risk of external infection being brought in by visiting members of the public and other patients. This risk is slightly increased when a GP unit is sited within a hospital as more people than usual are being brought into the hospital environment. This risk was assessed when the decision was made to include the GP unit within the Downe Hospital, and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust's infection prevention and control managers were consulted on and approved the transfer from Pound Lane to Downe Hospital.
- (ii) There are no other local enhanced hospitals with an integrated GP practice, although I understand there are some in England.
- (iii) The GP unit has been carefully designed to minimise the risk of cross-infection, and so operates on the basis of procedures similar to those for the outpatients department, which also has the potential for patients and public to attend with various medical complaints. The closest in-patient ward to the GP practice is cardiology; entry to this ward is restricted and controlled by electronic access control systems reducing chance of cross-infection. The remaining wards are located a considerable distance away from the GP unit, and operate an established access/egress protocol. Each clinical department, including the GP unit, is self-contained within its own zone, which means that the only integration of hospital and GP patients is in the community spaces (corridors/stairs/coffee shop etc). Clear way-finding to the GP unit further minimises the chances of GP and hospital patient integration.

'Changing the Culture 2010' is the strategic regional action plan for the prevention and control of healthcare-associated infections (HCAIs) in Northern Ireland. This provides the strategic context, principles and objectives that inform the Trust's HCAI action plan, this plan is updated regularly and as necessary. The Trust's approach to tackling HCAIs includes measures such as promoting good hand hygiene on the part of staff, visitors and patients; good clinical practice including the use of high-impact interventions – also known as care bundles – to prevent surgical site infections, ventilator-associated pneumonias and other infections; implementation of the regional dress code including the use of personal protective equipment; improving environmental cleanliness and hygiene, and using the regional healthcare hygiene and cleanliness audit tool to assess environmental cleanliness and hygiene within the Trust; prudent prescribing of antibiotics, to reduce the risk of Clostridium difficile infection and to address the global problem of antimicrobial resistance; diarrhoea risk assessment and the isolation of patients where necessary; water management plans, to reduce the risk of infection by water-borne organisms such as Pseudomonas aeruginosa and Legionella; the use of HCAI surveillance; training and continuous professional development in respect of IPC, including the use of the online regional infection prevention and control manual; restrictions on visiting; the targeted use of MRSA screening and the isolation of patients; the use of escalation procedures for a potential or identified outbreak, including cohort nursing and the isolation of patients; improving communications with patients and carers; and board-to-ward assurance processes for ensuring compliance with and implementation of the Trust's IPC policies.

Using these and other measures Trusts have achieved significant reduction in HCAIs. In particular the South Eastern Trust, since 2006/07, cases of MRSA bloodstream infection in in-patients have been reduced by 73.5%, and cases of Clostridium difficile infection (CDI) in in-patients aged 65 and over have been reduced by 80.5%. Since 2008/09 CDI cases in in-patients aged two years and over have been reduced by 63.5%.

Addiction: Inpatient-based Treatment Services

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the level of inpatient addiction services.
(AQW 28682/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) recently launched its consultation on Inpatient Based Addiction Treatment Services, which outlines proposals for a re-configuration of all the Tier 4 addiction services currently available. The Consultation highlights that the present service configuration is characterised by variation in structure, role and function. It therefore sets out proposals for a more standardised, and evidence-based, regional model.

This consultation, which is available at: http://www.hscboard.hscni.net/consult/Consultation-Tier_4_Addiction_Services/index.html#P-1_0, closes on 10 January 2014. No decisions have been made about the future of any addiction services across Northern Ireland. I would therefore encourage as many people as possible to feed into the consultation process. The HSCB will take all comments and views into consideration before finalising proposals.

Organ Donation: Posthumous

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many posthumous organ donations have taken place in the last twelve months.

(AQW 28704/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is collated by NHS Blood and Transplant, which is the organ donation and transplantation organisation for the UK, and is available on its website at:

http://www.organdonation.nhs.uk/statistics/downloads/northern_ireland_sep13.pdf

Organ Donation

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of (i) registered organ donors; and (ii) organ donations, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28705/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is collated by NHS Blood and Transplant, which is the organ donation and transplantation organisation for the UK, and is available on its website at:

http://www.organdonation.nhs.uk/statistics/downloads/northern_ireland_sep13.pdf

Care Homes: Complaints

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what measures are in place to monitor, record and investigate complaints against care homes.

(AQW 28730/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC Complaints Procedure applies equally to statutory residential care and nursing homes and independent residential care and nursing homes where the placement is paid for by an HSC Trust. All providers must operate a complaints procedure that meets the requirements of applicable Regulations, relevant Minimum Standards and the HSC Complaints Procedure.

All regulated establishments and agencies are required to provide RQIA, on request, with a statement containing a summary of complaints made during the preceding 12 months and the action that was taken in response.

The RQIA has a duty to assess and report on how the HSC and the regulated sector handle complaints in light of the standards and regulations laid down by the DHSSPS. RQIA will assess the effectiveness of local procedures and will use information from complaints to identify wider issues for the purposes of raising standards.

Causeway Hospital: Cancelled Operations

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many planned routine operations have been cancelled in November 2013 at the Causeway Hospital; and for what reasons.

(AQW 28731/11-15)

Mr Poots: For the purpose of answering this question, it is assumed that 'planned routine operations' means elective operations. The number of operations cancelled in the Causeway Hospital from 1st to 27th November 2013 (inclusive) is presented below.

Cancelled operations by reason of cancellation, 1st – 27th November 2013

Reason	Number
Patient did not attend	41
Patient could not attend	20
Patient unfit for procedure	15

Radon

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the start of Lung Cancer Awareness Month, whether his Department is aware of any health action zones that has radon as a specific issue to address.

(AQW 28737/11-15)

Mr Poots: Health Action Zones are no longer in existence. The last of the Health Action Zones was amalgamated into the Belfast Strategic Partnership in 2009, when the Public Health Agency was established. Regarding lung cancer, the single most important factor is smoking tobacco. The Public Health Agency commissions smoking cessation services in localities across Northern Ireland from a range of providers as part of the Tobacco Control Strategy (2012-22) and an Action Plan with a range of targets is currently being implemented.

Since 1988, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has carried out a number of radon campaigns across Northern Ireland in conjunction with Public Health England (formerly the Health Protection Agency). Results from these campaigns have been used to prepare radon risk maps of Northern Ireland and identify Radon Affected Areas. Any householder found to have a radon level above the action level is sent information by Public Health England along with their test results giving advice on any actions necessary to reduce radon levels.

Lisburn: Health and Care Centre

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services will be provided at the new health and care centre in Lisburn; and how this new centre will enhance the patient experience for users.

(AQW 28740/11-15)

Mr Poots: I propose to answer these two questions together.

Transforming Your Care (TYC) set out a proposed “hub and spoke” model to support the delivery of high quality integrated primary and community care services. This is in line with the vision of TYC to deliver more care closer to people’s homes, thereby reducing reliance on hospitals except where absolutely necessary and supporting an increasing number of people to live independently. Under this model, primary care professionals from a range of disciplines, including GPs, will work together in health and care centres employing modern equipment and advanced technologies to provide enhanced services that are accessible and responsive to client and patient needs.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has developed a model of care to be provided from the new Health and Care Centre in Lisburn. Services to be provided from the new facility will include:

- GP Practices;
- Nursing Services - District Nursing/Specialist Nursing/Treatment Room/Health Visiting;
- Community Mental Health Services;
- Psychology Services;
- Family Planning Services (include Sexual Health);
- Children’s Centre (including Child & Adolescent Mental Health Services)
- Social Care for Older People;
- Diagnostics;
- Imaging;
- Cancer Supportive and Chemotherapy Services;
- Complementary Therapies;
- Allied Health Profession Services (Dietetics, Dental, Physiotherapy, Occupational Therapy, Speech and Language Therapy);
- Integrated Clinical Assessment & Treatment Services (ICATS);

- One Stop Assessment;
- Rehabilitation; and
- Marie Curie.

The services in this community based facility are expected to enhance the patient experience by supporting an increasing number of people to live independently, preferably in their own homes, for longer; promoting good health and well-being; enabling early diagnosis and treatment; improving support for people who have a long term condition; and reducing the number of avoidable admissions to hospital.

Lisburn: Health and Care Centre

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how a new health and care centre in Lisburn can contribute to the implementation of Transforming Your Care.

(AQW 28747/11-15)

Mr Poots: I propose to answer these two questions together.

Transforming Your Care (TYC) set out a proposed “hub and spoke” model to support the delivery of high quality integrated primary and community care services. This is in line with the vision of TYC to deliver more care closer to people’s homes, thereby reducing reliance on hospitals except where absolutely necessary and supporting an increasing number of people to live independently. Lisburn: Health and Care Centre

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the key challenges to opening the new health and care centre in Lisburn at the earliest opportunity.

(AQW 28759/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has fully engaged with the 3PD Pathfinder Project to create a new Primary and Community Care Centre for Lisburn and will continue to engage with all key stakeholders to pursue the provision of a new, fit for purpose, health and care centre at the earliest opportunity.

The key challenges to opening a new health and care centre include the innovative use of a third party developer model (3PD) as a procurement method; issues relating to site selection and planning; ensuring value for money and ensuring the involvement of General Practitioners in the new centre.

Termination of Pregnancy: Guidance

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he will bring revised abortion guidance to the Executive.

(AQW 28783/11-15)

Mr Poots: While I remain committed to producing guidance, a range of complex issues were raised by respondents to the public consultation on the latest draft. The implications of the responses must be fully considered before I can bring a revised document to the Executive.

A summary of the issues raised to the consultation is currently available on my Department's website.

It must also be remembered that the guidance will not, and cannot, change the law in Northern Ireland on termination of pregnancy.

Fertility: NICE Guidelines

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when his Department will complete its review of the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence guidelines on fertility and publish its findings and recommendations.

(AQW 28784/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has completed its review of the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence guideline on fertility and the guideline was endorsed as applicable in Northern Ireland on 12 November 2013. The information is available on my Department's website at:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/phealth/sqs/sqsd-guidance/sqsd-guidance-nice-guidance/clinical_guidelines.htm

Legislation: Lasting Power of Attorney

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the timescale under which he proposes to switch the current law concerning Lasting Power of Attorney to match that now in use in England and Wales.

(AQW 28829/11-15)

Mr Poots: The member will be aware that the Mental Capacity Bill (the Bill), which is currently being drafted by my Department along with colleagues from the Department of Justice, provides for a new scheme of Lasting Powers of Attorney (LPA) which will replace the existing Enduring Powers of Attorney (EPA) scheme in Northern Ireland.

It remains my intention that the Bill will be enacted within the current mandate of the Assembly.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Children's Mental Health Inpatient Beds

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of children's mental health beds in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28844/11-15)

Mr Poots: There are no mental health inpatient beds specifically for children in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust. Child and adolescent mental health services (CAMHS) in the South Eastern area are managed by the Belfast HSC Trust.

Cherry Tree House: Review

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the recent whistle blower case regarding Cherry Tree House Nursing Home, whether he will widen the Desk Top Review which he has commissioned, to permit staff, relatives and elected representatives, an opportunity to give oral evidence to the Review Team.

(AQW 28949/11-15)

Mr Poots: The objective of the review currently being undertaken by the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) is to examine the evidence held by, among others, the HSC Board, Trusts and the Department regarding all the concerns raised about the quality of care in Cherry Tree House during the period 1 January 2005 – 31 March 2013.

RQIA has now compiled a volume of evidence which will include concerns raised to relevant organisations by staff, relatives and elected representatives during the period of time covered by the review. At this point I am content that RQIA continues with this already significant exercise and, to that end, I have agreed an extension until the end of January 2014 to allow full consideration of evidence gathered.

Royal Victoria Hospital: Car Parking

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to improve car parking facilities at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast.

(AQO 5162/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Belfast Trust is in the process of developing a business case to provide a long term, sustainable, affordable and accessible car parking solution for patients, staff and visitors for the Royal Victoria Hospital site. This will be subject to business case approval and availability of funding.

The Belfast Trust has introduced a number of interim measures in order to alleviate the current pressures on car parking spaces on the RVH site, including an additional temporary 300 space car park at Broadway Towers, the release of an additional 60 spaces in the main visitor's car park and a number of other initiatives to help reduce demand for parking spaces.

Belfast Health and Social Care Trust: College of Emergency Medicine Report

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his response to a recently published report from the College of Emergency Medicine regarding the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQO 5167/11-15)

Mr Poots: I welcome the Belfast Trust's initiative in inviting the College of Emergency Medicine to visit the Trust to undertake a review of the provision of emergency medicine. HSC Trusts are always seeking to improve how they deliver services and one of the ways in which they can do this is by seeking views from external experts. The Belfast Trust has welcomed the report's recommendations, which have enhanced and informed the improvement plans already in progress within the Trust. The Trust has an action plan in place to implement the recommendations. I look to the Health and Social Care Board to work with all Trusts to ensure the continuous delivery of high quality, safe and effective services.

Health: Winter Emergencies

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what measures his Department is putting in place to cope with winter emergencies.

(AQO 5169/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board has been working with the Trusts to ensure that effective escalation plans are in place to respond appropriately to any surge in hospital activity over the winter. This includes being ready to expand hospital bed capacity and increase community care packages to support people at home. In addition, plans are being put in place to enhance GP Out of Hours arrangements. My Department is also liaising with the HSC to ensure emergency plans are in place to manage the response to any severe weather this winter. This includes public health messaging about being prepared and encouraging people to be proactive about helping themselves, their neighbours and vulnerable people during a prolonged spell of severe weather.

Blood Bags: Regulations

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the impact that the new EU Medical Devices Regulations will have on Blood Bags.

(AQO 5170/11-15)

Mr Poots: The changes to the proposed Regulations on Medical Devices include provisions that would ban the use of certain materials in some categories of medical devices. This would include the use of phthalates in blood bags. If these provisions are agreed, to continue to use phthalates in blood bags, manufacturers shall be required to apply for authorisation to do so demonstrating that any possible risks in their use are outweighed by benefits to patient care.

Typhoon Haiyan: Local Healthcare Staff

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what support has been offered to local healthcare workers directly affected by Typhoon Haiyan.

(AQO 5171/11-15)

Mr Poots: Following that tragic event, I urged everyone in the Health and Social Care and independent health care sectors to proactively support co-workers with families directly affected by Typhoon Haiyan.

Counselling and support services have been made available and flexible rotas and annual leave arrangements offered. HSC Trusts will continue to work with the staff involved to ensure assistance is provided, as necessary.

Hospitals: Cancelled Consultant-led Appointments

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what strategy is in place to address cancelled appointments.

(AQO 5172/11-15)

Mr Poots: Health and Social Care Trusts have taken action to minimise the number of cancelled appointments by requiring clinical staff to give at least six weeks notice of their planned annual or study leave. In some Trusts patients are given the opportunity to choose a suitable time and date for their appointment which should be offered to them no more than six weeks ahead.

The total number of hospital cancelled outpatients appointments has been steadily falling in recent years; down from 216,800 in 2008/09 to 167,172 in 2012/13, however I want to see further improvement. To achieve this, I intend to introduce a specific target to reduce the number of hospital cancelled consultant-led outpatient appointments by 17% in 2014/15. If achieved this will result in a further reduction of some 28,000 cancelled appointments next year. Progress on this will be monitored by the Health and Social Care Board.

Flu Vaccine

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have received the seasonal flu vaccine to date.

(AQO 5173/11-15)

Mr Poots: The latest available uptake figures cover the period up to the 31 October 2013. By that stage 301,011 people in Northern Ireland had received the seasonal flu vaccine. The programme remains ongoing and I would urge anyone who is eligible to receive the flu vaccine to take up the offer as soon as possible before flu viruses are widely circulating in the community.

Prostate Surgery

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the availability of advanced keyhole prostate surgery.

(AQO 5174/11-15)

Mr Poots: Prostate surgery techniques include radical prostatectomy, which is open surgery through an incision in the abdomen, and laparoscopic (keyhole) radical prostatectomy and laparoscopic robotic prostatectomy which are minimally invasive and utilise technologies such as fibre optics and miniaturization.

The Health and Social Care Board advises that keyhole prostatectomy is commissioned from the Belfast HSC Trust for the treatment of localised prostate cancer, however since December 2012 the procedure has not been provided due to consultant vacancies. However a robotic laparoscopic surgeon has been recruited and it is planned that a robotic laparoscopic prostatectomy service will commence as soon as is practical. In the meantime radical prostatectomy is available with an open surgery technique and there has been no adverse impact on patients.

Department of Justice

Legal Aid: Job Losses

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice to detail any assessment made on the number of job losses that may result from proposals to cut civil and criminal legal aid.

(AQW 28348/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Through the access to justice reform programme the Department aims to create an effective, sustainable, affordable and accessible legal aid system. The Department believes the reform proposals are proportionate to bring legal aid expenditure within budget.

The Department has conducted impact assessments as proposals have been developed and the findings included within public consultation documents. The Department has not, however, conducted an assessment on the number of job losses that may result from the proposals.

It has not been possible for the Department to quantify the impact in terms of jobs to individual solicitor firms or Counsel as this could vary greatly depending on the business model operated within each firm, the extent to which firms rely on legal aid work and type of work undertaken in respect of counsel.

Forensic Science Northern Ireland: Outsourcing

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the arrangements that Forensic Science Northern Ireland have had in place for outsourcing forensic toxicology services; (ii) which companies received outsourced work; (iii) the value of the work; and (iv) whether outsourcing was subject to an open and competitive tendering process, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28382/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Since April 2010, Forensic Science Northern Ireland (FSNI) has had a range of mechanisms in place for the provision of toxicological services, all of which were procured in line with Northern Ireland Public Procurement Policies. These included a competitive framework in place for the outsourcing of forensic services. Those services not included on this framework were procured through an open and competitive tendering process. Where only one specialist service provider existed, a Direct Award Contract was used.
- (ii) and (iii) During the period April 2010 to date, toxicological work was outsourced by FSNI to the following companies:

Company	2010/11 (£)	2011/12 (£)	2012/13 (£)	2013/14 (to date) (£)
LGC	0.00	288,000.00	0.00	0.00
ROAR	0.00	0.00	0.00	480.00
ChemTox/Eurofins	900.63	2764.00	728.00	3500.70
CT Labs Cardiff	70.34	70.34	0.00	0.00
Totals	970.97	290834.34	728.00	3980.70

- (iv) The Framework in place for routine toxicology services was subject to open and competitive tendering process and in line with NI Public Procurement Policies.

Life Sentences (Northern Ireland) Order 2001

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Justice to detail the minimum tariff imposed for murder under the Life Sentences (Northern Ireland) Order 2001; and for his assessment of how this compares with (i) England and Wales; and (ii) Scotland.

(AQW 28453/11-15)

Mr Ford: Departmental databases indicate that, between January 2002 and October 2013, the minimum tariff handed down for murder under the Life Sentences (Northern Ireland) Order 2001 was five years. In this case, the conviction was changed to manslaughter on appeal. The next lowest tariff handed down in the courts was eight years.*

As the setting of each tariff takes into account the factors pertaining in the individual case, no case will be directly comparable to another. However, the consultation on the review of the legislation governing the determination of tariffs will consider arrangements in other jurisdictions and the potential for their applicability to the Northern Ireland context.

*Convictions datasets are currently available until 2009. Prisons and courts datasets were interrogated for information for 2010 onwards and to obtain and validate tariff details.

Prison Service: Healthcare

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice to detail the amount spent on healthcare within the Prison Service; and the proportion devoted to mental health issues in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28474/11-15)

Mr Ford: The amount spent on healthcare provision for staff of the Northern Ireland Prison Service in each of the last five years is detailed in the table below.

It is not possible to state what proportion of these costs relate specifically to mental health issues as due to the confidential nature of staff engagement with Carecall, NIPS Employee Assistance Provider, this information is not disclosed.

Cost of Healthcare Provision to NIPS Staff

	Carecall £	Occupational Support costs £	Hepatitis Vaccinations £	Total £
2009/10 (pre Devolution)	45,269	73,563	Not available	118,832
2010/11	31,851	108,352	8,778	148,981

2012/13	24,478	101,157	3,059	128,694
2013/14 (31 October)	19,299	128,377	8249 *	155,925
Total	146,072	517,775	22,944	(686,791)

* This figure includes the cost of vaccinations for all new recruits during 12/13 and 13/14.

The Minister of Health Social Services & Public Safety is responsible for healthcare for prisoners.

Sexual Offences Prevention Orders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28049/11-15, to detail the total number of alleged breaches per defendant, broken down by court division.

(AQW 28534/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details the total number of charges that relate to an alleged breach of a Sexual Offences Prevention Order (SOPO) per defendant, broken down by court division, as at 11 November 2013.

Division	Number of Defendants	Number of SOPO Breach Charges	Number of Breaches Per defendant
Antrim	1	31	31

Autism: DOJ Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28545/11-15)

Mr Ford: All visitors to government buildings are treated with courtesy and respect by staff. Where possible, details of visitors are notified to reception in advance of their arrival. Where visitors with disabilities, including those with autism spectrum conditions, advise of any need for additional help and support to cater for their needs, every effort will be made to ensure this is provided for them. In all our buildings visitors are met at reception and are accompanied throughout their visit.

As you will be aware Autism is a spectrum condition encompassing people with a wide range of needs. My Department is planning to take forward a number of actions under the forthcoming Cross-Departmental Autism Strategy and Action Plan, led by DHSSPS, to improve services and support for those with autism, working in partnership with the criminal justice agencies, our delivery partners in the voluntary sector and the autism charities. These actions include proposals for autism awareness training for frontline staff across the DOJ family. We have also, through our departmental diversity programme, been taking steps to support those within the workforce who have autism and those who have caring responsibilities for someone with autism.

Prison Service: Scanners/Justification Application

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28043/11-15, under Section 15 of the Justification of Practices Involving Ionising Radiation Regulations 2004, to detail the time period under which the Justification application would be assessed.

(AQW 28549/11-15)

Mr Ford: NIPS officials have submitted its Justification Application and have met with the Justification Liaison Group. The NIPS Application is under consideration and I await the outcome.

I cannot provide a timetable as to when these decisions will be made. However, I am aware that NIPS officials have been in contact with the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) to press for an outcome as soon as possible.

Legal Aid: Budget

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice whether the Legal Aid budget of £75 million is sufficient to meet expenditure.

(AQW 28570/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department allocated an additional £15 million funding to the legal aid budget during the Department of Finance and Personnel's (DFP) June monitoring round process.

Forecast shortfall for 2013/14 is currently estimated at £25.8 million. A review of spending plans and priorities is currently underway, via the ongoing January monitoring round process.

DOJ: Overspend

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice to detail the overspend in his departmental budget and the reasons for it.
(AQW 28571/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice did not overspend in the 2012-13 financial year.

The Department faces a range of pressures in the current (2013-14) financial year, largely in relation to legal aid and the NI Prison Service. These pressures are currently being reviewed and considered as part of the January in-year monitoring round process.

Derry: DOJ Decentralisation

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to 27956/11-15, to detail (i) why there are only 5 civil servants from his Department based in Derry and (ii) whether he intends to decentralise any functions to Derry to aid economic growth in the North West region.

(AQW 28609/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) As outlined in my answer to AQW/27956/11-15, the information provided did not include the number of civil service posts in the NI Courts and Tribunals Service. This information will follow as soon as possible. My answer also only included those staff at grades specified in the question. At 1 January 2013 and 1 January 2013 there were also 11 non-general service grades based in Derry.
- (ii) The Bain Review on the relocation of public sector posts outside Belfast predates the Department of Justice, which came into existence on 12 April 2010. The Department of Finance and Personnel has responsibility for taking forward the recommendations of the Bain Review. There are currently no strategic or active plans to move any posts to Derry.

Policing Board: Injury Benefit Scheme

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of former police officers, who are in receipt on an Injury on Duty award in bands 2, 3 and 4, have the designation permanent with no further review on their medical certificates.

(AQW 28665/11-15)

Mr Ford: The administration of the Injury Benefit Scheme is the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the independence of the Policing Board. You may therefore wish to direct your question to its Chief Executive.

Policing Board: Injury Benefit Scheme

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of former police officers, who are in receipt on an Injury on Duty award in bands 2, 3 and 4, and have the designation permanent with no further review on their medical certificates, are aged over 65.

(AQW 28666/11-15)

Mr Ford: The administration of the Injury Benefit Scheme is the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the independence of the Policing Board. You may therefore wish to direct your question to its Chief Executive.

Bombs: Belfast/Londonderry

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, given the number of attempted bomb attacks in Belfast and Londonderry in the last month, whether he has met with the Chief Constable regarding these attacks; and to detail the steps being taken to counter such attacks in the future.

(AQW 28670/11-15)

Mr Ford: Those who are responsible for these attacks have shown a total disregard for human life, particularly of the drivers who have been forced to transport devices.

Whilst issues relating to national security are primarily matters for the Secretary of State, I meet both the Chief Constable and the Secretary of State on a regular basis to discuss the security situation. We last met formally on 27 November, and I have also spoken to the Chief Constable on a number of occasions recently.

It is not for me to comment on specific operational steps being taken to counter such attacks. I can say, however, that the police and other agencies are working hard to protect the public and to bring the perpetrators and planners of such attacks to justice. I would also note the Chief Constable's public reassurance that there will be a significantly increased policing presence on the streets over the next few weeks.

Prison Officers: Medical Retirement

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers have been medically retired in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28723/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of prison officers medically retired in the calendar years 2011, 2012 & 2013 is as follows:-

2011	22
2012	18
2013	27 (to date).

Human Trafficking/Prostitution: DOJ and Swedish Government

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28048/11-15, to detail the dates of the conversations and correspondence between departmental officials and their counterparts in the Swedish Department of Justice on the subject of (i) human trafficking; and (ii) prostitution, since August 2012.

(AQW 28725/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am not aware of any contact between my Department and the Swedish Department of Justice regarding human trafficking and prostitution. As I said in my reply to AQW/28048/11-15, there is widespread availability of published material on the regulation of prostitution in Sweden, and my Department is of course familiar with this material.

Department for Regional Development

A26: Upgrade

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the further upgrade of the A26.

(AQW 26181/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I am pleased, having made the case for the A26 project, to have secured funding of around £8 million in 2014/15 for the A26 Frosses Road Dual Carriageway scheme, which will enable construction to commence in late 2014.

I have now considered the Inspector's Report into the Public Inquiry for the scheme and tasked Roads Service to progress the project, taking into account the Inspector's recommended amendments. This will enable the Statutory Orders to be made and the procurement process to be publicised. It is anticipated the scheme will take 24 months to complete at an estimated cost of £65 million.

Flooding: Lisheegan Lane, Ballymoney

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development when measures to alleviate pooling and flooding will be introduced at Lisheegan Lane, Ballymoney.

(AQW 27743/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: If the Member has identified particular flooding or pooling problems, I would be grateful if he could contact the local Roads Service, Area Maintenance Engineer, to discuss the matter.

Children: Travel Behaviours

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what percentage of children (i) cycled; and (ii) walked to school, over each of the last five years.

(AQW 27881/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It would be difficult to collect information of this type for Northern Ireland as a whole. However, data on travel behaviours, including for children, is routinely collated through the Travel Survey for Northern Ireland (TSNI). The figures shown in the tables below have been compiled from this survey. While the Survey is updated annually, due to small sample size the statistics are provided for a rolling three (calendar) year period, (e.g. the period 2010 – 2012 is based on data collected between January 2010 and December 2012), rather than on a year-by-year basis.

Percentage of journeys to or from school by walking/bicycling for 4-11 year olds: 2006-2008 to 2010-2012

Age group	Travel mode	2006-2008	2007-2009	2008-2010	2009-2011	2010-2012
4-11	Walk	34%	29%	26%	25%	26%
	Bicycle	1%	1%	1%	<0.5%	<0.5%
	All modes	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

Percentage of journeys to or from school by walking/bicycling for 12-18 year olds: 2006-2008 to 2010-2012

Age group	Travel mode	2006-2008	2007-2009	2008-2010	2009-2011	2010-2012
12-18	Walk	18%	18%	17%	17%	16%
	Bicycle	<0.5%	<0.5%	<0.5%	<0.5%	<0.5%
	All modes	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

I want to see an increased focus on the needs of cyclists and to encourage greater participation in this sustainable form of transport. To this end, I have established a new cycling unit in my Department. I have given it responsibility for coordinating all cycling issues and it will ensure that cycling interests are progressed in a more integrated manner, are given an increased focus and priority, and are measured more comprehensively.

Cycling: Floating Bus Stops

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he has considered the introduction of a 'floating bus stop' similar to those in London.
(AQW 28082/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am aware the construction of floating bus stops is a relatively recent development being trialled in the United Kingdom.

I have asked my Department's recently formed Cycling Policy Unit to monitor this initiative.

NI Water: Renewable Energy

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development, in view of the cost of NI Water's electricity usage and the prospect that electricity prices will continue to rise, whether he will request that NI Water produce a cost benefit analysis of producing as much of their electricity as possible using renewable energy.
(AQW 28171/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Existing Ministerial guidance for water and sewerage services already includes a priority for NI Water to "Agree appropriate targets to plan and deliver a contribution to the Programme for Government greenhouse gas emissions reduction target (e.g. through increased use of green energy)."

NI Water has exceeded its targets for the use of renewable energy through generating renewable energy from water turbines and the incineration of sewage sludge. NI Water has considered the use of other sustainable sources for the generation of renewable energy and uses a cost benefit analysis as one of the processes to decide if it is economical to proceed with these projects.

My Department is currently consulting on draft Social and Environmental Guidance for Water and Sewerage Service (2015-21). This includes priorities on renewable energy including investigating opportunities for generating renewable energy from NI Water assets. The Draft Guidance also includes a number of other priorities that could contribute to managing future increases in NI Water's energy demands and operating costs. The public consultation on Draft Social and Environmental Guidance closes on 31 January 2014.

Roads: Surface Life Span

Mrs Overend asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the factors that contribute towards the life expectancy of road surfaces.
(AQW 28307/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Road surfaces have finite lifespans and research and observations over many years has shown that road pavements generally do not deteriorate in a uniform way over their serviceable life. The rate and extent of this deterioration is influenced by several factors which include:

- natural ageing (oxidisation) of bitumen that makes the road surface less flexible and more susceptible to cracking, which allows the ingress of water;
- weather conditions, in particular the frequent freeze / thaw cycle experienced during the winter. A hard freeze / thaw cycle can break up a damaged or cracked surface leading to potholes and, in severe cases, cause total foundation failure. High summertime temperatures can also be very damaging as bitumen in the surface layers can melt;

- road openings by utilities – an increasingly frequent occurrence which leaves a structural weakness no matter how well the opening is reinstated;
- traffic volumes and in particular HGV's;
- Initial design and construction – the design criteria for roads has evolved over the years and has become more sophisticated and in general the motorway and trunk road network has been built and upgraded to these standards. However, these roads represent only about 5% of the total road network. Most of Northern Ireland's roads are old, had little formal design and construction and were not built to withstand modern traffic volumes. The rate of deterioration in such roads is much greater, once excavations or bad weather disturbs their foundations;
- periodic maintenance – roads should receive timely periodic resurfacing treatments to extend the life of the overall pavement construction and negate the need for patching, which is less cost effective. Unfortunately, due to historical funding shortfalls many roads do not receive the necessary periodic treatments when they should and resurfacing frequencies usually far exceed recommended best practise. This makes them more susceptible to the effects previously outlined.

Magherafelt/Cookstown: Penalty Charge Notices

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of Penalty Charge Notices issued in (i) Magherafelt; and (ii) Cookstown, broken down by street, in each of the last two years.
(AQW 28314/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A breakdown of all street locations where Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) have been issued in Magherafelt and Cookstown, in each of the last two years, is not readily available.

However, information in relation to PCNs issued in specific streets can be provided, upon request, from my Department's Road Service.

Cairnshill, Belfast: Park and Ride

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the trend in usage of Cairnshill Park and Ride over the last two years.
(AQW 28332/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Cairnshill Park and Ride site has seen a steady growth in its usage over the last two years.

On average, 216 cars used this site daily in 2012. From January 2013 to September 2013 a daily average of 230 cars used this site. However, since September 2013 there has been a marked increase in usage of this site, with a daily average of 353 cars over the last four weeks.

This demonstrates an extremely encouraging shift in travel behaviour on this corridor, away from the private car and on to public transport.

Sprucefield/Black's Road: Park and Ride

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the average occupancy, expressed as a percentage, for the Park and Ride facilities at (i) Black's Road; and (ii) Sprucefield in each of the last three years.
(AQW 28333/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the average occupancy for the Park and Ride facilities at Black's Road and Sprucefield, based on weekly average figures, in each of the last three years are provided in the table below:

Average Occupancy of Park and Ride Facilities

YEAR	Sprucefield (320 spaces)	Black's Road (220 spaces)
2011	67%	69%
2012	71%	80%
2013 (Up to end of October 2013)	78%	87%

Car Parking: Residents

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the provision of residents parking schemes.
(AQW 28343/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently developing a scheme for the introduction of residents parking on the Lower Malone area of Belfast. The scheme is well advanced, both in terms of design and consultation, and officials hope to carry out the formal consultation on the proposed scheme in early 2014.

Informal consultations, to determine if residents parking proposals have broad local support in the Rugby Road/College Park Avenue, Donegall Pass and Sandy Row areas are also underway.

In association with scheme development, officials are currently drafting the necessary subordinate legislation to facilitate schemes and aims to have the above schemes delivered during 2014.

Officials are also drafting the necessary subordinate legislation for the provision of Residents Parking Schemes in Massereene Street and Clarke Court in Antrim and also the Bogside area of Londonderry, with the aim of introducing these schemes in 2014.

Roads: Traffic Calming

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27574/11-15, in the case of each area, whether accident and fatality rates have dropped in each example since the introduction of vertical deflection schemes, and if so, by how much.

(AQW 28367/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of collision history, collision reduction and fatalities pursuant to AQW 27574/11-15 are provided in the table below. Schemes undertaken in 2008/09 and 2009/10 have 3 years' complete data; schemes undertaken in 2010/11 have 2 years' data; and schemes undertaken in 2011/12 have 1 year's complete data. A complete set of data for schemes completed in 2012/13 is unavailable:

Roads: Potholes

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the number of potholes on roads; and to detail the average percentage of potholes that are repaired annually.

(AQW 28370/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not record statistics solely in relation to potholes either recorded or repaired.

As you may be aware, Article 8 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993, places a duty on Roads Service to maintain all public roads in reasonable condition. In recognition of its duty of care, Roads Service has put in place a set of Maintenance Standards for Safety. These standards, which are designed to ensure a consistent service level and a safe highway while offering value for money, are based on best practice, research and consultation with both the public and other professional bodies and Industry.

The standards and procedures currently in operation establish frequencies for road inspections, dependent on traffic volumes and specify response times for the repair of defects. Inspection frequencies vary between daily cycles for motorways to four monthly cycles for carriageways carrying low volumes of traffic. Response times specified for the repair of defects are dependent on the severity of the defect and range from one calendar day, to simple inclusion in the next work programme for that particular route. If it becomes apparent that the relevant response time cannot be met then the Department has the option of installing signs to warn road users of a possible danger.

I should also explain that there is a direct linkage between the amount of Capital funding available for resurfacing and surface dressing and the numbers of defects which need repaired. As the level of Capital funding decreases, the numbers and cost of responsive patching increases and vice versa.

Mullaghcarron Road, Maghaberry: Road Repairs

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the repairs that have been completed on the Mullaghcarron Road, Maghaberry in the last twelve months; and whether further repairs are planned.
(AQW 28377/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Mullaghcarron Road is inspected on an eight week cyclical basis and any identified defect considered to be hazardous to the public is processed for repair on a prioritised basis with the more severe defects treated more urgently . During the period November 2012 to November 2013, approximately 100 recorded defects have been identified and repaired on the Mullaghcarron Road.

I am pleased to confirm that Roads Service plans to carry out a carriageway resurfacing scheme on Mullaghcarron Road at its junction with White Lane, as part of a minor improvement scheme.

In the meantime, Roads Service will continue to regularly inspect the area and carry out any safety related repairs that are considered necessary.

Grants: DRD

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the grants available from his Department.
(AQW 28385/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below details the grants that are available from my Department.

Grants	Purpose
Public Service Obligation	Funding required to allow NI Railways to operate passenger services within an agreed fare structure that otherwise would prove uneconomic to complete in accordance with Regulation (EC) No 1370/2007.
Railway Capital	Capital Grant used for the purposes of maintaining and improving railway services in Northern Ireland, in accordance with Transport Act (Northern Ireland) 2011.
Bus Capital	Capital Grant to Translink for the acquisition of new buses and also maintaining and improving bus facilities in Northern Ireland, in accordance with Transport Act (Northern Ireland) 2011.
Rural Transport Fund	Support to Rural Community Transport Partnerships to provide transport options for rural people in Northern Ireland, to improve access to work, education, healthcare, shopping and recreational activities and in so doing reduce social isolation. This is done through the provision of Dial-a-Lift services for rural individuals throughout Northern Ireland. CTA – Community Transport Association provide the Department with advice, guidance and training in relation to voluntary and community organisations.

Grants	Purpose
Transport Programme for People with Disabilities Funding	Disability Action Transport Services are providing an interim service in urban areas across Northern Ireland for people with disabilities who are unable to use mainstream public transport. Shopmobility Schemes are providing services to their members who are either permanently or temporarily mobility impaired. They do this through the provision of scooters, wheelchairs and other ambulatory aids. IMTAC – Inclusive Mobility Transport Advisory Committee provide advice and guidance to the Department on issues around mobility for people with disabilities. Volunteer Now – provide a buddying scheme to assist people who have difficulties using public transport for various reasons to increase their confidence to enable them to regain their independence and travel on the public transport options available to them.
ecar Home and Workplace Charge Point Grant	Electric car owners are able to apply for a 100% grant for the supply and installation of a smart home or workplace charging point up to a maximum of £1,500.

Transport: Easibus

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of passengers who used the Easybus service in each of the last five years; and (ii) the average number of passengers who boarded the bus, per journey, on each route in the last year.

(AQW 28405/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink records the number of passenger journeys and estimates the average number of passengers. The tables below set out the information requested. No figures are available for Bangor and Londonderry beyond 2010/2011 as Easibus services in these areas were withdrawn in 2010 under the mandate of my predecessor the then Minister, Conor Murphy.

Coleraine: Christmas Car Parking

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will consider relaxing car parking charges in Coleraine during the Christmas Holiday period, in an effort to promote town centre shopping and put the town centre parking facilities on a par with out of town shopping outlets.

(AQW 28416/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware I have made a number of important decisions relating to parking charges including freezing the current off-street tariffs, rejection of the proposal to introduce on-street charging and the introduction of a cashless payment system for parking, Park Mobile. These decisions have been very beneficial to local businesses and were made against a backdrop of the requirement to recover costs and the need to effectively manage town centre parking, by promoting greater turnover of spaces and enhancing accessibility to businesses and services in our local towns and cities.

I have also recently announced the introduction of a new Christmas parking rate of five hours parking for just one pound in 95 of my Department's car parks including the Mall, Abbey Street and Long Commons car parks in Coleraine. The new tariff will be introduced from 2 December 2013 and will continue until 11 January 2014. Drivers will still be able pay the minimum tariff in each car park, if they so choose.

My Department's Roads Service is working in partnership with Coleraine Borough Council to provide a free 'Park & Ride' bus service to operate from Riverside Retail Park to the town centre every 15 minutes between 9.30 a.m. and 6.00 p.m. on each of the four Saturdays leading up to Christmas, commencing on 30 November.

I am confident these measures will provide a welcome boost for traders in Coleraine and would encourage the public to continue to support their local economy by shopping locally.

Compensation Claims: DRD

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost, including legal costs, to his Department of successful compensation claims for damage to (i) motor vehicles; and (ii) personal injury, arising over the last five years.

(AQW 28446/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the cost, including legal costs, to my Department associated with compensation claims for damage to (i) motor vehicles; and (ii) personal injury, arising over the last five years. The costs associated with both successful and unsuccessful claims are included as the Department does not disaggregate costs between successful and unsuccessful claims.

Year	Motor Vehicles (£000's)	Personal Injury (£000's)
2008/09	183	3,939
2009/10	246	3,982
2010/11	348	3,945
2011/12	392	3,965
2012/13	155	4,128

Translink: Belfast-Derry

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of preparing tender documents for the passing loop on the Belfast to Derry railway line.

(AQW 28447/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have liaised with Translink officials who have stated that the preparation of tender documents is just one element of the project management process and staff timesheet allocations do not differentiate this work from other project management functions.

It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Door-2-Door

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the delivery of the Door-to-Door Scheme by the Rural Transport Scheme.

(AQW 28450/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Door-2-Door scheme ended on 31 March 2013.

Disability Action continues to provide Disability Action Transport Services, on an interim basis, in partnership with a number of other voluntary and community organisations which include some rural community transport partnerships in 29 urban areas across Northern Ireland. For the period 01 April 2013 to 31 October 2013, there have been in excess of 54,000 passenger trips delivered.

I understand from Disability Action, who has operational responsibility for the scheme that there is a good working relationship and understanding between it and the rural partnerships and that Disability Action Transport Services continue to be delivered effectively.

Door-2-Door

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to review the current arrangements regarding the delivery of the Door-to-Door Transport Scheme.

(AQW 28451/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Disability Action Transport Service has only been in place since April 2013 and as such it would be too early to undertake any operational review.

My Department is undertaking an evaluation of the transport policies and schemes initiated by the Department to promote social inclusion. The outcome of the evaluation will assist my Department to better understand the barriers to the use of mainstream public transport, to identify what measures can be taken to overcome these barriers and to develop proposals to meet the transport needs of elderly and disabled people across Northern Ireland.

EU Funding: DRD

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the EU funding surrendered by his Department in each of the last two financial years.

(AQW 28492/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has not surrendered any EU funding in the last two financial years.

A6: Randalstown–Castledawson

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27642/11-15, to detail the procurement process for the Randalstown to Castledawson dual carriageway.

(AQW 28507/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service proposes to use a no value "Framework Contract" to procure the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson Dual Carriageway. The contract will be based around the principles of the New Engineering and Construction 3 Framework Contract which facilitates Early Contractor Involvement. In using this type of contract, the Employer (the Department) invites tenders from contractors to carry out work on an 'as instructed basis' over a set term but only one contractor is appointed.

The Framework Contract would comprise two phases:

- Phase 1 – Completion of detailed design work. At the same time, Works Orders could be instructed for works, such as archaeological and geotechnical investigations, which can be carried out in advance of the main construction works.
- Phase 2 – Commencement of construction.

This form of contract allows the appointment of a contractor and progresses the scheme to a "shovel ready" position, allowing construction to commence immediately funding is confirmed.

A6: Unsuccessful Bids

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27642/11-15, to detail why bids to fund construction on the A6 were unsuccessful.

(AQW 28509/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the court ruling in April of this year, which delayed the A5 Western Corridor dualling scheme, I wrote to the then Finance Minister in May, highlighting other schemes which could commence construction in 2014/15. The A6 Randalstown to Castledawson dual carriageway scheme was one of four schemes, for which bids were submitted as part of the October 2013 Monitoring Round and the 2014/15 Capital Budget Exercise.

Unfortunately, the bid to commence construction on the A6 in 2014/15 was not met by the Executive. However, sufficient funding was secured to establish a "no-value" contract that allows a contractor to be appointed to complete the detailed design work, and be ready to commence construction, when funding is confirmed.

The A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling scheme has been through a Public Inquiry. My officials have considered the Inspector's recommendations and I expect to make a Departmental Statement on the way forward later this financial year. Although well advanced, this scheme is not in a position to commence construction in 2014/15 and was therefore not eligible for construction funding in this period.

I will continue to press the need for this scheme in future bids for funding.

A6: Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27642/11-15, whether the only obstacle to dualling the A6 from Derry to Dungiven is funding.

(AQW 28511/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Delivering major roads schemes is a long process and can take up to six or seven years to develop, procure and commence construction. With our major projects two significant obstacles must be overcome: the securing of funding for procurement and construction and the successful completion of the statutory processes.

The A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling scheme is well advanced in terms of development; it has been through Public Inquiry, with publication of the Departmental Statement expected early in the new year. Progression of the project would, subject to final approval of the business case, be reliant upon funding being made available.

The Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland 2011-21 sets out plans to augment Executive funds by accessing alternative finance for some projects that are suitable to be funded in this way. This includes the progression of a package of high priority road schemes amounting to around £390 million, which would embrace improvements to the A6. However, a commitment to fund the revenue consequences of this roads package will be required and so the timing depends on future resource budgets. I will, however, continue to bid for conventional funding for the A6 dualling schemes.

TEN-T: A4/A5

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27376/11-15, to detail (i) whether the A5 and A4 are now part of the TEN-T network; (ii) the funding implications for the A4 and the A5 Western Transport Corridor dual carriageway project; (iii) the discussions he has had with the National Roads Authority to ensure that there is a standardisation of quality and seamlessness at the (a) A5/N2; (b) A4/N16; and (c) A5/N14 connection points.

(AQW 28518/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) I can confirm that both the A5 and A4 have been included on the TEN-T Comprehensive Network.
- (ii) Regarding funding implications, it is anticipated that 5% of the total €13,174bn Connecting Europe Facility budget will be reserved for the Comprehensive Network. Funding applications for any project may only be submitted once the periodic call criteria have been announced by the Commission. My Department, as always, will seek to maximise EU income by submitting suitable projects that match the call criteria.
- (iii) My Department's Roads Service has had discussions with the National Roads Authority on many road projects and, while there are some slight differences in terms of road standards, standardisation of quality does not prove to be an issue for road users. This is evidenced by the highly successful A1/N1 cross border project.

In relation to the A5 Western Transport Corridor project, technical working groups are in place for both the A5/N2 and A5/N14 border interfaces with representation from Roads Service, the National Roads Authority, Monaghan County Council (for A5/N2) and Donegal County Council (for A5/N14). These working groups ensure coordination and consistency between jurisdictions on this particular project.

Autism: DRD Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28546/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is standard practice for my Department's staff to treat all visitors to government buildings with courtesy and respect.

Where possible, details of visitors are provided to the Department in advance. In cases where the Department is notified of any visitors who may require additional help and support to cater for their needs, every effort is made to ensure that such assistance is provided. This applies to all visitors with disabilities, including those with autism spectrum conditions.

DRD officials have contributed to the cross-Departmental Autism Strategy 2013-2020 and initial Action Plan (2013-2016), which were recently approved by the NI Executive. The Action Plan contains proposals for autism awareness training for frontline staff across all Departments, including DRD.

Comber: Public Realm Scheme

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Regional Development, in relation to the Public Realm Scheme that is planned for Comber and following the public petition regarding narrow footpaths, whether he is content that a footpath less than one metre wide is a reasonable provision to ensure adequate safety for pedestrians and people with a disability.

(AQW 28568/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has inherited many footpaths in towns and villages throughout Northern Ireland, which do not meet modern day standards. The Public Realm Scheme planned for Comber is an Ards Borough Council led project, mainly funded by the Department of Social Development (DSD), but with a contribution from the Council.

In general, Environmental Improvement Schemes are intended to enhance and revitalise towns, providing finishes which will help encourage new development, increase business potential and make them more commercially viable and attractive to visitors. My Department's Roads Service is one of a number of consultees to the planning process in this regard.

As you will appreciate, site constraints in some narrow streets, together with other contributory factors, can present considerable practical difficulties when seeking to achieve desired aims. However, Roads Service, in conjunction with Public Representatives, Ards Borough Council, DSD, Comber Regeneration Community Partnership, PSNI, Appointed Consultants and other interested parties, will continue to provide advice and guidance in relation to potential road safety improvements in the town where practicable, subject to the availability of resources.

Roads: Potholes

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 28021/11-15, to detail the criteria used to allocate different depth of potholes into priorities for repair. [R]

(AQW 28742/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The level of priority attributed to the repair is determined by a number of factors including defect depth, volume of traffic, defect location in relation to carriageway width etc.

Department for Social Development

Housing Executive: Home Repairs Assistance Grant

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has received a proposal from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to reinstate the Home Repair Assistance grant scheme.

(AQW 27932/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive submitted a proposal to my Department earlier this year to have a more flexible approach to Home Repairs Assistance Grants (HRAG). However, the proposal related to a short term scheme which would only be available in a selected number of areas. It was therefore considered not to be a feasible option at this time

Having consulted on proposals to deregulate the statutory grants schemes, including the HRAG, my Department is currently examining options to make available alternative forms of assistance for repair and improvement in the private sector. I hope to make an announcement about this matter by Spring 2014.

Ballymena/Ballymoney/Ballycastle: Housing Executive Spend

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27344/11-15, for a breakdown of how the money was spent by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in (i) Ballymena; (ii) Ballycastle; and (iii) Ballymoney, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28263/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has provided the following breakdown of expenditure for their Ballymena, Ballycastle and Ballymoney District Office areas in each of the last three years:-

Housing: Benefit Fraud

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what action his Department is taking to prevent housing fraud.
(AQW 28341/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive recently developed a Tenancy Misuse / Fraud Strategy which sets out measures to allow staff to effectively prevent, detect and tackle misuse and fraud. The Tackling Fraud Strategy is being rolled out during 2013/14. The Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations is also in the process of developing a model strategy for Housing Associations to adopt and use as appropriate. In conjunction with this, my Department has set up a working group incorporating the Department, the Housing Executive and Housing Associations to examine what actions can be taken to more effectively address housing tenancy fraud.

Bloomfield Estate, Bangor: Housing Executive Ownership

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many houses in the Bloomfield Housing Estate, Bangor, are owned by the Housing Executive.

(AQW 28386/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested because the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by individual estates. However, the information below provides details of the properties owned by the Housing Executive in the Bloomfield, Rathgill and Willowbrook estates, all of which have the same estate code: -

Bungalows	270
Flats	184
Houses	270

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Soft Services: DSD

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development why AQW 27641/11-15 remains unanswered.

(AQW 28410/11-15)

Mr McCausland: AQW 27641/11-15 was answered on 22 November 2013

Housing: Scheme for the Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of Scheme for the Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings applications made in each of the last five years; and of these, how many were successful.

(AQW 28411/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table attached details the number of applications under the Scheme for the Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings in the last five years and those who were accepted.

Year	Applications received	Accepted
2008/09	100	46
2009/10	112	42
2010/11	69	26
2011/12	67	29
2012/13	64	28

East Belfast: Housing Waiting List

Mr Maskey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current housing waiting list for East Belfast, broken down by ward.

(AQW 28432/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested because the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Ward. However, the table below details the number of applicants on the waiting list at 1 November 2013 by Common Landlord Area in East Belfast:-

Common Landlord Area	Applicants on Waiting List

South Belfast: Housing Waiting List

Mr Maskey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current housing waiting list for South Belfast, broken down by ward.

(AQW 28433/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested because the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Ward. However, the table below details the number of applicants on the waiting list at 1 November 2013 by Common Landlord Area in South Belfast: -

Common Landlord Area	Applicants on Waiting List

Derry: Social Housing Need Assessment

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development why the Social Housing Need Assessment 2012-17, included in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013, projects five year need at 1540 when the current Common Waiting List stands at 3286. (AQW 28468/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The 2013/14 Derry City District Housing Plan identified a need for 1560 additional units over the period 2012 to 2017.

The Housing Executive carries out an annual assessment of social housing need for local housing areas in Northern Ireland. Essentially, the assessment is a five year social housing need projection and is calculated by subtracting the number of applications in housing stress (demand) from the number of allocations and vacant properties (supply). The Housing Executive also considers additional factors such as demographic trends and regeneration issues (redevelopment) before determining the final figure.

The waiting list figures published in the report stem from December 2012 and state that 3,311 households were on the waiting list at this time, and that 2,203 were in housing need. Housing stress refers to applicants who have 30 points or more. 619 Allocations were made in the past year and of that, 23 properties were void.

The most recent waiting list data for the area is from 31 October 2013, with 3,425 on the waiting list, and 2,307 in housing stress.

Housing Executive: Enforcement Actions

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many Housing Executive tenants, who were in arrears in each of the last five years, had enforcement action taken against them through the legal system. (AQW 28483/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information below provides the number of enforcement actions taken by the Housing Executive against tenants in rent arrears at 31 March in each of the last five years: -

2009	105
2010	43
2011	58
2012	32
2013	52

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Housing Executive: Loan Balance

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development how much is the historic debt of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive; and to what does this debt relate. (AQW 28523/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As at 31 March 2013, the outstanding loan balance was £541,183,740.

The loans were generally taken out to finance new build housing activities by the Housing Executive and its predecessor organisations, including the Housing Trust and former local authorities.

Employment and Support Allowance: Fibromyalgia

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many people have been awarded Employment and Support Allowance after being diagnosed with Fibromyalgia. (AQW 28590/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The latest published statistical information for Employment and Support Allowance covers the period ending 31 May 2013.

At that date there were 1,070 Employment and Support Allowance claimants who had fibromyalgia registered as their primary medical condition.

Charities: Pensions Deficit

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development how his Department is supporting charities and voluntary organisations that are facing a substantial pensions deficit.
(AQW 28629/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department does not have a specific role in supporting charities and voluntary organisations which are facing substantial pension deficits. Pension deficits are primarily a matter for the administrators of the individual schemes and for local voluntary organisations and charities as employers. Additionally, pensions are regulated by The Pensions Regulator who has a UK wide remit, on behalf of Government, to promote and improve understanding of the good administration of work-based pensions to protect member benefits. Whilst the Pensions Regulator does not provide specific advice on scheme funding, guidance is provided on key issues such as valuations and deficit recovery plans.

The Pensions Regulator has indicated that, if advice around the funding of a particular scheme is required it should be sought from a professional source.

Autism: DSD Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.
(AQW 28651/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department has not made any specific provision within DSD buildings in regard to receiving visitors diagnosed with autism.

Newry and Armagh: Homelessness

Ms Fearon asked the Minister for Social Development i) how many people presented themselves as homeless in Newry and Armagh, in the last three years; and (ii) what action his Department is taking to support these people.
(AQW 28664/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) The table below shows homeless presentations and acceptances in Newry & Armagh:

Homeless presentations and acceptances Newry & Armagh 2010/2013

Newry

Year	Presenting as homeless	Accepted as homeless (Full duty Applicant)
2010/11	770	324
2011/12	805	322
2012/13	761	402

Armagh

Year	Presenting as homeless	Accepted as homeless (Full duty Applicant)
2010/11	278	122
2011/12	300	133
2012/13	259	126

- (ii) In response to homelessness in Northern Ireland, the Housing Executive and its partners in the Promoting Social Inclusion Homelessness Partnership have been developing and producing a range of homeless prevention measures under the auspices of the Homelessness Strategy 2012/2017.

The Housing Executive launched the Homelessness Strategy for Northern Ireland on 1 May 2012. This followed an extensive consultation and redrafting process throughout 2011, to establish agreement among the Statutory and Voluntary Agencies who would be delivering the strategy.

The Homelessness Strategy 2012-17 sets out their strategy for tackling homelessness over the next five years and establishes the guiding principles for the development and delivery of homelessness services. At this time of economic uncertainty and financial constraints it is more important than ever that homelessness services are appropriate, timely and effective.

The aim of this homelessness strategy is that long term homelessness and rough sleeping is eliminated across Northern Ireland by 2020 and has four Strategic Objectives:

- To place homelessness prevention at the forefront of service delivery
- To reduce the length of time households and individuals experience homelessness by improving access to affordable housing
- To remove the need to sleep rough
- To improve services to vulnerable homeless households and individuals

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of (i) applications; and (ii) approvals for the Warm Homes Scheme in each constituency, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28668/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive administers the Warm Homes Scheme and uses 2 external Scheme Managers to deliver the programme. The Scheme Managers arrange to have the measures installed once it is established that an applicant is eligible for assistance. The information is not available at constituency level, but is shown at District Council level for the number of measures provided.

The Tables below show the number of enquiries received (Table 1); the number of those enquiries who are eligible for Warm Homes measures (Table 2) and the number who have had Warm Homes measures provided (Table 3).

Living over the Shop

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to announce a grant programme to encourage town centre regeneration similar to the Living Over the Shop scheme, particularly for towns which have not been supported by such a scheme.

(AQW 28770/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department's new Urban Regeneration and Community Development Policy Framework establishes town and city centre regeneration as a key policy priority and the Housing Strategy sets out my intention to revitalise the Living over the Shops (LOTS) initiative and ensure synergy with our mainstream urban regeneration initiatives.

My officials are currently developing policy proposals to introduce an initiative to encourage people to return to town centre living, in recognition of the important role that housing can play in helping to diversify and re-energise our town and city centres. Proposals will be informed by a review of the previous LOTS scheme which was undertaken by the NIHE and by discussions with key stakeholders such as Northern Ireland Independent Retail Trade Association.

Soft Services: DSD

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development why AQW 27641/11-15 remains unanswered.

(AQW 28833/11-15)

Mr McCausland: AQW 27641/11-15 was answered on 22 November 2013

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Work Contracts: Zero Hours

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to detail the number of employees that are on zero hour contracts within Parliament Buildings arising from Commission expenditure.

(AQW 28193/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane: The Assembly Commission does not employ any members of staff on zero hour contracts.

Expenditure by the Assembly Commission includes a number of contracts with third party service providers covering services such as printing and publishing, broadcasting, maintenance and support services (catering, cleaning and retail). These contracts are managed by the third party suppliers.

Parliament Buildings: Telephone System

Mr McGlone asked the Assembly Commission to detail (i) how many telephone lines within Parliament Buildings are restricted from making calls to '00353' numbers; and (ii) what consultation took place with Members, Assembly Management and Assembly staff prior to enforcing these restrictions.

(AQW 28396/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: During the comprehensive spending review, it was noted that the telephone system in Parliament Buildings had little or no access control employed and that international calls could be made from most landlines in the building.

In order to minimise any potential for misuse, senior management agreed to re-set the access level on all landlines to bar international calls. This was part of a range of cost saving measures introduced as part of the review that also included removing voicemail systems that had not been activated.

It should be noted, however, that the international bar does not prevent calls to GB mainland, the Republic of Ireland and to mobile networks.

It was agreed that Building Services Branch would, on request, re-set the access level on any telephone to permit international calls to be made and many have now been re-set. The number of telephones in the building currently restricted from making international calls is 159.

I can also confirm that your own landline currently has no restrictions in place.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Judicial Appointments Commission

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, following the findings by the Public Accounts Committee against Mr Eoin Doyle, whether he will continue to serve as a Lay Magistrate and member of the Judicial Appointments Commission. (AQW 27404/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The procedure for appointing members to the NI Judicial Appointments Commission and for terminating such appointments is set out in Section 3 and Schedule 2 of the Justice (NI) Act 2002.

Reinvestment and Reform Initiative

Mr P Ramsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the current state of the Reinvestment and Reform Initiative; and to detail the current and planned expenditure in relation to the initiative. (AQW 27992/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Reinvestment and Reform Initiative (RRI) commenced in 2002. Elements of the Initiative have since been subsumed into a number of key Executive programmes, including the Programme for Government and Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland.

Regular updates on former military and security sites included in the Programme for Government are provided to the OFMDFM Committee. We made a Written Statement to the Assembly on progress with the implementation of the Investment Strategy in July 2013.

In 2011, a further three sites were gifted under the Hillsborough Agreement. These sites were not intended primarily for regeneration but are intended to provide capital receipts for the Executive. A soft market test of the Shackleton site is being undertaken to determine options for sale. Options for the other two sites are being reviewed.

The Executive plans to borrow £200 million in 2013-14 and £250 million in 2014-15. In addition, as part of the 'Economic Pact' there is a further £100 million RRI borrowing available across 2014-15 and 2015-16 for shared housing and shared education projects.

Looking forward, the Executive will make decisions on the appropriate level of RRI borrowing for 2015-16 as part of its Budget process.

Ballykelly: Expressions of Interest

Mr Dallat asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what criteria will be applied when choosing a buyer for the former army barracks at Ballykelly, following the recent advertisement for expressions of interest. (AQW 28444/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Our Department is testing the market by calling for expressions of interest following a number of meetings between officials and interested parties. We will consider the contents of all submissions before making a decision on the next steps.

Any final decision will be based on the demonstrable value to the Executive, the local community and to the region. We may request further engagement in order to clarify and or explore potential uses in the context of an emerging strategy for the Shackleton site.

Autism: OFMDFM Buildings

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what provision is made within their departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs. (AQW 28515/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: All visitors to government buildings should be treated with courtesy and respect by staff. Where possible, details of visitors are notified to reception in advance of their arrival. Where visitors with disabilities, including those with autism spectrum conditions, advise they require additional help and support to cater for their needs, every effort will be made to ensure this is provided for them.

As required by the 2011 Autism Act, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety led on the development of the cross-departmental Autism Strategy and Action Plan, which was approved by the Executive on 28 November 2013. The Action Plan contains proposals for autism awareness training for frontline Civil Service staff. It is anticipated that the Strategy and Action Plan will be launched and published before the end of the year.

Shackleton Barracks: Development

Mr G Robinson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how they envisage the development of the former Ministry of Defence Shackleton base at Ballykelly proceeding.

(AQO 5110/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The former Shackleton Barracks was transferred to OFMDFM under the Hillsborough Castle Agreement. The original intention was that it should be sold and the proceeds used to help fund Executive programmes.

When we received this site, the property market was in a steep decline and offers for the site did not match its commercial value, nor assist in the economic development potential for the region. The decision was therefore taken to maintain the site until the property market started to improve and potential uses could be developed that would address regional, social and economic needs.

In 2012, the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development announced an intention to relocate the DARD headquarters to Shackleton.

We believe the time is right to test the market, to determine the level of interest in this vast 720 acre site. In order to do this, a soft market testing exercise began on 18 November. We anticipate that this exercise will provide potential ideas and uses for the site.

After the level of interest is determined, a decision will be taken as to the suitability to go forward with development plans.

Goods, Facilities and Services: Legislation

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to explain the delay with bringing forward the goods, facilities and services legislation; and when the legislation will be brought before the Assembly.

(AQW 28824/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are currently considering the scope of the legislation and the implications of the various options available to us for taking this forward.

This is an extremely complex policy area, and Junior Ministers have responded positively to requests for meetings to discuss the issue with stakeholders, such as the Equality Commission and the Commissioner for Children and Young People.

Goods, Facilities and Services: Legislation

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister which issues of the goods, facilities and services legislation have yet to be agreed.

(AQW 28825/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are currently considering the scope of the legislation and the implications of the various options available to us for taking this forward.

Children's Expenditure: Pilot

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) when the Children's Budgeting Pilot will commence; (ii) which expenditure it will track; and (iii) when, and to whom, it will report its progress, outcomes and findings.

(AQW 28826/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: It is expected that the pilot on tracking children's expenditure will commence in April 2014. Preparatory work has already commenced and, over the next few weeks, we will be asking key departments to identify areas of expenditure which could be further disaggregated to identify spend on children and young people.

When a suitable area is identified, the Terms of Reference will be agreed with the participating department which will set out the scope, duration and the monitoring and reporting arrangements for the pilot.

Social Investment Fund

Mr Lunn asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister in which financial year is the money allocated to the Social Investment Fund due to be spent.

(AQW 28882/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: It is anticipated there will be significant spend over the next 3 financial years.

Child Poverty: Definition

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what are the definitions of (i) absolute; and (ii) relative child poverty used by their Department.

(AQW 28999/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The definitions of absolute and relative child poverty used by OFMDFM are the definitions that are laid out in the Child Poverty Act 2010.

A child is considered to be in absolute poverty if they are living in a household with an equivalised income below 60% of median income in 2010/11, as adjusted for subsequent inflation. This is a measure of whether those in the lowest income households are seeing their incomes rise in real terms. In 2011/12, the most recent year for which data were available, the absolute poverty threshold for a couple with two children aged 5 and 15 was an income of £404 per week before housing costs are taken into account. Absolute child poverty in 2011/12 was estimated to be 25% (109,000 children).

A child is considered to be in relative poverty if they are living in a household with an equivalised income below 60% of UK median income in the year in question. This is a measure of whether those in the lowest income households are keeping pace with the growth of incomes in the population as a whole. In 2011/12 the relative poverty threshold for a couple with two children aged 5 and 15 was an income of £392 per week (before housing costs) from all sources. Relative child poverty in 2011/12 was 22% (almost 95,000 children).

Definitions for the measurement of relative and absolute child poverty are prescribed in the Child Poverty Act (2010). Child poverty rates are measured through the Family Resources Survey which, as a sample survey, is subject to sampling error. Household incomes are equivalised to allow households of different sizes and compositions to be compared.

Social Investment Fund: Zones

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister on the basis of what criteria have funds been allocated across the nine social investment zones.

(AQW 29017/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We have now agreed the allocations for the nine Social Investment Fund (SIF) Zones. In coming to this decision, we considered both the scale of need and identification of need in each zone under the objectives of the Fund, using the original set of criteria below as a guide:

- Areas within the top 10% most deprived Super Output Areas on the Multiple Deprivation Measure 2010.
- Areas within the top 20% most deprived Super Output Areas on the key domains of income, employment, education and health.
- Areas which can provide independently verified and robust evidence of objective need linked to the 4 strategic objectives of SIF.

The approach we have set out will focus the funds we have available to meet the objectives of SIF and clearly target the areas of deprivation that exist in each of the zones, as well as ensuring that funding is disbursed across all areas of deprivation, regardless of scale and not just those with concentrated urban problems. This approach means that we will tackle deprivation in the areas of high and durable need but also allows us to reach into smaller pockets of deprivation.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Forest Service: Relocation

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on her Department's proposal to relocate Forest Service headquarters to Co. Fermanagh; and to detail when she expects to make an announcement on the preferred location.

(AQW 28622/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): In line with the Programme for Government target, I remain fully committed to the relocation of Forest Service to Fermanagh by June 2015. An appraisal of the options for accommodating Forest Service in Fermanagh is ongoing.

The appraisal is informed by my Department's Estate Framework which complements the Executives Asset Management Strategy. That Framework points towards the preferred location being in Enniskillen. My officials are exploring accommodation options including the potential of Inishkeen House in Enniskillen where some Forest Service staff are currently based. When the appraisal is complete I will confirm the findings.

City of Culture 2013: DARD Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28671/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) No tenders were awarded.
- (ii) My Department did not provide funding to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013. However, the Loughs Agency, a North South Implementation Body, which is co-sponsored by my Department and the Department of Communications, Energy and Natural Resources in the south played a vital role in the City of Culture events and sponsored the Turner Prize event and also the Fields Trio event, which was part of the Walled City Music Festival. The total sponsorship used by the Loughs Agency from north/south grant aid was £9,000.

The Agency partnered with Tate Britain to supply local oysters, harvested from Lough Foyle, to the event which was attended by 1500 guests. In addition the Agency supplied local oysters to a reception on an Irish naval vessel on Lough Foyle. The Turner Prize launch received wide national and international media coverage.

The Loughs Agency also had a high profile role in the Flavours of the Foyle Seafood Festival, which attracted 18,000 visitors and hosted the Sea Angling Competition in the World Police and Fire Games in Derry.

The Loughs Agency will also be working with key partners in the development of the Clipper Round the World Yacht Race events, planned for June 2014 and June 2016 and the events surrounding it including sailing events, other water based activities, angling competitions and a seafood festival.

Integrated Prevention and Pollution Control: Training

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline her Department's current capability to deliver training of Integrated Prevention Pollution Control.

(AQW 28855/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is currently working with LANTRA Awards, the organisation who accredits training in Integrated Prevention and Pollution Control, to have trainers approved to deliver this training. I anticipate that my Department will be in a position to deliver training in early 2014.

Integrated Prevention and Pollution Control: Training

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what is the current waiting list for training of Integrated Prevention Pollution Control.

(AQW 28856/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is a current waiting list of 59 people.

Training: DARD

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what was the value of the fees paid for training courses that her Department was unable to deliver, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28857/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: This current financial year £340 of fees were returned for a training course my Department did not deliver due to insufficient applications. No fees were returned during the previous three financial years.

Reservoirs: Legislation

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 27876/11-15, whether the reservoirs named are currently up to the standard required under the forthcoming legislation on reservoirs.

(AQW 28859/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The reservoirs referred to in the response to AQW 27876/11-15 are owned by NI Water (NIW). It is my understanding that NIW have been managing these reservoirs in the spirit of the Reservoirs Act 1975. If this is the case, and subject to any amendments to the legislation during the Assembly process, these reservoirs should satisfy the requirements of the Reservoirs Bill.

Training: DARD

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department's literature promotes training providers other than the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise.

(AQW 28891/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department produces literature to promote its services to the industry which includes the training programmes provided by CAFRE. My Department also promotes training programmes which are delivered by other training providers on behalf of DARD.

Single Farm Payment

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department will act on the agreement reached at Brussels, which allows for advance contributions to be made to Single Farm Payment Scheme claimants, to make advance payments to Single Farm Payment applicants that have included land in their application that is the subject of more than one claim.

(AQW 28896/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Advance payments are not possible in cases where two applicants have used the same land to support their Single Farm Payment claims and the issue has not been resolved. Payments (regardless of whether these are advances or within the December payment window) can only be made once the claim is fully validated and the duplicate field issue resolved.

Greyhound Racing: Legislation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has to introduce legislation on greyhound racing and welfare.

(AQW 28920/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has policy and legislative responsibility for the welfare of both farmed and other animals, including greyhounds. The regulation of greyhound racing per se does not come under my Department's remit as greyhound racing is not regarded as an agricultural activity and does not take place on agricultural land. The Department for Social Development is responsible for the licensing of dog racing tracks for the purpose of betting.

My Department has recently made substantial improvements to animal welfare legislation with the introduction of the new Welfare of Animals Act 2011. The 2011 Act aims to safeguard the welfare of all animals and provides powers for inspectors to take such steps as necessary to ensure the welfare of these animals is maintained, should they believe a protected animal is suffering or is likely to suffer.

I believe the 2011 Act provides sufficient powers to protect the welfare of greyhounds both on and off the track. Any specific welfare concerns in respect of any greyhound should be reported to the Councils' Animal Welfare Officers who enforce the 2011 Act in respect of non-farmed animals, including greyhounds. Contact details for the relevant Councils' Animal Welfare Officers can be obtained at <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/>.

Given the recent substantial improvements to animal welfare legislation, which covers greyhounds, I have no plans to introduce further legislation in this area.

Salmon: Drift Net Licences

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what decision has been made to deal with Lough Foyle fishermen who were promised outright purchase of their Drift Net Licences by the Department, given that these fishermen have been banned from fishing for the last five years.

(AQW 28952/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Neither my Department or the Loughs Agency is aware of any promise of an outright purchase of salmon Drift Net Licences within the Foyle Area.

Salmon drift net fishermen were previously offered a salmon fishing hardship package in 2007 after a period of consultation. The scheme was not taken up by a small number of fishermen who decided that they would prefer to retain their fishing history and continued to fish in 2007, 2008 and 2009. However, the stocks of salmon did not improve and in 2010 all salmon drift netting within Lough Foyle was suspended (not banned) by Regulation, and currently remains suspended.

Farming: Remote Sensing

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how, and when, land owners were notified that their land was subject to remote sensing inspections.

(AQW 29204/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department will issue letters to affected farm businesses in December 2013, informing them that their land was subject to control with remote sensing. Land owners will not be notified, unless they are claimant farmers that have had an inspection by control with remote sensing.

There is no requirement to notify land owners or farmers.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

GAA: Funding

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 7387/11-15, for an update on the data provided. (AQW 27449/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): I am not aware of any GAA Clubs that are named after a so-called terrorist. Since April 2011, Sport NI has provided a total of £1,527,973 to GAA clubs across the north up to 31 March 2013. A breakdown of this figure, and the names of the GAA clubs that have received funding, is attached at Annex A.

Annex A

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how organisations apply for funding from the £2 million City of Culture Legacy Fund. (AQW 28767/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The funding I announced on 20th November is not subject to an open call for applications. Rather, it will be allocated on the basis of need to continue key projects from the 2013 cultural programme, and in the context of my Department's priorities and Business Plan.

The aim is to promote the positive continuance of key benefits, partnerships and momentum after December 2013 and to invest in the development of modern sports facilities.

It is my intention to make a bid to the Executive for funding for the 2014/ 15 financial year to support ongoing and new interventions which maximise City of Culture benefits across the North West of Ireland in tackling poverty, social exclusion and inequality.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) when the company limited by guarantee to deliver the City of Culture legacy programmes and activities will be established; (ii) where this company will be based; (iii) the number of staff to be employed by the company; and (iv) when it will produce its corporate plan.

(AQW 28768/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Whilst detailed arrangements will be developed in the coming months, it is my intention to have new structures in place for the 2014/15 financial year in order to maintain momentum and maximise benefits from the City of Culture 2013.

The new body, which will be based in Derry will have responsibility for developing the area as a creative and cultural driver for the north of Ireland and beyond.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) projects that will be supported by the £2 million City of Culture Legacy fund; and (ii) monies allocated to each project.

(AQW 28769/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have secured over £2m for the January to March 2014 period to support continuation of key projects from the City of Culture's cultural programme in 2013 to prevent the loss of key benefits, partnerships and momentum after December 2013 and to invest in strategic sports facility development.

All projects will be subject to acceptance and adherence to conditions set out in detailed contracts or letters of offer which have not yet been finalised.

Supported projects are expected to include:

- Music projects, for example key elements of the Music Promise project and the return of Other Voices to Derry in February 2014;
- Digital projects, for example continuation of the Portrait of a City project and digital skills provision;
- Literacy skills projects, for example the Disobey Gravity programme;
- Community projects delivered under Community Cultural Strategies developed for neighbourhood renewal areas;
- A pilot creative voucher scheme in Derry designed to stimulate new collaborations between creative enterprises and businesses from a diverse range of other sectors;
- Expansion of the Nerve Centre's Fab Lab with a wider North West emphasis; and
- Sports facility development.

In addition I will make available funding for the purchase of Eamonn O'Doherty's Armoured Pram, Lumiere's Stitch in Time piece and a portable community venue, subject to appropriate contractual agreements.

North-west: DCAL Office

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) when the departmental North West office will open; (ii) where it will be located; (iii) what will be its remit; and (iv) to detail the number and grade of staff employed.

(AQW 28836/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials are currently preparing detailed plans and costings for the establishment of the DCAL North West Office during this financial year. Further details will be released in due course.

City of Culture 2013: Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, in relation to the £12.6 million awarded to fund the City of Culture 2013, to detail (i) the projects funded by the award; (ii) the arts organisations that received funding; and (iii) the monies awarded to each organisation.

(AQW 28837/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has allocated a total of £12.6m (£6.5m for 2012/13 and £6.1m for 2013/14) to Derry City Council for the 2013 City of Culture's cultural programme of events.

Derry City Council has responsibility for providing funding to the many hundreds of organisations for events that have taken place as part of the cultural programme. These events have included Music Promise, Portrait of a City, Individual Artists Programme, Digital Book of Kells, London Symphony Orchestra and many others.

As we do not yet have a final account, it would not be appropriate to provide a breakdown of funding for each project and organisations at this time.

Sport: Sharing of School Sports Facilities

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what collaboration has taken place with the Department of Education to ensure there are adequate outdoor sporting facilities for use by community and sporting groups and local schools in Bangor.

(AQW 28873/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have been having ongoing discussions with the Minister of Education regarding the opening up and sharing of school sports facilities with the local community and sports groups throughout the north of Ireland, including Bangor.

Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, and the Department of Education (DE) have worked together to develop two guidance documents that seek to encourage community use of schools and school sports facilities, including within the Bangor area. As part of the delivery of Sport Matters, Sport NI's guidance document 'Your School, Your Club' has been developed to ensure that its content and advice is complementary to that provided in the DE Community Use Toolkit.

The Minister of Education and I intend to jointly launch both documents early next year.

Commonwealth Games 2014: Funding

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much financial support her Department and Sport NI will award to local competitors in the 2014 Commonwealth Games.

(AQW 28923/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The NI Commonwealth Games Council has not yet selected local competitors for the 2014 Commonwealth Games.

However, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, is investing £543,129 in Commonwealth Games sports through its Athlete Investment Programme in this current financial year. The Sports Costs strand of the Programme, which contributes to the implementation of agreed training and competition programmes, is made to the Governing Body which in turn selects the most suitable athletes. Athletes may apply directly to Sport NI for the Living Costs strand of the Programme which contributes to essential living and travel costs.

This funding is not solely for preparation for the Commonwealth Games, but also in respect of other competitions that take place during the investment period. Funding for 2014/15 in respect of Commonwealth Games sports has yet to be determined.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what legacy is envisaged in areas outside Londonderry from the UK City of Culture.

(AQW 28996/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I recently announced my strategic vision for City of Culture legacy, not just for the City of Derry, but for the entire North West of Ireland.

A key legacy objective is to ensure that the benefits of our investment in the City are felt in the towns and villages across the North West of Ireland.

It is my intention to make a bid to the Executive for funding for the 2014/15 financial year and beyond to support ongoing and new interventions which maximise City of Culture benefits across the whole North West of Ireland in tackling poverty, social exclusion and inequality.

My Department is working with Derry City Council, Limavady Borough Council and Coleraine Borough Council to support the development of modern sports facilities over the next 2-3 years which I believe will benefit the local communities, enhance good relations and promote equal opportunities in this area. This will include support for sports complexes at Daisyfield, in Derry, Dungiven and Coleraine.

I will continue to engage and work with stakeholders throughout the North West over the coming months to develop my legacy plans.

Sport: Museum/Hall of Fame

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on a local sports museum.

(AQW 29038/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster Sports Museum Association (USMA) has received significant financial support from Government Departments in recent years to undertake feasibility work and to develop an outline business case for an Ulster Sports Museum/Hall of Fame. This proposal did not demonstrate value for money nor long term sustainability without significant, on-going public sector support.

As part of the ongoing stadia development each of the Business Cases for the stadia will include proposals for Education and Heritage Centres which will celebrate the evolution of the games of Rugby Union, Association Football and Gaelic Games and their respective positive roles in contributing to a healthy, shared society. It is anticipated that this provision at the new stadia will further impact on the viability of a dedicated Sports Museum/Hall of Fame.

David Healy

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she has any plans to mark David Healy's retirement as a professional footballer.

(AQW 29039/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have no plans to mark David Healy's retirement as a professional footballer.

However, I have publically recognised David Healy's remarkable goal scoring achievements during his career in international football.

Sport: Subregional Stadiums

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the funding for sub-regional stadia, including a timescale for progress.

(AQW 29249/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Given that funding for the development of sub-regional association football stadiums has still to be secured, no decision of any kind on funding to assist the development of any sub-regional stadiums has yet been taken.

Department of Education

Grants: DE

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail all the grants available through his Department.

(AQW 28388/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): There are a number of different types of grants allocated through my Department and these are listed below.

Schools: Maximum Travel Distance

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has a maximum distance beyond which a child should not have to travel to attend school.

(AQW 28491/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Parents can express their preference as to which school they wish their child to attend anywhere in the North.

The Department does not specify a maximum distance beyond which a child should not travel, this is a matter for the parents.

Autism: DE Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what provision is made within his departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28652/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: All visitors to Department of Education buildings are treated with courtesy and respect by staff. Where possible, details of all visitors are provided to reception staff prior to their arrival. Where visitors advise of a requirement for additional help and support to cater for their specific needs, including autism spectrum conditions, every effort will be made to ensure this support is provided for them. All visitors who are attending by invitation, or notify my Department in advance, are met at reception and are escorted to their destination.

West Belfast: DE Spend

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Education for a breakdown of (i) capital spend; (ii) maintenance spend; and (iii) any other additional spend by his Department in West Belfast, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28691/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below.

	2010/11 £	2011/12 £	2012/13 £	Total
Capital	8,429,425	8,123,126	10,217,603	26,770,154
Maintenance	4,074,520	4,581,502	5,691,734	14,347,756

Total	133,652,079	135,486,711	122,029,706	407,077,833

* includes spend on schools, school meals kitchens, youth clubs, transport, Sure Start, special needs etc.

Crossroads Primary School, Kilrea: Newbuild

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education for an update on the plans for a new build for the Crossroads Primary School near Kilrea, including an estimated completion date.

(AQW 28713/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: At present, there are no specific plans for a new build project for Crossroads Primary School.

While Crossroads Primary School will be disappointed that it is not included in my capital programme at this time, this in no way implies that it will not be considered for funding at a later stage within the on-going area planning process.

Schools: 3G Pitches

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education what funds are available to upgrade school pitches to 3G.
(AQW 28749/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are no specific funds dedicated to the upgrade of school pitches.

Education and Library Boards receive a budget to progress a programme of minor works in controlled schools and the Department administers a programme for non-controlled schools. Applications are considered on a case by case basis and assessed on their individual merits in line with ministerial priorities.

All schools are welcome to make an application to the relevant authority for the provision of a synthetic pitch, either to the Education and Library Boards in respect of Controlled schools or the Department of Education for non Controlled schools .

School Attendance: Legislation

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education whether the law which compels parents or guardians to ensure children attend school is also enforceable against care home staff.

(AQW 28762/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Article 45(1) of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 ("the 1986 Order") states that:-

"The parent of every child of compulsory school age shall cause him to receive efficient full-time education suitable to his age, ability and aptitude and to any special educational needs he may have, either by regular attendance at school or otherwise."

Article 45(2) goes on to state that the provisions of Schedule 13 (Enforcement) shall apply and a parent who contravenes the provision of Article 45(1) shall be guilty of an offence and liable to the penalties provided by paragraph 4 of that Schedule.

Article 2D of the 1986 Order states that a parent in relation to a child or young person includes any person -

"(a) who is not a parent of his but who has parental responsibility for him, or

(b) who has care of him"

For a child living in a care home, any legal action taken under these provisions would be against the relevant Health and Social Care Trust.

Schools: Outdoor Sports Facilities

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how much each Education and Library Board has spent on primary school outdoor sports facilities in each of the last five years; and from which budget area this was funded.

(AQW 28869/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Education and Library Boards (ELBs) receive a budget to progress a programme of minor works in controlled schools. I have been advised that applications are assessed and prioritised using the published criteria. Within this programme a range of sporting and play facilities are provided including playgrounds, upgrade of existing and provision of new sports pitches, provision of drainage, security fencing and storage units. The following table details expenditure by year:

Primary Schools: Sports Facilities

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail the outdoor primary school sports facilities that his Department has directly funded, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28870/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not directly fund capital programmes in schools. It grant aids a programme of capital minor works in non-controlled schools in conjunction with the relevant school authority.

This programme grant aids a range of facilities including playgrounds, upgrade of existing pitches, and provision of drainage, security fencing and storage units. The Department does not record sporting facilities grant aided under the minor works programme as a separate funding stream. However, the total available for all minor works programmes in the last 5 years, including sporting facilities, in the non-controlled sector is detailed in the table below.

2008/2009	2009/2010	2010/2011	2011/2012	2012/2013
£26.855m	£39.248m	£18.516m	£21.103m	£29.106m

Sports facilities have been included and approved for the purposes of grant aid in major school capital build projects, however, the costs of these facilities are subsumed within the overall cost of the project.

Post-primary Schools: Sports Facilities

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how much each Education and Library Board has spent on post-primary school outdoor sports facilities in each of the last five years; and from which budget area this was funded.

(AQW 28871/11-15)

Schools: Transformation to Integrated Status

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education how many designated officers there are within (i) the Department of Education; (ii) each Education and Library Boards; and (iii) the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, to support schools that (a) have transformed; and (b) wish to transform.

(AQW 28875/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: (i) The Department of Education does not have a designated officer as the funding and other help provided to support schools that (a) have transformed; and (b) wish to transform to integrated status is provided by a team of officials as part of their wider duties. (ii) Each Education and Library Board has arrangements in place to support schools that have transformed or wish to transform. SEELB has a designated officer whereas the other Education and Library Boards identify a team of officers to provide advice and support in relation to all relevant issues, as required. (iii) The Council for Catholic Maintained Schools does not have a designated officer.

Education and Training Inspectorate: Monitoring/Evaluation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what monitoring and evaluation takes place on the Education and Training Inspectorate. (AQW 28921/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As an organisation committed to continuous improvement and increased openness, the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) secures an independent evaluation of its work on an annual basis.

Up until 2008/09, this external independent evaluation had been conducted for a number of years by Price Waterhouse Coopers. From 2009 to date, to reduce costs involved, an independent, confidential, post-inspection evaluation has been conducted by the (NISRA).

Furthermore, during the last four years, ETI has also been subject to a (1) Charter Mark Assessment, (2) DE Internal Audit Evaluation, and (3) Customer Service Excellence Award Assessment.

All of these assessments of quality have reported very positively on the organisation.

Schools: Crossing Patrols

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the criteria used to determine whether a school crossing patrol guard is replaced when a vacancy arises.

(AQW 28939/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards are responsible for the provision of school crossing patrols (SCP). In the event of an SCP position becoming vacant, the Board that is responsible is required to undertake a series of surveys and a risk assessment at the site to determine whether there is a continued need for the provision. The surveys and risk assessments are carried out in accordance with agreed five Board criteria based on Road Safety GB guidelines developed by the Local Authority Road Safety Officers' Association in England and Wales. The guidelines incorporate elements from the existing widely adopted criteria for the assessment of potential zebra and pelican crossing sites, and consider factors such as:

- Vehicular traffic flow at school times;
- The number of pedestrians crossing (both accompanied and unaccompanied);
- The average age of the pupils traversing the road;
- The safety record on the portion of the road where the SCP is positioned;
- Speed limit; and
- Sight lines.

The appointment process for SCPs is carried out in accordance with established Board procedures and there are no plans to change the process or the determination of need for an SCP.

The Road Safety GB guidelines, that are used to determine whether a school crossing patrol is replaced, were formally reviewed by Road Safety GB in June 2012. Given this recent review Boards consider that there is no requirement for another review in the short term.

Schools: Crossing Patrols

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education whether he plans to review the process of appointment and determination of need for a school crossing patrol guard.

(AQW 28940/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards are responsible for the provision of school crossing patrols (SCP). In the event of an SCP position becoming vacant, the Board that is responsible is required to undertake a series of surveys and a risk assessment at the site to determine whether there is a continued need for the provision. The surveys and risk assessments are carried out in accordance with agreed five Board criteria based on Road Safety GB guidelines developed by the Local Authority Road Safety Officers' Association in England and Wales. Schools: Crossing Patrols

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what plans there are to change the criteria used to determine whether a school crossing patrol guard is appointed.

(AQW 28941/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards are responsible for the provision of school crossing patrols (SCP). In the event of an SCP position becoming vacant, the Board that is responsible is required to undertake a series of surveys and a risk assessment at the site to determine whether there is a continued need for the provision. Children: Failure to Send to School

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28720/11-15, for a breakdown of these figures shown by the primary and post-primary sector.

(AQW 28957/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that the number of cases of parents or guardians failing to send children to school in the 2012/13 academic year that were prosecuted in each ELB broken down by primary and post-primary sector is as set out below.

ELB	Number of Prosecutions
	Primary	Post-Primary
Belfast ELB	*	*
Western ELB	6	27
North-Eastern ELB	20	48
South-Eastern ELB	*	*

ELB	Number of Prosecutions
	Primary	Post-Primary
Southern ELB	12	55

* denotes fewer than 5 cases, figure suppressed to avoid possible identification of individuals

Education and Library Boards: Senior Management Salaries

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how the salaries for senior managers in Education and Library Boards, within the current structure, are independently reviewed.

(AQW 28966/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The salaries of Chief Executive Officers and Second Tier Officers in the Education and Library Boards are independently reviewed by the Senior Management Pay Review Panel (SMPRP) which is headed by the Chair of the Staff Commission.

In determining the salary ranges, the SMPRP take into account of the Executive's Public Sector Pay Policy and associated guidance, the independent recommendations published annually by the Review Body on Senior Salaries (an advisory NDPB of the Cabinet Office) and of pay movements in the wider public sector, particularly salaries of Directors of Education in comparably-sized local authorities in Great Britain.

Bangor: Primary School Enrolments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many pupils attend each primary school in Bangor.

(AQW 28968/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The most up-to-date validated figures for pupil enrolments relate to the 2012/13 school year, these are detailed in the table below. Updated 2013/14 figures will be available following the completion of the annual school census which is currently being undertaken.

Pupil enrolments in primary schools in the Bangor area - 2012/13

School name	Total enrolments
Ballyholme Primary School	627
Ballymagee Primary School	404
Bangor Central Primary School	604
Bloomfield Primary School	394
Clandeboye Primary School	181
Crawfordsburn Primary School	212
Glenlola Collegiate Prep School	62
Grange Park Primary School	394
Kilcooley Primary School	165
Kilmaine Primary School	670
Rathmore Primary School	598
St Comgall's Primary School	302
St Malachy's Primary School	351
Towerview Primary School	391
Total	5,355

Notes:

1. Figures for primary schools include nursery, reception and year 1 – 7 classes.
2. Schools have been included above if they have Bangor stated as part of their postal address.

Strabane Academy: Newbuild

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Education what is the position and timescale regarding the new build for Strabane Academy, given that the Economic Appraisal for the new build has been with the Department of Finance and Personnel since May 2008. (AQW 28976/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my statement to the Assembly on 22 January 2013 I announced a programme of 22 new build projects that would advance in planning. Strabane Academy was included in this announcement.

A previous Economic Appraisal (EA) for a new build for Strabane Academy, although undertaken, was never approved by my Department or the Department of Finance and Personnel and, as this EA was more than two years old at the time of my January 2013 announcement, current guidelines state that it had to be updated.

The revised EA was submitted to the Department by the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) in August 2013, and is currently under consideration. This work is well advanced and it is expected that it will be sent to DFP shortly for their approval.

The WELB in its role as managing authority for Strabane Academy has advised that the appointment of consultants for this project is currently ongoing however it is not in a position to advise of a possible start on site date due to the early stage of the project.

Armagh: Education Campus

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed 'Lisanelly-styled' campus in Armagh City. (AQW 28978/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In the first instance it will be for the SELB and CCMS, as the school managing authorities, to determine and agree the best way forward including any proposals to co-locate schools and share facilities.

I am aware that the concept of a campus in Armagh is being considered. I have met with some of those involved and been appraised of their proposals. It will be for the SELB, as the planning authority for the area, working in conjunction with other relevant managing authorities to determine the next steps in developing this, or any other area solution for the Armagh city area.

Holocaust Educational Trust

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education what plans there are to promote further the work of the Holocaust Memorial Trust among school children. (AQW 29003/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I believe this question refers to the Holocaust Educational Trust and their work in schools. The Department of Education has no plans to further promote the work of the Holocaust Educational Trust.

There are opportunities for schools here to explore the Holocaust and related issues through a number of Areas of Learning within the revised curriculum.

In line with the flexibility provided by the revised curriculum, it is a matter for individual schools to decide on their involvement with outside organisations, such as the Holocaust Educational Trust, to assist in their delivery of the curriculum.

Learning Disability: Departmental Liaison

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education how his Department is working with the Department for Employment and Learning and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to identify and respond to specific barriers faced by young people with a learning disability at key life transitions during school, training and employment and day centre opportunities. (AQW 29021/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education (DE) has already taken actions to strengthen the transition planning process, including the appointment of Education Transition Co-ordinators in each Education and Library Board (ELB) and the provision of life skills training for young people with a learning disability. At operational level, it is incumbent on ELBs to develop close working relationships with colleagues in other agencies to ensure effective and coherent plans for young people in transition.

DE is liaising with the Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) in relation to transition planning through both the cross-departmental Autism Strategy & Action Plan and the Bamford Action Plan, and is also engaged with the cross-agency Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership's (CYPSP) 'Transition to Adulthood of Young People with Disabilities' sub-group.

The CYPSP sub-group will explore the potential for a number of mechanisms to help improve the experience of transition to adult services for the young person and their families, including an integrated plan which will be multiagency and have a person centred approach. Appropriate post-school provision that ensures progression for young people is part of the group's remit.

Support is also available through the ELBs' Transitions Services and DEL's Careers Service for young people who are vulnerable to social exclusion and who have high priority career guidance needs where specialist skills are required.

DE is committed to the continuous improvement of the quality of careers education in schools and both DE and DEL are working well together to take forward the full and continuing implementation of the joint DE/DEL 'Preparing for Success – Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance Strategy'.

In addition, the Education and Training Inspectorate will undertake an evaluation of current transition arrangements in both mainstream and special schools, including post-primary to adult services, in early 2014. The findings of this report will be shared with DHSSPS and DEL when completed.

Children: Failure to Send to School

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28720/11-15, how these figures compare to the two previous academic years; and whether there is evidence of any specific trends.

(AQW 29034/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that the number of prosecutions of parents or guardians failing to send their children to school, since the 2010-11 school year is as set out below.

ELB	Number of Prosecutions 2010-11	Number of Prosecutions 2011-12	Number of Prosecutions 2012-13
Belfast ELB	*	*	*
Western ELB	45	26	33
North-Eastern ELB	6	10	68
South-Eastern ELB	7	9	*
Southern ELB	37	37	67

* denotes fewer than 5 cases, figure suppressed to avoid possible identification of individuals.

The Department has no evidence of any specific trends.

Children: Failure to Send to School

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28720/11-15, how much advice is offered, or warnings given, to parents and guardians in these situations; and for how many days or occasions a child is absent before action is taken to prosecute.

(AQW 29061/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Schools should refer pupils to Education welfare Service (EWS) for support, if appropriate, if their attendance falls below 85% or if there is a cause for concern.

The intervention by the EWS is tailored to the individual child following the assessment of their circumstances including their needs, the parents/carer's capacity to meet those needs and the family and environmental factors. Provision of advice and support, consideration of warnings or any onward referral is completely determined by the outcome of this assessment.

Schools: 3G Pitches

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education which body is responsible for funding 3G pitches for schools.

(AQW 29069/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There is no specific provision in the Department of Education's (DE's) Building Handbook for any pitches (including 3G pitches) at primary schools, whereas the Building Handbook for Secondary Schools Edition 4 states that "in schools with enrolments in excess of 349, the Department may approve the provision of a pitch with a sand-filled synthetic surface, provided it is matched by a reduction of two conventional pitches.

Education and Library Boards receive a budget to progress a programme of minor works in controlled schools and the Department administers a programme for non-controlled schools. Applications are considered on a case by case basis and assessed on their individual merits in line with ministerial priorities.

All schools are welcome to make an application to the relevant authority for the provision of a 3G pitch, either to the Education and Library Boards in respect of Controlled schools or the Department of Education for non Controlled schools.

Woodburn Primary School, Carrickfergus: Replacement Building

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Education to make a statement on the proposal for a replacement building for Woodburn Primary School, Carrickfergus.

(AQW 29070/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have no plans at this time to provide a replacement school building for Woodburn Primary School in Carrickfergus.

I will continue to examine the case for capital investment across the estate and any proposals the Northern Eastern Education and Library Board have for Woodburn Primary School will be considered along with other priorities as part of a future capital announcement.

Cherish Sure Start

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education how the electoral wards served by Cherish SureStart were selected.
(AQW 29083/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: DHSSPS established the Sure Start Programme in the north of Ireland during 2000/01. Geographical areas applied for Sure Start funding and were required to demonstrate need in their area.

Cherish Sure Start was launched in January 2001 following a successful bid for Sure Start funding by a consortium made up of a number of community, voluntary and statutory partners to the Western Area Childcare Partnership. The project was originally established to provide services to the following wards: Irvinestown, Kesh, Ederney and Lack, Trillick, Ballinamallard and Lisnarick as the consortium identified particular need for services in rural areas at that time.

In the 2006-2008 expansion of the Sure Start programme, Cherish Sure Start extended its services to a further three wards (Rosslea, Newtownbutler and Devenish) in line with the direction that services should be provided to at least the top 20% most disadvantaged areas at ward level, as measured by the Multiple Deprivation Measure (MDM) .

Schools: Newbuilds

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education how his Department provides (i) capital; and (ii) recurrent funding to a new school.
(AQW 29093/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The process which my Department adopted to select new build school projects for capital funding in 2012 and 2013 is set out in two protocol documents published on the Department's website and can be accessed via the following links;

- http://www.deni.gov.uk/major_works_protocol.pdf
- http://www.deni.gov.uk/microsoft_word_-_protocol_for_selection_of_project_to_advance_on_planning.pdf

In addition the protocol for the Schools Enhancement Programme is accessed via the following link;

- <http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/schools-and-infrastructure-2/school-enhancement-programme-protocol.htm>

Following Ministerial approval of a Development Proposal to open a new school, and subject to all required conditions of grant-aid approval having been met, the new school will receive a recurrent budget allocation under the current arrangements as set out in the Common Funding Scheme. Full details of the current Common Funding Scheme for 2013/14 Financial Year may be found at the following link:

- <http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/schools-and-infrastructure-2/schools-finance/common-funding-section/common-funding-scheme-2013-14.htm>

Where the new school opens mid financial year, it will receive a recurrent budget allocation calculated pro rata from the start of the month in which it opens.

Schools: Capital Expenditure

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education how much funding his Department has committed to school capital expenditure since May 2011.
(AQW 29094/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: School capital expenditure committed by my Department in each financial year since May 2011 is as follows:

Financial year	£000s
2011/12	109,967
2012/13	103,007

In the current financial year, a total capital budget of £106.9m has been committed to be spent on schools' capital projects.

Community Relations, Equality and Diversity: DE Expenditure

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education to detail his Department's Community Relations, Equality and Diversity expenditure in (i) 2012; and (ii) 2013.
(AQW 29095/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I can confirm that my Department allocated £1,139k in 2011/12 and £1,163k in 2012/13 to fund the delivery of the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity policy.

Education: Arm's-length Bodies

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education how many people are employed in his Department's arm's-length bodies, including (i) teaching staff; (ii) non-teaching staff; (iii) chief executives; and (iv) board members.

(AQW 29096/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of people employed in DE's Arm's Length Bodies (ALBs) in 2012/13 is as follows:

		Number (headcount)
(i)	Teaching staff	19,436
(ii)	Non-teaching staff	29,134
(iii)	Chief Executive Officers (CEOs)	12
(iv)	Board members	203
	Total	49,152

Notes:

- Headcount figures include part-time staff.
- Figures will fluctuate during the year with leavers and new starts.
- Non-teaching staff figure includes Headquarter staff (excluding Chief Executives), school based staff and out centre and youth club staff. Figure excludes support staff in Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated schools. This information is not currently held centrally as these schools are individual employers and run their own payroll systems.
- CEO figure includes all ALB figureheads - some posts are not referred to as CEOs for example the GTCNI Registrar and the Commission Secretary of the Staff Commission for Education and Library Boards.
- The Board members figure does not include the Commissioners appointed to carry out the functions of the suspended SEELB Board.

Relationships and Sexuality Education: Vetting

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education to outline how visiting speakers are vetted, prior to speaking in schools on such issues such as abortion.

(AQW 29194/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has issued advice in its circular 2001/15 'Relationships and Sexuality Education' (RSE) to schools, including the need for them to develop their own age appropriate RSE policy in consultation with parents and the Board of Governors. The consultation with parents is very important and will allow the school to seek parental views regarding their proposed delivery of RSE. The starting point should always be the development of a RSE policy.

A report published by the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) in January 2011 about RSE provision in post-primary schools highlighted the need for teachers to be provided with more support to help them deal with sensitive issues. To address this, the Department has commissioned the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) to review current RSE guidance for schools and it intended that this work will be completed during the 2014/15 financial year.

In terms of the delivery of RSE by schools, it is accepted that schools do find it helpful to involve outside organisations or individuals, to supplement the school's delivery of the curriculum.

The Department of Education's Circular 2013/1 requires staff engaged in Regulated Activity in schools to be vetted. However, visitors who are asked to deliver a presentation to a class or take part in or host a class discussion would not usually be classed as being engaged in regulated activity. Teachers should always be present when a representative from an agency or individual is taking a session with a class. Consequently, they would not routinely need to be vetted before being allowed onto school premises. Such visitors should of course be managed by school staff and their access to pupils, areas and movement within the school should be restricted as needs require.

A member of school staff should review the resources which are to be used and judge the appropriateness of such materials for the age range and maturity of the pupils and as I have already stated schools should consult with parents in developing their RSE policy.

As with all aspects of the revised curriculum, delivery of RSE and related issues, such as abortion, is a matter for individual schools, taking into account the maturity and level of understanding of their pupils.

North Down: Primary School Enrolments

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the intake of pupils to each primary school in North Down, in each of the last 5 years.

(AQW 29200/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below. Please note that the 2013/14 figures are provisional, finalised figures will be available at the end of February.

Year 1 enrolments - Primary schools in North Down constituency - 2009/10 – 2013/14

1. These figures include year 1 intakes only; new entrants into other year groups have not been included.
2. Figures for 2013/14 are provisional.
3. '-' denotes schools that have since closed

North Down: After-school Clubs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the schools in North Down which hold after school clubs.
(AQW 29202/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department (DE) does not have responsibility for after school clubs which operate outside the Extended Schools (ES) programme.

The ES programme provides additional funding, £12m in 2013/14, for those schools serving the most disadvantaged areas to provide for a wide range of services and activities outside of the normal school day. Where assessed as needed by schools, this may include after school clubs.

The schools in the North Down constituency that are eligible to receive ES funding in the 2013/14 financial year and provide after school clubs are outlined below.

- Kilcooley PS, Bangor
- Bloomfield PS, Bangor
- Clandeboye PS, Bangor
- St Malachy's PS, Bangor

Foyle: Schools and PPPs/PFIs

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) which schools in the Foyle constituency are currently subject to Public Private Partnership, or Private Finance Initiative, contracts; (ii) the length of each contract; (iii) the current cost of each contract; (iv) the remaining term of each contract; (v) the average cost to the public purse for this arrangement; and (vi) the year the contract was signed.

(AQW 29237/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) There are two schools in the Foyle Constituency, St Cecilia's College and St Mary's College, which are currently subject to Public Private Partnership (PPP) contracts. Together the schools form the Derry Diocese PPP project.
- (ii) The two schools are part of the same project, which has a 25 year contract.
- (iii) The current (annual) cost of the contract is measured by the unitary charge payment. For this project the unitary charge for 2013/14 is £6.38m.
- (iv) There are 22 years remaining of this contract.
- (v) The total cost to the public purse of this project is £163m over the 25 years of the project.
- (vi) The contract was signed in 2008 and became operational on 02 September 2010.

Shared Education: Funding

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how much funding was allocated to shared education in each of the last five years. [R]
(AQW 29281/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer the Member to my response to AQW 28806/11-15. My Department has not issued funding specifically for shared education. Indications are that schools have funded shared education through department funding streams (such as the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity (CRED) policy and Entitlement Framework funding), external funding sources or from within their own school budget. In addition, the Extended School policy encourages schools to partner or cluster with one or more other schools for the delivery of extended services.

Shared Education: Funding

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education which organisations received shared education funding in each of the last five years. [R]
(AQW 29282/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer the Member to my response to AQW 28806/11-15. My Department has not issued funding specifically for shared education. Indications are that schools have funded shared education through department funding streams (such as the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity (CRED) policy and Entitlement Framework funding), external funding sources or from within their own school budget. In addition, the Extended School policy encourages schools to partner or cluster with one or more other schools for the delivery of extended services.

Post-primary Schools: Sports Participation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many post-primary schools offer participation for pupils in (i) football; (ii) gaelic games; (iii) cricket; (iv) rugby; and (v) tennis.
(AQW 29305/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not collect information on the individual sports or games provided by each school nor do we hold information on schools with competitive teams.

Physical Education (PE) is a compulsory element of the revised curriculum for all pupils of compulsory school age and Department of Education guidance recommends that schools should provide a minimum of 2 hours PE per week.

The Department does not prescribe specific sports or games to be delivered within a school's PE curriculum as this is a matter for each school.

However, legislation does detail that PE provision to pupils should cover different types of physical activity. Namely in Primary Schools, provision should include athletics, dance, games and gymnastics with the addition of swimming at Key Stage 2. For Key Stage 3 pupils in Post-Primary School, provision should include athletics, games, gymnastics and swimming. For pupils in Key Stage 4 schools should facilitate pupils' participation in a regular, frequent and balanced programme of physical activity.

Primary Schools: Sports Participation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many primary schools offer participation for pupils in (i) football; (ii) gaelic games; (iii) cricket; (iv) rugby; and (v) tennis.

(AQW 29306/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not collect information on the individual sports or games provided by each school nor do we hold information on schools with competitive teams.

Physical Education (PE) is a compulsory element of the revised curriculum for all pupils of compulsory school age and Department of Education guidance recommends that schools should provide a minimum of 2 hours PE per week.

The Department does not prescribe specific sports or games to be delivered within a school's PE curriculum as this is a matter for each school.

However, legislation does detail that PE provision to pupils should cover different types of physical activity. Namely in Primary Schools, provision should include athletics, dance, games and gymnastics with the addition of swimming at Key Stage 2. For Key Stage 3 pupils in Post-Primary School, provision should include athletics, games, gymnastics and swimming. For pupils in Key Stage 4 schools should facilitate pupils' participation in a regular, frequent and balanced programme of physical activity.

Primary Schools: Sport

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many primary schools have competitive teams in (i) football; (ii) gaelic games; (iii) cricket; (iv) rugby; and (v) tennis.

(AQW 29307/11-15)

Department for Employment and Learning

City of Culture 2013: DEL Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28674/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): My Department did not award any tenders or provide any funding to organisations in Derry related to the delivery of the City of Culture 2013.

Queen's University Belfast/Stranmillis University College: Merger

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to provide an update on the current status of the proposed merger of Stranmillis Teacher Training College and Queen's University, Belfast.

(AQW 28727/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have updated members previously on the proposed merger and made a statement on teacher education issues to the Assembly on 28 November 2011. I have commissioned a two-stage study of the teacher education infrastructure in Northern Ireland. The first stage has now been completed and I made a statement on this to the Assembly on 21 May this year. The second stage which is examining options for a more shared and integrated system for the delivery and funding of teacher education is currently underway and I expect it to conclude by the summer of 2014. Any merger would be considered in the context of the outcome from this work.

Universities: Religious Background of Applicants

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 2962/11-15, for an update on the data provided.

(AQW 28733/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department does not hold information on the religion of applicants to university and this is also not collected by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS). The Department does however hold information on the religion of Northern Ireland (NI) domiciled students enrolled at the NI Higher Education Institutions.

The number of NI domiciled students from a Catholic, Protestant and Other/Not Known background enrolled at: Queen's University; the University of Ulster (broken down by each campus); St Mary's University College; and Stranmillis University College in each of the last seven years is detailed in Annex A. This has been placed in the Assembly Library and on my department's website at <http://www.delni.gov.uk/>.

Universities: Religious Background of Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the religious background of the current (i) teaching staff; and (ii) non-teaching staff at (a) Queen's University Belfast; (b) the University of Ulster, broken down by campus; (c) St Mary's University College; and (d) Stranmillis University College.

(AQW 28734/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Higher Education Institutions have provided the information which I have placed in the Assembly Library and on the DEL website on <http://www.delni.gov.uk/>.

Assured Skills

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the spend on the Assured Skills budget for every year since its foundation; (ii) the amount that each company has received through this programme; (iii) whether the funding provided through this scheme is included as part of the support offered by Invest NI.

(AQW 28773/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) The Assured Skills programme was established in 2010/11. The year-on-year Assured Skills spend is as follows:
- 2010/11 – £888,644.44
 - 2011/12 – £346,971.68
 - 2012/13 – £659,429.57
 - 2013/14 – £222,591.38 (to 30 November 2013)
- (ii) Currently, Assured Skills is engaged in eleven company projects supporting the creation of 2,232 jobs at a total Departmental commitment of £3.44million. Since the start of the programme, including completed projects, the amount that companies have received from Assured Skills funds (up to 30 November 2013) is as follows:

Company	Assured Skills Support 1 April 2010 to 30 November 2013
Allstate	£239,477
Andor	£66,031
Axiom	£103,518
Barclays Bank	£5,802
BT	£107,225
Citigroup	£182,225
CVS Caremark	£121,409
Deloitte	£34,014
First Source Solutions	£28,028
Heritage	£40,674
Liberty	£79,159
Market Resource Partners	£83,078
MITIE Security	£54,435
Navinet	£56,928

Company	Assured Skills Support 1 April 2010 to 30 November 2013
Santander	£26,266
Stream International	£777

Please note that agreements are also in place or being finalised with Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Cowen Group, Caterpillar and Magellan Aerospace. However, no claims have yet been made against the support offered.

- (iii) Yes. A potential investor is presented with one offer from Northern Ireland. However, the offer comprises two complementary parts: the Invest Northern Ireland element and the Assured Skills element, which is aimed at supporting the skills needs of the investor.

Please note that, during the first pilot phase of the programme, a variety of approaches were trialled and a number of projects had no Invest Northern Ireland component. Since the initial pilot finished in 2011/12 and arising from the evaluation of the pilot, only projects with components from both the Department for Employment and Learning and Invest Northern Ireland have been supported under Assured Skills.

Labour Relations Agency

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail, for each of the last eight years (i) the number of queries to the Labour Relations Agency (LRA); (ii) the number of queries relating to potential unfair dismissal claims; (iii) the number of employment tribunal hearings; (iv) the amount of funding provided to the LRA; (v) the full time equivalent staff makeup of the LRA; and (vi) the number of mediation cases involving the LRA.

(AQW 28777/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Labour Relations Agency is a Non-Departmental Public Body with responsibility for promoting the improvement of employment relations in Northern Ireland. The Agency has provided the information in Annex A, by way of answer to points (i), (ii), (iv), (v) and (vi). This has been placed in the Assembly Library and on my department's website at <http://www.delni.gov.uk/>.

Apprentices: Redundant

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the number of apprentices who failed to complete their apprenticeship due to their employer terminating their employment, in each of the last three years; and (ii) any actions taken to enable them to complete their apprenticeship.

Dr Farry: From September 2010, 684 apprentices who left the ApprenticeshipsNI programme were classified as 'redundant apprentices'. Table 1 overleaf provides the breakdown for the last three years.

My Department has advised contracted Training Suppliers that in cases where an apprentice's employment is terminated, ApprenticeshipsNI participants may join the Training for Success programme (subject to eligibility).

As a contingency measure my Department introduced the Programme-Led Apprenticeship programme in 2009. With the provision of a revised Training for Success Level 2 training option (contracts awarded in June 2013) the continuation of Programme-Led Apprenticeships was considered unnecessary.

My Department also introduced contingency arrangements in 2008 for Construction, Engineering or Motor Vehicle Industry apprentices to allow an apprentice who had been made redundant to continue with his/her training. These arrangements were introduced as a short-term measure but remain in place.

Apprenticeships: Emigration

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of apprentices in each different skill area that have emigrated or left Northern Ireland to find employment, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28808/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold data relating to apprentices that have emigrated or left Northern Ireland to find employment. The Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency publishes statistics relating to "International Out-Migration". Unfortunately, publications do not include the detail that you have requested.

My Department's ApprenticeshipsNI Statistical Bulletin provides key information on the ApprenticeshipsNI programme and contains data to July 2013. The Bulletin is published on a quarterly basis with the statistics presented covering a range of topics including starts, occupancy, leavers and outcomes for participants on ApprenticeshipsNI.

A full copy of the Statistical Bulletin can be viewed by following the link below.

<http://www.delni.gov.uk/index/publications/r-and-s-stats/apprenticeshipsni-statistical-bulletins.htm>

As the member will be aware, in February I announced a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned, and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Apprenticeships: Female Participation

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline any initiatives being introduced to increase the number of females participating in apprenticeship courses.

(AQW 28942/11-15)

Dr Farry: The most recent edition of my Department's ApprenticeshipsNI Statistical Bulletin indicates that from the introduction of the ApprenticeshipsNI programme in 2007 to date, the percentage of females starting ApprenticeshipsNI funded training has increased from 35% to 51%. A full copy of the Statistical Bulletin can be viewed by following the link below.

<http://www.delni.gov.uk/index/publications/r-and-s-stats/apprenticeshipsni-statistical-bulletins.htm>

Factors impacting on this increase include the introduction of an all-age provision coupled with accessibility for those working a minimum of 21 hours per week.

As outlined in my oral statement to the Assembly on Tuesday 4 June 2013, I am aware of a range of gender equality issues facing Northern Ireland. I recognise that females, despite gaining strong educational attainments in the further and higher education fields, are much less likely than males to pursue careers in economically relevant areas such as Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths (STEM).

The implementation of the STEM Strategy, 'Success through STEM' sets out how we will collectively help to address this issue. Businesses themselves have an important role to play. For example, the STEM Business sub-group ran a seminar entitled 'Are you getting the balance right?' in association with the Equality Commission. The seminar engaged with STEM businesses to investigate the issues of gender bias in STEM and assist in identifying additional steps businesses can take to make careers in STEM attractive to women.

As the member will be aware, back in February I announce a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Learning Disability: NEETs

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline any plans his Department has to collate data on young people with a learning disability who are Not in Education, Employment or Training, or at risk of being NEET.

(AQW 28943/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department developed and leads the cross-departmental strategy, 'Pathways to Success' (PtS) the Executive's formal strategy for addressing the needs of young people who are not in employment, education and training (NEET). As part of its implementation a range of programmes are available to a wide range of young people in the NEET category including those with learning disabilities. While the individual PtS providers collect data on participants with disabilities and health problems, details of the specific disabilities of the participants are not collated centrally.

The official source of population estimates of the number of young people who are NEET is the Labour Force Survey (LFS) which is carried out by the Department of Finance and Personnel. The most recent LFS figures for the period July-September 2013 estimate that there were 11,000 (23% of total NEETs) with a disability. However, the LFS sample size is too small to provide a more detailed breakdown by type of disability.

My Department intends to analyse data from the 2011 Census of Population with respect to young people in the 16-24 age range. This analysis will examine, amongst other things, the issue of disability. In addition, as outlined in the 'Pathways to Success' strategy, my Department will explore with other Departments options for the development of a tracking system for NEETs which would ultimately encompass those young people with a disability.

Data collected for Northern Ireland European Social Fund (NIESF) programme monitoring records the number of NEETs aged 16-19 and also the number of participants with disabilities or health conditions. The data therefore allow the identification of participants who are NEET and who have a disability. However, it does not enable the identification of participants with any specific disability, such as learning disability.

Learning Disability: NEETs

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail any targeted programmes that support young people with a learning disability who are Not in Education, Employment or Training, or are at risk of being NEET.

(AQW 28944/11-15)

Dr Farry: DEL offers the following programmes that directly and indirectly target and support young people with a disability including those with a learning disability.

Work Connect

Work Connect is an employment programme designed to help recipients of Employment Support Allowance (ESA) or Incapacity Benefit (IB) to overcome barriers to employment, improve their employability and, where possible, find and keep suitable employment. Work Connect is delivered in partnership with external organisations, and provides quality specialist pre-employment and employment provision to clients who have health conditions and / or disabilities, but who are capable of, and wish to play, a full and active role in society. Since its introduction 21 young people with a learning disability have entered the programme, and currently 12 of these young people continue to be supported through Work Connect.

Access to Work (NI)

Access to Work (NI) assists people with disabilities who are either in paid employment, or who have a job to commence, through the provision of practical support and by meeting any additional costs associated with overcoming work-related obstacles that may result from having a disability.

The programme provides a range of individually assessed supports that may be one-off in nature or for a longer term and potentially indefinite period. It provides support to participants where there are additional costs associated with their specific disability, for example; adaptation to premises and equipment; communication support at interview; special aids and equipment; support workers and travel to work support.

There are currently 640 people with disabilities being supported through Access to Work (NI) of which 149 have a learning disability and 31 are aged 16 to 24.

Workable (NI)

This programme aims to assist people with disabilities enter or retain employment through the provision of a flexible range of specialist supports such as a job coaching, mentoring or extra training. All participants have individually focused development plans to help them achieve realistic occupational goals. Workable (NI) is delivered by organisations with extensive experience of meeting the vocational needs of people with disabilities. There are currently 455 employees availing of support through Workable (NI) of which 87 are aged 18 - 24 with a learning disability.

Youth Guarantee

The Department offers a guarantee of a training place through its Training for Success programme for all unemployed 16-17 year old school leavers with extended eligibility for those with a disability. The Training for Success programme is designed to enable participants to progress to higher level training, further education, or employment by providing training to address personal and social development needs, develop occupational skills and employability skills and, where necessary, Essential Skills in literacy, numeracy and ICT.

Community Family Support Programme (CFSP)

The Community Family Support Programme (CFSP), is an initiative designed to help families make life changing decisions to enhance their prospects and support them to become full participants in society. It also supports families with a high level of need in developing their capacity to reach their full potential. During the 26 week programme families will receive help to address the health, social, economic, educational, employment and training issues that impact on their daily lives.

The programme also aims to prevent young people falling into the NEET category and help other young people who find themselves in this situation to re-engage with education, training or employment.

Professional support workers will engage and consult with parents of children and young people to promote early intervention and high quality parenting and to identify solutions to address their specific needs. This includes support for young people or children that may have learning disabilities.

Families will get help to tackle a range of issues and receive support to improve parenting skills. Working closely with schools, children will receive support for needs they may have including additional help with essential skills, numeracy, literacy, problem solving and ICT. Help and support for social and economic issues, health, housing, alcohol and drugs will also feature in the support package and everyone of working age will get help to develop skills to find work.

Collaboration and Innovation Fund (CIF)

The Collaboration and Innovation Fund (CIF) is one of the employment initiatives developed under the Executive's 'Pathways to Success' strategy for young people aged 16-24 who are not in education, employment or training (NEET). Over £9.2 million has been made available to 24 organisations from the community, voluntary and educational sectors to explore new approaches to address the specific and general employability barriers faced by these young people. Projects will deliver provide support to over 6,100 NEET young people from December 2012 to March 2015.

The Print Room project delivered by The Appleby Trust will provide support to 50 young people with Autism Spectrum Disorder. The remaining projects do not specifically target young people with a learning disability but all young people in the NEET category including those with a learning disability are eligible to participate.

Northern Ireland European Social Fund (NIESF)

Whilst the Northern Ireland European Social Fund (NIESF) Programme, 2007-2013 is not specifically targeted at specific groups of participants, young people with disabilities are eligible to participate and do take part in projects funded under the programme in significant numbers.

Further Education

The Learner Access and Engagement NEET (Not in Education, Employment or Training) pilot programme, enables learners, aged 16 to 18, who are not, currently, in employment, education, training, nor Essential Skills (ES) provision, and who hold no more than one qualification at level 2 or above, to undertake mentored and supported learning.

The pilot programme is open to any eligible participant, who has been disengaged from education and who may have barriers to learning, including a physical or learning disability.

Learning Disability: Apprenticeships

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline how his Department makes apprenticeship programmes accessible to young people with a learning disability.
(AQW 28945/11-15)

Dr Farry: As part of the ApprenticeshipsNI programme, Disability Support Services are available for participants with learning disabilities. Disability Support Suppliers are contracted by the Department and will work closely with Careers Advisers, Training Suppliers, employers and apprentices to provide both pre-entry and ongoing programme support.

Examples of programme support include; one-to-one mentoring, job coaching and disability awareness training for employers and colleagues of apprentices with disabilities.

A disability supplement, of up to £1,560, is payable under ApprenticeshipsNI to allow training suppliers to provide additional support, such as specialist equipment

My Department's Disability Employment Service also offers a range of employment support provision to clients with a learning disability and employers. For example, the Access to Work (NI) and Workable (NI) programmes assist people with disabilities who are either in paid employment, or who have a job to commence, through the provision of practical support associated with overcoming work-related obstacles that may result from having a disability.

Learning Disability: FE/Training/Employment

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and detail how many young people with a learning disability access further education, training or employment programmes.
(AQW 28946/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the academic year 2012/13, a total of 937 young people aged 16-19 with a learning disability started on Training for Success, Programme-Led Apprenticeships and ApprenticeshipsNI provision.

In the same year, a total of 1,063 young people aged 16-19 with a learning disability started on a Professional & Technical course at a Further Education college.

Since its introduction in 2012, a total of 21 young people with learning disability aged 16-24 have entered the Work Connect programme, and there are currently 12 of these young people on the programme.

There are currently 640 people with disabilities being supported through Access to Work (NI) of which 149 have learning disability. 31 of these are aged 16-24.

There are currently 87 18-24 year olds with a learning disability participating on the Workable (NI) programme.

The Enhanced Employer Subsidy, introduced as part of the Youth Employment Scheme, has supported 28 young people with a learning disability into employment to date.

As some individuals may be participating in more than one scheme, I cannot give a total number of people with learning disability benefitting from DEL programmes.

Learning Disability: Further Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail how many young people with a learning disability achieve accredited further education qualifications, broken down by type and level achieved.

(AQW 28947/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the 2012/13 academic year a total of 1,277 students, aged between 16 & 19 with a learning disability achieved accredited qualifications in the Northern Ireland Further Education Sector.

The table below provides a breakdown by course type and level of study.

Type of Course	Level of Study				Total
	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	HE Level
Entitlement Framework	61	10	36	0	107
Government Training	283	164	9	0	456
Cost Recovery	2	16	2	0	20
Mainstream Further Education	137	394	144	19	694
Total	483	584	191	19	1,277

Note: Learning disability is defined through self-classification and age is at 1st July 2012.

Learning Disability: Departmental Liaison

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how his Department is working with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and the Department of Education to identify and respond to specific barriers faced by young people with a learning disability at key life transitions during school, training and employment and day centre opportunities.

(AQW 29020/11-15)

Dr Farry: Over recent years we have worked on a cross Departmental basis with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and the Department of Education through a number of forums at both Ministerial and official level. This includes key initiatives such as Bamford and the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership, the latter of which has a dedicated sub group looking at the issue of transitions.

In addition, the Executive's Disability Strategy also recognises the importance of this issue in delivering on its wider priorities of social inclusion and economic success and has rightly identified transitions as a key issue.

I believe a co-ordinated and concerted approach by all key statutory bodies, including my own Department, is necessary in order to make real and sustained progress for these young people.

To that end I have engaged with a wide range of interests on this matter over recent months and undertaken a number of actions to make progress. This includes an audit of further education provision, an increase in financial support of £500k within further education, progress on the use of social clauses in public sector contracts to benefit the employment/skills needs of those with a disability and a strategic review of my Department's Disability Employment Service.

More recently, I raised this issue at the DHSSPS led Inter-Ministerial Group on Mental Health and Learning Disability. As a result it has been agreed that, under the auspices of the Executive's Disability Strategy, and in conjunction with the Office of the First Minister and other Departments, work will be taken forward to identify opportunities to improve upon current arrangements.

This work should fit well with developing initiatives being progressed, such as the Health and Social Care Board review of Day Opportunities and its proposals on a "Regional Learning Disability Day Opportunities Model".

STEM Subjects: PhD Criteria/Funding

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to (i) detail the total number of funded PhD places in STEM subjects currently available and utilised; and (ii) outline the criteria for application.

(AQW 29027/11-15)

Dr Farry: The numbers of DEL funded PhD places in economically relevant subjects are not available yet from the Universities for the year 2013/14. In the academic year 2012/13 my Department funded 516 PhD places in economically relevant subjects.

My Department provides the funding to Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster to administer the postgraduate studentship awards scheme. They select, by competition, the students to fill these awards within the limits of funding available.

DEL does, however, require some basic eligibility criteria to be met including: some residency and citizenship conditions; that the required academic entry qualification for a PhD studentship is a first or upper second class honours degree from a university in the United Kingdom or Ireland or equivalent qualifications and experience; and, candidates who already have a doctoral degree or who have been registered on a programme of research leading to the award of a doctoral degree for more than one year full time are not eligible.

Northern Regional College: Learning Difficulties

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) whether the Northern Regional College carried out an assessment into the educational needs of students with moderate to severe learning difficulties based in the Glens of Antrim area; (ii) when and how this assessment was carried out; and (iii) whether it included factors such as demand, transport and finance.

(AQW 29032/11-15)

Dr Farry: Northern Regional College has not carried out an assessment into the educational needs of students with moderate to severe learning difficulties based specifically in the Glens of Antrim area. The College works closely with health trust transition teams and the Careers Service, across the whole College catchment area, in order to identify prospective students and provide guidance on the courses and support which is available to them. This engagement takes place on an annual basis, prior to course provision being finalised

All further education colleges take into consideration all relevant factors, including potential demand, transport infrastructure and financial viability, when planning curriculum delivery. I can advise that my Department is currently examining the matter of access to transport for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability, aged 19 and over. My Department will consider a course of action and develop proposals, once this initial piece of work has been completed.

Employment: Return-to-work Programmes

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline (i) what flexibility is available for jobseekers undertaking more than one course per year and (ii) what support, if any, is available to customers to fund courses.

(AQW 29055/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) Steps to Work (StW) is the Department for Employment and Learning's main adult return to work programme.

All participants on Step One or Step Three provision can undertake one Short Accredited Training Courses (SATC) within a 12 month period. SATCs are aimed at those who are largely job ready but who may lack some specific vocational skills or qualification which would enhance their prospects of finding and sustaining employment.

My Department has no flexibility to allow participants access to more than one SATC in any 12 month period. Flexibility only exists around the timeframe permitted for delivery of the SATC.

All SATCs delivered for JobSeekers Allowance (JSA) participants must be completed within either a 2 week consecutive period, or over a number of days over two separate weeks. If a course extends into a third week JSA claimants will be deemed unavailable for work and, therefore, may face reductions or loss of benefit.

Participants in receipt of another benefits such as Incapacity Benefit (IB), Employment Support Allowance (ESA) or Income Support (IS), or those not in receipt of benefit, may also undertake one SATC within a 12 month period. Attendance on SATCs for these participants must be completed within a maximum of 6 weeks.

Step Two of the programme provides additional opportunities for participants to undertake a longer training course alongside a work placement within either the 8 week Back to Work or the 26 week Qualification strands of provision. All accredited qualifications delivered within these strands of provision must be on the Register of Regulated Qualifications.

Additional assistance is also available for those participants who have been assessed as having essential skills needs to undertake an approved Essential Skills Qualification in literacy, numeracy and ICT.

(ii) Within Steps 1 and 3 of the programme the daily rate for SATCs is £50 plus full travel costs. However, where the participant has evidence of a verified job opportunity District Managers may approve SATCs costing up to a maximum of £1000 while in exceptional circumstances a Short Accredited Course costing between £1,000 and £2,000 may be approved by Programme Management and Development Branch.

Steps 2 Success

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, in regard to South Tyrone, to outline, in relation to people who are economically inactive, (i) what safeguards or flexibilities does his Department intend to build into the delivery of Steps to Success; (ii) whether his Department has developed any policies for claimants suffering mental illness who need additional support; and (iii) how this will be delivered.

(AQW 29168/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department is presently undertaking a procurement process for the delivery of the Steps 2 Success (S2S) programme to replace the existing Steps to Work employment programme. S2S is designed to assist eligible benefit claimants move into sustainable employment. The requirements for the programme are set by the Employment Service and will be the same across Northern Ireland.

The Department has built in a series of safeguards and flexibilities to ensure that economically inactive clients in receipt of Employment & Support Allowance (ESA) who participate on S2S receive a high standard of service. These safeguards and flexibilities include:

- participation on S2S for ESA clients will be agreed between the Employment Service Adviser and the client, if this is identified as the most suitable option for them;
- the activities undertaken by the participant during their time on S2S will be agreed between the participant and the S2S Provider;
- the level of service to be delivered to each participant by Providers is defined in a Service Guarantee designed by the Department;
- the level of funding for Providers will be higher for economically inactive clients to take account of the greater needs of these clients.

Each of the Department's employment programmes is designed to meet the needs of all eligible clients, including those with disabilities/health conditions. S2S Providers will be required to have a supply chain which includes organisations that will be able to meet the needs of participants with disabilities/health conditions.

As well as the opportunity to participate on S2S the Department's Disability Employment Service provides specifically tailored programmes and services aimed at meeting the needs of people with disabilities, including mental health conditions. These programmes help people progress towards employment, move into work, and then sustain work through ongoing support and assistance. The programmes include: the Condition Management Programme (CMP), delivered by specialist teams in the five Health & Social Care Trusts and Work Connect, delivered by a consortium of seven local disability organisations, with experience in delivering employment services for people with health conditions/disabilities. S2S has been designed to complement these programmes and if participants who complete them have not found employment they can enter S2S, if they agree this with their Employment Service Adviser.

Organisations bidding to deliver S2S will be required to identify how they will meet the needs of all participants, including those in receipt of ESA. They will be required to identify how they will deliver the service to the level required by the Service Guarantee across the full contract area(s) for which they are bidding, including specialist provision.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Autism: DETI Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what provision is made within her departmental buildings to receive visitors diagnosed with autism and to cater for their needs.

(AQW 28543/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): All visitors to Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment buildings are treated with courtesy and respect by staff. Where possible, details of visitors are notified to reception in advance of their arrival. Where visitors with disabilities, including those with autism spectrum conditions, advise of additional help and support to cater for their needs, every effort will be made to ensure this is provided for them. All visitors who are attending by invitation, or notify us in advance, are met at reception and are accompanied to their destination.

As required by the Autism Act (NI) 2011, DHSSPS has led on the development of the cross departmental Autism Strategy and Action Plan, which is currently with the Northern Ireland Executive for approval. The Action Plan contains proposals for autism awareness training for frontline staff in NICS. Subject to Executive approval, it is anticipated being able to launch the Strategy and Action Plan for publication before the end of the year.

Tourist Board: Review

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail whether the current review of the Tourist Board will consider the future location of the Board's headquarters; and if so, whether the Down Public Sector Campus in Downpatrick will be considered as a location.

(AQW 28556/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Terms of Reference for the review of NITB and wider tourism structures is available on the DETI website and can be accessed via the following link: http://www.detini.gov.uk/nitb_review_brief_for_deti_website.pdf

Under the Terms of Reference the reviewer has been asked to make recommendations designed to rationalise, where it is cost-effective to do so, the provision and delivery of corporate services (including accommodation) within the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) and Invest NI. I await the recommendations of the review.

Public Procurement: Sustainability Social Clauses

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the Sustainability Social Clauses that were contained in 13 departmental contracts over 2012/13; and how these are implemented.

(AQW 28628/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Sustainability Social Clauses contained in 13 Departmental contracts awarded from April 2012 to August 2013 include:

- (a) Three work placements for thirteen weeks;
- (b) Encouraging unemployed people into new business start ups;
- (c) Appointing four permanent staff;
- (d) An eight week work placement for each £500,000 of contract value;
- (e) Providing local employment in four contracts;
- (f) Disposal of waste in an ecologically sound manner; and
- (g) Protection of the environment in four contracts.

The first four sustainability clauses above (a-d) are set as performance targets in the contracts which are then monitored by the Contract Manager to ensure that targets are met.

The next sustainability clause (e) relates to a contract which was divided into four smaller contracts to appeal to Small and Medium Enterprises which provided local employment.

The remaining five sustainability clauses (f-g) relate to contracts that contain Supplies and Services Division's requirement to comply with the Sustainable Development Strategy for Northern Ireland. Two of these contractors also had International Standards Organisation (ISO) 14001 Environmental Management Accreditation which ensures that they:

- (a) minimize how their operations (processes etc.) negatively affect the environment (i.e. cause adverse changes to air, water, or land); and
- (b) comply with applicable laws, regulations, and other environmentally oriented requirements.

Sloefield Drive, Carrickfergus: Land Bank

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the use of the land bank at Sloefield, Carrickfergus.

(AQW 28696/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The 108 acres of land at Sloefield Road in Carrickfergus forms Invest NI's Trooperslane Industrial Estate.

The majority of this Estate has been developed and is currently occupied by businesses. There does, however, remain 17 acres available to support projects brought forward by qualifying businesses.

The available land, as with all Invest NI property held for economic development purposes, is actively marketed to both foreign and indigenous investors. The final decision on investment location, however, lies solely with the investor.

It is important to remember that Invest NI operates in the area of property as a result of market failure and as a result its primary remit is not to maximise occupancy, rental or profit. The organisation instead employs a long term strategy in respect of its property holdings.

Railway Preservation Society of Ireland: Funding

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what additional funding is available to assist the Railway Preservation Society of Ireland and their current project in Whitehead.

(AQW 28697/11-15)

Mrs Foster: An application from the Railway Preservation Society of Ireland is currently progressing through the Northern Ireland Tourist Board's assessment process.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board currently has no calls for financial assistance open at the moment. However, should project promoters wish to be added to a register of interest for any future funding calls, please e-mail tds@nitb.com.

Employment: Jobs Created

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the number of jobs created in each constituency in the last twelve months; and (ii) the departmental funding that was available to each business that created these jobs.

(AQW 28711/11-15)

Mrs Foster: (I) At present Invest NI is only able to report on the number of jobs that have been created as a result of the Jobs Fund. Invest NI has developed new systems that will allow it to begin reporting on the number of jobs created across its full range of interventions from the start of the next financial year. The number of jobs which have been created by the Jobs Fund in each constituency in the last full financial year are:

Invest NI Jobs Fund Jobs Created by Parliamentary Constituency Area 2012 – 2013

Constituency	Jobs Created 12-13	Assistance Paid Towards Jobs Created in 2012-13
Belfast East	80	£267,585

Sustainable Energy: Definition

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) for her definition of sustainable energy; and (ii) the origin of this definition

(AQW 28751/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) There is no single definition of sustainable energy set out in legislation. A commonly used definition of sustainable energy includes nuclear, renewable energy and energy efficiency. I would include natural gas given its low carbon contribution.
- (ii) The Climate Change and Sustainable Energy Act 2006, which extends to Northern Ireland, focuses on the United Kingdom's contribution to combating climate change and among other things to the desirability of securing a diverse and viable long-term energy supply. It is therefore reasonable to infer from this that sustainable energy covers essentially many areas of energy policy.

Unemployment: Rates

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what the rate of unemployment would be if it was consistent with full employment at current tax rates and social welfare payments.

(AQW 28752/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This is a highly complex area which does not have a definitive answer and is the subject of much dispute amongst some economists. Indeed there is not a formal definition of full employment.

Full employment does not mean zero unemployment, as there is an underlying natural rate of unemployment in an economy – for example as people move between jobs or between education and employment. Even if there were a single accepted approach to this subject it is important to note that any such rate would not be static and would change over time, for example during different periods of an economic cycle. Thus it is not possible to be definitive about what this rate is for Northern Ireland.

Historically some have associated full employment with a claimant count unemployment rate of three per cent or less. However, in 2007, both the UK and Northern Ireland claimant count rate were both well below this 3% threshold and this led the Department for Work and Pensions to state that the 3% rate was not holding up as a yardstick for full employment at that time.

Rather than focusing on a theoretical debate, it is important that we work to deliver our Economic Strategy commitment to rebuild the economy through promoting employment and improving employment opportunities and employability. In addition, the launch this week of the new Economic Inactivity Strategic Framework will help to reduce economic inactivity levels through skills, training incentives and job creation.

Local Government Reform: Invest NI

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has held with Enterprise NI and local enterprise agencies concerning preparations for the Reform of Local Government.

(AQW 28754/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have had no discussions directly with Enterprise NI and local enterprise agencies regarding the reform of local government. However Invest NI have been engaged in extensive discussions with local councils, Northern Ireland Local Government Association (NILGA), Society of Local Authority Chief Executives (SoLACE) and other representative bodies regarding preparations for the reform of local government.

Shale Gas: Geological Survey of Northern Ireland

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether any assessments by the Geological Survey Northern Ireland into the feasibility of shale gas will be based on the same criteria as the British Geological Survey; and what impact the depth of the location of shale in Fermanagh will have on the feasibility of shale gas in this area.

(AQW 28805/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The criteria used by the British Geological Survey (BGS) in their recent study are specifically related to the geological characteristics of the Bowland Shale and the sedimentary basins of the north of England in which these rocks are found.

The geoscientists of the Geological Survey of Northern Ireland (GSNI) will consult with the British Geological Survey about the BGS methodology for estimating gas in place, should similar estimates for the Bundoran Shale Formation in Northern Ireland be undertaken.

There are many areas of Fermanagh where the Bundoran Shale is recognised as being too shallow to be prospective for gas production. The depth of the Bundoran Shale Formation is one of many factors which control the volumes of gas in place and would affect the shale productivity and economic viability of the resource. However, the burial histories of the sedimentary basins in Fermanagh and the north of England are quite different and the depth thresholds used by BGS as a shale gas prospectivity cut-off for the Bowland Shale would not be applicable to the Bundoran Shale.

Golf: US PGA

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action her Department is taking to help secure the hosting of the USPGA Championship golf tournament; and for an update on progress in securing this event.

(AQW 28816/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am aware of the recent news articles relating to this however I would stress that no approach has been made by the US PGA to my Department to host a golf tournament in Northern Ireland.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board and I would be delighted to support a bid process to bring other major golf tournaments to Northern Ireland in the future.

Hosting major global events, including golf events, play a key role in realising our ambitious plans to grow tourism here to a £1 billion industry by 2020.

Investment: United States

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps her Department has taken to reassure potential investors from the United States that Northern Ireland is safe, welcoming and open for business.

(AQW 28820/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In recent years, Northern Ireland has enjoyed a much more stable and peaceful environment providing the catalyst for continued success in securing and growing levels of inward investment to the extent that over the last five years, on a per capita basis, Northern Ireland has been the most successful region, after Greater London, in the United Kingdom for attracting inward investment projects.

While a small number of potential US investors have commented about the current situation, Invest NI, has provided assurances that Northern Ireland remains one of the most competitive places and safest places in Europe to do business, highlighting that rates of crime have dropped by 30 per cent in the last 10 years, making Northern Ireland the safest region in the UK.

These are the messages that Invest NI's overseas sales teams use in managing relationships with potential investors to overcome any lingering negative perceptions of Northern Ireland.

My Department and Invest NI are encouraged by the fact that in spite of the recent media coverage, no planned visits by potential investors to Northern Ireland have been cancelled with all recent scheduled visits taking place without disruption.

However it is impossible to measure the effects that such events have had on a potential investors' perception of Northern Ireland and their long term influence on investment decisions.

Renewable Heat Incentive: Budget

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration he has given to increasing the budget for the Renewable Heat Incentive.

(AQW 28868/11-15)

Mrs Foster: At this stage I am content that the current budget for the Renewable Heat Incentive (RHI) is sufficient to cover the existing level of uptake and future projections based on trends.

As the scheme develops, particularly with the proposed introduction of the domestic RHI and the extension of the non-domestic scheme to support new technologies, DETI will continue to monitor the budget requirements.

Hydraulic Fracturing: Geological Survey of Northern Ireland

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the GSNI has sought to become the regulator of hydraulic fracturing.

(AQW 28902/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No.

Sustainable Energy: Campaigns

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how the success of the EnergyWise campaign will be measured in terms of changing consumer behaviour.

(AQW 28903/11-15)

Mrs Foster: 'EnergyWise' is a messaging brand rather than a specific campaign. It aims to deliver a unified approach to sustainable energy messaging across all Government Departments and Agencies. The approach was approved by the Executive in November 2010 and to date the brand has been used in two campaigns run by DETI.

In each of the DETI campaigns, research was commissioned pre and post campaign, to assess changes in public awareness and changes in public attitudes. The 'call to action' elements of the advertising were also monitored through the recording of web traffic on the 'nidirect.gov.uk' and 'nibusinessinfo.gov.uk' websites and by monitoring the number of phone calls received. This feedback enabled DETI to assess how consumers were responding to the different elements of the campaigns and in turn can be used to inform future communications work.

My Department will next use the brand, in a campaign to promote renewable heat in both the domestic and non-domestic markets, during January-March 2014. Research will once again be undertaken and the web and phone traffic monitored. Ultimately the change in the rate of applications received for the Renewable Heat Incentive scheme will be a good indicator of the effectiveness of the campaign.

Selective Financial Assistance

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration has been given by her Department to better target Selective Financial Assistance, to create employment in areas of high deprivation and unemployment.

(AQW 28906/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The recent evaluation of Selective Financial Assistance (SFA) which was commissioned by my Department gave detailed consideration to the impact of SFA during the 2004 – 2011 period and concluded that it was being delivered in a balanced and equitable fashion across Northern Ireland.

The evaluation found that SFA operated in many of Northern Ireland's most deprived communities, and supported job creation in our most deprived areas which have the greatest economic need. The evaluation was also able to demonstrate that a disproportionately high amount of SFA has been targeted at areas of disadvantage. For example:

- almost one quarter (23%) of new SFA jobs promoted were located in the 10% most deprived neighbourhoods, and;
- almost half (45%) of new SFA jobs promoted were in the 30% most deprived neighbourhoods.

Whilst the evaluation made a number of recommendations to help shape the use of SFA going forward, it is notable that it did not recommend that any greater targeting of support to specific areas should occur. Analysis of Invest NI support over the last two financial years (1 April 2011 – 31 March 2013) would seem to support this approach, as it shows that during this time:

- 52% of all Invest NI Job related offers went to businesses in areas of disadvantage*
- 56% of job related assistance went to businesses in areas of disadvantage*
- 59% of job related investment went to businesses in areas of disadvantage*, and
- 59% of all new jobs promoted were in areas of disadvantage*

Renewable Energy: Target

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what progress has been made on achieving the 40 per cent renewable energy target of the Strategic Energy Framework.

(AQW 29044/11-15)

Mrs Foster: We continue to make steady progress towards the 40% target. In the rolling twelve month period to end October 2013, approximately fifteen percent of electricity consumption was from renewable energy sources.

Electricity: Annual Requirement

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the annual electricity MW requirement in each local council area; and whether any monitoring takes place on that basis against the 40 per cent renewable energy target required by 2020.

(AQW 29053/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not undertake monitoring of this nature. I am further informed by Northern Ireland Electricity (NIE) that there is no estimation carried out of electrical demand or consumption or monitoring against the renewable energy target in respect of individual council areas. The NIE network is not configured on the basis of council areas and it is therefore impracticable to make such assessments.

Department of the Environment

Taxis: Enforcement/Compliance

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the number of Belfast based private hire taxi drivers; and (ii) the number of Belfast based private hire taxi depot operators and/or licence holders that have been found in breach of licence regulations; and of these, how many incurred penalties and/or lost their licences, since October 2012.

(AQW 28533/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Under current Regulations, when a taxi driver or taxi operator is licensed he/she can operate either private or public hire taxis. Accordingly, there are no public hire or private hire taxi drivers or operators but simply taxi drivers or operators that may drive or operate either type of taxi. As of 27 November 2013, there were 4,651 licensed taxi drivers and 477 licensed taxi operators with Belfast addresses.

During the period 1 October 2012 to 30 June 2013, the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) carried out 79 taxi enforcement operations in the Belfast area resulting in 362 private hire taxis and drivers checked for compliance with legal requirements at the roadside. Of these, 39 drivers received Fixed Penalty Notices with a further 31 drivers informed that they were liable to prosecution. In addition, follow up investigations were instigated with 8 taxi operator licence holders.

DVA also carry out compliance visits at commercial premises to ensure that operators comply with the conditions of their taxi operator's licence. The most important of these is that they use only properly licensed drivers and vehicles and maintain accurate booking records. During the period 1 February 2013 to 31 October 2013, there were 40 Compliance visits undertaken at commercial premises in the Belfast area. Of these, 15 were deemed fully compliant with legal requirements with a further 22 subject to a revisit due to minor infractions which have since been rectified. In addition, 1 operator has closed down their premises, 1 operator has received a written warning and 1 operator's licence is currently under review.

Please note that these are not validated official government statistics.

Taxis: Fixed Penalty Notices

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27263/11-15, for his assessment of whether a £30 fixed penalty ticket is a sufficient penalty and deterrent under these circumstances.

(AQW 28535/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Private hire vehicle licensees who contravene the Public Service Vehicle Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1985 and the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 by causing or permitting a vehicle to ply for hire are liable for a £30 fixed penalty ticket, or a maximum fine of £2,500 if taken to court.

The levels of Fixed Penalties which apply to this and other road transport offences have been agreed following public consultation, and ministerial and committee agreement.

The committing of an offence by a driver listed on the licence of a taxi operator may be considered in terms of determining whether an individual remains a fit and proper person to hold a taxi operator's licence; and similar considerations may apply to the retention of a taxi driver's licence. The fixed penalty ticket is therefore not the only deterrent in place as regards such offences.

A wide range of fixed penalty notices and charges apply for road traffic offences. I recognise that it is necessary periodically to review the charges for the notices, but that it is necessary to do this in a holistic way, to ensure the appropriate balance is kept between offences, and against fines imposed by the courts. My Department therefore plans to carry out a review of all current penalties for road traffic offences, including all fixed penalties. The review will also assess the scope for conditions and circumstances around the commission of an offence to be reflected in the applicable penalties. Work on this review, which is a medium term action measure in the Road Safety Strategy, will begin in 2015 and I will consider its outcomes once it is completed.

Taxis: Private and Public Hire

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27815/11-15, given there are different regulations for private and public hire taxis, for his assessment of whether it would be beneficial to differentiate between the two sectors.

(AQW 28536/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Under current Regulations, when a taxi driver is licensed he/she can operate either private or public hire taxis. Accordingly, there are no public hire or private hire taxi drivers but simply taxi drivers who may drive either type of taxi.

You will be aware that the introduction of a single tier licensing system will remove the distinction between Public Hire and Private Hire Taxis, permitting both to pick-up passengers without a pre-booking.

War Memorials

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail what financial assistance is available for the conservation and repair of war memorials.

(AQW 28569/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are 24 war memorials listed in Northern Ireland; others are protected either as part of a listed building, or because they lie within a Conservation Area.

War memorials that are listed may avail of Listed Buildings Grant-aid funding for works of repair and maintenance of the historic fabric. Grant-aid is available currently at a rate of 45%; and capped at £500K (this is subject to funding availability). Grant-aid assistance, of up to 75% of costs, is also available towards (reasonable) related professional fees.

Some memorials may also be eligible for financial assistance where they are part of a scheduled Historic Monument, though very few (ie less than 10) are known to be protected in this way. Where a memorial is part of a scheduled Historic Monument, funding may be made available for up to 100% for conservation works. Here again this is subject to funding availability.

Other non DOE sources of funding, including HLF funding, may also be available. Many of these sources may be accessed at the Funding for Historic Buildings' web site <http://www.ffhb.org.uk/>.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Video Evidence

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27716/11-15, whether photographic evidence, as stated, includes video recordings.

(AQW 28576/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Photographic evidence recorded by Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement staff includes video recordings.

Environmental Impact Assessment: Judicial Reviews

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27485/11-15, (i) why no costs were paid to the applicant in case LIT 33530/2012; (ii) why the costs for case LIT 33380/2012 are recorded as £0 when the table confirms that his Department paid part of the applicant's costs; and (iii) whether he wishes to revise any of the figures in the table.

(AQW 28601/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The figures quoted in AQW 27485/11-15 related to the amount of money paid out by the Department up to the end of October. Further investigation has revealed that some of the figures included in AQW 27485/11-15 were incorrect. The table provided has therefore been revised and I apologise for the error.

The costs paid in case LIT 33380/2012 were £55,142 and those in case LIT 33530/2012 were £2,080.

Special Area of Conservation: Mineral Extraction

Mr Agnew asked Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27412/11-15, whether his Department has a requirement to review extant permissions for mineral extraction and processing that are likely to have a significant effect on a Special Area of Conservation or any other environmental designation of international importance.

(AQW 28602/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is a general requirement under the Habitats Regulations to review any extant planning permissions which are likely to have a significant effect on a European site such as a Special Area of Conservation. I would also refer you to my answer to your previous question (AQW 25467/11-15), in which I advised that, whilst the review of old minerals permissions has not yet commenced, I am exploring options and timelines for introducing this review.

Brickkiln: Waste Licensing Compliance

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether at the time of the fire which broke out on 8 November 2013 at Brickkiln waste recycling plant at Maydown, Derry, the company was in compliance with all its waste licencing requirements and other development consents.

(AQW 28603/11-15)

Mr Durkan: At the time of the fire on the 8th November 2013:

- Brickkiln Ltd was not in compliance with the conditions of the Waste Management Licence. NIEA is taking action in response to these non-compliances in the form of an Article 16 Notice under the Waste Management and Contaminated Land Order 1997.
- Brickkiln Ltd was in compliance with Water Discharge Consent Number 119/08 for sewage effluent and Water Discharge Consent Number 119/08 for sewage effluent.
- DOE Planning was not aware of any breach of planning control.

City Industrial Waste: Fire Investigation

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 25391/11-15 whether his Department has concluded its investigation into the fires at City Industrial Waste, Mobouy Road, Derry; (ii) whether any of the fires resulted in pollution of the River Faughan SAC, the adjoining stream or the environment; and (iii) whether any criminal proceedings will follow.

(AQW 28604/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) Water Management Unit staff were on site throughout the response to both 2010 fires and repeatedly checked all surrounding watercourses, but found no significant water pollution. This was due in large part to Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) containing and recycling fire water runoff, under NIEA guidance, so that there was a negligible volume of off-site runoff. As no significant water pollution resulted from these 2010 fires it was not appropriate for NIEA to initiate criminal charges for any fire-related water pollution offence.

The fires at City Industrial Waste, Mobouy Road, Derry were also investigated by the NIFRS and the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI). Queries regarding these investigations and any resulting criminal proceedings would need to be directed to the PSNI and the NIFRS.

Planning Applications: Environment Agency

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether there is a target time in place for the Northern Ireland Environment Agency's response to the planning application consultations.

(AQW 28653/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency's (NIEA) consultation responses are the subject of targets set for the return of consultation responses on planning applications within certain timeframes. These include a target to return 90% of consultations concerning scoping requests under the Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) regulations (to determine if an Environmental Statement is required) within 15 working days. In relation to routine planning applications the target is to return 75% within 15 working days. The target for consultations which include Environmental Impact, hydro-geological or Article 6 (Habitats Regulations) Assessments is 90% within 30 working days.

These targets are currently being reviewed and it is anticipated that new and tighter targets will be set for the period from now until the transfer of planning powers to the councils. There are ongoing quarterly meetings within the Department between Planning and NIEA senior management where consultation performance is discussed.

In the future as part of the implementation of the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, in addition to transferring the bulk of planning powers to councils in 2015, I will provide greater clarity and certainty for the consultation process. For the first time, identified consultees will be statutorily required to provide a substantive response to a consultation request from a planning authority within a specified timeframe and to report on their performance in meeting their duty to respond.

All future consultation responses will have to be "substantive" providing sufficient information to allow the requesting planning authority to determine the application. A holding response would not be regarded as meeting the requirements of the duty to respond.

Details of proposed timeframes, criteria as to what would constitute a substantive response and reporting requirements will be set out in subordinate legislation which will be the subject of public consultation commencing in Spring 2014.

Tully Quarry, Ballymena: Planning Application

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment, given the process deployed in respect of the Rose Energy application, why the planning application for an anaerobic digester at Tully Quarry, Ballymena is being dealt with by the local planning office.

(AQW 28662/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Rose Energy proposal to which you refer was for a biomass plant to be fuelled by poultry bedding with a smaller amount of meat and bone meal (approximately 260,000 tonnes per annum). It would generate approximately 30MW of electricity as output from the process of incineration. The proposal included a number of structures including an 80 m high chimney stack. The application was accompanied by an Environmental Impact Statement.

The application was declared a major application under Article 31 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1999 on 23 September 2008 primarily on the basis that it would be of significance to the whole or a substantial part of Northern Ireland.

In contrast, the proposal for Stream Bio-energy is a much smaller 2MW Centralised Anaerobic Digestion (CAD) Combined Heat and Power Plant that will solely process chicken litter.

Although the Department accepts that the application is important locally, it is not considered to be of regional significance and does not meet with the criteria to be made an Article 31 application. I am therefore content that this application is being processed locally by the South Antrim Area Planning Office.

Tully Quarry, Ballymena: Planning Policy Statement 18

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment, having regard to the expectations of PPS 18, for his assessment of the level of engagement with local residents by the applicant for an anaerobic digester at Tully Quarry, Ballymena.
(AQW 28663/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While I would encourage public and community consultation with all such proposals, in line with the Department's publication 'PPS18 Best Practice Guidance' as this is not a legislative requirement, applicants cannot be compelled to undertake this prior to the submission of an application.

I understand that the applicants in this case, Stream Bio-energy have since met with local residents to discuss the proposal

Planning Applications: Developer Contribution

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether consideration is being given to making a developer contribution to social and affordable housing a requirement in planning applications for all large housing developments.
(AQW 28681/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Officials from my Department have been in discussion with officials from the Department for Social Development in relation to proposals for developer contributions toward the provision of social and affordable housing units.

I have written to the Minister for Social Development on this matter and I hope that we will be able to agree to consult on joint proposals for such a system in the near future.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Enforcement Staff

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27047/11-15, whether enforcement officers are contracted to work evenings or nights or is such work deemed as overtime.
(AQW 28685/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) enforcement officers are not contracted to work evenings or nights and therefore any work undertaken outside conditioned hours is deemed overtime.

For the majority of full-time non-industrial Civil Servants including DVA enforcement officers, pay is related to a specific number of contracted hours of attendance per week, known as 'conditioned hours'. Normal conditioned hours are 42 gross per week, including a meal break of one hour a day and the 5 day week is the standard arrangement throughout the Civil Service.

Due to the nature and timing of enforcement operations, particularly in respect of the taxi and bus industry, I have asked that a review of the contractual arrangements for new enforcement staff is undertaken to determine the best workforce model to support an effective and efficient enforcement function.

On average between 1 and 2 Enforcement Officers work in Belfast each evening.

There are 14 PSV enforcement officers based in Belfast.

Driver and Vehicle Agency: Enforcement Staff

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27047/11-15, what are the contracted hours of enforcement officers.
(AQW 28686/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

- (i) Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) enforcement officers are not contracted to work evenings or nights and therefore any work undertaken outside conditioned hours is deemed overtime.

City of Culture 2013: DOE Tenders/ Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28689/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department did not award any tenders to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013. A total of £817,200 was provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013. Funds were dispersed by way of grants. Details are provided in the table below.

Organisation	Amount	Description
Architectural Heritage Fund	£250,000	Acquisition of Great James Street Presbyterian Church and 31-33 Shipquay Street - listed buildings at risk.
City Centre Initiative	£12,500	Installation of CCTV to discourage vandalism on the Walls.

Organisation	Amount	Description
Derry City Council	£504,500	Dereliction Funding (£498,000) and publication of Island City (£6,500).
Echo Echo Dance Studio	£6,200	Installation of disabled access ramp on Hangman's Bastion.
Foyle Civic Trust	£6,000	Living History Exhibition.
Holywell Trust	£10,000	Wave on the Walls (£5,000) and European Walled Towns Symposium (£5,000).
Lumen Christi College	£28,000	Conservation Programme on the 17th century windmill in college grounds.
Total	£817,200

Littering: Prosecutions

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many people in each council area have been prosecuted for littering in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28703/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Figures obtained from Councils in respect of successful prosecutions in the courts for littering offences are as follows:-

Litter Offence – No. of Successful Prosecutions

Council	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Ballymena	2	1	0
Belfast	91	15	44
Castlereagh	1	4	1
Coleraine	1	2	1
Cookstown	2	0	1
Craigavon	25	11	41
Down	0	0	8
Larne	3	0	2
Limavady	0	0	1
Magherafelt	0	1	0
Newtownabbey	7	7	4
North Down	0	0	1
Omagh	1	2	2
All other Councils	0	0	0
Totals	133	43	106

Councils also deal with litter offenders by issuing fixed penalty notices or on the spot fines as an alternative to seeking prosecution through the courts. Over the past three financial years 10,940 fixed penalty notices were issued by councils for littering offences.

Taxi Ranks: Report

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what was the cost of the report commissioned by his Department into the Review of Taxi Ranks and of the Introduction of Rank Exclusion Zones; (ii) what cognisance has been given to the conclusions in this report; and (iii) what action has been taken as a result of this report.

(AQW 28721/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In June 2011 my Department commissioned research into the suitability of exclusion zones for taxi ranks in Northern Ireland.

- (i) The cost of this research was £9,999. The report was published on 30 November 2011. The report can be downloaded directly from the following link: http://www.doeni.gov.uk/review_of_taxi_ranks.pdf

- (ii) & (iii) The report recommended taking no action in relation to the implementation of exclusion zones. The report concluded that, particularly within Belfast, consumers often prefer not to take rank based taxis. Therefore exclusion zones around ranks would have the effect of making consumers walk further to get their preferred type of taxi outside of the zone. Given the proximity of ranks to one another within Belfast City Centre, this would effectively close the City Centre off to all but Belfast Public Hire taxis. Given the implications for the night time economy, and the safety implications of consumers having to walk late at night to procure the taxi of their choice, the report recommended not introducing exclusion zones in Northern Ireland at this time.

The report made a number of other rank related recommendations, some of which come under the remit of DRD. Those applicable to my Department included the need to encourage rank use, and to increase public confidence in taking rank based taxis, particularly to improve in service levels in collaboration with the taxi trade. My officials continue to work closely with all taxi industry stakeholders as part of the Taxi Reform Programme, and in recent months this has involved intense engagement with Belfast Public Hire. The Department is working with Belfast Public Hire to improve customer service at ranks and encourage consumer confidence, prior to the introduction of single tier taxi licensing, facilitating the adjustment for them to the new regime.

The report also recommended the Department move to a policy of only allowing accessible taxis at official ranks in Northern Ireland, rather than only in Belfast as is currently the case. Further research is ongoing to investigate whether this would suit the needs of people with disabilities, taking account of the fact that not all disabled people are able to use a wheelchair accessible taxi. In addition this research will recommend a revised wheelchair accessible vehicle specification which would improve the service to wheelchair users across Northern Ireland. I plan to issue a consultation on this shortly, once the work is complete.

Radon: Public Awareness Campaigns

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether his Department is currently conducting, or planning to conduct, any radon public awareness campaigns in areas where there is an elevated risk of radon; (ii) whether his Department offers householders free radon tests in areas where there is an elevated risk of radon, or retests after remediation work has been carried out; and (iii) how many radon tests have been carried out by his Department over the last two years.

(AQW 28735/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since 1988 NIEA has carried out a number of radon campaigns across Northern Ireland, offering free tests to householders in areas with an elevated risk of having high radon levels. Over 50,000 householders have been offered free tests in the course of these campaigns which included road shows, seminars, public meetings, press releases for local media, presentations to professional groups and direct visits to householders in affected areas.

The results of these campaigns were used to produce increasingly accurate radon risk maps in 1989, 1993 and 1999; culminating in the 2009 Radon Atlas which presented radon probability maps for NI at a resolution of 1km squares of the Irish Grid. By 2009, 3.3% of the housing stock in NI (approx 23,000 households) had been tested for radon, compared to 1.9% of the housing stock in the rest of the UK.

NIEA's most recent radon campaign was carried out in 2011 in the Cookstown, Armagh and Dungannon council areas, areas where the response to previous campaigns had been low. Householders in areas where the potential for radon levels to exceed the UK Radon Action level was 5% or greater were contacted by letter and offered a free radon test. Around 540 householders were invited to participate; about 35% accepted the offer. Of the 153 tests successfully completed, six homes were identified above the Action Level of 200 Bq m⁻³ and 17 measured between the Target Level of 100 Bq m⁻³ and the Action Level.

Public Health England (PHE), who issue and analyse the radon monitors on behalf of NIEA, provided the householders with a report of the results and advise on any actions necessary to reduce radon levels. The report on this campaign was published in March 2013 and is available at http://www.hpa.org.uk/webc/HPAwebFile/HPAweb_C/1317138226199.

NIEA are not currently planning to conduct any further radon campaigns or offer free tests but continue to offer advice to householders who contact the Agency with queries about radon and to direct them to the appropriate resources.

Waste Crime: Mills Report

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether he, or his departmental officials, have seen the Mills report, or any draft copies or sections of this report; and whether any recommendations or suggestions on altering the report or what should be included in the final version of the report were made.

(AQW 28738/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have not yet seen the report. The Expert Reviewer, Mr Chris Mills, is currently finalising the report. Given the critical importance of the review and the complex nature of the issues he is investigating, Mr Mills requested extra time to finalise his report which he has been provided with. As part of this process, Mr Mills asked the Chief Executive of the NIEA to ensure his draft report is checked for factual and legal accuracy. My Departmental officials are providing this support to Mr Mills. I understand that Mr Mills will be providing his final report to me in the next few days.

Public Service Vehicles Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1985

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to provide a copy of the Public Service Vehicles Regulations (NI) 1985. (AQW 28763/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Regulations in question are contained in the Bound Volumes in the Assembly Library, and can be obtained from the Library enquiry desk using the reference S.R. 1985/123. I have been advised that these can be photocopied or scanned for you as required.

Taxis: Approved Taximeter Centres

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what assurances he can give that a rigorous tendering process will be used to select the companies that will supply, fit and calibrate meter printers for taxis, to ensure that drivers receive the best price and service.

(AQW 28775/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As part of the suite of measures included in the taxi reform implementation programme, the Department is planning to work with the private sector to establish a network of Approved Taximeter Centres (ATCs) which will be authorised to calibrate, test and seal taximeters, with an authorisation process largely based on the existing model for approved tachograph centres.

On application for an approval, companies and individuals would be inspected and assessed by DVA to ensure that they meet specified standards. Approved installers would be required to comply with a number of conditions to be determined by the Department. Non compliance with these conditions could result in the withdrawal of the Department's approval and the subsequent loss of access to the marketplace. Once approved, ATCs would be subject to quality audit by DVA to ensure continued compliance with the conditions of the approval.

The Department has no plans to contract these companies and individuals as service suppliers and there will therefore be no requirement for a tender process. The Department does not have the power to regulate the price of taximeters or any fees charged by ATCs; these levels will be determined by market forces.

Planning: Back Garden Developments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment when legislation to prevent back garden developments will be introduced. (AQW 28788/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I recognise that great care is needed to ensure that the individual or cumulative effects of back garden development do not significantly erode the character or amenity of existing residential areas. However, I am satisfied that existing policy and guidance contained in Planning Policy Statement 7 'Quality Residential Environments' and its addendum 'Safeguarding the Character of Established Residential Areas' is sufficient to ensure that siting, design, layout and density of new development is fully considered. In established residential areas planning permission will only be granted for the redevelopment of existing buildings, or the infilling of vacant sites (including extended garden areas) that respects the existing character and amenity of these areas.

I, therefore, have no plans to introduce legislative measures to prevent back garden developments.

Taxis: Temporary Licences

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how many temporary private taxi-operator licences have been issued in each of the last two years; and what was the duration of each licence. (AQW 28809/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Taxi Operator Licensing was introduced on 1 September 2012. Regulation 17(2) of the Taxi Operators Licensing Regulations (NI) 2012 provided for the issue of temporary licences to customers who submitted applications on or before 31 October 2012. This measure was designed to enable existing businesses to continue to operate while the Department dealt with the initial influx of applications, following the introduction of taxi operator licensing in September 2012.

A total of 1,7431 temporary operator licences were issued. Operator licences do not differentiate between private and public; licensed operators can operate either type of service.

Temporary licences had no set duration and were intended as an interim measure to allow the Department time to complete the process of determining applications.

Other than for a small number of cases where applicants have exercised their rights of appeal, all temporary licences had been revoked (where the applicant failed to meet the criteria for a full licence) or replaced with a full licence by June 2013.

Please note these figures are not part of official statistics and have not been subject to data validation.

Road Safety: 20 mph Speed Limit

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the proposed Bill to set a 20mph speed limit on minor residential roads.

(AQW 28838/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While speed limits are a matter for the Department for Regional Development, as Minister with responsibility for road safety, I have an interest in the Bill as a measure with the potential to contribute to further reductions in road casualties.

Over the five years between 2008 and 2012, 797 pedestrians and 128 cyclists were killed or seriously injured in road traffic collisions in an area with a 30mph limit or lower; around 30 per cent of these casualties were children.

Speed at the moment of collision is one of the key determinants of the outcome and, where pedestrians or cyclists are involved, just a few miles an hour can make a real difference.

I do believe that we should actively consider introducing 20mph limits more broadly to where people live, particularly where vehicles come into close proximity to vulnerable road users such as children, pedestrians and cyclists. It would of course be vital to ensure that any such speed limits are suitable for the roads or areas for which they are proposed and, in particular, that they have the support of the local community, that any necessary or appropriate signage and/or other infrastructure is in place, and that limits are properly enforced. By ensuring that this is the case, there is likely to be more compliance with the lower speed limit, meaning that speeds will be reduced and the impact of any collisions will be lower.

Road Safety: 20 mph Speed Limit

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the impact on road safety of the proposed Bill to set the speed limit on minor residential roads at 20mph.

(AQW 28839/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While speed limits are a matter for the Department for Regional Development, as Minister with responsibility for road safety, I have an interest in the Bill as a measure with the potential to contribute to further reductions in road casualties.

Over the five years between 2008 and 2012, 797 pedestrians and 128 cyclists were killed or seriously injured in road traffic collisions in an area with a 30mph limit or lower; around 30 per cent of these casualties were children.

Vehicle Licensing: Online

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that motorists can tax their cars online.

(AQW 28904/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle licensing is an excepted matter which is carried out in Northern Ireland by the Driver and Vehicle Agency within my Department, under the terms of an agreement with the Department for Transport, represented by its Agency, Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea. Under that agreement, DVLA are responsible for funding the full cost of providing vehicle licensing services in Northern Ireland and for the provision of IT facilities.

At present, there are separate IT systems for Britain and for Northern Ireland. In 2002, DVLA decided, in principle, to integrate the two IT systems and, since that date, they have not invested in the development of the IT system for Northern Ireland. For that reason, when online re-licensing of vehicles was introduced in Britain in 2004, it was not made available in here. Bids for funding to develop this service for Northern Ireland motorists have been rejected by DVLA, which maintains that the most economical way of extending online licensing to NI is through the integration of the IT systems.

DVLA are nearing completion of a project that would extend the GB IT system to Northern Ireland and the introduction of that system would bring with it new services, including online licensing. However, DVLA has proposed using the integrated system to centralise all vehicle licensing services in Swansea and to close all the motor tax offices here. With the support of all Members, I have been robustly opposing these centralisation proposals. I met Mr Robert Goodwill, the relevant Minister in the Department for Transport, on 6 November to press again the case for retaining vehicle licensing services, and the associated jobs, in Northern Ireland. Mr Goodwill indicated that a decision is likely to be made early next year.

I have also repeatedly made the case that online licensing services should be made available in Northern Ireland immediately, and this is an entirely separate matter to the DVLA proposal to centralise vehicle licensing work in Swansea. I will continue to press DVLA for the retention of vehicle licensing services and jobs, and the extension of online licensing but at present I am unable to indicate when these services might become available to motorists here.

Taxis: Insurance

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28259/11-15, whether his Department effectively underwrites invalidated taxi-insurance policies through breaches of law; and what provision exists to have the offending driver made liable for costs borne by his Department and the Motor Insurers' Bureau.

(AQW 28914/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The 6th Motor Insurance Directive requires Member States to make provision for a body to guarantee that victims of road traffic collisions will not remain without compensation where the vehicle which caused the accident is uninsured (or incorrectly insured) or unidentified. In the UK, this body is the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB), which functions under two separate Agreements between Government and the motor insurance industry.

The Uninsured Drivers Agreement requires the MIB to meet unsatisfied Civil Court Judgments against identified motorists who may not have been insured as required by the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981.

The Untraced Drivers' Agreement requires the MIB to consider applications for compensation from victims of "hit and run" motorists.

The Department is not responsible for underwriting motor insurance, nor does the Department incur any costs from victims of untraced or uninsured drivers. The ultimate cost of funding compensation for victims of uninsured and untraced drivers falls to law abiding motorists via their insurance premiums. The Department does not seek to recover the costs of any claims made through MIB as we are not involved in or responsible for such claims. You may wish to refer to the MIB website for details of how the Uninsured and Untraced Drivers' Agreements operate (see: <http://www.mib.org.uk/Downloadable+Documents/en/Agreements/Default.htm>)

Taxis: Insurance/Compensation

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28259/11-15, in relation to victims compensation covered by his Department in conjunction with the Motor Insurers' Bureau, over any invalidated taxi operator's insurance due to breach of regulations, (i) on how many occasions has compensation been paid to victims in these circumstances; (ii) what was the cost involved; and (iii) for his assessment of the impact of this scheme on the insurance policy premiums for all other drivers and road users.

(AQW 28916/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department is not involved in any compensation claims from victims of uninsured or untraced drivers, other than in the event of a dispute between the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB) and the claimant, in which case the limit of the Department's involvement is to appoint an arbitrator to review the case. At no time does the Department have knowledge of the details of any case or the parties involved, nor does the Department have sight of the sums involved. Requests for specific details regarding types of cases and sums involved should be directed to MIB.

The overall cost to law-abiding motorists of uninsured driving is estimated to be between £15 and £30 per policy per annum. I am continuing to work with my Assembly colleagues and relevant interests to do what I can to bear down on the cost of motor insurance.

Taxis: Classification

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to list the current classifications of taxi; and what functions each class is (i) permitted; and (ii) not permitted to carry out.

(AQW 28954/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Currently taxis are licensed as one of the following:

- (a) Belfast Public Hire
- (b) Public Hire Outside Belfast
- (c) Private Hire³
- (d) Taxibus

The functions each class is permitted and not permitted to carry out is set out on NI Direct at <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/taxis-and-private-hire-services> and is summarised below:

Permitted

Belfast Public Hire – permitted to ply for hire, stand at stands anywhere in Northern Ireland & carry passengers for reward;

Public Hire Outside Belfast – permitted to ply for hire outside the Belfast City Centre limits & carry passengers for reward;

Private Hire – permitted to carry passengers for reward;

³ Wedding and funeral cars are currently licensed as private hire but are given internal plates rather than external. Therefore they are only permitted to operate in conjunction with a wedding or funeral.

Taxibus – permitted to operate as defined in their Road Service Licence (typically on fixed routes).

Not permitted

Public Hire Outside Belfast – not permitted to ply for hire inside the Belfast City Centre limits;

Private Hire – not permitted to ply for hire;

Taxibus – not permitted to ply for hire or carry passengers for reward other than as permitted by the Road Service Licence under which they operate.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28201/11-15, AQW 28378/11-15 and AQW 27856/11-15, (i) to provide a copy of the legal advice obtained on this matter; (ii) to list the dates and times of the meetings and correspondence on the legal advice sought; (iii) whether any legal advisors were shown any video-footage; and (iv) if so, did they deem these examples of evidence as lawful.

(AQW 28955/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Following Departmental operational activity, officials sought and received legal advice on the operation of taxi services around Ravenhill Rugby Ground. As a result, it was determined that those services fell within the relevant legislation and therefore no offences were being committed.

The concept of legal professional privilege safeguards the rights of a person or organisation, including the Department, to obtain legal advice on a confidential basis and not to disclose such information in the interests of the wider administration of justice. It has been the settled view that in this context, legal advice is not disclosed and that privilege applies to the information sought in parts (i) to (iv) of the question. The Department is, therefore, unwilling to waive the legal professional privilege vested in it, and provide the information sought.

Planning Applications: Habitats Directive

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether his Department has complied with the requirements of the Habitats Directive by carrying out a review of all extant planning permissions which were likely to have a significant effect on a European Site, either individually or in combination with other development, following the designation of the River Faughan and Tributaries Special Area of Conservation; (ii) at what stage in the process of designation was the required review undertaken; (iii) whether any applications were modified, revoked or discontinued as a result; (iv) which competent authority was responsible for the review; and (v) whether the information is held and is readily accessible to the public.

(AQW 28983/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since its designation on 9 May 2008 as a possible Special Area of Conservation (SAC) a Habitats Regulations Assessment has been carried out on all planning applications considered likely to have a significant effect on this SAC, either individually or in combination with other developments. These assessments continued to be carried out at each subsequent stage in the designation process.

As regards extant planning applications that received permission prior to designation, assessments were carried out in relation to further applications that were associated with earlier planning permission. A full review of all extant planning permissions was not carried out.

The information sought in relation to applications modified, revoked or discontinued can only be provided at disproportionate cost to the public.

Planning NI is deemed to be the Competent Authority in relation to planning applications, but assessments are carried out on its behalf by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency.

Information held is readily available for individual requests, but the provision of all related information could only be provided at disproportionate cost to the public.

Taxis: Classification

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how many taxi classifications are included in the single tier proposal; and what tasks each classification will be (i) permitted; and (ii) not permitted to undertake.

(AQW 29035/11-15)

Mr Durkan: It is my intention that there will be four classes of use contained within the new Taxi Licence Regulations, two of which relate specifically to conventional taxis and deal with the single tier proposals. This distinction will allow for wheelchair accessible vehicles to be licensed separately to non-wheelchair accessible taxis.

It is the Department's intention that Belfast ranks will continue to be restricted to wheelchair accessible vehicles. Consideration will be given to whether it is appropriate to roll this requirement out to other areas of Northern Ireland, or if the disabled community is better served by promoting a more mixed fleet. Beyond this specific ranking issue, there will be no difference to how wheelchair and non-wheelchair accessible taxis can operate throughout Northern Ireland.

The other two classes will allow for separate licensing of taxibus vehicles and contracted chauffeur services (including wedding and funeral cars), to allow each to operate without a roof sign or taximeter, which would be inappropriate given the services being provided.

Unlike the current regulations, the new Taxi Licence regulations will not explicitly name each class, but will simply define the permitted uses of each. The tasks each classification will be permitted and not permitted to undertake are outlined below:

Permitted

Class A (non-wheelchair accessible vehicles) – will be permitted to ply for hire, stand at stands outside the Belfast City Centre limits, carry passengers for reward, and to operate a tour service when contracted to do so;

Class B (wheelchair accessible vehicles) – will be permitted to ply for hire, stand at all stands, carry passengers for reward, and to operate a tour service when contracted to do so;

Class C (chauffeur / contract services) – will be permitted to carry passengers for reward only when a contract has been made in advance for the service; and Class D (taxibus) – will be permitted to operate under a permit issued by DRD under the Transport Act 2011, and to operate a tour service when contracted to do so.

Not permitted

Class A (non-wheelchair accessible vehicles) – will not be permitted to stand at stands inside the Belfast City Centre limits or to advertise as wheelchair accessible, or operate a tour service when the contract requirements have not been met;

Class B (wheelchair accessible vehicles) – will not be permitted to operate a tour service when the contract requirements have not been met;

Class C (chauffeur / contract services) – will not be permitted to carry passengers for reward when the contract requirements have not been met, or to ply for hire or stand at stands; and

Class D (taxibus) – will not be permitted to operate a tour service when the contract requirements have not been met, ply for hire or stand at stands or carry passengers for reward beyond the fixed route approved in the permit issued by DRD.

Planning: Economic Development

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of the Environment to outline his plans to improve the planning system to better support economic development.

(AQO 5202/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The key aim of the planning reform programme is to enable the planning system to play its part in contributing to growing a dynamic, innovative and sustainable economy, while promoting inclusion and equality of opportunity.

Planning has a critical role to play in promoting economic development but it also has an equally important role to play in protecting the environment and both of these commitments need to be fully considered in making planning decisions.

As a result of vigorous action by my predecessor, action which I intend to continue, the planning system is now much better placed to deliver quicker decision-making and provide greater certainty on outcomes and timeframes for managing applications.

I recognise that the planning system can, and should, do much more to unlock development potential, support job creation and aid economic recovery.

I intend to continue to make prompt and sound planning decisions and to create a planning system that is fast, fair and fit for purpose. A planning system that delivers for business but not at the expense of the environment. As Environment Minister I want to help create a better environment and a stronger economy.

As I have outlined, I intend to bring forward the new single Strategic Planning Policy Statement which will be shorter, clearer and more accessible regional planning policy and consolidate existing policies into one document.

I recognise the important contribution the construction industry makes to the economy and have reinforced to Planning Officials that, where appropriate, they seek to balance the economic advantages of proposals with appropriate development.

I am keen to emphasise that front-loading the planning application process with pre-application discussions is highly beneficial, resulting in a more efficient process and predictable outcome. As such, I am committed to continuing engagement with the construction industry and other stakeholders in identifying relevant planning issues so as to ensure the submission of high quality planning applications. This in turn allows for faster processing of applications through the statutory process.

I am also committed to getting all of this right in preparation for handing planning powers to local government in 2015.

Councils: Causeway Coast and Glens

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment what action he can take to prevent the brand name of "Glens" being removed from the domain name of the Causeway Coast and Glens council grouping.

(AQW 29246/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The new councils will be able to make decisions on their names immediately after the next local government election in 2014, during the shadow period. Statutory Transition Committees will be able to make recommendations to the new councils in respect of their names. However, the final decision on the name of the new council and any related website names will be taken by the councillors elected in 2014.

Planning Application A/2009/0400/F

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28600/11-15, (i) why his Department's Head of Planning informed the NI Ombudsman on 7 September 2012 that the application was withdrawn; (ii) why this position was adopted at that time; and (iii) whether his Department has since informed, or intends to inform the Ombudsman that the application is no longer withdrawn and that a deemed refusal was issued on 5 November 2013.

(AQW 29279/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning application A/2009/0400/F was deemed refused on 4 June 2010 due to the applicant failing to submit further environmental information required to forward the assessment of the proposal. While a procedural error was made in accepting the withdrawal of this application, a letter has now issued to the agent advising of the deemed refusal, with the Planning Portal updated to reflect this corrected position.

While this correction does not in my opinion, alter the conclusions expressed by the then Head Planner Anne Garvey, in her response to the Ombudsman you refer to, I have instructed my officials to advise the Ombudsman of the same.

Transport: Rural Community Transport Partnerships

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment how Rural Transport Community Associations will be affected by proposed licensing changes.

(AQO 5195/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Whilst my Department is currently in the process of developing proposals for a new bus operator licensing regime no final proposals have been brought forward or final decisions on this made.

Since 2010 officials have actively been engaged in developing proposals with a view to supporting a vibrant bus passenger transport sector. All stakeholders have agreed that the current scheme, which is 46 years old, is outdated and no longer able to support the diversity of passenger transport being delivered in the 21st Century.

In developing the policy proposals my Department has taken into consideration a number of key objectives namely:

- (i) The need to regulate for a safe, fair and fit for purpose sector;
- (ii) The need to allow a vibrant and innovative community transport sector to continue to flourish;
- (iii) The need to ensure a level regulatory playing field, with rights and duties for the various groups within the sector being kept in appropriate balance;
- (iv) The need to develop a licensing regime with clear distinctions between categories of licence and which is enforceable.

My officials are currently engaging with stakeholders on proposals for a two tier licensing regime which will replace the current licensing scheme.

The upper tier will be an unrestricted licence which allows holders to undertake any bus passenger transport activity. The lower tier licence will be available to those for whom passenger transport is exclusively non-commercial or ancillary to their main purpose or activity, such as scout or church groups.

My Department is aware of the vital role that the Rural Community Transport Partnerships play in delivering transport which addresses rural and social isolation, and is committed to ensuring that this important work is supported in any new licensing regime. We are therefore continuing our engagement to ensure that all key points have been addressed in the proposals before they are finalised.

Road Safety: Promotion

Mr I McCreagh asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the current road safety campaigns.

(AQO 5198/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety. It does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, which include road safety public information campaigns and education programmes.

The principal objective of my Department's road safety advertising is to contribute to reducing the number of people killed or seriously injured on our roads. The road safety campaigns therefore continue to address those behaviours that contribute most to road deaths and serious injuries.

DOE has commissioned in the region of 200 independently conducted benchmarking and tracking surveys since 1994. In the surveys, the DOE advertising campaigns have produced exceptionally high public awareness levels for each TV campaign and consistently high levels of personal influence in reducing road carnage.

Oxford Economics has, based on the Department for Transport's estimated cost of each road casualty, calculated the impacts of my Department's road safety advertising campaigns. The latest Oxford Economics report concluded that 21,977 men, women and children in Northern Ireland have been saved from death or serious injury on the roads as a result of DOE's advertising between 1995-2011, compared to previous trends. The economic payback was £10 per £1 invested by DOE in advertising, excluding human costs, and £42 per £1 invested by DOE in advertising, including human costs.

The road safety campaigns play a significant part in our ambition of working towards zero road deaths in Northern Ireland. This aspiration means that we do not accept that anyone should ever die on our roads; and the above initiatives support this by encouraging the community to adopt safer behaviours on the roads. We allow and encourage all road users to sign up to a pledge supporting this at www.sharetheroadtozero.com

I recognise the continuing challenges of preventing road deaths and serious injuries and as such my Department will continue to address the issues through various activities.

Local Government Reform: Minority Rights

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department will protect and guarantee minority rights within the new eleven council model as part of local government reform.
(AQO 5199/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As I have said previously, I am committed to ensuring that equality of opportunity will be a key feature in the new councils. The Local Government Bill that I introduced into the Assembly on 23 September 2013, and which is currently at Committee Stage, provides for new governance arrangements for the councils. These new arrangements will ensure the protection of the rights of all people, and provide for fair, transparent and efficient decision-making.

The sharing of positions of responsibility across the political parties represented on councils will be a cornerstone of the new arrangements. I am proposing that councils will be able to select from either the d'Hondt or Sainte-Laguë divisor methods or Single Transferrable Voting to achieve this aim. Provision will also be made to ensure that, as far as practicable, the membership of committees will also reflect the political balance of the council.

The governance arrangements will also include the use of a call-in procedure to ensure a system of checks and balances is in place in relation to the decision-making process to provide protection for the rights of minority groups. For example, a number of councillors who have an issue with a specific decision will be able to join together to request that the decision is reviewed. The call-in procedure may be used where an issue has been raised in relation to the procedures followed in making a decision or where there is an issue in relation to the protection of political minorities in the local government district. I am proposing that the trigger to initiate the call-in procedure should be 15% of the total council membership. For example, in a council with 40 members, a call-in would require the support of 6 councillors.

The introduction of qualified majority voting for specified strategic decisions, and as part of the call-in procedure, will also provide a further check and balance in relation to council decision-making. Rather than a system of cross-community voting (such as the one operated by the Northern Ireland Assembly), a straightforward threshold of 80% of council members present and voting will apply.

Local Government Reform: Rates Convergence

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the progress made with Rates Convergence modelling for new councils in advance of the Review of Public Administration.
(AQO 5200/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Earlier this year, the Executive agreed to provide councils with a reform funding package of £17.8 million over the 2013 to 2015 period, with a commitment of up to £30 million for rates convergence beyond 2015. This funding is being made available for managing rates convergence as a consequence of councils merging and other boundary changes arising from implementation of local government reform.

My Department has been working closely with the Department of Finance and Personnel on potential models for administering a rates convergence relief system. The preferred model is to provide for a district rate adjustment at bill level for each ratepayer account. This involves a lower rate being applied to the individual rates bills of those ratepayers who would otherwise face increases as a result of reform. Under this model, the rate relief that will be applied in a Council area will depend on the specific rate increases faced by ratepayers as a result of the level district rates settle at in the initial years of the new council. As the rates for the new councils have not yet been set, it is too early to determine which ratepayers will be eligible for rate relief and the quantum of rate relief that will apply. While the detailed workings of this scheme have yet to be finalised, it should be noted that the district rate adjustment methodology also has the endorsement of the Institute of Rating, Revenue and Valuation who conducted an external assessment of the various options prior to Ministerial agreement.

DFP and DOE will continue to work on finalising the details of the scheme to manage rates convergence, within the cost envelope of £30m, which will protect those ratepayers who otherwise would face sudden and excessive increases as a direct consequence of councils merging or due to other boundary changes.

The primary legislative powers to give effect to a rates convergence scheme is included in the Local Government Bill. When the scheme is finalised, the details will be set out in Regulations, for Assembly approval in due course.

Local Government Reform: Update

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the Review of Public Administration.
(AQO 5201/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Local Government Reform programme remains on target for 1 April 2015. The new councils will be equipped with a tested, robust and comprehensive legislative and operational framework.

The Local Government Bill was introduced into the Assembly on the 23 September and following second stage debate, on the 1st October was passed to the Environment Committee for scrutiny. An extension to Committee Stage has been granted and is due for completion by 20 February 2014. The Committee held a stakeholder event on 28 November which sought views on aspects of the Bill. This has been a major step in the legislative process that will make local government reform a reality and will provide the legislative framework necessary to give effect to the Executive's decisions on the future shape of local government.

A Commencement Order, which will bring the boundaries of the 11 new local government districts into effect for the purposes of holding the next local government elections and to allow the new councils to prepare an annual budget and strike a rate for the 2015/16 financial year, was made on the 3 October.

The Regulations which introduced the severance scheme for councillors came into operation on 1 August 2013. The main components of the scheme include a minimum eligibility period of 12 years (cumulatively), graduated yearly payments to ensure that those with longer periods of service are treated fairly and proportionately, and a cap on individual payments of £35,000.

Ten of the eleven Statutory Transition Committees are meeting, with the Belfast STC expected to be formed shortly. They are driving convergence between the merging councils and also preparing for the new incoming councils operating in shadow form next year. The work of the new Committees includes corporate, financial and business planning and also the appointment of chief executives to lead the change management process. The Department has issued guidance to the STCs, particularly to provide operational advice and direction to enable them to discharge their duties. Their work is monitored by the Regional Transition Committee, which I chair.

Councils will operate in shadow form for a period of time; that is, from the date of the elections on the 22 May 2014, until the date when the new councils assume full powers and responsibilities in April 2015. The newly elected councils, acting in shadow form, will have the statutory authority and democratic mandate to make policy decisions that will shape the direction of the new councils before they become fully operational.

The advertisement for 10 Chief Executive Posts was placed in the press on the 22 November 2013. The Belfast Chief Executive post wasn't included and will be advertised at a later date.

Planning: Enforcement

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment what action his Department is taking to decrease the time taken to deal with planning enforcement complaints.
(AQO 5203/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department is mindful of its duty to enforce planning legislation and to ensure that development is managed in a proactive and proportionate manner. In determining the most appropriate course of action in response to alleged breaches of planning control, the Department will take into account the extent of the breach and its potential impact on the environment.

I have set challenging targets for enforcement for all parts of the process within our control and there has also been considerable investment in our enforcement capabilities, supporting IT systems and management information to support this work. Each local office has a dedicated enforcement team of planning officers with caseloads monitored on a monthly basis to ensure their prompt progress.

Enforcement performance is also now published within the Quarterly Statistical Bulletin which allows public scrutiny of the work done.

Unconventional Gas Exploration and Extraction: Health Impact

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment why the joint Environmental Protection Agency/Department of Communications, Energy and Natural Resources/Northern Ireland Environment Agency research programme into will not incorporate a Health Impact Assessment.
(AQO 5204/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In response to the public consultation on the 'Proposed Terms of Reference' for the research programme, observations were made in submissions received that:

- The Terms of Reference should examine the overall issue of human health protection in environmental decision making and ought to, as a priority, give urgent attention to the further consideration of issues associated with the introduction of Health Impact Assessment.
- Comments were made that should the Study be limited to the environment and the environmental factors that have the potential to impact on human health, it would be appropriate to carry out a separate study on the public health aspects of Unconventional Gas Exploration and Extraction (UGEE) activities.

The Steering Committee for the research programme, which includes officials from my Department, responded by stating that:

'Well planned and managed environmental-health research offers a very effective way to respond to emerging issues. The draft Terms of Reference did refer to the need to consider the role of Health Impact Assessment in regulation of UGEE projects/operations. There is now an additional requirement in the Revised Terms of Reference (Project C, Task 3) to specifically consider the potential role of Health Impact Assessment in regulation of UGEE projects/operations based on the experience in other countries and to make recommendations towards developing a protocol in the island of Ireland context.'

The Steering Committee response document, to the submissions received, is available to download from the Environmental Protection Agency (Ireland) website.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Employment: Law Graduates

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he is concerned about the decline in employment opportunities for law graduates in solicitors' offices; and to outline the action he will take to increase opportunities.

(AQW 28574/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): I do share the Member's concern in relation to the fact that the current recession has restricted the number of places in solicitors' offices as compared with places available on the academic part of the course.

While I have no direct role in relation to increasing opportunities in solicitors' offices, I have recently met with the Law Society and was encouraged by the tentative signs of recovery it is seeing in certain parts of the market. I also note that it is overseeing the training of more solicitors now, despite the difficult times, than it has ever done before. The latest figures I have show that 116 graduates were trained in 2012, as compared with a figure of 95 in previous years.

I also understand that the Society has been proactive in accrediting a number of solicitor masters, including some in the public sector, and has brought forward initiatives to offset the cost to solicitors' firms in training an apprentice. Coupled with the recovery that solicitors are currently beginning to see, I am hopeful that the opportunities for law graduates will improve over the coming years.

Civil Service Estate: Carbon Neutral

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail any action he intends to take to make the Civil Service estate carbon neutral.

(AQW 28575/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I can only answer for the DFP government office estate for which I have responsibility. The NICS does not have any target to be carbon neutral and I have no plans to make the DFP office estate carbon neutral. Even if such a target existed it could only be achieved by offsetting emissions which would mean money allocated to the NI Block being sent outside NI as offsets would require to be purchased.

Rates: Commercial Town Centres

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the reassessment of commercial town centre rates prior to 2015.

(AQW 28596/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The reassessment of commercial town centres for rates is part and parcel of the ongoing revaluation of all commercial property in Northern Ireland.

Land & Property Services (LPS) is making good progress on the validation of the rental evidence it received and the detailed market analysis has started.

The valuation process will then follow in March next year and by late 2014 LPS will produce a draft Valuation List which will inform individual ratepayers of their new assessments, before the new bills issue in April 2015.

Rates: Commercial Ratepayers

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the arrangements in place to ensure that rates paid by individual commercial ratepayers reflect the goods sold on the property.

(AQW 28597/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As a general rule there are no arrangements in place to vary the rates paid by reference to the amount of goods sold with the notable exception of charity shops. Charity shops' exemption is granted in proportion to sales of donated goods versus non-donated goods.

Therefore, if any charity shops are selling significant amounts of non-donated goods for a period then this should trigger a rate liability. Land & Property Services (LPS) is already in the process of reviewing all charitable exemption awards and will be writing out to all charity shops as part of this exercise. Questionnaires will be issuing to relevant premises as soon as practicable, over the coming months.

Royal Bank of Scotland: Debt Management

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what action he intends to take in relation to the Royal Bank of Scotland Report into the debt management practices by Ulster Bank.

(AQW 28657/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Business Secretary has referred the debt management findings of both the RBS Independent Lending Review report and the Lawrence Tomlinson report on Banks' Treatment of Businesses in Distress to the Financial Conduct Authority and to the Prudential Regulation Authority for investigation. I understand that RBS has also commissioned an investigation.

While neither of these reports specifically covered Northern Ireland the RBS's Global Restructuring Group does operate here. I therefore raised my concerns that similar practices might have occurred here with the Financial Secretary to the Treasury when I meet him on the 4 December 2013.

City of Culture 2013: DFP Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28690/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel has not awarded a contract or provided funding to any organisation in Londonderry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

Fiscal Deficit

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to (i) identify both the cyclical element and structural element of the fiscal deficit and (ii) outline how he plans to resolve the cyclical element of the fiscal deficit.

(AQW 28865/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: No such estimates are available. The methodology developed as part of the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland (GERS) report, which my Department uses to estimate the overall Northern Ireland fiscal deficit, does not separately identify the cyclical and structural elements of that deficit.

Social Investment Fund

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 28470/11-15, to explain the arrangement whereby £80m is still ring fenced for the Social Investment Fund; and how this relates to the budgetary timeframe.

(AQW 29106/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Executive remains committed to providing funding of £80 million for the Social Investment Fund and any funding requirements can be considered as part of a future Budget process.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Homelessness: DHSSPS Support

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what support his Department offers to people who are homeless.

(AQW 28580/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The Provision of health and social services for those who are eligible is the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Services and Public Safety. These services are provided by the 5 Health and Social care Trusts.

Health services are a universal right to all citizens who are ordinarily resident in Northern Ireland. Social care services are provided on the basis on the outcome of assessment of need of individuals.

The provision of accommodation for adults who are homeless sits outside the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Services. However their health and social care needs remain the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Services and Public Safety.

Where a young person between the ages of 16 and 18 presents as homeless Health and Social care Trusts provide suitable accommodation and support under the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995.

Northern Health and Social Care Trust: Chairperson

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to explain the reasons for delay in the appointment of a Chair of the Northern Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) when an appointment will be made; (iii) how many applicants there were in each recruitment campaign; and (iv) how many were interviewed.

(AQW 28606/11-15)

Mr Poots: The delay in appointing a new Chair to the Northern HSC Trust has been due to the small number of applicants who responded to the initial advertisement campaign held in February 2013, resulting in the post being re-advertised in August 2013. Appointment will be made once the appointment process has been completed. Four applicants applied at each recruitment campaign. Three applicants having met the criteria were invited for interview

Marie Stopes Northern Ireland: Data Collection

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that the Marie Stopes Clinic is required by law to maintain records on each client and patient, why the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) does not, following inspection of those records, produce a compendium of cumulative, but anonymised, information on the number of abortions carried out in the clinic; and whether he will request that the RQIA produce such a compendium.

(AQW 28607/11-15)

Mr Poots: Officials are working to develop a data collection process. It is the intention that any new system will collect robust and consistent information from independent providers in addition to health and social care organisations.

Officials are exploring the best way to achieve this taking into consideration views expressed during the recent consultation.

Engagement has taken place with the Information Commissioner to ensure that the data collected protects a patient's rights to confidentiality.

Any form produced must meet legislative and regulatory requirements in Northern Ireland. It will be necessary to ensure that the form protects a patient's right to confidentiality and the interests of the public, professional bodies and elected members.

The Department continues to collect statistics on the number of terminations of pregnancy carried out in Health and Social Care facilities in Northern Ireland.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Budget

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the annual budget for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28635/11-15)

Mr Poots: The 2012/13 annual revenue budget for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust was £521.4m.

In addition, the Capital Allocation for the same year was £23.5m.

Organ Donation: Opt-out System

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to introduce an opt-out system of organ donation.

(AQW 28639/11-15)

Mr Poots: In February 2013 I announced that I would be progressing work to establish attitudes towards organ donation, including an opt-out system for organ donation. This work was taken forward by the Public Health Agency (PHA) and the initial work on establishing attitudes towards organ donation has just been completed. The report on public attitudes and stakeholder engagement in Northern Ireland was launched on 16 October 2013. I am giving careful consideration to the findings in this important report and the implications for the future development of my Department's policy on organ donation. These are important matters and we therefore need to take time to digest the report to ensure that our future policy is the right policy for the people of Northern Ireland.

I have attended a number of meetings over the past 12 months regarding organ donation, these include meetings with the Public Health Agency, NHS Blood and Transplant, representatives of British Medical Association, meetings with public representatives and most recently I attended a workshop on Organ Donation and Transplantation, which included senior medical staff who are directly involved in organ donation and transplantation.

Organ Donation: Opt-out System

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what meetings he has had in regard to an opt-out system of organ donation in the last twelve months.

(AQW 28640/11-15)

Mr Poots: In February 2013 I announced that I would be progressing work to establish attitudes towards organ donation, including an opt-out system for organ donation. This work was taken forward by the Public Health Agency (PHA) and the initial work on establishing attitudes towards organ donation has just been completed. The report on public attitudes and stakeholder engagement in Northern Ireland was launched on 16 October 2013. I am giving careful consideration to the findings in this important report and the implications for the future development of my Department's policy on organ donation. These are important matters and we therefore need to take time to digest the report to ensure that our future policy is the right policy for the people of Northern Ireland.

I have attended a number of meetings over the past 12 months regarding organ donation, these include meetings with the Public Health Agency, NHS Blood and Transplant, representatives of British Medical Association, meetings with public representatives and most recently I attended a workshop on Organ Donation and Transplantation, which included senior medical staff who are directly involved in organ donation and transplantation.

Emergency Departments: Underage Alcohol-related Attendance

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the protocols applied in Accident and Emergency Departments when engaging with the relevant agencies when a child under 16 is treated for alcohol intoxication.

(AQW 28643/11-15)

Mr Poots: Children under 16 attending emergency departments under the influence of alcohol are assessed individually and in line with child safeguarding guidance. When emergency department staff identify a concern, a referral is made to the social services/safeguarding team. Appropriate further action will depend on the individual assessment and type of presentation. This may include admission to hospital, referral to Child and Adolescent Mental Health or Child and Adolescent Intensive Treatment services, or to volunteer drug and alcohol intervention services.

Ambulance Service: Physical/Verbal Assault

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many attacks have been reported against Northern Ireland Ambulance Service staff or paramedics in the last twelve months, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 28647/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not collated in the format requested. The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Trust's untoward reporting system holds data based on the base station of the crew reporting the incident and not the location of the incident.

The following data is based on the base divisional area of staff who were assaulted during the period 1 November 2012 to 31 October 2013. There were 274 incidents broken down as follows:

	Physical Assault without a weapon	Physical Assault with a weapon	Verbal Assault	Total
Belfast	37	7	62	106
Northern	13	3	25	41
South Eastern	21	2	32	55
Southern	9	5	31	45
Western	11	2	14	27

South Down: Ambulance Service Emergency Responses

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to detail the number of times in the last twelve months that it has taken longer than 45 minutes for an ambulance to arrive at an emergency scene in South Down; (ii) what percentage of the total number of call-outs this represents; and (iii) what action he is taking to address the length of time it is taking for ambulances to arrive at an emergency scene in South Down.

(AQW 28654/11-15)

Mr Poots: Ambulances are dispatched by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) in response to 999 emergency calls based on the clinical need of the patient. Calls are prioritised according to the seriousness of the patient's condition as follows:

- Category A – potentially immediately life-threatening;
- Category B – serious but not immediately life-threatening;
- Category C – non-life threatening/serious.

Performance standards are set within the Local Commissioning Group (LCG) area, therefore the standards for the parliamentary constituency of South Down fall within the South Eastern LCG area.

The data below shows the number of emergency responses in South Down which were over 45 minutes, broken down per category, and the related percentage of the total number of responses made within each category during the period November 2012 to October 2013.

	Number of Emergency Responses Over 45 minutes	Percentage of Emergency Responses Over 45 minutes in relation to Total Number of Responses during the Period
Category A	8	0.3%
Category B	62	1.6%
Category C	43	3.7%

NIAS has advised that it continues to revise procedures and processes in an effort to improve performance, service provision and response capacity. Currently NIAS are seeking to use non-emergency ambulance resources more intensively to release emergency resource capacity to improve response performance to the most clinically urgent calls.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Coronary Care

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what changes have been agreed or implemented regarding coronary care in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust within the last twelve months; and whether an appropriate Equality Impact Assessment was carried out on such changes.

(AQW 28656/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust continues to deliver a range of cardiology services across its three main hospital sites. Specific changes introduced in the last twelve months are:

- the opening of a catheterisation laboratory (cath lab) at the Ulster Hospital;
- a new one-stop heart failure pilot service at Lagan Valley Hospital; and,
- roll out of a new primary percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI) service.

The South Eastern Trust is satisfied that the changes did not require equality impact assessments to be carried out.

Downe Hospital: Drainage

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much money has been spent dealing with sewage and drainage problems at the Downe Hospital since it was opened in June 2010.

(AQW 28659/11-15)

Mr Poots: The total amount spent on drainage since the Downe Hospital opened in June 2010 is £24,006.87.

Dementia Strategy

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of dementia services since the implementation of the Dementia Strategy in November 2011.

(AQW 28667/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC Board and Public Health Agency jointly lead a regional group, which includes people with dementia and their carers, to oversee implementation of the Dementia Strategy and its recommendations across NI. The group has drawn up an Action Plan which is used to report progress in the implementation of the strategy to the Department.

The action plan contains 44 initiatives which are being progressed under various headings such as Reducing the Risk or Delaying the Onset of Dementia, Raising Awareness, Promoting Early Assessment and Diagnosis, Supporting People with Dementia and Supporting Carers.

My department received an update report in June 2013 which detailed significant progress on a majority of the actions. A further update on progress is expected this month.

City of Culture 2013: DHSSPS Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28692/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety has not awarded any tenders or provided any funding to organisations to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

Medical General Practices: Expenditure

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail his Department's spend on General Practices in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28706/11-15)

Mr Poots: Expenditure by my Department on General Practices under the General Medical Services (GMS) Contract in each of the last five years is set out in the table below.

2012/13 £m	2011/12 £m	2010/11 £m	2009/10 £m	2008/09 £m
232.7	236.2	234.7	238.3	234.9

Driving Licence Application Form: Kidney Donation

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will hold discussions with the Minister for the Environment regarding the cost and possible benefits of including an option for kidney donation on all Driving Licence application forms.

(AQW 28716/11-15)

Mr Poots: Whilst I am keen to increase the number of registrants on the organ donor register, any discussions concerning amending driving licences is a matter for the Minister for the Environment, in conjunction with NHS Blood and Transplant.

Health and Social Care: Management Posts

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many management posts have been created in the (i) Health Service; (ii) Health and Social Care Trusts; and the Health and Social Board, since the creation of the Board.

(AQW 28748/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not held centrally and could only be obtained from individual Health and Social Care bodies at a disproportionate cost.

Health and Social Care Board: Chief Executive

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when a new Chief Executive of the Health and Social Care Board will be recruited.

(AQW 28755/11-15)

Mr Poots: The recruitment process for the new Chief Executive of the Health and Social Care Board will commence early January 2014.

Respiratory Health and Well-being: Service Framework

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the findings of Asthma UK's report Compare Your Care are being considered as part of the review of the Service Framework for Respiratory Health and Wellbeing.

(AQW 28756/11-15)

Mr Poots: The review of the Service Framework for Respiratory Health and Wellbeing is currently being undertaken by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB).

The HSCB have advised that the "Compare Your Care" report is being taken into account in the review. A workshop has been held to review the Asthma Standard and Asthma UK was represented at that event. In January there are two further workshops for patients and carers. These are being jointly organised by Asthma UK, Chest Heart and Stroke and the British Lung Foundation on behalf of the Service Framework Review Team. The views of patients and carers will be incorporated into the review of the framework.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Outpatient Clinics

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total number of additional outpatient clinics, including weekends and evenings, that have been arranged over the last three years under the waiting list initiative for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28787/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust that it held the following additional outpatient clinics under the waiting list initiative over the last three years:

2010/11		2011/12		2012/13
New	Review	New	Review	New	Review
7,945	2,062	7,015	3,852	10,129	6,676

Ulster Hospital: Emergency Department

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the capacity of the Accident and Emergency Unit at the Ulster Hospital.

(AQW 28789/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has been commissioned to provide approximately 83,000 new and unplanned review attendances at the Ulster Hospital emergency department in the current year 2013/14.

Bangor Community Hospital: Minor Injuries Unit

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients have been treated at the Minor Injuries Unit at Bangor Hospital, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28790/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on attendances (new, unplanned and/or planned reviews) at emergency care departments is published on an annual basis and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats_research/hospital-stats/emergency_care-3/emergency-care-stats.htm

Alternatively, information on waiting times at emergency care departments (excluding planned review attendances) is published on a monthly basis, and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats_research/hospital-stats/emergency_care-3/emergency_care-monthly_waiting_times.htm

Fracture Liaison Service

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) for his assessment of the benefits of a fracture liaison service; (ii) whether such a service is provided locally; (iii) if no such service is provided, to explain the reasons for this position; and (iv) if such a service is provided, to detail the cost of running the service in (a) 2012/13; and (b) 2013/14, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28793/11-15)

Mr Poots: Fracture care often represents the first opportunity for clinical management of osteoporosis. Early assessment and preventative treatment will reduce or prevent further fracture; reduce suffering; and, reduce loss of independence in fragility-fracture patients.

A fracture liaison service is in place in four of the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. The Northern Local Commissioning Group (LCG) is working with the Northern Health and Social Care Trust to develop the best service model for patients in the Northern area. The identification and management of fragility fractures is now included in the Quality and Outcomes Framework (QOF). Practices are incentivised to identify patients who have sustained a possible fragility fracture and follow the relevant NICE guidance. This involves a risk assessment, DEXA scan and, if indicated, treatment. The Northern LCG has recently commissioned a direct access DEXA service for GPs in that area. It may be that this is the appropriate service model to care for patients with fragility fractures in that area (rather than a secondary care based model).

It is not possible to provide the cost of running this service; all fracture units have orthogeriatric input and the cost for this falls to the orthogeriatric service.

'The Prevention and Management of Fragility Fractures in Northern Ireland': Update

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the Public Health Agency's 2009 report The Prevention and Management of Fragility Fractures in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 28794/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Public Health Agency has advised that progress against the nine recommendations contained in the report is as follows:

- Recommendation 1 – Regional Public Awareness campaign to promote good bone health. The Public Health Agency (PHA) has a number of campaigns which contribute to good bone health, such as, healthy eating, physical activity and smoking campaigns. It is now recognised that certain groups, including pregnant women, young children and those over 65 years, are at risk of vitamin D deficiency. It is recommended that these groups take a vitamin D supplement. To this end, the PHA has produced a leaflet titled vitamin D and you.
- Recommendation 2 – Fracture liaison service. A fracture liaison service is in place in four of the five Health and Social Care Trusts. The Northern Local Commissioning Group (LCG) is working with the Northern Health and Social Care Trust to develop the best service model for patients in the Northern area. The identification and management of fragility fractures is now included in the Quality and Outcomes Framework (QOF). Practices are incentivised to identify patients who have sustained a possible fragility fracture and follow the relevant NICE guidance. This involves a risk assessment, DEXA scan and, if indicated, treatment. The Northern LCG has recently commissioned a direct access DEXA service for GPs in that area. It may be that this is the appropriate service model to care for patients with fragility fractures in that area (rather than a secondary care based model).

- Recommendation 3 – All fracture units have orthogeriatric input. This is now in place.
- Recommendation 4 – All fracture units have an information infrastructure. More consideration on IT infrastructure is required.
- Recommendation 5 – The prevention of falls. All LCGs have supported work in this area as part of their investments in 2013/14.
- Recommendation 6 – Directly Enhanced Service in Primary Care. This Directly Enhanced Service has been replaced by the inclusion of the identification and management of fragility fractures in QOF as outlined above.
- Recommendation 7 – Long Term Condition Monies. This recommendation is no longer relevant.
- Recommendation 8 – Effective medicines management. A letter to all GPs about the primary and secondary prevention of osteoporosis was issued in June 2013.
- Recommendation 9 – Establishment of a regional implementation group. This is in place.

Hip Fractures

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of hip fractures in each of the last five years; and the average cost of a hip fracture in terms of (i) acute hospital care; (ii) subsequent care and support in the community; and (iii) respite and residential care.

(AQW 28795/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) Information on the number and cost of hip fractures treated in an acute hospital setting is provided below.

Financial Year	Number of episodes	Average cost
2012/13	4,694	-
2011/12	4,346	4,974.74
2010/11	4,127	5,138.06
2009/10	3,941	5,046.57
2008/09	4,264	4,683.50
2007/08	4,747	4,016.30

Source: Hospital Inpatient System; HSC Trust Reference Cost Returns

Note: Costs are not yet available for financial year 2012/13.

- (ii) and (iii): The cost of community, respite and residential care for those patients with a hip fracture is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Health Service: Romanian/Bulgarian Nationals

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what contingency plans he has in place to deal with any influx of immigrants from Romania and Bulgaria from January 2014.

(AQW 28796/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department's responsibility rests in the provision of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

There are no specific contingency plans in place to deal with any influx of immigrants from Romania and Bulgaria. Research indicates that it is not expected that the immigration from Romania and Bulgaria will be on the same level as that of Poland and that public services are now better able to meet their needs.

As members of the European Union from 1st January 2014 Romanian and Bulgarian nationals will be entitled to move freely within the European Union. As EEA nationals, citizens of Bulgaria and Romania can enter and live in the UK without needing to apply for permission, as long as they can support themselves and their families in the UK without 'becoming an unreasonable burden on public funds'. If they wish to take up residency within NI and can meet the 'ordinarily resident' test they will be entitled to access healthcare services here in NI.

Health Service: Non-EU Immigrants

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many immigrants from non-EU countries have been treated by the Health Service in each of the last three years; and how much of the cost of these treatments has been recovered from their countries of origin.

(AQW 28797/11-15)

Mr Poots: An immigrant is a person who leaves one country to settle permanently in another. A person who has moved to Northern Ireland on a permanent and settled basis would be deemed to be ordinarily resident, i.e. living here lawfully and on a continuous settled basis, and therefore be entitled to free healthcare. Supporting documentary evidence would need to accompany any person's claim to be ordinarily resident in Northern Ireland for example, visa, passport, proof of employment or study.

It is not possible to identify the number or cost attached to the provision of healthcare for immigrants from non-EU countries that are deemed to be ordinarily resident and entitled to free healthcare.

Lyme Disease: Diagnosis and Treatment

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the process for diagnosing Lyme Disease; and how this disease is treated.

(AQW 28813/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested regarding the number of cases diagnosed is not held, as Lyme disease is not a statutorily notifiable disease and medical professionals are not required to report cases to the Public Health Agency. The number of people receiving treatment for Lyme disease in Northern Ireland at this time is not known. Based on laboratory reports only, the PHA is aware of the numbers of cases given in the table below.

Year	Number of laboratory-confirmed cases reported to PHA
2013, to 3rd December	4
2012	2
2011	1
2010	0
2008	0

Diagnosis of Lyme disease is complex; the symptoms are non-specific and are shared by many more common conditions. A patient feeling unwell will normally go to their GP. When a patient presents to a GP with non-specific symptoms the GP will take the patient's clinical history and will consider a range of possible diagnoses. If Lyme disease is a possible diagnosis the GP may order a blood test. In Northern Ireland serology testing for Lyme disease is undertaken by the Regional Virology Laboratory at Belfast HSC Trust.

None of the tests for Lyme disease is 100% accurate, however blood tests are only one element of the overall, holistic assessment and eventual diagnosis.

As Lyme disease is an uncommon condition in Northern Ireland, and a GP in Northern Ireland is likely to see few or no cases in the course of their career, the diagnosis and treatment of Lyme disease need to be discussed with laboratory staff and infectious disease specialists.

Lyme disease is generally treated with antibiotics, however the details of a course of treatment may vary between patients and according to the stage at which Lyme disease is diagnosed. Detailed advice on antimicrobial agents, doses, and treatment durations can be provided by a clinician practising in the area of infectious disease.

Lyme Disease: Clinical Testing

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the reliability of the clinical testing used to diagnose Lyme Disease.

(AQW 28814/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested regarding the number of cases diagnosed is not held, as Lyme disease is not a statutorily notifiable disease and medical professionals are not required to report cases to the Public Health Agency. Lyme Disease: Diagnosis and Treatment

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have been diagnosed with Lyme Disease in each of the last five years; and how many people are currently receiving treatment for the disease.

(AQW 28815/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested regarding the number of cases diagnosed is not held, as Lyme disease is not a statutorily notifiable disease and medical professionals are not required to report cases to the Public Health Agency. Prescription Drugs: Waste Campaign

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to reduce medicine wastage from pharmacies.

(AQW 28821/11-15)

Mr Poots: On the 20th November I formally launched the 2013/2014 "Don't Use It? Don't Order It" media waste campaign. The campaign, which is now in its fourth year, aims to influence individual patient behaviours and activities which contribute to the over-ordering and sub-optimal use of prescription medicines. The campaign involves TV advertisements and outdoor visuals; in addition leaflets have been distributed to all GP practices and community pharmacies in Northern Ireland.

The aim of the campaign is to remind people to stop and check the medicines they already have at home before ordering more, especially at this time of year when they may be placing orders to cover the Christmas holidays.

Parkinson's Disease: Specialist Nurses

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many specialist Parkinson's Disease nurses are employed in each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28827/11-15)

Mr Poots: The numbers of specialist Parkinson's Disease nurses in each Health and Social Care Trust are shown in the table below.

Trust	Headcount	WTE
Belfast	1	1.0
Northern	1	1.0
South Eastern	1	1.0
Southern	1	1.0
Western	2	2.0

Parkinson's Disease/Diabetes: Medicines Management

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what discussions he has had with Health and Social Care Trusts concerning training nurses and social care workers to be aware of Medicines Management requirements, particularly as they apply to people living with (i) Parkinson's Disease; and (ii) Diabetes.

(AQW 28828/11-15)

Mr Poots:

Nursing

Medicines management is integral within undergraduate nursing programmes and relevant post graduate programmes delivered by the universities and HSC Clinical Education Centre. Community Practitioner Prescribing is integral to the Specialist Practice Programmes of education for District Nurses and Health Visitors.

Specialist nurses working with clients who have Parkinson's disease or Diabetes would have expertise in medicines management specific to these conditions.

Additionally, all nurses in practice are required to undertake mandatory updates in medicines management. HSC Trusts also complete a range of Audits on different aspects of Medicines Management requirements.

Social Care

All 5 Trusts state that social care staff receive training which is mainly in relation to "assisting" with Medicines as required by the RQIA. This includes Domiciliary Care, Day care, Supported living Schemes or residential homes for older people or children/young people. This is accordance with RQIA Guidelines.

Regarding assistance with medication for people with Parkinson's Disease or diabetes social care staff are only trained to assist with oral medicines, which is outlined in RQIA Guidance. They are not however permitted to assist in preparation of or administration of insulin as this is not within their level of competence and remains the responsibility of the community nurse should a service user not be able to self-administer and is without family support.

Health Service: Waiting Times

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when a scheme for waiting time measurement, such as Referral to Treatment used in England and Wales, will be introduced locally.

(AQW 28832/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has no plans at this time to measure waiting time for elective care on the basis of time from referral to treatment. Current targets for elective care are based on waiting times for first outpatient appointments, diagnostic tests and inpatient/day case treatment and the data collection and reporting systems reflect these targets.

North Down: Mental Health

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he is taking to (i) prevent; and (ii) raise awareness of, mental health issues in the North Down area.

(AQW 28842/11-15)

Mr Poots: In the North Down area the Public Health Agency directly commissions a range of organisations to deliver services which prevent and raise awareness of mental health issues. These include:

- Mental health awareness raising and education programmes;
- Crisis response and counselling for high risk groups such as families affected by suicide, young men and people who self-harm;
- Personal development programmes;
- Drama based awareness/education interventions; and
- Development of community emergency response plans to respond to potential suicide clusters in the area.

In addition to these local services, residents and groups in North Down have access to a number of regional projects which include: awareness raising and stigma reduction programmes; Lifeline; Deliberate Self Harm Registry services and the Card Before You Leave (CBYL) protocol; and training on suicide/mental health awareness.

Mental health promotion also goes beyond the health and social care sector given the wide range of social factors that influence mental health and wellbeing. Emotional resilience is promoted in schools through the curriculum and the iMatter programme; job creation activity promotes positive mental health; sports contribute to good mental health and wellbeing; libraries and the arts have a role; as does the maintenance of clean, secure community neighbourhoods with good access to green spaces.

North Down: Health and Care Centre

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether a new health and care centre is planned for North Down.

(AQW 28843/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust is planning to deliver a new health and care centre in the North Down area.

The consultation document on “Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action” included an illustrative model of “hub and spoke” Health and Care Centres across the region including North Down.

The Health and Social Care Board, through its Local Commissioning Groups and in association with all the HSC Trusts, has been undertaking detailed analysis to determine the most appropriate locations for the various hubs and spokes and identify priorities for the associated primary care infrastructure requirements. This work is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

Following that process, an exercise will be undertaken to develop business cases and prioritise within the available funding which will determine how work on individual hubs and spokes will progress.

GPs: Practice Lists

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 27529/11-15, how many patients have been removed by GP Practices from their practice list in each month of the last three years; and for what reason.

(AQW 28849/11-15)

Mr Poots: Table 1 below details the number of patients removed from GP practice lists, at the request of the practice, by month for the three years from April 2010 to March 2013.

The figures have been presented by reason for removal – either removal due to the patient being violent, or removal at the GP’s request due to other reasons.

These other reasons mainly fall into two categories: patients may be removed from a practice list if they move out of the catchment area covered by the practice; and GP practices may apply to remove patients from their list if the relationship between the doctor and the patient has broken down.

A more detailed breakdown of the reasons for which patients were removed from their practice list is not available.

Under Regulation 20 of the Health and Personal Social Services (General Medical Services Contracts) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2004 a GP Practice has the right to remove a patient from their practice list if they have reasonable grounds which do not relate to race, gender, social class, marital status, age religion, political opinion, sexual orientation, appearance, disability, medical condition or whether or not the patient has dependents.

Table 1: The number of patients removed from GP practice lists, at the request of the practice, by month for the three years from April 2010 to March 2013.

Leukaemia: North-west

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are in place in the North West for children with leukemia.

(AQW 28854/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised that all children in the Western Health and Social Care Trust are managed under the care of the Regional Paediatric Oncology Unit in Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children (RBHSC). In the case of emergency presentations to Altnagelvin these patients are stabilised and transferred to the RBHSC under their guidance; overnight stays are also conducted under RBHSC guidance.

Radiography: Students

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) how radiography students are placed on employment lists; (ii) whether radiography students can track their progression on employment lists; (iii) whether a radiography student can be offered a job without first undergoing an interview; and (iv) in instances where a radiography student receives temporary employment, whether they go back to the same position on the employment list when the temporary employment ends.

(AQW 28862/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) A radiography student (or other applicant) must first apply for an advertised Band 5 position and will be assessed in line with regional recruitment arrangements. If successful they will be placed on the regional waiting list.
- (ii) There is no formal mechanism to 'track progression' on the regional waiting list. Applicants will be informed if they have been successful and where requested may be advised of their position on the list, for example, top, middle or bottom range.
- (iii) In 2013, an Occupational Based Test was used as a selection method in place of an interview.
- (iv) When an individual is offered temporary employment, they are retained on the waiting list in their rank order for any permanent opportunities which arise. They will not be offered further temporary work whilst already in a temporary position. When the individual notifies that their temporary employment has ended, then they will be returned to the list for temporary work also in their original ranked position.

Genito-urinary Medicine Clinics

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 27996/11-15, how Belfast Genitourinary Medicine clinics compare with similar clinics around the UK in terms of running costs; and which of those clinics operate a walk-in service.

(AQW 28876/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department does not hold information on Genitourinary Medicine Clinics in other regions of the United Kingdom.

As set out in my response to AQW 26835/11-15, there is a facility for emergency appointments in the Belfast Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust's GUM clinic, whereby emergency cases are seen as walk-in after triage.

Stoma Care

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the reasoning behind the recent changes in the arrangements for the prescribing of stoma care appliances and accessories in primary care.

(AQW 28908/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised by the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board that there have been no recent changes to the arrangements for the prescribing of stoma care appliances and accessories in primary care.

The HSC Board has recently issued guidance reinforcing the existing arrangements for the prescribing of stoma care appliances and accessories to ensure that they are safely and effectively prescribed and dispensed to patients.

Stoma Care: Consultation

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consultation took place with stoma patients on the recent changes in the arrangements for the prescribing of stoma care appliances and accessories in primary care.

(AQW 28909/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised by the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board that there have been no recent changes to the arrangements for the prescribing of stoma care appliances and accessories in primary care.

The HSC Board has recently issued guidance reinforcing the existing arrangements for the prescribing of stoma care appliances and accessories to ensure that they are safely and effectively prescribed. The Board shared the draft guidance with a regional working group of stoma specialist nurses before the guidance was finalised and issued. As this was a reinforcement of existing guidance, no formal consultation was considered necessary.

Northern Health and Social Care Trust: Home Care Packages

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail, as of the 28 November 2013, the number of patients remaining in hospital, nursing home or residential home in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area, where a home care package is available but no private provider can be identified.

(AQW 28910/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not available centrally and was therefore requested from the Northern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. Their reply can be found below.

As of the 28 November 2013, 6 clients across the Northern Trust were waiting for a home care package.

Home Care Packages

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how long a home care package will remain available for a patient, where the package cannot be used because a Health and Social Care Trust cannot identify a private sector provider.

(AQW 28911/11-15)

Mr Poots: In circumstances where, following an assessment of need, a need for home care is identified, the allocation of a home care package will remain available for the duration of the individual's continuing eligible need.

Bangor Community Hospital: Minor Injuries Unit

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact of the temporary weekend closure of the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor.

(AQW 28922/11-15)

Mr Poots: I regret the inconvenience which the temporary weekend closure may cause some people, but the South Eastern Trust has advised that it is necessary because of a staff shortage. The decision to close the minor injuries unit at weekends is designed to minimise the impact on patients, as fewer people use it at weekends. The Trust has indicated that the small number of patients requiring treatment for minor injuries at weekends can be managed in the Ulster Hospital's Emergency Department.

Safeguarding: Vulnerable Adults

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) what safeguarding measures are in place to protect vulnerable adults; (ii) how these compare to international best practice; and (iii) whether he has any plans to review or improve the current safeguarding practices.

(AQW 28924/11-15)

Mr Poots: Safeguarding adults at risk of harm is not the sole responsibility of one Department and this is reflected in the Programme for Government, which includes keeping adults safe from harm as a commitment.

My Department, and its arm length bodies, have a range of adult safeguarding measures in place. A generic Safeguarding People standard has been developed for inclusion in all current and future Departmental Service Frameworks. The standard requires that people of all ages are safeguarded from harm through abuse, exploitation or neglect.

The Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) undertakes inspections of regulated services to ensure the care provided reaches the minimum standards set by my Department for providers of residential, nursing and domiciliary care facilities and their staff. RQIA can apply sanctions where they consider standards have not been met. The RQIA also has a range of responsibilities relating to people with a mental illness and those with a learning disability.

There are also a range of legislative safeguards in place, aimed at providing protections for those who are resident in, or attend, care facilities. The Residential Care Homes Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005, the Nursing Homes Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005 and the Day Care Setting Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2007 require criminal record checks to be carried out on staff working in care facilities, including a check of the list of those barred from working in specified activities with adults by the Disclosure and Barring Service (DBS). Under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups (Northern Ireland) Order 2007, the DBS makes barring decisions based on information provided to it by employers and a range of other bodies. Individuals found to have harmed a vulnerable adult, or placed them at risk of harm, will be considered by the DBS for inclusion in its barred lists.

The Northern Ireland Adult Safeguarding Partnership (NIASP) is the key multi-agency partnership working since 2010 to bring together organisations and communities of interest who have a significant contribution to make to safeguarding adults. The NIASP Strategic Plan 2013-18 provides a strategic approach to safeguarding adults based on local, national and international research; best practice guidance; the views of actual and potential service users; the views of NIASP member organisations and consultation with expert practitioners. NIASP is currently updating The Regional Adult Protection Policy and Procedural Guidance and the Protocol for the Joint Investigation of Alleged and Suspected Cases of Abuse of Vulnerable Adults.

Jointly with the Department of Justice, DHSSPS is taking forward the development of a Safeguarding Vulnerable Adults Policy Framework. It will stipulate a number of policy objectives ranging from the prevention of adult abuse through implementation of good safeguarding arrangements to effective protective responses from lead protection agencies (principally the police and social services) when adult abuse occurs or is suspected. Our aim is to shift the balance of emphasis towards prevention (keeping adults safe and helping them to keep themselves safe) and away from protection (being reactive to abuse), without exposing any vulnerable adult to unnecessary risk.

The policy will be informed by national and international best practice. Our consent driven, person centered approach to delivering the outcome preferred by the adult is also found across their adult safeguarding practices.

Finally, in April 2009 my Department commissioned the Volunteer Development Agency (Volunteer Now since 2010) to develop standards and guidelines for organisations working with vulnerable adults in the voluntary, community and independent sectors.

Transforming Your Care: Housing

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he will ensure that Transforming your Care aligns with housing strategies.

(AQW 28933/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Review of Health and Social Care in Northern Ireland recognised the need for coordinated delivery of government services to address health inequalities and in the area of housing. This requirement was echoed by respondents to the subsequent "Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action" public consultation.

The TYC theme "to support people to live independently at home for as long as possible" is reflected in the second theme of the DSD Housing Strategy "Facing the Future" – "Meeting housing needs and supporting the most vulnerable".

My Department has an ongoing engagement with the Department for Social Development (DSD), who have overall control and responsibility for preparing and directing social housing policy in Northern Ireland, and with other agencies, to ensure that we understand and share plans on housing.

It is important that this collaborative approach continues so that all Departments work positively together in order to improve the lives of people across Northern Ireland.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Cancelled Consultant-led Appointments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of outpatient clinics cancelled in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, over the last four years.

(AQW 28970/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Quarterly Outpatient Activity Return (QOAR), which is the present methodology for the collection of consultant-led outpatient activity, was introduced by my Department's Hospital Information Branch from the beginning of 2008/09, as a direct result of a comprehensive review of collection of outpatient activity undertaken in 2007/08. Primarily the methodology changed from the reporting of the number of clinics held and cancelled to the reporting of the number of appointments held and cancelled.

Information on the number of consultant-led appointments cancelled by the hospital is published on an annual basis and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats_research/hospital-stats/outpatients.htm

The number of appointments cancelled by the hospital by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust over the last four years can be found on p.20 of the current publication.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Missed Consultant-led Appointments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of outpatient appointments missed over the last four years in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 28971/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of consultant-led appointments missed by the patient (Did Not Attend) is published on an annual basis and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats_research/hospital-stats/outpatients.htm

The number of appointments missed by the patient (DNAs) in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust over the last four years can be found on p.20 of the current publication.

Department of Justice

Law: Mediation

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total cost of public support for (i) family mediation; (ii) the Bar Mediation Service; and (iii) collaborative law, in each of the last five years, including a breakdown of the number of individual cases involved for each.

(AQW 28615/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (the Commission) does not currently fund Collaborative Law Mediation.

The Commission does not fund the Bar Mediation Service.

The total cost of payments made by the Commission for Family Mediation is detailed in Table A, with the volume of certificates paid detailed in Table B.

Table A – Family Mediation payments made:

	08/09	09/10	10/11	11/12	12/13
Total	£1,467	£13,753	£18,033	£26,607	£8,930

Table B – Volume of certificates against which payments were made:

	08/09	09/10	10/11	11/12	12/13
Total	6	29	35	51	19

Mediation: Success Rates

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice whether any research has been carried out to determine the performance and success rates of publicly funded (i) family mediation; (ii) Bar Mediation Service; and (iii) collaborative law cases.
(AQW 28616/11-15)

Mr Ford: As discussions in mediation are confidential and the results are not disclosed to either the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission or the courts, the information requested is not available.

Legal Aid: Offender Levy

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27702/11-15, whether such a levy would (i) assist in off-setting the overall annual Legal Aid bill; and (ii) make offenders, particularly repeat offenders, partially responsible for their defence.
(AQW 28637/11-15)

Mr Ford: The introduction of an offender levy to contribute to the legal aid fund could be used to assist in off-setting the overall annual legal aid bill. However, enforcing the payment of contributions from offenders who have insufficient funds to pay for their own representation, would come at a cost to the fund which is currently unknown. I have asked my officials to consider this matter further and I will write to you when this further consideration has been completed.

Criminal Justice: Anonymity Orders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the action that his Department is taking, through the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service or relevant agency, to make all relevant people in courts, including legal practitioners and the judiciary, aware of the judgement by the Lord Chief Justice on Anonymity Orders delivered on 8 July 2013; and to confirm whether this judgement will also apply to the Public Prosecution Service for Northern Ireland.
(AQW 28642/11-15)

Mr Ford: A summary of the judgment in this case was issued on 7 August 2013 by the Office of the Lord Chief Justice to media organisations and all judges. The summary was also published on the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service website. The defendant in this case pleaded guilty on 28 August 2013 and the full judgment was published on 5 September 2013. A copy of the judgment was forwarded to the Law Society, Bar Library and the Public Prosecution Service. A further copy has also been published on the British and Irish Legal Information Institute website.

The judgment sets out the procedure for judges considering an application for an order for anonymity and is relevant to both the prosecution and the defence.

Education: Human Trafficking Resource Pack

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the success of the anti-human trafficking in schools programme; and what plans he has to expand and further develop this initiative.
(AQW 28649/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 7 August 2013, I launched an education resource pack on human trafficking in Parliament Buildings. Over 90 people attended the launch, including teachers, young people and representatives from the Belfast Education and Library Board and the North Eastern Education and Library Board.

All post primary schools in Northern Ireland have received correspondence to notify them of the pack and a number of events across Northern Ireland have been organised by members of the Human Trafficking Engagement Group to promote the resource pack.

Since its launch, the pack has been accessed 537 times on the Department of Education's C2k website and six schools have contacted my Department to say that they plan to incorporate the resource into their lessons. I am aware of a further three schools that have received presentations from my officials or members of the Engagement Group. A Further and Higher Education College is also using the resource pack with its full time students.

Building on the launch of this resource pack, my Department encouraged schools to mark EU Anti-Trafficking Day on 18 October 2013. Over twenty schools and one Further and Higher Education College held events in October to raise awareness of human trafficking.

My Department and its partners on the Engagement Group are continuing to build networks with post primary schools across Northern Ireland and the education subgroup will seek ways to further raise awareness of the issue and promote use of the resource pack, in schools.

The Engagement Group plans to carry out further assessment of the resource pack at the end of the academic year. This assessment will include both quantitative and qualitative analyses of its impact.

The Engagement Group aims to develop further plans for engagement with third level students on the issue of human trafficking during the 2014-15 business year.

City of Culture 2013: DOJ Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28693/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice (DOJ), including its Agencies but not its arm's length bodies, has not awarded tenders or provided funding to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

However, the Youth Justice Agency (YJA) spent £3,558 hosting its own event for young people, as part of the City of Culture celebrations, called 'Making a Difference, Loving Our Lives: MAD lol'. The purpose of the event was to showcase all the good that young people do within their own communities that rarely gets the recognition it deserves.

Also, the Prison Arts Foundation (which is a charitable trust) is holding an exhibition of current and ex-prisoners art work at the Playhouse, Derry, during December and the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) is providing some practical support in the organisation of this event.

YJA and NIPS are both Executive Agencies of the DOJ.

Legal Aid: Expert Witnesses

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice for a breakdown of the professions, that are used as experts in legal cases, that are in receipt of Legal Aid payments through disbursements.

(AQW 28698/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is a matter for the Court to determine whether any individual can give evidence in the capacity of an expert witness. Accordingly, it is not possible to provide a definitive list of professions that are used as expert witnesses. The attached list is comprised of those who have been paid as an expert witness in the past.

Legal Aid: Disbursements

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail how much was paid through Legal Aid in disbursements, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28699/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details the disbursements paid under all of the Legal Aid schemes over the past three financial years. It is not possible to break down the individual components paid as disbursements.

Year	LAA	ABWOR	Children Order	Civil	Criminal	Total
10/11	£411,689	£57,281	£598,910	£3,689,427	£3,061,565	£7,818,872
11/12	£349,501	£66,260	£713,743	£4,969,259	£2,354,672	£8,453,435
12/13	£222,588	£57,782	£568,549	£5,216,098	£2,272,543	£8,337,560

Taxis: Convictions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many convictions have been secured for (i) operating as a taxi driver without the appropriate licence; (ii) taxi driver carrying more passengers than licence or vehicle permits; and (iii) operating as a taxi without the required insurance, in each of the last three years, broken down by court division,

(AQW 28760/11-15)

Mr Ford: Offences relating to convictions for operating as a taxi driver without the appropriate licence may be prosecuted under Article 13 of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 and previously Article 79A of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 or, as having no PSV licence, under Article 3(1) of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. Offences relating to convictions for carrying excess passengers may be prosecuted under Article 62(2) of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. Offences relating to convictions for no insurance may be prosecuted under Article 90(4) of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981.

In relation to most of these offences, information held by my Department does not specify whether a conviction related specifically to taxis, or to taxi drivers, so, for parts (ii) and (iii) of the question, it has not been possible to provide the information requested.

The table below gives the number of convictions for operating as a taxi driver without the appropriate licence/no PSV licence by court division, for 2007, 2008 and 2009. These are the most recent three years for which the information requested is available.

Table: Convictions for operating as a taxi driver without the appropriate licence/no PSV licence by Court Division

Year	Convictions by Court Division
2007	Belfast (1), Fermanagh and Tyrone (1)
2008	Antrim (1), Armagh and South Down (1), Belfast (1)
2009	Antrim (1)

(1) Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is convicted is included.

Criminal Justice: Bail

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many persons on bail, in respect of a charge, or charges, that was proceeding through the court system, were charged with committing a further offence, or offences, whilst subject to bail, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 28761/11-15)

Mr Ford: Information in respect of offences committed while on bail may be available on an individual case basis. However, information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Legal Aid Reform: Consultation Responses

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice how many representations his Department has received on the proposed cuts to Legal Aid; and how many of these expressed concern or opposition over the proposals.

(AQW 28774/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department has received 123 representations in response to consultations on proposals for legal aid reform. Of the 69 who expressed concern or opposition 47 were from members of the legal profession or their representative bodies. The Department has also received 11 requests to meet with the Minister of Justice and 20 items of correspondence on this subject.

Prisoners: Hospital Treatment

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27906/11-15, on how many occasions has a prisoner required treatment from an outside hospital in each of the last two years; and how many of these were regarded, or latterly regarded, as vulnerable prisoners.

(AQW 28810/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service records self harm incidents (including suicide attempts) where the prisoner attended outside hospital immediately following the incident. From 1 December 2012 to 30 November 2013 there were 83 incidents and for the same period in 2011/12 there were 61 incidents.

In all but one of these incidents, the prisoner was either being supported under the Supporting Prisoners at Risk (SPAR) procedures at the time of the incident or the SPAR procedures were subsequently commenced.

Prisoners: Support Services

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27906/11-15, what assurances he can give that all vulnerable prisoners are afforded care and access to the appropriate medical and emotional support services, within the stipulated time frame, identical to that afforded to people in the community with the same issues.

(AQW 28811/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am satisfied that the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) provides all vulnerable prisoners with access to appropriate medical and emotional support services.

As the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust are responsible for healthcare in prisons, the Member may wish to write to the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in respect of the comparison between service delivery in prisons and in the community.

Prisoners: Cell Keys

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27405/11-15 whether all prisoners currently holding their own cell keys do so under strict supervision; and whether any prisoners are self-regulating, or similar, due to staff being in fear of patrolling landings or due to staff shortages

(AQW 28812/11-15)

Mr Ford: All prisoners currently holding their own cell keys are closely supervised. Staff hold a master key for all cells and remain in control at all times. There is no self regulation.

Sex Offenders: Risk Management

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what steps his Department can take to help ensure that people charged and convicted of serious sexual offences are not housed in close proximity to schools.

(AQW 28818/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department issues guidance to agencies, with responsibility for assessing and managing the risks posed by serious sexual and violent offenders, in discharging their functions under the public protection arrangements for Northern Ireland.

Convicted sex offenders are subject to a range of statutory measures aimed at reducing their risk of reoffending. These can include post-release licence conditions, sex offender notification requirements and sexual offences prevention orders which may place restrictions on residence as part of the offender's risk management. For those who present the highest level of risk, the public protection arrangements offer a combined approach to both risk assessment and management drawing on the knowledge and expertise of a range of relevant agencies to work collectively on individual cases.

Risk management plans are individually tailored to address the specific risks identified on a case by case basis. All relevant factors, including location, are taken into consideration in the approval of accommodation. The key consideration for those agencies managing offenders must be that it is appropriate in terms of meeting an individual's ongoing supervision requirements and minimises the risk of harm to the public.

Super-injunctions: Reporting

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Justice what discussions he has had with his counterpart in the UK Ministry of Justice concerning the reporting of Super-Injunctions.

(AQW 28830/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no legal definition of the term 'super-injunction'. However the question has been interpreted as seeking information on orders prohibiting publicity on the granting of injunctive relief.

I have not discussed the reporting of such orders with the Secretary of State for Justice, or any other Minister in the Ministry of Justice.

An Injunction Order includes provision to vary or discharge the order through an application to the High Court. However, should an individual decide to initiate an appeal, they must serve the appropriate notice on all parties within 21 days (if it is an interim order) or six weeks (if it is a final order) from the date the order was filed.

Within seven days of service the appeal should be entered for hearing by lodging the following documents and fee in the Central Office, Royal Courts of Justice:-

- two copies of the Notice of Appeal, one of which must be endorsed with service details.
- a copy of the Order of the Court to be appealed and
- the requisite fee of £500.00.

Super-injunctions: Appeals

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Justice to outline the system for appealing against the application of a Super-Injunction.

(AQW 28831/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no legal definition of the term 'super-injunction'. However the question has been interpreted as seeking information on orders prohibiting publicity on the granting of injunctive relief.

I have not discussed the reporting of such orders with the Secretary of State for Justice, or any other Minister in the Ministry of Justice.

An Injunction Order includes provision to vary or discharge the order through an application to the High Court. However, should an individual decide to initiate an appeal, they must serve the appropriate notice on all parties within 21 days (if it is an interim order) or six weeks (if it is a final order) from the date the order was filed.

Within seven days of service the appeal should be entered for hearing by lodging the following documents and fee in the Central Office, Royal Courts of Justice:-

- two copies of the Notice of Appeal, one of which must be endorsed with service details.
- a copy of the Order of the Court to be appealed and
- the requisite fee of £500.00.

Paintball Guns: Age Restriction

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice what is the current age restriction for the purchase and use of paintball guns; and whether the plans to lower the age at which a young person may have supervised access to firearms includes the use of paintball guns.

(AQW 28861/11-15)

Mr Ford: A paintball marker (gun) is defined by the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 2004 as a firearm and as such requires to be held on a firearm certificate (FAC). To apply for a FAC, a person must be at least 18 years of age.

Paintball clubs operate as firearms clubs approved by the Chief Constable. They are marshalled and the minimum age for participants is 16 years.

The Department of Justice's recent consultation on young shooters dealt with young people having access to shotguns and airguns under appropriate supervision. I have no plans to reduce the age at which young people can access paintball guns at this juncture. The matter has not been raised with me before and if it were to be considered it would need to be the subject of consultation.

Super-injunctions: Appeals

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Justice how many appeals against super-injunctions have been successful in since 1 January 2010.

(AQW 28881/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no legal definition of the term "super injunction", however the question has been interpreted as seeking information on orders prohibiting publicity on the granting of injunctive relief. There has been one successful appeal in a case of this type since 1 January 2010.

Legal Services Commission

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice when he will bring the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission into his Department as an agency; and whether he intends to take similar action in relation to the Taxing Master and Very High Cost Cases.

(AQW 28913/11-15)

Mr Ford: The necessary primary legislation to transfer the functions and staff of the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission into my Department will be introduced in the Assembly early in 2014. The agency will be established as soon as Royal Assent is received.

I have proposed that the Taxing Master's functions in respect of the assessment of fees for legally aided assistance in civil cases will transfer to the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission. This will deliver annual savings of £3m in administration costs. I have no plans to make any other change to the office of the Taxing Master, which will remain within the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service. The Taxing Master will remain a member of the independent judiciary, as at present.

Sexual Offences Prevention Orders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28349/11-15, will he reconsider this response given that any such case would be within the court system and therefore under the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service's remit and the wording of the application is stated as to the nature of the reason for the application before a District Judge.

(AQW 28915/11-15)

Mr Ford: As at 9 December 2013 there are no current applications for Sexual Offences Prevention Orders. The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service may hold the information requested in part two of AQW 28349/11-15. However this could only be obtained by a manual review of the originating hardcopy documents for each application. On this basis, the information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Sex Offenders: Convictions from other Jurisdictions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the recent discovery of two foreign national convicted sex-offenders residing in close proximity to a school, which would not have occurred if their past convictions had been known, what legislation or interim legislation will he bring forward to ensure foreign nationals are subject to the same restrictions and monitoring as Northern Ireland's nationals in these circumstances; and for his assessment of need for the disclosure of all criminal convictions, particularly sexual and violence offences, before foreign nationals arrive in Northern Ireland, if they intend to stay, and for Northern Ireland nationals leaving the jurisdiction to reside elsewhere.

(AQW 28917/11-15)

Mr Ford: Sex offenders with convictions from other jurisdictions are currently made subject to the notification requirements under Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 by virtue of a notification order. This order is made by the court on application by the police when they know that an offender with convictions for sexual offences is coming to stay in the jurisdiction, or as soon as they are made aware that such an offender is in Northern Ireland.

I have already taken steps in the Criminal Justice Act (Northern Ireland) 2013 to tighten the arrangements for sex offenders coming to Northern Ireland. On commencement, section 4 of the 2013 Act will amend the Sexual Offences Act to make it a statutory requirement for an offender with convictions from other jurisdictions to notify to the police after spending a qualifying period of 7 days within Northern Ireland. Failure to do so constitutes an offence and can result in a prison sentence of up to five years.

Other issues relating to border controls and immigration are not devolved matters.

Gifts and Hospitality: DOJ Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice how many entries his Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 29007/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Special Adviser has registered one offer of hospitality in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since his appointment. The offer was declined.

Criminal Records: ECHR Article 8

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Justice whether he is aware of the Court of Appeal ruling in January 2013, R on the application of T, JB and AW v Chief Constable of Greater Manchester, Secretary of State for the Home Department and Secretary of State of Justice [2013] EWCA Civ 25, that the mandatory and blanket disclosure of convictions as part of a criminal records check was incompatible with Article 8 of the European Convention of Human Rights on the right to respect for private life; and what action he has taken in regard to this ruling.

(AQW 29036/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am aware of the case referred to. In her 2011 Part 1 report, "A Managed Approach - A Review of the Criminal Records Regime in Northern Ireland", Sunita Mason recommended that AccessNI should routinely disclose informed warnings, cautions and details of diversionary youth conferences on Standard and Enhanced checks. She also recommended that the Department should bring forward proposals to filter out convictions which are both old and minor, and criminal information such as cautions for disclosure purposes. These recommendations were the subject of a public consultation carried out between May 2012 and August 2012. Both received broad support from respondents.

The Department had planned to run a further public consultation on the precise nature of a filtering scheme here. In view of legal advice which I sought following the ruling in November 2012 by the European Court of Human Rights that the disclosure of a caution in the case of MM v United Kingdom (Application No 24029/07) was a violation of Article 8 (right to privacy), and the judgment by the Court of Appeal in England and Wales in the cases you refer to, I have decided to introduce legislation as soon as possible to provide for the introduction of a filtering scheme. The scheme will be comparable to that which came into effect in England and Wales on 29 May 2013. It will also allow for the routine disclosure of informed warnings, cautions and details of diversionary youth conferences on Standard and Enhanced checks.

At this is a cross cutting issue I have obtained the agreement of the Executive to the introduction of the scheme. Work to prepare the necessary legislation is now underway.

Criminal Records: Filtering

Dr McDonnell asked Minister of Justice whether he has considered introducing a filtering mechanism to prevent old or minor convictions appearing on a criminal records check, similar to the The Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 (Amendment) (England and Wales) Order 2013 and The Police Act 1997 (Criminal Record Certificates: Relevant Matters) (Amendment) (England and Wales) Order 2013, which came into effect on the 29 May 2013 in England and Wales.

(AQW 29037/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am aware of the case referred to. In her 2011 Part 1 report, "A Managed Approach - A Review of the Criminal Records Regime in Northern Ireland", Sunita Mason recommended that AccessNI should routinely disclose informed warnings, cautions and details of diversionary youth conferences on Standard and Enhanced checks. She also recommended that the Department should bring forward proposals to filter out convictions which are both old and minor, and criminal information such as cautions for disclosure purposes. These recommendations were the subject of a public consultation carried out between May 2012 and August 2012. Both received broad support from respondents.

The Department had planned to run a further public consultation on the precise nature of a filtering scheme here. In view of legal advice which I sought following the ruling in November 2012 by the European Court of Human Rights that the disclosure of a caution in the case of MM v United Kingdom (Application No 24029/07) was a violation of Article 8 (right to privacy), and the judgment by the Court of Appeal in England and Wales in the cases you refer to, I have decided to introduce legislation as soon as possible to provide for the introduction of a filtering scheme. The scheme will be comparable to that which came into effect in England and Wales on 29 May 2013. It will also allow for the routine disclosure of informed warnings, cautions and details of diversionary youth conferences on Standard and Enhanced checks.

At this is a cross cutting issue I have obtained the agreement of the Executive to the introduction of the scheme. Work to prepare the necessary legislation is now underway.

Policing: Part-time Reserve Support Programme

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27033/11-15, in light of the limited time until the end of the current financial year, whether his Department has finalised the administration, funding and audit arrangements for the Part-Time Reserve Support Programme.

(AQW 29108/11-15)

Mr Ford: Officials from my Department have been engaging with a number of the policing charities to work on the arrangements for administering the Part-Time Reserve (PTR) Support Programme, and this work is continuing. It is anticipated that part of the monies will be disbursed in the current financial year.

Prisons: Independent Monitoring Boards

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Justice whether the independent monitoring report regarding Her Majesty's Prisons in Northern Ireland is ready for publication; and to explain the reasons for any delay in the publication.

(AQW 29154/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Annual Reports of the Independent Monitoring Boards for Maghaberry Prison, Magilligan Prison and Hydebank Wood Prison & Young Offenders Centre were electronically published on 6 December 2013, the planned publication date. They can be viewed or downloaded from www.imb-ni.org.uk.

Prison Service: Uniform Survey

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to outline (i) why HM Prison service has launched a uniform survey; and (ii) any plans to remove the letters MPM or the symbol of the crown from the uniforms.

(AQW 29190/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service has launched a uniform survey at the request of the Whitley B Committee. This Committee forms part of the Whitley Council industrial relations framework between management and Trade Union Side and it meets quarterly to deal with any issues relating to uniform or health and safety matters. The aim of the survey is to get the views of staff on the suitability of the current uniform items issued to operational grades within NIPS.

The letters MPM do not appear on prison uniforms. A note to staff on the Prison Service intranet stated specifically that the survey does not include insignia on uniform.

Human Trafficking: Child Victims

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the 17 children identified as victims of human trafficking, to provide (i) the countries of origin involved; and (ii) the average age of the children.

(AQW 29220/11-15)

Mr Ford: From 1 April 2013 to 9 December 2013, 17 minors have been referred to the National Referral Mechanism as potential victims of human trafficking, for assessment of whether they are victims of human trafficking.

To date, three of these potential victims have received conclusive determinations confirming them to be victims of human trafficking and five of the individuals have received conclusive determinations that they have not been identified as victims of human trafficking. Of the remaining cases, two have been withdrawn and decisions are still pending in seven cases.

In order to protect the identities of victims, it is not possible to provide more specific information about the three individuals who have been confirmed as victims of human trafficking.

National Crime Agency

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Justice to outline any further progress in having the National Crime Agency fully operational locally.

(AQO 5212/11-15)

Mr Ford: I set out the position on my engagement with Sinn Fein and the SDLP on this issue during Questions on 19 November. Significant progress had been made but we have not concluded our exchanges. I wrote to the parties again on 25 November impressing the urgency upon them.

I want to stress again that we need the NCA to operate in Northern Ireland in the devolved arena with all the necessary powers available to it. I have offered assurances that its operation would be with the full knowledge and agreement of the Chief Constable and would be subject to appropriate oversight from our policing architecture.

We need to resolve this matter.

Prisoners/Prison Officers: Numbers

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Justice to outline the number of prisoners and prison officers in 1998 compared to 2013.

(AQO 5214/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 1 April 1998 the prisoner population in Northern Ireland was 1507. On 1 April 2013 it was 1793.

On 1 April 1998 the Northern Ireland Prison Service employed 2824 prison staff. On 1 April 2013 it employed 1288 staff.

Criminal Justice: EU Third Pillar

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the UK Government's decision to opt out of the EU third pillar, justice and home affairs measures.

(AQO 5215/11-15)

Mr Ford: I expressed reservations to the UK Government about their intention to exercise the opt-out prior to the decision being made. I also made my views known to a Joint House of Lords Committee Inquiry set up to consider the 2014 Opt Out.

My concern is that while some measures in the list of 130 are less used than others, some of them are important tools for our criminal justice agencies. Some of the measures also help to combat cross-border crime and facilitate the excellent cooperation that exists with the Irish Republic on these matters. I expressed particular concern about the European Arrest Warrant which is one of the 130 measures that the UK will opt out of from 2014.

I am however pleased that the European Arrest Warrant is included in the list of 35 measures that the UK will seek to rejoin but I remain concerned that there is no agreed process or timetable in place for the negotiation process and the potential for an operational gap after December 2014.

I am exploring with MOJ the possibility of the UK having access to the measure that would recognise probation orders. This is not currently on the list of 35 measures

The Home Secretary and UK Ministers are aware of my views on the opt-out and I will continue to press for assurances that there will be no operational gap. My officials are also engaged with the Home Office and Ministry of Justice on this important matter.

Policing: Local Government Reform

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Justice to outline any discussions he has had with the Chief Constable regarding the need for Policing Districts to be co-terminus with the new council structures.
(AQO 5216/11-15)

Mr Ford: The reorganisation of local government is the responsibility of the Minister of the Environment, and I have not had any discussions with the Chief Constable on this matter to date. The proposed new council structures will not be co-terminus with current PSNI district boundaries, and this has a range of implications for policing governance and accountability arrangements, which my officials will explore with the PSNI and the Northern Ireland Policing Board.

Crime: Asset Recovery Community Scheme

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the Asset Recovery Community Scheme.
(AQO 5217/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since it was first launched in 2011, the Asset Recovery Community Scheme has awarded in excess of £1.7 million to projects aimed at fighting crime and the fear of crime. The latest award will be formally announced next week.

The schemes being supported include diversionary activities for the young, making the elderly more secure in their own homes and projects aimed at reducing drug and alcohol abuse in our communities. They are based throughout Northern Ireland and are benefitting both urban and rural areas.

Not only are these projects bringing something positive to our community but there is an added sense of justice in that they are being funded through assets recovered from criminals.

Attorney General: Troubles-related Criminal Offences

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Justice to outline any discussions he has had with the Attorney General following his public comments regarding the ending of prosecution for criminal offences arising out of the Troubles.
(AQO 5218/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have not had any discussions with the Attorney General on the comments he made recently about ending prosecutions for criminal offences arising out of the Troubles.

Prisoners: Annual Costs

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the average annual cost per prisoner, in each of the last three years.
(AQO 5219/11-15)

Mr Ford: As published in the Northern Ireland Prison Service's Annual Report and Accounts, the average cost per prisoner place in last three years was £73,762 in 2010/11, £71,398 in 2011/12 and £66,494 in 2012/13.

This cost is calculated by dividing the annual Operating Expenditure (excluding non-standard costs) by the average total number of places, defined as Certified Normal Accommodation.

Department for Regional Development

Cycling: Budget

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development what percentage of his budget was spent on cycling in each of the last ten years.
(AQW 26785/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The table below shows the percentage of my Department's Capital budget spent on cycling measures in each of the last ten years (2003/04 to 2012/13) and planned for 2013-14. The recently established Cycling Unit, will seek to coordinate and promote the work being taken forward in relation to cycling and as such, spend on this activity is expected to increase in future years.

Percentage of Department Expenditure on Cycling

	2003/ 04 %	2004/ 05 %	2005/ 06 %	2006/ 07 %	2007/ 08 %	2008/ 09 %	2009/ 10 %	2010/ 11 %	2011/ 12 %	2012/ 13 %	2013/ 14 %

Lurgan/Portadown: Car Parking Charges

Mr Moutray asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to abolish charges in car parks owned by his Department in Lurgan and Portadown, to alleviate the effect of charges on local businesses.

(AQW 28299/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware I have made a number of important decisions relating to parking charges including freezing the current off street tariffs, rejection of the proposal to introduce on street charging and the introduction of a cashless payment system for parking, Park Mobile. These decisions have been very beneficial to local business and were made against a backdrop of the requirement to recover costs and the need to effectively manage town centre parking, by promoting greater turnover of spaces and enhancing accessibility to businesses and services in our local towns and cities.

I have also recently announced the introduction of a new Christmas parking rate of five hours parking for just one pound, in 95 of my Department's car parks in 25 towns. Lurgan and Portadown are included in this scheme and I am confident this scheme, along with the other measures I announced, will provide a welcome boost for traders and encourage the public to continue to support their local economy by shopping locally.

I am continuing to work with my officials to explore other ways in which I can improve the parking experience to the benefit of local businesses. These include, allowing greater involvement by local councils, who may reimburse my Department, if they wish to promote free or reduced cost parking promotions.

The initiatives already in place and consideration of other potential improvements, continue to demonstrate my commitment to supporting local businesses.

A6: Dualling

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development why AQW 27642/11-15 remains unanswered.

(AQW 28398/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member I responded to Assembly Question 27642/11-15 on 19 November 2013.

A6: Dungiven–Castledawson

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27642/11-15, whether there is a scheme planned to dual the A6 between Dungiven and Castledawson.

(AQW 28508/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has no current scheme to dual the A6 between Dungiven and Castledawson.

Dellmount/Fairfield, Bangor: Road Resurfacing

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the timescale for road resurfacing in the Dellmount and Fairfield areas of Bangor.

(AQW 28595/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently undertaking a footway reconstruction scheme within the Dellmount and Fairfield areas of Bangor. During the course of this work the kerb-line is being set to a height that will enable the carriageway to be resurfaced, without disturbing the new footway surface. Whilst there is currently insufficient funding available to proceed with resurfacing of the carriageway, the situation will be reviewed if extra funding is secured.

Derry: DRD Decentralisation

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to 28012/11-15, to detail (i) why there are only 64 civil servants from his Department based in Derry and (ii) whether he intends to decentralise any functions to Derry to aid economic growth in the North West region.

(AQW 28608/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's staffing structure reflects the manpower required to deliver its essential functions to the public in the most effective and efficient way.

In accordance with the terms of the question, my response to AQW 28012/11-15 was restricted to posts in non-industrial grades. I should, however, point out that in addition to the 64 non-industrial posts shown as being based in the Derry City Council area at 1 January 2013, DRD also employed 25 industrial staff in the same area on that date.

Given the need to manage and maintain the regional road network, DRD is already one of the Departments with the highest proportions of staff based at locations outside the Greater Belfast area. The Department is continuously reviewing its structure and operations to optimise economic growth across Northern Ireland. At present, however, there are no plans to decentralise further jobs within DRD to the North West or to other centres outside Belfast.

A509: Enniskillen–Derrylin

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on planned realignments to the A509 between Enniskillen and Derrylin.

(AQW 28625/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has two schemes planned for the A509 between Derrylin and Enniskillen, one at Derryhawlaght and one at Derryallen, details of which are contained in the Draft Local Transport & Safety Measures programme 2014 – 2016, which was presented to Fermanagh District Council on 18 Nov 2013.

The scheme at Derryhawlaght will involve carriageway realignment, both vertically and horizontally, over a distance of approximately 800 metres. It is estimated the works will in the region of £1.2 million. Detailed design is at an advanced stage and it is expected that land purchase will take place in 2014/15. Progression to construction will, however, be subject to successful acquisition of the land and the availability of funding.

The scheme at Derryallen will involve horizontal carriageway realignment over a distance of approximately 1,100 metres and at an estimated cost of £300,000. Whilst land has been acquired, delivery of this scheme will be dependent upon the availability of funding and its prioritisation within the works programme for the Fermanagh area.

North Down: Roads Funding

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the funding allocated for roads in his departmental budget for the North Down area.

(AQW 28626/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: £3.7m of my departmental budget has been allocated for roads in the North Down area.

Planning Applications: Roads Service

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the average length of time it takes for Roads Service to reply to a consultation on a planning application.

(AQW 28634/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not maintain details of the average length of time taken to reply to planning application consultations. Response times for consultations vary according to factors such as, the scale and complexity of the application and the quality and completeness of the information provided in the application.

However, my Department's Roads Service has a target, agreed with DOE Planning, to return 70% of all planning application consultations to the relevant Divisional Planning Office within 15 working days of receipt.

To date in the 2013/14 year, Roads Service has achieved performance of 82%.

City of Culture 2013: DRD Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 28694/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department contributed £16k to Derry City Council to support the City of Culture 2013.

The Department did not award any tenders in respect of the City of Culture 2013.

Dungiven: Park and Ride/Share

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development whether a survey on the usage of the Park and Ride facility for the 212 Service has been carried out at the stop in Dungiven; and if so, to detail the results.

(AQW 28728/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A survey of the informal park and ride at Dungiven Castle and Dungiven Health Centre was undertaken in April 2010, as part of the planning process for the Londonderry to Dungiven dual carriageway. Approximately 26 vehicles were recorded as being parked in the morning and remaining for the whole day and approximately 14 vehicles dropped off bus passengers in the morning and 14 vehicles picked up bus passengers in the evening.

A new park and share/ride site at Magheraboy Terrace will be provided as part of the Londonderry to Dungiven dual carriageway. This site is located about 200 metres east of the Dungiven East roundabout, where the dual carriageway terminates.

Planning Application A/2011/0210/F

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 28016/11-15, what consideration he is giving to the assessment by Roads Service, on 12 April 2012, on retrospective planning application A/2011/0210/F, where it stated that the excavation works have been carried out in close proximity to Mobouy Road with the result that the structural stability of the road may be affected and that the proposed works are totally unacceptable.

(AQW 28739/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Application A/2011/0210/F relates to a retrospective planning application for the extraction of sand and gravel without on-site processing. The application is still under consideration by the Department of the Environment.

Initially, excavation works had been carried out in close proximity to Mobouy Road. However, since the matter was raised, an embankment has been constructed. My officials recently inspected Mobouy Road and there are no visible defects to suggest that the structural stability of the road has been affected.

A5: Review

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the review into the A5 scheme.

(AQW 28745/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are currently four reports being developed to inform Habitats Regulations Assessments of the potential impacts on the various designated sites arising from the project. It is proposed consultation on these reports will commence in spring 2014.

The issues and timing associated with updating the Environmental Statement are still being considered and developed, and it is not possible to finalise a programme at this time.

Car Parking: Park and Ride/Share

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what park and ride and park and share improvements are planned over the next three years.

(AQW 28852/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am aware that there is an increasing demand for Park & Ride and Park & Share facilities. This increased demand highlights the success brought about by my Department's investment in public transport in recent years and it is something that I would like to continue to build upon.

In August 2011 I endorsed my Department's 'Strategic Review of Park & Ride' report and approved the proposed way forward. The report presented recommendations for the delivery and prioritisation of Park & Ride facilities.

My Department has established a Park & Ride Programme Board with responsibility for co-ordinating and prioritising the implementation of Park & Ride projects in line with the Departmental Strategy. The Programme Board has produced a Park & Ride Strategic Delivery Programme for 2013-15 which aims to create at least 1,000 additional Park & Ride and Park & Share spaces across Northern Ireland in the next 2 years. The Programme has already delivered over 350 spaces this year.

The Programme is available on my Department's website at: <http://www.drndi.gov.uk/index/publications/publications-details.htm?docid=8996>

My Department is currently considering the options for the delivery of additional Park & Ride and Park & Share facilities post 2015, when the current programme expires. This future programme is likely to include the completion of some sites from the current programme together with the development of other new facilities. The scale of the Park & Ride proposals post 2015 will be dependent on the availability of finance.

Railways: Network Extension

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he is considering any extension of the current rail network; and when he plans to make any related decisions.

(AQW 28853/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I launched a public consultation exercise on Future Railway Investment earlier this year. The majority of those who replied, considered that the priority in spending should be given to maintaining the existing rail network and introducing measures to make best use of the current lines. There were suggestions for extensions of the network to a wide variety of destinations, and a significant volume of correspondence, in support of restoration of the line between Portadown and Armagh.

The key issue is the availability of funding. An analysis of the information gathered from the public consultation is continuing, alongside the ongoing work to determine the prioritisation of future investment in the wider transportation infrastructure in Northern Ireland.

It is planned that a report on the railways analysis will be published soon.

Reservoirs: Legislation

Mr Frew asked Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27876/11-15, whether the reservoirs named are currently up to the standard required under the forthcoming legislation on reservoirs.

(AQW 28860/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that there is no existing statutory provision relating to the management of reservoirs in Northern Ireland. However, all of the reservoirs listed under AQW 27876/11-15 have been managed by NIW in the spirit of the GB Reservoirs Act 1975 which does not extend to Northern Ireland.

NIW understands that in view of this arrangement the reservoirs should satisfy the requirements of the forthcoming Northern Ireland legislation, subject to any changes during the Assembly process.

Public Transport: Statistics

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to list the 26 council areas in order of those in which people most use public transport.

(AQW 28886/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This information is not currently available as there is no measure of the availability of public transport at Local Government District or Ward level and Translink do not record this information. However a question was asked in the 2011 Census on the 'Method of Travel to Work or Place of Study' and options included Public Transport. Results and analysis of this question is available on the Northern Ireland Neighbourhood Information System (NINIS). This data can be broken down into administrative geographies including Local Government District (Table KS702NI). The department will be considering this going forward.

Magherafelt: Car Parks

Mr I McCreagh asked the Minister for Regional Development in which car parks in Magherafelt has the new 40p for 3 hours tariff been introduced.

(AQW 28937/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In October 2013, the 40p for one hour parking tariff was changed to 40p for three hours in Central South car park in Magherafelt. This is the upper tier of the car park on King Street and is the only car park in Magherafelt with the 40p for 3 hours tariff. Parking in the lower tier of the car park on King Street remains free of charge.

Car Parking: Park and Ride/Share

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to increase Park and Ride facilities.

(AQW 29000/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am aware that there is an increasing demand for Park & Ride and Park & Share facilities. This increased demand highlights the success brought about by my Department's investment in public transport in recent years and it is something that I would like to continue to build upon.

In August 2011 I endorsed my Department's 'Strategic Review of Park & Ride' report and approved the proposed way forward. The report presented recommendations for the delivery and prioritisation of Park & Ride facilities.

My Department has established a Park & Ride Programme Board with responsibility for co-ordinating and prioritising the implementation of Park & Ride projects in line with the Departmental Strategy. The Programme Board has produced a Park & Ride Strategic Delivery Programme for 2013-15 which aims to create at least 1,000 additional Park & Ride and Park & Share spaces across Northern Ireland in the next 2 years. The Programme has already delivered over 350 spaces this year.

The Programme is available on my Department's website at:

<http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/publications/publications-details.htm?docid=8996>

Lurgan/Portadown: Car Parking

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to review car parking provision at Lurgan and Portadown Translink Railway Stations.

(AQO 5226/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have liaised with Translink officials who advised that they are currently looking at potential schemes for both Lurgan and Portadown as part of its Park & Ride programme.

The scheme under consideration in Lurgan would add 70 further spaces to the 145 already there. In Portadown there are currently 84 spaces; the potential scheme there aims to add another 200 spaces.

My Department also has its own Park & Ride Strategic Delivery Programme 2013-15' which is a prioritised schedule of new Park & Ride projects in the next 2 years. Portadown is included in this programme as a 'project under consideration'.

Funding has been set aside for Park & Ride in my Department's budget. However, the implementation of Park & Ride schemes will take place in a constrained budgetary context.

Public Transport: Infrastructure

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Regional Development whether current infrastructure is sufficient to deal with the growing numbers using public transport.

(AQO 5227/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has invested heavily to develop infrastructure to deal with the growing numbers using public transport.

In recent years, my Department has funded £560 million of capital works on railways and bus infrastructure, delivering new buses, new trains, new maintenance facilities for trains, station upgrades and platform extensions and track upgrades and continued capital investment in public transport remains a priority. The member will be aware of the new facilities provided at Newry train station.

Public transport has been a major success story in recent years. Passenger journeys across the bus and rail network are at record levels and continue to increase annually. The last year alone saw over 2 million more journeys made on public transport.

In addition, funding has been provided for rail and bus based park and ride sites and for the development of bus priority measures in Belfast.

For example, there are 50km of bus lanes operating in the greater Belfast area, which allows scope for further growth in bus patronage. Our Park and Ride sites are becoming increasingly popular. The sites on the M1 at Sprucefield and Blacks Road are approaching capacity and the flagship site at Cairnshill is regularly more than 50% full. There are plans to double the capacity at Sprucefield and provide a new large Park and Ride site at Dundonald in the near future.

Newtownabbey: Adverse Weather

Ms Brown asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Roads Service has developed a specific policy to tackle adverse weather conditions in Newtownabbey this winter.

(AQO 5228/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service operates and implements a long standing policy, which has been approved by the Assembly, which delivers winter service right across Northern Ireland, including the Newtownabbey area.

Whilst it has not developed a specific policy for the Newtownabbey area, or any other area of Northern Ireland that may be affected by adverse weather conditions, I can confirm that, for the current winter season, my Department has agreed contracts with five external snow clearance contractors and is hopeful of signing up a further three, for potential deployment in the Newtownabbey area. This will help to supplement the resources which Roads Service has already earmarked for the current winter season.

In addition my Department has entered into an arrangement with Newtownabbey Borough Council, along with 23 of the other 25 Councils, to provide salt, to allow Councils, where their resources permit, to salt busy town centre footways in times of prolonged ice and snow to help keep the local economy moving.

I am therefore confident my Department's Roads Service will be able to deal effectively with the prevailing wintry conditions in line with its policy.

Blue Badge: Renewal Backlog

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the recent back log in Blue Badge renewals that resulted in badge holders being granted a month's extension on their out of date badges.

(AQO 5230/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased to report the resourcing issues, which led to backlogs at the end of August 2013, have now been resolved. Good progress has been made and I am pleased to confirm the backlog has now been cleared.

However it remains my intention to continue to grant one month's grace on expired Blue Badges.

M1/A1 Sprucefield Bypass

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the M1/A1 Sprucefield bypass.

(AQO 5231/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Sprucefield Bypass scheme has been proposed to provide grade separated linkage, between the A1 and the M1 at Sprucefield, in order to improve traffic flows in this area.

Initial feasibility work resulted in the completion and publication of the Stage One Scheme Assessment, which identified two corridors to be taken forward for further development.

At present, no funding has been identified for the Sprucefield Bypass.

Roads: Service Trenches

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to lay service trenches at the sides of new road developments to prevent future road opening.

(AQO 5232/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department already seeks to minimise the risk of future road openings on new road developments by ensuring, where possible, services are located in trenches in the hard shoulder or verge.

Detailed consultation takes place with utility companies during the design stage to determine the nature and location of existing services, and any foreseeable utility company requirements.

In the event that existing services are affected by new road developments, measures are in place to allow diversion of those services away from the line of the carriageway. Where utility companies identify any future requirements, additional ducts are placed at their expense.

Car Parking: Christmas Rate

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development for an assessment of the loss of revenue by reducing car parking charges over the Christmas period.

(AQO 5233/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The special parking rate of £1 for five hours parking that I introduced, specifically for the busy Christmas period, has been warmly welcomed by trading organisations, businesses and Chambers of Commerce. This special rate is supporting businesses and facilitating shoppers, who usually wish to spend more time browsing in town centre shops during the Christmas shopping period. Shoppers should therefore have fewer concerns about receiving a parking ticket for overstaying their permitted time.

I will look closely at the full range of benefits that accrue from this scheme and consider the impact, once that analysis is complete.

Department for Social Development

Housing Executive: Common Waiting List

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27763/11-15, whether there are targets for the number of people on the Common Waiting List for each Housing Executive District Office area.

(AQW 28328/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): I assume the Member is asking whether there are targets for reducing the number of applicants on the Common Waiting List. The Housing Executive has advised that while they have no specific targets, they manage the Common Waiting List as efficiently as possible.

The Housing Executive's annual District Housing Plans represents their statutory annual consultation engagement with local government. The Plan gives a comprehensive account of the Housing Executive's performance in the District Council area over the past year. It also sets out their funding, plans and strategies for the year ahead to address any imbalances identified in the analysis of the local housing market and the Housing Executive's obligations under government policies.

The Housing Executive's District Housing Plans are based on the objectives outlined in their Corporate and Business Plans. They give details of all issues and initiatives which the Housing Executive believes will affect the local housing environment over the coming year. They provide an opportunity for the Housing Executive to report the previous year's performance and to consult with local representatives on proposed housing schemes and investment for the year to come. The Housing Executive publishes the District Housing Plans for each of the District Councils each year and they are also available on their website – www.nihe.gov.uk

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development why only 788 new builds are planned in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013, when the Housing Need Assessment states 1540.

(AQW 28489/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The data to which the question refers to relates to the District Housing Plan, which is based on March 2012 figures. At this time, the housing need projection of 1540 units refers to a five year period (2012-2017). The Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP) outlined plans for 788 units over a three year period (2013/14-2015/16). The shortfall is included in the unmet housing need prospectus and detailed by specific location. This prospectus directs housing associations' searches for sites for social new build to meet need.

Homelessness: Figures

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development how many people are registered as homeless in each constituency. (AQW 28577/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Homelessness is not the same as rooflessness which means that you are without shelter of any kind and sleeping rough. You don't have to be living on the streets to be homeless and even if you have a roof over your head you can still be homeless. This may be because your home is unsuitable or you don't have any rights to stay where you live. The figures below show the number of households registered on the waiting list as statutory homeless (Full Duty Applicants) by housing district at the 1st November. It is not possible to produce figures by constituency.

Homelessness: Reduction

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development what action his Department is taking to reduce the homelessness figures. (AQW 28578/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In response to homelessness in Northern Ireland, the Housing Executive and its partners in the Promoting Social Inclusion Homelessness Partnership have been developing and producing a range of homeless prevention measures under the auspices of the Homelessness Strategy 2012/2017.

The Housing Executive launched the Homelessness Strategy for Northern Ireland on 1 May 2012. This followed an extensive consultation and redrafting process throughout 2011 to establish agreement among the Statutory and Voluntary Agencies who would be delivering the strategy.

The Homelessness Strategy 2012-17 sets out our strategy for tackling homelessness over the next five years and establishes the guiding principles for the development and delivery of homelessness services. At this time of economic uncertainty and financial constraints it is more important than ever that homelessness services are appropriate, timely and effective.

The aim of this homelessness strategy is that long term homelessness and rough sleeping is eliminated across Northern Ireland by 2020. The strategy aims to ensure the risk of a person becoming homeless will be minimised through effective preventative measures. Through enhanced inter agency co-operation, services to the most vulnerable homeless households will be improved.

Homelessness: Services

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development what support his Department offers to people who are homeless. (AQW 28579/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive's Supporting People Team funds a range of homelessness services that are provided by voluntary, statutory and private organisations. These services provide housing related support for up to approximately 5,000 individuals who are homeless or are at risk of becoming homeless.

There are two primary homelessness service delivery models:

1. Short term accommodation based services e.g. hostel accommodation for people who are homeless and have no accommodation that they can occupy and;
2. Short term floating support services. This service delivery model aims to prevent people becoming homeless by providing housing related support that helps them to remain living independently in (primarily) their own homes.

A summary of the number of supported units and level of funding 2013/14 is given in the table below:

	Units	Budget Spend 2013/14	Scheme Count
Floating Support	3,120	£6,527,315	42
Accommodation	1,836	£21,743,661	112

Homeless Shelters

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the location and capacity of each homeless shelter. (AQW 28581/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There are three types of homeless shelter used by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive – NIHE hostels, voluntary hostels and private single lets. The attached table shows the number of NIHE and voluntary sector hostels that are currently used as temporary accommodation. The number of bed spaces can vary, as accommodation schemes are re-aligned to meet demand and needs as particular circumstances arise.

In addition to the hostel accommodation below, the Housing Executive also uses 1118 private sector properties (private single lets) across Northern Ireland. In general the properties tend to have 1 and 2 bedrooms but there are a number of 3 and 4 bedroom properties also used. The number of properties in the private sector is fluid and is dependent on demand.

The up to date location of the private single lets is not readily available, as it is subject to change.

Employment and Support Allowance: Support Group/Work-related Activity Group

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28090/11-15 (i) whether moves from Support Group to the Work Related Activity Group can be actioned without assessments being carried out; and (ii) what a review consists of, outlining what information on the individual claimant is used.

(AQW 28648/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) All Employment and Support Allowance claimants who are in the Support Group cannot be moved to the Work Related Activity Group without an assessment by a health care professional being undertaken.
- (ii) The WCA assessment consists of the completion of a medical questionnaire by the claimant, along with an assessment by a trained health care professional to establish the claimant's capability for work. The information used for the assessment includes the completed questionnaire and any evidence from the claimant's doctor (GP) and/or medical professional (e.g. Consultant). There may also be a requirement for a face to face assessment where capability cannot be established from the available evidence.

Housing Associations: Best Practice

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to introduce regulation to ensure that good practice tenant engagement by housing associations becomes common practice.

(AQW 28680/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The current regulatory standards ensure housing associations engagement with tenants are evaluated against best practice by the Department's Inspection team.

My Social Housing Reform Programme is also looking at regulation and tenant engagement in the provision of social housing in the future and will bring forward proposals in due course.

Housing: Housing Executive–Housing Association Transfers

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether there is a cost in transferring Housing Executive properties to housing associations.

(AQW 28695/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Each transfer scheme will be subject to an economic and technical appraisal and approval process to demonstrate that the proposed refurbishments deliver the necessary value for money and appropriate level of quality for tenants.

As with all programmes of a similar nature there will be costs attributable to the Stock Transfer process from a Project Management perspective including staff salaries (NIHE, DSD and SIB) and associated administrative costs.

To manage the Programme NIHE will appoint consultants to take forward economic appraisals for each scheme, an independent tenant adviser and an agency to undertake the tenant ballots. There will also be a number of other costs, for example, statutory fees, legal fees and hire costs for venues for public consultation events for each scheme in the programme. All of these costs will be absorbed by the Housing Executive and will not be passed on to the Housing Associations or tenants.

The Housing Associations will also incur costs in preparing bids for schemes as part of the procurement process and subsequently the successful bidders will incur development and construction costs in taking schemes through to conclusion.

Housing Executive: Tenancy Rules

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rules that tenants must adhere to when they become a Housing Executive tenant.
(AQW 28700/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the tenancy rules are contained in their General Conditions of Tenancy and are also available to view on their website at www.nihe.gov.uk. When an applicant accepts an offer of tenancy, an appointment is made with them to call in to the local office for a comprehensive sign up interview. The interview is structured to include the following:

- Receive Proof of Identity
- The new tenant signs a Tenancy Agreement and is issued with the keys to their new home. This includes issuing them with a Statutory Obligations Notice. The Notice explains that they will be issued with a copy of the General Conditions of Tenancy and also includes a warning of potential possession proceedings if they or anyone residing in or visiting their home is guilty of causing a nuisance. The Statutory Obligations Notice also gives examples of nuisance, annoyance and disturbances.

All new tenants are also issued with a Home Information Pack that contains the following:

- A copy of the General Conditions of Tenancy;
- The new tenant is advised that it explains their obligations and NIHE obligations in relation to the Tenancy Agreement. They are also advised, subject to paying the rent and observing and performing all the Tenant's obligations under this Agreement, they may quietly enjoy the dwelling without any interruption;
- A Tenants Handbook – gives more details in relation to their legal rights and responsibilities as a Tenant;
- A copy of the Customer Charter – This sets out the standard of services they should receive from NIHE;
- Additional leaflets for example home contents insurance;
- Electoral form;
- Energy price tariffs;
- Telephone number of service providers including electricity providers and NIHE repairs telephone number;
- Sign a Good Neighbours Agreement and issued with same;
- Complete Housing Benefit application form;
- Advised of Rent and Rates and issued with a Temporary Payment Card.

South Antrim: Social Housing Newbuilds

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development to outline any plans for social housing new builds in South Antrim.
(AQW 28709/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Table attached details the social housing new builds that are currently programmed to be delivered within South Antrim over the period 2013/14 – 2015/16.

The Social Housing Development Programme is managed on the basis of a three year rolling programme. The Housing Executive is currently in the process of formulating the new draft Social Housing Development Programme for the period 2014/15 – 2016/17 which subject to my approval will be published on the Housing Executive's website early in 2014.

Radon: Housing Executive Grants

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department provides remediation grants to householders whose homes are above the Action Level for radon gas; and how many such grants his Department has awarded over the last two years.

(AQW 28736/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Although there is no specific provision in respect of radon gas my Department makes available assistance, through the Housing Executive, to homeowners to make repairs, improvements and adaptations to their dwellings. The Housing Executive has confirmed that no grants have been sought or made to address excess levels of radon.

City of Culture 2013: DSD Tenders/Funding

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) tenders awarded; and (ii) funding provided to organisations in Derry to deliver the City of Culture 2013.

North Down: Registered Carers

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many carers in North Down are over 60 years old.
(AQW 28771/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available as my Department does not hold a list of carers.

North Down: Warm Homes Scheme

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many homes in North Down have benefitted from the Warm Homes Scheme in the last twelve months.
(AQW 28772/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive does not collect information at parliamentary constituency level. The North Down parliamentary constituency comprises the council areas of North Down & Ards. In those council areas a total of 469 homes have had Warm Homes measures installed during the period 1 November 2012 to 31 October 2013.

Crumlin Road, Belfast: Regeneration

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Social Development to provide the details of any regeneration work planned for the Crumlin Road area, including a timetable for completion.

(AQW 28792/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is actively working to regenerate the Crumlin Road area of north Belfast. A wide range of initiatives are currently ongoing or planned, including the Masterplan Conceptual Framework for Girdwood Park, a Development Study for Crumlin Road Courthouse, Clifton Gateway Public Realm Scheme and assistance to a private developer for a whiskey distillery at Crumlin Road Gaol through my Department's Urban Development Grant scheme. A number of new build schemes for social housing are also planned. Further details on each of these projects can be found at Annex A.

Annex A

Conceptual Framework for Girdwood Park

The Masterplan Conceptual Framework for Girdwood Park was launched in May 2012 and represents an agreed plan for the shared development of this key strategic site in north Belfast. This plan includes a Community Hub at the heart of the site which will provide high quality leisure and community facilities and an agreed housing development for 60 units.

Development of the Community Hub is due to start in late January 2014 with a completion date end of March 2015. Full site infrastructure works will start in April 2014 with an estimated completion date of October 2015. It is hoped that construction of the housing development, which is subject to planning approval, will begin in March 2014 with an estimated completion date of October 2015.

DSD as the Accountable Department has responsibility for Peace III Priority 2 Contributing to a Shared Society, Theme 1 Creating Public Shared Spaces. Belfast City Council as lead applicant has recently been issued a Letter of Offer under this Priority for £9,595,249 in respect of The Girdwood Community Hub on the Girdwood Barracks site.

Development Study for Crumlin Road Courthouse

DSD, with ministerial support from across the NI Executive, has been working in co-operation with OFMDFM, SIB, NIEA (DOE) and BCC to identify a sustainable end use for the Crumlin Road Courthouse.

Following a procurement competition, a Consultancy Team was appointed in July 2013 to complete a Development Study. The consultants have engaged a wide range of stakeholders, carried out a comprehensive condition report on the building and conducted considerable research into potential end uses.

A number of options were presented at a consultation event on 21 November and public feedback is being sought up to and including 6 December. A full report is expected early in the New Year.

Clifton Gateway Public Realm Scheme

DSD is working with other statutory agencies and local communities to deliver a programme of environmental improvements to the public realm in targeted areas across Belfast which fall outside the City Centre.

The Clifton Gateway scheme spans the Crumlin Road from the junction of Agnes Street to Carlisle Circus and carries on through Clifton Street on to the junction of Donegall Street and York Street.

The proposed works include natural stone footpath resurfacing, installation of ornate street lighting, uprighters for historic buildings, planting of semi-mature trees and the installation of interpretive signage and sculptures.

It is estimated that work, which is subject to final approval by Belfast City Council (BCC) under the Reform of Local Government, could start in July 2014 and be completed by January 2016.

Distillery at Crumlin Road Gaol

Urban Development Grant (UDG) is a discretionary grant with the objective of promoting job creation, inward investment and environmental improvement by the stimulation of development of vacant, derelict or underused land or buildings in specific priority urban areas. DSD has awarded UDG to a developer to refurbish part of the Gaol to provide a whiskey distillery. Construction is due to commence in January 2014.

Social Housing

The Housing Executive has advised that the following new build schemes are planned for the Crumlin Road area:-

2013/14

- Lower Oldpark rehabs, 26 units – on site
- Lower Shankill Phase 1, 21 units – on site
- Girdwood Phase 1, 60 units (as above)

2014/15

- Kinnaird Terrace, 21 units
- Lower Shankill Phase 2, 12 units

Educational Underachievement Working Group

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what were the social-based policies, that as a participant in the North/South sectoral meeting on education, on 8th November 2013, he agreed as a focus for the educational underachievement working group; and what are the social interventions which he anticipates being advanced by the working group.

(AQW 28801/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As stated in the joint Assembly statement made on the 26 November in relation to on the North/South Ministerial Council Education. The Council agreed that the Education Underachievement Working Group would focus on three strands of work which should have a greater focus on social-based policies with an intended educational outcome.

The three strands of work to be taken forward are

- international benchmarking studies;
- school-based and social interventions to address underachievement; and
- the impact of pre-school placements on primary level performance.

I welcome this change in focus which complements my department priorities for improving the quality of life and life chances for our most disadvantaged children and young people.

Welfare Reform: Implementation

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what assessment has been made of the extra money in the local economy each month as a result of not implementing welfare cuts; and what figure has been reached.

(AQW 28804/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There is no extra money in the local economy as a result of not implementing the reform of the welfare system.

Sex Offenders: Accommodation Location

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what steps his Department can take to help ensure that people charged and convicted of serious sexual offences are not housed in close proximity to schools.

(AQW 28819/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Allocations of social housing accommodation by the Housing Executive and Housing Associations are made based on rules contained within the Housing Selection Scheme.

Restrictions in the Housing Selection Scheme are in place which allows the social landlord considering the allocation of accommodation to restrict any offer of housing to a person who has been charged or found guilty of a relevant sex offence. One of the factors taken into account when applying this restriction would be the proximity of a child centred facility such as a school. Other information provided by police and/ or the Probation Board for Northern Ireland with regards to the proximity of a victim or a relative of the victim would also be considered.

Housing Associations in Northern Ireland provide specialist accommodation for people charged and convicted of serious sexual offences. Allocations to these properties are carried out according to the Housing Selection Scheme which is managed by the Housing Executive. Housing Associations take direction from the Housing Executive with regard to the suitability of any potential allocation. Risk assessments with regard to applicants and the allocation of properties would be carried out by the Housing Executive.

The Housing Executive is one of the signatory agencies of the Public Protection Arrangements Northern Ireland and is fully committed to co-operation with other agencies within these arrangements. The Housing Executive shares information and takes account of the risk assessment and management plans of serious sexual and violent offenders when making decisions on the suitability and reasonableness of accommodation.

The Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations has recently met with the Probation Board to discuss the role of housing associations in providing accommodation for ex-offenders and continues to work with statutory and voluntary agencies in this area.

Benefit Fraud: Prosecutions/Convictions

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many people were (i) prosecuted; and (ii) convicted of having been fraudulently in receipt of benefits, in 2012.

(AQW 28850/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is set out in the table –

Year ending 31st March 1 April 2012 – 31 March 2013	Number prosecuted	Number convicted
	570	567

The Information provided is an Official Statistic. The production and dissemination of all Statistics is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Benefits: Fortnightly Payment

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to implement fortnightly payments of benefits. (AQW 28884/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The current position is that a large number of the existing benefits already are being paid fortnightly. There are no plans to implement fortnightly payments for other current benefits that are paid monthly: namely, Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance and Carers Allowance.

I have previously announced in the Assembly that I have agreed with Lord Freud, Minister for Welfare Reform, a number of operational flexibilities for Northern Ireland in the payment arrangements for Universal Credit. These flexibilities include proposals for twice monthly payments. The details of this are being taken forward as part of the Welfare Reform package of measures which I have developed to help reform the Welfare System and which are subject to agreement at the Executive.

Welfare Reform Bill: Consideration Stage

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development when he will return the Welfare Reform Bill to the Assembly. (AQW 28885/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I fully intend to bring the Welfare Reform Bill back to this Assembly for Consideration Stage as soon as there is the political consensus to do so.

I told this house on the 22 October that I had concluded my work on a package of measures aimed at offsetting some of the more negative aspects of the reform agenda.

I intend to convene a meeting of the Executive Sub Committee on Welfare Reform before Christmas, to try to move forward before Treasury impose any financial penalties.

Housing Executive: Central Heating

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development what action is taken by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive when a tenant reports an air lock in their central heating system. (AQW 28936/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that when a tenant reports a problem with their central heating system the Housing Executive sends out their heating contractor to diagnose the fault and determine what remedial action is required. If the contractor finds that the reported problem is due to an air lock, the contractor determines the cause, repairs any faults, removes the air lock and ensures that the heating system is operational.

Glenowen, Derry: Apex Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28466/11-15, why the programmed new build scheme at The Playground Site, Glenowen by Apex is included in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013 but omitted from the current Social Housing Development Programme. (AQW 28991/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Apex Housing has not been able to progress this scheme sufficiently to achieve a start on site during 2015/16. The scheme has therefore slipped to 2016/17.

Rathmore Road, Derry: Apex Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28466/11-15, why the programmed new build scheme at Rathmore Road by Apex is included in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013 but omitted from the current Social Housing Development Programme. (AQW 28992/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The proposed new build scheme at Rathmore Road in Londonderry was not included in the Social Housing Development Programme as the Housing Association was not successful in acquiring the site for development.

Creggan Country Park, Derry: Apex Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28466/11-15, why the programmed new build scheme at Creggan Country Park by Apex is included in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013 but omitted from the current Social Housing Development Programme.

(AQW 28993/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The proposed new build scheme at Creggan Country Park in Londonderry was not included in the Social Housing Development Programme as the Housing Association was not successful in acquiring the site for development.

Buncrana Road/Springfield Road, Derry: Clanmil Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28466/11-15, why the programmed (i) Phase 1; and (ii) Phase 2 of the new build schemes at Buncrana Road and Springfield Road are included in the Derry District Housing Plan 2013 but omitted from the current Social Housing Development Programme.

(AQW 28994/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Clanmil Housing was unable to acquire the site.

Community Planning: Community and Voluntary Sector

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development what arrangements are in place to ensure that there is adequate Community Development Infrastructure in the community and voluntary sector to support meaningful community involvement in Community Planning in 2015 and beyond.

(AQW 28995/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Local Government Bill introduces the legislative basis for community planning, a council-led process to provide a framework for councils to work in partnership with other public service providers in their district to plan and implement a shared community vision for the economic, social and environmental well-being and development of the area. The involvement of representatives of relevant voluntary bodies in community planning is specified in the Bill.

My Department, through its regional infrastructure support arrangements, will support the Voluntary and Community Sector to help ensure that the sector functions effectively and efficiently, makes a valued and effective contribution to policy development across Government and contributes to community development and engagement across Northern Ireland.

Local Government Reform: DSD Function Transfer

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Social Development why Personnel staff from the Department for Social Development are not transferring to local government under the same terms as Planning Service staff.

(AQO 5197/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Under the Reform of Local Government the Department for Social Development (DSD) will confer on councils the powers that give authority to carry out functions in relation to regeneration and community development. The Department will also place a duty on councils to undertake responsibilities relating to houses in multiple occupation and housing unfit (currently undertaken by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive) and will transfer responsibility for management of the Laganside Weir.

As regeneration and community development work will represent a conferral of new powers on councils, rather than a transfer of functions, DSD staff currently exercising these powers will not transfer to local government as part of the reform.

As management of the Laganside Weir is a transfer of function, staff will transfer on the basis of NICS staff transfer arrangements which are still under consideration.

As part of capacity building/preparatory work for the reform changes DSD plans to initiate work with councils over the coming months to establish a scheme that would allow councils access to DSD staff with regeneration/community development experience.

Coleraine: Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the progress being made in the two Neighbourhood Renewal Areas in Coleraine, since the Annual Report was submitted.

(AQW 29002/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Coleraine Neighbourhood Renewal Area Annual Report for 2012-13 demonstrates the commitment made by the Department to communities, to work in partnership with them to identify and prioritise needs and co-ordinate interventions designed to address the underlying causes of poverty. Currently in the 2013-14 year a total of £969,302 has already been allocated to projects in the Coleraine Neighbourhood Renewal areas.

Social Housing: Admissions Criteria

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development what discussions his Department has been involved in with regard to changing the social housing admissions criteria.

(AQW 29005/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In 2012, I announced a fundamental review of social housing allocations in Northern Ireland, delivering on a commitment set out in my Housing Strategy and Facing the Future Action Plan.

My Department commissioned independent research and three reports, prepared by the Universities of Ulster and Cambridge have been published (see link below), providing the academics' views on the future of social housing allocations.

When public comments have been received on the reports, the feedback will be considered and proposals developed, which will in turn be subject to full public consultation.

<http://www.dsdni.gov.uk/index/hsdiv-housing/allocations-research.htm>

Regeneration: Refurbishment of Vacant Properties

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many housing associations will restore derelict homes for letting accommodation in 2014; and for an estimate of the number of properties that will be restored, and let, by January 2015.

(AQW 29049/11-15)

Mr McCausland: One of the aims of the Building Successful Communities pilots will be to address blight and stigma, for example through the provision of new or refurbished social housing. In areas where vacant properties in a community are holding back regeneration, the Department envisages working in partnership with the owner to bring those properties back into use. For properties owned by a social landlord, this could mean working with NIHE and Housing Associations to refurbish the vacant home and let it.

There are, as yet, no estimates of how many properties could be involved over the pilot period (at least three years). A Regeneration Forum, to be established in each of the six pilot areas, will be tasked with investigating the needs of the pilot area and developing an action plan specific to that location. As a result, the number of properties brought back into use will depend on the priorities identified by each Regeneration Forum. It is envisaged that the six Regeneration Fora will be established early in the New Year.

One Housing Association has been awarded funding under the Affordable Home Loans Fund to bring empty homes back into use. However, this initiative will refurbish homes for onward sale as affordable homes and not for letting.

Disability Living Allowance: Atos Healthcare

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development how many cases involving Disability Living Allowance claimants, who have been in receipt of DLA for five or more years, have had their award adjusted downward or removed following assessment by Atos Healthcare since it took over medical examinations; and how many were subsequently returned to the original award (i) following representations; and (ii) on appeal.

(AQW 29060/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available as the Department for Work and Pensions IT system used by the Social Security Agency to administer Disability Living Allowance does not capture this specific level of detail.

Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance is determined by Decision-Makers in the Social Security Agency who consider and weigh up all the available evidence in reaching a decision. This includes information on the claimant's application form and reports from Health Care Professionals who the claimant has identified on the form. In a small number of cases the Medical Service Provider is requested to complete a report which gathers information on the diagnosis, the history of the condition, treatment and the severity and likely disabling effects of the condition on day-to-day living. In virtually all cases this entails a home visit to the claimant during which the report is completed.

Homelessness: Hostels

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of hostel accommodation places provided to people who were homeless in the last twelve months, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 29066/11-15)

Mr McCausland: This information cannot be supplied by constituency, the closest information that can be given is for those presenting as homeless by Northern Ireland Housing Executive District Office. The figures given provide those for the first five months of 2013/14, from April 2013 through to the end of August 2013, as the temporary accommodation computer systems was recently changed in September 2013 and reports for the months of September 2013- November 2013 are still in development and testing. Further figures provide for the period April 2012 - March 2013. Therefore two tables have been provided as follows:

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development to quantify, for each of the last three years, the number of people that have stopped claiming contribution based Job Seekers Allowance as a result of being in receipt of that benefit for six months or more.

(AQW 29082/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available. The Jobseeker's Allowance Computer System (JSAPS) does not record information that would identify contribution based Jobseeker's Allowance claims that have been terminated because benefit has been in payment for six months.

North Down: Housing Executive Budget

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what is the Housing Executive's budget for the North Down area for the next financial year.

(AQW 29089/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that its budget for 2014/15 has not yet been finalised.

Derry: Social Housing Development Programme

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28330/11-15, why he stated that there are 788 units in the current Social Housing Development Programme 2013/14-2015/16 when his answer to AQW 28466/11-15 states that there are 454.

(AQW 29102/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Social Housing Development Programme operates on the basis of a 3 year rolling programme which is reviewed annually. The purpose of the roll-on process is to re-assess housing needs, review progress with the delivery of the development programme (to meet previously identified housing needs) and establish programming requirements in response to newly identified housing needs to assemble a robust programme for the next three years.

Each year (August) the Housing Executive's Development Programme Group (DPG) invites Housing Associations to submit bids for schemes they wish to develop over the next three years. Bids received by DPG are assessed by the Housing Executive's Regional Planners against housing need at a regional, and district level and a draft programme is prepared. The draft programme is approved by the Housing Executive's Board and subsequently by DSD and the Minister for Social Development prior to being published on the Housing Executive's website.

The process of formulating the development programme is informed by the production of District Housing Plans, and the subsequent round of consultation with each of the 26 District Councils, which recurs annually during May to September. The District Housing Plans are effectively a prospectus of housing-related activity by District Council, which in each case include a section detailing planned development programme activity by Associations, together with a summary of unmet housing needs.

The published programme (January) includes both the new projects selected from the bids plus any slippage from the previous year. This composite programme represents the full extent of programmed social housing development activity for the new 3-Year SHDP

Responsibility for the actual development of social housing for rent rests with registered Housing Associations. Housing Associations typically commence work on site assembly, designing schemes and submitting planning applications post Programme publication (January). In order to obtain Housing Association Grant (HAG) associations are required to submit detailed project applications to the Housing Executive for formal approval of the scheme before the work is tendered and contractors start on site.

As the Programme year progresses, associations may lose or slip schemes due to site acquisition / assembly difficulties, procurement issues, or failure to obtain planning approval within the anticipated development timetable.

Consequently the Housing Executive is required to exercise a high degree of flexibility in the interchange of schemes between all three years of the programme. Whilst the priority is always to deliver schemes listed in the Year 1 programme, the Housing Executive is aware that delays can occur. In those circumstances, a facility exists, outside of the formal bidding process, to add new schemes to the programme throughout the year or to bring forward schemes from later years.

At the point of publication, the Derry District Housing Plan detailed the 788 units included in the SHDP for Derry City Council area at that time. The SHDP is updated weekly to reflect programme amendments and these changes are also detailed on the published programme.

At the point in time that a response was provided to AQW 28466/11-15 the 3 year SHDP 2013/14 – 2015/16 had reduced to 454 units and details of the programmed schemes were provided.

The Table below details the programme amendments within the Derry City Council SHDP over this period of time and also facilitates a reconciliation of the two figures referred to.

	Derry City Council SHDP at publication date	788
Association	Scheme details
Apex	Londonderry Rehabs (new addition)	3

	Derry City Council SHDP at November 2013	454

Note: Losses to the SHDP are highlighted in yellow.

The SHDP is published on the Housing Executive's website at www.nihe.gov.uk. And is updated on a weekly basis to reflect amendments.

Gifts and Hospitality: DSD Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how many entries his Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.
(AQW 29157/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Special Adviser has made no entries in the Register of Gifts and Hospitality since he has been appointed.

Randalstown: Environmental Works

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail any correspondence his Department has received from traders in Randalstown stating their objection to further town centre environmental works.
(AQW 29233/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department received a letter from Randalstown Chamber of Trade on 18 September 2013 stating that they believed the disruption caused by the proposed environmental improvements would have a detrimental impact on their businesses, and requested that the scheme be 'shelved'.

Randalstown: DSD Funding

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Social Development what funds his Department has available for improving Randalstown town centre.
(AQW 29234/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is currently working with Antrim Borough Council and representatives from local traders and businesses to develop a Revitalisation scheme for the town centre up to a value of £150,000. The purpose of the scheme is to improve shop frontages, address dereliction and gap sites and to support and sustain businesses through the promotion and marketing of the town centre. In addition the Department has a discretionary Urban Development Grant programme to provide financial assistance to developers and owner/occupiers in the construction of new buildings and redevelopment or refurbishment of properties within the town centre.

Funding for any schemes is subject to a satisfactory appraisal being completed and sufficient cover being available within the Department's budget.

Fusion21: Ministerial Meetings

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development when he has had meetings with Fusion21 since taking office.
(AQO 5239/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Member may wish to note my answer to Assembly Question 13779/11-15 which explained when I met with Fusion 21. However, for the benefit of the Member today I will repeat it - in relation to the Glass and Glazing Federation I met with the Managing Director and the General Manager of Turkington Holdings on 16 April 2012. I also met with the Managing Director, Chief Executive and Independent Chair of Fusion 21 on 23 April 2012.

Alcohol: Legislation

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the outcomes of his licensing law consultation.
(AQW 29314/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A public consultation on "Proposed changes to the law regulating the sale and supply of alcohol in Northern Ireland" ended on 12 November 2012. The consultation included a wide range of proposals and attracted a large volume of responses from a wide variety of key stakeholders, including the alcohol industry, health bodies and the general public.

Officials have carefully considered the wide spectrum of strongly held views received in response to the proposals and briefed the Social Development Committee on this on 12 September.

I am currently considering the draft report on the outcome of the consultation before deciding the way forward on the proposed reforms.

Shankill Gateway: Public Realm Scheme

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Shankill Gateway public realm scheme.
(AQW 29319/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The proposed Shankill Gateway public realm scheme (between Peter's Hill and Agnes Street) involves the creation of distinct entrance features that portray a sense of arrival to the neighbourhood, the use of high quality materials, distinct street furniture and lighting columns that introduce style and character and provide a cohesive local appearance to the street-scape that can set the tone for the rest of the Shankill. Initial scheme design drawings are currently being prepared for further consideration and community consultation and estimated cost of the scheme cost is in the region of £3m. RPS PLC has been awarded the contract and it is planned that work will commence early in the New Year. As this scheme is due to run beyond the local government reform implementation date of 1 April 2015 Belfast City Council's endorsement of the scheme will be sought. The STC for Belfast met for the first time on 10 December 2013 and the process for project approval still needs to be established.

Housing Executive: Board Appointments

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the selection/recruitment process for applicants which led to the recent appointment of Board members of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.
(AQO 5242/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The selection/ recruitment process for any appointments to the Board of the Housing Executive must be made in accordance with the Commissioner for Public Appointments Code of Practice for Ministerial Public Appointments in Northern Ireland.

I appointed a new Board member in April this year following a public appointment competition and in November I re-appointed two members from the Housing Council to the Board of the Housing Executive to serve a second term.

Ballymoney: Town Centre Masterplan

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Town Centre Masterplan for Ballymoney.
(AQO 5243/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The consultants appointed by my Department to prepare a Masterplan for Ballymoney town centre have completed all the initial preparation and research work, carried out a public consultation exercise on the draft masterplan proposals and have submitted a draft document to the project steering group. This steering group was formed to oversee the work of the consultants and comprises officials from Ballymoney Borough Council, DRD Roads Service, DOE Planning Service and my Department. A final draft of the masterplan is being prepared for consideration by Ballymoney Borough Council.

It is anticipated that the final version of the masterplan will be published in early 2014, subject to its endorsement by the Council.

Community Access: Newsagents

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to use small newsagent shops as community access points.

(AQO 5244/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Whilst I have no plans to expand the use of small newsagent shops as community access points, currently, many of them play an important role in providing vulnerable customers with the means to access benefit payments which have often been made to meet an emergency situation. Small newsagents shops are an integral part of most local communities, and utilising this access will be considered as part of the Departments communications plans on welfare reform.

I can also confirm that there are plans to locate internet access points in all of my department's Jobs & Benefits and Social Security offices for claimants to use and is also intended that online benefits such as Universal Credit will be available as 'mobile apps' so claimants can have access from their smart phone.

Warm Homes Scheme: Rural Areas

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister for Social Development what efforts his Department is making to ensure the Warm Homes Scheme is published widely in rural areas, to tackle fuel poverty in rural communities.

(AQO 5245/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In order to raise public awareness in rural areas, the Warm Homes Scheme is promoted at all relevant rural and energy related external seminars and presentations. Warm Homes leaflets and advice was offered at the Balmoral Show in May 2013 and at a Rural Energy Seminar on 20 November 2013.

The Warm Homes Scheme is delivered by Bryson Energy and H&A Mechanical Services. They are responsible for delivering the Warm Homes Scheme measures to at least 9,000 households annually, 40% of which are to be in rural areas. The Scheme managers produce an annual Marketing Plan outlining their proposed promotional activities and they report on these activities at their monthly monitoring meeting with the Housing Executive. These marketing activities range from press releases and adverts, to attendance at local events and direct mail promotion to target households on qualifying benefits. Each of the Scheme managers maintains a database of community groups and organisations in their area, including Rural Community Networks, and they regularly promote the Scheme to these groups.

The Scheme managers also receive referrals from two key home visiting projects, Western Home Environmental Assessment Project (WHEAP) and Maximising Access in Rural Areas (MARA).

The Rural Energy Seminar was organised specifically to explore with rural community groups any potential mechanisms to help reduce energy consumption and cut energy bills in an effort to tackle fuel poverty. The Housing Executive's Rural and Energy Conservation Units came together to organise this event in association with external partners involved in the energy industry as well as rural stakeholders who could support and promote the event. A Warm Homes stand was also featured at the event with representatives from Bryson Energy in attendance to offer advice and information on the Scheme.

Awareness of the Warm Homes Scheme is also raised through communication with the Housing Executive's Rural Residents Forum who has access to community groups, tenants and residents in their areas and can ensure that information is circulated specifically to those who are most likely to benefit from the Scheme.

The Housing Executive, through its Rural Action Plan 2013/15 aims to ensure there is a cross divisional effort to keep rural communities aware of the various grants and initiatives which are available to them. This is communicated through the Housing Executive's website; it's bi-annual publication "Rural Matters"; published reviews of its Rural Action Plan and the availability of information leaflets at local Housing Executive offices. NI Direct also contains up to date information regarding the Warm Homes Scheme and details of how to access the Scheme.

Housing Executive: Cavity Wall Insulation

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the measures being taken to address the lack of cavity wall insulation in Housing Executive properties.

(AQO 5246/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that cavity wall insulation has been installed in around 75,000 of its stock where it has been feasible to do so, apart from a small number of properties where tenants refused work. However, they have in the region of 14,000, traditional and non traditional property types which do not have cavity walls (such as No Fines, Orlits or Easiform).

Some recent developments that the Housing Executive has been involved in regarding the insulation of their properties include for example, the recently provided external wall insulation to three rural cottages outside Coleraine. It cost just under £13,000 per unit, including 200 millimeters external insulation, new doors, windows, rainwater goods and fascias and warm deck roofs to two of the properties which had a side extension. The Housing Executive is now monitoring the performance of the dwellings over this coming winter season.

The Housing Executive is also at the start of a larger and more detailed analysis of their No Fines concrete properties. A consortium has been formed to establish the best solution to improve their No Fines concrete stock of some 5,600 dwellings in terms of external insulation to improve the thermal efficiency of the dwellings.

The project will look initially at providing external insulation to seven No Fines properties in Antrim. The outcome of this will be to provide new policy for energy improvement measures for this construction type. It is hoped that this solution can be rolled out across the UK where there are over 300,000 No Fines properties.

In relation to cavity wall insulation, a recent report from University of Ulster suggested that there may be a problem in some dwellings where mineral wool or fibre based insulation was installed. The Housing Executive commissioned their own research into this to undertake a minimum of 300 technical surveys of its own dwellings. These surveys should determine whether the cavities have blown fibre, loose bead, bonded bead, insulation board or other and identify the current condition of the insulation. The surveys began in October 2013 and will complete in March 2014. Until they are complete, the Housing Executive would have no way of knowing if there is a wider problem with cavity insulation and, if so, the extent of it.

The Housing Executive will carry out an evaluation of the results to determine if there is substandard insulation within their properties and will develop whatever action plan is indicated with new strategies and policies.

Warm Homes Scheme: Applicants

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the number of applicants for the Warm Homes Scheme to date.

(AQO 5247/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Warm Homes Scheme was first introduced in 2001. During this period information was collected detailing the number of installations. Between 2001 and June 2009 a total of 73,842 households had measures installed.

A new Warm Homes Scheme was introduced on 1 July 2009. Between 1 July 2009 and 31 October 2013 a total of 157,631 applicants contacted the Warm Homes Scheme. Of these, 66,777 were eligible for referral to the Warm Homes Scheme. This means these customers answered "yes" to the eligibility questions asked. Of these, 41,909 eligible customers had Warm Homes measures installed. It should be noted that some people decide for personal reasons not to proceed with installation of measures.

Warm Homes Scheme: Figures

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Social Development how many homes have benefited from the Warm Homes Scheme.

(AQO 5248/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Between 1 July 2009 and 31 October 2013, 41, 909 homes have had Warm Homes measures installed.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Parliament Buildings: Public Transport

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to outline any plans in place to increase public transport links with Parliament Buildings.

(AQW 28867/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: At present, Translink has not made the Assembly Commission aware of any plans in place to increase public transport links with Parliament Buildings.

However, the Northern Ireland Assembly Commission remain consortium members of the Stormont Area 'Workplace Management Plan' group who meet to discuss a number of transport related issues including increasing public transport links within the Stormont Estate.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Social Investment Fund

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when they will announce the projects that have applied successfully for funding from the Derry Social Investment Fund Steering Group.

(AQW 27842/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): A significant number of SIF projects have been cleared internally through the economic approval process. Discussions have commenced with steering groups to inform them of successful projects, budgets and to discuss implementation.

Derry: Jobs Promoted/Created

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 27446/11-15, for a breakdown of (i) the total number of jobs created in Derry in 2012/13; (ii) the number of jobs created in each firm; (iii) the total number of jobs promoted in Derry in 2012/13; and (iv) the number of jobs promoted in each firm.

(AQW 28009/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Research and monitoring across government departments, Derry City Council and the private and community sectors indicates that 1,180 jobs were promoted in 2012/13. An additional 10 jobs have now been accepted following a meeting of the Jobs Sub-Group, held on 8 November 2013, and these have been added to the total jobs promoted figure.

The full jobs created figure is not yet available and this will require monitoring job figures at a later stage. Due to commercial sensitivities it has not been possible to provide information on a firm by firm basis; however, the jobs were generated in the construction, hospitality, community, business and cultural sectors.

Multiple Deprivation Measure

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in instances where statistical data is being used to determine levels of deprivation, the basis of which is then used to allocate a range of funding measures, what account is taken of the different levels of tax free welfare benefits that are paid.

(AQW 28419/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Northern Ireland Multiple Deprivation Measure is the official measure of spatial deprivation. The measure was introduced in 2010 by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency and overseen by a steering group comprising representatives from all departments and other relevant bodies.

The measure provides information on seven domains of deprivation, including income deprivation, and an overall measure comprising of a weighted combination of the seven domains. The measure used the most recent data available at the time.

The income deprivation domain comprises a count of people living in households in receipt of income-related benefits and tax credits, including Income Support; State Pension Credit; and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance. The measure thus counts people and not the level of benefit. Those in receipt of multiple benefits were counted only once.

The usage of the measure in the allocation of funding is the responsibility of individual departments.

Equality Commission: Monitored Workforce

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, with the Report of the Northern Ireland Workforce 2012 due, what steps they will take to ensure that the Equality Commission gives sufficient emphasis to the emerging trends of recruitment in both the public and private sectors when deciding what action is required to address emerging imbalances in the workforce.

(AQW 28480/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Equality Commission intends publishing in early December the annual summary of monitoring returns for 2012, together with a summary of the change over time in the overall composition of the monitored workforce.

The Equality Commission's engagement with employers extends beyond the annual monitoring exercise. Employers also carry out three-yearly comprehensive reviews under Article 55 of the Fair Employment and Treatment (NI) Order 1998, looking at persons in employment, applicants, appointments and those who leave. The Reviews consider employment practices with the purpose of determining whether appropriate affirmative action measures should be implemented.

The Commission, in its engagement with employers, provides support and expertise to help them with all equality related issues.

We await the analysis to be presented in the annual monitoring report for 2012 and our officials will liaise closely with the Equality Commission on any follow-up action to the report.

Child Poverty

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an estimate of the percentage of children who will be living in both absolute and relative child poverty in each year until 2020.

(AQW 28683/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We do not have departmental projections. However, a report by the Institute of Fiscal Studies (IFS) on Child and Working-Age Poverty in Northern Ireland from 2010 to 2020 in May 2013 has been published by OFMDFM which contains projections. This is available online.

Strategic Investment Board: Land and Property Assets

Mr McCarthy asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what information is held by Strategic Investment Board on surplus and disused public land; and how this information is shared.

(AQW 28932/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Strategic Investment Board (SIB) Asset Management Unit (AMU) has developed an asset database to record information, such as location, size, occupancy and running costs, for land and property assets held by central government which are in use or not for immediate disposal. Departments can access the database directly. It is the intention to develop this database to incorporate surplus land and property assets.

In parallel, AMU has been working to digitally map the Land and Property Services database of surplus land and property. To date, just over 1,000 land and property assets have been mapped, and this work is ongoing.

Departments have a duty to identify surplus land and property and dispose of it with the least possible delay; to assess the current and strategic use of assets; and to identify potential future surplus assets for disposal. This process is managed by DFP Land and Property Services.

A list of central government land and property assets currently on the open market is available on http://www.dfpni.gov.uk/lps/index/property_valuation/valuation-public-sector-bodies/disposal_of_surplus_public_sector_property.htm

Taxis: Disability Strategy

Mrs Cochrane asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in relation to their disability strategy, for their assessment of the accessibility of Public Hire Taxis in Greater Belfast for people with a disability.

(AQW 29059/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive's Disability Strategy "A strategy to improve the lives of disabled people – 2012 to 2015" has a specific priority 6 to "Eliminate the barriers people with disabilities face in accessing transport ensuring measures are in place to allow personal mobility for people with disabilities".

In taking forward the delivery of the Disability Strategy, departments will consider and take forward action under the strategic priorities. All departments will be expected to report annually on the actions they have taken to support the delivery of the Strategy.

We understand that, currently, only taxis licensed as Belfast Public Hire are required to be wheelchair accessible. The specification for a wheelchair accessible vehicle is contained in the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness, Equipment and Use) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995, and was carried forward from previous taxi legislation. All Belfast Public Hire taxis must meet this specification in order to operate.

In recognition that the specification had not been reviewed for some time, and may no longer be suitable for the carriage of more modern wheelchairs and their users, the Department of the Environment is undertaking a review which is due for completion shortly. We understand DOE plans to consult on the recommendations of the Review in early 2014.

Goods, Facilities and Services: Legislation

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 28825/11-15, to answer the question that was asked.

(AQW 29470/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We have nothing further to add to our answer to AQW 28825/11-15.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Single Farm Payment: Applications

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the procedures her Department follows in processing Single Farm Payment applications which involve land that is the subject of more than one claim.

(AQW 28892/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): In line with EU Regulations, administrative checks are in place to identify land that is the subject of more than one Single Farm Payment application. Under the Regulations, penalties are applicable to the business which has incorrectly included the land on its claim.

In order to resolve a duplicate field issue, the Department writes to both businesses explaining that each of them must acknowledge which is the rightful claimant and which is not.

Where both businesses insist they are the rightful claimant the Department will investigate to establish which has control of the land. This can only be resolved by looking at the particular arrangements between all those concerned and, if necessary, clarifying the position on the ground to determine to what extent each business satisfies the SFP scheme requirements.

In circumstances where one party to a duplicate field case ignores repeated correspondence the Department has no option other than to progress the matter in favour of the party which is actively pursuing their claim on the land.

SFP will only be paid when claims are fully validated and duplicate field issues resolved.

Single Farm Payment: Duplicate Field Enquiries

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many Single Farm Payment applications involving duplicate field enquiries her Department processed in (i) 2012; and (ii) 2013.

(AQW 28893/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: For the 2012 year, 706 Single Farm Payment applications involving duplicate field enquiries were processed.

For the 2013 year, 1,610 Single Farm Payment applications involving duplicate field enquiries were processed. Of these, 394 remain to be resolved.

Single Farm Payment: Duplicate Claims

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what process her Department follows in determining the ownership of land that is the subject of duplicate claims for Single Farm Payment.

(AQW 28894/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In duplicate field cases, the Department is required to establish which of the claimants involved in the duplication meets the SFP scheme requirements.

In line with the EU requirements, DARD has to ensure that SFP is paid to the claimant that has the land at his/her disposal on 15 May and is undertaking agricultural activity on that land throughout the scheme year. While ownership may indicate that the land is at the owner's disposal, it does not demonstrate that the owner is undertaking agricultural activity on the duplicated land.

In circumstances where there is a disagreement the Department will investigate which claimant meets the eligibility rules. This may on occasion involve checking out who owns the land and any contractual agreements that exist between the owner and the other claimant(s) involved in the duplication. This could involve contacting Land and Property Services for details of land ownership or it could involve asking the landowner to provide evidence of ownership.

Single Farm Payment: Duplicate Claims

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department can take to ensure that genuine Single Farm Payment applications are not unduly delayed by duplicate claims on the same land.

(AQW 28895/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Administrative checks are carried out on all claims received with all land claimed by farm businesses accepted as genuine.

Where duplicate field areas are identified the processes outlined in response to AQW 28892/11-15 are followed as quickly as possible in order to resolve the duplicate field query.

In some instances, legal proceedings are underway between the parties and the Department is unable to determine the rightful claimant until it has been notified of the outcome of the proceedings.

National Dairy Council

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, was suitable support from the Republic of Ireland Government in removing restrictions on Northern Ireland milk entering the Republic of Ireland market not forthcoming, whether she will request that the United Kingdom Government consider the same stance in regard to cheese coming into the United Kingdom from the Republic of Ireland.

(AQW 28907/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I understand that to help differentiate products at retail level the south's National Dairy Council has introduced a labelling mark for milk and cream coming from farms in the south. This mark is additional to that required under EU rules and its inclusion on products is a commercial matter.

I fully support consumers' right to information to allow them to choose to buy local produce. However, I am very concerned that pressure is being exerted on retailers in the south to market only products labelled 'Farmed in the Republic of Ireland' and about any loss of business by our milk processors here in the North. That is why I raised my concerns about restrictions on competition in the dairy sector with Minister Coveney at the recent North South Ministerial Council meeting and we have agreed to continue to work together on this matter.

Both the north and the south have for many years benefited from free trade in milk and dairy products. Also, we are both heavily reliant on external sales, particularly to Britain. In light of this it could be very damaging for both of us if a similar campaign was replicated by the dairy industry in Britain. I do not therefore propose to ask the British Government to adopt the stance you suggest in relation to exports of cheese.

I have consistently made the point that a joint approach to the marketing of products from the island of Ireland would benefit all farmers. I strongly believe that fostering all Ireland trade would benefit producers both north and south and that neither us should be protectionist.

Bovine Viral Diarrhoea

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what is the time period in which Bovine Viral Diarrhoea could be eradicated if the legislative proposals, currently being finalised, were introduced.

(AQW 28930/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Following my decision to legislate for BVD, further work is now underway to finalise a robust programme to achieve a high level of success in eradicating this disease. It is most likely that the compulsory programme here will be predicated on the current voluntary scheme, which anticipated a 6 year programme including 3 years tag and test combined with 3 years of monitoring. Until the details of the proposed compulsory programme are finalised it is not possible to put a time frame on future eradication. In addition, it must be recognised that the success of any programme is very much dependent on the level of compliance and farmer's willingness to quickly and responsibly dispose of persistently infected animals.

However, I do not wish to introduce a programme which will run indefinitely, next year when I announce the detail of the compulsory programme, I will also be advising of the timeframe in which the programme will be reviewed. I wish to see a clear exist strategy for this programme, I do not want farmers having to tag and test calves any longer than necessary.

Bovine Viral Diarrhoea

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the wider trade implications for the farming industry if Bovine Viral Diarrhoea is not eradicated.

(AQW 28931/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Two of our key trading partners, within Ireland and Scotland, have already compulsory BVD eradication schemes in place and well underway. To ensure that our animal health status is on par with them, every measure should be taken to reduce the risk that our farming industry could be at a competitive disadvantage when exporting live cattle. The introduction of compulsory testing for Bovine Viral Diarrhoea will put our herd keepers on an equal footing to those in the south and Scotland.

Cattle movement in 2011 and 2012 from here to the south of Ireland for breeding and production was approximately 6000 animals each year. However this year the figure to date has dropped to 2,950. While it is not clear if this is a direct result of the south's introduction of compulsory BVD legislation earlier this year, there is anecdotal evidence that some buyers (without any legal obligation) are requesting a negative BVD test result before importing cattle.

In addition, given the progress being made with BVD eradication programmes in other EU Member States, BVD is expected to feature as a trade issue in the forthcoming EU Animal Health Regulation. A preliminary disease listing and categorisation paper listing BVD as a disease likely to affect trade was submitted, for discussion, by the Commission to a recent EU CVOs meeting.

Animal Welfare: Horses

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is taking over the recent discovery of multiple cases of cruelty and neglect and fallen equine stock on Clogher farmland; and what other Departments or agencies have a role in this matter.

(AQW 28953/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since 2 April 2012 District Councils have been responsible for the enforcement of the powers in the Welfare of Animals Act 2011 in respect of non-farmed animals including horses. My Department provides annual funding to enable Councils to undertake this work and my officials provide advice and guidance to support Council officials. In undertaking this new role Councils have decided to adopt a collaborative approach and have 5 regional offices covering the north.

This incident is the subject of an ongoing investigation by the Council's Animal Welfare Officers in Southern Region, and I understand they are liaising as necessary with their counterparts in Monaghan Local Authority. You will appreciate that I cannot comment further on an ongoing case.

The enforcement roles under the new Welfare of Animals Act 2011 are as follows: DARD in respect of farmed animals, Councils in respect of domestic pets and horses, and the PSNI in respect of wild animals, animal fighting, and welfare issues where other criminal activities are involved. Where appropriate, enforcement action may involve a multi-agency approach involving a combination of DARD, PSNI and Council Officers. If a case involves a cross-border dimension then the appropriate agencies in the south may also be involved.

The animal welfare contact points for DARD, the Councils' Animal Welfare Officers and the PSNI are published on my Department's website and similar information is available on the NIDirect website and local Councils' websites. I would encourage anyone with concerns about animal welfare to contact the relevant authority.

Broadband Improvement Project

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 25684/11-15, for an update on the procurement for this project.

(AQW 28982/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Procurement for the NI Broadband Improvement Project concluded on 8 November and I understand that the tender is currently being assessed.

Assuming that the evaluation is satisfactory and, pending necessary approvals, it is anticipated that a contract will be awarded by the end of 2013 with implementation commencing in 2014 and ending in 2015.

Forest Service: Relocation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many posts will be moved to Fermanagh as a result of the relocation of the Forest Service headquarters; and how many members of staff have agreed to relocate.

(AQW 28998/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are approximately 60 Forest Service Headquarter posts under consideration for relocation to Co. Fermanagh.

A human resources strategy is being developed which includes a detailed questionnaire to each member of staff and when analysed will confirm the number of staff who agree to work in the relocated headquarters.

Animal Welfare

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she is taking to end the abuse of animals.

(AQW 29011/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In my reply to you in February (AQW 19179/11-15) I advised that the welfare of animals here is protected by the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. The Act includes significant new powers to protect animals from unnecessary suffering, including domestic pets and horses. It allows action to be taken before an animal actually suffers, as opposed to after the event. The Act also recognises that causing unnecessary suffering to any animal is a very serious offence and it contains tough penalties which reflect this.

Enforcement of the powers in the new Act is undertaken by my Department in respect of farmed animals; Councils, for the first time, in respect of domestic pets and horses; and the PSNI in respect of wild animals, animal fighting, and welfare issues where other criminal activities are involved.

Since the Act was introduced I have brought forward several Statutory Rules and Codes of Practice to safeguard and promote the welfare of both farmed and non-farmed animals. During 2012 I introduced the Welfare of Farmed Animals Regulations 2012, which lay down the standards for the protection of animals kept for farming purposes, and the Welfare of Animals (Permitted Procedures by Lay Persons) Regulations 2012.

From 1 January 2013, it has been an offence for a person to dock a dog's tail or allow someone else to dock their dog's tail. The Welfare of Animals (Dog Breeding Establishments and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations, which came into operation on 1 April 2013, provides commercial dog breeders with clear standards which they must meet to ensure the welfare of all breeding bitches, stud dogs and pups in their establishment. I am confident that the new enforcement powers and penalties will act as a deterrent to those taking part in illegal dog breeding activities.

At present, Regulations regarding the welfare of animals at the time of killing are progressing through the legislative process. Next year I plan to bring forward legislative proposals in relation to the welfare of animals in petshops, animal boarding establishments, riding and other establishments.

The animal welfare contact points for DARD, the Councils' Animal Welfare Officers and the PSNI are publicised on my Department's website and similar information is available on the NI Direct website and local Councils' websites. I would encourage anyone with concerns about animal welfare to contact the relevant authority.

Fertiliser: Prices

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions her Department is taking to help to reduce the price that farmers pay for fertilizers.

(AQW 29014/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Fertiliser prices are determined by local, national and international market forces and I have no powers to intervene in commercial transactions.

I am, of course, aware that fertilisers represent a significant cost for farmers and that prices have increased significantly in recent years. Therefore, it is important that fertilisers, both inorganic and organic, are used as effectively and efficiently as possible (to benefit business performance as well as the environment). To this end, my Department has taken a number of steps to help farmers make best use of fertilisers and manures. Training is available on nutrient management planning (including the interpretation of soil analysis and the maintenance of optimum soil pH for efficient fertiliser uptake), matching fertiliser applications to crop demand and maximising the benefits of organic manures. Training is also available on drainage and grassland management, again to ensure effective use of fertilisers. As well as training, my Department has also provided financial support through the Manure Efficiency Technology Scheme to enable farmers to improve nitrogen utilisation from slurry. Through all of these measures, farmers have been able to match their nutrient applications more closely to crop demands and, thus, help mitigate the impact of rising fertiliser prices on their businesses.

Milk: Prices

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions her Department is taking to increase the price that farmers receive for the milk they produce, that is currently being bought at 17 pence a litre.

(AQW 29015/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The price that farmers receive for their milk is a commercial matter and therefore not something in which I can directly intervene. However, I believe that farmers should receive a fair price for the milk that they produce.

Whilst the basis of the 17 pence per litre which you quote is unclear, I am pleased that in recent months the market for raw milk and dairy products has been strong. As a result the average producer price for raw milk (after deduction of transport charges) during the period January to October 2013 was 30.76 pence per litre which compares with 25.06 pence per litre during the same period in 2012.

To assist dairy farmers to maximise their financial return from milk production my Department funds research, education, training and technical support. Financial assistance is also available to the dairy sector under the Rural Development Programme and a range of support measures are available to dairy processing companies from Invest NI to help them remain competitive.

The dairy sector has the potential to grow further in a sustainable way and to exploit opportunities arising from the predicted world population expansion. In this respect the Agri-Food Strategy Board's report Going for Growth has set challenging growth targets and I am pleased that the Board recognises the need for all parts of the supply chain to be sustainable and profitable. Development of the Executive response to the report is at an advanced stage and we hope to announce the way forward in the near future. I will continue to work with my Executive colleagues to help support the industry's plans for expansion.

Horse Passports

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) to outline the current position on the passporting and micro-chipping of equine animals; and (ii) whether she will make this a mandatory requirement to assist in the detection of stolen animals and in identifying abandoned animals and dumped carcasses with a view to prosecution.

(AQW 29031/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Under Commission Decision 2000/68/EC passports for equine animals have been mandatory since 2005 and under Commission Regulation 504/2008 micro-chipping has been mandatory for equine animals issued with passports since 1 July 2009. The Horse Passports Regulations (NI) 2010, on the identification of equidae implement Commission Regulation (EC) No. 504/2008 in the north of Ireland.

Wind Turbines: Grants

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what grants or finance are available for farmers who wish to install a wind turbine on their land.

(AQW 29045/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: At present clusters are not open for calls. Axis 3 has reached 100% commitment for this programme which means it is unlikely that there will be any further calls.

However, grants were available up to £50,000 to farm families wishing to diversify away from agricultural activities under Measure 3.1 (Farm Diversification) for standalone renewable energy initiatives, including wind turbines. Applications were subject to the criteria set by the programme operating rules including the EU requirement that 100% of the output is sold to the grid and none is used to reduce farm or farm household running costs.

Organic Farming: Funding

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what grants or finance are available for farmers who wish to switch to free range or organic farming.

(AQW 29046/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department does not offer funding to assist with meeting the criteria for free range production methods. However DARD does deliver the Organic Farming Scheme which provides payments to help farmers with the additional costs and loss of income that occurs during the conversion period to organic production. The Scheme is now closed to new applications. The recent Rural Development Programme (RDP) 2014 – 2020 consultation asked whether the next Agri-Environment Scheme should include an Organic Management Option. The consultation responses will be considered as part of the ongoing development of the next Agri-Environment Scheme.

APHIS: Upgrade

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans are in place to advance and upgrade the Aphis System.

(AQW 29097/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A decision has been taken to replace the current Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) through open procurement. The system will provide similar functionality while optimising use of technology to ensure that the Department and the wider Agri-food sector have access to a system that is modern and meets business needs for the future. The new system will be known as the NI Food Animal Information System (NIFAIS).

Work on the NIFAIS Programme commenced in July 2011. Subject Matter Experts (SMEs) from across the Department have been involved in preparing a detailed specification for NIFAIS. Negotiations on an APHIS exit agreement with the incumbent supplier are well advanced. As the NIFAIS system is particularly complex, DARD proposes to use the competitive dialogue process to select the most suitable supplier. Specifications are being produced based on outputs to maximise the opportunities for innovation and flexibility with the NIFAIS system.

The Programme are currently reviewing and revising the Outline Business Case to ensure it reflects any strategic changes that have occurred and ensure the projected costs accurately reflect the current development costs for such a complex system. On re-approval of the business case the programme will advertise the procurement opportunity in the Official Journal of the European Union and commence the formal procurement process.

NIFAIS will form a critical element of many DARD front line business processes and interface with key departmental and industry systems.

The aim of NIFAIS is to be a flexible, innovative IT solution that supports efficient and effective delivery of current and future food animal information services. It will meet DARD and industry needs and be capable of adapting to ensure compliance with legislation, technological development, NICS structures and standards.

During the procurement and implementation of NIFAIS, APHIS will continue to support the industry and will be developed accordingly by the current supplier until NIFAIS is fully operational.

APHIS: Paper Documentation

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans are in place to improve the paper forms filled in when selling livestock through the Aphis System; and what problems the Department are aware of with the carbon copies of these forms.

(AQW 29098/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are currently no plans to change the paper documentation required to record animal movements. However, movement documents will be reviewed as part of the NIFAIS (NI Food Animal Information System) project. NIFAIS is the replacement computerised database for APHIS.

Queries regarding copies of the original movement documents e.g. amended or illegible copies, are processed and investigated by my staff. In the case of simple queries, my administrative staff in the local DARD Direct Office may contact the seller or buyer for clarification. In the case of more complex documentary concerns, the matter may be passed on to my enforcement staff for detailed investigation.

Farming: Livestock Notification

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in instances where a farmer is late in notifying her Department regarding livestock, why late or no notification status is put on that animal until its processing is complete.
(AQW 29099/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Under European Union (EU) and north of Ireland legislation farmers are required to make certain notifications, births, deaths and movements to and from the herd, to the competent authority within fixed time periods. These rules are in place to support livestock traceability. If a farmer is late in notifying DARD then a status is applied to the animal to indicate that the notification was received late. Some statuses may restrict the animal's movements e.g. the status applied because of a late birth notification.

If an incomplete or partially illegible notification is received by DARD, a status may be applied to an animal as it may only be possible to process part of the notification. This procedure enables DARD to monitor incomplete information and, if appropriate, to restrict the movement of the animal until this is rectified. The information is recorded on the APHIS database and actions taken by DARD to ensure robust livestock traceability. When the required information has been received and processed by DARD, the "late" or "no notification" status may be removed; provided the notification is deemed to have been received within the appropriate time period.

Farming: Livestock Movement Licence

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why herd keepers need vet certificates to export animals to the rest of the UK for slaughter.
(AQW 29100/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is currently a licensing regime for movements of livestock from the north to Britain and vice versa, for both slaughter and breeding and production. The licensing regime has existed for many years and is a reflection of the fact that the north is part of a separate epidemiological unit from Britain and the differing animal health and disease statuses in each.

The issue of licences, and therefore the subsequent need for veterinary certificates to export, are laid down in the Diseases of Animals (NI) Order 1981 and the Importation of Animals Order (NI) 1986 for moves from Britain to here, and in the Animal Health Act 1981 and the Importation of Animals Order 1977 for moves from here to Britain.

These arrangements have served the agriculture industry here well in preventing the incursion of diseases which are endemic in Britain and, for example, specifically protecting our cattle herd and sheep flock from Bluetongue after there was an incursion into Britain in 2007.

The arrangements also allow us to maintain trade if Britain is affected by an animal disease when we are not, an example of this being the north's ability to continue trading when Britain was affected by Foot and Mouth Disease in 2007.

Our current licensing and veterinary certification arrangements exist to protect our animal health status and ability to trade.

Store Lambs: Importation from Republic of Ireland

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why sheep farmers cannot import store lambs from the Republic of Ireland.
(AQW 29101/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is no legislative impediment which would prevent the importation of store lambs from the south of Ireland.

Intra-Community trade in sheep is governed by Council Directive 91/68 which sets out the conditions which have to be met to allow a legal movement. This directive was last amended on 31 August 2013 but that amendment would not prevent store lambs being imported from the south of Ireland.

Farming: Ear Tags

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an estimate of the number of ear tags that are lost each year through wear and tear.
(AQW 29120/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department are unable to determine the number of ear tags lost each year through wear and tear. The table below gives the number of duplicate replacement tags, to replace lost tags, used in cattle and sheep in each of the last 3 years.

	2011	2012	2013 to 11/12/13
Cattle replacement tags	217,904	218,868	203,685
Sheep replacement tags	2357	2741	3116

For cattle this means that approximately 7% of cattle ear tags are replaced annually.

For sheep the flock keeper can either replace the lost tag with a matching replacement tag (see above table) or the flock keeper can apply a new tag set. The flock keeper must record the details in the flock register in accordance with the legislation to ensure traceability is maintained.

- Tags are replaced for a number of reasons;
- They are lost from the animal's ears
- They become illegible
- They are removed for welfare reasons e.g. an infected ear
- In some cases, the ear tag numbers of older cattle moving to other Member States for breeding and production, do not contain sufficient characters in their number to meet the requirements of the importing country. Therefore the tags have to be updated and replaced.

Agricultural Crime

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of recorded incidents of agricultural crimes, including livestock and machinery thefts, in each constituency, in each of the last two years; and of these, how many have seen (i) property recovered; and (ii) prosecutions or pending prosecutions.

(AQW 29125/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Responsibility for tackling crime, including agricultural crime, lies primarily with the PSNI and the Department of Justice. My Department does not hold the information you ask for.

I understand that the PSNI records statistical information on crime.

Farming: Livestock Theft

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what assurances she can give that no livestock which may have been stolen, particularly if it is not tagged or incorrectly tagged, can be presented for slaughter in an abattoir; and (ii) what assurances she has obtained from her counterparts in the Republic of Ireland in respect of same.

(AQW 29127/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The theft of livestock from farms is an issue that I take very seriously. The PSNI, who take the lead on these issues in the north, notify DARD of all reports of stolen livestock. This information is immediately communicated to the DARD Meat Inspection Teams in all the abattoirs in the north. The PSNI also notify An Garda Síochána who communicate with the abattoirs in the south. This two-way communication process ensures vigilance both north and south.

Cattle keepers must notify DARD in writing, within 7 days of becoming aware that an animal is missing believed lost or stolen. The ear tag numbers are removed from the keeper's herd on my Department's database the Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) and moved into a special "lost/stolen" cattle herd on APHIS. If a lost/stolen animal re-appears its ear tag number cannot be moved out of this herd on the database, until DARD has carried out a detailed tracing investigation..

When a bovine animal is moved to an abattoir it must be accompanied by a movement document on which its details must be recorded. It is the responsibility of the Food Business Operator to ensure that the animal presented for slaughter matches its details on the movement document and on APHIS. If an animal is not recorded on APHIS in the presenter's herd or if there are discrepancies with regard to tagging or the animal's description then it cannot be slaughtered until they are resolved. The Official Veterinarian also carries out checks on 10% of the animals.

Cattle with no ear tags or incorrect ear tags are ineligible for slaughter for human consumption. If an animal is declared ineligible for slaughter for human consumption it is not allowed to leave the abattoir alive. It is destroyed on the premises and disposed as animal by-product.

Within EU legislation for animal identification and movement, and the rules for the entry of animals into the human food chain, effective controls must be fully and consistently implemented in all Member States. My officials regularly liaise with colleagues in the south to co-operate on policies for livestock traceability. The Identification and Traceability Working Group meets under the North South Ministerial Council arrangements and is a key part of the implementation of the All-Island Animal Health and Welfare Strategy

Gifts and Hospitality: DARD Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many entries her Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 29161/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Special Adviser has not received any gifts or hospitality.

Woodland Register

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development where Northern Ireland ranks in terms of trees per acre. (AQW 29164/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since 2012 estimates of the area of woodland in the north of Ireland have been based on the Woodland Register, which was established by Forest Service in response to the Forestry Act 2010.

The area of woodland in hectares and the percentage of woodland in the north of Ireland in comparison with the south of Ireland, Scotland, Wales, England and the average of 27 countries in the European Union (prior to 1 July 2013), is given in the table below.

	Area of woodland (ha)	% of land
North of Ireland	111, 000	8.2
South of Ireland	679, 485	9.9
Scotland	1, 410, 000	18.1
Wales	305, 000	14.7
England	1, 300, 300	10.0
European Union – 27	157, 000, 000	37.0

Bovine Tuberculosis: Badgers

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the proposed pilot scheme for the trapping, testing, vaccination and release of non-infected badgers to prevent the spread of Bovine TB, including an estimated commencement date. (AQW 29205/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: On 3 July 2012, I advised the Assembly Committee that I asked my officials to develop a “test and vaccinate or remove (TVR)” wildlife intervention research project. The aim of this wildlife intervention research will be to test the effectiveness of this approach on the level of TB in badgers and in cattle in the north.

The TVR study design is complex and there are a number of preparatory phases that must be completed before the main elements of this research project can get underway. However, substantial preparatory work has already been undertaken.

We commissioned the then Food and Environment Research Agency (FERA) to provide computer modelling outputs to inform the TVR design, using our farm business, TB disease and badger ecology data. This information has helped us to design the overall TVR study.

A badger sett survey is also required before any TVR research can commence and this work is already well underway in two 100km² areas. Good progress has been made with this work. I am pleased to report that we have received permission to survey some 81% of the Banbridge / Rathfriland area and 82% of the area near Castlewellan.

Work is also ongoing in relation to the preparation of the Outline Business Case. Subject to the necessary financial approval and securing the necessary licences and funding, it is hoped that the intervention element of TVR fieldwork will begin in mid 2014.

Rural Development Programme: Agri-environment Schemes

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the correspondence that she has received over the past 6 months requesting the transfer of funds from pillar 1 to pillar 2 in order to support the delivery of agri-environment schemes in the 2014-2020 Rural Development Programme. (AQW 29254/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In the past six months I have received correspondence requesting the transfer of funds from Pillar 1 to Pillar 2, to support the delivery of agri-environment schemes in the 2014-2020 Rural Development Programme, from 354 individuals and one letter from the RSPB on behalf of 69 farmers and agri-businesses. The majority of individual responses were made using the template provided by the RSPB on their website under the ‘Vote for Nature’ campaign.

Rural Development Programme: Wildlife-friendly Farming

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when she will make a decision on the transfer of funds from pillar 1 to pillar 2 of the Rural Development Programme, to help wildlife friendly farming. (AQW 29255/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A decision on the transfer of funds from Pillar 1 to Pillar 2 of the Common Agricultural Policy must be notified to the European Commission by Member States before 31 December 2013. I intend to make my decision in advance of that date.

Farm Inspections: Aerial Photographs

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what the target time is for her Department forwarding aerial inspection photographs to farmers and their local departmental office; and what is the average time taken.

(AQW 29268/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is no requirement for the Department to forward aerial inspection photographs to farmers and the Department has not done so in 2013.

The Department is considering the provision of maps based on ortho-photography, which show what was found at inspections and will seek to provide these for inspections in future years. In the interim, farmers will have the opportunity to visit their local DARD Direct offices to view their inspection maps on DARD's systems and to use this information and the details provided in the inspection report to accurately complete their 2014 Single Application Form.

Farm Inspections: Remote Sensing

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what duty her Department has to tell farmers or landowners that an aerial inspection (i) will take place; or (ii) has taken place on their land.

(AQW 29269/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has no requirement to notify land owners or farmers that an aerial inspection has taken place or will take place. The Department issued letters to affected farm businesses in December 2013, informing them that their land was subject to control with remote sensing. Land owners will not be notified, unless they are also claimant farmers that have had an inspection by control with remote sensing.

Strathmore/Mount Vernon Streams: Repair Work

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what upgrade or repair work has been carried out in the last five years to the (i) Strathmore Stream; and (ii) Mount Vernon Stream culverted watercourses.

(AQW 29287/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) Strathmore Park Stream - Rivers Agency completed works, at a cost of £219k, from May to August 2009 to repair structurally unsound culverts on the Strathmore Park Stream. The works extended from the junction of North Circular Road and Coolmoyne Park, in a generally southerly direction through gardens of properties in North Circular Road and Slievemoyne Park, beneath the eastern end of Slievemoyne Park, beneath Antrim Road to terminate at the junction of Antrim Road and Old Cavehill Road.
- (ii) Mount Vernon Stream - Rivers Agency completed extensive works, at a cost of £569k, during 2009/2010 which involved substantial culvert replacement on the Mount Vernon Stream. The works extended from the Antrim Road through the grounds of the Landsdowne Court Hotel, eastward beneath Landsdowne Road, Landsdowne Drive and Landsdowne Park to outlet into an open reach of this watercourse at the rear of No 1 Landsdowne Park.

Strathmore/Mount Vernon Streams: Flooding

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many instances or reports of flooding in the last five years have been attributed to the (i) Strathmore Stream; and (ii) Mount Vernon Stream culverted watercourses.

(AQW 29288/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In the last 5 years Rivers Agency have reports of one incident of flooding of a garden during December 2012 possibly connected to Strathmore Stream, and one incident of a garden flooding during November 2010 possibly connected to Mount Vernon Stream. Other potential sources of flooding have been identified for both these flooding instances.

Strathmore/Mount Vernon Streams: Repair Work

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans her Department has to upgrade or carry out repair work to the (i) Strathmore Stream; and (ii) Mount Vernon Stream culverted watercourses.

(AQW 29289/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) Strathmore Park Stream - Rivers Agency completed works during August 2009 to repair structurally unsound culverts on the Strathmore Park Stream. Rivers Agency has no current plans to undertake further works on this reach of this watercourse.
- (ii) Mount Vernon Stream - Rivers Agency completed extensive works during August 2010 which involved substantial culvert replacement on the Mount Vernon Stream. Rivers Agency has no current plans to undertake further works on this reach of this watercourse.

North Antrim: Forest Service Revenue

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much revenue her Department received from the Forest Service in North Antrim, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 29299/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service is an Agency of the Department and all Agency income and expenditure is contained within the DARD Estimates and accounted for through both the DARD and Agency Resource Accounts.

The Forest Service revenue in the North Antrim constituency comes from its operating activities in the area. This was £1,102,000 in 2010/11, £718,326 in 2011/12 and £466,605 in 2012/13.

Single Farm Payment: Delays

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the nature of any issues that have been identified by her Department that will delay the receipt of the Single Farm Payment for any eligible farmers; and should delays be identified, when will affected farmers receive their payment.

(AQW 29454/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Single Farm Payment (SFP) scheme is fully funded by the European Union and the rules governing its administration are set in European Council legislation. These rules provide that payments can only be made on fully verified claims. The findings of verification checks on individual claims must be fully taken into account in order to calculate the correct amount of SFP due in each case. The Department has no discretion to vary the rules detailed in the European Council legislation.

A Single Farm Payment can only be made to a farm business when the verification checks have been completed. Delays can be experienced for a wide variety of reasons. Where a claim is the subject of an On the Spot Check, or land eligibility inspection, the claim will be processed as soon as the land has been inspected and the inspection results finalised. In such cases, it is anticipated that the majority of inspected claims will be processed by the end of February 2014.

The payment of SFP claims can also be delayed by factors outside the Department's control. These factors are varied and include:

- Bank details not supplied by the farm business;
- Ownership of the farm business and/or SFP entitlements are subject to probate proceedings;
- Disputes between landowners and tenants as to which is the correct claimant under the scheme;
- Queries arising from farm businesses claiming areas of eligible land greater than the Maximum Eligible Area (MEA) held by the Department;
- Two or more farm businesses claiming the same parcel of land; and
- Farm businesses have not supplied all of the necessary information to enable a claim to be processed.

The Department has established processes for resolving these issues but is largely and often wholly dependent on the provision of information from the farm business or the completion of legal procedures. These processes are followed as quickly as possible by the Department in order to finalise claims for SFP in an expeditious manner.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Foyle: DCAL Capital Projects

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the major capital projects funded by her Department in the Foyle constituency in 2011.

(AQW 28877/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Spend is recorded by my Department according to financial years. For the purpose of this answer I will, therefore, detail major capital projects funded by my Department in the Foyle constituency from the 1 April 2011 to 31 March 2012.

The Department allocated £251k towards Derry's Live Site which was located in Waterloo Place. Live Sites are big screens in city centres reaching out-of-home audiences through large community screens.

Foyle: DCAL Capital Projects

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the major capital projects that will be funded by her Department in the Foyle constituency in (i) 2014; and (ii) 2015.

(AQW 28918/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Budgets are allocated according to financial years. For the purposes of this answer, I will, therefore, detail the capital position for the years ended 31 March 2015 (2014/15) and 31 March 2016 (2015/16). As I was happy to announce recently, my Department will invest at least £2m in Daisyfields and Showgrounds in Derry in 2014/15 as part of the City of Culture legacy programme. The Executive has not yet set budgets for 2015/16 but I have already made it clear that City of Culture legacy will play a prominent part in my own Department's proposals.

Gifts and Hospitality: DCAL Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many entries her Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.
(AQW 29008/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: None.

Language Diversity Unit: DCAL

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail how many people are employed in the Language Diversity Unit.
(AQW 29203/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There is no Language Diversity Unit within DCAL.

A total of fourteen staff are currently employed within Languages and Waterways Ireland Branch.

City of Culture 2013: Legacy

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 28717/11-15, which stakeholders were consulted; and what were the dates of the consultations.
(AQW 29260/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials are working closely with stakeholders in the North West to discuss plans for future support and development of the culture, arts and leisure sectors. Officials regularly meet with our primary stakeholders, Derry City Council and Culture Company.

A series of informal meetings have also been held with organisations in the City throughout 2013. Examples of recent meetings between officials and organisations in the context of legacy plans include the Chief Executive's Forum on 26 September; Ilex on 4 October; Voluntary Arts Ireland on 8 October; Derry Visitor and Convention Bureau on 15 October; Playhouse on 30 October; Nerve Centre 13 November; DSD 13 November; Walled City Tattoo representatives on 26 November; and North West Volunteer Centre on 3 December.

Officials are also working closely with DSD Community Engagement Officers in the context of the Waterside, Triax, Outer North and Outer West cultural strategies. My Department is represented on the Community Engagement Steering Committee which last met on 28 November 2013.

Boxing: Independent Working Group Report

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, in light of the report of the Independent Working Group Examining Boxing in Ulster, what steps she will take to assist and facilitate local boxers who aspire to fight for the UK to attain their ambition.
(AQW 29342/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The report of the Independent Working Group (IWG) states that "the Irish Amateur Boxing Association (IABA), the British Amateur Boxing Association (BABA), the Amateur International Boxing Association (AIBA) along with associated bodies/organisations should work together to identify the implementations of the Good Friday Agreement for national representation and work to implement any recommendations including devising a plan to accommodate Ulster boxers who might represent Team GB at elite level."

The IABA has publicly stated that they will examine the findings in the report and take some time to consult with its membership before delivering a response in the New Year.

My Department and Sport NI will be available to provide practical support to the IABA as they take forward their considerations of the IWG recommendations, including the recommendation on national representation.

Sandy Row Amateur Boxing Club: Funding

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, given that the report of the Independent Working Group Examining Boxing in Ulster has substantiated the claims of Sandy Row Boxing Club that incidents of sectarianism and racism have occurred, what plans she has to provide funding for which the Club will be eligible.
(AQW 29343/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department has a responsibility for the general provision of funding for the development of sport in the north of Ireland. As part of this, Sport NI established the Lottery funded Boxing Investment Programme to meet an identified need in boxing, and which had a clear focus on improving facilities and building capacity in the sport. Sandy Row Amateur Boxing Club (ABC) was eligible to submit an expression of interest for this funding; however, in order to progress to the next stages of the programme, all clubs, including Sandy Row ABC, were required to be affiliated to a recognised governing body. This is a standard requirement for all Sport NI funding programmes.

Boxing: Sectarianism

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action her Department is taking in response to the Independent Working Group's report on sectarianism in boxing.

(AQW 29370/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I welcome the Independent Working Group's report and acknowledge its findings and recommendations.

However, responsibility for action on the findings rests in the first instance with the Irish Amateur Boxing Association (IABA) who commissioned the report. The IABA has publicly stated that they will examine the findings in the report and take some time to consult with its membership before delivering a response in the New Year.

My Department and Sport NI, an arms length body of DCAL, will be available to provide practical support to the IABA as they take forward their considerations of these recommendations.

Irish Amateur Boxing Association

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action her Department will take to ensure that the review of existing practice for complaint and investigation in the Irish Amateur Boxing Association takes place.

(AQW 29384/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I welcome the Independent Working Group's report and acknowledge its findings and recommendations.

Responsibility for action to review the existing practice for complaint and investigation procedures, rests wholly with the Irish Amateur Boxing Association (IABA), who commissioned the report.

The IABA has publicly stated that they will examine the findings in the report and take some time to consult with its membership before delivering a response in the New Year.

My Department and Sport NI, an arms length body of DCAL, will be available to provide practical support to the IABA as they take forward their considerations of these recommendations.

Boxing: Protestant Participation

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action is being taken to address the chill factors, identified in the report by the Independent Working Group Examining Boxing in Ulster, which discourage people from the Protestant community getting involved in boxing.

(AQW 29385/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I welcome the Independent Working Group's report and acknowledge its findings and recommendations.

Responsibility for action to address the issues raised in the report rests, in the first instance, with the Irish Amateur Boxing Association (IABA). The IABA has publicly stated that they will examine the findings in the report and take some time to consult with its membership before delivering a response in the New Year.

I am aware of the ongoing work of the IABA, through its Club Development Manager, to promote and develop boxing in all areas and across all communities in the north of Ireland. In ongoing support of this, my Department and Sport NI will be available to provide practical support to the IABA as they take forward their considerations of the recommendations made.

Commonwealth Games 2014: DCAL Support

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support, financial or otherwise, her Department will provide to the Northern Ireland Commonwealth Games Team for the 2014 Glasgow games.

(AQW 29397/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for entering competitors from the north of Ireland, into the Commonwealth Games 2014, rests with the NI Commonwealth Games Council (NICGC) which has not yet selected local competitors for the 2014 Commonwealth Games.

The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) provides support to athletes through SportNI, who are investing £543,129 in Commonwealth Games sports through its Athlete Investment Programme in this current financial year. The Sports Costs strand of the Programme, which contributes to the implementation of agreed training and competition programmes, is made to the Governing Body which in turn selects the most suitable athletes. Athletes may apply directly to Sport NI for the Living Costs strand of the Programme which contributes to essential living and travel costs.

This funding is not solely for preparation for the Commonwealth Games, but also in respect of other competitions that take place during the investment period.

An ongoing investment programme in the development of high quality facilities, such as the Aurora Complex in Bangor and the stadia projects, provide athletes with a professional training environment.

Commonwealth Games 2014

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what plans she has to profile and showcase Northern Ireland during the 2014 Commonwealth Games in Glasgow.

(AQW 29399/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department is constantly considering opportunities to showcase the diversity and the very best of culture from across the island. Officials from the Department continue to liaise with their counterparts in Scotland regarding the Glasgow 2014 Cultural Programme.

I am aware that a number of governing bodies have mentioned proposals to invite teams/athletes from other countries to preparation camps ahead of the Glasgow Games. However their main focus will be on preparing our athletes for the Games.

The World Police and Fire Games was a huge success and demonstrated that we can deliver major games in the north of Ireland. Whilst, 'Events' are the responsibility of DETI, as part of the WPFPG legacy, my Department is considering how we can build on that success and opportunities for hosting future major sporting events.

Department of Education

Woodlands Speech and Language Unit

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education, in light of the closure of Woodlands Speech and Language Unit, what plans have been put in place for students who may have been referred for speech and language places in the current year; and what action his Department has taken to set up the new classes and required resources.

(AQW 28845/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The Western Education and Library Board (WELB) has confirmed that any students who currently attend Woodlands Speech and Language Unit will finish their placements there. New provision at Ebrington, St. Anne's and Ballykelly Primary Schools will commence from September 2014.

WELB has advised that meetings have taken place to progress arrangements for accommodation needs in the new settings and it plans to engage with staff in the near future.

Schools: Outdoor Sports Facilities

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education what collaboration has taken place with the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure to ensure that there are adequate outdoor sporting facilities for use by community and sporting groups and local schools in Bangor.

(AQW 28925/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is the responsibility of the Department of Education to ensure that schools are designed to provide an appropriate learning environment for the delivery of the curriculum. The provision of adequate outdoor sporting facilities for use by the community is not the responsibility of the Department.

However, when planning new or improved play and sporting facilities at schools the Department's Building Handbook for Primary and Post Primary Schools does provide design advice to enable all school facilities to be used by the community. The local management and arrangements for the use of such facilities by the community is a matter for a school's Board of Governors.

Education and Skills Authority: Senior Management Posts

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28317/11-15, how many of these posts are currently filled.

(AQW 28963/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A Chief Executive (Designate) has been appointed. Three individuals have accepted offers of a Director post.

Salary ranges for each of the posts in the senior management structure are set out below:

Chief Executive (Designate)	£145,000 - £150,000
Director of Operations & Estates	£81,460 - £108,618
Director of Education Quality & Strategic Planning	£95,039 - £126,717
Director of Children and Young Peoples Services	£81,460 - £108,618
Director of Finance & ICT	£81,460 - £108,618
Director of HR & Workforce Development	£81,460 - £108,618

Education and Skills Authority: Senior Management Salaries

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28317/11-15, what is the salary attached to each post. (AQW 28964/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A Chief Executive (Designate) has been appointed. Three individuals have accepted offers of a Director post.

Salary ranges for each of the posts in the senior management structure are set out below:

Chief Executive (Designate)	£145,000 - £150,000
Director of Operations & Estates	£81,460 - £108,618
Director of Education Quality & Strategic Planning	£95,039 - £126,717
Director of Children and Young Peoples Services	£81,460 - £108,618
Director of Finance & ICT	£81,460 - £108,618
Director of HR & Workforce Development	£81,460 - £108,618

Common Funding Scheme: Small Schools

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education how he intends to protect strategic small schools in the long term through his revision of the Common Funding Formula.

(AQW 28979/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: One of the recommendations in the Independent review of the Common Funding Scheme was to remove all small schools support factors from the current funding formula. While I accepted this recommendation in principle, I decided not to implement it at this time. The small schools support factors in the current formula will be retained for the 2014-15 financial year.

I already have an extensive area based planning process underway designed to ensure that schools are planned strategically to deliver sustainable, high quality education. I want to see more progress on area planning.

We have a Sustainable Schools policy that sets out the criteria and quality indicators to help managing authorities to assess schools' sustainability.

I will provide further clarification within existing policy on the circumstances as to when a small school will need to be retained and how it will be supported.

Primary Schools: Appointment of Head Teachers

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education, in relation to the appointment of headteachers to the primary sector over the last three years, what percentage of applicants met the essential criteria; and what percentage of posts had to be readvertised.

(AQW 28981/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools have advised that the figures for the appointment of Principals to the primary sector over the last three years are:

Employing Authority	% of applicants who met essential criteria	% of posts that had to be readvertised
BELB	100	11
NEELB	71.52	21.43
SEELB	86	11
SELB	97.64	5.88
WELB	100	Nil
CCMS	97.34	3.9

Please note in respect of the BELB figures for % of applicants who met essential criteria, these relate to only 8 out of 9 appointments as figures are not held by the BELB and they were not in a position to obtain these within the timescale.

Schools: Newbuilds

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of (i) planning fees; (ii) architects; (iii) consultants; and (iv) other associated costs for school new builds in the last ten years which have not been built.

(AQW 29022/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is not possible, without incurring disproportionate expense, to provide the breakdown of costs on new school builds in the way requested. However, costs have been provided as detailed below.

The costs for new build schools included in Capital Announcements but where construction work has not yet commenced are detailed in the table below. The information provided covers all costs incurred since the commencement of planning up to 31 March 2013.

To the end of the 2012/13 financial year £3.8m has been spent on the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus. However, of this total amount circa £600k relates to the "carrying cost" of the Department owning the Lisanelly site (i.e. site security and utilities). Please see the table below for a breakdown of expenditure.

Area of Spend	Total Spend to 31/03/13
Development of Exemplar Designs and Programme Director costs	£2,754,337.76
Development of Strategic and Outline Business Cases	£116,600.97
Legal Advice for input to Business Cases	£32,344.88

Hospitality/Conferences/Public Relations: DE Costs

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the cost of hospitality in his Department in each of the last five years; (ii) the cost of conferences and similar events held by his Department; and (iii) the spend on public relations, including press staff.

(AQW 29025/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) The costs of hospitality by the Department in each of the last five years is shown in the following table.

Financial year	£'000
2008-09	74
2009-10	57
2010-11	26

Financial year	£'000
2011-12	19
2012-13	27

(ii) The costs of conferences and similar events held by the Department is shown in the following table.

Financial Year	£'000
2008-09	149
2009-10	49
2010-11	26
2011-12	7
2012-13	9

(iii) The spend on public relations, including press staff by the Department, is shown in the following table.

Financial Year	£'000
2008-09	189
2009-10	184
2010-11	204
2011-12	227
2012-13	184

In addition to the expenditure detailed above, Communication Consultants are engaged on the Lisanelly Shared Educational Campus project in Omagh through the Integrated Design Team, to provide planning and stakeholder engagement services for the project. The Integrated Design Team was appointed through open OJEU competition in March 2010. A small element of the contract would include the provision of occasional PR services on behalf of the project. This expenditure is not invoiced separately.

Community Education Initiatives Programme

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what actions he is taking, or considering, to work with community groups, such as Community Network groups, to ensure that disadvantaged areas are given local services to benefit education in the community.

(AQW 29042/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have allocated £2 million pounds to a Community Education Initiatives Programme in this and the next financial year. The aim of the programme is to identify and allocate resources to community-based initiatives which have a specific focus on positive educational outcomes. The intention is to join up community-based and school-based activity in a more coherent way, promoting partnership working between voluntary and community organisations and schools in order to provide educationally focused programmes in communities with particular concentrations of educational disadvantage. The funding will be allocated through the Education and Library Boards to the Neighbourhood renewal Partnerships, Belfast Area Partnerships and Super Output Areas with high levels of educational disadvantage.

In addition, my Department works closely with the Department for Social Development in relation to education-related Neighbourhood Renewal Projects which target children in the most disadvantaged areas, providing additional support to address educational underachievement.

North Down: Funded Preschool Places

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of free pre-school funded places in North Down in each of the last five years.

(AQW 29065/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of funded pre-school places in the North Down constituency, in each of the last five years is follows:

Provision in North Down District Council Area⁴

PROVIDERS	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Statutory nursery	468	468	468	468	468
Voluntary/private	304	314	359	390	396
Total	772	782	827	858	864

Education and Skills Authority: Projected Savings

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education what are the projected cost savings based on the current plans for management bodies to be included within the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 29092/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: According to the Full Business Case for the Education and Skills Authority (ESA), completed by my Department and approved by the Department of Finance and Personnel in June 2013, ESA will save £185 million over the ten year period following its establishment. This calculation was arrived at by comparing the costs, over this period, of establishing and maintaining ESA with the costs of the alternative: restoring and maintaining existing structures.

Children: Internet Safety

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Education what action his Department and its arm's-length bodies are taking to protect children from abuse through the internet.

(AQW 29148/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Action taken to protect children from abuse through the internet is part of the overall approach to eSafety within the education sector. Action taken has two objectives, namely, to offer a safe environment within which pupils can use the internet and for pupils to learn about potential dangers and how to keep safe.

Boards of Governors of grant-aided schools have a duty to safeguard and promote the welfare of pupils. In the exercise of this duty schools are required to have in place eSafety policies covering the safe and effective use of the internet and digital technologies. The eSafety policies must operate in conjunction with other school policies including Behaviour, Child Protection, Anti-Bullying and Acceptable Use.

DE Circular 2007/1 – 'Acceptable Use of the Internet and Digital Technologies in Schools' provides advice on the matters which must be addressed by schools in ensuring safe and appropriate use of the internet. The circular also drew attention to useful sources of advice from expert organisations involved in child protection. Additional guidance was issued to schools in September 2011 in DE Circular 2011/22 - Internet Safety. This provided advice on arrangements for preventing access to inappropriate material, the educational use of materials from blocked sites and the provision of information to parents. It also provided information about security considerations for those schools that have set up their own networks outside C2k's centrally managed service.

DE Circular 2013/25 – 'eSafety Guidance' was issued on 6 December 2013 and provides guidance on eSafety in the context of the new C2k contract, Education Network (NI) and also non C2k networks. The C2k managed service includes an eSafety Zone, which provides advice and guidance for teachers.

The C2k Education Network service provides schools with a fully managed ICT service thus ensuring pupils' safety while using the internet in school. This service operates a rigorous internet filtering policy which blocks access to sites classed as unsuitable. The service has in place internet monitoring, web and email filtering as well as physical controls such as firewalls and password protection.

ICT plays a central role in the Revised Curriculum with 'Using ICT' set as a cross-curricular skill, statutory across all key stages. While development of ICT skills can be introduced across all subject areas, at post –primary level, the 'Learning for Life and Work' Area of Learning and at primary level, the Personal Development and Mutual Understanding Area of learning, provide direct opportunities to allow pupils to develop strategies to promote their personal safety.

Information about on line safety is targeted directly to pupils. The homework diary inserts prepared and distributed through the 'iMatter' Programme include internet safety under the topic 'Keeping Yourself Safe'. Pupils are alerted to sources of advice and support if they have concerns about a contact over the internet. Advice is available to schools from the Boards' Child Protection Support Service for Schools (CPSSS) and from PSNI.

The 'iMatter' Programme's 'Message of the Month' will highlight 'eSafety Day' in February 2014 .

In other education settings where provision is made by the Education and Library Boards account must be taken of guidance issued by the Department.

Integrated Education: DE Commitment

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education why his Department's corporate plan 2012/15, or the 2013/14 revision, contain no reference to integrated education; and whether he will reaffirm his commitment, as required by statute to encourage and facilitate integrated education.

(AQW 29149/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has a duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education (that is to say the education together, at school, of Protestant and Roman Catholic pupils) and takes that duty seriously. Indeed work is currently progressing regarding the future development of integrated education.

The corporate plan sets out the high level actions to deliver on specific targets in 2013/14. There is a particular emphasis on Programme for Government targets, which identify progressing shared education as a key area. The work to progress shared education will take full and careful consideration of the Department's duty in relation to integrated education.

The Department's priority of raising standards and closing the performance gap applies across all schools. This in no way takes away from the Department's focus on encouraging the development of integrated education.

Integrated Education: DE Legal Obligation

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has to fulfil its legal obligations in respect of integrated education.

(AQW 29150/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department takes its statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education (i.e. the education together, at school, of Protestant and Roman Catholic pupils), very seriously, and will continue to do so.

To help with the facilitation of integrated education, my Department will continue to provide funding to the Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) to assist the development of integrated schools for public benefit. Funding of £646k has been allocated for 2013/14.

I have met with NICIE officials, twice in recent months, to discuss proposals to further promote and facilitate the development and growth of integrated education. I remain willing to consider further innovative approaches which will facilitate the development of the sector.

The Department of Education will also continue to provide funding to help schools with the process of transformation to integrated status. This supports schools in the initial stages of the transformation process and with the employment of a teacher, from the minority community in the school, to assist with religious education. The budget available for 2013/14 is £185k.

I recognise the vital and valuable contribution that integrated education, together with all other types of education, makes to building a peaceful and stable future for our children.

Going forward, the Department of Education will ensure that it continues to have a rigorous approach to its duty to integrated education.

Primary School Curriculum: Computer Coding

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education whether he has given any consideration to the introduction of computer coding into the primary curriculum.

(AQW 29185/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The revised curriculum has been designed to provide flexibility for schools to develop experiences that suit the needs of their pupils. Embedding mandatory, cross curricular skills and keeping prescribed content to a minimum, allows schools to choose the most appropriate approach to take to ensure that pupils are engaged and challenged, to reach their full potential.

Computer Science, which includes computer coding, is a specialised field and the flexibility already in place within the revised curriculum, enables schools to teach Computer Science in any Key Stage, including at primary school level, if they feel it appropriate.

At this time there are no plans to make computer programming mandatory in the revised curriculum. However, should schools feel it meets the needs of their pupils, there is sufficient flexibility in the curriculum to allow them to teach it.

In order to contribute to the skills gap in the ICT sector, the Department has commissioned the development and delivery of a bespoke computer programming continuum of practical pupil engagement activity covering Key Stage 2 – Post 16. The programme, co-financed by Department of Education, the Department for Employment and Learning and Invest NI, 'IT's Your Choice – A Computer Programming Continuum for Schools', was launched into schools in September 2013 and will engage approximately 10,000 pupils annually. This programme is being delivered as part of the ICT action plan which forms part of the Government's delivery of the Economic Strategy and aligns to the STEM Strategy 'Success Through STEM'.

Schools: Relationships and Sexuality Education

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education whether his department holds any information on (i) young people being shown abortion videos as part of their Relationship and Sex Education; and (ii) how often organisations such as Precious Life are given access to schools.

(AQW 29191/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not hold any information on young people being shown abortion videos or how often organisations such as Precious Life are given access to schools.

Legislation sets out the minimum content to be taught in schools as Areas of Learning (AOLs) for each Key Stage. The teaching of Relationships and Sexuality Education is covered by the Personal Development and Mutual Understanding Area of Learning at primary level and the Personal Development strand of the Learning for Life and Work Area of Learning at post-primary level. While the specifics of what is taught under each Area of Learning, including topics such as abortion, is a matter for each teacher/school, the Department does require each school to have in place a RSE policy on how it will address the delivery of RSE. This policy should be subject to consultation with parents and it must be endorsed by the school's Board of Governors.

The Department does not prescribe the resources that should be used by a school in its delivery of the curriculum. It is a matter for teachers/schools to determine the resources they use to enhance their delivery of the curriculum and this includes any decision to bring external organisations such as Precious Life into the classroom.

Schools: Relationships and Sexuality Education

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education whether he has given any consideration to an immediate review and subsequent change in the Northern Ireland Curriculum on Relationship and Sex Education.

(AQW 29192/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Reading this question in conjunction with other questions you have raised I am assuming that this question about a review and change to the curriculum would relate to prescribing specific teaching about abortion in our schools.

The revised curriculum which has been taught to all pupils of compulsory school age since 2009/10 is less prescriptive, with the minimum to be taught detailed in legislation as Areas of Learning (AOLs) for each Key Stage. It provides our teachers with greater flexibility to make decisions on how best to interpret and combine minimum requirements to provide a broad and balanced curriculum and adapt their teaching to meet the needs of individual pupils. In line with this flexibility the Department does not prescribe the specifics of what should be taught or the resources that teachers should use in their delivery of any aspect of the curriculum for each of the Areas of Learning.

The Department considers that the existing Minimum Content Regulations provide appropriate cover for the delivery of this element of RSE in the classroom. The Department has no plans to review or change its current policy of giving teachers/schools the flexibility to decide how to best deliver the curriculum to meet the needs of their pupils.

Schools: Relationships and Sexuality Education

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education whether he is aware of best practice in Relationship and Sex Education; and whether he has given any consideration to a minimum Relationship and Sex Education package issued by Education and Library Boards, to include stringent, standardised guidelines to be followed by all schools.

(AQW 29193/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: An ETI report published in 2011 on the provision of Relationship and Sexuality Education (RSE) in our post-primary schools does give evidence of best practice and cites helpful case studies. Overall the report provides a summary of the characteristics associated with best practice. One example is that there is a need for clear, informed and purposeful leadership from the Principal and the senior management team, ensuring that RSE has a significant role in the curriculum provision. The Department has decided to issue a letter to schools in the New Year, as it is some time since the report was published on the ETI website and they will make schools aware of the good practice characteristics identified in the report.

Regarding the latter part of your question I can confirm that the Department has not given any consideration to a minimum RSE package with stringent standardised guidelines to be followed by all schools.

The delivery of RSE within schools needs to be taken forward in a way that recognises and respects the ethos of individual schools and that involves the whole school community (including parents) in planning, delivery and review. All schools should have in place a policy for the delivery of RSE in their school. Parents should be consulted about the policy and it should be endorsed by the Board of Governors of the school.

In addition, a key strength of the revised curriculum is the flexibility it provides for our teachers to make decisions on how best to interpret and combine minimum requirements to provide a broad and balanced curriculum and adapt their teaching to meet the needs of individual pupils. This flexibility was introduced as a result of the feedback received during consultation with for example teachers, pupils, the business sector and parents.

Guidance on RSE is provided by the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA). This guidance makes schools aware of the wide range of resources available and provides a checklist to help schools determine which resources to use that are consistent with their school's morals and values framework. CCEA is currently taking forward work to revise RSE guidance and it is intended that new guidance will be available during 2014/15.

Schools: Relationships and Sexuality Education

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education to outline the reasons why Relationship and Sex Education is taught in Religious Education and not in subjects such as learning for life or biology.

(AQW 29195/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: All schools are required to have in place a RSE policy which sets out how the school will address RSE within the curriculum. A school's policy should be subject to consultation with parents and it should be endorsed by the Board of Governors of the school.

The main Areas of Learning within the revised curriculum for the delivery of Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) is Personal Development and Mutual Understanding (PDMU) at primary level and the Personal Development strand of the Learning for Life and Work Area of Learning at post-primary level.

However, I am aware from a report published by the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) in January 2011 about RSE provision in post-primary schools, that a variety of delivery models are used by schools. These range from provision as a module within Personal Development, as a discrete topic or a cross-curricular approach. The report indicated that over 83% of schools use more than one delivery method. A copy of the ETI report is accessible at <http://www.etini.gov.uk/index/surveys-evaluations/surveys-evaluations-post-primary/surveys-evaluations-post-primary-2011/report-of-an-evaluation-of-relationships-and-sexuality-education-in-post-primary-schools-2.pdf>.

If a cross-curricular approach to the delivery of RSE is being taken by a school, the revised curriculum includes a number of other Areas of Learning, such as Religious Education or Science, which could provide opportunities to develop pupils' knowledge and skills in this area. However, as with all aspects of the revised curriculum, the specifics of what is taught and how it is taught is a matter for each teacher/school.

Literacy and Numeracy: Delivering Social Change

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education to detail as of 1 December 2013 (i) the number of school teachers employed in post-primary schools under the signature project to provide numeracy support; (ii) the number of school teachers employed in post-primary schools under the signature project to provide literacy support; (iii) the number of unfilled signature project posts; and to detail (iv) the number of primary school teachers employed under the signature project prior to the 1 December 2013.

(AQW 29198/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As of 1 December 2013, under the Delivering Social Change Improving Literacy and Numeracy Project, a total of 135.5 Full Time Equivalent (FTE) teachers are employed in post-primary schools. These teachers have been employed either to provide direct support to pupils or to fill the post of a more experienced teacher released to provide the direct support. It is therefore difficult at this time to specify exactly the number of schools providing numeracy and/or literacy support as a number of schools are providing both.

As advised by the participating schools or the WELB for the centrally appointed teachers;

- (i) There are 72 FTE of teachers employed in post-primary schools to provide numeracy support.
- (ii) There are 54 FTE teachers employed in post-primary schools to provide literacy support.
- (iii) There are 45.2 FTE unfilled posts in the primary and post primary sectors as of 1 December 2013.
- (iv) There are 86 FTE teachers out of a total of 100.7 FTE teaching posts employed in primary schools.

Interviews took place in early December to appoint further teachers to the Signature Project.

North Eastern Education and Library Board: New Capital Developments

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) all primary schools in the North Eastern Education and Library Board area identified as requiring new capital development; and those identified as being priorities.

(AQW 29199/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my statement to the Assembly in January 2013, I announced the following Primary Schools in the North Eastern Education and Library Board area to advance in planning:

- St Mary's Primary School/Glenravel Primary School;
- Braidside Integrated Primary School;
- Corran Integrated Primary School, Larne;
- Craigback Primary School/Mullabuoy Primary School/Listress Primary School.

I had also announced a proposal to meet the needs of children in the Islandmagee area however following discussions with the NEELB the project announced at that time has been withdrawn. The NEELB is considering an alternative solution in that area.

The Department continues to work with all the managing authorities on the strategic planning of the schools' estate, including the potential for future capital investment. There will always be greater demand for investment than funds available and at such time as any future capital announcement is made it will take account of strategic priorities identified across all sectors.

Teachers: Work Days Lost and Flu-related Illnesses

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Education how many work-days were lost as a result of flu-related illnesses amongst the teaching profession in each of the last three academic years.

(AQW 29216/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of work days lost as a result of flu-related illnesses amongst the teaching profession in each of the last three academic years is as follows:

- 2010/2011 – 13,398
- 2011/2012 – 11,143.5
- 2012/2013 – 14,945

Schools: Pupil Spend

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the average spend per (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary pupil in the (a) maintained; (b) controlled; (c) integrated; (d) Irish medium sectors, in each of the last six years.

(AQW 29348/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not hold information on average spending per pupil. Such information would require disaggregation of central costs – e.g. administration and services such as transport, meals, Curriculum Advisory and Peripatetic Service etc. - which are not disaggregated at school or phase levels. In addition, overall expenditure will include grant-aided recurrent funding (and other non-public funds including voluntary contributions etc.), as well as capital expenditure - which, by its nature, is not regular or consistently applied across schools from year-to-year.

Every grant-aided school covered by the Common Funding Scheme receives a fully delegated budget for its day-to-day recurrent funding needs, distributed under the current Common Funding Formula arrangements. A breakdown of the budget allocations for the requested groups is provided below:

Average CFF Budget Per Pupil funding - 2008/09 to 2013/14

Schools: Home-to-school Transport

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the average spend on home to school transport per (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary pupil in the (a) maintained; (b) controlled; (c) integrated; (d) Irish medium sectors, in each of the last six years.

(AQW 29349/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The tables below show the average spend on Home to School Transport per (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary pupil in the maintained, controlled, integrated and Irish medium sectors, in each of the last four years. Data in the format requested is not available for the 2007/08 and 2008/09 years.

Primary

Year	Maintained	Controlled	Integrated	Irish Medium
2009/10	£783	£802	£737	£926
2010/11	£816	£810	£649	£862
2011/12	£745	£701	£651	£1,129
2012/13	£751	£696	£729	£1,227

Post-Primary

Year	Maintained	Controlled	Integrated	Irish Medium
2009/10	£667	£668	£646	£602
2010/11	£651	£654	£638	£828
2011/12	£639	£623	£616	£594
2012/13	£644	£644	£611	£603

NB. Data provided by the Education and Library Boards. Controlled Integrated schools are recorded under the Integrated heading, while Controlled Irish Medium (IM) schools are recorded under the Irish Medium heading. Figures for the Integrated sector include both Grant Maintained Integrated and Controlled Integrated schools. Some Boards record IM Units attached to Maintained schools under the Maintained heading, while others record such Units under IM.

Educational Psychologists: Waiting Times

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, during the period 1 September 2012 to 30 April 2013, what was the average waiting time between a pupil being referred to an educational psychologist and having their first appointment, broken down by Education and Library Board.

(AQW 29350/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have confirmed that the average waiting time between a pupil being referred to an educational psychologist and having their first appointment, during the period 1 September 2012 to 30 April 2013, is as follows:

BELB	33 days
NEELB	90 days
SEELB	278 days
SELB	60 days
WELB	75 days

These figures refer to Stage 3 (non-statutory assessments) as outlined in the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (COP).

With regard to the waiting time for an assessment in terms of statutory requirements, at Stage 4 of the COP, the ELBs consider the need for a statutory assessment of special educational needs which will include an assessment by an educational psychologist. ELBs have 16 weeks from the date that the ELB notifies the parents that it is considering making an assessment or from the date that the request to carry out an assessment is received by the ELB from the parent or the school to complete the assessment.

Early Years: Child Spend

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how much on average was spent per child on early years services, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 29352/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not hold information on average spending per child as some funding (for example costs of central administration, capital) cannot be disaggregated to obtain an average amount spend per child on early years services.

In 2013/14 the Department has invested over £213 million¹ in a range of early years education and learning services. Further information on the range of early years education and learning services funded by the Department, including the number of children and families taking part, are detailed in the Learning to Learn framework available on the DE website.

Investment in the range of early years education and learning (excluding capital and costs such as central administrative expenditure which cannot be disaggregated by school sector) is detailed for each of the five years to 2012/13 in the following table.

¹ All nursery schools who meet the Extended Schools eligibility criteria, which are indicators of social disadvantage, are eligible for additional funding to provide a range of activities outside of the normal school day which aim to respond to the needs of pupils, parents and their families as identified by school principals.

Provision	2008/09 £m	2009/10 £m	2010/11 £m	2011/12 £m	2012/13 £m
Nursery Schools	17.067	17.614	17.940	18.287	18.268
Nursery Classes/Units within Primary Schools ¹	18.629	19.547	20.196	21.162	21.719
Voluntary/Private pre-school settings	10.267	10.418	13.032	14.057	14.818
Sure Start	17.561	20.666	21.935	21.600	22.352

Foundation Stage ² (Yr 1 & 2)	103.96	113.108	117.788	118.731	120.744
Total	£169.995	£184.246	£193.843	£196.610	£200.736

1 Common Funding Formula (CFF) Budget - identifiable funding only - other funding for these year groups/pupils cannot be disaggregated from the schools' overall budget

2 Identifiable funding only – includes core per pupil AWPU funding for all years, plus Foundation Stage funding within CFF for 2009/10 to 2012/13. There were separate earmarked funds for Making a Good Start and Foundation in the 2008/09 year only, subsequently incorporated into the CFF from 2009/10.

Education: Legal Cases Lost by DE

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 25026/11-15, to provide details of each case the Department lost. (AQW 29355/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Details of the cases lost by the Department of Education between May 2007 and July 2013 are:

- Henry Bros (Magherafelt) Ltd, FB McKee & Co Ltd and Desmond Scott and Philip Ewing Trading as Woodvale Construction Co v Department of Education;
- Loreto Grammar School, Omagh v Department of Education;
- Colma McKee on behalf of the Board of Governors of Coláiste Feirste v Department of Education; and
- Lynda O'Connor, Richard Kehoe and Catherine McLucas v Department of Education.

Legal Action: ELBs/HSCTs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 28762/11-15, on how many occasions each Education and Library Board has taken legal action against a Health and Social Care Trust in respect of these circumstances, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 29364/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have advised that no legal action has been taken over the last three years against a Health and Social Care Trust.

North Down: Oversubscribed Preschools

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education whether extra capacity is available for over-subscribed nursery schools and units in the North Down Borough Council area.

(AQW 29371/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: For admission to pre-school in September 2013, 99.8% of children, whose parents engaged with the pre-school admissions process to the end, obtained a funded pre-school place. There were sufficient pre-school places in North Down to meet overall demand.

If the Managing Authority of an oversubscribed nursery school or unit wishes permanently to increase its capacity, it can bring forward a development proposal to request an increase to the number of places available in the setting. Decisions on Development Proposals take into account the current and projected future demand for pre-school provision in the area, including provision available in other pre-school settings.

The Learning to Learn framework includes an action to introduce temporary flexibility in class size for nursery schools and nursery units up to a maximum class size of 30 in certain circumstances. I am introducing temporary flexibility in class size to help address demand within an area where statutory settings, which could accommodate extra places, wish to do so. All requests will be considered on the basis of overall capacity in the area. Officials are currently working with Education and Library Board staff to develop a system for enabling Nursery Schools and Nursery Units to apply for temporary flexibility in class size for the September 2014 intake.

Schools: Republic of Ireland Pupils

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many pupils residing in the Republic of Ireland attend schools in Northern Ireland; and what arrangements his Department has in place to monitor and recoup any costs associated with these pupils. (AQW 29386/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of pupils residing in the South attending schools in the North is shown below.

School type	Total pupils
Primary (Years 1-7 only)	132
Post Primary	275
Total	407

Source: School census 2012/13

Note: In addition to the figures above there are also less than 5 pupils attending nursery/reception classes in primary schools who are resident in the Republic of Ireland.

A number of children resident in the South attend primary and post primary schools and pre-school providers in the North and vice versa. This is reflective of the way people in border areas live and avail of services including education.

There is an understanding with the Department in the South where we meet the costs of educating children from the South attending schools in the North, and they meet the costs of educating children from the North attending schools in the South.

Integrated Education: Transformation

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education which (i) statutory; and (ii) sectoral bodies are responsible for providing support to (a) Irish Medium; (ii) nursery; (iii) Catholic Maintained; and (iv) Grammar schools that wish to explore transformation. (AQW 29389/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Support to any grant-aided school (with the exception of special schools) wishing to explore transformation, and those schools that have already transformed, is available from a range of organisations. The statutory bodies which can provide support include the Education and Library Boards. Each Education and Library Board has arrangements in place to support schools that have transformed or wish to transform.

The Transferors Representative Council (TRC) and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) can also provide advice to schools that wish to undertake, or have already undertaken, the transformation process.

Sectoral bodies which can provide support to any grant-aided school (with the exception of special schools) that wish to undertake, or have already undertaken, the transformation process include the Integrated Education Fund (IEF), and the Council for Integrated Education (NICIE). Transforming schools can apply to the IEF for a grant to help with the additional costs of the transformation process. NICIE can provide support through the provision of training, and has developed a support programme which guides schools through the planning and implementation processes to help the school to achieve full integration.

Once a school has transformed, the Department of Education can provide support through the allocation of additional resources to assist with the transformation process. This funding is available to schools during the first five years of transformation. Funding of £185k has been made available for 2013/14.

The Department may also reimburse a school's Boards of Governors for the fees charged by the Electoral Reform Services in connection with holding the transformation ballot of parents.

Full details of the advice and support available to schools is contained with the Department's document entitled "Transformation – An Information Pack for Schools".

Integrated Education: Transformation

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education which (i) statutory; and (ii) sectoral bodies are responsible for providing support to (a) Irish Medium; (ii) nursery; (iii) Catholic Maintained; and (iv) Grammar schools that have undertaken transformation.

(AQW 29390/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Support to any grant-aided school (with the exception of special schools) wishing to explore transformation, and those schools that have already transformed, is available from a range of organisations. The statutory bodies which can provide support include the Education and Library Boards. Integrated Education: Transformation

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to outline the support available to schools from the relevant statutory and sectoral bodies once they have transformed.

(AQW 29391/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Support to any grant-aided school (with the exception of special schools) wishing to explore transformation, and those schools that have already transformed, is available from a range of organisations. The statutory bodies which can provide support include the Education and Library Boards. Schools: Pupils' Religious Background

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to detail the percentage of Catholic and Protestant pupils at (i) controlled; (ii) Catholic maintained; (iii) other maintained; and (iv) voluntary grammar schools.

(AQW 29393/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The most up-to-date validated figures for pupil's religious information relate to the 2012/13 school year, these are detailed in the table below. Updated 2013/14 figures will be available following the completion of the annual school census which is currently being undertaken.

Community background of pupils in primary schools by management type -2012/13

Management type	School type	Protestant	Catholic	Other
Controlled	Primary	70.1%	6.2%	23.7%

Schools: Republic of Ireland Pupils

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what financial support the Republic of Ireland Government provides for the teaching of pupils from their jurisdiction in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 29438/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I would refer the member to the answer I provided to his question, AQW 13582/11-15, published in the Official report on 20 July 2013. The arrangements have not changed.

Education: Cross-border Survey

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education when his Department will release the report on the extent of cross-border education and its associated costs.

(AQW 29439/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The purpose of the survey commissioned by the North South Ministerial Council (NSMC) was to gauge attitudes towards, and future demand for, cross-border education and to identify any obstacles that may be faced by parents and pupils in the border region.

As the survey was commissioned by the NSMC, and as yet, it has not had the opportunity to consider the results, it is intended that a report of the outcomes will only be made public once the Council has completed its considerations and authorised publication.

Moy, County Tyrone: Shared Education

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Shared Education Project in Moy, County Tyrone. (AQW 29453/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware that the SELB and CCMS, as the school managing authorities, are currently working on the details for a proposed Shared Education Project in Moy.

Once my Department receives the details of the proposal it will consider the next steps.

Education: North Coast Campus

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed North Coast Educational Campus, Coleraine. (AQW 29472/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In the first instance it will be for the NEELB as the managing authority and the two integrated schools, to determine and agree the best way forward including any proposals to co-locate schools and share facilities.

I am aware that the concept of a campus for the North Coast is being considered. Department officials have met with some of those involved and been appraised of their proposals. It will be for the NEELB, as the planning authority for the area, working in conjunction with the two integrated schools to determine the next steps in developing this, or any other area solution for the North Coast area.

Education and Library Boards: Staff

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of full time equivalent staff employed by each of the Education and Library Boards as of 1 December 2013.

(AQW 29473/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of people employed in the Education and Library Boards as of 1 December 2013 is as follows:

	Non teaching staff (FTE)
BELB	3344.03
WELB	1853
NEELB	3875.4
SEELB	3385.06
SELB	4518.24

Notes:

- Figures include Headquarter staff, school based non-teaching staff, out centre and youth club staff. Teaching staff are not included.
- WELB figure is rounded up to nearest whole number.
- SEELB figure excludes all casual staff who are employed on a nil hours basis.

Education and Library Boards: Staff

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the total number of full time equivalent staff employed by each of the Education and Library Boards in each of the last 5 years.

(AQW 29474/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of full time equivalent staff employed in the Education and Library Boards in each of the last 5 years is as follows:

	As at 1/12/08	As at 1/12/09	As at 1/12/10	As at 1/12/11	As at 1/12/12
BELB	3079.14	3001.59	3080.32	3066.65	3143.61
WELB	1883	1875	1860	1846	1820
NEELB	3850.2	3778.4	3782.7	3786.6	3845.9
SEELB	3273.78	3265.01	3256.11	3227.72	3246.10
SELB	4579.49	4472.82	4411.83	4369.26	4399.63

Notes:

- Figures include Headquarter staff, school based non-teaching staff, out centre and youth club staff. Teaching staff are not included.

- WELB figures are rounded up to nearest whole number.
- SEELB total excludes all casual staff who are employed on a nil hours basis.

Education and Library Boards: Staff

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education whether he intends to allow the Education and Library Boards to increase their staffing levels.

(AQW 29475/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware that the Education and Library Boards are generally in a state that is unsustainable. They remain in this state in the protracted absence of ESA. I therefore continue to press urgently for progress on the Education Bill.

In the meantime, my Department is currently considering proposals for a modest increase in staff in a number of priority areas.

Education Bill: Update

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Education Bill; and the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 29476/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education Bill completed its Committee Stage on 8 April, 2013. The depleted state of existing structures means that it is now very urgent that the Executive agrees the Bill's progress to Consideration Stage. The establishment of the ESA can then follow at the earliest opportunity after the legislative stages of the Education Bill have been completed.

Education Bill: Amendments

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) whether his Department has drafted a paper on a proposed way forward on the Education Bill, and (ii) if so, the options contained within it.

(AQW 29477/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are a number of amendments to the Bill which I intend to move at consideration stage, subject to the prior agreement of my Executive colleagues. I hope that the Executive will agree these amendments in the very near future.

Education: OECD Country Background Report

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to place, in the Assembly Library, a copy of the submission by his Department entitled the Country Background Report prepared for the OECD Reviews of Evaluation and Assessment in Education Northern Ireland, United Kingdom referred in para page 2 of the Report.

(AQW 29488/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A copy of the Country Background Report had been placed in the Assembly Library. The Report is also available from the Department's website at <http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/curriculum-and-learningt-new/curriculum-and-assessment-2/assessment.htm>

Education: Generalisability Study on Levels of Progression

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education (i) when his Department tasked CCEA with conducting a Generalizability Study on Levels of Progression; and (ii) if such a study has not been conducted, to explain why.

(AQW 29489/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has not tasked CCEA with conducting a Generalizability Study on Levels of Progression. There are no extant reports which are specific Generalizability Studies of the Levels of Progression. If a Generalizability Study was to be commissioned by the Department, it is not clear how the relevance of such a study to the nature and purpose of the Levels of Progression and assessment of the cross-curricular skills would be determined and defined.

The primary purpose of the Levels of Progression is to support learning and teaching in the classroom by providing a common framework for the ongoing, formative assessment of pupil progress and to articulate clear expectations for student achievement at the end of the Key Stages.

To this end, the assessment arrangements are based on ongoing teacher observation and assessment. Teachers form rounded, holistic judgements about the Level that a pupil has attained, based on the pupil's performance as a whole, across a range of work. This form of assessment can potentially have a high degree of validity as teachers are able to obtain an in-depth picture of pupil performance through their daily observations in the classroom.

The quality assurance process of internal standardisation and external moderation is intended to strengthen the reliability of teacher assessments and comparability of results throughout the school system. This is accompanied by the provision of training, exemplification of standards and exemplar tasks to promote confidence amongst schools in the standards being applied.

Education: Generalisability Study on Levels of Progression

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to publish any extant reports on the generalizability of the levels of progression provided to his Department by CCEA.

(AQW 29490/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has not tasked CCEA with conducting a Generalizability Study on Levels of Progression. There are no extant reports which are specific Generalizability Studies of the Levels of Progression. If a Generalizability Study was to be commissioned by the Department, it is not clear how the relevance of such a study to the nature and purpose of the Levels of Progression and assessment of the cross-curricular skills would be determined and defined.

The primary purpose of the Levels of Progression is to support learning and teaching in the classroom by providing a common framework for the ongoing, formative assessment of pupil progress and to articulate clear expectations for student achievement at the end of the Key Stages.

Department for Employment and Learning

Steps 2 Success

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline (i) the delivery partners for Steps2Success by contract area; and (ii) why locally based companies are not widely represented.

(AQW 28384/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning):

- (i) The procurement process for the delivery of the Steps 2 Success employment programme has been carried out by the Department for Employment & Learning under the guidance of the Central Procurement Directorate of the Department of Finance and Personnel. Following the evaluation of responses to Stage 1 of the two stage procurement process for Steps 2 Success the following organisations have been selected to bring forward bids to Stage 2:

Contract Area 1: Andersonstown, Bangor, North Belfast, Falls, Holywood Road, Knockbreda, Lisburn, Newtownards, Shaftesbury Square, Shankill.

Name of Organisations

| ■ Avanta Enterprise Ltd | ■ G4S |
| ■ Reed in Partnership | ■ Maximus Employment & Training Ltd |
| ■ Sencia Ltd | ■ South West College |

- (ii) All bids received were assessed by a panel of senior staff in the Department under the direction of the Central Procurement Directorate (CPD). At Stage 1 bidding organisations were not required to submit information on members of their supply chain. The supply chain delivery partners will not be known until the conclusion of Stage 2 of the procurement process. CPD on behalf of the Department for Employment and Learning let all bidding organisations know the results of Stage 1 on Monday 18 November 2013. The results were subsequently published on the Department for Employment & Learning website on 29 November.

Since the procurement exercise is ongoing it may prejudice the outcome of the competition if further information is released at this time.

Disability: Access to DEL Information

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline how his Department informs young people with a disability and their families, how they can access information regarding guidance and support available to them.

(AQW 29019/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) aims to ensure that clients with a disability can access information to the Department's key programmes and services as follows:

Careers Service

The Careers Service provides access to impartial guidance and support to all including those with a disability and their families through a network of professional qualified careers advisers who are based in JobCentres, Jobs and Benefit Offices and Careers Offices throughout Northern Ireland.

To ensure that pupils in education have access to appropriate careers guidance, the Careers Service has Partnership Agreements in place with 98% of post primary schools including special schools. Careers advisers attend Transition Plan meetings for year 10 pupils with a disability and their parents. These meetings enable the young person and their parents/guardians to access information and guidance regarding the options and support available to them on leaving school.

To improve access the Careers Service has also established working relationships with statutory, voluntary and community sector bodies across Northern Ireland who have a shared interest in supporting clients vulnerable to social exclusion.

The Careers Service has developed "A guide for Parents – How to help your child with their future careers plans", to assist parents/guardians to support their children in future planning and to provide information on the different aspects of careers information, advice and guidance. Careers advisers also attend parents' events to provide careers information advice and guidance.

Young people with a disability can also contact the Careers Service via a single contact telephone number or through the Careers portal on Nidirect.

Disability Employment Service (DES)

Young people and their families can access information on DES services and programmes through the Jobs & Benefits office/ JobCentre network and local disability organisations who deliver on behalf of my Department.

DES staff are keen to deliver information on its services on request and have attended events such as the NAS Adult and Parent group this year to inform parents and young people with disabilities. DES' Occupational Psychology Service staff have also assisted some discrete learning students by facilitating visits to Jobs & Benefits offices in advance of leaving college, and have also engaged with Education Board Transition Officers in Western Education Board to provide information on DES programmes and services.

Pathways to Success

Collaboration and Innovation Fund (CIF)

CIF is one of the employment initiatives developed under the Executive's 'Pathways to Success' strategy for young people aged 16-24 who are not in education, employment or training (NEET).

Individual CIF projects use a range of methods to provide young people, including those with disabilities, with information on their activities including the distribution of leaflets, advertising in public areas and through public bodies, social media, web sites, recruitment events, liaison with other community groups and cold calling at young people's homes.

Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS)

The Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS) was extended to all areas of Northern Ireland in July 2013.

LEMIS is a community-based employment-focused initiative aimed at those furthest from the labour market. LEMIS Mentors meet clients with a common employability barrier in their local area. Benefit recipients on Incapacity Benefit/Employment Support Allowance and Severe Disablement Allowance are included in the priority client group.

Community Family Support Programme (CFSP)

The Community Family Support Programme (CFSP) is an initiative designed to help families make life changing decisions to enhance their prospects and support them to become full participants in society.

Professional support workers engage and consult with parents of children and young people to promote early intervention and high quality parenting and to identify solutions to address their specific needs. This includes help for young people that may have a disability and their families to access a range of support and specialist provision.

Training for Success (including Programme Led Apprenticeship)

My Department provides Pre-Entry Training Support referral for school-leavers with a disability who indicate a preference for Training for Success. Clients are referred, after parental/ guardian consent, by my Department's careers advisers to contracted specialist support providers specialising in disability and learning support. This ensures that support needs in training are identified and put in place as soon as possible after commencement of training to ensure they are given every opportunity to overcome difficulties.

Specialist support providers such as Disability Action and Sensory Learning Support etc are contracted by my Department to work in conjunction with Training Suppliers delivering these programmes

Further Education

My Department has helped fund two online tools which are designed to help provide information and guidance to existing and potential students with a disability, to encourage them to access and benefit from further education (FE).

The online tools are:

- an information resource hub on the CollegesNI website to signpost services for existing and potential learners, to improve access to information about college provision, services and the availability of learning support services; and
- access guides entitled "DisabledGo" for students with disabilities which provide information on campus layout and on hearing systems, lighting levels and signage. The guides help disabled learners, visitors and staff to access college premises and make best use of facilities.

FE colleges provide advice and guidance to all students enrolling with a learning difficulty or disability on the support and assistance available to them through their student services network.

Higher Education

"Access to Success aims to widen participation in higher education by students from under-represented groups, including disabled persons, through a number of projects which include an awareness raising campaign to promote the benefits of higher education and a campaign to raise aspiration and educational attainment. The strategy also aims to expand the outreach activities of higher education providers to promote higher education as 'a real possibility' to young people with disabilities and learning difficulties, their parents and advocates.

To assist persons with a disability or learning difficulty to access Higher Education and fulfil their potential, my Department makes available funding through Disabled Students' Allowances (DSA) to help pay the extra costs which may be incurred in attending a course of study, as a direct result of a disability, mental health condition or specific learning difficulty. DSA can help with the cost of major items of specialist equipment, travel and other costs. My Department provides information on the support available through an annually produced "Guide to the Disabled Students' Allowances (DSAs) in Higher Education".

In addition, my Department funds a register of freelance professional and non-professional support providers in each of the two Northern Ireland universities who are recruited and trained to assist students with disabilities. The support needs of each student are assessed and they are "matched" with a support provider(s). Disabled students can avail of a range of support providers including dyslexic coach, note-taker, proof-reader, typist, campus assistant, library assistant and/or sign language interpreter. The role of the support provider is to provide one-to-one support to the student and also to ensure that the student receives all the additional assistance he/she needs.

In addition to specific programmes and services information my Department uses the NI direct website www.nidirect.gov.uk to provide information on the full range of services, information and support provided by my Department including how to access these services.

My Department also has a range of freely available promotional literature detailing its services and appropriate contacts. This is distributed through the 35 local Jobs & Benefits offices and JobCentres and to various voluntary and statutory organisations through Northern Ireland.

South West Regional College: Cookstown Campus

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 27902/11-15, to detail (i) the titles of the courses delivered at the Cookstown campus of South West Regional College which were included in the audit; (ii) any additional funding allocated to the courses; and (iii) the numbers enrolled in each course in each of the last two years.

(AQW 29051/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) As my Department did not hold the specific information relating to the titles of the individual courses provided under the audit, officials sought the information required from South West College (SWC).

As a result of the information provided, my Department has determined that, at the point when the audit was undertaken, SWC was delivering four courses for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability aged 19 or over, not six as previously advised as part of the audit.

These courses were as follows:

- NOCN Level 1 Certificate In Skills Towards Enabling Progression (Step-UP) (QCF)/On Board PLP (Full-time)
- NOCN Level 1 Certificate In Skills Towards Enabling Progression (Step-UP) (QCF) (Part-time)
- CCEA Level 1 Award in Creative Craft (QCF)/ON Board PLP
- Recreational Cookery/On Board PLP

Whilst SWC did run a further two unaccredited courses during this period, this provision was not primarily delivered for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability aged 19 or over. I apologise for any confusion this may have caused. These two courses were:

- Fabric Crafts
- Recreational IT For Beginners

These two courses were offered as discrete provision in conjunction with the Beacon Centre, and were eligible for supplementary funding from the Department's Additional Support Fund.

My officials instructed SWC to carry out a new audit of provision covering the 2012/13 academic year, in order to provide the Department with a complete list of provision for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability, across all campuses. This information is attached at Annex A which has been placed in the Assembly Library and on my department's website at <http://www.delni.gov.uk/>. The information provided is for the entire 2012/13 academic year, and not solely at the point of the audit (April 2013).

- (ii) The Additional Support Fund (ASF) is provided to further education colleges to help them to meet their obligations under the Special Educational Needs and Disability (NI) Order 2005 (SEND0) to provide access to those wishing to avail of FE provision, but who have a learning difficulty or disability. The level of support is determined on an individual basis, based on the needs of the student and not the nature of the disability.

SWC received £250,049 from the Additional Support Fund to help to deliver these classes for the period covered by the audit of provision (2012/13). It is not possible to break this figure down on a campus by campus basis.

- (iii) In 2011/12, SWC has indicated that they provided two courses at the Cookstown Campus for students with a learning difficulty and/or disability aged 19 or over. The course titles and enrolment figures are set out in the table below.

In addition, the table also provides details on the numbers of enrolments on the four courses identified under part (i).

2011/12	No of enrolments
Asdan Entry Level Certificate in Personal and Social Development - Year 1	22
NOCN Entry Level Award In Progression (Entry 3) (QCF)	6
2012/13
NOCN Level 1 Certificate In Skills Towards Enabling Progression (Step-UP) (QCF)/ On Board PLP (Full-time)	7
NOCN Level 1 Certificate In Skills Towards Enabling Progression (Step-UP) (QCF) (Part-time)	28
CCEA Level 1 Award in Creative Craft (QCF)/ON Board PLP	8
Recreational Cookery/On Board PLP	14

Enrolment information supplied by SWC.

Knowledge Economy Index Report

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the third Knowledge Economy Index Report, and its findings which state that the local knowledge economy, in key areas such as software, aerospace and biotech, is growing faster than in the rest of the UK and that jobs in the knowledge economy are paying 25 percent more than the average wage

(AQW 29052/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Knowledge Economy is an important and growing component of the Northern Ireland economy which represents research intensive sectors where new ideas, new products and new processes are key determinants of competitiveness.

The report provides an ambitious vision for the Northern Ireland economy in 2030 and it will be essential that business and government work together in partnership to realise this vision. The report demonstrates that good progress has been made over the last year with the evidence showing that growth has been achieved in fourteen out of the twenty one indicators that make up the Index. However, whilst our performance over the last year has improved, Northern Ireland is ranked tenth out of the twelve UK regions which indicates the challenge we face if our economy is to grow and match the best performing regions in the UK.

It is clear that skills, employability and innovative capacity will be essential if we are to grow our knowledge economy and to close the gap with the best performing regions in the UK. The Department's Skills Strategy will be essential to realising this ambition as it identifies skills as a crucial ingredient in both rebalancing and rebuilding our economy. At the heart of the Strategy is the desire to up-skill the existing workforce and to increase the number of people with higher level skills within the workforce.

The higher education sector makes a key contribution to the achievement of economic prosperity in Northern Ireland. It does so in part by providing a supply of highly qualified graduates across a range of disciplines with the skills and attributes sought by employers. It is also widely recognised that higher skills generate higher returns to individuals in terms of employment and wages.

The Department's Higher Education Strategy for Northern Ireland – 'Graduating to Success', aims to create a higher education sector which is more responsive to needs of our economy and sets out the importance of ensuring that higher education learners undertake higher level courses in economically relevant subjects.

To support growth in our local economy my Department has committed to increase the number of directly funded PhD places. Under "Graduating to Success" we have set a target of doubling the number of postgraduate awards to 1,000 by 2020. This will further strengthen Northern Ireland's research and development skills base and the introduction of these places will have a vital role to play in our economic competitiveness. These new places will be focussed on areas of economic relevance to Northern Ireland as determined with reference to the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy, DETI and MATRIX.

Graduating to Success also feeds into the implementation of the overarching Skills Strategy and reinforces the need to increase the proportion of those qualifying from our Higher Education Institutions with graduate and post graduate level courses in science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) subjects.

I have also increased the funding available to the universities for economically relevant Masters course which has enabled the universities to increase recruitment in areas such as graduate conversion IT software development courses. I have also introduced a new higher education research funding model which rewards world-leading and internationally excellent research whilst providing a premium for research in STEM and priority skills areas.

Universities: Northern Ireland Students in GB

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many local students attended universities in other parts of the United Kingdom in each of the last three years.

(AQW 29087/11-15)

Dr Farry: The number of Northern Ireland domiciled students enrolled at universities in other parts of the United Kingdom in each of the last three years is detailed in the table below:

Academic Year	England	Scotland	Wales	Total
2009/10	11,225	4,605	515	16,345
2010/11	11,690	4,520	515	16,725
2011/12	12,500	4,440	570	17,510

Source: Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA)

Notes:

1. The latest available data are for the 2011/12 academic year.
2. Enrolments include undergraduate and post graduate students and fulltime and part time students.
3. Figures for NI domiciled first year enrolments at the Open University have been excluded from the above table. Although the Open University is defined as an English Institution it is likely that any NI domiciled enrolments will not be based in England.
4. For information the number of first year Northern Ireland domiciled student enrolments at the Open University is provided in the table below: -

Academic Year	NI Domiciled enrolments at Open University
2009/10	4,625
2010/11	4,865
2011/12	4,820

South East Regional College: Enrolments

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many people are currently enrolled in courses at the South East Regional College.

(AQW 29133/11-15)

Dr Farry: The latest available validated and published data held by DEL relate to the 2012/13 academic year. The College itself has provided DEL with an in-year total of 12,130 people enrolled in courses at the South Eastern Regional College thus far in the 2013/14 academic year (source: South Eastern Regional College Management Information System).

South East Regional College: Budget

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the current budget for the South East Regional College.

(AQW 29135/11-15)

Dr Farry: The further education recurrent block grant allocation for South Eastern Regional College for the 2013/14 academic year is £24,626,910. The college will also receive £5.9million, ring fenced to meet its obligations under a Public Private Partnership contract agreement, for accommodation at its Lisburn, Downpatrick, Ballynahinch and Newcastle campuses. In addition, £9.5million has been made available sector-wide for specific purposes including widening participation in further education and the promotion of innovation. This amount is allocated through demand-led ear-marked funds, and as such cannot be disaggregated to college level at this stage in the academic year.

South East Regional College: Staff

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many staff are employed by the South East Regional College.

(AQW 29140/11-15)

Dr Farry: Further education colleges are employing authorities in their own right and are responsible for all matters relating to staff. My Department does not hold the information on the number of staff employed by individual further education colleges.

Therefore, I have asked the Principal and Chief Executive of South Eastern Regional College to respond to the Member directly on this matter.

South East Regional College: Courses

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many courses are on offer at the South East Regional College.

(AQW 29142/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold the information requested by the Member, as information relating to the number of courses on offer is a matter for individual colleges.

I have asked the Director of South East Regional College to respond to the Member directly on this matter.

Apprenticeships: Programme Led

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the reason why Programme Led Apprenticeships are only available to Level 2 qualification.

(AQW 29219/11-15)

Dr Farry: Programme-Led Apprenticeships were introduced in 2009 in response to the difficulties being experienced by young people in securing employment to complete their apprenticeship through ApprenticeshipsNI as a result of the economic downturn.

With the award of the Training for Success contracts in June 2013, the Programme-Led Apprenticeships programme was closed to new entrants.

In cases where all components of the Level 2 framework were achieved, and where the participant was still under the guaranteed training entitlement, the Programme-Led Apprenticeship programme facilitated the commencement of Level 3 qualifications.

The new Training for Success programme also allows for Level 3 provision.

A priority for my Department is to progress programme participants into full-time employment and, where possible, the employer-led ApprenticeshipsNI provision. Progression may also be in the form of further or higher education.

Apprenticeships: Frameworks

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the trades in which apprentices can carry out a funded (i) Level 2; and (ii) Level 3 apprenticeship.

(AQW 29221/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department's ApprenticeshipsNI programme funds the "off-the-job" training element of an apprenticeship aligned to over 140 apprenticeship frameworks at Levels 2 and 3. Table 1 (overleaf) provides a full breakdown of funded frameworks.

As the member will be aware, in February I announced a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Table 1 ApprenticeshipsNI Apprenticeship Frameworks Level 2 and level 3

Group One	Framework available
	Level 2	Level 3
Accounting	Yes	Yes
Advice and Guidance Support	Yes	No
Aviation Operations on the Ground	Yes	No

North Antrim: Youth Employment

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail how many people, aged between 18 and 24, have obtained permanent employment as a result of the Youth Employment Scheme in North Antrim.

(AQW 29242/11-15)

Dr Farry: A total of 118 young people have availed of a placement through the Youth Employment Scheme within the North Antrim constituency, the area served by Ballymena and Ballymoney Jobs & Benefits offices, and 46 of these young people have entered permanent employment.

North Antrim: Management and Leadership Interventions

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the Management and Leadership Development Programme Initiatives in the North Antrim constituency.

(AQW 29243/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department offers a suite of leadership and management interventions across Northern Ireland, which aim to improve the skills of both companies and individual managers. This suite comprises the Management Analysis and Planning (MAP) Programme, the Management and Leadership Development Programme (MLDP), and the INTRO Graduate management development programme – 30 different interventions in all. Since April 2013 these interventions have been fully funded for interested companies and participants.

During the last three years, in the North Antrim constituency area 15 companies have taken up the MAP programme; 89 individual managers have participated in MLDP; and 17 graduates have participated on the INTRO Graduate Management Development Programme. A total of £165,118 in funding has been provided to date. In addition, focused leadership and management roadshow events were held in Ballymena and Bushmills, providing details of available leadership and management support as well as providing leadership themed talks by leading UK experts.

NEETs: Figures

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of young people who are Not in Education, Employment or Training broken down by constituency.

(AQW 29291/11-15)

Dr Farry: Northern Ireland does not have a comprehensive data source on those young people Not in Employment, Full time Education or Training (NEET). Estimates are derived from a sample survey for Northern Ireland as part of the overall Labour Force Survey (LFS), and it is not possible to disaggregate the figures further. Figures for Quarter 3 (July-September) 2013 estimate the number of young people aged 16-24 who are NEET to be 48,000 or 22.1% of the population in that age group.

Universities: STEM Enrolments

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths students, broken down by university.

(AQW 29323/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details (a) the number of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths PHD student enrolments and (b) the overall number of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths student enrolments, broken down by university.

	Queen's University of Belfast	University of Ulster	Stranmillis University College	Total
Ph.D enrolments on Narrow STEM	654	329	0	983
Overall enrolments on Narrow STEM	5,290	5489	143	10,922

Notes:

1. The latest available data on enrolments are for academic year 2011/12.
2. Narrow STEM subjects include Biological Sciences, Physical Sciences, Mathematical Sciences, Computer Science and Engineering & Technology.

Universities: STEM Enrolments

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths PHD students, broken down by university.

(AQW 29324/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details (a) the number of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths PHD student enrolments and (b) the overall number of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths student enrolments, broken down by university.

	Queen's University of Belfast	University of Ulster	Stranmillis University College	Total

Queen's University Belfast: Teacher Training/Religious Background

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for a religious breakdown of the students in teacher training at Queen's University, Belfast.

(AQW 29334/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details the number of Northern Ireland domiciled students enrolled in teacher training at Queen's University, Belfast broken down by religion.

Religion	Enrolments on Teacher Training at Queen's University, Belfast
Protestant	70
Catholic	80
Other/Not Known	15
Total	165

Source: Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA)

Notes:

1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5.
2. The latest available data are for 2011/12.
3. Information on religion is only collected for NI domiciled students studying at NI Higher Education Institutions and therefore the above tables do not include students from outside NI.
4. Religious affiliation is not a mandatory question and therefore can have a high non-response rate.

Apprenticeships: Armed Forces Veterans

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of Armed Forces Veterans who have progressed into employment through the Apprenticeships Northern Ireland programme, broken down by gender.
(AQW 29354/11-15)

Dr Farry: It is the responsibility of employers to recruit apprentices in line with their business needs and so it is employers that hold information in relation to the previous employment of new recruits.

My Department funds the 'off-the-job' training element of an apprenticeship and so holds information on the apprentice's current employer. My Department does not hold information on the apprentice's employment history.

Girdwood Community Hub: Timescale

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the timescale for the completion and opening of the new Belfast Metropolitan College facility at Girdwood, North Belfast.
(AQW 29395/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Girdwood Community Hub in North Belfast is a Belfast City Council project which is being supported with European PEACE III funding. Belfast Metropolitan College is not involved in the construction stage of the project but, on its completion, plans to lease part of the facility for the delivery of further education. I understand that some preliminary design work has been completed but the detailed timetable for the delivery of the facility is the responsibility of the Belfast City Council.

University of Ulster: Senior Common Room

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the decision by the University of Ulster to close the senior common room to university students and staff; (ii) to provide details of all incoming and outgoing correspondence on this issue; and (iii) whether he will seek to reverse the decision by the University.
(AQW 29506/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The University of Ulster is responsible for its own policies and procedures, including how it manages accommodation on its campuses. The closure of the area occupied by the Senior Common Room is a matter for the University and it is not within my remit to intervene.

My Department has received and responded to two pieces of correspondence in relation to this issue.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Warm Homes Discount Scheme

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why the Warm Home Discount Scheme, available in England, for electricity is not available in Northern Ireland; and what action he will take to extend eligibility locally.
(AQW 28791/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): The Warm Homes Discount Scheme is a four year scheme operating in Great Britain only and is covered by legislation which does not apply in Northern Ireland.

The introduction of such a scheme is akin to a social tariff as energy companies in Northern Ireland would almost certainly be entitled to pass the cost of such a scheme on to other customers (as they are in Great Britain). As such, the full implications of introducing such a scheme in Northern Ireland would need to be endorsed by the Northern Ireland Executive.

Aside from requiring legislation, careful consideration would also have to be given to the proportion of customers to benefit from such a scheme and which customers would pay more as a result. There may also be issues around administration costs and data protection that would need to be explored.

Renewable Generation: All-island Grid Study

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 28220/11-15, since it appears the 2008 All Island Grid Study underestimated the level of small scale renewable generation, which resulted in the 11kV distribution network being unable to cope, (i) whether she will continue to base policy on the 2008 study; (ii) what fresh investigative work has been carried out; and (iii) whether continuing to base connection upgrade costs on the small generator is a viable option. (AQW 28897/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) The All Island Grid Study envisaged that the majority of renewable generation to meet the 40% target would come from large scale onshore wind. This still remains the case despite the increase in small scale renewables. However, since the publication of the Strategic Energy Framework (SEF) in 2010, there has been considerable progress in renewable electricity deployment and a number of developments have taken place which impact on the original assumptions. I have therefore recently approved a review of the costs to consumers and benefits arising from the SEF target of 40% electricity consumption from renewable sources by 2020. This work will feed into the planned mid term review of the SEF due to start in 2014-15.
- (ii) The Utility Regulator-led Renewables Grid Liaison Group (RGLG), which includes representation from the Department, NIE and the renewables industry, has requested that NIE explores possible technology options for increasing the grid's ability to accommodate small scale renewable generators without substantial grid investment. NIE has set up a group including representatives from relevant stakeholders to consider and report to the RGLG.
- (iii) The current connection policy is semi-shallow. That is to say generators pay for any work required on the voltage at which they are connecting, plus, if necessary, one voltage above. Any change to this policy would necessitate all customers paying higher bills and so subsidising small scale renewable generators. I understand that the Regulator has no plans to revise its policy.

Trading Standards Service: Illegally Imported Cigarettes

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the role that Trading Standards' officials have in visiting and inspecting tobacconists for illegally imported cigarettes.

(AQW 28898/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Trading Standards Service has no statutory responsibility, nor any specified enforcement role in visiting and inspecting tobacconists for illegally imported cigarettes.

Trading Standards Service: Illegally Imported Cigarettes

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 27105/11-15, to detail the location and date of all inspections by Trading Standards' officials looking for illegally imported cigarettes in the last twelve months.

(AQW 28899/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Trading Standards Service has carried out no inspections looking for illegally imported cigarettes in the past twelve months.

Renewable Energy: Strategic Energy Framework

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of any changes that need to be made to the Strategic Energy Framework in order to achieve the 40 per cent renewable energy target.

(AQW 29043/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Strategic Energy Framework (SEF) was published in 2010 and its implementation is monitored on an ongoing basis. It is important that regular reviews are undertaken of key policies and I have therefore recently approved work which will provide an updated analysis of the costs to the consumer and benefits arising from the 40% target. This work will feed into the planned mid-term review of the SEF due to start in 2014-2015.

Invest NI: Rockabill Shellfish Limited

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether Invest NI has provided Rockabill Shellfish Ltd advice or financial support; and if so provide details of this advice or support.

(AQW 29109/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI has not provided any financial support or advice to Rockabill Shellfish Limited, which is a Republic of Ireland based fish processing company operating out of Balbriggan in County Dublin and Skibbereen in County Cork.

Gifts and Hospitality: DETI Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many entries her Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 29160/11-15)

Mrs Foster: None and nil.

Councils: Causeway Coast and Glens

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she can take to prevent the brand name of "Glens" being removed from the domain name of the Causeway Coast and Glens council grouping.

(AQW 29313/11-15)

Mrs Foster: NITB continues to promote, market and develop the tourism product within each of the nine tourism destinations across Northern Ireland including the Causeway Coast and Glens destination.

The Department of the Environment has responsibility for introducing the Local Government Bill into the Assembly.

Superfast Broadband: Funding

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to (i) outline what steps her Department has taken towards securing funding from the UK Government following its recent announcement in the Autumn Statement of the launch of a £10 million fund to assist in the delivery of superfast broadband to 'the most difficult to reach areas of the UK', and (ii) provide an update on the £250 million allocated at the Spending Round 2013 to extend superfast broadband to 95% of all UK premises by 2017.

(AQW 29462/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The £10 million fund from the UK Government is directed at suppliers and will be used to market-test solutions to providing superfast broadband services to those areas where the delivery of such services are most commercially challenging. The processes and criteria for the Fund are currently being developed by Department of Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) but it is understood that funding will be made available to successful projects following a competitive process under which all suppliers with an innovative solution, across the UK, will be eligible to apply.

Details around the £250 million fund announced in June 2013 are currently being finalised and DCMS is expected to make a further announcement in the near future. In the meantime, my officials are formulating a project aimed at accessing a share of this funding in order to further extend the reach of superfast broadband services into the most challenging areas of Northern Ireland. In doing so, they are working closely with DCMS colleagues to ensure that essential issues such as State Aid will be met.

Department of the Environment

Taxis: DVA Enforcement Officers

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27215/11-15, whether any Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers, who were gathering video evidence on private hire taxis to date, have been subject to any physical or verbal abuse, threats or assaults.

(AQW 28151/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): To date there has been no instance where an enforcement officer gathering video evidence on private hire taxis has been subject to any physical or verbal abuse, threats or assaults.

However, in the course of normal duties enforcement officers are often subject to verbal abuse and unfortunately there have been a few occasions where officers have been physically abused, threatened or assaulted. Thankfully, these incidents are relatively rare and where officers feel threatened they will complete a 'near miss' form in accordance with Health and Safety procedures. In respect of physical abuse and assaults these incidents will be reported to the PSNI with a view to prosecution. In all cases operational risk assessments will be reviewed and amended as required.

South Antrim: Wind Turbines

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current planning applications for (i) single; and (ii) multiple wind turbines on agricultural land in South Antrim.

(AQW 28488/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table attached at Annex 1 details 26 current planning applications for single wind turbines and 1 current planning application for a wind farm on agricultural land within the South Antrim Parliamentary Constituency. I have also placed a copy of this table in the Assembly Library

The information was taken from the latest available renewable energy information, fully validated by the Department's statisticians, as of 30th September 2013.

Housing: Single Dwellings

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether construction of single dwellings is counted and included in housebuilding statistics; and to detail the number of single dwelling buildings which have been built in each of the last five years.

(AQW 28926/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Each year the Department publishes Housing Land Availability Summary Reports which indicate the number of housing completions in settlements (as defined in Area Plans) over a specified period, and housing land availability at a given point in time. Dwellings in rural areas are not included in the reports.

Table 1 below details the total number of house completions in Northern Ireland settlements in each year from 2007-08 to 2011-12.

Table 1 Total dwelling completions in settlements in Northern Ireland.

2007-08	8708
2008-09	4682
2009-10	5095
2010-11	2374
2011-12	2372

1. 2011-12 is the latest Housing Land Availability Summary report available
2. Does not include dwellings built in open countryside.

Areas of Special Scientific Interest

Mr Wells asked the Minister of the Environment how many Areas of Special Scientific Interest have been designated since January 2013.

(AQW 28935/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since January 2013 the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has designated 11 Areas of Special Scientific Interest.

Taxis: Belfast City Airport

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the current position at Belfast City Airport in relation to taxi services; and whether procurement protocol has been followed and best practice applied.

(AQW 28956/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I understand that Belfast City Airport has recently changed its contracted taxi company from one which used public hire vehicles to one which uses mainly private hire vehicles. Therefore under the current legislation, passengers have to make provision for the taxi booking at an operating centre prior to engaging a taxi from outside the airport.

The Department has no involvement regarding the procurement of contracted taxi services and therefore it is not in a position to comment on whether proper protocols and best practice has been applied in respect of Belfast City Airport.

Gifts and Hospitality: DOE Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment how many entries his Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 28962/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Special Adviser has not received any gifts or hospitality since her appointment.

Endangered Wildlife Species: Studies

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has undertaken, or plans to undertake, any studies into endangered wildlife species.

(AQW 28972/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has a long track record of undertaking studies or evidence gathering on endangered wildlife species.

Officials routinely gather data on a broad range of wildlife species. Such evidence can form part of one off studies; be part of longer term, ongoing, monitoring activities e.g. wildfowl or seal surveillance; be information gained from other science experts outside the Department or form part of specially commissioned research projects. The Department also has strategic partnerships which facilitate the involvement of the citizen with recording of species.

Since the mid-80s, the focus has been wildlife species that are considered a conservation priority. Such species include those protected under domestic legislation e.g. Wildlife Order, or for which we have an international responsibility e.g. species in the Annexes of the Habitats Directive. The recent Article 17 report is a particular focus for future evidence gathering that is needed, as well of information on species to inform selection and designation of Marine Conservation Zones. New studies are proposed on an ongoing basis and commissioned subject to priority and resource availability.

Domestic legislation, Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands Order, and the European Habitats Directive, provide a statutory authority for the Department to be involved in such activities, including the funding of projects. Notably with the Habitats Directive, there is an expectation that the member state “encourages” relevant research.

South Antrim: Listed Buildings

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the listed buildings in South Antrim.

(AQW 28977/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Based upon the 1974 ward boundaries, which is how the Department holds such records, the total number of listed buildings in the South Antrim constituency is 317. This constituency includes all of the electoral wards within the Antrim District Council area; 2 in the Lisburn City Council area; 9 in the Newtownabbey Borough Council area, and; 1 in the Belfast City Council area.

It should be noted that South Antrim is being reviewed under the Second Survey process, and these figures may change again, when all records have been finalised.

To provide the detail of all of these listed buildings by hard copy would be unwieldy; however, the information that you have sought may be accessed electronically at the following link www.doeni.gov.uk/niea/other-index/content-databases/content-databases-build.htm.

Once you have accepted the terms and conditions of the site, a search may be carried out by the various Council areas – in this case Antrim, Lisburn, Newtownabbey and Belfast.

You will be aware, however, that there have been boundary changes since 1974; as a result the figures should not be taken as definitive, in relation to the current boundaries. For that reason I have appended, for your information, a table which provides a breakdown of the number of the listed buildings within each ward of the Council Areas.

You may also wish to note that all of these Councils are statutory consultees in the listing process. As a result, and since the introduction of the legislation in the early 1970's, they will have been provided with a copy of each listing in their area.

Tamboran Resources

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether an application to bore a test hole has been received, via the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, for Tamboran Resources.

(AQW 28985/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No such notification has been received to date.

Carrier Bag Levy: Ministerial Meetings/Correspondence

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28015/11-15, to list the bodies from whom he received correspondence; and with whom and when he had the meetings.

(AQW 28990/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table attached at Annex A lists the bodies I have received correspondence from or met with in respect of the carrier bag levy since taking up office on 16 July 2013. The table also indicates the date of each of the three meetings.

Annex A

National Parks

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has identified any areas which could be potential National Parks.

(AQW 29013/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My predecessor, Alex Attwood, convened a panel of experts to give an opinion on which areas of Northern Ireland would be most suitable for designation as national parks. The three areas that the panel identified were the Mourne, the Antrim Causeway Coast and Glens and the Fermanagh Lakes and Mountains.

While I am aware of the benefits to be derived from National Parks, I am also aware of opposition and the concerns of landowners over what designation will mean for them. Given the level of this opposition, I therefore am of the view that now is not the correct time to proceed with national parks.

Taxis: Disability Compliance

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of the Environment what number and percentage of Public Hire Taxis in Belfast have been found to be inadequately fitted-out to carry passengers with a disability; and what feedback he has received on the treatment of, or refusal to carry, such passengers.

(AQW 29058/11-15)

Mr Durkan: During the last 12 months, roadside inspections by Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers have found no incidents of non compliance with the regulations. However, there is currently an investigation underway arising from a recent complaint of some taxi drivers failing to properly secure wheelchairs when picking up passengers at Belfast City Hospital.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment on how many occasions the CEO of the Driver and Vehicle Agency and senior officials have met with each of the two largest private taxi providers and company owners or staff since 23 August 2013 in relation to Ravenhill Rugby Grounds; and to provide dates, attendees, agenda, times and venues of these meetings.

(AQW 29062/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Chief Executive of the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) has not met with the taxi operators in relation to Ravenhill.

I can confirm that the Agency's Director of Licensing, Director of Enforcement and Head of Enforcement met with fonaCAB representatives on 27 September 2013 in DVA's Corporation Street offices. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss matters relating to fonaCAB's provision of taxis at Ravenhill Rugby Ground. This followed complaints received by Belfast Public Hire representatives.

In addition, a further meeting with fonaCAB representatives was held on 21 October 2013 in DVA's Corporation Street offices with the DVA's Director of Enforcement and Taxi Operator Compliance Manager. The sole purpose of this meeting was to communicate the Department's final determination of the legal position as regards the provision of private hire taxis at Ravenhill. No agenda was prepared in advance. The document discussed at the meeting has previously been provided in response to AQW27856/11-15.

East Antrim: Planning Permission for Wind Farms

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment how many wind farms have been granted planning permission in East Antrim, in each of the last four years.

(AQW 29076/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As of 28th November 2013, my Department has approved one application for the installation of 2 wind turbines at Whitehead Golf Club on 19th March 2009.

East Antrim: Planning Applications for Wind Farms

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment how many wind farm applications in East Antrim are currently being considered by the Planning Service.

(AQW 29077/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As of 28th November 2013, my Department is currently considering 3 applications for wind farms in East Antrim as detailed in the table below.

Planning Reference	Proposal	Location
F/2013/0085/F	Construction of wind farm comprising 5 wind turbines (126m in height) and ancillary development	lands approx. 700m south of no. 35 Mullaghsandall Road, between Mullaghsandall Road and Starbog Road, Kilwaughter, Larne

Planning Reference	Proposal	Location
F/2013/0101/F	Construction of wind farm comprising 9 wind turbines (120.5m in height) and ancillary development	Lands east of Feystown Road, Glenarm
V/2013/0051/F	Erection of 2 No wind turbines (45m in height)	390m East of 61 Seskin Road Ballyclare

East Antrim: Planning Permission/Applications for Wind Turbines

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment how many individual turbines are located in wind farms in East Antrim that have (i) been granted planning permission; and (ii) applied for planning permission.

(AQW 29078/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An application for 2 wind turbines (15m high) has been approved at Whitehead Golf Club.

Three wind farm applications are also currently under consideration by the Department which propose 16 turbines in total in East Antrim. These are detailed below.

Planning Reference	No. of turbines	Location
F/2013/0085/F	5 wind turbines (126m in height)	lands between Mullaghsandall Road and Starbog Road, Kilwaughter, Larne
F/2013/0101/F	9 wind turbines (120.5m in height)	Lands east of Feystown Road, Glenarm
V/2013/0051/F	2 No wind turbines (45m in height)	390m East of 61 Seskin Road Ballyclare

East Antrim: Planning Permission for Wind Turbines

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment how many individual wind turbines have been granted planning permission in East Antrim, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 29079/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table attached at Annex 1 details 42 planning applications for single wind turbines that have been granted planning permission in the last 5 years.

The information was taken from the latest available renewable energy information, fully validated by the Department's statisticians, as of 28th November 2013.

East Antrim: Planning Applications for Wind Turbines

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment how many individual wind turbine applications in East Antrim are currently being considered by Planning Service.

(AQW 29080/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table attached at Annex 1 details 30 current planning applications for single wind turbines within the East Antrim Parliamentary Constituency.

The information was taken from the latest available renewable energy information, fully validated by the Department's statisticians, as of 31st October 2013.

Environmental Crime: Mills Report

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the remit given to the former Director of the Welsh Environment Agency in preparation of his Expert Review Report on environmental crime.

(AQW 29113/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The remit of Mr Mills Report is the Terms of Reference announced by my predecessor on 16 July 2013, as shown below:

This review will support the DoE's on-going work to create a waste sector in Northern Ireland that complies with the law, protects the environment and underpins resource efficiency by conducting a review into:

- what transpired in relation to the waste facility at the Campsie site and to identify any failures that might have occurred in the regulation of this site, in respect of any sectors of central Government;
- the external factors leading to the extensive illegal waste dumping at the Campsie site;
- the lessons this incident provides for the future development and administration of waste management, resource efficiency and enforcement programmes.

Tree/Hedge Planting: Public Domain

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what is the policy in maintaining green sites in the Public Domain; (ii) what is the policy for further tree and hedge planting in Public Domain green sites; and (iii) what is the policy for planting deciduous and coniferous trees.

(AQW 29114/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning has no direct powers over the maintenance of green sites in the public domain; however, the planning system has powers to protect trees and open spaces and also considers tree and hedge planting, including the appropriate species, as part of the assessment of individual planning applications.

The requirement for the protection of open space is set out in Planning Policy Statement 8 – Open Space, Sport and Outdoor Recreation (PPS 8). Policy OS1 of PPS 8 protects open spaces, regardless of their condition, and only permits their development if it results in substantial community benefits that significantly outweigh the loss of the public space. Furthermore, Policy OS 2 – 'Public Open Space in New Residential Developments' necessitates that public open spaces are provided as an integral part of housing developments of over 25 units or over 1 hectare in size and these are subject to management agreements in perpetuity (this provision requirement does not extend to apartments or developments that are designed to integrate with existing public open spaces).

In relation to further tree and hedge planting these are matters which are considered as part of the individual planning applications which are submitted. Many applications may need to be accompanied by a landscaping plan and conditions will be attached to decision notices as appropriate. To assist in the management of planning applications at treed sites, the Department has produced supplementary guidance entitled, 'Trees and Development – A Guide to Best Practice'. It promotes the benefits of trees within public spaces and offers guidance for case officers assessing planning proposals on 'caring for trees at development sites'. In addition 'Creating Places: Achieving quality in Residential Environments' also provides advice for developers and development management officers on the selection of tree species, the incorporation of new planting in developments, aftercare and providing sufficient space for trees during their life cycle.

Planning is also responsible for the protection of individual trees and groups of trees that are of special value in terms of amenity, history or rarity, which may or may not be under threat through the designation of Tree Preservation Orders. Applications for consent to do works to, or cut down, protected trees are subject to scrutiny by the Department before being granted or refused.

East Antrim: Location of Wind Turbines

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment to publish a map showing the location of (i) individual wind turbines; and (ii) wind farms that have been granted planning permission, or are currently being considered by Planning Service, in East Antrim. (AQW 29117/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I attach, for information, map extracts showing the location of (i) wind turbines; and (ii) wind farms that have been granted planning permission, or are currently being considered, in East Antrim. I have also placed a copy of this map in the Assembly Library.

You may wish to note that a map detailing this information for the whole of Northern Ireland is available to view on the Planning Portal at www.planningni.gov.uk, along with other useful information and statistics on renewable energy planning applications.

Wind Farms

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of the Environment whether he is aware of proposals to construct a large scale wind farm in the Doravil area of County Tyrone; and whether his Department has taken cognisance of (i) the environmentally sensitive nature of this part of the Sperrins region; (ii) the potential negative impact such a proposal could have on tourism in this area; (iii) the negative impact that this proposal could have on sites of archaeological significance; and (iv) local opposition to this proposal. (AQW 29121/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am aware of proposals for a company to construct a large wind farm in the Doraville area of County Tyrone but my Department has not yet received a formal planning application for such development. I am also aware the site is located within the Sperrins Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

Should the application subsequently be received, it will be subject to the full assessment under relevant planning policies and guidance, including the impacts on the landscape character and visual amenity of the area, and the potential impacts on tourism and archaeology. I am aware that there is considerable opposition locally to such a potential development. An application of this nature will be required to be accompanied by an Environmental Statement.

Foyle: Taxi Operator's Licence

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the number of Taxi Operator licences in use in the Foyle constituency; (ii) the number of taxi drivers registered with each operator; and (iii) the length of the term of each license. (AQW 29122/11-15)

Mr Durkan: It is not possible to provide information from the Taxi licensing IT system by constituency; however, information has been provided for operator licences issued with the BT47 and BT48 postcode.

As at 9 December 2013, the Department has 941 licensed taxi operators within the postcode areas of BT47 and BT48.

Of the 94 operators, 19 hold 1 year licences (284 drivers), 36 hold 3 year licences (332 drivers) and 39 hold 5 year licences (540 drivers).

A detailed breakdown of the number of drivers affiliated to operator's licences is attached at Annex A.

Please note these figures are not part of official statistics and have not been subject to data validation.

Planning Applications: Statutory Agency Responses

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Planning Service has set any time limits or targets for obtaining responses to planning applications from statutory agencies.

(AQW 29129/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE, as the Planning Authority, will consult with a number of agencies and organisations to obtain comments on a development proposal in relation to the consultee's area of expertise.

At this time only the relevant District Council and the Health and Safety Executive are Statutory Consultees. The need to consult other consultees is at the discretion of the planning authority, depending on the nature and scale of the application. Nevertheless, there are a number of standard organisations who are consulted on a regular basis such as Roads Service and Environmental Health.

To manage the consultation process the Department has Service Level Agreements or Memorandums of Understanding with the agencies most frequently consulted. These agreements set out the basis on which DOE Planning and the consultee will deliver services to each other and defines performance targets. Although the agreements are not legally binding, both parties agree to act in accordance with the agreement.

Their overall aim is to improve the efficiency of the planning process and provide greater certainty about timescale, particularly for applicants for planning permission in the context of achieving the Programme of Government Public Service Agreement targets.

With regard to responding to planning applications, the agreed performance target with most, is that they will return 70% of all planning application consultations within 15 working days.

In the future as part of the implementation of the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 identified, in addition to transferring the bulk of planning powers to councils in 2015, I will provide greater clarity and certainty for the consultation process. For the first time, identified consultees will be statutorily required to provide a substantive response to a consultation request from a planning authority within a specified timeframe and to report on their performance in meeting their duty to respond.

All future consultation responses will have to be "substantive" providing sufficient information to allow the requesting planning authority to determine the application. A holding response would not be regarded as meeting the requirements of the duty to respond.

Details of proposed timeframes, criteria as to what would constitute a substantive response and reporting requirements will be set out in subordinate legislation which will be the subject of public consultation commencing in Spring 2014.

Planning Applications: Consultation Response Times

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to introduce a 28 day consultation response deadline for planning applications.

(AQW 29131/11-15)

Mr Durkan: To manage the consultation process the Department has agreed targets for consultation response times with those bodies most frequently consulted. These performance targets provide the basis on which DOE Planning and the consultee will deliver services. Although the targets are not legally binding, both parties agree to act in accordance with them.

The overall aim is to improve the efficiency of the planning process and provide greater certainty about timescales.

With regard to planning application consultations, the agreed performance target with most consultees, is that they will return 70% of all application consultations within 15 working days.

In the future as part of the implementation of the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, in addition to transferring the bulk of planning powers to councils in 2015, I will provide greater clarity and certainty for the consultation process. For the first time, identified consultees will be statutorily required to provide a substantive response to a consultation request from a planning authority within a specified timeframe and to report on their performance in meeting their duty to respond.

All future consultation responses will have to be "substantive" providing sufficient information to allow the requesting planning authority to determine the application. A holding response would not be regarded as meeting the requirements of the duty to respond.

Details of proposed timeframes are currently being developed as are criteria for a substantive response and reporting requirements on consultees. These will be set out in subordinate legislation which will be the subject of public consultation commencing in Spring 2014. Consequently, it would not be appropriate at this stage to commit to any particular deadline.

Waste Prevention/Arisings: Targets

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail any targets his Department has in place for the total amount of waste generated each year.

(AQW 29162/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are currently no EU targets for waste prevention or waste arisings and the Department similarly has no targets for these areas. However the amount of municipal waste arising has fallen steadily since 2006/07 with an average annual decrease of 2.5%. In 2012/13 the level was 14.1% below the 2006/07 level. The recently published Waste Management Strategy sets out challenging targets relating to recycling and landfill diversion as required by the EU Waste Framework Directive and Landfill Directive respectively.

For me, waste prevention is a critical objective in terms of protecting the environment, strengthening our economy and in tackling waste crime. The Department has recently completed a consultation exercise on the development of a Waste Prevention Programme. The aim of the Waste Prevention Programme will be to maintain the downward trend in waste arisings. Specific objectives proposed include:

- Decoupling economic growth from the environmental impacts associated with waste generation.
- Encouraging people to use resources efficiently and generate less waste.
- Establishing improved resource efficiency and waste prevention as an integral part of business management and project planning.

Household waste arisings will continue to be monitored to ensure that activities within the Waste Prevention Programme are on course to comply with its aims and objectives. The European Commission intends to publish a report on waste prevention towards the end of 2014 that may introduce measures and objectives for waste prevention and decoupling. In the interim, and informed by this process, I intend to bring forward a waste prevention strategy and am currently considering options.

Waste: Measurement

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) how his Department measures the total amount of waste generated ; and (ii) whether his Department measures the total amount of waste that was (a) landfilled; (b) recycled; and (c) incinerated each year; and (iii) to detail the total amount of disposed waste by each method in the last twelve months.

(AQW 29163/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department primarily uses legislation to require certain operators handling waste to measure or calculate the waste they manage and report this to the Department. At the moment, this does not cover all wastes generated as certain waste activities are exempt from supplying this information.

There is a requirement for all operators in Northern Ireland actively landfilling waste to submit a summary report to the Department concerning the amount of waste landfilled but there is no such requirement for all those who recycle and / or incinerate waste. The most recently available tonnage for all landfilled waste in NI is for the period 2012/13 which is 1,111,833 tonnes. Following consideration of the Mills Report, I will ask DOE to look at options to improve information collection processes.

Incineration: Stockholm Convention

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department is adhering to the Stockholm Convention in the Executive's policy on incineration.

(AQW 29165/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Section 4, "Other Recovery", of the new Northern Ireland Waste Management Strategy states that 'The Department supports efficient energy recovery from residual waste in accordance with the waste hierarchy which can deliver environmental benefits, reduce carbon impacts and provide economic opportunities.'

Further, 'In supporting efficient energy recovery the Department acknowledges that technology solutions include mechanical biological treatment {MBT} of waste which can produce a fuel (sometimes referred to as refuse derived fuel {RDF} which may provide energy from waste through subsequent thermal treatment, for example, in a cement kiln, incinerator or gasifier'.

As a party to the Stockholm Convention, the UK developed a National Implementation Plan in 2007. This has now been revised to include an account of how the Convention is being implemented across all the UK jurisdictions, including Northern Ireland, and outlines next steps for managing the Persistent Organic Pollutants (POPs) specified in the Stockholm Convention.

The requirements of the Convention are implemented by EC Regulation 850/2004 on Persistent Organic Pollutants (as amended), which in turn is implemented in UK law by the Persistent Organic Pollutants Regulations (2007).

The UK POPs Regulations were amended in 2010 to include further substances of concern. The Regulations have the following functions:

- To ban or restrict the production, use and sale of listed POPs (such as those which were previously used as fire suppressants, biocides or product additives);
- To require efforts to minimise the unintentional formation of POPs (for example, dioxins which might arise as by-products of combustion processes);
- To describe how stockpiles of POPs (or waste contaminated with POPs) must be dealt with.

The Department of the Environment is the competent authority for EC POPs regulation in Northern Ireland, and NIEA compiles emissions' data for Northern Ireland and submits it to the UK Pollutant Release and Transfer Register.

The key mechanisms through which the Department ensures that energy from waste plants in Northern Ireland, whether they are incinerators or other forms of thermal treatment, adhere fully to the Stockholm Convention are its planning, permitting and monitoring regimes. In common with all other UK jurisdictions, the Northern Ireland regulatory regimes take full account of the requirements of the Stockholm Convention in their implementation of the relevant EU Directives.

Councils: Statutory Transition Committees

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to his statement on the 28 August 2013, in which he raised concerns regarding the nomination process for membership of Statutory Transition Committees, whether (i) he asked his officials to draft amended regulations; (ii) whether amended regulations were drawn up; and (iii) whether the membership of any Statutory Transition Committee changed following his intervention.

(AQW 29182/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Pursuant to my statement on 28th August 2013, I had a number of discussions with my officials who investigated amending the Local Government (Statutory Transition Committees) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2013. I had intended that, as some councils had failed to use a fair and equitable nomination process, the Regulations should be amended to specify the nomination process that should be used. However, the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 2010, which provided for the establishment of the Statutory Transition Committees, did not provide the vires to allow me to amend the Regulations in the way I wished. Consequently, amended Regulations were not drafted.

Whilst I intervened with a number of councils about non-compliance with the Department's guidance on the establishment and operation of their Statutory Transition Committees, regrettably the Councils mentioned in my statement did not revisit elected member nominations to their Statutory Transition Committees. I am therefore disappointed by the inactions of Ballymoney, Belfast, Castlereagh, Lisburn and Strabane councils. I believe these councils acted unfairly and have not complied with the original intentions of the Assembly.

I am committed to ensuring that equality of opportunity will be a key feature in the new councils and the sharing of positions of responsibility across the political parties represented on councils will be a cornerstone of the new arrangements. The Local Government Bill that I introduced into the Assembly on 23rd September 2013, and which is currently at Committee Stage, provides that councils will be able to select from either the d'Hondt or Sainte-Laguë divisor methods or Single Transferrable Voting to achieve this aim. The Bill also specifies the precise application of each of the alternative methods.

Vehicle Licensing: Tax Discs

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of any implications for local jobs in relation to the announcement of the phasing out of vehicle exercise duty discs.

(AQW 29189/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle licensing is an excepted matter which is carried out in Northern Ireland by the Driver and Vehicle Agency within my Department, under the terms of an agreement with the Department for Transport, represented by its Agency, DVLA in Swansea. The decision to abolish tax discs is a matter for the Department for Transport and this change will apply across the UK.

The production of a tax disc is a minor and largely automated part of the process of licensing a vehicle. It is highly unlikely, therefore, that the abolition of the tax disc on its own will have any impact on staffing levels in DVA.

Planning Applications: Processing Times

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail how many planning applications took (i) more than 6 months; (ii) more than 12 months; or (iii) more than 2 years to process, in each of the last 5 years.

(AQW 29196/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The information requested is set out in the table below.

Buses: Operator Licensing

Mr Givan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the extent of the consultation with community transport providers and user groups on the bus operator licensing proposals.

(AQW 29227/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since my Department began a review of bus operator licensing in 2009 officials have undertaken extensive engagement with the community transport sector. This has included collective and individual meetings with the eleven Rural Community Transport Partnerships (RCTP) and also with the Community Transport Association (CTANI). A full public consultation exercise was carried out in late 2010 and this included public meetings throughout Northern Ireland.

The consultation process resulted in no clear consensus on the way forward and at the Environment Committee's request the Department began a series of focused stakeholder engagements.

In 2011 Minister Attwood set up a Bus Forum where all stakeholders including the RCTP's, CTA, the Consumer Council, Youthnet, the Inclusive Mobility and Transport Advisory Committee (IMTAC), commercial bus operators, Education & Library Boards and Health Trusts have representation.

In 2012, in an effort to move the process forward, my officials produced a discussion document (colloquially known as 'the strawman') which was presented to the Bus Forum. The members of the Forum engaged with their own organisations and reported back their findings both to the Bus Forum and to separate meetings which were held with officials. This has resulted in a number of changes to the initial document in response to this engagement, including with the community transport providers and with other organisations such as NICVA. At this stage, these are still draft proposals and no final decision has been taken.

I am aware that some community transport providers have concerns surrounding the proposals for a new licensing scheme; my officials will continue to engage with the community transport providers and users to develop a licensing scheme which will allow for a vibrant and innovative community transport sector to flourish. Most recently, my officials met with representatives of most of the RCTPs on 9 December and a number of actions were agreed as needing follow up before further engagement. Officials have requested further meetings with CTANI also.

Taxis: Single-tier Licensing

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment (i) under what title or statement was the petition from Belfast Taxi (CIC) Association submitted to the consultation on the Arrangements for Single Tier Licensing; (ii) whether the petition pertained to the consultation as a whole or just the question referring to taxibuses; (iii) whether the same weight was given to each signature on that petition as to each individual full consultation response; and (iv) whether he will publish the consultation project plan, stakeholder list and scoring and coding system adopted to weigh the responses.

(AQW 29274/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

- (i) The title of the statement was "single tier licensing reply".
- (ii) The statement said that "we the undersigned believe that in order to protect our Taxi Bus service, that the implementation of the proposed single tier licensing should be deferred until such times as the Act is ready to be implemented in full". Since the consultation stated clearly that "it is not to consider the broader policy of single tier licensing, on which decisions have been made following the 2011 consultation" and the petition did not relate to any of the questions on the single tier letter, it was not included in the summary of responses. Instead Minister Attwood was informed of the petition and the number of names included. He subsequently met with Belfast CIC to discuss their concerns. Their views, shared by the Environment Committee and other stakeholders, led to Minister Attwood postponing single tier licensing until it could be implemented in full under the Taxis Act in September 2014.
- (iii) Each response received to the letter was given the same weight when compiling the synopsis. As explained in part (ii) above, the Department did not include the petition in the responses.
- (iv) The single tier letter was issued to all taxi driver licence holders, all taxi vehicle owners and all taxi operators. Since the responses were not weighted, no coding system was used. There was no formal project plan for the consultation exercise, and it would not be common practice of the Department to have a formal project plan for such exercises; but key dates for issue and closing of the consultation, the compilation of the responses and their submission to the Minister and the Environment Committee were agreed and monitored.

Taxis

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what is the average age of (a) Belfast Public Hire; and (b) private hire taxi vehicles; (ii) what plans he has for improving the (a) quality and safety of taxis; and (b) customer service standards to be adopted by drivers; and (iii) how he will deliver on these standards.

(AQW 29275/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The average age of Belfast Public Hire taxi vehicles is 11.91 years* and the average age of Private Hire taxi vehicles is 5.13 years*.

Full implementation of the taxi reform programme will improve standards within the industry and reduce the use of illegal taxis. The introduction of taxi operator licensing in September 2012 already requires all taxis to be listed on a valid and current taxi operator's licence. This reform made a vital link of responsibility, for the first time, between customers, drivers/vehicles and operators. It is the Department's intention to introduce the remaining strands of the programme by September 2014.

Single tier taxi licensing will remove the distinction between Public Hire and Private Hire taxis, permitting both to pick-up passengers without a pre-booking. Consumer and disability groups and the majority of those already consulted are in favour of this system which will give consumers greater choice as to which taxi they use.

The introduction of taximeters and printers to all taxis as well as the introduction of a regulated maximum fare is supported by the Consumer Council, the PSNI and the taxi industry generally. It will reduce instances of over-charging and thereby promote and enhance consumer safety and confidence.

A proposed new higher standard wheelchair accessible vehicle specification will be subject to consultation early in 2014. I believe this impact on the industry is necessary to ensure wheelchair users have confidence in both the safety and comfort of vehicles licensed to carry them, and to remove the situation where users are travelling in vehicles whose safety equipment has not been tested by DVA. The proposed regulations will also prevent taxis not tested as wheelchair accessible from advertising themselves as such, providing further reassurance to wheelchair users.

The introduction of a taxi driver test for new drivers and periodic training for all taxi drivers is widely welcomed by consumer and disability groups and will improve standards in the industry, increasing road safety, providing additional assurance to passengers and raising the reputation of the industry as a provider of a quality service.

The role of my Department is to set the minimum standards and requirements which the industry must adhere to and it is the responsibility of operators and the wider industry to deliver on these standards. Once implemented, all of the reforms under the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 will be kept under review.

*These figures are not validated DOE Official Statistics. The average age of vehicle has been calculated using the date the vehicle was first registered wherever that registration may have occurred.

North Down: Listed Buildings

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the listed buildings in North Down.
(AQW 29284/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Based upon the 1974 ward boundaries - which is how the department holds such records - the total number of listed buildings in the North Down Borough Council (NDBC) area is 287. The North Down constituency also includes two electoral wards of Ards Borough Council in Donaghadee, which contain a further 58 listed buildings (highlighted in bold in the attached table). This gives a total of 345 listed buildings in your constituency. It should be noted that North Down is being reviewed currently under the second survey process, and this figure may change again, when all records have been reviewed.

To provide the detail of all of these listed buildings by hard copy would be unwieldy; however, the information that you have sought may be accessed electronically at the following link www.doeni.gov.uk/niea/other-index/content-databases/content-databases-build.htm

Once you have accepted the terms and conditions of the site, a search may be carried out by Council area – in this case Ards and North Down.

You will be aware, however, that there have been boundary changes since 1974, and as a result the figures should not be taken as definitive, in relation to the current boundaries. For that reason I have appended, for your information, a table which shows the number of the listed buildings within each ward of the North Down and Ards Borough Council (NDBC) Areas.

You may also wish to note that NDBC - which is a statutory consultee in the listing process - has been provided with a copy of each listing in its area, since the introduction of the legislation in the early 1970's.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 27856/11-15 to provide copies of the notes taken, and the subsequent reports compiled, by the six Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers on duty at Ravenhill Rugby Grounds, Mount Merrion Avenue entrance on 23 August 2013; and if it is not possible to release these documents to clarify whether they are held in storage, or have been destroyed.

(AQW 29292/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The information you have requested was recently the subject of a Freedom of Information request received by the Driver and Vehicle Agency. In response the Agency deemed that exemption Section 35(1)(a) of the Freedom of Information Act 2000, the formulation or development of government policy, applied. I am therefore unable to provide copies of the notes and subsequent reports that you have requested.

However, the information you have sought was used to determine the Department's interpretation of the legal position as regards the provision of taxis at Ravenhill Rugby Grounds. A copy of which was issued in response to AQW 27856/11-15.

I can confirm that the information gathered on 23 August 2013 at Ravenhill Rugby Grounds has not been destroyed and will be kept in accordance with the Agency's disposal schedule.

Taxis: Fixed Penalty Notices

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department hold records on (i) taxi drivers who are given fixed penalty notices for breaching regulations; and (ii) convictions relevant to drivers' trade, including motoring offences, drugs offences, and any violence-related crime.

(AQW 29293/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I can confirm that the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) holds records on taxi drivers who are given fixed penalties by DVA Enforcement Officers.

Details of all other convictions are obtained through an "enhanced disclosure certificate" provided by Access NI, which includes information on spent and current convictions.

Councils: Judicial Reviews

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28380/11-15, whether he will undertake to obtain the requested information from the three councils who failed to respond.

(AQW 29294/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The following information has been obtained from those three councils.

During 2011/12 and 2012/13 neither Newry & Mourne District Council nor North Down Borough Council applied for any judicial reviews.

Armagh City & District Council reported no cases in 2011/12. However, during 2012/13 it applied for one case, which the judge decided to split into two issues. Costs to date have been c£10,000.

Taxis: Ravenhill Rugby Ground

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how much it cost, including overtime, to have six Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers on duty to monitor the services of private hire taxis at Ravenhill Rugby Grounds on 23 August 2013.

(AQW 29295/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The total cost of six enforcement officers in carrying out a compliance operation at Ravenhill Rugby Grounds on 23 August 2013 was £694.

Local Government Reform: Expenditure

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department will maintain control of local government spending during the transition period of the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 29316/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are controls in place to ensure that local government does not over-stretch in terms of borrowings. In line with Section 13 (1) of the Local Government Finance Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, "a council shall determine and keep under review how much money it can afford to borrow." A council may not borrow money if doing so would result in a breach of the limit determined by it under Section 13. This is examined each year by the Local Government Auditor as part of the audit process.

In terms of the expenditure of current councils in the run up to April 2015, I have issued a direction and guidance on expenditure controls for Statutory Transition Committees. This gives Statutory Transition Committees the power to examine and approve three year capital plans and revenue expenditure forecasts in their constituent councils.

The Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 2010, taken together with the Departmental direction, provides that councils must seek the consent of the relevant Statutory Transition Committee before:

- making a disposal of land where consideration exceeds £100,000;
- entering into a capital contract where consideration exceeds £250,000; or
- entering into a non capital contract where consideration exceeds £100,000.

This is to ensure that the current 26 councils cannot enter into new contracts that will have an impact on the finances of the newly created councils without first seeking permission from the Statutory Transition Committee. This power will also be applied to the new councils during the period when they will be operating in shadow mode from end May 2014 – March 2015.

Councils: Rates Convergence

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of the Environment what measures are in place to ensure that commercial and domestic rate-payers are not adversely affected by the transition period of the Review of Public Administration; and that projected savings are used to reduce the rates burden.

(AQW 29317/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Earlier this year the Executive agreed to provide councils with a reform funding package of £17.8 million over the 2013 to 2015 period, with a commitment of up to £30 million for rates convergence beyond 2015.

The £30 million will be made available for managing rate convergence as a consequence of councils merging and other boundary changes arising from implementation of the local government reform.

DFP and DOE continue to work on the design of a transitional rate relief scheme within the agreed cost envelope of £30m. The relief scheme will help manage rates convergence by protecting those ratepayers otherwise facing sudden and excessive increases as a direct consequence of councils merging or due to other boundary changes.

Local Government Reform: Cost

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of the Environment what the cost will be of implementing the Review of Public Administration; and from where will this funding originate.

(AQW 29318/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The PricewaterhouseCoopers economic appraisal of local government service delivery, carried out on behalf of and published by the Department in October 2009, indicated that under the preferred option (i.e. Transformation with Regional Collaboration), implementation of the local government reform programme could involve expenditure of up to £118 million over five years.

The Regional Transition Committee commissioned the Finance Working Group in 2012 to develop an up-to-date and accurate analysis of the full costs (transition and transformation) and benefits (including savings) of the reform implementation programme. Since then, local government has worked on this issue, and a Transition Costs Paper is currently being finalised.

Earlier this year the Executive agreed to provide councils with a reform funding package of £17.8 million over the 2013 to 2015 period, with a further commitment of up to £30 million for rates convergence beyond 2015.

My Department has no further monies available from within its own budget. Any additional costs will have to be met by local government, offset against the longer term savings that will result from reform.

Clough Castle: Union Flag

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28210/11-15, whether the regulations are applicable at Clough Castle; and are being fully adhered to on an all year round basis in relation to the usage of the flagpole that is provided by his Department within the grounds of the castle.

(AQW 29359/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Clough Castle is not among the Government Buildings specified for the flying of the Union Flag on set days within the Regulations brought in under the Flags (Northern Ireland) Order 2000. Though the Regulations permit the Union flag to be flown 'in the same manner on the same day at any other government building', the Departmental Solicitor has advised that Clough Castle, being unoccupied, does not constitute a 'Government Building' under the terms of the Order, so the Regulations do not apply to it.

Clough Castle was gifted to the National Trust which then leased it to the Ministry of Finance in 1969 and agreed to the erection of a flagpole in 1971 to prevent the long-standing, dangerous and damaging practice of erecting a flag atop the stone tower of the Castle itself. Responsibility for Historic Monuments in State Care subsequently transferred to the Department of the Environment.

The flag at Clough Castle is not flown by the Department; nor did the Department provide the current flagpole in the Castle grounds. This was erected without permission in July of this year by persons unknown, replacing a shorter pole erected by the Department in 2008 when a pole erected in 1987 snapped off after it was vandalised.

The Department has tried unsuccessfully to limit the period of flag-flying at Clough Castle to two weeks in July. The local Loyal Orange Lodge has agreed to seek to limit the flag-flying period to July and August, however elements in the local community have proved very difficult to regulate, have broken in to the site and have threatened contractors engaged to carry out works at the Castle by the Department.

Planning Permission: Extant

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28465/11-15, whether his definition of an extant planning permission includes minerals planning applications which have been approved and where extraction or processing are currently taking place.

(AQW 29402/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An extant planning permission is any planning permission which is still in existence. That is, any approved development commenced on or before the expiration of the time frame given in Article 34 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 and is within its conditioned time limits.

Tarry Waste: Mobuoy Road, Derry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28465/11-15, (i) whether the location of the known tarry waste site at a sand pit on Mabuoy Road forms part of the illegal landfilling site; and (ii) whether the known tarry waste site at the closed landfill forms part of the illegal landfill site.

(AQW 29403/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Two of the tarry waste deposits identified in the past were marked as being located within the overall area which is the subject of the Operation Sycamore investigation at Mobuoy - one on the east side of Mobuoy Road and the other on the west. During the extensive survey work that was carried out during the investigation no areas of tarry waste were encountered.

Taxis: Belfast Prescribed Limits

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the area covered by the Belfast taxi licence plate.

(AQW 29435/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The By Laws relating to Motor Hackney Carriages standing or plying for hire within the County Borough of Belfast were made by Belfast City Council on 4 June 1951. The By Laws set down the "prescribed limits" for standing or plying for hire as an area within the boundaries of a circle the radius of which shall be five miles from Castle Junction in the City of Belfast.

Habitats Directive: Compliance

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28983/11-15, whether his answer confirms his Department's full compliance with the requirements of the Habitats Directive.

(AQW 29456/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As detailed in my answer to your previous question (AQW 28983/11-15) a full review of all extant planning permissions was not carried out at the time of designation. The Habitats Regulations require competent authorities to review all permissions 'as soon as reasonably practicable'. This is an ongoing process. Where there are amendments or modifications to planning applications approved before designation of the River Faughan and tributaries SAC the project in its entirety is reassessed. In order to maintain and enhance Northern Ireland's natural heritage my Department's priority at this time is to complete the designation of sites which are nationally or internationally important for their bio or geo diversity. The Department has complied with all aspects of the Habitats Directive.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Civil Service: DFP Posts

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why AQW 27954/11-15 remains unanswered.

(AQW 28834/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): AQW 27954/11-15 was answered 29 November 2013.

Levy: Bottled Mineral Water

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline any consideration he has given to the introduction of a levy on the production or sale of bottled mineral water.

(AQW 28866/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have not given any consideration to the introduction of a levy on the production or sale of bottled mineral water.

Pay: Mean Gross Annual

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the average salary in Northern Ireland compared to the (i) Republic of Ireland; and (ii) UK.

(AQW 28919/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The average (mean) gross annual pay for all employee jobs in Northern Ireland compared to (i) the Republic of Ireland and (ii) the UK is provided in Table 1 overleaf.

The NI and UK figures are from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), conducted by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA) and the Office for National Statistics (ONS). Data for the Republic of Ireland is sourced to the Earnings, Hours and Employment Costs Survey (EHECS), carried out by the Central Statistics Office (CSO).

Both ASHE and EHECS are based on a sample of employee jobs and the reported estimates therefore have an associated degree of sampling error.

Table 1: Mean Gross Annual Pay¹ for all employee jobs², 2012

	Mean
Northern Ireland	£21,836
United Kingdom	£26,664
Republic of Ireland	€36,079

Sources:

Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (NI & UK)
Earnings, Hours and Employment Costs Survey (CSO)

Notes:

- 1 Gross annual pay covers remuneration in cash paid directly by the employer, before tax deductions and social security contributions payable by wage earners and retained by the employer. All bonuses (such as overtime, holiday pay, profit sharing, commission, etc) regardless of whether they are regularly paid are included.
- 2 Employees (full time and part time) on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence.

Rate Debt

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how the shortfall resulting from the write off of rates debt is made up; and whether, in setting the regional rate, there is a margin for bad debt.

(AQW 28958/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Rate debt occurs when ratepayers, for whatever reason, fail to pay their rates bills. With regard to write-off, this is taken into account in setting the Regional Rate and in the Penny Product calculations for District Councils.

Civil Service: Job Advertisements

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the criteria used by the Equality and Diversity Branch Corporate Human Resources when considering which job advertisements require welcome statements.

(AQW 29029/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Equality and Diversity Branch add welcoming statements to job advertisements where reviews into the community background and gender profiles of the Civil Service reveal one or more groups are under-represented compared to the NI workforce. The processes used to assess fair participation and to determine when to use welcoming statements are complicated. However, in general, action is taken where the difference between the profile of the Civil Service and the NI workforce is more than 5%. In relation to gender, action is also taken where no persons of one gender are currently employed. The reports of the last reviews into the composition of the Civil Service (the 2010 Article 55 and Gender Reviews) include detailed explanations of the processes used and copies of both have been placed in the Assembly library.

Further reviews are being carried out and the results will be published next year.

Legal Profession: Solicitors Leaving

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many solicitors have left the profession in each of the last five years.

(AQW 29067/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel understands that the Law Society does not specifically keep statistics on the numbers of solicitors leaving the profession in any given year. The table below, based on figures obtained from the Society, outlines the number of practising certificates in force compared to the number of solicitors admitted to the roll in any given year. It can act as a guide, but cannot be considered as a completely accurate reflection as there may be other reasons for practising certificates not being issued in a given year (for example, maternity leave).

Year	Practising Certificates Issued	Solicitors admitted to the Roll
2008	2,487	170
2009	2,500	171
2010	2,559	254
2011	2,626	220
2012	2,688	198

Law: Practising Certificates

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of solicitors registered to practice in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 29068/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel has obtained the figures below from the Law Society of Northern Ireland. In each of the last 10 years, the number of solicitors holding practising certificates is as follows:

■ 2003 – 2,001	■ 2008 – 2,487
■ 2004 – 2,110	■ 2009 – 2,500
■ 2005 – 2,160	■ 2010 – 2,559
■ 2006 – 2,298	■ 2011 – 2,626
■ 2007 – 2,358	■ 2012 – 2,688

Economic Inactivity

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people in each constituency are economically inactive.

(AQW 29103/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Estimates of the numbers of economically inactive persons in each Northern Ireland (NI) Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA) are sourced from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) Local Area Database, with the most recent data available for January – December 2012. These estimates are based on the residency of an individual.

Please note that LFS estimates at PCA level are based on relatively small sample sizes and are subject to a higher degree of sampling variability than for NI level results.

The requested breakdown of economic inactivity by PCA is shown in Table 1 overleaf.

Table 1: Number of Economically Inactive Persons (aged 16-64) by Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA), January - December 2012

Parliamentary Constituency Area	Economic Inactivity
	Number	% of 16-64 Population in each PCA
Belfast East	14,000	26.3%
Belfast North	16,000	30.0%
Belfast South	24,000	30.9%
Belfast West	16,000	37.3%

Stormont Estate: Car Parking

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why parking is prohibited on both sides of the access road from the Massey Avenue entrance into the Stormont Estate; and on whose direction this has arisen.

(AQW 29104/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I refer the Member to AQW 25669/11-15 which was answered on 24 September 2013.

Equal Pay Settlement: PSNI/NIO

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel when staff from the PSNI and NIO, who were not part of the equal pay settlement, will be informed of the action he intends to take to resolve the issue.

(AQW 29111/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am currently carefully considering the matter and I will update staff in due course.

Equal Pay Settlement: PSNI/DOJ/NIO

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the equal pay settlement for PSNI, Department of Justice and Northern Ireland Office staff; and for a timescale to fully implement this settlement.

(AQW 29119/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am currently carefully considering the matter and I will update staff in due course when I have made my decision.

North Down: Unemployment

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people are currently unemployed in the North Down area.

(AQW 29132/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland (NI) Labour Force Survey (LFS). However, the LFS is a sample survey and estimates of unemployment, at sub-NI geographies, are not sourced to the LFS because of the relatively large confidence intervals around such estimates. This is due to sample size constraints in the LFS.

The table attached is sourced instead to the claimant count measure of unemployment. This shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits at October 2013 in the North Down Parliamentary Constituency Area and this figure as a percentage of the resident working age population.

Table 1 – Claimant Count at October 2013

Parliamentary Constituency Area	Claimants
	Number	% of working age population
North Down	2,027	3.6

Barnett Consequentials

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the Barnett Formula Consequentials which result from the Chancellor's autumn statement.

(AQW 29158/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As a result of the UK Chancellor's Autumn Statement Northern Ireland received an additional £0.3 million / £45.0 million / £51.9 million Resource DEL in 2013-14, 2014-15 and 2015-16 respectively. In addition, Northern Ireland received £10.4 million / £28.5 million Capital DEL in 2014-15 and 2015-16. Of these Capital allocations, £3.3 million and £22.3 million are ring-fenced for Financial Transactions Capital.

Barnett Consequentials: Free School Meals

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much of the £136 million Barnett Consequentials is linked directly to the UK Government's Free School Meals policy.

(AQW 29183/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As a result of the Free School Meals policy announcement in Whitehall Northern Ireland received a Barnett share of £38.4 million. Importantly, this allocation is unhypothecated, which means it is for the Executive to decide how this funding should be spent in line with local needs and priorities.

Barnett Consequentials

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide a breakdown of the £136 million Barnett Consequentials, resulting from the Autumn Statement.

(AQW 29184/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The £136 million Barnett Consequentials comprised net additions in Resource DEL, Capital DEL and Financial Transactions Capital DEL. In terms of Resource DEL there were net additions of £0.3 million in 2013-14; 45.0 million in 2014-15; and £51.9 million in 2015-16. For Capital DEL the increases were £7.1 million in 2014-15 and £6.1 million in 2015-16, whilst for Financial Transaction Capital the additions were £3.3 million and £22.3 million over the next two years.

Crucially, these consequentials are unhypothecated, which means it is for the Executive to decide how this funding should be spent in line with local needs and priorities.

Budget: Autumn Statement 2013

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the implications of the Autumn Statement.

(AQW 29201/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Autumn Statement has many positives for Northern Ireland, not least the £136 million increase in the Northern Ireland Executive's Budget over the next two years. This increase, of course, reflects the out-workings of the Barnett Formula and again demonstrates how this can work for Northern Ireland when Health and Education is protected from spending reductions in England.

There were also a number of specific decisions taken by the Chancellor, which will have a positive impact for many people in Northern Ireland. These included an increase of £2.95 per week in the state pension from April 2014; cancellation of next year's planned fuel duty rise; a new married couples tax allowance, which will benefit some 130,000 couples in Northern Ireland; and abolition of National Insurance contributions for those aged under 21, which could save local businesses some £10 million.

Gross Domestic Product: Gross Debt

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide the proportion of Gross Value Added which is accounted for by British Government Borrowing for the most recent five years that data is available

(AQW 29225/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: UK General Government gross debt as a proportion of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) - the standard measure of economic output at a national level - is provided in the table below:

	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012
UK General Government Gross Debt as % of UK GDP	51.1%	67.1%	78.4%	84.3%	88.7%

North Antrim: DFP Offices

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many offices are available in the North Antrim constituency; and to detail the square footage of 'Grade A' office space.

(AQW 29240/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: DFP has seven offices in the North Antrim constituency totalling 171,157 square feet. DFP does not categorise its office accommodation by means of Grade A, B or C.

DFP Properties: Vacant/Underutilised

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of departmentally owned properties which are either vacant or under utilised; and (ii) to outline any plans to dispose of them.

(AQW 29262/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There are currently eight properties vacant and one underutilised within DFP Properties Division Estate.

- Two are for sale on the open market;
- Three are in the process of being disposed of;
- One is being refurbished to accommodate staff which will allow us to surrender leased buildings;
- One is currently under review as the Department may seek planning permission for change of use to increase potential yield; and
- One will be demolished.

Welfare Reform Bill: Financial Penalties

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the outworking of the penalty imposed by Her Majesty's Government, given the failure to implement welfare reforms by the 1 January 2014.

(AQW 29479/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Without any progress on the Welfare Reform Bill in this financial year, the Executive will be faced with penalties of £15 million. The Executive will need to consider, as part of its January monitoring round, the impact of these penalties on the 2013-14 financial position.

Should the delay in implementing welfare reforms stretch beyond this financial year, then the Executive will need to consider the implications of this in future years.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Prisoners: Complex Needs

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department works with other jurisdictions to find suitable facilities for offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties once they leave prison.

(AQW 28056/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Arrangements are not in place for my Department to work with other jurisdictions to find suitable facilities for offenders with complex needs such as alcoholism, substance abuse and learning difficulties once they leave prison. Rather arrangements are in place between the South East Health and Social Care Trust and the other HSC Trusts to ensure that all relevant information is shared when a prisoner is discharged into the community.

The Department of Justice works closely with a range of agencies, in a number of other jurisdictions, in designing and developing interventions to ensure a co-ordinated approach to dealing with offenders with complex needs and inform the implementation of best practice programmes.

Ophthalmology Service

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the Regional Eye Clinic communicates (i) appointment details; and (ii) outcomes of appointments, with patients who have a visual impairment.

(AQW 28951/11-15)

Mr Poots: The in Belfast Health and Social Care Trust provides a number of services to patients with a visual impairment within the Belfast Trust area and Northern Ireland.

The majority of appointments for Ophthalmology within the Belfast Trust area are communicated to patients via appointment letters. The Trust acknowledges that these may be difficult to read for those with visual impairment as the font size and layout is limited on its Patient Administration System (PAS). The Trust is currently looking at ways to address this problem through the work of its Disability sub group on Accessible Information & Communications. Appointments are also communicated via SMS and voicemail.

The outcomes of any outpatient appointment are discussed with the patient in detail at the time of their appointment and then communicated via letter to their GP shortly after.

Any outreach Ophthalmology clinics which are held in other areas of Northern Ireland are managed locally by the relevant Health and Social Care Trust.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Voluntary and Community Organisations

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list all the community organisations in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area that received funding from his Department in the last twelve months.

(AQW 28969/11-15)

Mr Poots: The voluntary and community organisations in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area that received funding in the last twelve months are listed below. Funding was provided by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust and the Public Health Agency.

Dementia: Diagnosis

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he is taking to improve the rates of dementia diagnosis.

(AQW 28988/11-15)

Mr Poots: The regional dementia strategy, which I published in November 2011, addresses the importance of early diagnosis, and includes an action for the HSC Board in collaboration with the Public Health Agency and HSC Trusts to draw up criteria and clear protocols for referral from GP practices to memory services. This will assist in the assessment and diagnosis of dementia. Work is underway to complete this action, as part of the wider implementation of the strategy.

The Alzheimer's Society study entitled 'Mapping the Dementia Gap' shows that Northern Ireland has a diagnosis rate of 63% (11'800 people) which is just marginally below Scotland (64.4%) and well above the UK average of 46%. This is based on the number of people on GP dementia registers.

Broken down by area, the Belfast HSC Trust rates are highest in UK.

The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that it is aware of the gap in diagnosis rates across Northern Ireland and has been taking steps to address this. Services are being developed to include pre-diagnostic counselling, comprehensive assessment, post diagnostic counselling, support and education in the area of dementia. Increasing the timely diagnosis of dementia requires multi-agency partnership working and the Trust is making significant progress in this area. As a result of these measures, the Trust has indicated that it has the largest increase in diagnosis rate across Northern Ireland and it remains committed to further improvement.

Dementia: Belfast and Northern Health and Social Care Trusts

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the differential between the rate of dementia diagnosis in the Belfast and Northern Health and Social Care Trusts in 2012-13.

(AQW 28989/11-15)

Mr Poots: The regional dementia strategy, which I published in November 2011, addresses the importance of early diagnosis, and includes an action for the HSC Board in collaboration with the Public Health Agency and HSC Trusts to draw up criteria and clear protocols for referral from GP practices to memory services. This will assist in the assessment and diagnosis of dementia. Work is underway to complete this action, as part of the wider implementation of the strategy.

Human Trafficking: Health Service

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken in the Health Service to train staff to spot signs of human trafficking.

(AQW 28997/11-15)

Mr Poots: A range of measures are in place to train and support staff working in the Health Service to recognise the signs of Human Trafficking.

In February 2011 the DHSSPS, with the Police Service of Northern Ireland issued Guidance on "Working arrangements for the Welfare and Safeguarding of Child Victims/Suspected victims of Human Trafficking.

In October 2012 the DHSSPS and the Department of Justice jointly issued Guidance on "Working arrangements for the Welfare and Protection of Adult Victims of Human Trafficking".

Further Guidance "Pathway for Safeguarding and Promoting the Welfare of separated children" was launched in November 2013. Following the launch the Health and Social Care Board is leading on a training needs analysis. This will form the basis for specific training to be provided by HSCTs to staff in relation to this area of practice for 2014/15.

In addition, awareness training and/or specialist training is provided for social workers as appropriate in relation to their duties.

Learning Disability: Transition

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how his Department is working with the Department for Employment and Learning and the Department of Education to identify and respond to specific barriers faced by young people with a learning disability at key life transitions during school, training and employment and day centre opportunities.

(AQW 29018/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department and the HSC continues to work closely with the Department for Employment and Learning, the Department of Education, and their agencies, to assist young people with a learning disability during transition from children's to adult services and, on leaving school, to have access to the fullest possible range of day opportunities and support in appropriate settings.

To assist young people with a learning disability in overcoming barriers encountered during such transitions, each Health and Social Care Trust has designated individuals/teams who collaborate with other Departments/Agencies, allied health professionals and the voluntary and community sector, to assist the young person and their family in planning ahead. These plans should take into account the aspirations and aptitudes of the young person and seek to assist their progression into meaningful day opportunities - involving further education, training, supported employment, social and leisure activities, along with appropriate care and support.

The need for inter-departmental and inter-agency working was highlighted in the Bamford Equal Lives Report and many actions and strategies stemming from that, including the Regional Day Opportunities Model, recently consulted on by the HSC Board. It is also represented in the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership in which key agencies work together to improve outcomes for disadvantaged children. One of their sub-groups focuses on Transitions of children and young people with disabilities into adulthood.

Ambulances: Spend/Mileage

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the cost of new ambulances in the last five years; and (ii) the mileage on each vehicle, broken down by units of 10,000 miles.

(AQW 29023/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) The capital spend on new A&E Ambulances in the last 5 years was £11.745m.
- (ii) The mileage for the A&E Ambulance Vehicles broken down by units of 10,000 miles are set out below:

Miles	A&E Ambulance
0-9,999	7
10,000-19,999	12
20,000-29,999	9
30,000-39,999	4

IVF: Number of Treatments

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 27786/11- 15, whether he intends to increase the number of treatments for IVF patients.

(AQW 29030/11-15)

Mr Poots: In February 2013, NICE published Clinical Guideline CG156 on Fertility, which updates and replaces CG11. The applicability of this Guideline to Health and Social Care in Northern Ireland has recently been considered and endorsed by my Department, and it is now the responsibility of the HSC Board to implement the guidance.

The HSC Board will now take the necessary steps to prepare a Draft Service Notification (formerly known as "commissioning plan or Board response"), which will set out its approach to implementing the guidance in the context of currently available resources and other HSC priorities.

Protect Life: Suicide Rates

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact that the Protect Life Strategy has had on suicide rates and on the care for a person at risk of suicide.

(AQW 29048/11-15)

Mr Poots: International evidence indicates that efforts to reduce national suicide trends need to be sustained and long term. Over the seven year period leading up to the publication of the Protect Life Strategy in late 2006, the Northern Ireland suicide rate almost doubled. Since then the rate has remained high with an average of 277 recorded deaths each year since 2007. Undoubtedly, lives have been saved through Protect Life services, but it is not possible to estimate how many. The Northern Ireland Audit Office has acknowledged that the relative impact of the Protect Life strategy on suicide is difficult to estimate. This difficulty is due to the fact that suicide is primarily a societal issue and is, therefore, influenced by a very wide range of interacting factors. This fact is recognised in other jurisdictions, some of which do not set reduction targets as part of their suicide prevention strategies.

A wide range of measures have been implemented through Protect Life to care for a person at risk of suicide. These include: training courses on suicide prevention and mental health awareness for health and social care staff; the emergency department Card Before You Leave scheme; the Shine project in the Western HSC Trust area which takes self-harm referrals from emergency departments and provides counselling services; community-led suicide prevention and bereavement support services; and the Lifeline 24/7 crisis response helpline.

GP Appointments

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the estimated annual cost to the public purse of missed GP appointments.

(AQW 29050/11-15)

Mr Poots: General Practitioners (GPs) are independent contractors who contract with the Health and Social Care Board to provide Primary Medical Services to their patients. As independent contractors, GPs are responsible for the day to day management of their practice, including patient appointment arrangements, therefore information on missed appointments is not collated centrally and therefore could only be available at disproportionate cost.

Health Service: Advocacy

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the funding made available to voluntary sector organisations, specifically for the delivery of advocacy services, since June 2012.

(AQW 29054/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not held in the format requested.

Active Tremor: Public Awareness Campaign

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 28326/11-15, why the Public Health Agency feel that active tremor would not benefit from a public awareness campaign.

(AQW 29071/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised by the Public Health Agency that there is no published evidence that a public awareness campaign assists in the management of this condition.

Health Service: Latex Gloves

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that UK independent advisory bodies have recommended that health care settings replace latex gloves with synthetic alternatives, whether he has any plans to follow these recommendations.

(AQW 29072/11-15)

Mr Poots: I understand the Royal College of Physicians and NHS Plus published guidelines on managing latex allergies in the workplace in 2008. The report made a number of recommendations including the use of powder free low protein latex gloves as an alternative to powdered latex gloves.

HSC Trusts have informed my Department that they have, in the main, replaced latex gloves with alternative synthetic gloves. Some HSC Trusts indicated that high quality latex gloves are used in a small number of specialist areas for reasons of dexterity, but this is risk managed.

Latex Allergy: Settlements

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he is aware of latex allergy settlements in England; and what funds are available for such settlements locally.

(AQW 29073/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am aware that there have been latex allergy settlements in England although I am not aware of the individual cases.

There are currently no funds set aside for such settlements locally. In the event of a liability arising the cost would be met from within the overall funding available to my Department.

Latex Allergy: Health Service Staff

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he is aware of type one latex allergy and its affects on Health Service employees.

(AQW 29074/11-15)

Mr Poots: HSC Trusts have confirmed that they are very aware of Type 1 Latex Allergy and any potential risk to employees associated with this is proactively assessed and managed.

Latex Allergy: Management

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many of the recommendations from the evidence based guidelines for the occupational aspects of latex allergy management, produced by NHS Plus Occupational Health Clinical Effectiveness Unit and the Royal College of Physicians in 2008, have been implemented locally.

(AQW 29075/11-15)

Mr Poots: Health and Social Care Trusts have informed my Department that they have implemented the recommendations in the guidelines on the management of latex allergies published by the Royal College of Physicians and NHS Plus in 2008.

South West Acute Hospital: Car Parking

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the full cost of purchasing and installing the systems for car park charging at the South West Acute Hospital; (ii) the projected running and maintenance costs of the system for each of the next five years; and (iii) the projected income that will be generated from the system in each of the next five years.

(AQW 29081/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) The South West Acute Hospital (SWAH) is a Private Finance Initiative (PFI) project. The costs of purchasing and installing the systems were part of the overall cost to the contractor of providing the hospital.
- (ii) The running and maintenance costs for the car park charging systems form part of a total overall unitary PFI charge to the Trust and are not accounted for separately.
- (iii) The projected income from 1 April 2014 and over each of the next five years is £320k per annum.

Bangor: Firefighters

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many fire fighters are based at Bangor Fire Station.

(AQW 29086/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of firefighters based at Bangor Fire Station at 5 December 2013 is as follows:

Wholetime (Fulltime)	Number
Watch Commander	4
Crew Commander	4
Firefighter	20
Total	28

Retained (Part time)	Number
Watch Commander	1
Crew Commander	2
Firefighter	9
Total	12

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Agency Staff

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost to the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust of using agency staff in 2012/13.

(AQW 29088/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department monitors all of the Health and Social Care Trusts' expenditure on agency staff on a bi-annual basis and the reports are published on the Departmental internet site at:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/hrd/workforce_planning/wpu-monitoring.htm

Gifts and Hospitality: DHSSPS Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many entries his Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 29107/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Special Adviser has not made any entries in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality.

GP Practices: 0844 Telephone Numbers

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the number of GP practices still using 0844, or other high cost, telephone numbers; and what actions he has taken following the debate on this matter in the Assembly on the 29 May 2012.

(AQW 29110/11-15)

Mr Poots: There are currently only 20 GP practices across Northern Ireland using 0844 numbers, which is less than 6% of all practices; by end of 2014 this will reduce to 10 GP practices, less than 3%. The 20 practices are tied into contracts with the Service Provider and there is no legal power to instruct practices to stop using 0844 numbers.

In June 2013 my Department arranged with the Service Provider to offer those practices a separate geographical number which would run alongside their 0844 number which patients could use. To date 10 practices have installed a separate geographical line; 2 have indicated that they are willing to install a separate geographical line; and a further 4 practices are currently exploring the possibility of substituting their 0844 number with a geographical number, using the same service provider.

Of the 20 that currently have a 0844 number, 10 contracts will expire in 2014, 6 in 2015 and 4 in 2016.

My Department will continue to monitor the use of 0844 numbers to ensure that practices do not renew or extend their 0844 contracts.

Health Service: Staff Numbers

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of (i) hospital registrars; (ii) GP registrars; (iii) hospital consultants; and (iv) GPs currently employed through public funding; and the number employed during each of the last two years.

(AQW 29134/11-15)

Mr Poots: The numbers requested (headcount and whole-time equivalent [WTE] where possible) are shown in the table below.

	HSC Trust only -Specialty Registrars		GP Trainees	HSC Trust only - Consultants		GPs (principal and salaried)
	Headcount	WTE	Headcount	Headcount	WTE	Headcount
2012	1240	1218.0	231	1439	1368.9	1170
2013	1207	1183.6	231	1484	1411.1	1171

Sources: Human Resource Management System, Northern Ireland Medical and Dental Training Agency (NIMDTA) and Business Services Organisation (BSO).

Notes

1. Figures for HSC Trust Consultants and Registrars are as at 31st March in the years referred to. NIMDTA have provided GP Trainee numbers as at 1st September each year and include staff on maternity leave. BSO figures on GPs are as at November.
2. GP Trainees receive training posts first within HSC Trusts in a hospital environment, and then within GP practices. Their training in registrar posts takes three years.
3. The request for 'hospital registrars' and 'hospital consultants' has been interpreted as those working within HSC Trusts only. Note, however, that some of these staff may be providing services within the community.

4. Figures for Specialty Registrars include Locum Appointments for Training and Locum Appointments for Service working at registrar level.

GP Practices: Patient Numbers

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average number of patients seen by a GP on a daily basis in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 29136/11-15)

Mr Poots: The data requested is not available. General Practitioners (GPs) are independent contractors who contract with the Health and Social Care Board to provide Primary Medical Services to their patients. As independent contractors, GPs are responsible for the day to day management of their practice, including patient appointment arrangements; therefore information on the number of patients seen each day is not collated centrally and could only be made available at disproportionate cost.

Health Service: Primary Care Funding

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the proportion of Primary Care funding as a share of Health Service expenditure compared with the other regions of the UK.

(AQW 29137/11-15)

Mr Poots: Expenditure by the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency on the four strands of primary care (comprising General Medical Services, General Dental Services, General Ophthalmic Services and Pharmaceutical Services) amounted to £805m in 2012/13.

This represented 22.5% of health-related expenditure in 2012/13 (ie excluding capital expenditure, expenditure by the NI Fire and Rescue Service and spending on personal social services).

Expenditure data for primary care services in the other UK regions is not available on a consistent basis. Therefore a comparable figure is not available.

Nurses: Specialist Training

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of specialist nurses undergoing training in the current financial year and each of the last three years; and the funding committed to support that specialist training.

(AQW 29138/11-15)

Mr Poots: Detailed Information on the number of specialist nurses undergoing training could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Since 2009/10 to date over 840 places have been provided on specialist nursing and midwifery post-registration education specialist practice programmes and post graduate qualifications, covering a wide range of areas including, but not limited to, asthma, allergy, addiction, Parkinson's disease care, Paediatric Thoracic Practice and cardiology.

The Department spends in the region of £7.6m annually on postgraduate nurse training. This figure includes specialist nursing and midwifery training.

Whistle-blowing: Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the statutory function of the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority as a prescribed body under whistleblowing legislation.

(AQW 29141/11-15)

Mr Poots: Prescribed persons are responsible for investigating allegations that fall under their jurisdiction, and for protecting the whistleblower and their interests while conducting an investigation. The RQIA is prescribed as having a role in relation to matters relating to the quality, safety, and availability of health and social care services provided by statutory, independent, community and voluntary providers in Northern Ireland.

Dementia: Strategy and Action Plan

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the Dementia Strategy Implementation Group and the progress of the current action plan.

(AQW 29143/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board and Public Health Agency jointly lead a regional group, which includes people with dementia and their carers, to oversee the implementation of the Dementia Strategy and its recommendations across Northern Ireland. The group has drawn up an Action Plan which is used to report progress in the implementation of the strategy to the Department.

The Action Plan contains 44 initiatives which are being progressed under various headings such as Reducing the Risk or Delaying the Onset of Dementia, Raising Awareness, Promoting Early Assessment and Diagnosis, Supporting People with Dementia and Supporting Carers.

My Department received an update report in June 2013 which detailed significant progress on a majority of the actions. A further update on progress is expected this month.

South West Acute Hospital: Emergency Department

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there are any plans to downgrade the Accident and Emergency department at the South West Acute Hospital.

(AQW 29144/11-15)

Mr Poots: There are no plans to downgrade the South West Acute Hospital's emergency department.

Children: Internet Safety

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department and its arm's-length bodies are taking to protect children from abuse through the internet.

(AQW 29146/11-15)

Mr Poots: At Departmental level, a senior official sits on the UK Council for Child Internet Safety (UKCCIS) Executive Board. The overall mission of the UKCCIS is to coordinate the efforts of Government, industry and others to keep children safe online. My Department also sponsors the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI). As a strategic priority, the SBNI has agreed to develop a co-ordinated strategy and working model to help children at risk of: becoming criminalised through online activity; bullying through cyber activity; and sexual abuse through sexting and online exploitation. To date the SBNI has undertaken a number of initiatives in this area including: a presentation to the Committee for Culture, Arts and Leisure (CAL) in relation to the Investigation into Gaps in Child Protection and Safeguarding across the CAL remit; the funding of training for all SBNI member agencies in the use of the UK Safer Internet Centre risk assessment; and the commissioning of the National Children's Bureau to research e-safety messages available in Northern Ireland to young people, parents and practitioners with which to inform delivery of the SBNI's Strategic Priority, this will be launched in January 2014.

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) continues to prioritise the protection of children through the commissioning of services to protect children from all forms of abuse. The HSCB is supported by all five HSC Trusts which have developed a number of initiatives to protect children from abuse through the Internet. Those initiatives include specific training for Trust staff, including Looked After Children Teams, Residential Staff, and Foster Carers; the agreement of an individual safe caring plan for each Looked After Child at the beginning of their placement which includes safe practices for computer usage; the placing of restrictions on IT equipment provided to Looked After Children to prevent the access of inappropriate material; and the development of leaflets advising children on how to keep safe online.

Human Papilloma Virus: Detection

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of detections of the Human Papilloma Virus over each of the last ten years; and whether his Department is aware of any subsequent deaths as a consequence of the disease.

(AQW 29170/11-15)

Mr Poots: The purpose of the human papillomavirus (HPV) immunisation programme is to prevent cases of and deaths from cervical cancer. Cervical cancer is the second most common cancer in women worldwide. HPV causes 99% per cent of invasive cervical cancer. HPV is a virus that is spread through sexual activity.

This programme, which offers vaccination to all girls when they are 12-13 years old, was introduced in Northern Ireland in 2008 by the then Health Minister, Michael McGimpsey, following a recommendation from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI). JCVI is an independent expert advisory committee that advises the four UK Health Ministers. JCVI consider all the available medical and scientific evidence before recommending which vaccines should be offered. It is expected that the HPV immunisation programme will significantly reduce the incidence of cervical cancer in Northern Ireland in future years.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is the government agency responsible for ensuring that medicines and medical devices work and that they are acceptably safe. All vaccination programmes in Northern Ireland and elsewhere in the UK are subject to ongoing safety monitoring through the Yellow Card system. This ensures that even if there is merely a suspicion that a vaccine or a combination of vaccines has caused an adverse reaction, patients and health professionals are asked to send a Yellow Card to the MHRA. Yellow Card reports received by MHRA on suspected adverse reactions are evaluated, together with additional sources of information such as clinical trial data, medical literature or data from international medicines regulators, in order to identify previously unidentified safety issues or side effects. The MHRA takes action whenever necessary to ensure that vaccines are used in a way that minimises risk while maximising patient benefit. I am not aware of any concerns regarding the HPV vaccines.

HPV vaccines are not used to treat the human papillomavirus; they are a preventative measure. HPV vaccines are highly effective at preventing the infection of the HPV types covered by the vaccines but to be fully effective a girl needs to receive three separate injections over a 6-month period as recommended by JCVI and the vaccine manufacturers.

I am not in a position to provide a detailed breakdown of the cost of the HPV vaccination programme since it was introduced, due to a commercial confidentiality clause in the contract for the supply of the vaccine Cervarix which was used across the UK when the HPV vaccination programme was introduced, however I can advise that the programme currently costs approximately £900k per annum. The broad breakdown of this figure is approximately £590k for the vaccine and £340k for administration of the vaccine by school health teams.

Human papillomavirus is not routinely tested for in Northern Ireland. There are approximately 100 types of human papillomavirus, of which about 40 infect the genital tract. Although most infections are asymptomatic and self-limiting, genital infection by HPV is associated with genital warts and anogenital cancers in both men and women. HPV types are classified as either high-risk or low-risk, depending on their association with the development of cancer. Most HPV infections in young women are temporary and have little long-term significance. Seventy percent of infections are gone in one year and ninety percent in two years. However, when the infection persists in 5% to 10% of infected women there is high risk of developing precancerous lesions of the cervix, which can progress to invasive cervical cancer. This process usually takes 10 to 15 years, providing many opportunities for detection and treatment of the pre-cancerous lesion. In January 2013 HPV Testing was incorporated within the NI Cervical Screening Programme. Cervical smears which contain borderline or low-grade abnormalities are tested for high-risk HPV strains and, if a test is positive, the woman is referred to colposcopy. Women with borderline or mildly abnormal smears that are HPV-negative are able to return to routine recall for cervical screening straight away instead of having a number of follow-up smears.

Human papillomavirus is not a disease; it is a micro-organism which causes a range of diseases. The HPV vaccine that is currently used in the UK – Gardasil – was designed by the manufacturer to prevent not only cervical cancer but also genital warts.

Because HPV is transmitted through sexual contact, girls are offered vaccination at age 12/13, before the vast majority of them become sexually active. Cervical cancer is most commonly diagnosed between the ages of 25 and 50. As the immunisation programme was introduced in 2008 it will be several decades yet before the full impact of the programme can be known, however it is expected that in due course HPV vaccination will prevent up to 70% of invasive cervical cancers.

Human Papilloma Virus: Treatment

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why people requiring treatment for the Human Papilloma Virus are recommended to receive 3 separate doses of the Human Papilloma Virus Vaccine.

(AQW 29172/11-15)

Mr Poots: The purpose of the human papillomavirus (HPV) immunisation programme is to prevent cases of and deaths from cervical cancer. Cervical cancer is the second most common cancer in women worldwide. HPV causes 99% per cent of invasive cervical cancer. HPV is a virus that is spread through sexual activity.

Human papillomavirus is not a disease; it is a micro-organism which causes a range of diseases. The HPV vaccine that is currently used in the UK – Gardasil – was designed by the manufacturer to prevent not only cervical cancer but also genital warts.

Because HPV is transmitted through sexual contact, girls are offered vaccination at age 12/13, before the vast majority of them become sexually active. Cervical cancer is most commonly diagnosed between the ages of 25 and 50. As the immunisation programme was introduced in 2008 it will be several decades yet before the full impact of the programme can be known, however it is expected that in due course HPV vaccination will prevent up to 70% of invasive cervical cancers.

Human Papilloma Virus: Vaccine

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on what evidence, research and tests the Human Papilloma Virus Vaccine was adopted for use; and whether his Department is aware of any side effects associated with the vaccine.

(AQW 29173/11-15)

Mr Poots: The purpose of the human papillomavirus (HPV) immunisation programme is to prevent cases of and deaths from cervical cancer. Cervical cancer is the second most common cancer in women worldwide. HPV causes 99% per cent of invasive cervical cancer. HPV is a virus that is spread through sexual activity.

This programme, which offers vaccination to all girls when they are 12-13 years old, was introduced in Northern Ireland in 2008 by the then Health Minister, Michael McGimpsey, following a recommendation from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI). JCVI is an independent expert advisory committee that advises the four UK Health Ministers. JCVI consider all the available medical and scientific evidence before recommending which vaccines should be offered. It is expected that the HPV immunisation programme will significantly reduce the incidence of cervical cancer in Northern Ireland in future years.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is the government agency responsible for ensuring that medicines and medical devices work and that they are acceptably safe. All vaccination programmes in Northern Ireland and elsewhere in the UK are subject to ongoing safety monitoring through the Yellow Card system. This ensures that even if there is merely a suspicion that a vaccine or a combination of vaccines has caused an adverse reaction, patients and health professionals are asked to send a Yellow Card to the MHRA. Yellow Card reports received by MHRA on suspected adverse reactions are evaluated, together with additional sources of information such as clinical trial data, medical literature or data from international medicines regulators, in order to identify previously unidentified safety issues or side effects. The MHRA takes action whenever necessary to ensure that vaccines are used in a way that minimises risk while maximising patient benefit. I am not aware of any concerns regarding the HPV vaccines.

HPV vaccines are not used to treat the human papillomavirus; they are a preventative measure. HPV vaccines are highly effective at preventing the infection of the HPV types covered by the vaccines but to be fully effective a girl needs to receive three separate injections over a 6-month period as recommended by JCVI and the vaccine manufacturers.

I am not in a position to provide a detailed breakdown of the cost of the HPV vaccination programme since it was introduced, due to a commercial confidentiality clause in the contract for the supply of the vaccine Cervarix which was used across the UK when the HPV vaccination programme was introduced, however I can advise that the programme currently costs approximately £900k per annum. The broad breakdown of this figure is approximately £590k for the vaccine and £340k for administration of the vaccine by school health teams.

Human papillomavirus is not routinely tested for in Northern Ireland. There are approximately 100 types of human papillomavirus, of which about 40 infect the genital tract. Although most infections are asymptomatic and self-limiting, genital infection by HPV is associated with genital warts and anogenital cancers in both men and women. HPV types are classified as either high-risk or low-risk, depending on their association with the development of cancer. Most HPV infections in young women are temporary and have little long-term significance. Seventy percent of infections are gone in one year and ninety percent in two years. However, when the infection persists in 5% to 10% of infected women there is high risk of developing precancerous lesions of the cervix, which can progress to invasive cervical cancer. This process usually takes 10 to 15 years, providing many opportunities for detection and treatment of the pre-cancerous lesion. In January 2013 HPV Testing was incorporated within the NI Cervical Screening Programme. Cervical smears which contain borderline or low-grade abnormalities are tested for high-risk HPV strains and, if a test is positive, the woman is referred to colposcopy. Women with borderline or mildly abnormal smears that are HPV-negative are able to return to routine recall for cervical screening straight away instead of having a number of follow-up smears.

Belfast Health and Social Care Trust: Appointment of Chairperson

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the process for the appointment of a Chair of the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) when an appointment will be made; (iii) the total number of applicants for the post; (iv) how many individuals were interviewed; and (v) who made up the interview panel.

(AQW 29186/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department's established Public Appointments process which complies with the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland was the methodology applied to this competition. The appointment opportunity was advertised in the three regional newspapers, and in addition advertised on the Department's and OFMDFM websites and circulated to those individuals and organisations registered on the Departmental Mailing List as interested in all DHSSPS public appointments. A re-advertisement was also placed due to the low number of initial applications received Appointment will be made once the appointment process has been completed. Ten applications were received. Four applicants having met the criteria were invited for interview. The interview panel comprised of Dr Andrew McCormick (DHSSPS Permanent Secretary, Panel Chair), Mrs Kathryn Riddle (Panel Member) and Mrs Anne Rowe (Independent Assessor, allocated by CPA NI).

Hospitals: Social Workers

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of social workers employed by, or based in, each acute hospital.

(AQW 29197/11-15)

Mr Poots: The numbers (headcount and whole-time equivalent [WTE]) of hospital social workers based in each acute hospital are shown in the table below.

Hospital	Headcount	WTE
Altnagelvin	16	13.65
Antrim	15	12.75

Learning Disability: Regional Day Opportunities Model

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he would finance the day care model referred to in the Regional Day Opportunities Model for Adults with a Learning Disability consultation. (AQW 29208/11-15)

Mr Poots: Once the Regional Day Opportunities Model is agreed and any recommended amendments are made, each of the five Health and Social Care Trusts will benchmark their current services against this regional model.

It is fully recognised that, given demographic pressures on learning disability services and the improvements to services which the Model will require, there will be an additional need for both revenue and capital.

The vision set out in the Bamford Review and confirmed in Transforming Your Care is to enable people with Learning Disabilities to lead full and meaningful lives in their own communities.

The Model recommends that future services should be delivered on a joint cross-departmental and inter-agency basis, recognising that day opportunities are not solely a responsibility of Health and Social Care. Consequently, as with the general response to Bamford, some of the costs in making a reality of the Model will be shared with other Government Departments who may also bid for further resources.

Learning Disability: Regional Day Opportunities Model

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps he has taken to ensure that the Regional Day Opportunities Model for Adults with a Learning Disability consultation consults with service users and carers. (AQW 29209/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board utilised a best practice approach to ensure that service users and carers are fully consulted on the Regional Day Opportunities Model for Adults with a Learning Disability. A number of processes were undertaken. As the first stage in the consultation, and to ensure a truly independent response, an event was arranged and led by Compass Advocacy Network (CAN) on behalf of the HSC Board. This took place in September 2013 and involved over 100 people, including many with learning disabilities, from across Northern Ireland. CAN is a user-led charity managed by and for people with learning disabilities and has significant experience in facilitating user participation events.

The HSC Board wrote to every known relevant organisation on its database advising of the consultation and inviting responses. They also wrote to all user/carer groups within the five HSC Trusts inviting them to take part in the consultation and providing a range of options on how to do so. A range of documents including an 'Easy Read' version of the consultation were developed and designed by people with Learning Disabilities. Advertisements were placed in regional newspapers to publicise the consultation process and further notices were placed in regional and local newspapers to invite people to the local public meetings held in each Trust area. A variety of social media were also used to promote awareness of the consultation and invite responses.

By 12 December, thirteen local public meetings were held which have been well attended by people with a learning disability and their carers. The original final date for submission of responses has been extended by 4 weeks until the 10 January 2014.

Learning Disability: Regional Day Opportunities Model

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what arrangements the Health and Social Care Board made to ensure that all service users and carers were aware of the recommendations outlined in the Regional Learning Disability Day Opportunities Model in advance of the public consultation meetings.

(AQW 29210/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board utilised a best practice approach to ensure that service users and carers are fully consulted on the Regional Day Opportunities Model for Adults with a Learning Disability. A number of processes were undertaken. Female Genital Mutilation

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department is aware of any cases of female genital mutilation; and whether victims have been treated in hospital.

(AQW 29213/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on cases of Female Genital Mutilation is not currently collected by my Department or the Health and Social Care Board. The Northern Ireland Maternity System is currently undergoing an update and information on women presenting to maternity services who have undergone Female Genital Mutilation will be collected in future.

Ambulances: Response Times

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the average ambulance response times for the (i) Creggan; (ii) Creggan South; and (iii) City Walls electoral wards.

(AQW 29238/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department's current performance indicator for ambulance response times is that 72.5% of all Category A (life-threatening) calls are responded to within eight minutes, with no less than 67.5% in any Local Commissioning Group (LCG). Performance against this indicator is detailed in the table below for each month since April 2013.

Percentage of Category A (Life threatening) Calls Responded to Within Eight Minutes (April – October 2013).

LCG	Apr 2013	May 2013	Jun 2013	July 2013	Aug 2013	Sept 2013	Oct 2013
Belfast LCG	75.7%	83.0%	85.0%	83.9%	83.4%	85.9%	84.9%
Northern LCG	58.0%	58.8%	61.5%	56.6%	62.1%	62.6%	65.0%
South Eastern LCG	57.2%	66.3%	68.4%	64.1%	65.1%	61.4%	68.2%
Southern LCG	60.3%	62.6%	63.3%	65.7%	64.4%	63.9%	65.7%
Western LCG	64.0%	66.8%	66.4%	65.9%	66.1%	72.1%	71.5%
Northern Ireland	63.8%	68.7%	69.8%	68.4%	69.3%	70.8%	72.1%

North Antrim: Registered Carers

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of registered carers who are over the age of 60, in the North Antrim constituency.

(AQW 29252/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is not available.

North Antrim: Autism

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what resources have been invested to support people diagnosed with autism and their families in the North Antrim constituency, in each of the last three years; and to outline his Department's policies for assisting these families and the charities that support them.

(AQW 29253/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not available for the North Antrim constituency; however investment in autism specific services in the NHSC is outlined in the table below:

Year	Children's services (£)	Adult services (£)
2011	294,866
2012	340,977	139,857
2013	340,977	170,357

Given that autism is a spectrum disorder, support services for individuals and their families are based on assessed need. In addition to the health and social care services available to the local population, the Northern HSC Trust provide both Children's and Adult's ASD services which operates across the entire Trust area.

These are multidisciplinary autism teams which are made up from a number of different professions. Additional support is available to the teams through education and voluntary sector providers in accordance with an individual's needs.

Health Service: Retirement of Consultants

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many hospital consultants are due to retire over the next two years; and how many of these will be replaced.

(AQW 29270/11-15)

Mr Poots: There is no mandatory retirement age for consultants and they are only required to give three months notice of their intention to retire. It is not possible therefore to estimate how many hospital consultants are due to retire over the next two years. Any posts vacated by consultants who retire are normally replaced.

Health Service: Vacant Consultant Posts

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many vacant consultant posts there are in the Health Service; and why these posts are vacant.

(AQW 29271/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vacancies in HSC organisations are collected biannually and detailed in the Department's HSC Vacancy Survey Reports for March and September each year. The most recent report covers vacancies as at 31st March 2013 and is available at http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/vacancy_survey_march_2013_web-2.pdf. The full position of vacancies as at 30th September 2013 is not yet available. This report will be published in early 2014. Vacancies are defined as posts that HSC organisations are actively recruiting to. A post does not have to be unoccupied in order to be counted as a vacancy.

As at 31st March 2013, there were 72 (69.7 whole-time equivalent) permanent consultant vacancies being recruited to and 27 (27.0 WTE) temporary consultant vacancies. These vacancies occur as part of normal turnover of staff due to retirement, transfers, resignation or can be newly created posts. Trust will usually take steps to fill vacancies substantively in the first instance. Where a post remains unfilled for a period of time, doctors may be employed on a locum basis to cover the requirements of the post in order to meet service needs.

Health Service: Vacant Consultant Posts

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether any consultant posts remain vacant because of cost saving in Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 29273/11-15)

Mr Poots: Health and Social Care Trusts have informed my Department that no consultant posts remain vacant because of cost savings.

Mental Health: Stigma

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what measures he has taken to address the stigma surrounding mental health issues.

(AQW 29308/11-15)

Mr Poots: In October 2011, I launched the Public Health Agency's "Under the Surface" public information campaign which aimed to de-stigmatise mental illness and raise awareness of the early warning signs and symptoms. The Agency has just launched a new campaign which continues the emphasis on encouraging people to discuss their feelings, builds on the previous approach to stigma reduction, and focuses on recovery.

Other action taken forward by the Public Health Agency to improve awareness of mental health issues, reduce stigma associated with mental illness, and encourage help-seeking behaviour includes: local seminars and educational workshops; mental health awareness training; the hosting of websites providing advice and information; and work with the media to encourage more positive reporting on the issue. The reduction of stigma associated with mental illness will be a priority in the new Suicide Prevention and Positive Mental Health Strategy currently being developed.

My Department is also continuing work on the draft Mental Capacity Bill. The approach of the Bill means that mental capacity and mental health legislation will, for the first time in any jurisdiction, be encompassed into a single piece of legislation. This will reduce the stigma associated with separate mental health legislation which was a key recommendation of the Bamford Review. It remains my intention that the Bill will be enacted within the current mandate of the Assembly.

South Down: Mental Health Services for Young People

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what mental health services exist for young people; and specifically in the South Down area.

(AQW 29309/11-15)

Mr Poots: Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) in Northern Ireland are provided through a stepped care model, based on the clinical needs of the individual.

CAMHS for the northern part of the South Down constituency area are provided by the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust, on behalf of the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust from a local community based team in the Lagan Valley Hospital site. This team also provides outreach to Downpatrick. CAMHS for the southern part of the South Down constituency area are provided by the Southern Trust in local community based teams in Newry and Portadown. CAMHS consist of multidisciplinary teams that specialise in the assessment and intervention for under 18s with mental health needs and their families/carers.

Services for children and young people presenting in crisis, and requiring urgent assessment and intervention, are provided by Crisis Assessment Teams which are available 7 days per week.

Inpatient care for young people, when required, is provided in Beechcroft, the Regional Child and Adolescent Inpatient Mental Health Unit in Belfast.

Air Ambulance

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the provision of an air ambulance. (AQW 29315/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am currently considering the recommendations and implications of a report undertaken by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) about the feasibility for a helicopter emergency medical service (HEMS)/air ambulance in Northern Ireland.

In addition, I am liaising with the Irish Health Minister, Dr James Reilly TD, regarding the potential for a cross-border HEMS/air ambulance service.

The HSCB has in place an air ambulance contract for the transfer of adult and paediatric patients to and from Northern Ireland. This service is used primarily to transport seriously ill patients from a referring NI hospital to Belfast International Airport for onward transfer by dedicated aircraft to GB NHS services. It is also used to repatriate patients back to NI hospitals following treatment if they are deemed too unwell to travel by other means.

Foyle: Mental Health Services

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) how many people have been referred to the mental health team in the Foyle constituency in the last two years; (ii) how many staff, and at what level, are available in this team; (iii) to detail the projected funding for mental health services up to 2015; (iv) how many people have presented in the Foyle constituency with (a) depression; and (b) anxiety problems, in the last two years.

(AQW 29322/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) From April 2011 to April 2013, 3,247 people have been referred to the mental health team in the Foyle constituency.
- (ii) All new referrals are in the first instance referred to the Primary Care Mental Health team, which is made up of:
 - 1 Team Manager
 - 5 Social Workers (Band 6 and above)
 - 9 Community Psychiatric Nurses (between Bands 6 and above)
 - 1 Consultant Psychiatrist
 - 1 Staff Grade Doctor
 - 1 Junior Doctor
 - 6 Administration staff

- (iii) Currently the Western HSC Trust's total recurrent expenditure on mental health services across the whole Trust is £27.6M. It is not possible at this stage to detail the projected funding for mental health services up to 2015.
- (iv) Information on the numbers of people who have presented in the Foyle constituency with depression and anxiety problems, in the last two years is not available.

GPs: Numbers Practising

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of GPs practising in each year since 2008; and whether there is any predicted rise in the numbers over the next few years.

(AQW 29335/11-15)

Mr Poots: Figures provided by the Family Practitioner Services Information and Registration Unit in the HSC Business Services Organisation are as shown in the following Table:

Year	Number of GPs
2008#	1,148
2009#	1,156
2010#	1,160
2011#	1,163
2012$	1,170
2013$	1,171

Figures as at October each year.

$ Figures as at November each year. The figures include principal and salaried GPs only, locums are not included.

No rise is predicted in the number of practicing GPs over the next few years.

Medical/Dental Consultants: Numbers Practising

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of consultants working in each year since 2008; and whether there is any predicted rise in the numbers over the next few years.

(AQW 29336/11-15)

Mr Poots: The headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE) of medical and dental consultants working in HSC organisations in each year since 2008 are shown in the table below.

Year	Headcount	WTE
2008	1305	1227.1
2009	1346	1271.9
2010	1377	1302.1
2011	1406	1328.0
2012	1494	1411.4
2013	1542	1455.0

Source: NI HSC Human Resources Management System/ Human Resources, Payroll, Travel and Subsistence System. Figures are as at 31st March in each year, and exclude staff with a whole-time equivalent less than or equal to 0.03 and staff on career breaks.

This shows a 19% increase in the HSC whole-time equivalent consultant workforce since 2008.

With regard to predicted increases, local staffing arrangements are the responsibility of HSC employers based on service need and available resources. The Department has a role in ensuring there are sufficient, suitably qualified staff to meet the needs of the service overall.

GPs: Number of Consultations

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average number of consultations which GPs have had per patient in each year since 2008.

(AQW 29337/11-15)

Mr Poots: The data requested is not available. General Practitioners (GPs) are independent contractors who contract with the Health and Social Care Board to provide Primary Medical Services to their patients. As independent contractors, GPs are responsible for the day to day management of their practice, including patient appointment arrangements; therefore information on the annual average number of consultations per patient is not collated centrally and could only be made available at disproportionate cost.

Medical General Practice: Investment

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has for investment in general practice from 2013-2016 as part of Transforming Your Care.

(AQW 29338/11-15)

Mr Poots: The role of general practice is recognised as a critical element of the new models of care set out in Transforming Your Care (TYC) and investment in General Practice is planned across the following areas:

- The 'shift left' of services set out in TYC, is supported by a planned shift of 5% of current resources from secondary care to primary and community care, including general practice, underpinning the overarching vision for TYC which is care closer to home and greater access to services in the right place at the right time;
- An estimated £16.4m of investment during the implementation of TYC in support of the establishment and development of ICPs in which GPs will play a key role;
- A continuation of the investment which has been made over a number of years via Enhanced Services aligned to the strategic direction of TYC to promote early intervention and prevention, and deliver more care closer to home rather than in hospital;
- Workforce and service planning to ensure there is sufficient numbers and capacity within general practice to meet the needs of our population and facilitate the shift left will be critical, and work has commenced to review this across a number of medical sub-specialties including general practice; and
- Alongside investment in general practice directly, a programme of infrastructure development and investment is taking place across Northern Ireland to provide upgraded accommodation for general practice, as well as a range of other health and social care services in one location which will reduce the need for patients to travel outside their locality to access services. This investment will be through a mixture of funding options which will be explored depending on the availability of funding and business case approval following the budget.

Extracorporeal Membrane Oxygenation

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when staff in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast will be trained in Extra Corporeal Membrane Oxygenation.

(AQW 29360/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Belfast Trust advises that in an emergency, staff can ensure those patients requiring emergency ECMO can be cared for safely. ECMO has been previously used successfully in the Cardiac Surgery Unit in Belfast, and staff training will ensure best practice guidelines are adhered to. The Trust further advises that there are several centres within the UK who provide training on ECMO and that they are making arrangements for staff to be facilitated within these courses.

North Down: Respite Care

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many respite care places are available in North Down on a weekly basis.

(AQW 29372/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the South Eastern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. Their response is provided below.

Children's Disability

There are 6 beds available for overnight respite in the North Down geographic locality. These are allocated to a number of families throughout the year.

Older Peoples Services

There are 10 block beds for respite in the North Down & Ards sector in a range of Frail Elderly and Elderly Mentally Infirm nursing and residential homes which can be booked in advance for respite breaks.

In addition, the Trust also spot purchase beds in nursing and residential homes for respite to meet demand as required. In the week commencing 2nd December 2013, 9 additional beds were spot purchased for respite.

Tobacco: EU Directive

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the introduction of minimum pack size for tobacco products under the revised EU Tobacco Products Directive.

(AQW 29375/11-15)

Mr Poots: I support the UK position on the revised EU Tobacco Products Directive which is currently under consideration in the European Parliament. The revised Directive includes measures for banning certain flavourings from tobacco products, introducing larger warnings on packaging and phasing out smaller packs of ten cigarettes.

I support these measures that will help to reduce the appeal of smoking for children and young people, and will also limit their access to cigarettes.

I understand the revised Directive is expected to be adopted in 2014 and the agreed measures will come into effect in all EU Member States, including the UK, from 2015/16.

Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority: Nursing Home Inspectors

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) how many nursing home inspectors are employed by the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA); (ii) how many nursing homes are on the RQIA's register; and (iii) how many people currently reside in those nursing homes.

(AQW 29377/11-15)

Mr Poots: RQIA employs a team of 9 nursing home inspectors. In addition RQIA employ a number of estates, pharmacy and financial inspectors who may also play a role in the inspection of nursing homes.

There are currently 269 nursing homes in Northern Ireland registered with the RQIA.

There are 10,965 nursing bed spaces within these nursing homes. Whilst RQIA records the number of patients accommodated within an individual home on the day of inspection, it does not maintain a day by day occupancy figure across the whole sector.

Children: Safeguarding Referrals

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 28643/11-15, how many children have been referred to the social services safeguarding team in each of the last three years.

(AQW 29396/11-15)

Mr Poots: All Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts have a Gateway Service that receive all new referrals regarding children and young people in need, including children where there are safeguarding concerns. In general, although there are some variations between the HSC Trusts, the HSC Trusts do not have dedicated social services children's safeguarding teams. Those children referred to social services who are deemed to require an ongoing service following initial assessment will be referred to appropriate Family Intervention/Support teams.

The table below contains the number of children referred to social services (Gateway Teams) in each of the last three years.

Table 1: The number of children referred to Social Services (2010/11 – 2012/13)

Year	Children Referred to Social Services ¹
2010/11	26,725
2011/12	28,496
2012/13	29,508

This information is available in 'Children's Social Care Statistics for Northern Ireland 2012/13' which can be found on the Department's website at the following link: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats_research/stats-cib/statistics_and_research-cib-pub/children_statistics/stats-cib-children_order.htm

Health Service: Social Enterprise

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the funding his Department has set aside for projects that can be delivered through social enterprise.

(AQW 29419/11-15)

Mr Poots: Funding provided in health and social care can be accessed by organisations using a variety of business models. No funding is specifically set aside for social enterprise.

Royal Victoria Hospital: Critical Care Building

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) whether the planned opening of the critical care building at the Royal Victoria Hospital has been delayed because of issues arising from the construction contract; (ii) when the building will open; (iii) to detail the cost of any defects with the building or from the contract; and (iv) whether the Health Service will incur costs from the defects and the delayed opening of the business.

(AQW 29420/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) The planned opening of the critical care building has been delayed by the discovery of pipe-work corrosion problems which necessitated the complete removal and replacement of all five sealed water systems in the building; these were installed under the construction contract and the issue must be resolved under the terms of contract;
- (ii) It is now planned to bring the building into operation on a phased basis in the latter half of 2014 and early 2015;
- (iii) The contractor is responsible for the cost of repair and the details of the costs incurred by the contractor are not therefore available; and,
- (iv) The Trust has had to incur expenditure (e.g. additional design team fees, expert opinion, etc.) which will now have to be recovered from the contractor in the settlement of the case.

Royal Victoria Hospital: Critical Care Building

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much money has been invested in the critical care building at the Royal Victoria Hospital to date.

(AQW 29421/11-15)

Mr Poots: To date £139.5m has been invested in the critical care building project on the Royal Group of Hospitals. While a further investment of £8.8m is planned to complete this building, there has been no capital spent to date in this financial year, while the issues that have caused the project to be delayed are being resolved.

Royal Victoria Hospital: Critical Care Building

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what was the original planned opening date of the critical care building at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

(AQW 29422/11-15)

Mr Poots: Before discovery of the pipe-work corrosion problems, the building was to be handed over on 12 November 2012 and the Trust intended to bring the building into operation on a phased basis – theatres on 19 March 2013, critical care beds on 10 April 2013, and the emergency department on 18 May 2013. The upper three (maternity) floors were not to come operational until the new Maternity Building is completed in mid 2017.

Fire and Rescue Service: Recruitment

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to the recruitment reserve list for the Fire and Rescue Service, to outline the position on allowing experienced local firefighters, who have been working in Britain, to return to work in the Service.

(AQW 29425/11-15)

Mr Poots: All Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) recruitment activity is subject to external advertisement and competition in order to comply with Employment Equality Legislation. Successful candidates are selected wholly on merit.

NIFRS' policy is that eligible Wholetime Firefighters from other Fire and Rescue Services must apply for posts in response to an external advertisement. However, in recognition of their expertise and experience, applicants from other Fire and Rescue Services are exempt from the normal initial physical and written tests. They are required to compete for entry alongside other candidates at the final interview stage.

Freedom of Information: Ambulance Waits

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why Northern Ireland did not provide any data in response to a Freedom of Information request asking for the longest ambulance waits outside hospital for the 12 weeks from August to October 2013.

(AQW 29442/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service HSC Trust agreed an extension to the deadline for responding to this Freedom of Information request until 13 December 2013.

The response was issued on 9 December 2013.

Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the points in legislation where young people are defined, for the purposes of the work of the Children's and Young People's strategic partnership, as outlined in The NI Children and Young People's Plan 2011-14, Appendix 2, Section 2.2.

(AQW 29502/11-15)

Mr Poots: The legislative mandate for the Children's and Young People's Strategic Partnership (CYPSP) is the statutory duty placed on the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) under The Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 (the 1995 Order) as amended by The Children (1995 Order) (Amendment) (Children's Services Planning) Order (Northern Ireland) 1998 (the 1998 Order). Under the 1995 Order, the HSCB is required to: annually review services provided to children and families under Articles 18, 21, 23, 27, 35 and 36 of the 1995 Order; and, taking account of the annual review and any review conducted under Article 20 (which relates to childminding and day care services), prepare a Children's Services Plan. In constructing the Plan, the 1995 Order requires the HSCB to consult with a range of agencies, named in paragraph 3 of Schedule 2. Article 2 of the 1995 Order, defines a child as a person under the age of 18. The 1995 Order (by way of amendment by The Children (Leaving Care) Act (Northern Ireland) 2002) also makes provision for advice, assistance and support to be provided to former looked after children and young people up to the age of 21.

In addition, Articles 35, 35A, 35B, 35C and 35D of the 1995 Order also enables a young person to receive assistance in respect of employment, education or training until age 24 in specified circumstances.

Department of Justice

Staff Suspensions: DOJ

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of staff suspended in each year since 2010; (ii) the cost of these suspensions; and (iii) the number of suspended staff who were reinstated.

(AQW 29026/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice):

- (i) The number of staff suspended in each year since 12 April 2010 is provided in the table below. Please note that a suspension may carry over more than one calendar year. Therefore, for the purpose of these statistics, the number of ongoing cases per year has also been included for information.

Year	Number of staff suspended	Number of ongoing suspensions
2010 (from 12 April 2010)	22*	-
2011	12	21
2012	17	26
2013	9	17

*19 suspensions were ongoing prior to the DOJ being created.

- (ii) The total cost of suspensions in the Department of Justice since 12 April 2010 is £1,276,709.60. A breakdown of the costs of these suspensions by year is below:

Year	Gross Salary Cost (£)	National Insurance Costs (£)	Pension Costs (£)
2010	324,559.55	23,100.07	63,335.59
2011	306,328.94	24,674.63	66,083.56
2012	222,197.02	19,122.49	43,571.43
2013	145,252.53	11,274.84	27,209.38

- (iii) 47 staff suspended during this period returned from suspension.

Prostitution: Research

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28048/11-15, when he intends to commission research into prostitution, including the estimated commencement and conclusion dates; and when he will publish the Terms of Reference. (AQW 29033/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to the reply I gave him on 27 November 2013

(AQW/28153/11-15). The terms of reference will be shared with the Justice Committee in early January. It is anticipated that the contract for completion of the research will have concluded by autumn 2014.

Kenneth Douglas

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28490/11-15, (i) given the sentence imposed was of some vintage due to the nature of the offences, but taking into account offences involving high violence were committed whilst on licence/parole in the year prior to ultimate release in 2012, why Public Protection Arrangements (PPANI) were not involved in this case; (ii) whether an oversight or issue in this case has been identified as a result of the sentence imposed which could have led to PPANI notification; and (iii) in relation to future similar cases, whether he will amend legislation or guidelines to ensure the risk to the public is fully considered and extensive monitoring is in place to prevent potential re-offending, particularly in cases of high violence and previous re-offending.

(AQW 29057/11-15)

Mr Ford: My previous answer to AQW 28490/11-15 confirmed the offences which Mr Douglas committed during his time living in the community on licence in 2010 did not meet the criteria which would have allowed Public Protection Arrangements in Northern Ireland (PPANI) to be engaged. As a result I can confirm that I am satisfied no oversight occurred in this case nor was any issue identified which could have led to PPANI notification. Furthermore I can also confirm that I have no plans to amend legislation or guidelines as a result of this case.

Inquests: Historical

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to list the historic inquests which are outstanding; and to outline the timescale for holding each inquest.

(AQW 29105/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently 43 historical 'legacy' inquests relating to 70 deaths at various stages of completion. The attached table details these and includes available listing information.

The listing of inquests is a matter for the Coroner and is dependent on a range of factors including the availability and volume of relevant evidential material, the duration and complexity of preparatory work, and witness availability.

Children: Internet Safety

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice what action his Department and the Criminal Justice Agencies are taking to protect children from abuse through the internet.

(AQW 29145/11-15)

Mr Ford: I would refer the Member to the replies I gave Mr McIlveen, under AQW/26116/11-15 and AQW/26117/11-15.

Female Genital Mutilation

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the scale of the problem of female genital mutilation.

(AQW 29215/11-15)

Mr Ford: There have been no convictions for offences under the Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 for the period for which data is available (from commencement to 2009). The Department of Justice does not hold any other data on which to base an assessment.

Legal Aid: Reform

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the responses, particularly from those in the legal profession who currently deal with legal aid cases, to his consultation document in connection with possible changes to the Legal Aid system, how many solicitors firms have indicated they will decline Legal Aid related work if his proposals are implemented.

(AQW 29259/11-15)

Mr Ford: To date, no solicitors have indicated they will decline legal aid related work arising from my proposals to reform both criminal and civil legal aid.

Legal Aid: Budget

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Justice what options his Department has considered with regard to the provision of Legal Aid within an acceptable budget.

(AQW 29301/11-15)

Mr Ford: The budget for NI Legal Services Commission for the years 2011-12 to 2014-15 was set as part of the Budget 2011-15 process.

The reform of legal aid is one of my priorities and bringing legal aid within budget is one of the strategic objectives of legal aid reform. Significant changes have been made to criminal legal aid which will save over £20m annually, and proposals have been published for further reform of both criminal and civil legal aid which are estimated to deliver further annual savings of some £24m.

The budget for 2015-16 will be set as part of the 2015-16 spending review process.

Legal Aid: Scope

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department has considered restricting Legal Aid to matters which pertain to crime, family law and child law.

(AQW 29302/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have asked my officials to begin work to examine the scope of civil legal aid, to allow me to consider whether there are areas where continued financial support from legal aid is inappropriate or unnecessary, or where there may be a better way of resolving the conflict or difficulty involved. That work is at an early stage. I am very aware of the need to ensure that any changes to legal aid will not leave vulnerable people without support, and identifying alternative sources of support will be a major part of this work.

Legal Aid: Reform

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the impact of the reduction in Legal Aid and Civil Aid on the service provided by solicitors to their clients.

(AQW 29303/11-15)

Mr Ford: Impact assessments are completed as part of the public consultation process conducted by my Department in delivering the programme of legal aid reforms. No specific evidence has been provided to the Department by the Law Society or solicitors' firms to quantify the impact on the service to their clients. This would vary from firm to firm depending on the type of work each firm undertakes and the level of legally aided work delivered within the firms.

Family Justice

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Justice what actions his Department has taken to establish a more efficient and financially viable system for child and family law proceedings.

(AQW 29304/11-15)

Mr Ford: Further to a recommendation by the Access to Justice Review for a fundamental review of family justice, my Department, together with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, undertook work scoping a review of the operation of the family justice system. That exercise has been completed and the Minister for Health, Social Services and Public Safety and I have agreed to begin to address the issues found to be impacting on the operation of the system by adopting a staged approach to reform. The initial stage will include:

- the development of proposals for a pilot to minimise unnecessary delay in care proceedings;
- the development of a cross-departmental strategic approach to alternative dispute resolution services for families; and
- consideration of options for dealing with breaches of contact orders.

This initial stage will inform consideration of the need to take forward legislative reform in the future.

Court Boundaries: Legislation

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice at what stage is legislation in relation to the changes of the court boundaries system. (AQW 29325/11-15)

Mr Ford: Provisions for the creation of a single territorial jurisdiction for the county courts and magistrates' courts in Northern Ireland will be included in the Faster, Fairer Justice Bill. It is intended that the Bill will be introduced in Spring 2014.

Prison Service: Reform

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27080/11-15, whether previous recommendations were not implemented by the previous governor or deputy governor, or any staff who held their posts on an acting or temporary basis. (AQW 29326/11-15)

Mr Ford: The scale of required change, including addressing recommendations at all prison establishments, has been consistently acknowledged by NIPS and summarised by the Prison Review Team report. This is being delivered, not solely by the actions of individuals, but through the determined and concerted process of strategic change offered by the Reform Programme.

Prison Service: Code of Conduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27656/11-15, and given that he states in his answer to AQW 27299/11-15 that, the text of the new Code was agreed by all stakeholders, to outline the rationale behind the decision not to include this information from the Professional Code of Conduct 2013; and why Prison Service staff are being treated differently to Civil Service staff and other prison service counterparts. (AQW 29327/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Member is incorrect in his assertion that the Northern Ireland Prison Service does not sufficiently define or sufficiently inform prison staff of the types of offences that may lead to the invoking of disciplinary procedures in the new 2013 Code of Conduct. There is a whole section of the new Code of Conduct that deals specifically with that issue. Section 3.2 clearly sets out 17 possible examples of the types of offences that may lead to the invoking of disciplinary proceedings against staff.

Forensic Science Northern Ireland: Cooperation with Republic of Ireland

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what are the cost implications of any inter-governmental arrangement with the Republic of Ireland in the area of co-operation on forensic science services. (AQW 29339/11-15)

Mr Ford: Co-operation between Forensic Science Northern Ireland (FSNI) and Eolaíocht Fhóirínseach Éireann (EFÉ) takes place under the auspices of the Intergovernmental Agreement on Criminal Justice Cooperation. That includes sharing experiences and participating in shared training events and incurs normal travel and subsistence costs. All other costs are met on a "quid pro quo" basis. For example, no charges were raised for the analysis of 60 drugs samples recently carried out by EFÉ on behalf of FSNI which was an exercise to test potential contingency arrangements.

Prison Service: Code of Conduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27564/11-15, (i) to clarify the meaning of specialist staff, within 1.6 of the Code; (ii) on what date nursing staff ceased to be employed by the Prison Service; and (iii) whether alleged breaches of discipline will be investigated and adjudicated upon by the relevant Health and Social Care Trust in tandem with the Prison Service. (AQW 29363/11-15)

Mr Ford: I think that the previous question the Member should have referred to is AQW/27654/11-15 as opposed to AQW/27564/11-15. On that basis I would advise as follows:

- (i) The specialist staff referred to in paragraph 1.6 of the Northern Ireland Prison Service Professional Code of Conduct are those groups of officers employed in more specialised areas within prisons such as dog handlers, physical fitness instructors, joiners or caterers;
- (ii) The healthcare staff ceased to be employed by the Northern Ireland Prison Service on 31 March 2012; and
- (iii) I would confirm that discipline of healthcare staff is now a matter for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

Prison Service: Code of Conduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27301/11-15, (i) to specify the current legislation that authorised him to approve and implement a transitional Code of Ethics and Professional Code of Conduct for members of the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS); (ii) why NIPS staff are not specifically informed of the transitional nature of the documentation; and (iii) for his assessment of the appropriateness of such action in the light of the deficiencies which have been identified in the Code.

(AQW 29366/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Subject to the approval of the Department of Finance and Personnel, the following legislation allows the Northern Ireland Prison Service to have its own disciplinary Code:

Rule 6 of the 1995 Prison Rules, which states that:
“The Department of Justice may approve a code, or codes, of conduct to have effect in relation to the conduct, duties and discipline of the staff of prisons”.
- (ii) The new Professional Code of Ethics and the new Professional Code of Conduct are internal Northern Ireland Prison Service policy documents. As such it is for the Northern Ireland Prison Service to decide when and how often they should be reviewed.
- (iii) Given this is a brand new disciplinary system for the Northern Ireland Prison Service in my view it is good practice for the Prison Service to review and, if necessary, amend the new Codes after they have been in operation for 12 months. The Department of Finance and Personnel endorses this view.

Prison Service: Code of Conduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 27564/11-15, in cases of gross misconduct that have the potential to remove employment and profession, whether it is accepted that any reasonable request for legal representation must be given fair consideration, given that failure to follow proper process may lead to an unfair dismissal claim to an Industrial Tribunal.
(AQW 29367/11-15)

Mr Ford: The previous question the Member should have referred to is AQW 27654/11-15 as opposed to AQW 27564/11-15, which was a question from another Member to a different Department.

The Department of Finance and Personnel has overall responsibility for disciplinary policy in the Northern Ireland Civil Service. The central policy clearly states that a member of staff subject to disciplinary proceedings should not be accompanied by a person acting in a legal capacity.

Human Trafficking: National Referral Mechanism

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 29220/11-15, whether he will reconsider the decision to refuse to disclose the nationalities and average age, as the corresponding information for the 2012/13 year was made readily available to the All Party Group on Human Trafficking in September 2013.
(AQW 29452/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department has previously provided information on potential victims of human trafficking who have been referred to the National Referral Mechanism. This information relates to the potential victims' countries of origin, a breakdown between minors and adults and, where available, exploitation type.

Specific information about those who have been confirmed as victims of human trafficking, however, is not shared in order to protect their identities. This is in line with the Data Protection Act 1998, which precludes the disclosure of information that could lead to the identification of an individual. Having taken advice from the UKHTC, however, I can now advise that the average age of the confirmed victims since 1 April 2013, who are minors, is 16. I hold by my decision not to disclose information on nationality.

Maghaberry Prison

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice to detail any occasion over the last four weeks, where prison officers were unable to retain control over sections of Maghaberry Prison.
(AQW 29468/11-15)

Mr Ford: There has been no occasion over the last four weeks where prison officers were unable to retain control over sections of Maghaberry Prison.

Prison Officers: Security Threat Level

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice to outline any guidance, and from whom did he receive it, when he downgraded the security threat level for prison officers.
(AQW 29469/11-15)

Mr Ford: I did not downgrade the security threat level, which is a matter for the Secretary of State.

Legal Services: Not-for-profit Organisations

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice to detail if the contracts that his Department has with not for profit organisations require those organisations to apply for funding for Legal Aid in addition to public funding.

(AQW 29497/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission, through funding provided by the Department of Justice, has grant funding agreements with two not-for-profit organisations: the Housing Rights Service, for the provision of advice and assistance in mortgage repossession, and ejection proceedings and the Law Centre (NI), for the provision of legal services for immigration, asylum and human trafficking.

These organisations may submit applications for legal aid on behalf of clients in respect of cases not covered by these grants.

Legal Services: Not-for-profit Organisations

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice to detail how many contracts does his Department have with not for profit organisations for the provision of legal services.

(AQW 29498/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission, through funding provided by the Department of Justice, has grant funding agreements with two not-for-profit organisations: the Housing Rights Service, for the provision of advice and assistance in mortgage repossession and ejection proceedings and the Law Centre (NI), for the provision of legal services for immigration, asylum and human trafficking.

Department for Regional Development

Cycling: Massey Avenue/Belmont Road, Belfast

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will consider introducing changes to the Massey Avenue/Belmont Road junction to make it safer for cyclists travelling in the direction of Parliament Buildings who are often overtaken by motorists who are continuing on the Belmont Road.

(AQW 28163/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I intend to refer this matter to the Cycling Unit.

Roads: Noise Models

Mr Wilson asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) how many noise models have been used to assess the impact of road schemes; (ii) the number of cases that the revision of models has been necessary; and (iii) the number of cases that mitigation measures have been taken, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 28510/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In developing a major road improvement scheme, a detailed assessment of the environmental implications of the proposals is carried out, which includes modelling to assess the associated noise implications.

The table below provides a breakdown of the noise models, as well as the number of revisions and cases where mitigation measures were required in each of the last three years:

Noise models used to assess road schemes in each of the last three years

Year	Number of Noise Models used to assess impact of road schemes	Number of Cases requiring revision of models	Number of Cases requiring mitigation measures
2010/11	5	1	3
2011/12	2	8	1
2012/13	1	1	1

After a scheme is constructed, legislation requires that the associated noise model is reassessed on the first, fifth, tenth and fifteenth year after road opening. The figures in the above table relating to 'Number of cases requiring revision of models' are all related to these reassessments, which by their nature redefine the model.

Kilrea: Penalty Charge Notices

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of Penalty Charge Notices issued in Kilrea over the last three years; and of these, how many were successfully appealed.

(AQW 28712/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) issued in Kilrea, over the last three financial years, are included in the table below:

Financial Year	PCN's Issued
2010/11	95
2011/12	83
2012/13	54

It is not possible to provide figures relating to successful appeals by town or council area, as this information is not maintained in the format requested. However, an overall summary for Northern Ireland is provided in the table below for the last three financial years.

Financial Year	PCNs issued across NI	Number of PCNs appealed	Number of successful appeals
2010/11	118463	281	74
2011/12	124995	289	70
2012/13	108502	284	62

Car Parking: Christmas Rate

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the car parks that have been designated as having a special Christmas parking rate; and the criteria used to select these from other urban car parks.

(AQW 28719/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the car parks, to which the special Christmas parking rate applies, are included in the table below:

With regard to the criteria used, the special Christmas tariff is being applied to all Roads Service car parks where drivers will benefit from it, (i.e. all car parks with a tariff of 30p per hour or more). It applies to areas outside of Belfast because they do not have the same level of accessibility to Park and Ride and Public Transport services. There would be no benefit to drivers if this rate had applied in lower tariff car parks, as the existing tariffs are already equal to, or lower than, the special rate.

Roads: Habitats Directive

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any proposed road schemes came to the same conclusion for the need of an Appropriate Assessment under the Habitats Directive's Habitats Regulations Assessment as the A5 scheme.

(AQW 28744/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Under current legislation, all roads projects entailing the construction of a new or alteration of an existing carriageway must be assessed to determine their impact on ecology and the environment. Under the Habitats Regulations 1994, special consideration must be given to sites of special European status. These sites, which include Special Areas of Conservation (SAC), Special Protection Areas (SPA), and Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI), are collectively referred to as Natura 2000 sites.

I carried out an Appropriate Assessment of the Main Valley Bogs SAC when making the decision to proceed with the A26 Frosses Road dual carriageway scheme.

During my time as Minister, a report to inform an Appropriate Assessment of the Natura 2000 sites has also been prepared for the A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling scheme, however, this scheme has not yet reached the stage where the Appropriate Assessment should be undertaken.

Prior to my tenure as Minister, a report to inform an Appropriate Assessment was prepared for the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson dualling scheme, which will be reviewed in due course.

In addition, the decision not to carry out an Appropriate Assessment for the A5 Western Transport Corridor Dualling was taken during the tenure of my predecessor.

Taxis: High Street/Bridge Street/Botanic Avenue, Belfast

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the timeline of the actions since planning permission was sought in respect of additional Public Hire Taxi Ranks at High Street, Bridge Street and Botanic Avenue, Belfast
(AQW 28764/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is empowered to provide lengths of roads that may be used as stands for taxis under Article 27A of the Road Traffic Regulation (Northern Ireland) Order 1997. As such, planning permission is not specifically required.

Officials have developed proposals for additional taxi ranks in Botanic Avenue and High Street, Belfast and, on 18 September 2013, forwarded details to Belfast City Council and the PSNI for their comment and approval.

PSNI agreement to the proposals was obtained on 25 November 2013. My officials are presently preparing to carry out an informal consultation with the property owners immediately adjacent to the proposed locations to seek an agreed way forward, following which the necessary legislative procedures will be initiated.

Officials are not processing an additional public hire taxi rank at Bridge Street at present.

Sydenham Bypass: Upgrade

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the planned upgrade of the Sydenham By-Pass to a 3 lane carriageway.
(AQW 28822/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is continuing to develop proposals for the A2 Sydenham Bypass Improvement Scheme. The proposed scheme will widen a 2.5km section, between Bridge End and Knocknagoney, from a dual 2-lane carriageway to a dual 3-lane carriageway.

The scheme is currently in the third stage of a three stage assessment process. Stage 1 focused on identifying the environmental, engineering, economic and traffic advantages and disadvantages, in addition to the constraints associated with broadly defined improvement strategies. This concluded in the selection of the Proposed Corridor in May 2008. In Stage 2, a detailed assessment of a range of options within the Proposed Corridor was considered. This concluded in the selection of the Preferred Option in February 2010. Stage 3 involves detailed assessment of the Preferred Option and ongoing consultation with key stakeholders. This will result in the completion of the Statutory Orders; the draft Direction Order, Environmental Statement and Notice of Intention to Make a Vesting Order.

Whilst the budget for the period to 2015 will allow development work on Stage 3 to continue, progression beyond this will be subject to a satisfactory outcome to the statutory processes and the availability of funding in future years' budgets.

Roads: Traffic Calming

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline his Department's policy on road calming measures for villages.
(AQW 28840/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The objective of traffic calming is to improve driver behaviour and control speed, thereby contributing to a reduction in the number, and severity of casualties resulting from road traffic collisions, especially amongst pedestrians and cyclists. Traffic calming also improves the urban street environment and reduces community severance.

My Department's traffic calming policy includes for the provision of gateway features at the entry points to villages and settlements. These features highlight the change in the road environment to drivers. In many cases, a speed limit change is associated with a gateway feature. Central islands and additional road markings are also provided for within the policy and have been used effectively to create a safer road environment.

Traffic calming is generally achieved through the provision of a range of engineering measures, which includes gateways, central islands, build-outs and road humps. However, it is not my Department's policy to provide road humps on through routes or trunk roads as a general rule, but only in exceptional circumstances.

Details on current traffic calming features can be accessed at http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/traffic_calming_leaflet.pdf

Car Parking: Park and Ride/Share

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development, in each of the last ten years, (i) how many park and ride or park and share spaces have been in place; (ii) how many of those spaces were used; and (iii) what the equating number of vehicles was in terms of vehicles being taken out of the traffic flow.

(AQW 28851/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: AQW 28851/11-15

Details of the park and ride and park and share spaces operated by each Division of my Department's Roads Service, for the last ten years, are set out in the tables below:

Note

- Where available, details of average occupancy levels have been included. As they are resource intensive, surveys to inform occupancy analysis are not carried out every year by each Division. In such instances "N/A" is specified in the tables.
- In some car parks occupancy levels can exceed capacity due to improper parking practices.

My Department's Roads Service does not hold data to illustrate the impact of park and ride and park and share schemes on traffic flow.

Details of the utilisation levels in all of Translink's Park and Ride facilities, for the last ten years, are set out in the following table:

Translink Park and Ride Facilities

Year	Number of Sites	Total Number of Spaces	Overall Utilisation Rate
2004	36	2,323	77%
2005	N/A	2,345	N/A
2006	N/A	2,874	N/A
2007	38	3,302	87%
2008	39	3,609	96%

Year	Number of Sites	Total Number of Spaces	Overall Utilisation Rate
2009	40	3,621	83%
2010	40	4,835	N/A
2011	45	5,136	70%
2012	49	5,697	75%
2013	49	6,099	76%

Note

- Where available, details of average occupancy levels have been included. As they are resource intensive, surveys to inform occupancy analysis are not carried out every year by each Division. In such instances "N/A" is specified in the tables.
- Translink does not hold information in relation to Park and Share facilities.

With regard to the number of vehicles being taken out of the traffic flow, a calculation using the data in the table above would suggest that, on the basis of an average 76% utilisation rate, on a daily basis 9,270 car journeys are removed from the network as a result of the provision of park and ride and park and share facilities.

A5/A6: Investment

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he intends to prioritise the A6 or the A5 in future rounds of infrastructure building.
(AQW 28883/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland (ISNI) 2011-21 envisages improvements to both the A5 and A6 over the course of the 10 year period to 2021.

Both the Executive and the Irish Government remain committed to the A5 dual carriageway project and contractors are already in place. Following the Court ruling, work is progressing on an Appropriate Assessment process. Upon completion, this will be the subject of a public consultation exercise, which is expected to take place in spring 2014. A review of other matters considered in the Environmental Statement (ES) is ongoing, which may lead to publication of an updated document. Clearly I cannot prejudge any public consultation exercise and I am unable to give a definitive timetable as to when it may be possible for construction to start.

It is my intention to initiate a procurement competition to put a contractor in place for the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson scheme, so my Department would be in a position to avail of funding should it become available.

The A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling scheme has been through Public Inquiry. My officials have considered the Inspector's recommendations and I expect to make a Departmental Statement on the way forward later this financial year.

However, progression of these schemes to construction will be dependent upon the successful completion of the statutory processes and the availability of funding.

Public Transport: Usage

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to list the 10 per cent of wards in which people are least likely to use public transport.
(AQW 28887/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This information is not currently available as there is no measure of the availability of public transport at Local Government District or Ward level, and Translink do not record this information.

Public Transport: Dunloy–Ballymoney/Ballymena/Ballycastle

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to improve the public transport provision between Dunloy and (i) Ballymoney; (ii) Ballymena; and (iii) Ballycastle.
(AQW 28888/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink have operational responsibility in regard to service provision. As Dunloy has a lower density of population, demand for conventional public transport is lower. It has also advised that all bus services throughout the network were examined under a Strategic Review in 2005.

Potential for increasing the service level in these areas has been discussed on a number of occasions since the review, but current usage would not justify additional journeys at present.

I have asked that Translink keep these corridors under review and look at any potential growth opportunities that may arise.

North Antrim: Public Transport

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the increase in public transport usage in North Antrim over the last five years.

(AQW 28889/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The popularity of rail travel in the North West* continues to grow. Since 2007/08 growth in excess of 35% has been recorded along the corridor from Londonderry, through Coleraine, Ballymena and Antrim to Belfast and beyond. The recent £30m Renewals Project on the line between Coleraine and Londonderry which re-opened to passenger traffic on 24 March 2013 is likely to be a positive contribution to increased patronage.

A further contributory factor has been the enhanced timetable which came into operation in January 2013 which has resulted in an increase in frequency of over 40%.

Recently I announced that Translink will enhance the rail service provision in the North West.

Starting on 6 January 2014 Translink will offer passengers even more flexibility between Coleraine and Londonderry with the introduction of two additional trains. The extra service will depart Londonderry at 16:13, arriving in Coleraine at 17:01, while the return service will leave Coleraine at 17:55, and arrive back into Londonderry at 18:42. As a result the number of trains operating on the Coleraine to Londonderry section will increase from 59 to 64 each way per week

Bus service patronage in the North Antrim area, for the period requested is set out in the table below.

Year	Passenger Journeys
2008/09	8.6m
2009/10	8.2m
2010/11	8.1m
2011/12	7.9m
2012/13	8.0m

* Translink would define North West as Londonderry and Coleraine line

 Based on passenger statistics from Coleraine, Ballymena, Coleraine and Antrim depots

Cycling: Cycle Filter Lights

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what cycle filter lights are installed on the roads network.

(AQW 28890/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are no cycle filter lights currently installed on my Department's road network.

Car Parking: Parkmobile

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of the times the ParkMobile App; and (ii) the phone system have been used to pay for parking (a) in off-street carparks; and (b) on-street, in each month since their introduction.

(AQW 28905/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The most common methods of using Parkmobile to pay for parking events in parking places managed by my Department are the Interactive Voice Response (IVR) Telephone System (also known as "automated voice recognition") and the Parkmobile App. However, other less commonly used methods include texting from a mobile phone, using a computer to access the Parkmobile Internet Site, or being put through by a direct phone in cases where IVR cannot decipher the caller's voice.

The following table details the number of occasions that Parkmobile has been used to purchase off-street and on-street parking events, in each month, since being introduced by my Department in December 2010:

Donaghadee Harbour: Upgrade

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to improve and upgrade the Donaghadee Harbour and its environs prior to the proposed transfer to the new North Down and Ards Council.

(AQW 28912/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In light of the proposed transfer of Donaghadee harbour to local authority control, considerable capital expenditure has been invested to ensure that the harbour's structures will transfer in good condition. Most recently, my Department funded dredging of the full harbour basin in 2011. The biennial harbour condition survey was carried out in 2013. My officials will consider the report of the survey when it is received and draw up an action plan for any capital works that are identified.

Gifts and Hospitality: DRD Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development whether, since May 2007, in relation to civil servants in his Department or its arm's-length bodies receiving gifts or hospitality, there have been any requests for approval of matters that fall outside the boundaries of what is normally allowable; and if so, to detail such requests.

(AQW 28959/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Within my Department and its arm's length bodies Northern Ireland Water and Translink, registers are maintained, updated and monitored in respect of all offers of gifts and hospitality made to staff by third parties. These registers record details of each offer received and indicate, in each case, whether the offer was accepted (with management approval) or declined.

The entries in the registers show that, during the period from May 2007 to date, no requests were made for approval of matters which fall outside the boundaries of what is normally acceptable in this area.

Comber Road, Dundonald: Footpaths

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the width of the footpath planned, as part of the Comber Road safety improvements, in ensuring adequate safety for pedestrians and people with a disability.

(AQW 28973/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has inherited many footpaths in towns and villages throughout Northern Ireland which do not meet modern day standards. The Public Realm Scheme planned for Comber is an Ards Borough Council-led project, funded mainly by the Department of Social Development (DSD), but with a contribution from the Council.

In general, Environmental Improvement Schemes are intended to enhance and revitalise towns, providing finishes which will help encourage new development, increase business potential and make them more commercially viable and attractive to visitors. My Department's Roads Service is one of a number of consultees to the planning process in this regard.

As you will appreciate, site constraints in some narrow streets, together with other contributory factors, can present considerable practical difficulties when seeking to achieve desired aims. Roads Service will, however, in conjunction with Public Representatives, Ards Borough Council, DSD, Comber Regeneration Community Partnership, PSNI, Appointed Consultants and other interested parties, continue to provide advice and guidance in relation to potential road safety improvements in the town where practicable, subject to the availability of resources.

Comber Road, Dundonald: Improvement Scheme

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the process whereby the road traffic flow and pedestrian safety were evaluated in relation to the Comber Road safety improvements; and to outline the cost-benefit analysis undertaken prior to the decision being taken.

(AQW 28974/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: AQW 28974/11-15

My Department's Roads Service has been one of a number of consultees involved in the Planning process relating to a Public Realm Improvement Scheme for Comber. The scheme is led by Ards Borough Council and mainly funded by the Department for Social Development (DSD), with a contribution by Council.

I understand URS Consultants, who have been appointed to deliver the Public Realm Scheme, made a number of recommendations regarding traffic management in Comber. The recommendations were as a result of local consultations and took account of the physical need within Comber, set against the constraints of the target budget of £2 million. One suggestion was the possibility of introducing a one-way system in Comber town centre.

Departmental officials commissioned a Feasibility Study in 2009 to look at the possibility of introducing a one-way system in Comber town centre, including Castle Street. The basis of this study was considered by URS Consultants and proposals were included in discussions, in relation to the Public Realm Scheme, with local traders and stakeholders. No agreement or consensus could be reached, and the one-way proposal was withdrawn as it could have jeopardised the delivery of the Public Realm Scheme.

Consideration has also been given to a further suggestion by Comber Regeneration Community Partnership, to set the traffic signals further back in Castle Street to allow the footways to be widened on either side. The personal injury collision history records provided by PSNI, site constraints, parking/servicing, potential traffic delays and reduced efficiency of the junction, together with road safety concerns, were taken into consideration during the primary assessment of this suggestion. The major concern with this proposal is the potential safety issue caused by traffic emerging from Castle Street after passing the set-back traffic signals on Castle Street. For example, any delay after passing the set-back green light may mean that traffic will reach the junction when other legs of the junction are on green – thus causing a serious road safety issue.

My officials are continuing to investigate and provide advice and guidance in consultation with Ards Borough Council and the various stakeholders involved in the Public Realm Scheme, to seek improvements to the infrastructure, where it is practicable to do so.

Comber Road, Dundonald: Pedestrian Safety

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development what proposals the Roads Service has to improve pedestrian safety on the Comber Road foot path.

(AQW 28975/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has inherited many footpaths in towns and villages throughout Northern Ireland, which do not meet modern day standards. Roads Service officials will continue to investigate and assess potential improvements to the road network infrastructure and develop work programmes to be implemented, on a prioritised basis, in accordance with current guidelines, subject to available finance and resources. Castle Street, Comber will be given due consideration during this process.

Railways: Redundant Equipment

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, when the only manually operated signalling equipment in N. I. Railways from the 19th century that is currently functioning at Castlerock becomes unnecessary in 2015, will he ensure that the items are retained and kept for future generations.

(AQW 29001/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink officials have advised me that it has already had discussions with relevant heritage groups, i.e. Downpatrick and County Down Railway and Railway Preservation Society of Ireland, about the recovery and future use of any such redundant equipment and through these discussions will try to ensure that the items are retained and kept for future generations.

Gifts and Hospitality: DRD Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development how many entries his Special Adviser has made in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality since they were appointed; and what is the total value of such entries.

(AQW 29006/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Special Adviser has made no entries in the Department's Register of Gifts and Hospitality.

A26 Frosses Road: Environmental Impact Assessment

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the scope of the Environmental Impact Assessment carried out on the A26 Frosses Road; and (ii) the findings of the assessment.

(AQW 29016/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The scope and findings of the Environmental Impact Assessment carried out on the A26 Glarryford to A44 Drones Road Dualling scheme are reported in the scheme's Environmental Statement, which was published on 20 March 2012.

The Environmental Statement for this scheme can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address: www.drdni.gov.uk/a26frosses.

Translink: Redundant Buses

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of buses disposed of or sold by Translink in the last five years; (ii) the value of the sales; and (iii) the method of disposal.

(AQW 29024/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink, when disposing of redundant buses, aims to maximise their value using the most appropriate outlet. The vast majority of buses are life-expired and the highest scrap value is obtained from a scrap vehicle handler.

Selected vehicles which are considered to have further operational life are advertised on the Translink website and, where appropriate, in industry publications or by use of approved dealerships.

Offers for non-life expired vehicles are considered for approval by the Translink Executive Committee.

The tables below detail the information which you have requested.

Ulsterbus

Year	No. of Vehicles	Profit/(Loss) on Disposal (Assets) £	Comments
2009/10	125	374,764	57 sold as scrap 68 to other operators
2010/11	110	177,083	29 sold as scrap 81 to other operators
2011/12	75	72,778	23 sold as scrap 52 to other operators
2012/13	58	100,407	27 sold as scrap 31 to other operators
2013/14	53	150,481	13 sold as scrap 40 to other operators

Tinker Hill, Newry: Park and Ride

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the section of the A1 Road at Tinker Hill, Newry could accommodate additional Park and Ride facilities.

(AQW 29040/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: AQW 29040/11-15

I am pleased to inform you I officially opened a new expanded Park and Share facility at the Sheepbridge/Tinkers Hill Area of Newry on Monday 9 December 2013. The capacity of this well-used parking area has more than doubled with 62 spaces now available compared to the previous 25. This scheme has been constructed on lands owned by the Department following the construction of the Newry Bypass scheme.

At the present time there are no other viable sites located closer to Newry along the old A28 Belfast Road (previously known as A1 Tinker Hill). My officials will monitor usage in this area following the opening of the new facility and, should demand increase, will also further investigate the possibility of providing additional sites, subject to land acquisition and budgetary constraints.

Street Lights: Numbers

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how many street lights there are in each council area; (ii) how many tonnes of CO2 emissions they produce annually; and (iii) whether he has considered replacing them with LED technology lighting.

(AQW 29041/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of street lights my Department has, in each council area, are provided in the table below:

Council Area	Street Lights
Antrim	8,813
Ards	11,876
Armagh	8,115
Ballymena	10,093
Ballymoney	4,410
Banbridge	6,885
Belfast	35,780
Carrickfergus	6,642
Castlereagh	10,585
Coleraine	12,146
Cookstown	4,754
Craigavon	16,677
Derry	21,023
Down	10,321
Dungannon & South Tyrone	6,931
Fermanagh	10,408
Larne	5,326
Limavady	5,669
Lisburn	18,098
Magherafelt	5,142
Moyle	2,957
Newry and Mourne	12,895
Newtownabbey	14,442
North Down	12,887
Omagh	7,399
Strabane	6,991

The electricity procured for street lighting is currently from 100% renewable sources. However, at a typical conversion rate for grid electricity, the amount of electricity consumed by the street lights would equate to some 53,613 tonnes of CO² annually.

Roads Service has an ongoing programme of replacing street lighting assets when they reach the end of their serviceable life. Over recent years, Roads Service has installed a number of LED lighting schemes, with the largest and most recent scheme located at Upper Knockbreda Road, Belfast.

The use of LEDs for street lighting offers great promise of long life and reduced operational and maintenance costs. Roads Service is currently seeking to appraise available street lighting technologies, such as LEDs etc, as well as options for the provision and maintenance of street lighting.

East Belfast: Public Bike Hire

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development what action he is taking to connect East Belfast to the Belfast Bike Hire Scheme; and whether a hub could be located in this area.

(AQW 29056/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Belfast City Council was awarded an Active Travel Demonstration Project Grant of almost £700k in August 2012, to develop the infrastructure requirements for a public bike hire scheme in Belfast.

Belfast City Council are responsible for the project management of the scheme and will be responsible for managing any future contractual arrangements, further development of the scheme and meeting ongoing running costs. The Council are fully responsible for the design of the scheme, including the location of docking stations.

Work has commenced on the identification of suitable sites for up to 25 docking stations which will hold a total of 300 bikes at core city centre locations.

My officials are providing a project assurance role in respect of the expenditure associated with the grant and will continue to assist Belfast City Council in any practical way possible, during the development of the scheme.

Roads Service: Bottled Water

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how much Roads Service has spent on bottled water, in each of the last five years; (ii) the cost per bottle; (iii) how often bottled water supplies are tendered for; and (iv) how many bids were received for each tender.

(AQW 29064/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of expenditure incurred by my Department's Roads Service on bottled water, in each of the last five years, are included in the table below:

Amount spent on bottled water in each of the last five years

Financial Year	Amount
2009/10	£5,457.86
2010/11	£5,868.60
2011/12	£5,093.35
2012/13	£2,807.54
2013/14	£968.35

Following a review in 2008 of the provision of bottled water in DRD premises, including those occupied by Roads Service staff, the DRD Departmental Board restricted the use of bottled water within DRD accommodation, where a fresh mains drinking water supply was available within the premises. However, where there was no fresh mains drinking water available in a building, the policy permitted the business area to procure bottled water, subject to the appropriate approval.

As mains drinking water supplies are being installed in each DRD accommodation, the use of bottled water within buildings is being phased out.

With regard to the cost per bottle over the period, this has ranged from £4 to £7.25 for a 19 litre bottle.

In relation to how often the bottled water supply has been tendered for and how many bids were received, due to the low costs involved in each Roads Service Business area/Division, it has not been necessary to tender for this service.

NI Water: Water Conservation

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department and NI Water encourage water conservation. (AQW 29084/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it has in place a wide range of measures, aimed at encouraging water conservation. In addition to NIW's leakage reduction strategy, it involves a proactive approach to water conservation by all customers, including education and awareness, the issue of water saving devices known as Hippo Bags and water audits. This involves a year round education and public awareness campaign to promote the water conservation message and make available a wide range of advice leaflets and water conservation aids. Over the past three years, NIW has run an extensive media campaign to highlight to customers the need to prepare their pipework in advance of the winter to protect from severe weather conditions. A dedicated Leakline number is available for customers to report leakage incidents.

40% of water delivered is used by the non-domestic sector where there is a wide range of consumption. Metering is the preferred charging method for these customers and NIW is currently extending the scope of metering of non-domestic properties. Metering in this sector is likely to have the most significant contribution to water conservation.

Dedicated pages are available on the NIW website at www.niwater.com with advice on household and non-domestic water efficiency. This includes guidance on the types of appliances that could be fitted to homes and business which would help them to be more efficient in the future and "Top Ten Tips for Business Water Efficiency".

Street Lighting: Energy-saving Bulbs

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to use energy saving light bulbs for street lighting.

(AQW 29090/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Roads Service seeks to use the most cost-effective street lighting equipment for energy efficiency and performance. Officials have been maintaining a keen interest in the ongoing development and use of Light Emitting Diodes (LED) for street lighting over recent years, through contacts with other roads authorities, professional organisations, manufacturers and contractors.

A number of LED street lighting schemes have already been installed, and Roads Service is currently seeking to appraise available street lighting technologies, such as LEDs etc, as well as options for the provision and maintenance of street lighting.

Translink: Free Wi-Fi

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he has any plans to install Wi-Fi in train and bus stations.
(AQW 29116/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have liaised with Translink officials who have advised me that Wi-Fi is currently available at Central Station but is not free; rather it is a commercial service provided by BT Openzone.

Translink has looked at providing free Wi-Fi in key locations but this is not being progressed at present, due to the cost and the fact that passengers mostly 'turn up and go', i.e. they spend only a short period waiting for its services.

Planning Applications: Roads Service

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Roads Service has a target for the time it takes to respond to a planning application consultation.
(AQW 29130/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to his Assembly Question AQW 28634/11-15.

Magee Campus: Resident-only Parking

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed residents' parking scheme near the Magee campus in Derry.
(AQW 29139/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service previously identified a number of areas, around the Magee Campus of the University of Ulster that were considered suitable for the introduction of "resident only" parking schemes, namely in the Lawrence Hill and Northland Road areas. The progression of these proposals is dependent upon the successful introduction of other residents' parking schemes in Northern Ireland, including one in the Bogside area of Londonderry, which have not yet been implemented.

The introduction of further residents' schemes will only be considered following careful monitoring and evaluation of the initial schemes. In addition, there are a number of other areas within the city that would be deemed a higher priority for the implementation of residents' parking schemes.

Schools: 20 mph Speed Limit Zones

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 5340/11-15, for an update on the introduction of 20 mph zones outside schools.
(AQW 29156/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department continues to deliver safety measures at schools and is developing policy to improve the safety of children on their journey to school. The concept of introducing part-time 20 mph speed limits outside schools has been agreed following the success of pilot schemes installed outside three primary schools.

However, as the cost of the safety measures used in the pilot schemes was higher than anticipated and given that financial resources are limited, my Department has been developing equally effective lower-cost safety measures, which will allow more schools to be treated within available budgets.

A new road safety at schools policy, which will encompass all available safety engineering measures, is also nearing completion. It is anticipated this policy will be in place for the next financial year.

Buses: Belfast International Airport–Belfast

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development what bus services operate from Belfast International Airport to Belfast city centre hotels.
(AQW 29166/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink provide bus services from Belfast International Airport to the Europa Buscentre, which is a short walking distance from a number of Belfast City centre hotels. From here passengers can also access other Translink services and/or taxi services to enable them to travel to other hotels throughout the city or further afield.

I understand that a private bus operator has made an application to the Department of Environment, (Driver & Road Transport Licensing) to provide a service from Belfast International Airport to the main Belfast City Centre hotels. This application is a matter for DOE and is currently being considered.

Cycling: Central Station–Short Strand, Belfast

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will work with the Department for Social Development to use the extra width on the road from Central Station to the Short Strand to introduce better cycling lanes and infrastructure. (AQW 29217/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: One of my objectives in establishing a Cycling Unit within my Department is to ensure that cycling provision is a key element in both transport strategy and delivery. I am confident that both Transport NI and the Cycling Unit will work with other interested stakeholders in developing robust and sustainable cycling infrastructure. My officials have recently met with DSD officials about this project and I expect the two Departments to work together to deliver a balanced and sustainable solution for all road users.

Donaghadee Harbour: Capital Works

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what capital works are required on Donaghadee Harbour and its environs. (AQW 29286/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I refer the Member to my previous answer on 16th December 2013 (AQW 28912/11-15).

Rousky, County Tyrone: Pumping Station

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Regional Development whether NI Water plans to locate a pumping station in Rousky, County Tyrone to connect homes to the public sewerage network. (AQW 29312/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it has no current plans at this time to provide a first time public sewer extension or pumping station in Rousky to enable homes to connect to the public sewerage network.

NIW received a requisition for a first time public sewer extension and wastewater pumping station from property owners at Rousky in 2009 and a follow up requisition in 2012. NIW is required to provide a requisitioned sewer, subject to certain conditions including a requirement that the persons requesting the requisition pay the reasonable costs of providing the sewer as determined in accordance with NIW's Charges Scheme. In calculating the cost to be borne by the persons making the requisition, NIW deducts a reasonable cost allowance in respect of providing a sewer to domestic premises. The overall estimated cost of the scheme exceeded the available funding under the reasonable cost allowance leaving a shortfall of approximately £270k (2012 prices) to be funded by those benefitting from the service. Unless they agree to meet the shortfall, NIW is unable to progress the work.

Ballygawley Waste Water Treatment Works

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development an update on the upgrading of Ballygawley Water Treatment and Sewage Works. (AQW 29328/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that Ballygawley Wastewater Treatment Works is currently achieving its discharge standard and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) has not reported any pollution incidents for the Works. Based on proposals for development within the catchment, NIW has identified a need for increased treatment capacity at the Works and it estimates that the construction of a new Works on the existing site would cost in the region of £2.5 million.

A priority list of capital works has been agreed with the environmental regulator (NIEA) for the forthcoming regulatory review PC 15, which covers the period 2015 to 2021. As the construction of a new Ballygawley Works has been placed at number 64 on the list, it must be considered against the other priority work to be included in NIW's PC15 capital work programme.

Disability Action Transport Scheme

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development what resources his Department has provided the Disability Action Transport Scheme to meet the transport needs of people with a disability. (AQW 29344/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Since 01 April 2013, when the scheme started, my Department has provided grant funding of £2,264,546.00 to Disability Action to operate the Disability Action Transport Scheme across Northern Ireland.

NI Water: Electricity Generation

Mr Wilson asked the Minister for Regional Development what discussions his Department has had with Northern Ireland Water to investigate the possibility of generating electricity from the flow of water within water mains, by installing Archimedean Screws within suitable water main pipes. (AQW 29368/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Existing Ministerial Guidance to NI Water includes a priority to contribute to the Programme for Government greenhouse gas emissions reduction target (e.g. through increased use of green energy).

NI Water generates in the region of 2.5 Gigawatts of electricity per year from raw water sources. It is conducting an assessment of the potential to generate additional electricity from both raw water sources and from potable water mains. This assessment will consider a number of hydro technologies including Archimedes Screw and hydro turbines to replace pressure control valves within the water network.

My Department is consulting on future priorities in draft Social and Environmental Guidance for Water and Sewerage Service (2015-21). This includes proposals about investigating opportunities for generating renewable energy from NI Water assets. The Draft Guidance also includes a number of other priorities that could contribute to managing future increases in NI Water's energy demands and operating costs. The public consultation on Draft Social and Environmental Guidance closes on 31 January 2014.

Department for Social Development

Housing Executive/Housing Associations: Properties

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of (i) Housing Executive; and (ii) Housing Association properties in each Housing Executive District Office area.

(AQW 28327/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive has provided information about the number of their properties in each District Office area in Table 1 below: -

Transforming Your Care: Housing Strategy

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Social Development how he will ensure that housing strategies align with Transforming Your Care.

(AQW 28934/11-15)

Mr McCausland: One of the five themes outlined in my Department's Housing Strategy is to meet housing need and support the most vulnerable

In order to meet housing need and support the most vulnerable in the owner occupied sector, the department will

Work with DHSSPS to make the best use of combined resources to support independent living

Review the Supporting People Programme to take into account all new and emerging policies to ensure that appropriate advice and support is available to allow individuals to find housing solutions that enable them to live as independently as possible: and,

Work with DHSS&PS to develop a more joined-up approach to provide the support that will allow as many individuals and families as possible to remain in their own home.

Social Housing: Banbridge/Portadown/Lurgan

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to the Programme for Government target to deliver 8,000 new social and affordable homes by 2015, how many of these homes are scheduled for (i) Banbridge, (ii) Portadown and (iii) Lurgan.

(AQW 29091/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Programme for Government set a target to deliver 6000 social and 2000 affordable homes over the 4 year period 2011/12 – 2014/15.

Table 1 denotes the starts target per year and actual number of units delivered. The current year 2013/14 is year 3 of the PfG programme.

Table 2 details those schemes started on site during 2011/12 in Banbridge, Portadown and Lurgan. This information is based on the District Council areas of Banbridge and Craigavon. No starts occurred within these two Council areas during 2012/13.

Table 3 details those schemes within Banbridge and Craigavon District Council areas currently programmed to start on site during 2013/14, 2014/15 and 2015/16.

I am currently considering a new Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP) for the 3 year period 2014/15 – 2016/17. This will be published on the Housing Executive's website in January 2014.

Table 4 details the number of affordable property purchases supported by the Co-Ownership Scheme in the 2011/12 and 2012/13 financial years, in the relevant Council Areas. The information is not available in the format requested ie to 2015 due to this being demand led.

Disability Living Allowance: Atos Healthcare

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to long-term Disability Living Allowance recipients who have been through several medical assessments and their award was not modified, but have since been reassessed by Atos Healthcare and their award has been reduced or removed, what changes have been made to examination guidelines or decision factors; and how these differ from the original guidelines, prior to Atos Healthcare taking over examinations. (AQW 29124/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In a small number of Disability Living Allowance reviews a decision-maker in the Social Security Agency will request an Examining Medical Practitioner report to help them determine eligibility to the benefit. Prior to June 2011 the completion of the Examining Medical Practitioner report was carried out by a General Practitioner engaged by the Social Security Agency for that purpose only and completed during a visit to the claimant's home. The Examining Medical Practitioner gathered information on the diagnosis, the history of the condition, treatment and the severity and likely disabling effects of the condition on day-to-day living

From June 2011 Atos Healthcare has provided the Examining Medical Practitioner service for the Social Security Agency. The Examining Medical Practitioner report is still completed by a General Practitioner during a visit to the claimant's home and the report form completed is still the same one used prior to June 2011. The form is provided by the Social Security Agency to Atos Healthcare and continues to collect the same information as before.

Decision-Makers in determining entitlement to Disability Living consider all the available evidence including, where appropriate, information gathered through an Examining Medical Practitioner report. This approach, which is in line with the legislation governing the benefit, is supported by decision making guidance and has not changed since Atos Healthcare commenced providing the Examining Medical Practitioner service for the Social Security Agency.

Bangor: Housing Waiting List

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many people are on the housing waiting list in each ward in North Down. (AQW 29128/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive has advised that it does not routinely collate details about the waiting list at ward level. However, the table attached details the number of applicants on the waiting list by Housing Executive Common Landlord Area in its Bangor District Office area, at 1 December 2013.

Housing Executive: Tradespeople's Pay

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development how his Department monitors the level of pay to tradespeople employed by contractors and sub-contractors involved in Northern Ireland Housing Executive work.

(AQW 29151/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that it does not monitor the level of pay to trades people employed by either contractors or sub-contractors. However, the Housing Executive has further advised that all main contractors are required to inform the Housing Executive of any shortcomings in compliance with current legislation.

Housing Executive: Work Standards

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development how his Department monitors the standard of work carried out by contractors and sub-contractors to ensure quality standards compliance with contract and value for money.

(AQW 29152/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I assume the Member is referring to how the Northern Ireland Housing Executive monitors the standard of work carried out by contractors and sub-contractors.

The Housing Executive advises that its Corporate Assurance Unit (CAU) is an independent assurance unit within the Housing Executive. CAU has inspection programmes in place for response and planned maintenance contracts including heating. The inspections provide the Housing Executive Board with a level of assurance on the quality of the work provided by contractors in relation to Housing Executive standards and specifications and the accuracy of the costs claimed. In addition the inspections provide assurance on the management of the contractors by operational staff. On completion of inspections the CAU provide recommendations to management to address both quality and cost issues and they report inspections results quarterly to the Housing Executive's Audit and Risk Assurance Committee.

Disability Living Allowance: Atos Healthcare

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development how many Disability Living Allowance recipients have had their award adjusted upward to a higher component following assessment by Atos Healthcare, since it took over medical examinations.

(AQW 29206/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available as the Department for Work and Pensions IT system used by the Social Security Agency to administer Disability Living Allowance does not capture this specific level of detail.

Cycling: Central Station–Short Strand, Belfast

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will work with the Department for Regional Development to use the extra width on the road from Central Station to the Short Strand to introduce better cycling lanes and infrastructure.

(AQW 29218/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is currently working to complete a Public Realm Improvement Scheme from the Albert Bridge to East Bridge Street linking two previous schemes already completed at Cromac Street junction and Albertbridge Road. The works include upgrading the footway to a high quality stone material along with granite kerbs and suitable boundary treatments at the back of footways. No works are planned for the carriageway as this is the remit of DRD Roads Service. As with all DSD schemes DRD Roads Service is kept informed of all design proposals as part of the normal consultation process with statutory bodies as schemes are developed.

South Down: Homelessness

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Social Development how many people presented themselves as homeless in South Down in each of the last three years; and what action his Department is taking to support these people.

(AQW 29236/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Please note that figures cannot be produced at constituency level. The closest figures can be obtained by interpreting South Down as being represented by the Downpatrick, Newry and Banbridge District Offices of the Housing Executive.

The following tables display the homeless presentations and homelessness acceptances by the 3 districts over the past 3 years and the first six months of this year.

Downpatrick	Presenting as homeless	Accepted as homeless Full Duty Applicant
2010/11	609	299
2011/12	574	204
2012/13	420	209
2013/14 (6 months)	286	134

Newry	Presenting as homeless	Accepted as homeless Full Duty Applicant
2010/11	770	324
2011/12	805	322
2012/13	761	402
2013/14 (6 months)	428	204

Banbridge	Presenting as homeless	Accepted as homeless Full Duty Applicant
2010/11	345	145
2011/12	310	120
2012/13	316	156
2013/14 (6 months)	170	73

In response to homelessness across Northern Ireland, the Housing Executive and its partners in the Promoting Social Inclusion Homelessness Partnership have been developing and producing a range of homeless prevention measures under the auspices of the Homelessness Strategy 2012/2017.

The Housing Executive launched the Homelessness Strategy for Northern Ireland on 1 May 2012. This followed an extensive consultation and redrafting process throughout 2011 to establish agreement among the Statutory and Voluntary Agencies who would be helping to deliver the strategy.

The Homelessness Strategy 2012-17 sets out a strategy for tackling homelessness over the next five years and establishes the guiding principles for the development and delivery of homelessness services. At this time of economic uncertainty and financial constraints it is more important than ever that homelessness services are appropriate, timely and effective.

The aim of this homelessness strategy is that long term homelessness and rough sleeping is eliminated across Northern Ireland by 2020.

Housing Executive: Smoke Alarms

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether it is Housing Executive policy to fit smoke alarms in its properties.

(AQW 29250/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive advises that there have been numerous specific smoke and heat detectors installation schemes and their records indicate that smoke alarms have now been fitted in the region of 86,000 of their total tenanted stock of 87,303. The Housing Executive will continue to provide smoke detectors to their remaining stock during heating and kitchen installation schemes and during Disabled Persons Adaptations work. However, it should be noted that a number of tenants did not allow planned work to proceed in their homes which would have included the installation of a wired smoke alarm; the Housing Executive continues to encourage each of these tenants to install a battery powered smoke alarm. The Housing Executive also regularly advises all its tenants to test their alarms.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28668/11-15, given the disparity of takeup between council areas of similar population size and demographic composition, what further steps can be taken to encourage people to avail of the Warm Homes Scheme.

(AQW 29261/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The marketing of Warm Homes Scheme is the responsibility of the two Scheme Managers (Bryson Energy and H&A Mechanical). The Scheme Managers produce annual marketing plans outlining their proposed promotional activities and report on these activities at the monthly meetings with the Housing Executive. Marketing activities range from press releases and adverts, to attendance at local events and direct mail promotion to target households on qualifying benefits.

They also work with two rural projects, Western Home Environmental Assessment Project (WHEAP) and Maximising Access in Rural Areas (MARA) to encourage scheme take up in rural areas. The Scheme Managers monitor uptake across all their contract areas and respond appropriately. For example, one Scheme Manager is currently targeting households in North Down, where the scheme uptake has typically been low.

The scheme has been successful and since its inception in 2001 more than 117,000 homes have received energy efficiency improvement measures. The scheme is based on eligible households self referring and there will always be variance in numbers by council areas as there will always be those who will not come forward to take advantage of schemes like Warm Homes.

Since April 2012 my Department has been delivering the Affordable Warmth Pilot, working in partnership with the University of Ulster, local councils and the Housing Executive using a targeting tool to identify homes that may be entitled to help from the Warm Homes Scheme. Once this pilot has been completed my Department will report and evaluate on the outcomes and will go to public consultation on proposals for a new scheme early next year.

Winter Fuel Payment: Eligibility

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rationale for the date of birth cut-off for Winter Fuel Allowance eligibility being moved forward by six months for 2013-2014 as opposed to a full year.

(AQW 29263/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Originally entitlement to Winter Fuel Payment was directly linked to pension age so a woman was entitled from age 60 but a man was not entitled until age 65.

Now, both men and women are entitled to Winter Fuel payment on the same basis. In effect, this is if they have attained the state pension age for a woman in the qualifying week for the winter concerned (the week beginning with the third Monday in September).

Pension age for men and women is currently being equalised on the phased basis set out in Table 1 in Schedule 2 to the Pensions (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 (as amended). As set out in that Table, for the winter 2012/13 only those born before 6 July 1951 attained pension age for a woman by the qualifying week. For the winter 2013/14, only those born before 6 January 1952 attained pension age for a woman by the qualifying week

North Antrim: Hostels

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of hostel accommodation places provided to homeless people in North Antrim, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 29296/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Please note that this information cannot be provided by constituency so figures have been provided for the Ballymena, Ballymoney and Ballycastle NIHE District Offices.

Statistics are included for the full year of hostel placements for April 2012 to March 2013. In addition it is only possible to provide figures for the first 5 months of this year from April 2013 to August 2013, the reports for the months of September 2013 to November 2013 are still in development.

The number of households provided with hostel accommodation from April 2012 to March 2013:

District	NIHE hostels	Voluntary Sector hostels	Total
Ballymena	16	63	79
Ballymoney	2	14	16
Ballycastle	0	3	3

The number of households provided with hostel accommodation from April 2013 to August 2013:

District	NIHE hostels	Voluntary Sector hostels	Total
Ballymena	7	32	39
Ballymoney	0	9	9
Ballycastle	1	1	2

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

North Antrim: Double Glazing

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the double glazing schemes (i) delivered in the last twelve months; and (ii) planned for the next twelve months, in the North Antrim constituency.

(AQW 29297/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised as follows regarding double glazing schemes in the North Antrim constituency: -

- (i) Delivered in the last 12 months
 - Glebeside 190 dwellings
 - Ballymena 215 dwellings
 - Ballycastle 60 dwellings
- (ii) Planned for the next 12 months
 - Ballymoney 103 dwellings
 - Ballymena 271 dwellings

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

North Antrim: Warm Homes Scheme

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Social Development how many homes benefited from the Warm Homes Grant Scheme in the North Antrim constituency, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 29298/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive administers the Warm Homes Scheme on behalf of the Department. Management information is collected at Council level. The North Antrim constituency comprises the council areas of Moyle, Ballymoney and Ballymena. In those three council areas in the 12 months from December 2012 to November 2013, a total of 662 homes have had Warm Homes measures provided.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Whitehill, Bangor: Community Workers

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what action his Department can take to help a community worker in Whitehill Estate, Bangor, whose salary runs out at the end of 2014.

(AQW 29330/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive does not enter into direct funding arrangements with community workers but has in the past made available limited funding for groups through the Community Development Budget which has been used by groups for salary costs. As this budget is limited, the Housing Executive has sought to invest in communities through locally based community grants (which do not cover salary costs) to help develop local community initiatives on a wider scale. The Housing Executive has therefore, over the past number of years, encouraged Groups to vary their funding sources for salary costs or enter into joint funding arrangements.

At this point in time the Housing Executive anticipates that some funds may continue to be available for salary costs at the end of 2014, however it is not possible for them to give an undertaking at what level funding can be provided or to guarantee funding to secure any particular post.

Millisle: Housing Maintenance

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to list the housing maintenance schemes earmarked for the Millisle area, in the next financial year.

(AQW 29332/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the planned programme for Millisle next financial year includes:

- Kitchen replacements to 28 dwellings
- Heating replacement to 17 dwellings (mainly previous refusals)
- Double glazing installation to 12 dwellings

Donaghadee: Housing Maintenance

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to list the housing maintenance schemes earmarked for the Donaghadee area, in the next financial year.

(AQW 29333/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the planned programme for Millisle next financial year includes:

- Kitchen replacement to 74 dwellings
- Heating replacement to 28 dwellings (mainly previous refusals)
- Double glazing installation to 11 dwellings

Housing Benefit: Direct Payments to Landlords

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Social Development how his Department co-operated with Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs when making housing benefit payments to landlords who reside outside Northern Ireland, to ensure that there is an awareness of the income derived from the public purse.

(AQW 29347/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Housing benefit may be paid directly to a landlord in certain circumstances, for example, where a claimant has requested such an arrangement. This is provided for in housing benefit legislation.

There is no requirement for the Department for Social Development to notify Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs when payments are made directly to a landlord, regardless of whether or not the landlord resides in Northern Ireland.

Social Housing: Armed Forces Veterans

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the scale, scope and availability by area of housing accommodation available to veterans of the Armed Forces.

(AQW 29357/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Social Housing in Northern Ireland is allocated in accordance with the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme. Subject to a person being eligible in accordance with the rules of the Scheme, they are entitled to be placed on a waiting List in an area of their choice. There is no specific housing for veterans of the Armed Forces.

Social Housing: Armed Forces Veterans

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the numbers of veterans of the Armed Forces waiting for housing accommodation.

(AQW 29358/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information cannot be provided as the Housing Executive does not hold information on the social housing application form that can identify if a person applying for social housing is a veteran of the Armed Forces.

Social Housing: Allocation

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to change the system of allocating social housing from the current points based system.

(AQW 29369/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In 2012, I announced a fundamental review of social housing allocations in Northern Ireland, delivering on a commitment set out in my Housing Strategy and Facing the Future Action Plan.

My Department commissioned independent research and three reports, prepared by the Universities of Ulster and Cambridge have been published (see link below), providing the academics' views on the future of social housing allocations.

When public comments have been received on the reports, the feedback will be considered and proposals developed, which will in turn be subject to full public consultation.

Social Development Minister: Revision of Answers

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of his acknowledgement that he was erroneous in thinking that he had met with representatives of the Glass and Glazing Federation rather than Turkingtons, whether he will revise his answers to Assembly Questions that he has answered on this matter.

(AQW 29440/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I advised the Committee for Social Development on 12 December 2013 that I inadvertently and unintentionally misinformed the Committee about the attendees of the meeting that was held on 16 April 2012. I will revise my previous answers to Assembly Questions on this matter.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Parliament Buildings: International Calls

Mr McGlone asked the Assembly Commission, pursuant to AQW 28396/11-15, what consultation took place with Members prior to enforcing the restrictions on international calls from Parliament Buildings.

(AQW 29346/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: It was the understanding of Building Services Branch that, while telephones in Parliament Buildings had previously been re-set to bar international calls, no telephone lines were deliberately restricted from making calls to 00 353 numbers. We have now re-assessed all telephone lines and have discovered that a small number do not have the required 'tac' levels to call 00 353 numbers. This appears to have been due to a technical error and we have subsequently requested, through IT Assist, that all telephone lines in Parliament Buildings are provided with the appropriate 'tac' level in order to make calls to 00 353 numbers.

No restrictions on 00353 numbers were intentionally enforced and therefore no consultation was required. All telephone lines will now have access to 00 353 numbers within Parliament Buildings.

I apologise for any confusion and inconvenience that may have been caused by this inadvertent reduction in 'tac' levels. Please let me know if you require anything further.

Assembly Committees: Broadcast Meetings

Mr Copeland asked the Assembly Commission to detail what action it is taking to ensure all meetings of Statutory Assembly Committees are televised and furthermore are broadcast on the Assembly website.

(AQW 29480/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: The Assembly has three Committee rooms capable of being recorded in both video and audio - Room 30, Room 29 and the Senate Chamber. Another Committee Room, Room 21, is audio only.

The current design of the broadcast system can only deliver three simultaneous live outputs, although all other output is recorded. That means that when there are more than three Committee meetings happening simultaneously in Parliament Buildings, there is not the capacity to make a video stream available for all Committee meetings.

The Assembly is also able to stream two of these meetings using its current streaming service. To maximise the coverage of Assembly Committees visitors to the Assembly website are advised how they can access meetings being streamed by the BBC Democracy live service and the content of the Assembly streams are sometimes altered to avoid duplication of streaming by the BBC thus maximising the number of Committees available through web streaming.

The 'Listen Again' function on each Committee's individual web page gives access to the audio recording of most recent open session of that Committee and, therefore, is available to all on the website.

In addition, the video feeds of any meetings in Room 29, 30 and the Senate are provided to external TV companies as requested as well as audio feeds for any of the Committee rooms for radio broadcasters.

Access for the public to Committee proceedings is available via attendance at meetings, web streaming, 'Listen Again', Committee minutes and the official Report where available. In addition, all recordings, both video and audio, are archived for the mandate and are available by request.

To further increase the level of access a business case has been developed to procure a new internet video streaming service that will address the issue of smartphone and tablet compatibility so that the Assembly's video and/or audio streams can be made accessible on a wider range of devices and platforms. The new service will also increase the number of available feeds from two to three simultaneous live streams capable of carrying video and/or audio. It is planned that the new service will be in place for the 2014/2015 session.

Further, a plan is being considered at present for a temporary installation of video cameras in Room 21 to ensure a continuity of service and to minimise disruption to the business of the Assembly during the repairs being made to the roof. This is a measure to service a specific need during the renovation and repair phase.

However, this is a only temporary measure as to add one or more televised rooms will require a substantial redesign of the broadcasting infrastructure including finding additional accommodation for production galleries and broadcasting staff. This would be a major project that would require significant capital investment and, in the current climate of austerity and value for money, is not an option that is being considered at present.

Eurest: Food Waste

Mr Agnew asked the Assembly Commission to detail how Eurest currently manages excess food.
(AQW 29503/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey: Eurest minimises food waste by managing a robust food production system. This allows for effective planning with EPOS (Electronic Point Of Sale) information used to forecast production. During Recess periods food production is matched to the occupancy of the building.

All food waste is collected by the Northern Ireland Assembly waste management contractor who transports it to NWP at Glenside for composting.

All Eurest employees are trained in Food Management, Fighting Food Costs and Trim Trax. All these schemes allow Eurest to optimise their food production system.

Written Answers to Questions

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Foyle, Carlingford and Irish Lights Commission: Staff

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of staff employed by the Foyle, Carlingford and Irish Lights Commission, broken down by religion.

(AQW 28565/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Loughs Agency is an Agency of the Foyle, Carlingford and Irish Lights Commission. The Loughs Agency has responsibility for the promotion and development of Lough Foyle and Carlingford Lough for commercial and recreational purposes in respect of marine, fishery and aquaculture matters.

The Loughs Agency has 10 staff based in the south of Ireland and 46 staff based in the north of Ireland. The Loughs Agency is only required to hold information on community background for employees living in the north. Of these, the breakdown is as follows:

- 20 Protestant employees;
- 25 Catholic employees; and
- 1 non determined employee.

Loughs Agency: A5 Western Transport Corridor

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) why Loughs Agency did not respond to the findings and conclusions of the screening exercise on the A5 Western Transport Corridor; (ii) whether Loughs Agency are a statutory consultee; (iii) whether it is normal for Loughs Agency to respond; and (iv) whether any consideration was given by Loughs Agency to issuing a response.

(AQW 28746/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The Loughs Agency has been involved in various stages of the wider A5 Western Transport Corridor consultation process from as far back as 2007. The Agency was involved, pre public enquiry, where it has fully participated via letter, email or verbally and has put forward relevant comments. The Loughs Agency did submit a response to the screening exercise. The Agency's response was set out in a letter dated 28th March 2011.
- (ii) The Loughs Agency is currently a non-statutory consultee.
- (iii) The Loughs Agency responds to all consultations that falls within its remit.
- (iv) As stated earlier, the Loughs Agency issued a response on 28th March 2011.

North Antrim: Livestock Theft

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many incidents of stolen livestock have been reported in the North Antrim area, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 29300/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

	2010/2011	2011/2012	2012/2013
Number of Incidents	80	66	87

The above table records the number of incidents involving missing or stolen cattle in the Ballymena Divisional Veterinary Office (DVO) area. The majority of the North Antrim area is in the Ballymena DVO area.

APHIS does not differentiate between missing or stolen cattle. Information involving any other missing or stolen livestock is not recorded on APHIS at present.

APHIS does not record information on a constituency basis.

Eggs: Italy/Greece Imports

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she is aware of eggs being imported from Italy or Greece.

(AQW 29320/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My officials interrogated the Trade Control and Export System (TRACES) database and can confirm that there are no records of direct imports of hatching eggs from either Italy or Greece during 2013.

In accordance with EU law table eggs move freely between Member States (MS). DARD is therefore not informed of consignments coming into the north from other MS including Italy and Greece.

Farm Security: CESAR

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department will be administering the recently announced funding package to encourage farmers to fit security devices to their machinery.

(AQW 29380/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Front line administration of this initiative will be undertaken by NFU Mutual staff.

The contact number to reserve the subsidised rates for TRACKER and CESAR is 028 90 818688. The line will be open 09:00 to 17:00 Monday to Friday and the package is available until 31st January 2014, subject to availability.

Tree Disease: Ministerial Meetings

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to list the number of meetings she has held on future strategies to combat tree disease and pests with officials in the (i) Republic of Ireland; and (ii) regions of the United Kingdom.

(AQW 29388/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In the past 12 month I have had three meetings with Ministers from the south of Ireland which included agenda items related to tree and plant health strategy on the 9 and 10 July and on the 13 November. My officials have been regularly liaising with their DEFRA counterparts on these issues over this period however I have had no meetings with British Ministers during this period.

Farming: Capital Grant Scheme

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the work undertaken by her Department on a future capital grant scheme for farmers; and to detail the timescale for this work.

(AQW 29409/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department's proposals for a capital grant scheme in the new Rural Development Programme (RDP) were outlined in a consultation document published on 1 July 2013, with the period of public consultation closing on 21 October 2013.

My officials are considering the consultation responses received and will continue to develop the programme in conjunction with the Stakeholder Consultation Group before it is submitted to Europe. There is further work to be done on the proposals for the new Programme before it is submitted informally to Europe to commence the process of approval.

Third Sector Organisations: DARD Funding

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) all third sector organisations funded by the Department who provide services to the public; and (ii) the value of each contract.

(AQW 29412/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The following table outlines the third sector organisations funded by my Department in the 2012/13 financial year.

Name of Third Sector Organisation Funded by DARD	Value of Contract

Animal Welfare: Tuberculosis Breakdown

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the criteria for determining whether there is a potential animal welfare or human hardship problem following a tuberculosis breakdown; and (ii) whether breakdown herds can have immediate access to Alternative Control Herds.

(AQW 29485/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) Given the range of potential animal welfare or human hardship problems following a tuberculosis breakdown it would not be appropriate to apply rigidly defined criteria. Each case will be considered on its merits following discussion between the herdkeeper and the patch Veterinary Officer or local Divisional Veterinary Officer.
- (ii) Any herd keeper who has a problem which they believe will be relieved by moving animals to an Alternative Control Herd (ACH) will be able to apply to do so. Alternative Control Herds will be able to accept cattle from TB free herds on a routine basis. Moves to ACHs from TB breakdown herds will be considered by the Department on a case by case basis and will be permitted where the move will resolve a potential animal welfare or human hardship problem at the breakdown herd, which cannot be resolved by other means such as purchase of additional fodder. It will take some weeks before the first ACHs are approved. Therefore, in the meantime, anyone experiencing animal welfare or hardship problems as a result of TB restrictions should contact their local DARD Direct office for advice.

Rural Development Programme: European Visits

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the European visits made by her Department in the course of implementing the current Rural Development Programme or planning future programmes in each of the past three years.

(AQW 29486/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: For the purposes of answering this question 'European visits' has been taken to mean meetings with the European Commission on implementation of the 2007-2013 Rural Development Programme and development of the 2014-2020 Programme. The following table details the meetings which have taken place in this context in the last three years.

Meeting Type	Number	Programme
Rural Development Annual Review	3	2007-2013
EU Rural Development Committee	2	2007-2013 2014-2020
EU Commission – ad hoc issues	3	2007-2013 2014-2020

The answer excludes meetings on negotiating the regulations, which have taken place in Europe over the last three years and which provide the framework for the new Programme.

Rural Development Programme: European Visits

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) any reviews, carried out regarding Departmental visits to Europe, as part of officials' normal duties; and (ii) if any visits were assessed.

(AQW 29487/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A total of 8 meetings have been held with the EU Commission on the implementation of the 2007-2013 Rural Development Programme and the development of the 2014-2020 Programme. Due to the nature of these meetings no formal review or assessment was required. Three of these meetings were Annual Reviews following completion of the Annual Progress Report and are an EU requirement. Two meetings were attendance at Rural Development Committee. Information from these meetings was disseminated to relevant DARD staff on return. The remaining three meetings were in relation to specific issues and the outcome of these meetings was discussed with relevant staff.

Single Farm Payment: Maximum Eligible Area

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail how many 2013 Single Farm Payment applications have had field Maximum Eligible Area (MEA) discrepancies identified, and are subject to further Land Parcel Identification System (LPIS) checks.

(AQW 29493/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: At the outset of the verification checks on 2013 Single Farm Payment applications, the Department identified 3,529 businesses where one or more fields had been claimed with an area greater than the Maximum Eligible Area held by the Department.

Single Farm Payment: Maximum Eligible Area

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail at what stage of the 2013 Single Farm Payment process field Maximum Eligible Area (MEA) discrepancies were identified in applications.

(AQW 29494/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Maximum Eligible Area (MEA) discrepancies were initially identified during the claim validation process. This process commenced after all field information from paper Single Application Forms had been entered into Departmental systems. MEA discrepancies can also be identified through on-the-spot checks such as land eligibility inspections.

Single Farm Payment: Maximum Eligible Area

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) what information has been issued to Single Farm Payment applicants that have had field Maximum Eligible Area (MEA) discrepancies identified with their claims; and are subject to Land Parcel Identification System (LPIS) checks; and (ii) at what stage of the process this information was issued.

(AQW 29495/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In September 2013 the Department identified 3,529 businesses where one or more fields had been claimed with an area greater than the Maximum Eligible Area held by the Department.

In all of these cases the Department established whether it held any information which explained why the farm business claimed an area greater than the MEA. In circumstances where the Department did not hold such information, letters were issued to farm businesses on 11 November 2013 requesting responses within a 10 day period. These letters requested an explanation from the farm business.

Single Farm Payment: Maximum Eligible Area

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline whether discrepancies identified with the field Maximum Eligible Area for 2013 Single Farm Payment applications that are subject to Land Parcel Identification System checks are attributable to individual applicants or to her Department.

(AQW 29496/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: At the outset of the verification checks on 2013 Single Farm Payment applications, the Department identified 3,529 businesses where one or more fields had been claimed with an area greater than the Maximum Eligible Area held by the Department.

The discrepancies identified have been investigated and are found to have occurred for a variety of reasons including farmer error in the claim and outstanding updates to the LPIS. The majority of discrepancies investigated have been attributed to error by the farmer.

Department for Employment and Learning

Apprenticeships: Female Participation

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline any plans he has to promote women in apprenticeships.

(AQW 29244/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): The most recent edition of my Department's ApprenticeshipsNI Statistical Bulletin indicates that from the introduction of the ApprenticeshipsNI programme in 2007 to date, the percentage of females starting ApprenticeshipsNI funded training has increased from 35% to 51%. A full copy of the Statistical Bulletin can be viewed by following the link below.

<http://www.delni.gov.uk/index/publications/r-and-s-stats/apprenticeshipsni-statistical-bulletins.htm>

Factors impacting on this increase include the introduction of an all-age provision coupled with accessibility for those working a minimum of 21 hours per week.

As outlined in my oral statement to the Assembly on Tuesday 4 June 2013, I am aware of a range of gender equality issues facing Northern Ireland. I recognise that females, despite gaining strong educational attainments in the further and higher education fields, are much less likely than males to pursue careers in economically relevant areas such as Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths (STEM).

The implementation of the STEM Strategy, 'Success through STEM' sets out how we will collectively help to address this issue. Businesses themselves have an important role to play. For example, the STEM Business sub-group ran a seminar entitled 'Are you getting the balance right?' in association with the Equality Commission. The seminar engaged with STEM businesses to investigate the issues of gender bias in STEM and assist in identifying additional steps businesses can take to make careers in STEM attractive to women.

As the member will be aware, in February I announced a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. The terms of reference for this work state the intention to explore how apprenticeships could have a better gender balance. This review, which is all encompassing in nature, is progressing as planned and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Apprentices: Retention

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning if he has given any consideration to how the public sector can be used to assist in the retention of apprentices during the economic downturn.

(AQW 29245/11-15)

Dr Farry: Employment Service Advisers, working across my Department's network of Jobs and Benefits Offices, will explore all employment opportunities with apprentices who are made redundant.

My Department's employment and training programmes, such as Training for Success, Youth Employment Scheme and Steps to Work, include the opportunity for work placement. Training Suppliers work with a range of employers, from all sectors, in order to facilitate suitable placements.

As the member will be aware, in February I announced a major review of my Department's apprenticeship policy. This review, which is all-encompassing in nature and will consider the public sector context, is progressing as planned and I will be reporting its findings shortly.

Universities: Cap Abolished

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the local implications for a proposed lifting of the cap on university numbers.

(AQW 29248/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the Chancellor's Autumn Statement it was announced that universities in England will be given an extra 30,000 student places for 2014/15 and that the cap will be abolished altogether for 2015/16

This change may present the opportunity for more students from Northern Ireland who wish to study in England to take advantage of the additional places being made available. However, there is no strong evidence as to how the regime of higher fees and cost of living expenses will affect the decision of students to study there.

The availability of more places in England may make it more challenging for the local universities to attract students from outside Northern Ireland to study here.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Agrifood: Cooperative Societies

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the economic value of the co-operative sector within the agri-food sector; (ii) the number of jobs sustained within the sector, for each of the last five years; and (iii) the plans to further support its growth.

(AQW 29222/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): The following figures are based on information for 2012 for agri-food co-operative societies and their subsidiary companies:

(i)	Total turnover:	£1,093,814,302
	External Sales:	£744,002,883
	Value Added:	£79,398,594
(ii)	Total employment:	2012 – 2,247 employees
		2011 – 2,239 employees
		2010 – 2,179 employees
		2009 – 2,145 employees
		2008 – 2,091 employees

(iii) The Agri-food Strategy, 'Going for Growth', outlines the development strategy over the next six years to 2020, including sub-sector targets and recommendations. Future development plans submitted to Invest NI for consideration for financial assistance will be assessed according to current procedures.

Consumer Estate Agents and Redress Act 2007

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether any statutory evidence gathering powers on issues affecting consumers exists, comparable to Section 24 of the Consumer Estate Agents and Redress Act in Great Britain; and to outline any plans she has in relation to this issue.

(AQW 29256/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Section 24 of Consumer Estate Agents and Redress Act 2007 allows the National Consumer Council to request that information be provided to it from certain persons in connection with its functions under the Act. Included among these persons are the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority and the Water Services Regulation Authority.

The provisions that allow the National Consumer Council to request information from these Authorities are broadly similar to the provisions that allow the General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland to request information from the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation, under both the Energy (Northern Ireland) Order 2003 and the Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006.

With the review of consumer landscape in GB it is proposed that responsibility for the consumer advocacy role for postal matters in Northern Ireland will transfer to the Consumer Council. This transfer of responsibility will come with the power to require that information be provided to the Council, in relation to postal matters. The legislative basis for this power will be through an amendment to the provisions of Section 24 of the Consumer Estate Agents and Redress Act 2007.

Consumer Council: Budget

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much of the Consumer Council budget was spent on each of its functions, including (i) handling enquiries and complaints; (ii) producing publicity materials; (iii) carrying out research; (iv) consumer education activities; and (v) other activities, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 29257/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The budget information is not available in the format requested but the figures below detail the staff salaries for the three years in question together with the amounts spent on work programme by project in 2011/12 and 2012/13 and by area in 2010/11.

Carbon Trust Loan Scheme: Renewable Heat Incentive

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given that regulations published for the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive prohibits grant aid but not loans, why applications are being refused from people who have taken out Carbon Trust Loans.

(AQW 29280/11-15)

Mrs Foster: On 1 November 2013, DETI received a formal request, under the dispute resolution process for the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive (RHI), to review a decision taken by Ofgem not to accredit an installation. The issue in question was whether an installation that has availed of a Carbon Trust Loan was eligible to receive the Northern Ireland RHI.

As a result of the review, DETI has revoked the Ofgem decision and considers that an installation that has availed of a Carbon Trust loan is eligible to be considered for accreditation under the Northern Ireland RHI scheme.

In addition, DETI has revised the operating procedures for the scheme. Where an applicant has availed of 'de minimis' aid prior to making an Northern Ireland RHI application for accreditation, the Northern Ireland RHI aid will be provided on the basis of the European Commission's 'de minimis' regulation, Commission Regulation (EC) No 1998/2006 of 15 December 2006 <http://eur-lex.europa.eu/LexUriServ/LexUriServ.do?uri=CELEX:32006R1998:EN:NOT>

Electricity: Site Management

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what legislative and other barriers exist to demand site management in relation to electricity.

(AQW 29351/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am entirely supportive of maximising the potential which demand side management measures offers.

My officials have been engaged in discussions with the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation to encourage facilitation of the range of demand side measures in Northern Ireland in the context of the Single Electricity Market.

This engagement includes consideration of legislative and other measures which might be desirable or required in the context of wider work on market integration and compliance with relevant EU legislation.

The Department has encouraged the Utility Regulator to explore options for facilitating the range of demand side management measures under the existing regulatory framework while the longer term arrangements are scoped and developed.

Moyle Interconnector: Repair Costs

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her discussions with Mutual Energy regarding the repair costs for the Moyle Interconnector.

(AQW 29378/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Mutual Energy advise that interim repairs to restore the Moyle interconnector to full transfer capacity are expected to cost between £2million and £4million and, subject to obtaining the necessary approvals, should be completed during 2014. Mutual Energy has also agreed proposals with the Utility Regulator for a permanent repair of the Moyle by laying new low voltage cables along a similar route to the existing cables. This is to be completed in 2017 at a current estimated cost of £60million.

Moyle Interconnector: Repair Costs

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for a breakdown of the cost to repair the Moyle Interconnector; and from where will this cost be met.

(AQW 29379/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Mutual Energy advise that interim repairs to restore the Moyle interconnector to full transfer capacity are expected to cost between £2 million and £4 million and, subject to obtaining the necessary approvals, should be completed during 2014. Permanent repair of the Moyle is to be completed in 2017, at a current estimated cost of £60 million.

The cost to repair the Moyle will be funded from a variety of sources with a view to minimising costs to consumers. This will include charges levied on consumers via their energy suppliers for use of the system, revenue from Moyle capacity auctions, and proceeds from insurance claims in relation to the cable faults.

Taxis: Local Economy

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the importance of taxiing to the local economy in terms of employment, training, taxes and tourism promotion.

(AQW 29404/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Taxiing provides an essential service to both citizens and visitors. It is important for tourists, shoppers, businesses, school children and the night economy.

Taxi drivers are often the first point of contact for visitors and therefore have a vital role in providing a warm welcome and sharing their valuable knowledge of the area. The Northern Ireland Tourist Board welcomes the participation by local taxi drivers in WorldHost training to ensure they are equipped with industry leading customer service skills when welcoming visitors to Northern Ireland.

According to the Department of Environment, there were almost 16,000 taxi driver licences and almost 2,000 taxi operator licences in Northern Ireland on the 30 September 2013. Statistics from the Department of Regional Development also show that 2% of journeys per person per year are undertaken in taxis or black taxis in the 2010-12 period; this equates to 15 taxi journeys per person per year.

While statistics are scarce on the economic output of taxi drivers, particularly because many are self employed, statistics are available on taxi operations. In December 2013, the Inter-Departmental Business Register showed there were approximately 175 VAT and/or PAYE registered taxi operations in Northern Ireland. These businesses collectively had a turnover of over £39 million and employment of 975.

Taxis: Tourism

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact of a single tiered taxi industry on the tourism industry, in relation of clarity and simplicity, fairness and costs.

(AQW 29405/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Legislation to introduce a single tier licensing system for taxis is a matter for the Department of the Environment.

Taxis provide an important service for visitors to Northern Ireland and are often the first point of contact. I welcome proposals that will provide fair and equitable standards for service providers and deliver a high quality service that meets visitors' expectations of a modern tourism destination.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Civil Service: Showers

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel which Civil Service offices that offer shower facilities for people that cycle to work; and whether there are plans to install shower facilities across all offices.

(AQW 27675/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): There are a total of 123 buildings in the NICS and Agency estate that have showers available for cyclists. Provision of additional shower facilities are planned in a further 2 buildings.

There is currently no plan to provide shower facilities throughout the NICS estate for cyclists as it is a matter for the Department with premises officer responsibility to consider the appropriateness of such facilities in a particular building.

In existing buildings for which my Department has premises officer responsibility, where circumstances allow and space is available and it is appropriate to do so and budget constraints permit, shower facilities are provided.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will consider offering a reduction for high performing domestic and non/domestic properties in Energy Performance Certificate assessments to encourage property holders to invest in energy efficiency schemes.

(AQW 28620/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Although it isn't clear from the question I assume that it is a reduction in rates that is referred to.

In 2009 my Department introduced a scheme to provide a rates holiday to the first occupiers of newly built zero and low carbon houses. It was decided to close the scheme in 2012 due to the high cost of administration and the relatively low take up, and to transfer the funding to the Green New Deal, in order to make better use of available money in pursuit of similar aims.

I have no plans to introduce another rates scheme of this nature using energy performance certificates.

Disposable Income of Households

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail, for the most recent consecutive five years for which data is available, (i) the average disposable income per head; (ii) comparable figures for British regions; and (iii) comparable figures for regions in the south of Ireland.

(AQW 28864/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Comparable data in the form of Disposable Income of Households presented as Purchasing Power Standards based on final consumption per inhabitant is produced by Eurostat and is presented in Table 1. This information is only available up to 2010 and takes account of the differences in the cost of living between countries.

Background Note

- 1 The Office for National Statistics provides Eurostat with Gross Disposable Household Income (GDHI) which forms the basis of the UK regional figures provided. Gross Disposable Household Income (GDHI) is the amount of money that individuals (i.e. the household sector) have available for spending or saving. This is money left after expenditure associated with income, e.g. taxes and social contributions, property ownership and provision for future pension income. It is calculated gross of any deductions for capital consumption.
- 2 The Central Statistics Office (CSO) provides Eurostat with Disposable Income which forms the basis of the ROI regional figures provided. CSO define Disposable Income as total income minus current taxes on income (i.e. income taxes, other current taxes) minus social insurance contributions.
- 3 Eurostat define the purchasing power standard (PPS) as an artificial currency unit. Theoretically, one PPS can buy the same amount of goods and services in each country. However, price differences across borders mean that different amounts of national currency units are needed for the same goods and services depending on the country. PPS are derived by dividing any economic aggregate of a country in national currency by its respective purchasing power parities (PPPs). PPS is the technical term used by Eurostat for the common currency in which national accounts aggregates are expressed when adjusted for price level differences using PPPs. Thus, PPPs can be interpreted as the exchange rate of the PPS against the euro.

October Monitoring: DEL Bids

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the criteria used to determine which Department of Employment and Learning projects were awarded funding at the October Monitoring Round 2013.

(AQW 29214/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Employment and Learning submitted no bids as part of the 2013-14 October monitoring round.

Pay: Mean Weekly Earnings

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail, for the most recent five years for which data is available, the (i) total average weekly earnings broken down by both public and private industrial sectors; (ii) total amount of this money paid as bonuses across these sectors.

(AQW 29247/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The average (mean) gross weekly earnings and bonus pay for all employee jobs in Northern Ireland for public and private industrial sectors is provided in Table 1 for the years requested.

The figures are from the Northern Ireland Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) conducted by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA).

- 1 Gross weekly bonus pay covers all bonus payments such as profit sharing, productivity, performance and other bonus or incentive pay, piecework and commission.
 - 2 Employees (full-time and part-time) on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence.
 - 3 The introduction of methodological changes to improve the quality of ASHE data has resulted in discontinuities in trends. Estimates for 2011, 2012 and 2013 are not directly comparable to earlier results.

Mental Health: Public Sector Work Placements

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of people with mental health issues finding it difficult to secure a work placement in the public sector; and what action his Department is taking to address this problem. (AQW 29311/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Corporate HR (CHR) in my Department manages applications for unpaid work experience placements with the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) departments. Each year approximately 200 placements are facilitated by the NICS for individuals seeking work experience, including people with disabilities.

During 2013 CHR facilitated Action Mental Health to raise awareness within NICS of issues facing people recovering from mental health illness in returning to the world of work. Following a limited pilot placement in my department involving Action Mental Health, and further consultation with departments, CHR developed a new work experience scheme specifically for people with disabilities, including people with mental health issues. This new scheme will augment existing work experience arrangements and will launch in January 2014.

Information on the revised policy arrangements and application forms for the scheme will be available on the NICS Recruitment website www.nicsrecruitment.gov.uk in January 2014.

Rates: Commercial Property Revaluation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the proposed timeframe for the rating review of non-domestic properties. (AQW 29362/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The revaluation of all commercial property in Northern Ireland is well underway.

Land & Property Services (LPS) is making good progress on the validation of the rental evidence it received and the detailed market analysis has started.

The valuation process will then follow in March next year and by late 2014 LPS will produce a draft Valuation List which will inform individual ratepayers of their new assessments, before the new bills issue in April 2015.

North Down: Life Expectancy

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to list, in ascending order, life expectancy in the North Down constituency, broken down by ward. (AQW 29465/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Period Life Expectancy at birth for North Down Local Government District (2008-2010) is 79.0 years for men and 82.2 years for women. Life expectancy statistics for electoral wards are not available.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Hospitals: Consultant Recruitment

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there are any particular difficulties in recruiting hospital consultants locally, compared to other parts of the UK.

(AQW 29272/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Health and Social Care Trusts have informed my Department that they have had difficulties in recruiting hospital consultants locally in a certain number of specialties. The difficulties occur in a range of different specialties and vary across Trusts. We are aware that there are also difficulties in recruiting consultants in certain specialties in other parts of the UK, particularly in specialties such as Emergency Medicine.

South Down: Mental Health Services

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what investment has been made in mental health in South Down, over the last three years; and what plans his Department has to improve mental health services in South Down over the next three years.

(AQW 29310/11-15)

Mr Poots: Health services in the South Down constituency area are provided by the South Eastern HSC Trust (in the northern part of the constituency) and the Southern Trust (in the southern part of the constituency). As mental health services are provided on a Trust wide basis, the Trusts cannot provide information on financial investment solely in the South Down constituency area.

Developemnts in Mental Health Services within the South Eastern HSC Trust

Mental Health Services within the South Eastern Health & Social Care Trust's area of South Down have benefitted from a range of investments over the past three years.

This investment has strengthened the Mental Health infrastructure within the South Down area, with the enhancement of locally based Home Treatment Services, Day Hospital Provision, Community Mental Health Teams, Outpatient Services, Personality Disorder Services, Psychological Therapies, Supported Living Schemes, Rehabilitation Services, Carers Support, Addiction Services and Acute Mental Health Inpatient Provision. Additionally there has been an investment to strengthen the responsiveness of Out of Hours Mental Health Services to individuals who present to Emergency Departments with self-harm across the Trust's of South Down.

Over the next three years it is envisaged that additional investment will enable the Trust to:

- Implement new models of care that will support and enhance provision within the community and voluntary sector through a new Trust-wide Health & Wellbeing Hub Model (encompassing the South Down area)
- Support a new pilot project within the locality that will target respite arrangements for mental health carers
- Enhance the range of psychological therapy services
- Deliver an enhanced psychiatric liaison service to the Trust's Emergency Departments.

Developments in Mental Health Services within Southern HSC Trust

Mental Health Services in the Southern Trust have undergone significant reform and modernisation since 2009.

A range of mental health services, based at Daisy Hill Hospital, are available to GPs providing to the Newry and Mourne Council population, which includes South Down, including:

- Primary Mental Health Care Service (for short term intervention for mid-moderate mental health problems with outreach clinic in Kilkeel)
- Support & Recovery Team providing longer term support and recovery for people with mental health problems
- Addiction Clinic at Daisy Hill Hospital
- Eating Disorder Clinic at Daisy Hill Hospital.

The Southern Trust has plans to enhance Mental Health Services across the Trust area in the following areas:

- Psychiatry liaison services to Acute hospitals
- Further development of community addiction services including alcohol liaison services;
- Centralisation of acute in-patient mental health services on the Bluestone site with the opening of 10 Psychiatrist Intensive care beds and 10 Assessment and Treatment beds for adults with a learning disability;
- Enhancement of eating disorder services.

Domiciliary Care Workers: Registration

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when domiciliary care workers will be registered with the Northern Ireland Social Care Council.

(AQW 29376/11-15)

Mr Poots: Strengthening public protection through registration of the social care workforce in Northern Ireland is one of my Department's key policy priorities. The Northern Ireland Social Care Council was set up specifically to deliver on that policy commitment and ensure we have a competent and confident workforce that is trusted by service users and their families.

Roll out of registration has been subject to public consultation and on that basis registration has been progressed on a phased priority basis for specific groups. It is compulsory for the following groups to be registered with the NISCC: social workers, social work students; social care workers in adult residential care and in nursing homes; and social care managers in adult residential, day care and domiciliary settings.

My officials are currently working with the NISCC to develop proposals, including a timeframe, for continuation of rollout of registration to the final groups of social care workers, including domiciliary care workers. These proposals will be subject to public consultation.

Ambulances: Turnaround Times

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the downtime statistics for ambulances, in the last month, in each Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 29381/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is assumed that ambulance downtime refers to the ambulance turnaround time, i.e. the length of time for the ambulance to be made ready for the next journey following arrival at hospital.

It should be noted that the NIAS do not capture information on the date/time of admission of patients to emergency care departments. As a consequence, information on turnaround times detailed in the response refers to the time between the ambulance arriving at the emergency care department and it 'clearing' the location. The crew will remain with the patient until they have been handed over to the relevant clinical personnel within the HSC Hospital environment. The ambulance turnaround time will include patient handover and other aspects such as the time to clean and replenish the ambulance for the next call.

The information provided relates to all ambulance journeys, including urgent and routine patient journeys in addition to those resulting from emergency calls.

Ambulance turnaround times for each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust in November 2013 are detailed in the table below.

HSC Trust	< 15 min	15 - 30 min	30 - 45 min	45 - 60 min	1 - 2 Hrs	2 - 3 Hrs	More than 3 Hrs	Total

Other refers to patients who refused to travel and those taken to locations which were not an acute hospital.

e.g. Belfast International Airport, Northern Ireland Cancer Centre, Lurgan Hospital etc.

Ambulances: Turnaround Times

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what was the longest ambulance downtime at each hospital in the last month; and on how many occasions downtime exceeded two hours.

(AQW 29382/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is assumed that ambulance downtime refers to the ambulance turnaround time, i.e. the length of time for the ambulance to be made ready for the next journey following arrival at hospital.

It should be noted that the NIAS do not capture information on the date/time of admission of patients to emergency care departments. As a consequence, information on turnaround times detailed in the response refers to the time between the

Nurses: Readmission to Register

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the process for re-entry to nursing for qualified nurses who have temporarily stepped out of the profession.

(AQW 29427/11-15)

Mr Poots: A Nurse/midwife who has previously been on the NMC register and wishes to apply for readmission after a break of at least three months, will need to meet the specific requirements as listed below:

- 450 hours of registered practice and 35 hours of learning activity must have been completed in the previous three years within the UK or overseas and NMC will ask the nurses/midwives to sign a declaration to this effect.
- A Nurse/midwife will also need to complete an application to readmit to the register and provide NMC with references.
- If a nurse/midwife cannot meet the required hours but can meet 750 hours of practice in the last five years and 35 hours of learning in the last three years, NMC will have a discussion to decide whether the necessary requirements are met or not. At this stage NMC will provide the nurse/midwife with an application pack and provide further information.

Practice can include supervisory, teaching, research and managerial roles as well as providing direct patient care. However, practice hours completed while the nurse/midwife were lapsed or not registered, for example working as a health care assistant, cannot be counted towards the practice requirement.

It is illegal to work in a role requiring registration whilst unregistered in any circumstances. Applications for re-admission from registrants who are found to have been working are referred to the Registrar's Advisory Group for consideration.

Ambulances: Turnaround Times

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the longest ambulance waits outside each hospital in Northern Ireland for the 12 weeks from August to October 2013.

(AQW 29443/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is assumed that this question refers to the ambulance turnaround time, i.e. the length of time for the ambulance to be made ready for the next journey following arrival at hospital.

It should be noted that the NIAS do not capture information on the date/time of admission of patients to emergency care departments. As a consequence, information on turnaround times detailed in the response refers to the time between the ambulance arriving at the emergency care department and it 'clearing' the location. Department of Justice

DOJ: Joint Work Programmes

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to list the joint work programmes his Department has engaged in with other parts of the UK.

(AQW 29340/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): A list, in chronological order, of the joint work programmes undertaken by my Department with other parts of the UK is provided in the table below. The list includes programmes since 12 April 2010 when the devolution of policing and justice took place. However the list also includes one ongoing programme which commenced prior to devolution which my Department is involved in.

Criminal Justice: Compensation

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the procedure in cases in which compensation has been ordered after convictions which are not appealed, but the compensation is not paid; and whether the compensation can be taken from state benefits and paid directly to victims through the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service.

(AQW 29365/11-15)

Mr Ford: Compensation ordered following a criminal conviction cannot currently be deducted from state benefits.

I am developing legislation to bring forward a Fines and Enforcement Bill and am considering a number of measures to improve the enforcement of court imposed fines and other sums including compensation.

Rural Crime Unit: Evaluation

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the effectiveness of the Rural Crime Unit.

(AQW 29387/11-15)

Mr Ford: An evaluation of the Rural Crime Unit is scheduled to be undertaken by the Rural Crime Unit Steering Group in Autumn 2014, following the Rural Crime Unit's first year of operation. This evaluation will provide an assessment of the effectiveness of the Rural Crime Unit and help determine the future operation of the Unit.

While I do not think it would be appropriate for me to make an assessment of the Unit's effectiveness prior to the completion of this evaluation, an outcome of the Unit's effective partnership working was recently evidenced when the Minister of Agriculture and Regional Development and I launched an initiative to provide a subsidy to farmers in E and F policing districts to encourage the fitting of security equipment to their farm machinery.

This initiative was informed by the work of the Rural Crime Unit which identified those districts as 'hotspot' areas for the theft of farm machinery.

Data from the unit will primarily be used to assist District Commanders in making operational decisions and targeting deployment of police resources. It will also provide an opportunity for partners from the Rural Crime Unit Steering Group to support farmers through the development of crime prevention initiatives.

Forensic Science Northern Ireland: Delays

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) what action is he taking to address the over-demand on forensics service; and (ii) for his assessment of the subsequent delays impacting on court cases by missing timetable targets.

(AQW 29407/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) It is difficult to predict the demand for forensics services. However, Forensic Science Northern Ireland (FSNI) has arrangements in place to enable brokering to other forensic science providers when capacity exceeds demand. FSNI is also working with colleagues in Scottish and Irish laboratories to identify any opportunities for dealing with excess demand. To date these opportunities have been limited as they too experience excess demands in some areas.

In addition, FSNI recently launched a Transformation Programme which aims to improve timeliness and capacity across the organisation. As well as overseeing the introduction of new facilities for evidence recovery and the analysis of DNA and a new case management system, the Programme aims to deliver an increase in capacity and improvement in turnaround times in those areas where this initiative is applied.

- (ii) Speeding up justice is one of my key priorities. A multi agency programme is in place to bring improvements to the criminal justice system. FSNI has a part to play in speeding up the processes which deliver forensic information to the courts. FSNI continues to work closely with the PSNI and the Public Prosecution Service to identify and prioritise those cases which may result in a delay in court processes.

Sex Offenders: Convictions from other Jurisdictions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 28917/11-15, whether it is accepted that, as the law stands, a non-national sex-offender who committed offences outside Northern Ireland can move to, and live in, Northern Ireland without restrictions which would otherwise apply to a Northern Ireland citizen, until police become aware of the past convictions, and that is likely only if there is a further offence committed in Northern Ireland or the person is sought under a European or International Arrest Warrant; and for his assessment of the risk to the public that this poses and of the increased vulnerability of potential victims.

(AQW 29449/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is little I can add to the answer I gave to AQW/28917/11-15. The law currently requires that the court make a notification order under section 97 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 once it is proved that the person has a conviction for a relevant offence outside the UK. Once a notification order has been made the person is subject to the same notification requirements as if he had been convicted in this jurisdiction. I also made reference to the provisions in the Criminal Justice Act (NI) 2013 which, on commencement, will make sex offenders convicted outside the UK subject to notification after they have been in NI for a qualifying period.

Information in relation to previous convictions from other jurisdictions can come to police attention in a number of ways, such as those described in the question, but also including information sharing across jurisdictions.

As I said in my answer to AQW/28917, border controls and immigration are not devolved matters, and it is not possible to place travel restrictions on persons who live within the EU.

Courts and Tribunals Service: Mixed Committals

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to clarify (i) the content of the recent guidance given by the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service in respect of listing mixed committals as special hearings; (ii) the reasons for this guidance; and (iii) when it was issued.

(AQW 29450/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service has not recently issued guidance in respect of listing mixed committal proceedings as special hearings.

Legal Aid: Very High Cost Cases

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how much has been paid in Legal Aid in Very High Cost cases in each of the last three financial years; and to how many (i) legal firms; (ii) junior and senior counsel; and (iii) defendants, do the figures relate.

(AQW 29451/11-15)

Mr Ford: The amounts paid by the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission in Very High Cost cases in the last three financial years is as follows:

	Crown Court	Magistrates Court	Total
2010-11	£12.84M	£0.11M	£12.95M
2011-12	£6.26M	£0.26M	£6.52M
2012-13	£10.95M	£0.30M	£11.25M

Additional detail can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Service: Environmental Allowance

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice what percentage of Prison Officers receive an environmental allowance; and whether he has any plans to offer this payment to Prison Officers who are not in receipt of the allowance, in light of the increase in dissident republican activity.

(AQW 29455/11-15)

Mr Ford: 31% of staff formerly received a Northern Ireland Prison Service Payment to reflect the special circumstances in which they worked. This was consolidated into salaries in 1995 (officers) and 2006 (Governors) as part of a wider pay deal.

The Prison Service Pay Review Body has provided me with a comprehensive report on the issue of an allowance. They have recommended payment of a supplementary risk allowance of £1,320 per annum for the remaining prison grade staff (69%) not in receipt of the consolidated payment. NIPS Management are considering how this will be financed from within existing baselines.

Legal Aid: Not-for-profit Organisations

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice to detail the annual amount of Legal Aid claimed by not-for-profit organisations, which have contracts with his Department, for each of the last five years.

(AQW 29499/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission, through funding provided by the Department of Justice, has grant funding agreements with two not-for-profit organisations: the Housing Rights Service, for the provision of advice and assistance in mortgage repossession, and ejectment proceedings and the Law Centre (NI), for the provision of legal services for immigration, asylum and human trafficking.

Payments made to the holders of these grants over the last 5 years, are as follows:

Financial Year	Law Centre NI	Housing Rights Service	Total
2008/09	£ 169,083	0.00	£ 169,083
2009/10	£217,497	0.00	£ 217,497
2010/11	£ 247,289	0.00	£247,289
2011/12	£ 206,784	0.00	£206,784
2012/13	£ 254,786	£60,000	£314,786
Totals	£1,095,439	£60,000	£1,155,439

These figures include the current grants as well as payments made from the Legal Aid Fund in respect of advice and assistance and legal services not covered by the grants.

It is not possible for the Commission to provide full details of the additional amounts actually claimed from the Legal Aid Fund as, for example, in High Court cases the Commission pays Legal Aid bills as assessed by the Taxing Master. The amount paid from the Legal Aid fund will therefore differ from the amount actually claimed.

Legal Aid: Legacy Inquest Cases

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice to detail the cost to the Legal Aid fund of representation for the estimated 56 re-opened inquests into suspicious deaths and matters, referred back to the courts by the Attorney General.
(AQW 29500/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are now 57 legacy inquest cases in total, of which 12 have been disposed of. There are, therefore, 45 active legacy inquest cases relating to 73 deaths.

Of the 12 cases disposed of, two were referred to the Coroner by the Attorney General under section 14 of the Coroners Act (Northern Ireland) 1959. Of the 45 on-going cases, 23 were referred to the Coroner by the Attorney General.

Funding for representation in legacy inquest cases is available, subject to specified criteria, by way of 'exceptional legal aid'. Applications for such funding are submitted to the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission.

To date, fees have been paid by the Commission in two cases disposed of that were referred to the Coroner by the Attorney General. The total costs paid by the Commission amounted to £22,000 (inclusive of VAT). Of the remaining 23 on-going cases referred to the Coroner by the Attorney General, to date funding has been granted in 5 cases. However, as these cases are still in preparation, figures for the total estimated costs are not available.

The Commission has not yet received applications for funding in relation to the other 18 on-going cases referred to the Coroner by the Attorney General. Until applications for funding are received, the potential cost of a successful application cannot be assessed.

Not-for-profit Organisations: DOJ Funding

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice to detail the annual amount of public funding, other than Legal Aid, allocated to not-for-profit organisations which have contracts with his Department, for each of the last five years.
(AQW 29501/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since its formation in April 2010 the Department of Justice, including its Agencies but not its arm's length bodies, has allocated no public funding other than Legal Aid to not-for-profit organisations which have contracts for the provision of legal services in each of the last three financial years.

Department for Regional Development

Buses: Belfast International Airport–Belfast

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he would organise an open procurement competition to encourage a Bus Service from Belfast International Airport dropping and collecting passengers to and from Belfast City Hotels.

(AQW 29167/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The current road service licensing arrangements, administered by the Department of the Environment (DoE), enables private bus operators to identify gaps in the market and apply for a licence to run a service, if it is not already adequately catered for by Translink or by other private operators.

Roads: 20 mph Speed Limit Zones

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to list the 20mph zones in each roads service division.
(AQW 29235/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the roads with a 20 mph Speed Limit that my Department has legislated for, from 1996 to date, are available in the Assembly Library.

Foyle: DRD Work Programme

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline his Department's work programme in the Foyle constituency up to the summer of 2014, including road works listed by street.
(AQW 29241/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would advise the Member that information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom_of_information/customer_information/cinformatio%20type-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

Northern Ireland Water has proposals for a number of work packages in the Foyle Constituency which include:

- Londonderry Drainage Area Plan: Buncrana Road Work Package, Stage 2 (early contractor involvement);
- Foyle Springs, Derry Flood Alleviation;
- Clooney Park West, Londonderry Storm Sewer Extension;
- Gortinreid Bridge Waste Water Pumping Station - Pumping Main Upgrade;
- Londonderry Drainage Area Plan: Buncrana Road Work Package, Stage 2;
- Ard Na Smoll, Dungiven, Storm Sewer Extension; and
- Lone Moor Road, Londonderry, Storm Sewer Extension.

Taxi Ranks

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development what position his Department takes on Public Hire taxis parking outside official ranks in Belfast which results in blocked roads; and how he polices 'over-ranking'.
(AQW 29277/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not have the statutory power to enforce over ranking at taxi ranks. However, it has the power to enforce parking restrictions, which are marked by signage and road markings. It carries out this function through its parking enforcement contract with NSL.

NSL's Traffic Attendants (TAs) issue Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) to vehicles parked in contravention of parking restrictions. Where parking restrictions exist outside taxi ranks, PCNs can be issued to vehicles parked in contravention of the restrictions, for example, vehicles parked on double yellow lines or in bus lanes.

Taxis: Parking Restrictions

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any correspondence between his Department, and its agencies, and the PSNI on penalising Public Hire taxi drivers who block roads and footpaths.
(AQW 29278/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has the power to enforce parking restrictions, which are marked by signage and road markings. It carries out this function through its parking enforcement contract with NSL, which is managed by the Department's Parking Enforcement Unit. Where parking restrictions do not exist but vehicles are parked in manner which causes an obstruction, enforcement power rests with the PSNI.

There has been no correspondence between my Department's Parking Enforcement Unit and the PSNI regarding Public Hire taxi drivers blocking roads or footpaths.

If a member of the public contacts the Parking Enforcement Unit in relation to parked vehicles that are causing an obstruction where no parking restriction applies, officials will advise them to contact the PSNI directly.

Brook Street, Derry: Gritting

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the traffic figures and school buses using the street, why Brook Street, Derry has not been added to the gritting schedule.

(AQW 29321/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: At the request of residents, Roads Service implemented a traffic calming scheme in Brook Street in March 2009. Translink was consulted on the proposals and no objections or comments were received. Roads Service considers that use of Brook Street by buses is not appropriate due to the presence of the traffic calming features. Whilst Brook Street is not included on the current gritting schedule, a salt box has been provided for use by the public on a self-help basis.

As well as reducing vehicle speeds, the presence of traffic calming measures at this location makes it less attractive to through traffic. My Department would not wish to encourage the use of Brook Street by through traffic. A suitable alternative route via Foyle Road and Bishop Street, which is included on the salted network, is available. In addition, Roads Service made alterations to the Foyle Road/Bishop Street junction in February 2010 so that buses could be more easily accommodated on these roads.

Third Sector Organisations: DRD Funding

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) all third sector organisations funded by the Department who provide services to the public; and (ii) the value of each contract.

(AQW 29413/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the third sector organisations which receive grant assistance from my Department to assist them in the provision of services to the public. My Department does not have contracts with these organisations rather provides grant assistance to them.

I have provided the levels of grant provided for the 2013/2014 financial year.

Name of Third Sector Organisation	Grant 2013/14 £
CDM Transport (Cookstown, Dungannon & Magherafelt)	553,798.63
Down District Accessible Transport (Down , North Down & Ards)	439,843.16
Easilink Community Transport(Omagh, Strabane & Foyle)	534,627.42
Fermanagh Community Transport	490,443.00
Lagan Valley Rural Transport (Lisburn)	208,896.00
North Coast Community Transport (Limavady, Coleraine, Moyle, Ballymena & Ballymoney)	605,224.00
Southern Area Transport (Armagh, Lurgan, Banbridge, Newry & Mourne)	392,246.97
South Antrim Community Transport	212,665.39
Disability Action Transport Scheme (DATS)	2,946,819.00
Volunteer Now	80,788.00
Disability Action Group Transport	185,952.00
Disability Action Mobility Centre	81,587.00

Cregagh View, Knocknacarry: Completion

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 27652/11-15, will the Minister enable works on the Cregagh View Residential Development, Cushendun, to be completed.

(AQW 29416/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This development in Knocknacarry comprises eight completed houses and 16 sites at which construction has not yet started, and the developer is in Administration. As only one third of the houses are complete, my Department's Roads Service has no immediate plans to take enforcement action, however, I have asked officials to keep the situation under review.

Cycling Unit

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Regional Development to (i) provide an update on the work of the new departmental cycling unit; and (ii) detail any plans to address cycling issues in rural areas.

(AQW 29418/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In order to give increased focus and priority to the needs of cyclists throughout Northern Ireland, including in rural areas, and to encourage greater participation in this healthy and sustainable form of transport, I established a Cycling

Unit in November 2013. I have given it responsibility for ensuring that cycling provision is a key element in both transport strategy and delivery and to deliver effective progress of a range of cycling initiatives.

My officials are presently exploring how the new cycling unit can co-ordinate all cycling related matters in both urban and rural areas in a coherent manner and are developing a detailed work programme for the unit which includes an Active Schools Travel Programme. This will provide a programme of cycling and walking skills training for our young people in up to 180 schools across Northern Ireland and this includes schools which serve more rural areas.

South Belfast: Resident-only Parking

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update in residential parking in inner south Belfast. (AQW 29423/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently developing Residents' Parking Schemes in the Lower Malone and Rugby Road/ College Park Avenue areas of Belfast. These schemes are well advanced, both in terms of design and consultation, and officials hope to carry out the formal consultation on the proposals in spring 2014.

Informal consultation is currently underway to determine if residents' parking proposals for the Donegall Pass area have broad local support. There are also plans to begin a similar exercise in the Sandy Row area in early January 2014.

My Department's Roads Service has been unable to progress a Residents' Parking Scheme in the Stranmillis area due to a lack of consensus amongst local residents and business associations, who have fundamental differences of opinion on the proposals.

Street Lighting: Costs

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of street lighting in each district, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 29426/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of my Department's expenditure on street lighting in each Council district, in each of the last five years, are provided in the table below:

Council	2008-09 £'000	2009-10 £'000	2010-11 £'000	2011-12 £'000	2012-13 £'000

Roads: Claims for Damaged Vehicles

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development how many claims have been made against his Department for damaged caused to vehicles, or injuries sustained, due to unsatisfactory road maintenance in each of the last five years; and how many of these claims were (i) successful; and (ii) unsuccessful.

(AQW 29445/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of claims my Department has received for damage caused to vehicles, or injuries sustained, in the last five financial years, are shown in the table below. However, it is not possible to provide details of how many of these claims were due to unsatisfactory road maintenance.

The table also provides details of the number of claims that were successful, unsuccessful or are still ongoing. It should also be noted that claims received by my Department may not always be concluded in the same financial year.

Claims for damage caused to vehicles and injuries sustained

	Claims Received	Successful	Unsuccessful	Ongoing
2008/2009	2,737	1,116	1,583	38

Translink: Contingency Plans

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline whether his Department has developed contingency plans in the event of future rail strikes.

(AQW 29464/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has a business continuity strategy and has developed a range of contingency plans to cover a wide spectrum of service disruptions. Implementation will depend very much on the type and extent of disruption, however, NI Railways' approach is to continue to develop a positive industrial relations environment and hence reduce the likelihood of strikes occurring in the first place.

Translink: Free Wi-Fi

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the effectiveness and quality of Wi-Fi availability on Northern Ireland Railways.

(AQW 29466/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: WiFi on NI Railways has proven to be very popular, with up to 20% of passengers making use of the service (up to 60,000 user sessions per week). WiFi has been a factor contributing to the current unprecedented rates of growth in passenger numbers across the network.

Passengers may experience some black spots where WiFi/mobile phone coverage is restricted.

North Down: Cycle Lanes

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the additional usage of new cycle lanes in North Down in the last five years.

(AQW 29467/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is committed to providing safer roads for the growing number of vulnerable road users, including cyclists and pedestrians, through a range of safety measures, such as, traffic calming and enhancement of the pedestrian and cycling network. I fully recognise the benefits to be obtained from improving the cycle network, in particular the environmental and health benefits and the positive contribution to an integrated transport system.

Over the past 5 years, my Department has invested in the region of £4.1m in creating approximately 75km of new cycle lanes, however, it currently does not carry out monitoring of usage of new cycle lanes.

Department for Social Development

Social Security Agency: Sanctions

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development (i) how many benefits claimants have been referred to the Social Security Agency to have sanctions applied to their benefits, in each of the last three years; and (ii) how many of these claimants had sanctions applied, broken down by age group.

(AQW 28950/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): My Department only has information available from May 2011 to respond to this AQW request. The table below provides the details of the number of claimants referred for consideration of sanctions, and of the numbers applied. Information on the age breakdown of claimants referred for sanction is not recorded.

Period	No of claimants referred for sanction	No of sanctions applied
1 May 2011 – 31 March 2012	21,419	6,831
1 April 2012 – 31 March 2013	36,821	11,546
1 April 2013 – 30 November 2013	22,940	8,104
Totals	81,180	26,481

Derry: Social Housing

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQWs 28991/11-15, 28992/11-15, 28993/11-15 and 28994/11-15, what action he has taken to ensure that further social housing developments in Derry are brought forward as a matter of urgency.

(AQW 29374/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive produces and publishes an Unmet Social Housing Need Prospectus on its website and this forms an integral part of the Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP).

The prospectus provides essential information for housing associations and developers in respect of locations of unmet social housing need shortages of programmed development sites. These are locations where the Housing Executive would welcome suitable proposals/ schemes.

Housing Associations are encouraged to use the Prospectus to identify locations where there is a current unmet social housing need, with a view to exploring development opportunities and bringing forward proposals for inclusion within the SHDP.

The SHDP and the Unmet Housing Need Prospectus is managed on a 3 year rolling programme and updates are posted to the Housing Executive's website on a weekly basis.

I have recently approved the new Social Housing Development Programme for the period 2014/15 – 2016/17, and this will be published on the Housing Executive's website shortly.

Crumlin Road Courthouse

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the progress of the Crumlin Road Courthouse. (AQW 29400/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department, with ministerial support from across the NI Executive, has been working in co-operation with OFMDFM, SIB, NIEA (DOE) and BCC to identify a sustainable end use for the Crumlin Road Courthouse. Following a procurement competition, a consultant was appointed in July 2013 to complete a Development Study. The consultants have engaged a wide range of stakeholders, carried out a comprehensive condition report on the building and conducted considerable research into potential end uses. A number of options were presented at a consultation event on 21 November and public feedback has now been sought. A full report is expected in early in the New Year.

Warm Homes Scheme: Rural Areas

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the percentage of Warm Homes Scheme measures that have been delivered in rural areas since its inception in each contract area; and how this compares with the target set for delivery.

(AQW 29428/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive manages the Warm Homes Scheme on behalf of the Department. The Warm Homes Scheme was introduced in July 2009, since then up to 30 November 2013 it delivered a total 41,976 interventions. Of these, 16,866 (40%) interventions have been in rural areas. The overall Warm Homes Scheme target is to deliver 40% of energy efficiency measures in rural areas.

The table below provides details from the start of the scheme in July 2009 to 30 November 2013. For contract Area A that figure is 29% and Area B the figure is almost 51%.

Year	Area A			Area B			Warm Homes Scheme Total
	Completed Jobs	Rural Jobs	Rural %	Completed Jobs	Rural Jobs	Rural %	Completed Jobs	Rural Jobs	Rural %
2009/10	3,231	922	28.54%	3,542	1,714	48.39%	6,773	2,636	38.92%

Wi-Fi: Town Centres

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how many town centres in each constituency have been assisted by his Department in attaining free wi-fi provision.

(AQW 29441/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In an effort to help to make town centres more attractive and competitive, my Department in conjunction with Council has introduced free Wi-Fi across a number of towns. To date, this initiative has been rolled out to 18 town centres across Northern Ireland. While most of the schemes have been in operation for a relatively short time, the feedback from shoppers and traders alike has been very positive.

The information requested is detailed in the table below:

Constituency	Number of towns which DSD has assisted in attaining free Wi-Fi provision
East Antrim	0
East Belfast	0
East Londonderry	1

Constituency	Number of towns which DSD has assisted in attaining free Wi-Fi provision
Fermanagh & South Tyrone	2

Mid Ulster	2
Newry and Armagh	2
North Antrim	0
North Belfast	0
North Down	1
South Antrim	0
South Belfast	0
South Down	3
Strangford	2
Upper Bann	3
West Belfast	0
West Tyrone	1
Total	18

Royston House: Medical Examination Centre

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development to detail any plans to relocate the medical appointment facilities on the 4th floor in Royston House to ground floor accommodation that would meet the needs of Employment and Support Allowance patients attending medicals.

(AQW 29461/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is currently evaluating options to provide ground floor medical examination provision for Belfast's Medical Examination Centre. It is hoped that a way forward will be agreed with the service provider in early in 2014.

Homeless People: Under 18

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many people who are classified as homeless are under the age of eighteen.

(AQW 29463/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that at 1st December 2013 there was a total of 44 single applicants awarded Full Duty Applicant status (homeless) and aged under 18 recorded on the waiting list.

Derry: Apex Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28993/11-15, to detail why Apex were unsuccessful in acquiring the site.

(AQW 29481/11-15)

Mr McCausland: This scheme was originally programmed to start on site during 2014/15. The Association advised the Housing Executive in July 2013 that the scheme would not progress and the proposal was subsequently removed from the SHDP. Apex Housing has not yet acquired this site, however the Association has bid for a scheme to develop 52 units at Creggan Park during 2016/17.

Derry: Clanmil Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28994/11-15, to detail why Clanmil were unsuccessful in acquiring the site.

(AQW 29482/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Clanmil Housing was unable to agree a price with the vendor and advised the Housing Executive on 4th July 2013 that the Association would be unable to progress this scheme. The proposal was subsequently removed from the SHDP.

Derry: Apex Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28466/11-15, to detail why Apex were unsuccessful in acquiring the site.

(AQW 29483/11-15)

Mr McCausland: This scheme was originally programmed to start on site during 2014/15. The Association advised the Housing Executive in November 2013 that the scheme was at an early feasibility stage and was unlikely to progress until 2016/17. The proposal was subsequently slipped on the SHDP to 2016/17.

Derry: Apex Housing Association

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 28992/11-15, to detail why Apex were unsuccessful in acquiring the site.

(AQW 29484/11-15)

Mr McCausland: This scheme was originally programmed to start on site during 2014/15. The Association advised the Housing Executive in July 2013 that the scheme would not progress and the proposal was subsequently removed from the SHDP. Apex Housing has not yet acquired this site, however the Association has bid for a scheme to develop 16 units at Rathmore Road during 2016/17.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Parliament Buildings: Public Transport

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission pursuant, to AQW 28867/11-15, to outline (i) what efforts have been made to assess the current usage of public transport for employees and visitors to Parliament Buildings or other buildings within the wider Stormont Estate; and (ii) what consideration has been given to carrying out a survey amongst users of the Stormont Estate to establish whether staff members and visitors would use public transport if better links were provided.

(AQW 29431/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Stormont Workplace Travel Consortium (a consortium of all public service employers in the Stormont Estate area led by OFMDFM) commissioned Atkins Transport Planning Belfast to produce The Stormont Estate Workplace Travel Plan (November 2008). As one of the public service employers within the Stormont Estate the Northern Ireland Assembly fed into the Travel Plan through the Steering Group, Travelwise NI. A copy of the Travel Plan, which focuses on staff rather than visitors, is available from the Sustainable Development Office in the Northern Ireland Assembly. The Stormont Workplace Travel Consortium has not had a meeting for some time but the Northern Ireland Assembly continues to assess current usage of public transport by staff in Parliament Buildings through the staff survey.

Consideration is currently being given to the travel section of the 2014 Northern Ireland Assembly staff survey and its enhancement will provide opportunities to target the development of public transport links through the Stormont Workplace Travel Consortium.

* includes spend on schools, school meals kitchens, youth clubs, transport, Sure Start, special needs etc.

Department of Finance and Personnel

In this Bound Volume, page WA 55, please replace AQW 28312/11-15 with:

Business: Turnover less than £500,000

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of businesses that have an annual turnover of less than £500,000 and/or employ fewer than fifty people; and (ii) the location of the sales and exports of these businesses, including the value and proportion of trade.

(AQW 28312/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): At March 2012 there were 69,275 Northern Ireland businesses which were either VAT registered or operating a PAYE scheme, with an annual turnover of less than £500,000 and/or employed fewer than fifty people.

Comprehensive information relating to the location of the sales and exports of these businesses is not available. However, information relating to the estimated value and location of sales for such businesses in the manufacturing sector is provided in Table 1.

Information on the total value of tradable services exports from such companies in (i) Construction (ii) Manufacturing and (iii) a "High Export Potential" group is provided in Table 2. Broad destination data is not available for the Construction group.

Table 1: Broad destination sales and percentage of total sales from Northern Ireland manufacturing businesses with fewer than 50 employees or with turnover less than £500,000 in 2011/12

Department of Justice

In this Bound Volume, page WA 78, please replace AQW 28609/11-15 with:

Derry: DOJ Decentralisation

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to 27956/11-15, to detail (i) why there are only 5 civil servants from his Department based in Derry and (ii) whether he intends to decentralise any functions to Derry to aid economic growth in the North West region.

(AQW 28609/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice):

- (i) As outlined in my answer to AQW/27956/11-15, the information provided did not include the number of civil service posts in the NI Courts and Tribunals Service. This information will follow as soon as possible. My answer also only included those staff at grades specified in the question. At 1 January 2012 and 1 January 2013 there were also 11 non-general service grades based in Derry
- (ii) The Bain Review on the relocation of public sector posts outside Belfast predates the Department of Justice, which came into existence on 12 April 2010. The Department of Finance and Personnel has responsibility for taking forward the recommendations of the Bain Review. There are currently no strategic or active plans to move any posts to Derry.

Department for Regional Development

In this Bound Volume, page WA 410, please replace AQW 28128/11-15 with:

Cycling Unit: Budget

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total budget of the new departmental cycling unit.
(AQW 28128/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I announced the establishment of a new cycling unit in August 2013 to deliver the effective co-ordination and management of a range of cycling initiatives. The unit was formally established in November this year.

Senior officials in my Department are currently exploring budget and resource requirements to ensure the necessary funding is secured to deliver the Department's objectives. Given that the Unit has been set up in-year, the annual budget is estimated at around £800K for staffing and promotional costs. Discussions are also underway to identify what additional resource budget is required and the capital funding required for infrastructure measures.

In Bound Volume 89, page WA 415, please replace AQW 28172/11-15 with:

Water Consumption: Flushing Options

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of (i) the reduction in water consumption if all dwellings were equipped with toilets with two flushing options; and (ii) offering incentives to households to install toilets with two flushing options.

(AQW 28172/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that the promotion of water efficiency as a means of managing consumption and reducing water taken from the environment is recognised in its Water Resource Management Plan.

- (i) It is acknowledged that water efficient appliances and devices, such as dual flush toilets, when installed and used appropriately can contribute to reduced water consumption in households. This is reflected by the requirements embodied in The Water Supply (Water Fittings) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2009 which came into effect on 3 August 2009.

There are so many unquantifiable variables that a detailed and meaningful assessment of the total reduction in water consumption if all dwellings were equipped with dual flush toilets has not been undertaken. Any assessment would be expected to take account of the number, type and size of cisterns currently installed in households in order to evaluate any relative change in water consumption and there are no such statistics available. Further, anecdotal commentary within the UK Water Industry, in relation to the use of dual flush toilets, suggests a risk of householders practicing double flushing either due to insufficient water to clear the contents of the toilet pan, or users not being familiar with dual flush options. It is known that a modern dual flush cistern discharges a full flush of approximately 6 litres and a partial flush of 4 litres. In contrast, toilet cisterns produced before 1993 generally discharge a flush of 9 litres, while those produced between 1993 and 2001 generally produce a flush of 7.5 litres, and those after 2001 typically discharge a flush of 6 litres.

- (ii) There are currently no plans to offer incentives to households to install or convert to dual flush toilets.

Welfare Reform

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the dates in 2013 that he, or his senior officials, met with each of the political parties represented in the Assembly in relation to the Welfare Reform Bill.

(AQO 5055/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The dates I and my officials met with political parties represented in the Assembly in relation to the Welfare Reform Bill are set out below:

- 28 January 2013
- 25 February 2013
- 19 March 2013
- 22 April 2013
- 3 June 2013
- 2 July 2013

Educational Underachievement Working Group

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what were the social-based policies, that as a participant in the North/South sectoral meeting on education, on 8th November 2013, he agreed as a focus for the educational underachievement working group; and what are the social interventions which he anticipates being advanced by the working group.

(AQW 28801/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): As stated in the joint Assembly statement made on the 26 November in relation to on the North/South Ministerial Council Education. The Council agreed that the Education Underachievement Working Group would focus on three strands of work which should have a greater focus on social-based policies with an intended educational outcome.

The three strands of work to be taken forward are

- international benchmarking studies;
- school-based and social interventions to address underachievement; and
- the impact of pre-school placements on primary level performance.

I welcome this change in focus which complements my department priorities for improving the quality of life and life chances for our most disadvantaged children and young people.

Benefits: Sanctions

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development how many benefit customers have been reported to his Department to be sanctioned during the current mandate.

(AQW 13524/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): 31,596 benefit customers were referred to my Department for consideration of applying a sanction from May 2011 to date.

In Bound Volume 76, page WA 482, please replace AQW 13529/11-15 with:

Benefits: Sanctions

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development how many benefit customers have been sanctioned by his Department in the current mandate.

(AQW 13529/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): 10,029 sanctions were imposed on customers in receipt of benefit from May 2011 to date.

In this Bound Volume, page WA 467, please replace AQW 29441/11-15 with:

Wi-Fi: Town Centres

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how many town centres in each constituency have been assisted by his Department in attaining free wi-fi provision.

(AQW 29441/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): In an effort to help to make town centres more attractive and competitive, my Department in conjunction with Council has introduced free Wi-Fi across a number of towns. To date, this initiative has been rolled out to 18 town centres across Northern Ireland. While most of the schemes have been in operation for a relatively short time, the feedback from shoppers and traders alike has been very positive.

The information requested is detailed in the table below:
