Many critics of clause 6 have claimed that I seek to class all those involved in prostitution as helpless victims. I do not accept that charge. However, for the sake of clarity, let me make it clear: at the heart of this clause is empowering people in prostitution to make a positive change to their lives. Clause 10B(1) makes it clear that these services are to be provided to a person who wishes to leave prostitution. No one will be forced into an exit programme under this new clause.

When I first proposed this amendment at a hearing before the Justice Committee, some members expressed concern that it may inhibit access to services for those who do not wish to leave prostitution. That is not my intention. Clause 10B(3) spells out that a person's right to any other statutory services will not be affected by whether they do or do not access support to exit prostitution under this clause. Similarly, clause 10B(2) makes it clear that access to assistance provided under the clause is not to be conditional on the person acting as a witness. For example, a person may access these services, irrespective of whether they give evidence against someone charged with an offence under clause 6.

As to the development of effective programmes, I highly recommend that the Minister of Health and his officials take a look at the excellent analysis of different models of support undertaken by Professor Matthews and his colleagues in their book 'Exiting Prostitution', which was published in September.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair)

Finally, although my main motivation in introducing new clause 10B is to provide assistance to people who want to make a positive change in their circumstances by getting out of prostitution, it is important to recognise that there is evidence to suggest that there can also be a cost-saving benefit to exit programmes. Professor Matthews's book acknowledges that estimating the economic cost of prostitution is difficult, but it suggests that a basic calculation indicates the potential savings associated with women exiting are significant.

Intervention that helps people to leave prostitution successfully will, over the long term, bring about cost savings in areas such as healthcare services, drug addiction treatment programmes, social care for children and criminal justice enforcement. I hope that Members will support this measure.

12.00 midnight

I shall also briefly comment on amendment No 44, which would introduce a requirement to produce a strategy to help those who wish to exit prostitution. I welcome the intentions of the Members in tabling this amendment. As I have already stated, I believe that it is extremely important that we provide support for those who wish to leave prostitution to help them to do so. However, I believe that amendment No 43 accomplishes all that the Members are hoping to achieve through their proposed strategy in amendment No 44, with the added advantage that it provides a stronger guarantee that those assistance programmes will be put in place. I hope that the Member for Foyle and his colleagues might feel able to withdraw their amendment and support amendment No 43, which has the same aims.

I turn now to amendment No 45, in the name of the Minister of Justice. It is an amendment that I agree with and support. The amendment requires the Department of Justice to issue guidance regarding how and under what criteria a victim of trafficking may claim compensation under the criminal injuries compensation scheme. The guidance must also set out the assistance that is available to help victims apply for the compensation. The amendment achieves, in a better way, what I had intended with regard to compensation in the initial draft of clause 11. To my mind, too few victims of human trafficking have been able to claim compensation. Only two victims in Northern Ireland received compensation between 2009 and 2013. Compensation is of real importance to victims of trafficking, in that, first, it helps them in a practical way to rebuild their lives, and, secondly, it is an acknowledgement on the part of our society that a heinous crime has been committed against them. It is my hope that the guidance issued by the Department will make it easier for victims to claim compensation.

Clause 12 of my Bill proposes to introduce child trafficking guardians in Northern Ireland. I am grateful for the cooperation of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in refining these proposals. This has resulted in a number of amendments to the clause to ensure that the child trafficking guardians will be as effective as possible, although the fundamental principle and nature of the role is unchanged. Due to the number of textual amendments to be made, it has been more convenient to introduce these through a new clause, which is why I am proposing to remove clause 12 to replace it instead with the new 12A. I hope that Members will support the removal of clause 12.

The introduction of child trafficking guardians is internationally recognised by best practice recommended at a global level by the UN and UNICEF and contained in both the EU directive and the European Convention on Human Trafficking. The provision has also received a lot of support from charities and other respondents to my consultation and that of the Justice Committee. Child trafficking guardians will help some of the most vulnerable individuals who come to our Province — trafficked children — to navigate the complexities of engaging with a raft of statutory agencies.

The role proposed by the original clause 12 and retained in new clause 12A is based on the model developed by UNICEF, which states:

"The role of a guardian is to be an advocate for the child in a wide range of discussions and decisions about what should happen to the child, in particular to ensure that the decision-making process primarily considers the best interests of the child. The role is also to be a link between the child and the various agencies the child comes into contact with, to ensure the child is kept informed of any relevant developments with respect to him or her, and to accompany the child in a physical way, in particular when she or he is moved between various places."

That understanding of the role is also accurate in the report 'By Their Side and On Their Side', produced for the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Children and Young people in February. In the definition used in that report, the following sentence particularly stands out for me:

"A Guardian is on the child's side, can explain what is happening to them, will listen to their views and experiences and speak up for them when needed."

That, for me, is the essence of what we will provide through new clause 12A to children who have been trafficked. The details of the function and purpose of the child trafficking guardian are set out in detail in subsections 5 and 6 of new clause 12A. Establishing the functions of the role clearly in legislation in that way will ensure smooth working relationships between the child trafficking guardian and other professionals with a responsibility towards the child, and will give the child trafficking guardian the necessary recognition and authority to carry out these functions effectively. I note that the handbook for guardianship services that was published by the EU's Agency for Fundamental Rights this summer recommends that national law should include sufficiently precise legal provisions that define a guardian's duties and functions. Aside from a few drafting improvements, those functions remain the same as in my original clause 12.

Two primary changes are introduced by new clause 12A in comparison to the original clause 12. First, new clause 12A establishes clearly when a child trafficking guardian will be appointed for a child and when their work will come to an end. The new clause will ensure that trafficked children are provided with a child trafficking guardian from the moment that they are referred, or are about to be referred, to the national referral mechanism. That means that trafficked children will benefit from that specialised support as soon as a professional identifies that a child shows signs of having been trafficked and begins the process to make that referral. The support will continue until a lasting solution has been found for the child, as long as that child is confirmed as a victim of trafficking. The clause also makes it possible for a child trafficking guardian to continue to work with a trafficked child after they turn 18, if the child wishes and a lasting solution has yet to be found. A large percentage of the trafficked children in Northern Ireland are teenagers, so it makes sense to ensure that child trafficking guardians are able, if necessary, to support young people as they make the difficult transition to adulthood.

The second primary difference in new clause 12A relates to the agencies that will be responsible for providing the support. I am grateful for the input of officials in the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in that matter. New clause 12A clarifies that it will be the responsibility of the regional Health and Social Care Board, rather than the Department, to ensure that arrangements are in place to provide child trafficking guardians. The new clause also clarifies that child trafficking guardians will be provided by a registered charity that is contracted to do so by the regional Health and Social Care Board and that the individuals who act as child trafficking guardians must be employees of that charity. That approach was one of the possibilities under my original clause 12 and is considered to be the most efficient method by the Department of Health.

That structure also establishes clearly the independence of the child trafficking guardians from local health and social care trusts and all other agencies that will provide services to the child. That independence is a key facet of the international understanding of such a role, which was affirmed last summer by the handbook on guardianship that was published for the European Commission by the Agency for Fundamental Rights, as well as enabling the guardian to advocate for the child's best interests free from any conflict of interest. New clause 12A retains the requirement in the original clause that the Department of Health should issue regulations that stipulate the training, qualifications, support and supervision of child trafficking guardians. That will ensure that the support is of a high standard.

By supporting the new clause, the Assembly will be taking the lead in the United Kingdom. The Modern Slavery Bill that is going through Westminster covers the option of child trafficking guardians, but they do not need to be independent of local authorities, nor is the provision set out as a legal requirement. I hope that Members will support that improved measure in new clause 12A.

I now turn to amendment No 47. I recognise the concerns that the Member for Foyle and his colleagues have about the needs of separated migrant children. I understand the rationale for extending the scope of guardians to separated children and look forward to hearing what others have to say on that matter. However, in developing amendment No 46, I have been very grateful for the advice and cooperation of the Minister of Health, his predecessor and his Department. As such, in the final analysis, I will be guided by the Department with regard to the potential extension of the services to other children.

I now move on to amendments that relate to the protection of victims in the criminal justice system. Members, I am pleased to table amendment No 48, which will bring in a new defence for slavery or trafficking victims who have been compelled to commit an offence as a result of being a slavery or trafficking victim. As I mentioned at the beginning of my speech on this group of amendments, that is a replacement for my Bill's original clause 8, which dealt with the non-prosecution of victims of trafficking in human beings.

I included the original clause 8 in my Bill to meet the obligations of article 8 of the EU directive, which states:

"Member States shall, in accordance with the basic principles of their legal systems, take the necessary measures to ensure that competent national authorities are entitled not to prosecute or impose penalties on victims of trafficking in human beings for their involvement in criminal activities which they have been compelled to commit as a direct consequence" of being trafficked.

Article 26 of the European Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings has a similar requirement of member states to:

"provide for the possibility of not imposing penalties on victims for their involvement in unlawful activities, to the extent that they have been compelled to do so".

New clause 12B has the same aims; however, it seeks to respond to some of the concerns expressed about clause 8 during Second Stage and the Justice Committee's scrutiny of the Bill, namely issues of its breadth and offences that it covers. The Justice Committee said that it wanted to consider the outcome of the Westminster Joint Committee's review of the draft Modern Slavery Bill. That Committee concluded, at paragraph 69 of its report:

"that there should be a statutory defence of being a victim of modern slavery".

The Committee suggested a clause that would take this forward, and that has been further amended in clause 39 of the Modern Slavery Bill. New clause 12B reflects a similar principle to the Modern Slavery Bill clause, drafted for the relevant legislation in Northern Ireland, with some variations.

In summary, three key points are to be made in relation to new Clause 12B. Firstly, it proposes that a defence will apply for adults and children for offences with a penalty of less than five years that they might have committed as a result of being victims of trafficking or slavery, with the exception of cannabis production. Hence, the defence is limited to less serious offences. Secondly, adults will need to show that they had been compelled to commit the offence. Thirdly, child victims of exploitation will not need to show that they had been compelled.

Let me set out the detail of each subsection. Clause 12B(1) specifies that an adult is not guilty of an offence that they had been compelled to commit, where the compulsion is attributable to being held in slavery or trafficked and where a reasonable person with the same characteristics, were they in the same situation, would have no realistic alternative other than to commit the same offence. Clause 12B(2) defines "relevant characteristics" for the purposes of subsection (1) as meaning:

Clause 12B(3) clarifies that an adult may be compelled to do something either by another person or by circumstances. Clause 12B(4) sets out the circumstances in which compulsion is attributable to slavery or relevant exploitation or where the compulsion arises as a direct consequence of the person being or having been a victim of a slavery-type offence or of relevant exploitation. Clause 12B(6) and 12B(7) make separate provision for victims who are children, with the effect that a victim who was a child when the offence took place could use the defence where the offence was committed as a direct consequence of being a victim of a slavery-type offence or of relevant exploitation, as defined by subsections (1) to (5) of clause 3.

I stress to Members that, at this point, clause 12B deviates from the same defence in the Modern Slavery Bill. Children have to show compulsion under its proposed clause. In Northern Ireland, if this new clause were to be passed today, it would mean a child would not need to show that a reasonable person in the same situation would have no realistic alternative other than commit the same criminal act. The law must recognise that the inherent vulnerability of a child is a very different situation to that of the objective, reasonable person. This is consistent with the special position of children in the criminal justice system and in line with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. Members will want to know that this change from the Modern Slavery Bill is not without reason. The UNICEF 'Reference Guide on Protecting the Rights of Child Victims of Trafficking in Europe' states that law enforcement authorities:

"should ensure that child victims are not subjected to criminal procedures or sanctions for offences related to their situation as trafficked persons."

This was further reiterated in a recent UNICEF document, which stated that, under international standards, children should be protected from prosecution for offences that they committed as a consequence of their situation and that that principle should apply, regardless of their role in the events. Clause 12B(8) clarifies that references in the clause to an act include an omission. Clause 12B(9) sets out that the defence, whether for adults or children, applies only to offences that attract a maximum sentence of less than five years as well as to a small number of additional specified offences that are particularly linked with trafficking and exploitation. That, again, deviates from the approach in the Modern Slavery Bill. That Bill still excludes the defence from certain offences, but those offences are listed separately. In this Bill, there is a simpler exclusion with a clear cut-off at a five-year prison sentence that was agreed between the DOJ and the Attorney General.

Clause 12B(10) provides an order-making power for the Department of Justice to amend subsection (9). I hope that I can reassure Members about two potential concerns. First, I know that the clause may not satisfy those who feel that my Bill has lost the non-prosecution principle present in many international instruments. Given the opposition to clause 8 from many quarters, I think that this is a workable alternative for several reasons. The first is that the directive and convention do not mandate non-prosecution but urge member states to make it possible. Paragraph 274 of the explanatory report to the convention states:

"Each Party can comply with the obligation established in Article 26, by providing for a substantive criminal or procedural criminal law provision, or any other measure, allowing for the possibility of not punishing victims".

This amendment does just that. I should add that I hope that only a limited number of cases will get near a courtroom because of the PPS policy that sets out the circumstances under which victims of trafficking should not be prosecuted for offences committed as a result of their trafficking, a policy that the Minister of Justice relied on heavily in his opposition to clause 8 at Second Stage. I hope that the Minister will repeat the assurances that he gave to the Assembly at Second Stage on 24 September last year, when he said:

"prosecutors have the discretion not to prosecute when that is considered to be in the public interest". — [Official Report, Bound Volume 87, p334, col 1].

In many cases, such as those that we are discussing, it will be considered not in the public interest. Should there be some reason why a case does not reach a courtroom, this new clause will give victims a further legal recourse for the prosecution to cease. I realise that that means that victims will be in the courtroom, which is not what many of us want, but it should prevent a conviction and the imposition of penalties in the appropriate circumstances.

The second concern is whether the number of offences excluded by clause 12B(7) is too extensive. The potential for a victim to commit murder and to be excluded from prosecution was raised on a number of occasions during the Justice Committee hearings. Members will also want to know that the model law against trafficking in persons produced by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime contains a clause that allows for "crimes of a particularly serious nature" as defined in national law to be excluded from any non-criminalisation provision, thereby ensuring that there is no defence for serious offences that have a penalty of greater than five years, which, to my mind, is reasonable and proportionate. I hope that Members will feel that that is an acceptable and workable compromise from the position set out originally in my Bill. I am grateful for the assistance of the Department of Justice and the Attorney General in developing a defence that will work in Northern Ireland. I believe that it strikes the right balance in maintaining the rule of law and protecting the vulnerable.

Clause 13 seeks to protect victims of human trafficking and slavery offences during criminal investigations in accordance with articles 12 and 15 of the EU anti-trafficking directive. It proposes similar measures to regulations that were introduced in England and Wales in 2013 through the Trafficking People for Exploitation Regulations. Following discussions with the Department of Justice, I have tabled a number of amendments to the clause, one of which we have already voted on — amendment No 50 — to ensure that the clause refers to the new consolidated offences in new clauses 1A and 1B.

Amendment Nos 49 and 51 are technical amendments that replace particular words with terms more appropriate for the Northern Ireland context, specifically changing the term "chief officer of police" to "Chief Constable" and the word "professionals" to "persons".

Amendment No 52 changes the wording of clause 13(b) (vi). That change was requested by the Department of Justice to ensure that, if the victim is under 18 and requests that he or she be accompanied by someone, and, if there is reason for concern about the person selected to accompany the victim, the police officer in charge of the investigation can prevent an inappropriate person from attending police interviews.

That would ensure that if a person — say a family member — was accused of being involved in trafficking the young person, that family member could not attend the interview as that may negatively affect any evidence that is given. If a police officer decides to exclude an adult, he must record the reasons for the decision in writing.

Clause 14 proposes extending the current protections offered to adult victims of trafficking for sexual exploitation when they attend court to victims of trafficking for other types of exploitation. The Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1999 sets out those protections. They include giving evidence in private and screening the witness from the accused. At present, only child victims and victims of sexual offences, including trafficking or sexual exploitation, are automatically eligible to receive those protections. For other vulnerable or intimidated witnesses to access those measures, an application must be made to the court.

A report from the Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland on the application of special measures published in 2012 suggested that vulnerable witnesses were not always identified. The report also noted that those victims most commonly receiving special measures were child victims and victims of sexual offences. That suggested to me that the provision of special measures via application was not sufficient to ensure that victims of trafficking for labour exploitation receive that protection if they would like it. However, when, in 2012, I first proposed extending special measures to those trafficked for purposes other than sex, it was seen by some as being a step too far. I feel vindicated in doing so, however, since England and Wales made precisely that change in 2013 through regulations.

Having reflected on that matter since I introduced my Bill, I am convinced that this provision should also be extended to cover victims of the new offences that we have agreed today, which also would be in line with the Modern Slavery Bill. It is, of course, always open to a witness to decline to use these special measures if they so wish.

The many changes to clause 14 necessary to bring this into effect means that it is simpler to replace clause 14 with new clause 14A. So, I am seeking to oppose clause 14.

Amendment No 53 would introduce a new clause 14A, which has the same intended effect as the original clause 14. It ensures that victims of human trafficking and slavery offences outlined in new clauses 1A and 1B, alongside victims of all the trafficking offences that existed prior to this Bill, are automatically eligible for special measures if cases under the new offences or old offences are before the courts. To my mind, that is entirely appropriate considering the ordeal that many victims of human trafficking and slavery offences have been through. Any measure that could be taken to assist these vulnerable victims in testifying would be a positive step.

Let me set out the detail. New clause 14A amends the articles of the Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1999 that pertain to a witness's automatic entitlement to special measures. Clause 14A(2) would provide definitions so that the order would apply to all past and present offences of human trafficking and slavery, including the revised and consolidated offences that have been included in clauses 1A and 1B. Clause 14A(3) ensures that witnesses giving testimony in these cases can be granted special protection because they are considered witnesses who need assistance on the grounds of fear or distress about testifying. Clause 14A(4) ensures that evidence can be given in private if the witness is a victim of a trafficking or slavery offence. Clauses 14A(5) and 14A(8) ensure that, if the age of the witness is uncertain, and there are reasons to believe that they are under the age of 18, the witness shall be assumed to be under 18 and given the additional protections available to children. Clause 14A(6) ensures that the person accused may not cross-examine an adult trafficking or slavery victim or, under clause 14A(7), a child victim.

I urge Members on all sides of the House to support the amendments.

I will stop there, because I think I have gone on for long enough.

Mr Givan: I think it was appropriate that Lord Morrow, having moved the Bill some 12 hours ago — in fact, I think it is exactly 12 hours ago — would lead us into Tuesday morning, given the historic vote that I think has just taken place. There is a bit more time left in the debate. As I look around the Chamber, I can see that Members are struggling, but I know that they have the perseverance to keep going. We have started so let us finish, and let me move this on as quickly as I can.

I think that it is right to put on the record the deliberations of the Justice Committee. We spent seven months on the Bill. Given that other Parliaments, I trust, will look back at this debate, and some parliamentarians will read through this, I think that it is right that we put on the record the issues that we considered in great detail, to facilitate other places to be able to take forward the legislation that we are dealing with today.

This group of amendments and the clauses that they relate to are all about providing assistance, support and protection to victims and possible victims of human trafficking and slavery, as already outlined by Lord Morrow. Some Members seemed to have indicated in this debate that the Bill was only ever about one particular clause. Some people made comments that, I think, were unfair. This group of amendments is all about supporting people and providing them with the exit strategies and packages that, I think, everybody in this Chamber will want to support. It is right that we consider them properly so that people recognise that it was not just about clause 6; it is about supporting people as well.

Clause 8 was supported in principle by the majority of stakeholders, with many recognising that a victim of human trafficking should not be unfairly penalised for criminal acts that they are forced to carry out. There are clearly issues regarding how the policy of non-prosecution actually works in practice. It was stated that it had frequently been shown that, even when it was made clear that victims of human trafficking should not be prosecuted for offences, it was often contingent upon their cooperation in investigations, and examples of cases where some victims of trafficking had been charged with criminal offences were cited.

Substantial concerns were, however, raised that clause 8, in effect, provides a blanket immunity from prosecution and that there is no distinction provided regarding the seriousness of the crime committed. While the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission indicated that there was a strong persuasive value as to why human trafficking victims would have immunity from prosecution, given their vulnerability, it noted that the clause did not capture the range and gravity of the offences that could fall within its remit, and it felt that a degree of discretion should be afforded to the Public Prosecution Service regarding which criminal offences it does or does not pursue.

The PPS also stated that it could not provide blanket immunity from prosecution, as the statutory obligations placed on the Director of Public Prosecutions by the Justice Act 2002 required public prosecutors to review each case received from investigators, in accordance with the code for prosecutors, to determine whether criminal proceedings should be instituted or continued, and each case must be considered on its own merits and having regard to the seriousness of the offence committed. It did, however, indicate that if evidence or information were available to support the fact that the person had been trafficked and had committed the offence whilst in a coerced situation, that would be considered a strong public interest factor militating against prosecution. PPS policy outlined the approach to be taken in such cases.

The Department also considered clause 8 as providing blanket immunity and had serious concerns about the impact of it. In the Department's view, there was a need to ensure greater awareness of human trafficking across the criminal justice system and an understanding of the responsibilities in protecting victims, and it suggested that there was scope to address that by amending clause 15 to ensure that the annual strategy would include actions to raise awareness and highlight the rights and entitlements of victims across the justice system.

When Lord Morrow attended the Committee, he outlined, as he has done tonight, that it was not his policy intention to provide a mechanism for blanket immunity and indicated that he was minded to await the outcome of the consideration of the Joint Committee in Westminster of how non-prosecution of victims should be dealt with as part of its scrutiny of the Modern Slavery Bill before deciding whether to progress with this clause or not. He did, however, indicate that he supported the Department's proposal to include awareness-raising as part of the annual strategy required by clause 15. Given the concerns raised and the fact that the policy intent behind clause 8 was not to provide a blanket immunity, the Committee decided that it was not in a position to support the clause.

More recently, the Department advised the Committee that, with Lord Morrow and the Attorney General, an approach had been agreed, resulting in amendment No 48, which will introduce new clause 12B and which is an alternative to clause 8. As Lord Morrow has already explained, the new clause provides for a statutory defence for victims of slavery and human trafficking who have been compelled to commit offences, provides the range of offences to which the defence will apply and also how the defence will apply to victims who are children.

I turn to clauses 9 and 10 and amendment Nos 41 and 42. The Committee very much recognises the importance of adequate and appropriate support and assistance to human trafficking victims, whether or not criminal proceedings are taken, and therefore welcomed the inclusion of the original clause 10 in the Bill while recognising that amendments would be required to set out the respective functions and responsibilities of the Department of Justice and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. There was also widespread support in the evidence that we received for the emphasis that clause 10 placed on the provision and support for victims, with some organisations suggesting that the time period for support should be extended and that all assistance and protection measures should be available to victims of forced labour as well as victims of trafficking.

Some concerns were, however, raised that the clause appeared to restrict support to victims where there are criminal proceedings, and it was suggested that consideration should also be given to what assistance and support can be provided to people who get a positive reasonable grounds decision but then a negative conclusive grounds decision, as that was a real and challenging issue.

In September, the Department of Justice advised the Committee that, given the substantial revisions required to clause 10, it had agreed with Lord Morrow to bring forward a new clause to replace it. The new clause sets out the requirements on the Department to provide assistance and support to adult potential victims of trafficking who have been referred to the NRM, and ensures that support is provided from the first point of contact with a potential victim and is not conditional on a person acting as a witness in criminal proceedings. The Committee is content with the proposed approach to replace the existing clause 10 with the clause set out in amendment No 42.

Lord Morrow has brought forward amendment No 43 to provide a duty on the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to ensure that there is a programme of assistance and support for those who wish to leave prostitution. I indicated in the previous debate that the Committee supported the proposal by Lord Morrow when he first outlined his intention to bring forward a new provision to provide support services for those who wish to exit prostitution, and I therefore welcome the amendment.

In the evidence received by the Committee, a range of organisations and individuals highlighted the need for a strategy to provide support for those who wish to exit prostitution if the Bill is to be effective, including former prostitutes, Women's Aid, the Irish Congress of Trade Unions, Ruhama, Equality Now, the Turn Off the Red Light campaign and Evangelical Alliance. When the Committee met the Oireachtas Joint Committee, it also emphasised the importance of having such support mechanisms in place. It is clear that the legislation will be improved with the addition of that provision. The intent of amendment No 44 in the names of Mr McCartney, Mr Lynch and Mr Hazzard appears to be similar to Lord Morrow's amendment, and, therefore, I look forward to clarification during the debate on what they wish to achieve with their amendment.

I now want to speak briefly on clause 11, which relates to compensation for victims of human trafficking and the proposed amendments to it. This clause was welcomed by a number of organisations which viewed it as positive and much needed, with Women's Aid indicating that it was not aware of any instance where a victim of human trafficking had been successful in claiming such compensation. Victim

Support said that, under the current compensation scheme, there is no specific tariff for the crime of human trafficking. Victims of such crimes have to apply based on their physical and/or mental trauma, and the criteria for a successful application are very strict. It recommended that the Committee look at the provision for compensation alongside the review of compensation legislation that is being undertaken. When the Committee was considering this clause, the Department advised that it had agreed with Lord Morrow that it should be required to bring forward statutory guidance instead of an order, and that it would therefore bring forward an appropriate amendment to the clause.

Some Committee Members expressed concern that the guidance would not be sufficient to make that provision effective and ensure that compensation can be paid to victims of trafficking. The Committee therefore considered the options available to provide the Assembly with a degree of control in relation to the content of the guidance, including an amendment to make the guidance subject to the affirmative or negative resolution procedure. The Committee decided not to amend the clause but to seek a commitment from the Minister of Justice during this Consideration Stage that the Department will consult the Committee on the draft guidance and take full account of its views. I trust that the Minister will give such a commitment when he speaks in the debate shortly. I am sure that the Committee will also closely scrutinise the compensation legislation itself during that review.

I will move on to the provision for a child trafficking guardian in clause 12. Lord Morrow outlined to the Committee that it is internationally recognised best practice to have a child trafficking guardian and that, in his view, the position should be set in statute, be appointed as soon as a trafficked child has been identified, be recognised by other agencies as having a legitimate role working in the best interests of the child and be suitably trained. He also believed that the guardian should be someone independent of the health trusts and was therefore intending to bring forward an amendment to exclude an employee of a health trust from being a guardian.

The Department of Health, which would be required to implement the arrangements, was not opposed to the concept or the responsibilities of the guardian as set out in the clause but indicated that some amendments would be needed to clarify that the duty should fall to the health trusts rather than to the Department. It also proposed that the responsibilities of the guardian should be a matter for regulations rather than set out in the Bill. The Committee noted that there was widespread support in the evidence that it received for an independent child trafficking guardian to ensure that effective support can be given to trafficked children and agreed that it supported the concept that is now being taken forward through amendment No 46, which will introduce new clause 12A.

Finally, I want to refer briefly to clauses 13 and 14 and amendment Nos 49, 51, 52 and 53. The Committee recognises that it is vital to put in place practical measures that will minimise the risk of further distress to and re-traumatisation of victims of human trafficking during any investigations and court proceedings. The Committee therefore supports clause 13 and amendment Nos 49, 51 and 52, which extend the provision of special measures to victims of human trafficking during the investigation process, and amendment No 53, which will introduce new clause 14A to ensure provision of special measures to victims of human trafficking during the court process. The Committee is very well aware from its inquiry into the criminal justice services available to victims and witnesses of crime in Northern Ireland how stressful it can be for victims to give evidence in criminal trials and appreciates that that can be especially true for trafficking victims. Any measures that help to make the process easier are valuable and should be welcomed.

I will speak briefly as an individual MLA. I touched earlier on how the Attorney General had played a very important role in dealing with clause 8 in respect of blanket immunity. I want to put on the record that, without prejudice to the Attorney General's views on this, he recognised that the Committee and Lord Morrow wanted to take forward a policy agenda, and he proactively engaged with the Committee, highlighting, in my view, where there were concerns and then helping to assist us and Lord Morrow in developing an amendment that would achieve what he wanted to achieve and what the Committee wanted to support. It is a good example of how officials can engage, even at times on issues that they may not necessarily agree with members on. When they recognise that there is an intent to proceed in a particular way, he has shown that you can proactively engage and develop something that members want to put in place, be practical and implement. It is right that I record my appreciation for the way in which he engaged with the Committee and Lord Morrow in respect of that. I commend the positions outlined by Lord Morrow.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I rise to speak on amendment Nos 44 and 47. I wish to keep this short, seeing as it is well into another day.

I listened to what Lord Morrow had to say about his new clause 10B, which is created by amendment No 43. We feel that it is fine; however, we believe that our amendment No 44 is stronger. It involves setting out a strategy at least once every year and also involves other Departments. We will vote for the two amendments and then hope that, at Further Consideration Stage, we can come to some agreement on the important issue of support and assistance for those leaving prostitution.

I will move on to amendment No 47, which seeks to broaden and slightly widen the scope of the child trafficking guardian to an independent legal guardian. A legal guardian's role would be a trusted adult who will act in the interests of all separated children, not just victims of trafficking. The Children's Commissioner, who is an expert in that field and who deals with such matters daily, is strongly of the opinion that the amendment presents us with an opportunity to extend protection to all children separated from their legal guardian or parents. The amendment would extend to those vulnerable children, irrespective of whether trafficking or other forms of exploitation have been suspected or identified.

In reality, the provision would apply to only a small number of cases each year. Given that small number, it is difficult to envisage why we would not support extending the provision to vulnerable children not directly linked to trafficking.

I appreciate that the primary aim of Lord Morrow's Bill is to deal with human trafficking. However, it would make no sense, when establishing very worthwhile protection functions, for them not to apply to other vulnerable children in a similar circumstance. The additional resources needed would be minimal, but the benefits to each of those children would be immense.

Mr A Maginness: I will be as brief as I can. The SDLP supports the group 4 amendments that Lord Morrow tabled. As the Chair of the Committee said, they seek to support people in the aftermath of their victimisation. We support the measures that he brought forth, particularly amendment No 48, which deals with a statutory defence for the victims of human trafficking so as to prevent their prosecution. I believe that Lord Morrow has struck the right balance in his amendments to prevent a situation of blanket immunity, particularly in serious cases. We support the position outlined by Lord Morrow in his address to the Assembly. We believe it to be very sensible indeed.

Amendment Nos 43 and 44 are, to some extent, related. Amendment No 43, which creates new clause 10B, is, I believe very important and helpful, but I think that the new clause 10B proposed in amendment No 44 in many ways complements it. We are of the view that it should be supported. Lord Morrow suggested that amendment No 44 not be made, but I think that, in the circumstances, it does no damage to the preceding amendment No 43. Mr Lynch made a good point, which was that, at Further Consideration Stage, we can harmonise the amendments and make them much better.

We take the view that amendment No 47 is helpful. It goes a little further than amendment No 46, and amendment No 47 has, in some ways, been supported by the Children's Commissioner, who feels that it is necessary to go a little further than amendment No 46. She pointed out that there are separated children who are not necessarily the victims of human trafficking, so it is an extension, but not a huge one. There are only a small number of children involved, but we think that it would be sensible to include them. The Children's Commissioner pointed out that no EU member state has a guardianship system only for child victims of trafficking.

Several countries provide guardians for trafficked and separated children in recognition of the inherent vulnerabilities of both groups. It is also a requirement of international good practice and advice of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child that member states should appoint a guardian to all unaccompanied children. She feels that the current clause 12 falls short in that regard. We are supportive of that. Amendment No 47 is to be preferred.

Mr Elliott: I am almost reluctant to say that I will be brief. Everybody has been saying that for the last two hours. Maybe I will just say that I will take as long as is necessary, which, I hope, is not too long.

I had significant and major concern with clause 8 right from the introduction of the Bill. I had discussions with Lord Morrow, and I raised my concern at Committee. Indeed, clause 8 gave me more concern than clause 6. Even though a lot of the debate was around clause 6, clause 8 was more difficult for me to accept. I am pleased that Lord Morrow has agreed to vote against clause 8 standing part and to bring in the new clause 12B. That is much more specific; it is clearer, and it does not give the blanket immunity that clause 8 was providing. I welcome that move.

Amendment Nos 43 and 44 have been touched on. I will briefly mention them as well. At the outset, I felt that you could not vote for both, but it appears that the indication is that you actually can. They are very important; they give help and support to those who wish to leave prostitution. If we are going to make sure that the Bill works, it is important that that help and support mechanism is in place for the people who want to leave prostitution. I am inclined to support both amendments, if possible, and maybe resolve it at the next stage to something better.

Amendment Nos 46 and 47 are of a similar nature, except that amendment No 47 facilitates children who come from another country; those named as "separated" children. My one concern about that issue is about whether it would be open to any abuse of children who may be sent to Northern Ireland on the basis that they would get that help and support. The numbers are very small, and I hope that that would not happen, so I am more inclined to support amendment No 47 on the basis that it will not be open to abuse. I will be interested to hear what the Minister has to say about that aspect. Sinn Féin Members have spoken, but there has not been any clarity around whether that could be open to abuse. If any Member wants to satisfy my mind on that situation, I am happy to give way, but there does not appear to be. Anyway, both of those seem to be very close.

Mr McCartney: Will the Member give way?

Mr Elliott: I am happy to give way.

Mr McCarthy: There is always an opportunity for people to abuse it, but, having spoken to the Children's Commissioner, she is reasonably satisfied that this will be a small number of cases and that it will not be subject to abuse.

Mr Elliott: I thank the Member for that clarity. Again, the indication is that it will be a very small number of cases. We hope that it will not be open to abuse and that it will give extra protection for separated children. Hopefully, it will provide some sort of comfort for them if they find themselves in a very unfortunate situation.

Miss M McIlveen: I would like to comment on clause 12, and amendment No 46, the provision of child trafficking guardians. I do not plan to speak long as it is well past my bedtime.

Members will be aware that I have an interest in issues affecting children. In a great deal of the work that I have done, I have sought to raise awareness of the need to protect children and young people from all forms of exploitation, including sexual exploitation.

Children who have been trafficked are some of the most vulnerable in society. Many are brought here for the sole purpose of being exploited in different ways, and find themselves isolated in an unfamiliar environment. Child trafficking is a form of child abuse, and official figures only ever tell a partial story.

It is challenging to identify and protect child victims. Children who are trafficked may be found in brothels, in forced labour or on the street. Rather than being seen as victims of crime, they are often regarded as perpetrators. We need to be mindful also that English may not necessarily be their first language; their use and understanding of English may not be sufficient to allow them to communicate fully.

They certainly do not understand all the processes that they go through. In that environment, it is important that we recognise that those children cannot be treated like other children under the care of the state. Their experiences, needs and the challenges that they face are distinct. We are right to provide them with specialist support.

Trafficked children are at high risk of being re-trafficked. We should not underestimate the degree to which traffickers can exert control and influence over such vulnerable children. Everything needs to be done to protect these children from further exploitation once they come to the attention of the authorities, and the provision of child trafficking guardians is a vital step forward in that regard. I pay tribute to Lord Morrow for putting this issue on our agenda in the Assembly. I also pay tribute to the former Minister of Health, and his successor, for adopting and supporting this proposal.

By passing this amendment, Northern Ireland will be leading the way among the nations of the United Kingdom in creating such a role in legislation. It demonstrates the commitment that we as a society are making to those extremely vulnerable children, not just for now but for the future.

I want to highlight one aspect of the child trafficking guardian set out in new clause 12A, which I believe is vital: the legal recognition and authority that the child trafficking guardian has in relation to all other public agencies dealing with the child's case, found in 12A(7).

The principal role for a child trafficking guardian is to speak for the best interests of the child. To give a meaningful voice to the best interests of the child in all decisions about their care, immigration status or participation in criminal investigations, the guardian must have the standing and authority to contribute to discussions and to be listened to by other public officials.

It is the setting out of the full list of the functions of the child trafficking guardian in legislation, as this clause does, that is so important; it makes it clear where the responsibilities of the child trafficking guardian begin and end. That will be extremely helpful in avoiding situations where different professionals make assumptions about who will be responsible for what aspect of a child's care and support, with the potential for the child to slip through the gaps.

By establishing the child trafficking guardian as a person with statutory authority and responsibility, they will be able to play a full part in decision-making processes about a child's case, without any uncertainty about their role in relation to social workers, teachers, immigration officials and others who interact with a child.

This new clause will ensure that the role and authority of the child trafficking guardian in advocating for the child and its best interests will be recognised by all those agencies providing services to a child. As I see it, the purpose is not to create an additional barrier for other public sector professionals doing their job; rather, it is to amplify the voice of the child and to ensure that in all contexts the child is supported and their best interests are prioritised and protected.

One other aspect of new clause 12A that I want to mention is the authority in 12A(6)(c), which allows the child trafficking guardian to instruct or appoint a solicitor for a child where appropriate. It can be difficult for lawyers to take instructions from trafficked children, who often do not have, and should not be expected to have, full legal capacity or a complete understanding of the complex situations that they are in.

The child's language skills may be limited, or he or she may have been manipulated by his or her traffickers, who make the child trust them and tell the child not to trust the authorities. Under those circumstances, a child may not be able or willing to give a lawyer instructions that would be in his or her own best interests. A child trafficking guardian can come alongside the child, gain his or her trust and help him or her to engage with the legal process and instruct the child's lawyers when the child is unable to do so. I am very pleased that this new clause gives such authority and responsibility to a child trafficking guardian when it is necessary. This is an excellent addition to the original clause 12.

If we are to protect those extremely vulnerable children to the best abilities of our care system, I believe that a specialist child guardian has a vital role to play. Such a guardian would be accepted, recognised and listened to as having authority to speak up for the best interests of a child. A child trafficking guardian will be there to support and help that child through all the formal, legal and administrative processes that they will face.

That role will be a key part of the safety net that we put around children who have been trafficked, so I am pleased to support amendment No 46.

Mrs Dobson: I wish to make a few short comments. I hope that they will be even shorter than those of my colleague Tom Elliott, who has further to travel home than I have.

In particular, I want to address amendment Nos 43, 44, 46 and 47, which relate to the Department of Health. On amendment Nos 43 and 44, I believe, like everyone else in the House, that there must be appropriate support in place for women, as well as for men, who wish to leave prostitution. Research has shown that people often wish to leave prostitution and do so, but it is not a decision that is taken easily. We need to remember that many of those women did not end up making money in that way out of their own choice. For too many, the route through prostitution includes violence, abuse and coercion, and, in many cases, it has been horrific for them. There may be some who took that decision entirely of their own free will, but they may also find it difficult to leave.

The barriers to leaving are many, not least, as we heard, drugs and alcohol abuse as well as housing factors. Difficult as it may be for some to understand, we need to remember that some of the women involved in prostitution may be operating from their own homes, and, very often, they will not own their properties so that sometimes even their landlords will be involved. However, despite the many obvious problems with leaving, many women still do so, and, equally, many others may be seeking a route out.

At present, however, I am concerned that Northern Ireland may not have the required specialist knowledge and dedicated services to support people exiting prostitution. That is why I support amendment No 43. If that is agreed, it will place a duty on the Department of Health to have a programme in place to support people exiting prostitution. However, I urge the Department to avoid having a strategy just for a strategy's sake. Instead, such a programme must be focused, sufficiently flexible to meet people's needs, and, most importantly, it must put in place measures to allow those people to rebuild their lives.

We must also remember that not only would a dedicated programme provide support to people who want to exit prostitution, but it would be an extremely cost-effective way to prevent further physical harm through continued involvement. I believe that that is an important point to take on board, and I listened intently — it seems like hours ago — as Lord Morrow made that point, and I commend him for it.

I will move to amendment Nos 46 and 47. As we know, there is little difference between the two amendments, apart from points that have already been mentioned. On the broader issue, I can understand the rationale behind them. It is important that children have a custodian who will, as both amendments state, “assist, represent and support” them.

The choice that we are faced with tonight — or tomorrow, whatever time it is — is whether we feel that the clause should also apply to a separated child. Our minds are open to that: we will listen carefully to what the Minister has to say. It may have been helpful had the Health Minister contributed to the debate and put forward his Department's perspective, but that was not the case here tonight.

1.00 am

My party is supportive of expanding it to separated children. That seems a reasonable position, not least as children presenting as seeking asylum may be victims of trafficking themselves. I am aware that the numbers included may be small. My colleague Tom Elliott spoke about that earlier. Equally, we would be keen to ensure that, if it were to be included, that would not be exploited.

Mr Ford: I will try to take as long as it requires to deal with the points raised. A number of amendments have been tabled jointly for this section as well by Lord Morrow and me, focusing basically on assisting and protecting victims and potential victims. Given the good work done between my team and Lord Morrow, I trust that those are all matters that will attract the support of the House generally.

In particular, amendment No 41 deals with the interpretation in the new clause 9A, which is a straightforward matter for ensuring that we get the provisions right in this. Amendment No 42 introduces new clause 10A looking at the statutory requirement to provide comprehensive assistance and support to adult potential victims of trafficking who have been, or are about to be, referred to the NRM. There is, of course, a comprehensive package of support already available from the Department in line with our obligations under the EU directive. New clause 10A will enshrine this provision within our law and provide greater assurance to potential victims of continuing commitment.

I am grateful for the positive remarks that Lord Morrow made about my position. I am happy to accept this amendment to bind my successors in ensuring that they continue to work so well. We will then be going beyond our precise obligations under the directive so that we will have support immediately available, rather than when reasonable grounds have been established, and possibly also continuing for some period later. All of that would be a good sign of the work being done in a joined-up and collective way across this jurisdiction, which at least exceeds what is required for the European directive.

Amendment No 45 gives guidance about compensation for victims. It places a specific requirement on my Department to bring forward statutory guidance setting out the procedures for applying for compensation, the arrangements to provide assistance and support to anyone seeking compensation rather than the current requirement that they be set out by order. I am very happy to support the amendment. The intention is to clarify the process so that victims of human trafficking can navigate the process. I am happy to give the commitment that was requested by the Committee Chair in his absence that we will, as usual in the Department of Justice, consult the Committee as that guidance is developed.

Amendment No 46 deals with the issue of the child trafficking guardian, which I have been asked to take forward on behalf of the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and which is, of course, co-signed by Lord Morrow. In response to the point made just a moment ago by Mrs Dobson, the fact is that, under our normal procedures, only one Minister can speak to a Bill. I have already spoken on behalf of the Minister of Finance and Personnel on certain aspects. I now speak on behalf of the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in other respects.

Amendment No 46, the child trafficking guardian, is agreed by the Executive. It requires the appointment of a child trafficking guardian in the specified circumstances and defines the role of that guardian principally to assist, support and advise child victims of human trafficking and to work on their behalf. As has already been said by Lord Morrow, it must be independent of both DHSSPS and the health and social care trusts. This is a matter that, I understand, has been worked out in detail between the Health Minister and Lord Morrow. The amendment has been necessary to ensure that the role of the child trafficking guardian complements and adds to other statutory roles, including that, for example, of a social worker responsible for the care and protection of a child or the guardian ad litem responsible for representing the interests of the child in family court proceedings. Key to the new clause 12A is the principle that all decisions made or actions taken by the child trafficking guardian are to be in the best interests of the child.

Amendment No 47 is slightly different. It goes wider to include separated children within the scope of the Bill, which is something that is not supported by the Minister of Health and the Executive's decision at this stage. In the view of DHSSPS, the provision does not sit easily with the Bill, which is about human trafficking offences and exploitation. It goes beyond it in a way that is, at times, confusing. For example, subsection 2(c) of new clause 12A has to be read alongside subsection 2(a), in that it applies if a reference to that child has been, or is about to be, made to the NRM. However, a referral to the NRM will not be made in respect of a separated child who is not considered to be a victim or potential victim of human trafficking. Alternative drafting would be necessary to capture the policy intention.

It is also important to note that a child who is considered to be separated will actually become looked after by one of the five health and social care trusts under the Children

(Northern Ireland) Order 1995 and will receive the care and protection provided for under that Order. Figures provided by the Health and Social Care Board show that every child who entered Northern Ireland through an international border in 2012-13, for example, and who was considered to be separated or trafficked, became a looked-after child. Importantly, the Health and Social Care Board is in the process of establishing a specific facility for separated children. It is intended that advocacy services will be central to service provision in that facility. On that basis, the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and I are of the view that there is no necessity for the guardianship service provided under the Bill to extend to separated children.

There is also the issue that the definition of a separated child contained in the amendment is confusing, in that it defines a separated child as one who may be in the company of other adults, including members of their extended family. By definition, a child who is in the company of other adults cannot be separated. There is a further complication in that the title for the proposed clause 12A reads "Independent Legal Guardian". That could give rise to confusion and cause difficulties between the independent legal guardian and the guardian ad litem. I believe that "Child Trafficking Guardian" is a safer title for the purposes of the Bill. I therefore believe that amendment No 46 is more appropriate than amendment No 47 to meet the needs of the Bill.

Amendment No 43 has been tabled by Lord Morrow to ensure that there is a programme of assistance and support available to a person who wishes to leave prostitution. I am advised that this is being discussed with Lord Morrow by the Minister of Health. I understand that he is supportive, in principle, of amendment No 43, though it has not yet been formally considered by the Executive and may require possible further amendment at Further Consideration Stage. The Minister of Health has advised me that he is not supportive of amendment No 44, tabled by Mr McCartney and colleagues, which he believes would already be incorporated within the effect of amendment No 43. Amendment No 43, from Lord Morrow, provides for a programme of assistance and support for individuals seeking to exit prostitution. The amendment would place lead responsibility for providing the programme with the Minister. As I indicated, it is understood that he is, in principle, supportive. On the other hand, whilst the amendment tabled by Mr McCartney and colleagues is attractive in the sense of drawing in other Departments, the priority is surely to provide the programme of support rather than to produce a strategy annually to do that.

Whilst lead responsibility for the provision of the programme would lie with the Department of Health, there is no reason why the programme could not, in principle, incorporate services that are the responsibility of other Departments; for example, housing or education. The programme could be designed in a way that eases access to those services by thoughtful and facilitative signposting. I am aware that, in speaking to it, Mr Lynch talked about whether it could be amended at Further Consideration Stage. It seems to me that there is a clear case for agreeing amendment No 43, but, if amendment No 44 were added as well, there would undoubtedly be a need for further amendment. I believe that amendment No 43 carries the necessary key services, which is the focus of this section of the Bill.

In addition to those amendments making provision for the welfare and support of victims, amendment Nos 48 to 53, tabled jointly by Lord Morrow and me, are intended to enhance the protection available to victims of trafficking.

Amendment No 48 introduces new clause 12B, a statutory defence for victims of human trafficking and slavery-type offences who have been compelled to commit certain offences. Lord Morrow spoke to it at length, and certainly answered the question, which Members may recall I asked previously, around the significant concerns I had that clause 8, as introduced, goes too far in offering blanket immunity from prosecution for victims of human trafficking, and does not provide a proportionate response.

I am grateful for the engagement that we have had with Lord Morrow and we agree that clause 12B should replace clause 12A. That will be a much more proportionate and appropriate response that will deal with a test for compulsion around how a reasonable person in the same situation, with the same characteristics of age, gender or any physical or mental illness or disability, would have no realistic alternative to act differently. That would not be the case for child victims, as they would not need to show that a reasonable person in the same situation would have no realistic alternative. I believe that is an appropriate distinction between adults and children that is entirely consistent with the position that we hold for children in the justice system and is in line with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

I should make it clear, as requested by Lord Morrow, that even in the cases in which the proposed defence would not apply, prosecutors would still be able to exercise their existing discretion not to prosecute if they consider that that prosecution would not be in the public interest. The PPS has indicated that where a defendant is a victim of human trafficking and has been compelled to commit criminal activities, that would be considered to be a strong mitigating factor against prosecution.

Amendment Nos 49 to 52 are technical in nature and all seek to amend clause 13. They have been outlined by Lord Morrow, and I do not think that they require further discussion.

Amendment No 53 introduces new clause 14A, which is intended to replace clause 14 and which would amend the Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1999 to ensure that victims of human trafficking and slavery-type offences under the Bill, as well as any victims of the existing human trafficking and slavery offences, if those cases may still be before the courts, would be automatically eligible for special measures when giving evidence in court. Those special measures could include provision for the exclusion of persons from court when the witness is giving evidence or that an individual who is charged with an offence may not cross-examine the complainant. I believe that new clause 14A is a useful amendment to clause 14. It renders clause 14 unnecessary, and Lord Morrow and I agree that it should no longer stand part of the Bill.

That deals with the amendments in this group.

Lord Morrow: I have good news for the House: I will not say much very much at all. I see the thumbs going up already opposite me.

It is suffice to say that I think that everything that needs to be said has been said about this group of amendments.

I would, however, urge a slight caution at this juncture in relation to amendment No 44, and I know that the Minister also touched on that. Quite frankly, we on this side of the House feel that it is not necessary and all the work has been accomplished in amendment No 43, which introduces a new clause. It is not our intention to divide the House on it at this late hour, but we will want to revisit it and look at it again. I do not know whether I ask in vain, but I will try anyway. I ask the proposer of amendment No 44 not to move it at this stage.

I will not say anything more. The hour has long gone. I will leave it there.

“.— [Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice).]

Mr Ford: I am sure that Members of the House — at least, those who are not currently exiting — will welcome the opportunity to debate this final group looking at the supplementary measures to ensure that we have a detailed and considered examination of all of the issues that they contain. I am grateful for the opportunity to finally speak to this small group of amendments.

I formally register my opposition to clause 17, which, Lord Morrow and I agree, should be replaced by the new clause 17A by amendment No 54 and would therefore no longer stand part of the Bill. Amendment Nos 54 to 57 relate to the Bill's supplementary provisions at clauses 17 to 19 and are largely technical in nature. They reflect and, in part, are consequential to the considerable changes that have been agreed to the rest of the Bill. The amendments have the support of Lord Morrow, the Justice Committee and the Executive.

Amendment No 54 introduces new clause 17A, which, as I said, is intended to replace clause 17, which sets out general interpretation provisions. The new clause expands on the original clause, although, given the nature and extent of the necessary amendments, Lord Morrow and I agreed that the clearest way to achieve the changes was to replace clause 17 in its entirety, albeit not its effect. Amendment Nos 55, 63 and 64 introduce new clause 17B and new schedules 4 and 5 respectively. They make provision for amendments, repeals and consequential provision. New clause 17B includes an order-making power that allows the Department to make further consequential provision, if required, and stipulates that the orders must be by way of affirmative resolution.

Amendment No 56, which covers clause 18, deals with orders made by the Department. Again, in view of the significant changes to the Bill, more comprehensive provision must be made. Therefore, amendment No 56 deals with clause 18 and replaces it with new clause 18A. The new clause makes provision in respect of the order-making and regulatory powers provided for under the Bill and specifies that orders and regulations made under the Bill will be subject to negative resolution, except where otherwise specified in subsections (2) to (5).

Clause 19 sets out the Bill's short title and arrangements for commencement. Amendment No 57, tabled jointly by Lord Morrow and me, will change the Bill's short title. Members will agree that the significant body of amendments and new provisions that we have debated yesterday and today will transform the shape of the Bill while preserving its fundamental aims and principles of strengthening law enforcement's capacity to tackle these crimes and protecting and supporting victims. The Bill's original short title is no longer considered appropriate, so amendment No 57 changes the short title to the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Criminal Justice and Support for Victims) Bill to reflect its new comprehensive nature.

I have tabled amendment No 58 to make provision for the commencement of most of the provisions under the Bill by order, with the exception of those relating to interpretation, consequential provision and orders and regulations, which should come into operation on the day after Royal Assent. Lord Morrow, the Justice Committee and I share a wish to see the Bill in its entirety commencing as soon as possible after Royal Assent. At this stage, there is clearly a slight difference between the Committee and me, with the Committee having tabled amendment No 55 to bring in a specific time limit. Given the complexity of the amendments that we have passed, it would be better to take the time between now and Further Consideration Stage to see whether we can get agreement. There will be practical issues not only for my Department but for DHSSPS if there were a specific time limit. Given the good work that has been done by the Committee, Lord Morrow, his colleagues and my staff in dealing with the issue, I believe that we can resolve those issues before Further Consideration Stage. Therefore, I will not move amendment No 58.

Mr Givan: As the Minister indicated, this group of amendments is technical in nature. They deal with the general interpretation provisions, make provision in respect of orders to be made by the Department under the Bill, change the short title and set out the commencement provisions.

I will concentrate my remarks on amendment No 59, which the Committee has brought forward today. It deals with the commencement provisions and amends the Minister's amendment to ensure that, if the provisions in the Bill have not been commenced by ministerial order, they will come into operation six months after Royal Assent. The Committee first considered the commencement powers at Committee Stage when the Attorney General suggested that the Assembly may wish to make provision in the Bill for its commencement without reference to action by the Department. That was to avoid placing the Department in the position of having to decide when to commence provisions with which it was not in policy agreement, such as clauses 4 and 6, which the Minister opposed today.

The Committee discussed the matter, and members were of the view that it would be preferable to remove the requirement to commence the Bill from the Department of Justice. Having considered several options, the Committee agreed that the preferred approach would be to build in some time between the Bill receiving Royal Assent and its commencement to enable the Departments and organisations that will be responsible for the implementation of the provisions in the Bill to develop the necessary measures and procedures, particularly in relation to support services and training. The Committee therefore agreed to table an amendment to clause 19 to commence the Bill three months after it receives Royal Assent. It subsequently agreed the wording of the amendment at a meeting just before Committee Stage finished in April.

More recently, Lord Morrow wrote to the Committee regarding the introduction of a new clause. We have just debated that clause, and its purpose is to support those who wish to exit prostitution. He indicated that, to provide the necessary time to put in place effective support measures, it would be helpful if there was a longer time frame for the commencement of the Bill than the three months set out in the Committee's amendment. As I indicated earlier, the Committee recognises the need for a support services package to be in place for those who wish to exit prostitution, and it was sympathetic to that request. The Committee therefore agreed to extend the timescale in our initial amendment from three months to six months.

Given that the Minister was proposing an amendment to the commencement provisions in clause 19, the Committee decided to table amendment No 59, which amends his amendment. The benefit of that approach is that it enables section 17A, sections 17B(4) and (5), section 18A and section 19 to come into operation on the day after Royal Assent, which is something that the Minister has indicated he wants by way his amendment. That provides him with the flexibility to commence other provisions in the Bill within six months if he wishes to do so and achieves the Committee's aim of removing the requirement to commence all the provisions from the Department by providing for any provisions not already commenced by an order to come into effect six months after Royal Assent whilst providing an appropriate time frame to develop the necessary support services.

For the reasons that I have outlined, the Committee's amendment to the Minister's amendment is the most appropriate way to deal with the commencement of the provisions in the Bill. The Minister has now indicated that he will not move his amendment, and therefore I am not in a position, on behalf of the Committee, to move an amendment amending his amendment. Whilst the Minister and the Committee and I have a good relationship, it is fair to say that the House has previously voted on issues and it has been left to the Department to implement the related measures by way of an order, yet that has not happened because those measures did not meet the Department's policy view. I have commented on that in the past, and it is regrettable. Given, therefore, the views of the Department and the Minister on clause 6, which the Assembly passed by 81 votes to 10, with the Alliance Party being the only party that opposed it, the Committee felt that it would be appropriate —

Mr Ford: There are not 10 of us.

Mr Givan: The Alliance Party, Steven Agnew, Basil McCrea and John McCallister. Don't worry, we know who they are and the constituencies they are from.

Given that there were only 10 Members, Members will want to make sure that the will of Parliament is implemented. That is why the Committee was proposing to remove the power of the Department to bring the provisions in by way of an order and to put in place a time limit of six months. Obviously, that was also to facilitate support packages being developed properly so that the two could go in tandem. We will come back to this at Further Consideration Stage. In the spirit in which the Minister has engaged with Lord Morrow and the Committee, I trust that, on this issue, we will be able to engage together and agree an amendment that satisfies everybody. If that is not the case, we will, I trust, table a Committee amendment again at Further Consideration Stage to give effect to the issues that I have just outlined.

Mr Dickson: I do not intend to speak any further in this debate other than to say that I support the Minister.

1.45 am

Lord Morrow: I have good news too for the House: I will be very brief, so we are coming near the end.

Members, by this stage of the debate, will know that I have not been slow to listen and to revise aspects of my Bill when a good case has been made for doing so.

I am grateful for all the constructive input that I have received. As a result of these changes, there are some further definitions that need to be included in the Bill. I am therefore supporting the Minister's intention to oppose clause 17 and introduce new clause 17A in its place and new clause 17B and schedules 4 and 5, which set out the minor and consequential amendments and repeals where there are references to previous legislation. I hope that Members will not find any matters of controversy in those additions. The only issue that might have been of concern is the matter of dealing with a young person whose age is in dispute in new clause 17A. I encourage Members to support the removal of clause 17 and amendment Nos 54, 55, 63 and 64, which introduce those new clauses and amendments.

As a result of amendments that we have agreed today, my Bill now contains more order-making powers, and the Minister of Justice has suggested that it is no longer necessary for all those to be made by affirmative resolution, which is currently required by clause 18. I am fully supportive of the Minister of Justice's proposal to oppose current clause 18 and to replace it with a new clause 18A. I very much agree that certain regulations will still need to be made by affirmative resolution so that the Assembly has an active role in scrutinising changes in powers to, for instance, the functions of a child trafficking guardian. The Minister has already dealt with the detail of new clause 18A, and I encourage Members to oppose clause 18 and to support amendment No 56.

As I said at the start of the debate, I am very grateful for all the cooperation from the Department of Justice on the amendments to my Bill. Many of the amendments arose from its consultation. As a result of the new clauses that we have added to the Bill, it now has a larger criminal justice element than when it was first drafted. To reflect that, I fully support amendment No 57 to change the title of the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Further Provisions and Support for Victims) Act.

The issue of how best to commence the provisions of my Bill has been the subject of some debate in recent months. At the current time, I am minded to support both the Minister's amendment No 58 and the Justice Committee's amendment No 59 for all clauses of my Bill to commence six months after Royal Assent is granted unless they have already commenced by order from the relevant Departments. I am of the view that six months should be long enough for the Departments of Health, Finance and Justice to prepare to commence all the clauses of my Bill. I believe that it is important that the relevant Departments be given time to prepare to bring forward the relevant provisions and that there should be a cut-off date as put forward by the Justice Committee.

Mr Ford: It will not take long to respond to the points that were made. I will respond to one point that was made by the Committee Chair, when he referred to issues in a previous piece of legislation that were not commenced by the Department. If he is referring to certain aspects of the first Bill that was passed by the House following devolution relating to young people and firearms, those are issues that are still under consultation with those involved in shooting interests to ensure that we get the best possible legislation. The reality is that, at the moment, the Department of Justice is busy commencing various bits of legislation that have been lying around for a considerable period of years.

On the precise timing, it is my understanding that it is not just an issue for the DOJ or any unwillingness; I am well aware of what the will of the House is. There are real practical issues, especially as one of the amendments passed in the previous group imposes specific requirements on DHSSPS, which went beyond what that Department was expecting. I suspect that it may have more difficulty with commencement times than my Department will. That is why I believe that it is appropriate that we do not push that point today but engage in discussions in the usual constructive way in which we have dealt with matters so far. We shall look to that. Other than that, the amendments in this group are entirely technical, and I commend them to the House.

SLAVERY AND TRAFFICKING PREVENTION ORDERS ON APPLICATION

2.—(1) A court of summary jurisdiction may make a slavery and trafficking prevention order against a person aged 18 or over ("the defendant") on an application by the Chief Constable.

(2) The court may make the order only if it is satisfied that—

- (b) since the defendant first became a relevant offender, the defendant has acted in a way which means that the condition in sub-paragraph (3) is met.

(3) The condition is that—

- (b) it is necessary to make the order for the purpose of protecting persons generally, or particular persons, from the physical or psychological harm which would be likely to occur if the defendant committed such an offence.

MEANING OF "RELEVANT OFFENDER"

3.—(1) A person is a "relevant offender" for the purposes of paragraph 2 if sub-paragraph (2) or (3) applies to the person.

(2) This sub-paragraph applies to a person if—

(a) the person has been convicted of a slavery or human trafficking offence,

(b) a court has made a finding that the person is not guilty of a slavery or human trafficking offence by reason of insanity,

(c) a court has made a finding that the person is unfit to be tried and has done the act charged against the person in respect of a slavery or human trafficking offence, or

(d) the person has been cautioned in respect of a slavery or human trafficking offence.

(3) This sub-paragraph applies to a person if, under the law of a country outside the United Kingdom—

(a) the person has been convicted of an equivalent offence (whether or not the person has been punished for it),

(b) a court has made, in relation to an equivalent offence, a finding equivalent to a finding that the person is not guilty by reason of insanity,

(c) a court has made, in relation to an equivalent offence, a finding equivalent to a finding that the person is unfit to be tried and has done the act charged against the person, or

(d) the person has been cautioned in respect of an equivalent offence.

(4) An "equivalent offence" means an act which—

(a) constituted an offence under the law of the country concerned, and

(b) would have constituted a slavery or human trafficking offence under the law of Northern Ireland if it had been done in Northern Ireland, or by a UK national, or as regards the United Kingdom.

(5) For the purposes of sub-paragraph (4) an act punishable under the law of a country outside the United Kingdom constitutes an offence under that law, however it is described in that law.

(6) On an application under paragraph 2 where sub-paragraph (3) is alleged to apply to the defendant, the condition in sub-paragraph (4)(b) is to be taken as met unless—

(a) not later than provided by magistrates' court rules, the defendant serves on the Chief Constable a notice which states that in the defendant's opinion the condition is not met, shows the grounds for that opinion, and requires the Chief Constable to prove that the condition is met, or

(b) the court permits the defendant to require the Chief Constable to prove that the condition is met without service of such a notice.

(7) References in this paragraph to convictions, findings and cautions include those taking place before this paragraph comes into operation.

EFFECT OF SLAVERY AND TRAFFICKING PREVENTION ORDERS

4.—(1) A slavery and trafficking prevention order is an order prohibiting the defendant from doing anything described in the order or requiring the defendant to do anything described in the order (or both).

(2) The only prohibitions or requirements that may be included in the order are those which the court is satisfied are necessary for the purpose of protecting persons generally, or particular persons, from the physical or psychological harm which would be likely to occur if the defendant committed a slavery or human trafficking offence.

(3) Subject to paragraph 5(1), a prohibition or requirement contained in a slavery and trafficking prevention order has effect—

(a) for a fixed period, specified in the order, of at least 5 years, or

(b) until further order.

(4) A slavery and trafficking prevention order—

(a) may specify that some of its prohibitions or requirements have effect until further order and some for a fixed period;

(b) may specify different periods for different prohibitions or requirements.

(5) If a court makes a slavery and trafficking prevention order in relation to a person who is already subject to such an order (whether made by that court or another), the earlier order ceases to have effect.

PROHIBITIONS ON FOREIGN TRAVEL

5.—(1) A prohibition on foreign travel contained in a slavery and trafficking prevention order must be for a fixed period of not more than 5 years.

(2) A "prohibition on foreign travel" means—

(b) a prohibition on travelling to any country outside the United Kingdom other than a country named or described in the order, or

(3) Sub-paragraph (1) does not prevent a prohibition on foreign travel from being extended for a further period (of no more than 5 years each time) under paragraph 6.

(4) A slavery and trafficking prevention order that contains a prohibition within sub-paragraph (2)(c) must require the defendant to surrender all of the defendant's passports at a police station specified in the order—

(a) on or before the date when the prohibition takes effect, or

(b) within a period specified in the order.

(5) Any passports surrendered must be returned as soon as reasonably practicable after the person ceases to be subject to a slavery and trafficking prevention order containing a prohibition within sub-paragraph (2)(c).

(6) Sub-paragraph (5) does not apply in relation to—

(a) a passport issued by or on behalf of the authorities of a country outside the United Kingdom if the passport has been returned to those authorities;

(b) a passport issued by or on behalf of an international organisation if the passport has been returned to that organisation.

(b) the Chief Constable.

(3) On the application the court, after hearing—

(a) the person making the application, and

(b) the other person mentioned in sub-paragraph (2) (if that person wishes to be heard), may make any order varying, renewing or discharging the slavery and trafficking prevention order that the court considers appropriate.

(4) An order may be renewed, or varied so as to impose additional prohibitions or requirements on the defendant, only if the court is satisfied that—

(a) there is a risk that the defendant may commit a slavery or human trafficking offence; and

(b) it is necessary to renew or vary the order for the purpose of protecting persons generally, or particular persons, from the physical or psychological harm which would be likely to occur if the defendant committed such an offence.

(5) Any renewed or varied order may contain only those prohibitions or requirements which the court is satisfied are necessary for that purpose.

(6) The court must not discharge an order before the end of 5 years beginning with the day on which the order was made, without the consent of the defendant and the Chief Constable.

(7) Sub-paragraph (6) does not apply to an order containing a prohibition on foreign travel and no other prohibitions.

(8) In this paragraph “the appropriate court” means—

(a) where the Crown Court or the Court of Appeal made the slavery and trafficking prevention order, the Crown Court;

(b) in any other case, a court of summary jurisdiction.

(9) An application under sub-paragraph (1) may be made—

(a) where the appropriate court is the Crown Court, in accordance with Crown Court rules;

(b) in any other case, by complaint.

INTERIM SLAVERY AND TRAFFICKING PREVENTION ORDERS

7.—(1) This paragraph applies where an application under paragraph 2 (“the main application”) has not been determined.

(2) An application for an “interim slavery and trafficking prevention order—

(a) may be made by the complaint by which the main application is made, or

(b) if the main application has been made, may be made by the person who has made that application, by complaint to the court to which that application has been made.

(3) The court may, if it considers it just to do so, make an interim slavery and trafficking prevention order.

(4) An interim slavery and trafficking prevention order is an order prohibiting the defendant from doing anything described in the order or requiring the defendant to do anything described in the order (or both).

(5) The order—

(a) has effect only for a fixed period, specified in the order;

(b) ceases to have effect, if it has not already done so, on the determination of the main application.

(6) The applicant or the defendant may by complaint apply to the court that made the interim slavery and trafficking prevention order for the order to be varied, renewed or discharged.

APPEALS

8.—(1) A defendant may appeal against the making of a slavery and trafficking prevention order—

(a) where the order was made under paragraph 1(1)

(a), as if the order were a sentence passed on the defendant for the offence;

(b) where the order was made under paragraph 1(1)

(b) or (c), as if the defendant had been convicted of the offence and the order were a sentence passed on the defendant for that offence;

(c) where the order was made on an application under paragraph 2, to the county court.

(2) A defendant may appeal to the county court against the making of an interim slavery and trafficking prevention order.

(3) A defendant may appeal against the making of an order under paragraph 6, or the refusal to make such an order—

(a) where the application for such an order was made to the Crown Court, to the Court of Appeal;

(b) in any other case, to the county court.

(4) On an appeal under sub-paragraph (1)(c), (2) or

(3)(b), the county court may make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to its determination of the appeal, and may also make such incidental or consequential orders as appear to it to be just.

(5) Any order made by the county court on an appeal under sub-paragraph (1)(c) or (2) is for the purposes of paragraph 6(8) or 7(6) (respectively) to be treated as if it were an order of the court from which the appeal was brought.

(6) Sub-paragraph (5) does not apply to an order directing that an application be reheard by a court of summary jurisdiction.

The Assembly met at 10.30 am (Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair).

Members observed two minutes' silence.

Executive Committee Business

Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) (Amendment) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): I beg to move

That the draft Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) (Amendment) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014 be approved.

The order is being made under article 33 of the Local Government (Northern Ireland) Order 2005. Article 33(5) of that order provides that a draft order must be laid down before, and approved by a resolution of, the Assembly. The Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) Order (Northern Ireland) 2012 came into operation on 27 November 2012. That order provided councils with an explicit power to indemnify their members and officers in respect of personal liabilities incurred in connection with service on behalf of their councils, subject to certain restrictions. The 2012 order also enabled councils to cover the cost of any legal representation that may have been considered necessary. Councils could cover the cost themselves by way of an indemnity or insurance.

With the introduction of the mandatory code of conduct earlier this year and the mechanisms for dealing with alleged breaches of the code, the 2012 order as currently drafted would permit councils to provide an indemnity in relation to procedures in connection with the ethical standards framework, but it would not compel them to recover costs incurred should a member be found to be in breach of the code and should that decision be upheld following appeal.

The 2012 order provides, among other things, for councils to include terms in any indemnity, including any insurance secured for the repayment of sums expended by the council or insurer in any cases in which a member or officer has been convicted of a criminal offence, if the indemnity or insurance policy would otherwise cover the proceedings leading to that finding or conviction. The draft order will extend that requirement to cases in which a councillor has been found to have failed to comply with, or admitted that they have failed to comply with, the Northern Ireland local government code of conduct for councillors.

It is right that councils should be able to provide assistance to their members to defend any allegations made in relation to breaches of the code. However, if those members have been found to have breached the code, it is also right that any council money that is used in such cases is repaid.

I ask the Assembly to approve the draft order.

Ms Lo (The Chairperson of the Committee for the Environment): The Committee first considered the proposed content of the draft Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) (Amendment) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014 at its meeting on 19 May 2014, when the Department provided a synopsis of the responses it had received to its consultation.

The Committee noted that the Belfast City Council and Derry and Strabane statutory transition committees supported the Department's proposal to require councils to include terms in any indemnity or insurance that would require the repayment of costs where a person has subsequently been found, or has admitted to being, in breach of the local government code of conduct.

The Committee also noted the Northern Ireland Local Government Association's (NILGA) suggestion that an indemnity should only be withheld where a breach of the code would lead to disqualification, rather than only censure or suspension, or that there should be a cap on the limit of expenditure. However, the Committee was in agreement with the Department's response, which was not to include those suggestions in this subordinate legislation.

The Committee considered the SL1 proposal on 3 July 2014 and was content for the Department to proceed to make the statutory rule. At its meeting on 25 September 2014, the Committee agreed that the draft Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) (Amendment) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014 should be affirmed by the Assembly.

Mrs Cameron: As Deputy Chair of the Environment Committee, I concur with the remarks of the Minister and the Committee Chair on the draft Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) (Amendment) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014, and I will be very brief.

The order will enable any breach of the Northern Ireland local government code of conduct for councillors to be treated by way of legal provision in the same way as it already applies to a councillor who has been found guilty of a criminal offence. The motion simply allows for the extension of the restriction on legal cover to the code of conduct. I support the motion.

Mr Durkan: This order has been brought forward to protect public funds, and it puts the legislation regarding the provision of indemnities on a par with that available to councils in other jurisdictions.

I thank the Chair of the Committee and the Deputy Chair of the Committee for their support for the motion.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That the draft Local Government (Indemnities for Members and Officers) (Amendment) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014 be approved.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): We are running a little ahead of the indicative timings, so Members may take their ease for a moment.

Off-street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill: Second Stage

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development):
I beg to move:

That the Second Stage of the Off-street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill [NIA Bill 40/11-16] be agreed.

It might be helpful to Members for me to give a little background to the Bill. In her speech on 31 March 2008 on the reform of public administration, the then Minister of the Environment, Minister Foster, identified 11 roads-related functions of my Department as being suitable for transfer to councils. Those functions were the subject of lengthy and detailed discussions between officials of the Department and local government representatives over a number of months. The outcome was that local government representatives declined to accept many of the functions that had been identified as being suitable for transfer.

An alternative list of five functions was subsequently submitted by local government for my predecessor's consideration. That list included the proposal that councils would become responsible for on- and off-street parking enforcement, and it was agreed to. Those functions were the subject of consultation between April and July 2010 in a Roads (Functions of District Councils) Bill. However, my predecessor subsequently withdrew the Bill from the legislative programme.

In April 2013, the Executive concluded that district councils should become responsible for the provision, ownership and management of off-street car parks, except park-and-ride and park-and-share car parks, which will remain the responsibility of my Department. Councils will also become responsible for the enforcement of parking contraventions in their off-street car parks.

The Off-street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill has a single clause that aims to achieve that vision of the Executive. The transfer of off-street car parks to the new councils will be put into effect through transfer schemes provided for by section 122 of the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 and presently being prepared by my officials. Those stand outside the provisions of the Bill.

Members will have noted that the date for the Bill to come into effect as an Act of the Assembly is 1 April 2015. It is an RPA measure, and its timing is aimed to coincide with the revised funding of district councils from that date. It is also intended to ensure that councils will enjoy the revenue to be gained from the operation of those off-street car parks from that date.

Prior to consultation, my officials gave an oral briefing to the Committee for Regional Development on 4 June on the aims of the Bill. Following consultation, on 8 October, my officials gave a further briefing to the Committee, providing a brief résumé of the 17 responses received. Those were mostly from existing or shadow councils and largely sought clarification on points of detail relating to the outworkings of the proposed transfer rather than the content of the Bill. The respondents were generally content with the Bill's aims, and, in my view, nothing that was raised necessitated amendment to the Bill.

To help to ensure that the Bill will be in operation from 1 April 2015, I wrote to the Chairman of the Committee seeking his cooperation in the Committee's completing its scrutiny of this single-clause Bill within the 30 working days provided for in Standing Order 33(2). I am grateful to the Chairman and members of the Committee for helpfully agreeing to commence their consultation on the Bill in advance of its introduction in order to meet the Bill passage timetable. While the Committee has reserved the right to apply for an extension under Standing Order 33(4), I hope that its scrutiny of the Bill's single clause would not require more than those 30 working days.

That is my overview and presentation of the Second Stage. I will, of course, be listening closely to the contributions from not only the Chair and other members of the Committee but, perhaps, Assembly Members. Hopefully, we can make progress on this Bill.

10.45 am

Mr Clarke (The Chairperson of the Committee for Regional Development): I welcome the opportunity to speak on off-street car parking. The Committee is generally supportive of the Bill. However, the caveat is that there are some Committee concerns about protecting the car parking spaces in villages when this is transferred to local government. We look forward to receiving the views of the Independent Retail Trade Association on the matter.

The Committee first received a briefing on the Bill on 4 June. It must be said that there were mixed feelings and some concerns, as the Committee did not feel that the Department was providing sufficient clarification at that stage on issues such as the service level agreement, the cost to the councils and the value of the assets being transferred. Committee members raised a number of concerns. The Department agreed to copy the Committee into the consultation responses that were received over the summer recess, and I thank officials for doing so. Those show that the current and shadow councils are supportive of the principle of the handover of the functions. However, they also show that there were a number of areas of concern that required additional clarification from the Department, clarification that I am not entirely sure has or will be provided by the time that the Bill is enacted.

As the Minister indicated, the consultation was completed on 8 August. On 17 August, the Committee received correspondence from the Minister setting out his intention to introduce the Bill and asking the Committee to complete its scrutiny in 30 days. Some members felt that there was a veiled threat in how that was framed because the correspondence did go on to suggest that they could possibly apply for accelerated passage. The Committee was generally supportive of trying to work to achieve that in the 30 days but did not want to be tied to it. The Committee wanted to make sure that the work was done properly so that it went across in a fit-for-purpose state. We assured officials on that occasion that we would do our best. However, the caveat was that whatever papers and clarification we needed from the Department would come in a timely manner. As the Minister indicated, the Committee took its responsibility seriously and, as he outlined, has started its work in opening it up for the consultation process, which shows the supportive nature of the Committee.

On 8 October, the Committee again took evidence from departmental officials. Again, the Committee raised concerns that too many items remained not clarified, such as whether the transfer of functions would be cost neutral; the value of the assets being transferred, which has reduced from £233 million in 2009 to £64 million at March 2013; and enforcement.

It is no exaggeration that the main concern of the Committee, aside from the lack of clarity and which has been relayed by individual members, is that there does not seem to be any protection of the assets. I share that concern with other members. The Committee did suggest that the Department consider an amendment. I note from the Minister's introduction today that it is not minded to put an amendment to the Bill. However, the Committee did suggest that, if the Department did do that, it would make it much easier for us to get that agreed at the outset so we could meet the 30-day deadline for the process as opposed to having to come forward with it at a later stage.

The Committee for Regional Development is not opposed to the principles of the Bill, but, as other Members will no doubt indicate, we have concerns about ensuring that the sale of car parks is not detrimental to local economic development if the spaces are not replaced elsewhere. The Committee will explore that more fully at Committee Stage. At this stage, I indicate general support, in principle, for the Bill.

Mr Byrne: My party, the SDLP, and I welcome and support the transfer of ownership and control of public car parks to the new super-councils in April 2015. The Department for Regional Development has estimated their value to be approximately £46 million and that they will generate revenue of around £8 million per annum. The Bill will see the ownership and maintenance of over 300 car parks, free and charging, being transferred to councils. That can be dealt with efficiently and sensibly at council level and is one important step in creating strong and accountable local government. For a long time, our councils have expressed their desire to exercise some control over parking, and the SDLP welcomes the fact that the Bill will give each of the new super-councils a say. Parking has proved contentious in a number of our town centres, and it is right that the new councils will have due input into the decisions that affect parking in their area going forward. Parking plays an important role in the retail economies of our local towns and cities and for the people who use those facilities day in and day out.

Whilst the SDLP wholly supports the principle of the Bill, it raises a number of matters that require more attention. First, restrictive conditions or otherwise could be imposed on councils by DRD on future use of the car parks. Nearly all the councils and NILGA have raised that issue, and they do not want restrictive conditions being applied by DRD. I think that there were 17 or 18 respondents to the consultation, which the Minister referred to earlier.

Car parking administration and management, the charging system and maintenance and service of pay-and-display machines — again, the sensible and practical solution for that in the short term is to have some transitional arrangements that are based on the DRD protocols and practices until councils finalise future arrangements in that regard.

The next issue is fixed penalty notices and the consequent collection and processing of the fines. DRD has an administrative system or unit in situ that does that work, and over 30 people are employed between offices in Omagh, Coleraine and Belfast.

The hiring of car parking attendants and wardens, or the "red coats", again, has been administered by DRD, and with the new system kicking in in April 2015, it will not be possible for councils to fully take on that responsibility at this stage. The proposed three- or five-year service level agreement to operate car parking, being administered by DRD with councils subsequently deciding on future arrangements, seems the most practical arrangement for the immediate future.

Some council areas have modern, multistorey car parks, and others have substandard facilities. The creation and maintenance of car parks cannot be funded on parking fees alone, so the councils, in future, will have to determine how they can carry out improvement and maintenance of those car parks. The councils have rightly requested condition surveys, which I understand are in the process of being prepared by DRD engineers. Those should be followed by action to ensure that they are all up to the standards that the new councils will expect. That should, of course, include a guarantee that every one of our off-street parking facilities is fully accessible and that they provide adequate mobility parking. If not, action should be undertaken to make sure that that is the case.

I would also welcome a clause in the Bill that specifies that councils will have the power to offer free off-street parking to blue badge holders. The Bill offers an opportunity to improve drastically what can prove a serious obstacle for people with disabilities and mobility problems. Moreover, the Bill will give councils the power to tailor parking charges to their specific situations, but we must avoid causing undue confusion and uncertainty for drivers who will cross the borders between different super-councils. It must not be the case that hard-pressed families are presented with fines because of the lack of a clear and comprehensive system in place. As far as possible, the new super-councils must be encouraged to fashion some consistency. It would be regrettable if a system emerged here similar to the one operating in England, where two towns in close proximity can operate vastly different parking charges.

The SDLP wishes good luck to the Minister and the Bill at this stage. Hopefully, future arrangements can be such that the councils will be satisfied.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I call Mr Ross Hussey.

Mr Hussey: Mr Deputy Speaker, can I have your permission to remain seated?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Absolutely.

Mr Hussey: Thank you very much. I begin by declaring, as a former councillor, that one of the issues that was continually debated in councils was car parking, and councillors continually made it very clear that one of the functions that they wanted devolved to them under the review of public administration was car parking. Whilst I was not entirely happy with the way the review of public administration eventually ended up, we are now in a situation where we are looking at the transfer of car parking to local councils, and I support the Bill as drafted.

Many will express reservations about how councils will act once the powers have been transferred, and there have been discussions about the ownership of the car parks and what councils may or may not do following the transfer of ownership. We have to realise that councils have their own authority and will decide for themselves what they can and cannot do with the assets once they have been transferred. However, I am sure that, should a car park be transferred and should a council decide to use that land for another activity, councillors will realise that they must replace it with another car park. All towns have had surveys about the number of car parking spaces they should have and maintain.

Reference has also been made to the condition of car parks, and some are better than others. I suppose that it would be fair to say that it is like buying a second-hand car. However, car parks will be transferred and will be under the control of councils.

I ask the Minister to consider providing an answer about the liability claims that have been made against DRD in relation to car parks and to provide the most recent figures available. If those cannot be made available today, he could provide them later.

Councils will make different decisions, and I accept the point made by Mr Byrne about charging structures. We see that anyway. For example, Belfast is a more expensive place for parking than Omagh, and, at certain times of the year, councils may wish to change the rates or perhaps have free days coming up to Christmas on Saturdays or whatever. That is a luxury they will have.

I also accept the point that Mr Byrne made about disabilities. I had not thought of it until he made that point. I declare an interest as somebody with a disability. Car parks should provide free car parking spaces for blue badge holders. I strongly believe in that and feel that it should be taken into account during the deliberations.

Overall and over the past years, car parking has been one of those issues over which councils have got quite angry about what can and cannot be done. They want this opportunity to take control of the car parks, and I the Bill is one way of getting that business transferred to them. I support the Bill and look forward to seeing it progress through the House.

Mr Lyttle: I will speak on behalf of the Alliance Party and add our general support to the Off-street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill and, indeed, the principle of transferring the functions for car parking to our councils. I welcome the helpful responses that the councils across the region provided to the Committee for Regional Development and the general endorsement of the proposals.

The consultation responses expressed hope that the transfer of responsibility for off-street car parking to councils will provide our local government representatives with the opportunity to manage our off-street car parks in a way that supports local economic development and good community planning policy. We wish them well in that endeavour.

Some concerns and issues about the transfer of functions have been raised by Members, and those were highlighted in the consultation responses. One particular point was that all car parks that come under the legislation should be transferred as part of the Bill without any undue delay. There was also an understanding that certain car parks in Belfast city centre were not originally to be included in the handover, but I believe that there may have been recent movement in that regard. Maybe we could get clarification of that. I know that NILGA, in its consultation response, sought reassurance around the fact that lands required by councils to perform off-street parking functions would be confirmed as a matter of priority and transferred without restriction.

(Mr Principal Deputy Speaker [Mr Mitchel McLaughlin] in the Chair)

Perhaps the most pertinent issue that has been raised is about the transfer within the Bill being cost-neutral. Indeed, in a statement to the Assembly, the former Environment Minister, Alex Attwood, said:

That is the standard for which we have to aim with the transfer of responsibility for off-street car parking from the Department for Regional Development to our local councillors. Indeed, the state of repair at point of transfer is another issue that has been raised.

11.00 am

Another issue raised by the NILGA consultation response is that the regulation-making powers will remain the responsibility of the Department, as I understand it. NILGA felt that councils should be provided with the opportunity to be consulted on and to influence any regulations that are being made, amended or revoked in future in relation to off-street car parking. I will be interested to hear the Minister's view on that.

Business bodies, in particular NIIRTA, raised the issue of the positive contribution of many of the parking approaches, for example the £1 for five hours parking tariff. I believe that that is available in around 93 car parks in around 23 towns across Northern Ireland and had been received extremely well by local people and traders. We want to ensure that those creative policies are retained going forward. Maybe the Minister can say something about that as well.

I look forward to working with my Committee colleagues to further examine the Bill at Committee Stage in the near future.

Mr Easton: The Bill, which has been introduced by the Minister for Regional Development, sets forth certain functions that are currently carried out by DRD/Transport NI in relation to off-street car parking. We will see some of these functions transferred to the new councils across Northern Ireland, as agreed by the Northern Ireland Executive. This Bill will see councils enter into service-level agreements with DRD, and these agreements will apply to car parks, equipment and associated car park signage. If councils wish to include enforcement as part of these responsibilities, it must be added to the schedule with the agreement of Transport NI.

Some duties will still be carried out by DRD and Transport NI. The service-level agreement takes effect from 1 April 2015 and remains in force until 31 October, when it can be renegotiated. Until then, DRD plus Transport NI and its agents will provide the service on behalf of the councils, and they will be responsible for engaging parking attendants and enforcing the Civil Provisions Act in relation to off-street car parking in the ownership of the councils. That will apply until this contract runs out and is either extended or goes out to open competition. Transport NI will control staff uniforms, the processing of penalty charge notices, the collection of payments for penalty charge notices and basic maintenance and cleaning of off-street car parks. It will maintain pay-and-display machines and cash collection points and manage and report service-level agreement key performance indicators. Also, it will provide an independent tariff penalty tribunal service, customer services, a clamping and removal service and permit parking schemes. It will control the processing of personal data and claims and the investigation of complaints.

The elements of the councils' responsibilities for managing and operating car parks include the setting of tariffs; reconciliation of off-street car parking income agreement enforcement days; relevant policies; service standards and procedures; enforcing the Criminal Offences Act; and maintaining, cleaning and lighting car parks.

On inspections, attendants who come across and note defects in the car parks will report them to Transport NI within 24 hours. Councils will have to be notified of the defects within one hour of this being reported. DRD and Transport NI will make good to the satisfaction of the councils any damages that may need repaired. On operational specifications, councils will agree a parking enforcement protocol plus a cancellation policy that will be implemented by DRD and Transport NI. Enforcement will be delegated to DRD and Transport NI.

On record management and data protection, DRD, Transport NI and the councils will assume joint data controls for the personal and sensitive personal data that they possess. They will ensure that each organisation will apply a level of interpretation to data that they process and have the responsibility to exercise professional judgement on that data. Each organisation will have significant decision-making tasks in relation to personal data processed. Each organisation will also apply its own technical expertise and professional judgement on how best to store the personal data in a safe and accessible way. That can be best achieved by shared data control among all three.

Charges will be paid to DRD and Transport NI by councils under the service-level agreement to do with cash collection duties, attendants deployed, processing charges and appeals and administration charges.

I move now to the mechanics. DRD and Transport NI will also produce a monthly financial report to councils and meet quarterly to review implementation performance and services provided. Other aspects of the Bill offer resolution of disputes and third-party rights.

I generally support the Bill, but I have some questions. Hopefully, the Minister will address those. When the car parks are handed over, will they be handed over in 100% working and good condition? If not, what moneys will be transferred to the car parks to ensure that they will be up to scratch for the councils when they take over? Will DRD and Transport NI ensure that any information, such as the history of ongoing claims, will be given to the council for their information? I have slight concerns relating to when the car parks are handed over to the councils. Will the councils have the power to sell them off straight away if they want to do so? We need to look at putting something in place that will prevent them doing that. Maybe they should come back to DRD before they are allowed to do that.

I welcome the fact that the councils will be able to set the charges for off-street car parks. That could mean a big difference for struggling town centre businesses, which often find it hard to compete with out-of-town shopping centres and their free car parks. There are a few questions there, Minister, but, in general, I support the Bill.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. We generally support the principles of the Bill. I echo the Chair's concerns and, indeed, those of other Members regarding some issues around the Bill. However, we look forward to receiving it in Committee Stage and taking evidence from stakeholders. I call on the Department to support the Committee in passing the Bill through Committee Stage. I believe that some of the concerns raised by Members can be resolved. I look forward to the Bill passing through Committee.

Mr Moutray: The transfer of car parking functions from Department for Regional Development control to local government has been one of the more vexed areas of the review of public administration. There are two main areas of concern surrounding that proposition. One relates to the way in which the Department is conducting itself presently, and the other surrounds concerns that people have about how the new councils may conduct themselves in the future.

I do not intend to dwell on the first area other than to say that the RPA envisaged that car parking — not some car parking or non-profitable car parking — would transfer to local government control. I urge the Department to be true to the spirit of the review of public administration and ensure that all car parking functions are transferred to local government control.

Research has shown that all successful business districts afford adequate parking or park-and-ride facilities to potential users, whether they are travelling into town or city centres to work or to visit shops and spend their money in the local economy. Successful town centres provide car parking. In almost all council areas in Northern Ireland, it is the income generated through successful town and city centre rates that pays for public services such as leisure centres, park management and refuse collection. Where car parking is not sufficient to meet the demand, people simply go elsewhere. It is beyond doubt, therefore, that an ample supply of car parking is an essential ingredient in the economic growth and wealth generation of councils throughout Northern Ireland.

Having been granted control of these facilities by central government, councils would be taking a foolish, short-term view if they took any steps towards disposing of such facilities or changing their usage. Local authorities that would adopt such an approach would be guilty of inflicting a grievous injury on their own economic sustainability and prosperity into the future. Whilst there have been many positive initiatives designed to encourage people to leave their car behind and engage in public transport and alternatives such as cycling — I welcome them — there must also be a recognition that providing car-parking spaces is vital for successful towns and boroughs. I believe that all our public representatives in local government recognise that, regardless of whatever steps we take in this area. In principle, we support the Bill.

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development):

I am grateful to all Members for their contributions and comments at the Second Stage of the Bill. Some general issues and several specific points have been raised, and I will attempt to deal with those. If anything is missed, I will review Hansard and come back in writing to Members.

I am heartened by the broad support for the measure. It has been a very long time coming, and there have been changes over the years. In respect of the latter point made by Mr Moutray, who was advocating that the full range of parking services be devolved ultimately to local government, in principle, I do not object to that. I simply think that we should review, after a suitable period, the success of this measure.

I will move on to contributions from Members. Mr Clarke, the Chairman of the Committee for Regional Development, was generally supportive, and he and the Committee will take important evidence from interested stakeholders, including NILGA. I had the opportunity to meet representatives of NILGA yesterday to examine some of the issues, and I found that helpful.

I am not a fan of accelerated passage generally. I think and hope that there is enough time to have the Bill properly scrutinised. It is the duty of all Committees of the House, particularly, in this case, the Regional Development Committee, to scrutinise the Bill and its impact. In conversation with the Chairman of the Committee, I can assure him that it was not any kind of veiled threat, simply a desire to meet the tight timetable that has been set for us not by the Department but as a consequence of RPA and the changes that are happening from April 2015. I am pleased that the Committee will work with the Department, and my officials will be available to offer insight.

I also welcome the contribution from Mr Byrne. He made an important point that there should be no restrictive conditions as the powers are transferred to the councils. My Executive colleagues and I have every confidence that the new councils will act in the public interest. The theme emerged from several contributions, including that from Mr Easton, of the opportunity that councils could take to sell the family silver, as it were. I have every confidence in colleagues in local government, having served in it for 25 years. I know that they will do the right thing, and any other suggestion is perhaps unhelpful.

11.15 am

One of the principal aims of the reform of public administration is to create stronger and more responsible local government. I think that including restrictive provisions would be contrary to that purpose and could remove a council's ability, potentially, to progress any town centre regeneration proposal for the benefit of local citizens. Many town or city centre car parks have already been identified as key sites in the development of possible regeneration projects for commercial centres. In developing any such town and city centre regeneration proposals, the new councils would also have to be mindful of their responsibilities for ensuring adequate car parking provision.

Mr Clarke: I thank the Minister for giving way on that point. You raised an interesting point when you identified that some of those car parks in Belfast are in strategic locations for regeneration or whatever. If that is the case, Minister, why would your Department not dispose of that as an asset and realise that income as opposed to disposing of it to local government for them to realise the asset?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his point. In Belfast and in other places, car parks owned and managed by the Department continue to play an important role for car parking provision. Of course, we look on an ongoing basis at proposals put to us. When regeneration or redevelopment schemes come forward, it will be the duty of councils to examine the possible benefits and the potential downsides in the loss of car parking spaces and how they could be substituted or provided elsewhere. Those are always issues that have to be considered.

On the point raised by Mr Lyttle, we have had constructive discussions with Belfast City Council. I think that only one car park — the one in the Corporation Street area — will remain not transferred because of the York Street interchange proposal. Council officials understand that and see the logic of that. We have been listening to local government.

I will complete the point about the Department creating a veto for itself by any amendment to the legislation. That would potentially run contrary to the spirit of the reform of public administration because it would leave some veto or retain decision-making in the Department. That clearly is not in the spirit of the changes that we want to see.

Mr Byrne made other points about the existing state of the car parks that are being transferred. I am very satisfied that they are in adequate condition. An example of that or something that helps to confirm that is the relatively low number of claims that were historically or are presently made against the Department for any particular personal injury or any associated claim. It is a very low number, and there are only five live cases across all the Department's car parks. I believe that that confirms the relatively good condition of the car parks. If the new councils maintain the current condition of the car parks, the quantum of expenditure on such public liability claims would have little or no impact on future council rates.

I move to what Mr Hussey said. This is a long-sought-after power. Even in my days in local government, we were looking for additional responsibilities. The measure, in itself, is not particularly earth-shattering, but it is important. It will allow councils the flexibility to bring forward initiatives, such as five hours for a pound, which has been welcomed by so many town centres and traders, including the representatives of NIIRTA, which was referred to earlier. The issue of free car parking for blue badge holders will be a devolved issue, if you like, for councils to determine. They will also be able to determine their own decisions on other special initiatives, such as pre-Christmas initiatives.

I welcome the fact that there has been so much general support. Mr Easton gave us a fairly comprehensive review of the Bill and what it seeks to do. I believe that we have a responsibility to try to meet the deadlines that are ahead of us, and I was pleased that there was widespread political support.

Mr Lyttle quoted Alex Attwood, the then Minister of the Environment, stating that functions transferring to councils would be:

The Executive did not agree that assets would be brought up to an improved standard prior to transfer, nor has my Department been funded to improve the condition of assets that would be provided to councils, but I believe that the assets that we are transferring are indeed fit for purpose.

I welcome the contributions of Members, look forward to watching the Committee Stage with interest and then, when it is brought back to the Floor of the Assembly, continuing to engage with Members as the Bill progresses through its various stages.

Question put and agreed to.

That the Second Stage of the Off-street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill [NIA Bill 40/11-16] be agreed.

Education Bill: Consideration Stage

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call the Minister of Education, Mr John O'Dowd, to move the Consideration Stage of the Education Bill.

Moved. — [Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education)]

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Members will have a copy of the Marshalled List of amendments detailing the order for consideration. The amendments have been grouped for debate in the provisional grouping of amendments selected list. There are four groups of amendments, and we will debate the amendments in each group in turn.

The first debate will be on amendment Nos 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 8, which deal with functions and duties of the authority and technical matters. The second debate will be on amendment Nos 6 and 7, which deal with the departmental grant aid to sectoral bodies. The third debate will be on amendment Nos 9 to 20, which deal with membership, officers and committees. The fourth debate will be on amendment Nos 21 and 22, which deal with pay policy statements and the living wage.

Valid petitions of concern have been tabled in relation to amendment Nos 1, 2, 5, 11 to 15, 21 and 22. Each will therefore require a cross-community vote.

I remind Members who intend to speak that, during the debates on the four groups of amendments, they should address all the amendments in each group on which they wish to comment. Once the debate on each group is completed, any further amendments in the group will be moved formally as we go through the Bill, and the Question on each will be put without further debate. The Questions on stand part will be taken at the appropriate points in the Bill. If that is clear, we shall proceed.

Clause 2 (Functions of the Authority)

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: We now come to the first group of amendments for debate. With amendment No 1, it will be convenient to debate amendment Nos 2, 3, 4, 5 and 8. These amendments relate to functions and duties of the authority and technical matters.

Members should note that amendment Nos 1 and 5 are mutually exclusive. Valid petitions of concern have been received in relation to amendment Nos 1, 2 and 5, and, therefore, will require cross-party support.

Mr Lunn: I beg to move amendment No 1: In page 1, line 11, at end insert

“(2A) It shall be a duty of the Authority, when exercising its functions, to encourage, facilitate and promote integrated education.”.

No 2: In page 1, line 11, at end insert

“(2B) It shall be a duty of the Authority, when exercising its functions, to encourage, facilitate and promote Irish-medium education.”.— [Mr Lunn.]

No 3: In page 1, line 11, at end insert

“(2C) It shall be a duty of the Authority, when exercising its functions, to encourage, facilitate and promote shared education.”.— [Mr McCallister.]

No 4: In page 1, line 11, at end insert

“(2D) It shall be a duty of the Authority, when exercising its functions, to encourage, facilitate and promote the community use of school premises.”.— [Mr McCallister.]

No 5: In page 1, line 11, at end insert

“(2E) It shall be the duty of the Education Authority to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education, that is to say the education together at school of Protestant and Roman Catholic pupils.”.— [Mr Agnew.]

No 8: In clause 4, page 2, line 15, leave out “negative resolution” and insert “affirmative resolution”.— [Mr Kinahan.]

I will say at the outset that, while this should have been a very good day for the education system, I have a feeling that we are not going to come out of it with much credit.

Amendment No 1 is a very minor adjustment to what already exists in legislation. The words “encourage and facilitate” exist in the 1989 Order and apply to the Department and the boards, so, naturally, they would have applied to the new authority and transferred from the boards. The purpose of this amendment is to introduce the word “promote”. The Department has had an obligation in this respect for many years. I think that it is fair to say that, down the years, it has not covered itself in glory in the application and honouring of that obligation. We think that it is worthwhile to introduce the word “promote”, which has a slightly stronger meaning and goes beyond “facilitate and encourage”. According to the dictionary, promote means “to support and actively encourage”, so it is not an earth-shattering amendment, and nor is amendment No 2 as, frankly, the two run in parallel. However, it already seems that it is too much for the DUP because we have petitions of concern for both these amendments.

The Drumragh judgement comes into this as well. Judge Treacy has given clear direction to reinforce this obligation once again. He has pointed out that the needs model in the area-based planning system is not really fit for purpose and does not allow for any growth in the integrated sector. However, so far, the Department has not accepted this. I will speak just about the integrated sector for now. Polls and any expression of public opinion that I have seen since I joined this place have indicated that there is a clear demand for more integration of our schoolchildren in integrated schools. Judge Treacy has defined integrated schools as schools in which Protestants and Catholics are educated together but states that a school with a Catholic maintained ethos or a controlled ethos does not really qualify as an integrated school as it has to have a non-partisan board and so on.

These two amendments are a fairly innocent attempt to move things on a wee bit, remind the Department and take the opportunity of the new set-up across the boards and the new authority. It is an opportunity to tidy up a few things. We had hoped that it would find approval across the House. Maybe I am naive. Maybe I am not old enough yet, but I did not expect this level of opposition from the DUP, given that its party leader has constantly espoused his support for integrated education. He says that it was the subject of the first speech that he ever made to a DUP gathering away back in his youth and that he has continued with it ever since. I do not know what the Ulster Unionists are going to do on this, but Mr Kinahan and some of his party colleagues are on record as being supportive of integrated education. Where on earth is the harm in trying to give it another push on the back of the Drumragh judgement? It does not really matter because the dead hand of the DUP has descended, and the veto has been put in place. There is really no point in pursuing it, but we and other people will pursue it.

I am not going to repeat everything that I have said about integrated education in respect of the Irish medium, but the same principles apply. It has the same protection in previous legislation, and we have the same result; there is a petition of concern on that as well.

11.30 am

These two sectors deserve special attention. That has been recognised in our legislation for well over 20 years. The problem is that they have not received the special attention or impetus and promotion that they were supposed to get. I sometimes run out of things to say, but what is the objection to integrated education? What is the objection to putting our children together at an early age, with all the societal benefits that may flow from that? Yet we have this constant objection and, frankly, I wonder what some people are afraid of here.

The DUP told me yesterday that it now favours a single school system. To be frank, I am not too sure what that means. However, I have also heard it from the Ulster Unionists at times. They will have the opportunity today to explain what it means, but it seems to me to mean no more sectors. There will not be an integrated sector or an Irish-medium sector. There will also not be a Catholic maintained sector under the DUP's ambition. This is pie-in-the-sky nonsense. It is just not going to happen. If it were ever brought forward, they would suffer the same fate as we are today, because there would probably still be petitions of concern. It is totally unrealistic.

What is going on here is that the DUP just cannot abide the thought of any advancement, particularly in the Irish-medium sector. That is what it boils down to, and they are using the fact that they are applying their veto to integrated education as a smokescreen — a fig leaf — to cover their dislike for what they see as some sort of an attack on their culture or whatever. They just want nothing to do with what we will call those pesky do-gooders in the integrated sector and those pesky republican warriors in the Irish-medium sector. They want nothing to do with it. It is so backward-looking that it is pathetic.

The Irish-medium people, quite rightly, want to promote their ancient language. They want to sustain, maintain and promote it. Where on earth is the harm in that? It has been recognised in law that, if they want to have their own schools and be educated in the Irish language, they have a perfect right to do so, but, apparently, we are not going to extend this regulation in a simple way.

In amendment No 3, Mr McCallister wants to apply the same duty, including to “promote”, to the concept of sharing in education, and we are not going to be as paranoid about this as the DUP. In principle, we have no problem with the sharing concept. If done for the right reasons, it is perfectly valid. It enables schools to operate the full curriculum and the whole entitlement framework.

If you have not got enough pupils in your A-level classes, you can combine with another school. That is the basic reason for it. We may have some reservations about the societal benefits of it. Certainly it would, perhaps, be more long term than full integration, but we are prepared to accept Mr McCallister's amendment.

Amendment No 4 provides for the community use of facilities. This goes back quite a long way. Mr McNarry is not here so far today, but, somewhere in the system, he still has a private Member's Bill asking for exactly that: extended use by communities of school facilities, which we think is an excellent idea. His amendment No 4 — sorry, Mr McCallister's amendment, not Mr McNarry's — states:

“It shall be a duty of the Authority, when exercising its functions, to encourage, facilitate and promote the community use of school premises”.

That is fine.

Even the DUP did not manage to find fault with that.

Amendment No 5 from the Green Party — Stephen is here — is a limited version of what we are trying to achieve.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way. I just want to say from the outset that we support the Alliance amendment. We accept that it goes a little further than what we have proposed. Should the Alliance amendment fall, we will support ours, but given that, I think, we are trying to achieve the same thing, I accept that the Alliance amendment offers that bit more.

Mr Lunn: I thank the Member for that support. His amendment refers to the “education together” of Protestants and Catholics in the same school. That is lifted from the 1989 Order as well as the Drumragh judgement. The Drumragh judgement makes it clear that the fact that Protestants and Catholics are being educated in the same school does not make it an integrated school. It needs to go further than that, and it needs to have a board that has the ethos of promoting integration, societal sharing and bringing children together. What on earth is wrong with that? I look forward to hearing from the DUP on this, because yet another petition of concern has been tabled against that amendment.

Amendment No 8 refers to making orders relating to the Bill subject to positive rather than negative resolution. That is an ongoing discussion and we do not really have any problem with that, so I dare say that we will support it.

I will finish on this group. The whole purpose of our being here to pass legislation, debate and try to do what is best for our children in this situation is being trampled on — it will happen again as the day goes on — by petitions of concern on relatively simple matters where people appear to have suddenly changed their tune. They will be glad to know that I am looking at an article in the ‘Irish News’ today about CCMS's attitude to all this. They have effectively said that they want to see an end to the integrated sector and to its promotion. What are they afraid of? This is to do with parental choice and parental demand.

Mr McCausland: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: In a moment.

We are perfectly happy to support parental choice for parents who want to send their child to any school in our education system. We think that there is room for Catholic-maintained faith schools or Protestant faith schools, of which there are some. We think that there is ample room for the controlled sector, obviously, as it is huge. It deserves the support that the Bill will give it through a controlled sector body, but what a pity it is that there is such suspicion and paranoia coming from this side of the House when we discuss such matters.

I give way to Mr McCausland.

Mr McCausland: Does the Member accept that, when he says that these are relatively simple matters, they are also relatively sensitive matters? The word “simple” when referring to the complex architecture of education in Northern Ireland is somewhat misleading. Does he also accept that many of us believe that there should not be privilege and advantage for one sector over another, which is the point that this would provide? Other sectors such as the controlled sector should be promoted. There should be equality.

Mr Lunn: I thank Mr McCausland for that. I have had this discussion with certain DUP members, and their solution appears to be that all sectors deserve the same wording and that all sectors should be promoted, encouraged and facilitated. There is a reason — it is pretty obvious to everybody else, frankly — why the Irish-medium sector and the integrated sector have had that special encouragement and protection for 25 years: they were starting from scratch. They needed support, and there has been an upsurge of support in the community for them. However, it needs the Department and this authority to step up to the mark and continue to provide that support.

When I use the word “simple”, I use it with regard to including the word “promotion”. I remind the House that, on 23 November 2010, the House voted to support the promotion of integrated education. The DUP did not vote against it; it implicitly supported it. What has changed? This seems to be a matter of convenience from one debate to the next. Now, it is a single education system; now, it says, “We will give integrated and Irish-medium education absolutely nothing”. I look forward to hearing from DUP representatives on that because I think that it is absolutely disgraceful. I will leave it at that.

Miss M McIlveen (The Chairperson of the Committee for Education): As the House is aware, the Bill was subject to the accelerated passage procedure and thus did not have a Committee Stage. With your indulgence, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, at the outset I want to make a few remarks on group 1 as Chairperson of the Committee for Education. I would also like to declare an interest as a member of the board of governors of Killinchey Primary School and Castle Gardens Primary School in Newtownards.

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way? Could I ask her to move the microphone closer? Sorry.

Miss M McIlveen: You do not want to miss a thing.

Mr Lunn: I really want to hear what you are saying.

Miss M McIlveen: I want to begin by talking about amendment Nos 1, 2 and 5, which deal with the promotion of integrated and Irish-medium education. When the Committee considered these matters as part of the previous Education Bill, you may not be surprised to learn, it could not come to an agreement. Some Members strongly felt that a level playing field for the different education sectors was required. Those Members argued against the promotion of one sector over another. Others disagreed, highlighting the need for proportionate additional support for what was termed a “culturally important sector” — Irish-medium education — and for what might be described as a socially important sector — integrated education.

Whatever view may be taken about the above, Members may also wish to consider the existing obligations on the Department to facilitate and encourage Irish-medium and integrated education. Some argue that what is known as the Drumragh judgement has provided some clarity in this regard; others might point to the recently published primary school area plans, which appear to show some caution on the part of the education and library boards, reflecting perhaps something less than clarity in respect of the treatment of these sectors.

In the absence of a Committee Stage, the Committee has not taken a formal view on these matters. I will, however, say more, as we move through, as a DUP MLA.

I also want to touch briefly on amendment No 3, which refers to the promotion of shared education. As you are aware, the Committee for Education is undertaking an inquiry into this and integrated education. The Committee has just commenced evidence taking and has not undertaken significant deliberations as yet. I should point out, however, that, as part of its consideration of the previous Education Bill, the Committee did some work on shared education.

The Committee felt that it certainly supported the principle of sharing resources and improving collaboration between schools where that enhances the effective management and efficient provision of education. I think that it is fair to summarise the Committee’s view at that time that shared education was about the betterment of the educational experience for pupils. In that spirit, Members were certainly supportive of its promotion. However, the Committee also felt that, in the absence of a statutory definition and greater policy clarity, it was inappropriate to propose amendments like amendment No 3 to the previous Education Bill. Indeed, it was the need for policy clarity that prompted the Committee’s current inquiry. The proponent of amendment No 3 might well argue that the policy position has developed in the 18 months since the last Bill. It might even be argued that this is an opportune moment to advance a popular grass-roots education policy like shared education. I have to say that the Committee has not taken a formal view on this at this time. Again, I will say a little more on that when I speak as an individual Member.

I turn to amendment No 4, which is about the community use of school premises. Although, again, the Committee has not taken a formal view on the need for a statutory duty in this regard, Members were certainly supportive of enhanced community participation with schools. Indeed, the Committee, only a few months ago, scrutinised and generally endorsed the Department’s guidance on enhancing community access to school buildings.

11.45 am

I will now speak as a DUP MLA. As you are aware, we have tabled a number of petitions of concern, and we argue that they are essential to protect the integrity of the Bill. Education Bills have a history of being picked over by sectoral interests, and this Bill is about the replacement of five education and library boards with a single authority. This is not ESA by the back door; this Bill is finely balanced. We feel that the amendments that we have petitioned against are either unnecessary, as provisions already exist in law, or overstep and unbalance the Bill. This is about the settlement that was established under the 1986 Order, and it is not against integrated education or any other sector, as Mr Lunn said. As Mr Lunn also said, the DUP wants to see all children educated together. We see shared education as one step towards that, but we do not believe in artificially forcing that process either.

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way?

Miss M McIlveen: The DUP objects to amendment Nos 1, 2 and 5. Quite simply, the legislation already exists with regard to integrated education in article 64 of the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 —

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way?

Miss M McIlveen: If you just let me finish this point.

— and article 89 of the Education (Northern Ireland) Order 1998. Those provisions are not being removed by this Bill. The amendments are therefore unnecessary. There is little point to rehashing the provisions of other legislation. The Department already funds NICIE and CnaG to promote the interests of the integrated education and Irish-medium sectors respectively. I am sure that a further body being required to promote those interests is not needed and would, in fact, be confusing and unhelpful in an already overcrowded system.

Mr Lunn: I thank the Chair for giving way. She used the word “forcing”: where is the force? Perhaps she could explain to me what leads her to think that there is any compulsion or force involved. This is merely a mild strengthening of a duty that is already there and has been there all those years. You talk about another body being introduced; no other body is being introduced. In fact, we are going from five bodies to one. We just want to put into the Bill what is effectively already there, with just a tiny tweak, and it is spooking the DUP.

Miss M McIlveen: I thank the Member for his intervention. Perhaps he would prefer that I use the phrase “artificially incentivising” rather than “forcing” in respect of that. We believe that it is unnecessary.

We are concerned to a degree about amendment No 8, which talks about using the affirmative resolution procedure. We think that that may cause unnecessary delay, given that we are looking for essential provisions to be made. The amendment would mean that any supplementary, incidental, consequential or transitional provision that was needed or was appropriate to make the legislation effective would need to be laid before the Assembly after passing through the Education Committee. That could add a number of weeks to the process, so we have a concern about that. In saying that, we are willing to work with anyone to refine that, and, certainly, if the Ulster Unionist Party is perhaps inclined to look at how it wishes to proceed with that, we will discuss it.

The DUP is more than content to support amendment Nos 3 and 4, tabled by Mr McCallister. It is stated DUP policy that we support shared education. Our party leader has led the way on shared education. As I outlined earlier, the Education Committee has not yet reached a formal view and will be looking at this further. If the Member is still inclined to proceed with his amendment, some refinement of it may be needed at Further Consideration Stage. We will reserve our position in regard to that. Since my party leader has brought the issue to the fore, there has been a great deal of debate about the interpretation of the phrase, usually to suit specific sectoral interests. A common definition definitely needs to be finalised. While we know what we would like that to be, I would like to see it put on a statutory footing.

As a party, we are happy to support the community use of school premises, as proposed by Mr McCallister. Indeed, I recall that, a number of years ago, Mr McNarry proposed to bring forward a private Member’s Bill in respect of that issue. At that time, we were happy to support him as well. The 1989 Order created an aspiration for schools to be used in that way. There is little doubt that a large number of schools have opened up their premises for such use. I certainly see that across my constituency. Schools have valuable assets that are grant-funded from the public purse. At the same time, we have councils that are being pressurised into providing buildings and facilities. That really amounts to a duplication of provision. This also assists schools by providing additional income. How it is managed will require some focus. I am pleased to note that Mr McCallister has proposed an amendment creating a standing committee for the new authority to look at that. Although that amendment will be debated later, we are content to support it.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Like the Member who spoke previously and Mr Lunn before her, I welcome the opportunity to speak today on this. I take on board Trevor Lunn’s comments about the potential that today had to be a good day for education, but it may be a missed opportunity. I do not want to say that I agree with him entirely, but I think that commentators and education sectors out there will look on the actions of the DUP here today as being yet another missed opportunity to put out the hand of friendship to different sectors and show goodwill and reciprocation —

Mr McCausland: Will the Member give way?

Mr Hazzard: Go ahead.

Mr McCausland: Does the Member agree that it is somewhat presumptuous of him to express a view and then attribute it to education sectors? There might be different views in different sectors. It is just a possibility that the Member might want to consider.

Mr Hazzard: I thank the Member for the intervention, rather pointless as it was. I said “I think”; I was expressing my opinion. I think that people will look critically at the behaviour of the DUP today and its use of petitions of concern. I was surprised that the Chair was able to say with a straight face that they were protecting the integrity of the Bill.

As Mr Lunn pointed out, we are seeing a somewhat irrational — I think that the word was “pathetic” — objection to Irish-medium education and integrated education. The DUP says that legislation already provides for the protection and promotion of integrated and Irish-medium education, but it also does for controlled. Education and library boards and the authority have a duty to provide quality education in controlled schools. As we are going to outline today, Sinn Féin, through the Minister originally and then the ESA Bill, which had funding for a controlled body that continues to do various pieces of work, is willing to show goodwill and say, "This is something we're ready to back", but, once again, the DUP seems totally unable to do that. Where is the reciprocated goodwill?

Sinn Féin is happy to support amendment Nos 1, 5 and 2, and we will oppose amendment Nos 3, 4 and 8. I will outline the reasons. Amendment No 3 places a duty on the authority to:

"encourage, facilitate and promote shared education."

As the Minister may outline later today, we do not have a legally defined and agreed definition of "shared education", so it will be somewhat difficult. I am sure that the Member will touch on that later. It is something that we will be able to return to in time. A further amendment concerns the community use of schools. This is an example of where good intentions — we touched on this yesterday — do not necessarily make good policy. The authority will have no function in relation to many of the maintained, integrated or Irish-medium schools, so I am not sure about the extent to which it would be able to do that.

Finally, on the idea of negative resolution, I agree with the Chair: it is customary practice for the Bill to do that. It is not giving carte blanche to tinker at will with the legislation; it is just technical. I am sure that the Minister will outline later that, if subordinate legislation was to come forward, it has to come to the Committee. Any Committee member or any Member can bring a prayer of annulment against anything that comes. That is my take on it, anyway.

We will support amendment Nos 1, 5 and 2, and we will oppose amendment Nos 3, 4 and 8.

Mr Rogers: I reiterate that the wasting of £17 million of public money on the Education and Skills Authority Bill was completely unacceptable. What do we want out of education? We want a good education system for all our children. The Minister has talked frequently about a strategic direction for this Bill, and that is what we need. We need our young people to have the right skills so that we can set our economy in fast-forward mode.

There are many things that we need to fix, and we all acknowledge the problems we have, whether they are in early years, in our curriculum, in numeracy and literacy — should I call them mathematics and English? — etc. We need to ensure that the new builds that have been announced are fast-tracked and that shovels are put in the ground to ensure that our construction industry gets those opportunities.

Our teachers have suffered from an initiative overload over the years. We had the NINA and the NILA and whatever else, and just when teachers were getting into them, things were changed with computer-based assessment, which was a bit of a disaster. The whole idea of being strategic is extremely important to where we will go with our education.

There are three issues. First, our young people need to get the opportunities to realise their potential. Secondly, our parents need support: they need to be encouraged and facilitated to ensure that their children achieve. Remember that 80% of education takes place outside the school. Thirdly, our teachers need to have time to do what they joined the profession to do: teach.

I will move on to the first group of amendments. We are happy to support the amendments regarding the functions and duties of the authority and technical matters. We are committed to an education system that provides the best possible education for every student in Northern Ireland. We firmly believe in parental choice. We also recognise that the various sectors that are available to parents and pupils here are indicative of our unique educational landscape. The Bill, in its original form, neglects to give adequate attention to the integrated and Irish-medium sectors and to voluntary grammars, which constitute a significant proportion of our system. Many people in those systems have highlighted the detrimental impact of the lack of legislative obligation. Making it a duty of the new authority to facilitate and promote them will help to make it a truly representative body.

We intend to support Mr Lunn's two amendments. We also intend to support Mr McCallister's amendments regarding shared education and the community use of schools. Like others, I urge caution on shared education, because we need to get it right. What do we mean by "shared education"? Do we mean two schools meeting once a year for a football match? Do we mean something on the level of the fantastic programme that we heard is happening in Cross and Passion College and Ballycastle High School at the Education Committee last week? Do we mean what is happening in integrated schools? I agree with other Members that there is quite a bit of work to be done.

We will support John McCallister's amendment on the community use of schools, but I urge caution. Do not put any more responsibility or pressure on our school leaders: they need support.

We will support Steven Agnew's amendment, but, like Mr Lunn, I have reservations about talking just about Catholic and Protestant because there are many people who are neither who wish to be involved in our education system.

We will also support the Ulster Unionist amendments.

Mr Kinahan: I am very grateful to be speaking. I apologise if you see me going in and out of the Chamber constantly throughout the day. If I can make a plug — it is an education plug — the Bloodhound, which is the vehicle that will try to break the world record for going at 1,000 mph next year or the year after in South Africa, is here for children to learn all about its technological aspects, which might inspire primary-school children to take up engineering and other sciences later. That is what it is there for, so I ask everyone to have a look at it so that we can push it and get more children into that world, because that is where the jobs are and where the future lies.

12.00 noon

I am very pleased that we have got here again and will, hopefully, get to an education authority that works for all of us. It is good to see it here. We wanted to see a leaner, more efficient body, and let us all try to get there.

I am going to have a slight grumble still that, if we were not doing accelerated passage, we would not have quite so many amendments and would probably not be having the petitions of concern. We would be sitting down and doing what we should be doing in this Building: talking to each other and finding the right way forward. However, we have got what we have got, and enough of a grump from me on that, but we do need to find a way to work out how we are going to get this body to work.

I hate seeing a petition of concern being used at any time. It is the wrong way to do any form of government. It is a sort of bullying to get your own way. I thought that those days were finished at school. I thought we even had legislation against bullying. Anyway, you know that this party wants a single shared education system. By that we are looking at a big shared education system with everything working in together. So it is great to know that the DUP is thinking along similar lines. I think we are, on the whole, all in here wanting to get in the same direction, but somehow, when it gets to wording, we all fall out.

What I really want to see from this Bill is a board that represents every single sector of school in proportion to the numbers of pupils they have, and that can change in the future as the changes carry on because the world will change. We know that it is an interim Bill, but not if it is an interim Bill for two or three years or one that could still be on the statute book in 10 or 20 years.

We have got to get something here that works, and yet I would like a little bit of direction from the Minister. We are told that we have a body here that is not meant to be making strategic decisions, yet, at the same time, it is going to be involved in policy, so actually it is. That goes back to my previous point that we have got to have a system that works well into the future and changes as our schools change.

I would love to be supporting amendment No 1, which is to encourage and facilitate integrated education. In one way, it already has all the support it needs, which is through the Belfast Agreement and the Acts that are in place. This amendment does not give it any more. Yes, it mentions it in the Bill and puts it there. We all need to be talking this through over the next two or three weeks before we get to the next stage. I want shared education, and shared is the bigger bubble which integrated is in, so I will be supporting John McCallister's amendment more. We have not got a definition for that, but I will touch on that in a minute.

Mr Lyttle: Will the Member give way?

Mr Kinahan: I am happy to give way, yes.

Mr Lyttle: Will the Member help us to understand a bit more what exactly he means by a single but shared education system and why he is not, therefore, able to support integrated education?

Mr Kinahan: Thank you. We had a debate on that a few months ago where we all managed to find different ways of trying to understand what shared education is. As I see it, it is a mechanism whereby we are all going towards the same aim, which is everyone learning together but accepting each other's religions and differences and working together.

At the moment, we have integrated, which is fantastic and does very well but has no religion involved in it. We have to recognise and accept people's religion. Before you say it, I recognise that within your family and church is your way of doing it, but there are so many other things. We have integrated schools with a big "I", which are integrated and fine, but we have a mass of controlled schools that are as good as integrated and mixed schools.

What I am trying to get to by pushing for a single shared system is everyone sharing as much as they can but recognising their religious differences and working together. It is so nearly the same, but shared is a bigger encompassment of it all. Until we get a proper definition, that is the only reason why I am not supporting the amendment.

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way?

Mr Kinahan: I will happily give way.

Mr Lunn: The Member is on record from only a few weeks ago as supporting integrated education — and I forget the exact term he used — with every bone in his body, every fibre of his being or everything he has ever believed in, but it seems that, when it comes to actually voting for it, he has a problem. It is OK to speak to it but not to vote for it.

Just to touch on the point, Mr Kinahan, about there being no religion in it. Integrated schools have religious instruction. They prepare Catholic children for the sacraments, to the entire satisfaction of the Catholic bishops. Do not tell me that Protestant children are in some way left out because of that. They cater for all.

Mr Kinahan: It is more the choice between integrated with a capital "I" and integrated with a small "i". I am not saying, "This week, in the Chamber, and on this particular amendment." I want us to agree that we will get it agreed by all of us over the next few weeks so that we get something that works. Putting it in as it is today is the wrong way, until we know exactly what we are doing with shared education and a whole lot of the other amendments. It is about the order that things come in. Let us use the time that we have to get something out of it. I fully support integrated education, but it is with a small "i" and it is about trying to get everyone into a shared system, of which integrated is very much a part.

Mr Hazzard: Will the Member give way?

Mr Kinahan: Yes, if I can remember where I am each time.

Mr Hazzard: I thank the Member for giving way. I welcome that he supports integration with a small "i", but surely that calls the Member's party's support for academic selection into question. You say that you want kids from all backgrounds to be together in the classroom. Academic selection keeps them apart. If you accept integration on a religious basis, surely it is also important to support it on a socio-economic basis, whether with a small "i" or big "I".

Mr Kinahan: I challenge you on the fact that it keeps them apart. It does keep different streams apart, and we have to find a way of sharing that too, which also fits into my vision of a shared future.

I am all for academic selection and getting our voluntary schools in, but we must find a way of spreading it to everyone. It is the same argument that we have all the time. Rather than destroy the best schools and reduce them all to the lowest common denominator, let us lift every school to get every advantage that we can from sharing. That is where I am coming from. We are not that far apart. It is just when it comes to the words and the names that it falls apart.

We will oppose amendment No 1 and, for the same reasons, amendment No 2, until we get an idea of where we are going with sharing. It is the same idea. Let us sit down over the next few months and try to work it out. Do not split hairs on it, which is what you are trying to do at the moment. Let us find a way that we can work through it so that the Irish language is included just as much.

As you have just heard, I am really pleased to see amendment No 3, on shared education, being brought forward. However, we need a definition. My feeling is that we want to support it and put it through but that we should maybe not move it, which I think is what the Department is asking for, and get a definition in place so that all the Bill can be thought through so that it fits together and is not just parties having a shot at one another.

As I have said all the way through, the vision is to try to get all types of schools sharing, academically and religiously. We do have a problem in that we spend a lot of time in the Chamber talking about the sectors and forget that a whole mass of other people in Northern Ireland are part of the education system too. We need to work for everybody. I want to see an education system that gives everybody a chance to learn, so that they can go and work anywhere in the world and that Northern Ireland can become a leader in the world. People would be brought up here to recognise everybody with mutual respect and a shared future, all pulling together. Northern Ireland would then find its place in the world.

I fully accept that what is in amendment No 4 is happening at the moment and do not mind it going in. We will support it. However, I do have one concern, as I have said before. We have a mass of council buildings. The more we push to use schools, we must find some way of working with councils to make sure that, when schools start pulling everyone in, as they should, we do not end up with a mass of other buildings that are not being used and other communities losing support because of, for example, distance or transport. We have to think our way through that one. However, we are supporting amendment No 4.

Amendment No 5, from the Green Party, is just too narrow for me. Again, I want us all to sit down and find the right way forward with this. At the moment, we are all jousting over our individual ways forward for schools. The amendment has a lot of the right values, but I do not want just Catholic and Protestant; I want everybody involved: Muslim, Jew or whatever.

Mr Lunn: I thank the Member for giving way. Will he not accept that the terms of amendment No 5 are only exactly what it already says in legislation? There is no difference. I have not heard the Member, in fairness to him, speak against it. He just does not seem able to support it. It does not make any difference.

Mr Kinahan: I sometimes wonder whether the Member ever listens to anything that I say. I just said very clearly that it only mentions Catholic and Protestant and that I want it to be broader than that. That is the only reason that I am not supporting it. It says a lot of the right things, but, again, we need to think through the wording. The point of what we are doing at the moment is to get everyone thinking and to come together and get it right for next time.

I take on board what the Chair of the Committee said about amendment No 8. We wanted to make sure that there was a system whereby nothing was brought through slyly by any Minister from any side in the future. We wanted something that would work and would make sure that we, as a democratic institution, have a chance to have our say. I am quite happy not to move the amendment today so that we can look again at how we bring it in so that there is a system of checks and balances and also speed in the system so that we can tackle things. It will be a fine balance. I go back to the point that I made at the beginning. Because of accelerated passage, everything is piling onto one Bill today, with not much chance for any of us to talk to one another and find collective ways forward.

Mr Newton: The Chair, speaking in her capacity as Chair and also as a member of the DUP, indicated what we will and will not support. When we were speaking about accelerated passage last week, I said that I felt that it was a good day for education. I still believe that this is a good day for education. Indeed, whilst there are differing views in the Chamber, I am still confident that we can find our way through those differing views and produce an education authority that will serve the pupils of Northern Ireland well in the future.

It is good to see the Chamber filled today with young people who are still in education and who are the future of Northern Ireland. It is good to see them here and interested in the debate, because it is they who will carry forward our future and who will set the barometers and the standards for society in the future. I have every confidence in the young people of Northern Ireland that they will do that responsibly.

There are those who are, to some degree, harking back to the ESA Bill, as perhaps outlined in their thinking in the amendments. I want to say a few words on each of them, because the Chair has covered them in detail from a DUP perspective.

The ethos, certainly from this side of the House, was that we were trying to get an education authority that would be good for education, would be flexible and innovative in how it would deliver and, indeed, proactive and reactive to the changing circumstances of education provision in the Province. The ESA Bill, in its attempt to do so, did nothing but divide the House to the extent that there could not possibly have been any progress. It was my feeling, and that of my colleagues, that we had reached a stage with the education authority Bill that we were going to move forward beyond the ESA and beyond the arguments. Of course there is a time for arguments, but there is a time for debate, a time to put forward your views and a time to resolve those views for the betterment of our education system.

There certainly was a feeling with ESA that there was no agreement and no recognition that all sectors — there obviously are sectors within our education system — were not on a level playing field. There is the potential to move beyond that discussion and to get us all working on that level playing field. There are arguments around it, and you can understand that. My position is that there is a need for the controlled sector to play on a level playing field, and you can understand the role that others play.

12.15 pm

I recognise the passion that Trevor Lunn has for the integrated sector. I want to say this, and this point was raised, I think, by Mr Kinahan as well: I chose integrated education for my children. I did not choose a school that had "integrated education" in its title; it was not identified as such. My wife and I chose to send our children to Methodist College, a school that, from its foundation, has opened its doors to children and pupils from all backgrounds, both religious backgrounds and racial backgrounds. It is a fine example of how integrated education works without having the word “integrated” in the title of a school. It does not stand outside the controlled sector — it stands within it — but it opens its doors to children from all backgrounds. Indeed, there are a growing number of schools in the controlled sector that do exactly the same.

There is an amendment around shared education. The party leader has spoken on that, and the Chair has indicated how we want to take it forward. However, there is no Committee view on what shared education is or what it means. Indeed, the Committee’s inquiry into shared education has just started.

Mr Kinahan also referred to what I suppose is a paragon within the circumstances of education. The principals of two schools in Ballycastle gave evidence to the Education Committee on shared education. You could not have faulted those principals on their approach, enthusiasm, leadership and responsibilities. Indeed, one of the principals indicated that he felt that he had taken a major step forward when Ballycastle High School and Cross and Passion College had embarked on that road. One of the milestones that he measured progress by was when he saw a hockey stick sitting side by side with a hurling stick in one of his classrooms.

Mr Lunn: I thank the Member for giving way, and I am sorry to have to take him back a wee bit. He specified Methodist College as a perfect example of natural integration. I completely agree with him, and there are plenty of other examples, such as Dominican College, my old school — BRA — and St Columbanus’ College. We all know them. I think that Mr McCausland also went to BRA; where did I go wrong? The point is this: why, if you are going to cite good examples of where Catholic, Protestant and other children are educated together, would you oppose an extension of that principle? That is it in simple terms. Why support one but not the other?

Mr Newton: I am not supporting one and objecting to the other as it stands. What I am saying is that, on the point of integrated education — I understand that Mr Lunn is the product of integrated education but not of the integrated sector. You can see what a fine job the truly integrated sector has done with Mr Lunn. It is evidenced there.

Mr McCausland: Will the Member give way?

Mr Newton: I am happy to give way.

Mr McCausland: Would the Member note that the same school produced Basil McCrea?

Mr Newton: Well —

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way?

Mr Newton: I am happy to give way.

Mr Lunn: I just want to make the point that BRA was not really integrated in my day, to be honest. I was in BRA when the first Roman Catholic arrived at the school. He joined our form at junior certificate level, and it was a minor sensation because, until then, we only had, effectively, Protestants and a fairly substantial Jewish population. It has moved on, and it is good to see.

Mr Newton: I turn to amendment No 4, which is on community use. There is no doubt that there is a greater movement towards schools and community and schools and councils working together on this issue, and it is an important issue. It is an important issue, even in terms of the encouragement of the well-being of the population in the area and, indeed, the health of the local population. Indeed, it is something to be encouraged.

Specifically on amendment No 5, there are differing views on this, obviously. As we have already said, there is not a constant view of integrated education. However, it seems a little hypocritical for Mr Hazzard to indicate in favour of amendment No 5 but then indicate that he will vote against the shared education amendment. That seems —

Mr Hazzard: Thanks to the Member for giving way. On a point of clarification, I am totally in support of shared education. The fact is that we do not have an agreed and confirmed definition of what shared education is. That will be forthcoming in the months and years ahead. I just think that the amendment is not timely.

Mr Newton: I thank the Member for that clarification.

The headline in today’s ‘Irish News’ shows the differing views:

“CCMS tells ministers to stop promoting integrated education”.

There is a barrier and a hurdle to be gotten over, and, if we were to go ahead and adopt amendment No 5, it would, in fact, place the Bill in much more difficult circumstances than we all envisaged the Bill to be in when we debated it last week.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call Mr Pat Sheehan. If you need a few minutes beyond 12.30 pm to finish your remarks, I am happy with that.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I speak in support of amendment Nos 1, 2 and 5, and I oppose amendment Nos 3, 4 and 8.

I will start with amendment No 8. We will oppose that amendment for the reasons that have already been articulated by my colleague Chris Hazzard. There is no need for me to go into them again.

On the amendment relating to shared education, there was some toing and froing across the Chamber a moment ago. It is clear that there are some excellent models of shared education. Indeed, last week, we had the principals of Ballycastle High School and Cross and Passion College at the Committee. A few Members have already mentioned that. It is an absolutely excellent model of sharing resources. Everyone at the Committee that day was very impressed by the model of sharing that is working and working very well in Ballycastle. However, both principals agreed, as did a couple of academics who were in the Committee afterwards, that, while that model works in Ballycastle, it may not work in other areas in the North, particularly in areas that were affected to a greater extent by the conflict. I am talking about interface areas such as in north Belfast, where the model that exists in Ballycastle might not necessarily work as well.

While we have examples and models of sharing, we do not have a clear legal definition. Miss McIlveen said that she supported shared education, but a common definition needs to be finalised. She would also like support for shared education to be put on a statutory footing. I cannot understand how you can put something on a statutory footing when you do not have a legal definition of it. There is a clear legal definition of integrated education but not of shared education. As my colleague Chris Hazzard said, hopefully we can come to an agreed definition of what we want shared education to be at some stage in the future.

Amendment No 4 relates to the issue of encouraging, facilitating and promoting the community use of school premises. Again, we are asking the new authority to do something that is not within its remit; it is not within its gift. According to the evidence that we have, almost 80% of schools already allow their premises to be used by communities. The fact is that many of the schools would not be under the control of the new authority. Maintained, integrated and Irish-medium schools would be outside the remit of the new authority. They could not in any way force the managing authorities of those schools to allow them —

Mr McCallister: Will the Member give way?

Mr Sheehan: Sure.

Mr McCallister: Does the Member accept that all those schools receive public money?

Mr Sheehan: Of course I do. Is there another point you want to make on that?

Mr McCallister: I am happy to elaborate. If schools are getting public money, we should, of course, call the tune on how much activity goes on in them. We need to sweat all the assets that we have. Schools should be at the hub of communities, and I want that to be promoted and invested in. We cannot afford to have schools that receive public money not being used for the good of the community.

Mr Sheehan: I have no disagreement with anything that the Member has said, but, if the authority does not have legal ownership of the schools, it cannot force the managing authorities to make them available for community use. While I agree with the sentiment that is being expressed in that amendment, I do not think that it would in any way obligate managing authorities to accept the dictate of the new authority. Simply on that basis, I oppose that amendment. I do not have any —

Mr Craig: I thank the Member for giving way. In my bitter experience of the authorities that oversee schools, it is not the real authorities — the boards of governors — that are the sticking block. I find that, when it comes to the main authorities, which, in today's sense, are the five boards, there is always an issue, so I fully agree with John on this point. There must be something in there that incentivises the new authority to encourage the sharing of these facilities, because, at present, it is often the authorities — the boards — that are the blocking points to their being used as community facilities. Only a few weeks ago, I had a major argument with the local board about the use of a football club and pitches in one of our schools. It is absolutely imperative that we have John's amendment to encourage that local use.

Mr Sheehan: Again, I do not disagree with anything the Member said, except the last bit. I do not think that the amendment would encourage the boards to follow the course of action that you refer to. I wholeheartedly agree that schools should be the hub of any community and their facilities should be available to the community, whether they are educational, sporting or whatever. The amendment on its own will not bring that about. For that reason and that reason only I oppose the amendment.

12.30 pm

I will move on to amendment Nos 1 and 2, on the issues of integrated and Irish-medium education, and amendment No 5, which is a similar amendment on integrated education. When it comes to the DUP, I am not sure whether it supports integration or is opposed to it — the leader was out not that long ago saying that the DUP supported integration in the whole education system — so I am a bit concerned about that. They regularly talk about this level playing field; the fact is that in terms of Irish-medium education and integrated education, there is no level playing field. That is why there is a legal obligation on the Minister to encourage and facilitate both those sectors. They are not even at the starting line yet, and they need to be brought up to the starting line. That is why that obligation is there. That is why the Minister is under that obligation to encourage and facilitate. It strikes me that, given what DUP Members have said about integrated education, they support it, but why are they opposing it today? It seems to me that we get back to the same old story: they are totally opposed to anything to do with Irish-medium education.

Mr McCausland: Will the Member give way?

Mr Newton: Will the Member give way?

Mr Sheehan: Let me finish the point, and I will give way to the two of you. The point is this: in order to pretend that they do not have some sort of bigotry against Irish-medium education, they decide to oppose Irish-medium education and integrated.

Mr McCausland: Thank you for the opportunity to intervene. The key point for me is not that the new authority should not encourage or facilitate anything but that it should be done on a basis of equality. There should not be preferential treatment and a preferential responsibility put on the new authority to promote one over another, because, if there is a reference in the legislation that says that it is a duty to promote and encourage a particular section and that responsibility is not applied to others, there is a preferential position and a discriminatory position being delivered. I hope that the other Member will help with that answer.

Mr Sheehan: If Mr Newton wants to make a contribution —

Mr Newton: My comment was along the same lines, but I am grateful to the Member for giving way to my colleague.

Mr Sheehan: If we are talking about equality, I hope that the Member will also apply that criterion to membership of the board. In respect of equality and preferential treatment, as the Member called it, we make disabled accesses for people who are disabled because they need to be treated in an equal way. Sporting organisations organise competitions in particular age groups for children so that there will be equal access or equal treatment for all children in that age group. It is not a matter of preferential treatment; it is a matter of equality. On that point, I will finish.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has arranged to meet immediately after the lunchtime suspension. I propose, therefore, by leave of the Assembly, to suspend the sitting until 2.00 pm. When the House returns, the first item of business will be Question Time.

The sitting was suspended at 12.34 pm.

Oral Answers to Questions

Regional Development

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: We will start with listed questions.

Park-and-ride Facilities: Lisburn

1. Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline his plans for extending park-and-ride facilities at Sprucefield and the general Lisburn area. (AQO 6880/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I am very pleased to say that the park-and-ride site at Sprucefield has been an outstanding success, with a dedicated 20-minute service running to Belfast's Great Victoria Street bus station during peak hours at a cost of £6.10 for a return journey or £22.50 for a week.

More and more commuters are seeing the benefits of switching to public transport, which is afforded priority over other traffic on the inbound bus lanes on the M1. The existing site holds up to 320 vehicles and is currently operating close to capacity. As such, my Department intends, subject to the proposal clearing the necessary statutory procedures, to provide a new 650-space park-and-ride site with full facilities at Sprucefield to expand the existing provision in that area. In addition, Translink currently has proposals at the early feasibility stages of development to provide a park-and-ride facility on the former college of further education site at Knockmore Road, Lisburn. Delivery of that project will be subject to the necessary statutory approvals and availability of funding.

Mrs Hale: I thank the Minister for his answer. Will he assure the House that park-and-ride will not hinder further economic development at Sprucefield, Lisburn?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for her supplementary question. My view is that park-and-ride will complement retail and, indeed, better and easier connectivity. It has been an undoubted success at Sprucefield, and I look forward, hopefully, to bringing forward the new scheme that will increase, enhance and improve it.

Mr McAleer: Is the Minister minded to look at the possibility of extending the bus lane on the M1 hard shoulder to reduce journey times and incentivise motorists to take public transport into the city?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for asking that question. It is something that we are considering. Obviously, whilst there may well be benefits in terms of congestion, we would also have to ensure that there was immediate and available access for emergency vehicles etc. However, we are looking at that, and I hope to say something about it in the not-too-distant future.

Mrs Dobson: The Minister will be well aware of my lobbying on behalf of park-and-ride facilities, particularly in my constituency of Upper Bann. Will he outline what plans

Translink has to progress additional sites in this and the next financial years?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for her question. Translink has proposals to take forward seven park-and-ride rail and bus schemes in 2014-15 and 2015-16. For rail, they include Ballymoney, Whiteabbey, Cullybackey and Moira, and for bus, they include the Ballymartin area of Belfast and, of particular attention to her — and I hope she will be pleased — we intend to develop sites at Portadown and Lurgan in the Upper Bann constituency. I have no doubt that she will be pleased with that news.

Roads Maintenance: Spend

2. Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development how much has been spent on roads maintenance in each of the past three years per mile of road. (AQO 6881/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Maintaining the road network continues to be one of my Department's highest priorities. In Northern Ireland, there are 16,200 miles of publicly maintained roads, including 5,800 bridges and 295,000 illuminated assets, which include street lights. Maintenance funding comes from my Department's capital and resource budgets. Capital structural maintenance is carried out to improve the long-term condition of the network and includes activities such as resurfacing and surface dressing, whereas the resource budget is used to fund the day-to-day maintenance operations such as patching, which is part of structural maintenance, grass cutting and winter service.

It has been independently established that some £133 million at 2012 prices is required annually to maintain the network. The current structural maintenance budget is some £65 million, leaving a shortfall of £68 million.

During the past three financial years the respective amounts spent on structural maintenance were £7,633 per mile in 2011-12, £6,929 per mile in 2012-13, and £8,291 per mile in 2013-14.

Mr McNarry: I thank the Minister for his very interesting answer. I picked up on him using the word "shortfall". Minister, your Department says that, of the average £160 road tax income received per vehicle, it spent only £118 in 2010 and upped that last year to £138. That is a shortfall of £44 million and £23 million respectively, raised by our motorists but not spent here. In light of that, will you give an undertaking to the House to obtain the transfer of excise duty and annually publish the amount raised and the amount spent on road maintenance?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his supplementary question. He poses me quite an interesting challenge, which I have no difficulty in attempting, but I assume that it will mean that I will be actively engaged with DFP and Executive colleagues as we seek to make that change and see whether benefit could therefore be accrued. I have consistently argued the case for adequate finance for roads maintenance and structural issues around the Executive table. The Member, as a member of the Committee for Regional Development, will accept that. Indeed, the Committee has been pleased and has given me support for that in the past, and I hope that that will continue.

Mr Givan: The Minister will be aware — as, I am sure, all Members are — of examples where resurfacing schemes have taken place only for public and private utility companies to come in very soon after that and dig up the roads, then leave them in a condition that taxpayers often find unacceptable. What more can be done by the Department to prevent those circumstances from taking place and, when they do, what responsibility can be put on those utility companies that carry out that work to make sure that it is restored to the manner in which it was before they started the work?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. I realise that there are occasions when that appears to happen and, indeed, does happen. We try to minimise those as much as possible by being aware of schemes being undertaken by the different utility companies. Of course, we have a hold-back period of up to a year if we are not entirely satisfied that it is absolutely necessary to be done at that time. Of course, if there are cases where the repair work carried out by any of the utility companies, or, indeed, anyone else, is found to be unsatisfactory or substandard, we are very active in ensuring that that work is done to an acceptable level, even if it means insisting that contractors return. It is something that I am personally interested in, and I give the Member an assurance that we limit the number of cases. I think that it has improved over recent years, and it is something that we always bear in mind.

Mr Dallat: I am being very careful not to shoot the messenger, because he inherits an awful legacy of neglect in terms of road safety, but can the Minister go on accepting the crumbs from the rich man's table and depending on monitoring rounds to shore up a maintenance programme that is deteriorating by the day?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for the point that he makes. I would rather have a budget that is differently structured. I think that it would make more sense for that budget to be established and known at the start of a financial year. It would certainly make for better planning. It would also give us a better chance to get more benefit for the money that we spend in terms of the timing of work being carried out. I have been making that argument around the Executive table and to the Finance Minister, and I will continue to do so.

Mr Ó hOisín: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire. Could the Minister give us an estimate of how much moneys might come to road maintenance from the October monitoring round?

Mr Kennedy: The Member should know that we are bidding for significant moneys in October monitoring. On capital resource, we have bid for something like £45 million. Obviously, we could spend that money without fear or favour. Early indications are that we are not going to receive that amount. In fact, it may be that only one third of that amount is available for structural maintenance. I have to say that I am concerned about that, because I feel that the network needs to be constantly maintained. As we approach the deeper winter period in particular, I think that it is important that we get the opportunity to spend as much as possible on structural maintenance and reduce the likelihood of accidents or incidents and, indeed, the potential for claims against the Department.

Belfast Rapid Transit System

3. Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Belfast rapid transit system. (AQO 6882/11-15)

7. Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Belfast rapid transit system. (AQO 6886/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: With the Principal Deputy Speaker's permission, I would like to reply to questions 3 and 7 together, as they are on the same subject.

The implementation phase of the Belfast rapid transit project began in May of this year. Work is progressing well on the construction of a new 520-space park-and-ride facility at Dundonald. It is anticipated that this will be operational in December and be served by existing Translink services prior to Belfast rapid transit becoming operational in 2017. Work is also progressing on the sections of the Belfast rapid transit route on the Upper Newtownards Road between Sandown Road and Knock Road, and on the Falls Road between Grosvenor Road and Whiterock Road. The works have been well publicised in advance, and details of the impacts on local traffic are available on my Department's TrafficwatchNI website.

In May of this year, I committed funding to enable the procurement of the rapid transit vehicles to commence. It will take approximately three years from procurement to delivery of the proposed fleet of 38 vehicles. The new Belfast rapid transit system is scheduled to become operational in 2017, subject to the completion of the necessary statutory processes and the availability of finance.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Minister for his answer. I am pleased about and welcome the development in east and west Belfast. Can the Minister inform the House whether he has any plans for or ideas as to when the great constituency of North Belfast will be included in the rapid transit system?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his supplementary. While I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, I think we were able to identify the question that he might ask. The pilot network that my Department is developing will connect east Belfast, west Belfast and the Titanic Quarter, and will go through the city centre. However, my Department intends to extend the network to the north and south of the city. Of course, this is subject to the success of the pilot routes and the availability of funding. My Department is engaging with those responsible for proposed developments on potential routes outside the current pilot network, including DSD and the University of Ulster, to ensure as far as possible that the future provision of Belfast rapid transit (BRT) to key areas is not prejudiced. So, I think that there is some good news.

2.15 pm

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I start by congratulating the Minister on the successful cycling conference that the Department held last week. Cyclists often come across problems with bus lanes. Can the Minister outline what vehicles will or will not be allowed in BRT lanes and how discussions about that are progressing, as this will obviously have an impact on travel times and sustainable transport?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his supplementary question and, indeed, almost blushed at his high praise for the cycling conference last week. [Laughter.] I pay particular tribute to the organisers of that in my Department's cycling unit. They excelled themselves. The speakers that we engaged were high quality; there was huge interest; and I thank the Member and other Members, including the Chair of the Regional Development Committee, who attended or dropped in to hear some of the benefits of cycling. The conference will be put on the website at some stage, so that others who were not there will be able to share in its success.

The Member will know that we are going forward with the model of bus — some people call it the bendy bus — that has the capacity to hold more passengers. Cyclists, of course, will be allowed into bus lanes, as they are at present. We see very much the opportunity for the rapid transit system to provide huge benefits for the city of Belfast. We also expect to have an integrated ticketing system, and, of course, it will also be incorporated into and integrated with the new Belfast bike hire scheme, which is scheduled to come into operation early next year. I am aware that the Member is a keen cyclist. Those with folding bicycles will be able to carry them onto BRT vehicles.

Mr McKinney: I assure the Minister that my question is not facetious; sometimes, Members have to call it: does he agree with me that progress on the Belfast rapid transport system is far from rapid and, given what he has outlined, is in fact going at a snail's pace?

Mr Kennedy: Whilst I am grateful to the Member for his supplementary question, I am afraid that I do not agree with him. We have pursued this scheme with considerable vigour and continue to do so. We have learnt important lessons from other major cities, including Nantes. We have engaged with stakeholders and other interested parties, including those from the residential areas that will be impacted. It is not a piece of work that you can simply impose on communities or create magically, as it were. We have adopted the right approach. I hope very much that he recognises the benefits of a rapid transit system and will be a little less cynical or perhaps even less negative about it. I am happy to ask officials to give him a full briefing to reassure him.

Mr Kinahan: As we are talking about rapid transit, I know that the Minister has visited the Bloodhound outside on the apron and wonder whether he might adopt that as the departmental car or use some of its technology for faster transit in the future. [Laughter.]

Mr Kennedy: I am conscious of the number of bloodhounds in the Chamber, without having to leave it. To be serious, I congratulate the Member on making the arrangements so that the Bloodhound could visit Parliament Buildings. I recommend that those who have not had the chance to at least look at it go and do so. However, as opposed to a high-speed vehicle of that nature, which is, I think, capable of travelling at 1,000 miles per hour at certain locations — not at Parliament Buildings, I hasten to add — we are about to deliver a rapid transit system for Belfast that will assist people greatly and enhance public transport.

Mr Lyttle: I welcome the introduction of improved public transport in the constituency of East Belfast. How important does the Minister think that effective bus lane enforcement will be to the success of the Belfast rapid transit system?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. One of the key components of the Belfast rapid transit system will be using bus lanes as priority bus lanes — they should do what it says on the tin. Motorists who abuse the instructions given to them are causing difficulties and further congestion in the system in Belfast city centre. That is regrettable. As the Member knows, we are looking at a proposal to introduce enforcement fines. I hope that that will have the support not only of the Regional Development Committee and the Member but of the House generally, because I think that, whilst carrots work in some cases, sometimes, we also need a bit of stick.

Borewell Scheme

4. Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the borewell scheme. (AQO 6883/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The rural borewells scheme, funded by my Department and administered by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development, was launched on 6 June 2012. The principal aim of the scheme is to provide a quality water supply for existing properties that have never been served by a public water main. The first year of the scheme, launched in 2012, assisted 24 properties to obtain a quality water supply for the first time. The 2013-14 scheme assisted 38 properties. The 2014-15 scheme is scheduled to assist approximately 28 properties. I anticipate that a total of 90 householders will have received a new borewell and/or treatment by the end of the third year of the scheme and have the assurance of a quality, safe-to-drink water supply for the first time.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister for his answer.

The scheme was welcomed at the time, Minister, particularly in rural areas where people lived far from the mains water system. I welcome the numbers that you outlined today. Will you give me a breakdown by county of the number of households that have availed themselves of the scheme?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question and for his support for the scheme. As I said, it is expected that 90 householders will have received a new borewell and/or treatment by the end of the third year. An initial assessment exercise carried out by my Department at the beginning of the project identified three areas that had large numbers of unserved properties: the glens of Antrim, the Sperrins and south Armagh. That initial assessment has largely been confirmed by the applications received by the DARD officials who operate the scheme. By the end of the third year, the geographical spread across Northern Ireland will be as follows: 36 borewells in Antrim; five in Armagh; eight in Down; six in Fermanagh; 15 in Londonderry; and 20 in Tyrone. Anyone with any mathematical prowess will know that adding those up makes 90.

Mr Byrne: I thank the Minister for his help in trying to address this issue. Does he have any idea how many households in Northern Ireland are still without a public water supply? Does he accept that technology should be developed that could enable mains water to be pumped even to highland areas in some way?

Mr Kennedy: The Member raises an interesting point. The cost involved in providing a mains water supply is always a challenge. The benefit of this scheme is that it assisted householders to get a cleaner and better supply than they had hitherto been in receipt of. Whilst I listened carefully to what the Member said, I think that there are excessive costs in many of the particularly rural locations. That has to be borne in mind. That has been one of the benefits of the borewell scheme. I hope that the Member will accept that.

Street Lights

5. Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the public safety implications of not repairing or replacing faulty street lights. (AQO 6884/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As the Member will know, my Department is facing significant resource budget constraints, and I am not in a position to spend money that I do not have. Consequently, I have had to take a number of difficult decisions, including the suspension of works orders to external contractors who were responsible for the repair of approximately three quarters of the street lights that go out.

I readily acknowledge that, since street lighting is provided as a road safety measure, these cuts have the potential to lead to safety issues for road users during the hours of darkness. I assure you that, to deal with the health and safety implications, I have set priorities for dealing with street lighting faults. Priority will be given to those faults that present an electrical hazard to members of the public, and contractors will still be employed to deal with those faults.

My Department's operations and maintenance staff, who can provide around 25% of the overall resource that is required to fix street lighting faults, will endeavour to repair as many lights as possible, prioritising large groups of lights which are out and then individual lights that have failed.

Regrettably, the impact of the cuts means that, in all likelihood, a large number of street lights will be out over the winter months. I can tell the Member and indeed the House that currently some 11,261 lights are out right across Northern Ireland. This is not the service that I would like to provide, but is the inevitable consequence of the budgetary pressures that my Department is facing.

Mr McCarthy: I thank the Minister for his answer, although I am far from being satisfied. At a recent meeting of the Committee for Regional Development, the Minister and his Department informed the Committee that where the Department provides street lighting, it has a duty to maintain it. The Minister has gone on to say that he has cancelled the contractors who maintain those lights. How can he quickly rectify the situation and gain some credibility, bearing in mind the dangers that certainly senior citizens and old people will have in darkened streets and roads?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful the Member for his supplementary question. I am not sure about gaining credibility for me; I think that what would be more important would be to gain more money for my Department. That would be a big start, actually.

The Member has raised the legal aspect of it. The Department has received legal advice on this issue. It will continue to inspect roads and footways as per the normal inspection regime. All defects will be recorded as normal. However, due to the financial constraints, defects may not be repaired as quickly as normal, and all repairs will be prioritised on the basis of safety. My Department will continue to robustly investigate and defend public liability claims, with every case turning on its own facts. However, ultimately, it will be up to the courts to decide if the reduced standards comply with my Department's statutory duty. In short, I have to say to Mr McCarthy that if we had more money, we could deal with the situation.

Mr G Robinson: I realise and appreciate the financial constraints that the Minister is under. Can any special provision be made where pensioners' bungalows are unlit, particularly now coming into the winter months?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his sympathy for the financial position that I find myself in. I have outlined how we have been forced to prioritise things as a consequence of these cuts. It is not a scenario that I enjoy, relish or want to see. I would like to see it properly resourced. I can understand the impact on elderly, rural or more vulnerable people who live in areas where a street light provides an essential form of comfort, if you like, particularly on dark winter evenings.

2.30 pm

I repeat, again, that it is not that we are ignoring, or will ignore, lights that are out but they will simply have to be prioritised in a way that is consistent with what I have outlined.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: That ends the period for listed questions. We move to topical questions. Ms Maeve McLaughlin is not in her place; I call Mr Ian McCrea.

Magherafelt Bypass: Update

T2. Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Magherafelt bypass. (AQT 1642/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am not sure whether that is a topical question or a typical question from the Member. [Laughter.] Significant advance works are under way as part of the delivery of the £40 million Magherafelt bypass. Surveys have been completed to identify potential archaeological sites. Temporary fencing has been erected and trial pit excavations have been completed to help inform the detailed design under this design-and-build contract. It is anticipated that advance archaeological investigative trenching and vegetation clearance will start in November, for completion prior to the award of the main contract. The procurement of the main contract is well under way and the tender return date is 24 November 2014. Subject to there being no challenges to the award of the contract, construction work should commence early next year.

Mr I McCrea: I thank the Minister for his answer to my typical topical question. I do not apologise for raising the issue, as he and the colleague sitting beside him know that it is an important issue for the local constituency. I am glad that the Minister has confirmed that things are moving progressively. Will he ensure that the work that is done with consultants and Roads Service officials, in respect of dealing with the local farming community, is kept up to date so that the community knows exactly what is happening and that any impact on their property is reduced? That would certainly be helpful to them.

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his supplementary topical question, and I thank him for it. The scheme will bring huge benefit to the Magherafelt area and indeed that area generally. I think that the success of any scheme depends upon the cooperation extended and information given to local landowners, not only by the contractor but by the Department, in the early stages of the work. We have sought to do that and will continue to do so, and I hope very much that we can make progress and, indeed, enjoy the full cooperation of landowners and people in that area because, of course, there will be issues and challenges and there will undoubtedly be inconvenience to them. However, I think that, having waited 40 years for the scheme — as Mrs Overend continues to remind me — it is important to them that we move it forward as quickly as possible.

Gully Emptying

T3. Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Regional Development, at this time of year, with autumn winds, leaves falling down and floods, seemingly always in the same places, what priority he is giving to gully emptying, albeit with the financial constraints he is operating under. (AQT 1643/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. Indeed, the emptying of gullies is a very important issue. The Department seeks to maintain something like 550,000 gullies, and that is a considerable challenge. It becomes an even greater challenge when there is not enough in my resource budget to pay external contractors to do the work that they do. The main work of gully emptying is carried out by Transport NI staff. That represents about three quarters, or 75%, of the total work, so there is potential for the other 25% to be a challenge. I have outlined to the House before how we seek to try to deal with it. Certainly, we give priority to wet spots, where there are issues of recurring flooding or where it has taken place in the past, in addition to other factors.

Mr Lunn: I thank the Minister for his answer. Five hundred and fifty thousand is a fairly frightening total, but I guess that 500,000 of them do not actually cause too much of a problem. The problem is with what you call “wet spots”, and which I call hotspots. Severe damage can be caused by the simple failure to unblock a gully. I am sure that the Minister has been in houses that have flooded. A bad flood does more damage than a fire, in some cases, and takes much longer to sort out. I know that it is difficult, but is there any discretion in his budget to reallocate money from major projects that may be held up to the more simple but very useful operations that I am talking about?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for raising the issue. There are 550,000 gullies to be cleaned and emptied across Northern Ireland. I am not sure that the number that perhaps do not need careful or immediate attention is the number that he suggested. I sympathise with residents affected by flooding. Many homes experienced flooding late last week as a consequence of a high volume of rain; 40% of the average October rainfall fell in areas of Belfast over a period of seven hours last Thursday night. Simply, that volume is always in danger of overcoming any system. We continue to maintain to the best of our abilities. We are in the autumn season; we are coming in to the heavier winter season, with the falling of leaves. On a day like today, with strong winds, I have no doubt that even work done in advance to clean gullies over the last few days may well be nugatory, given the conditions that we have. That is the challenge that we have to deal with. We attempt to do so as efficiently as we can, but it is not helped when there are challenges to the budget. We will continue to bid for resources to deal with that. His suggestion of transferring resource to capital does not work and is not allowed under the rules.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I remind the Minister of the two-minute rule.

Car Parks: Security Measures

T4. Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Regional Development to advise what security measures are in operation at car parks attached to train stations, bus stations and park-and-ride facilities, given that he will be aware of the recent car thefts in the Newry area, some of which were cars parked at Newry railway station. (AQT 1644/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for her question. I join her in condemning those who engage in such activities. One hopes that individuals can be identified, that the PSNI can take appropriate action to put them before the courts, and that the courts can deal with them sufficiently.

There are issues of security. Of course, CCTV is deployed in many of our stations. I will look at the situation in relation to Newry station, which is sometimes more commonly known as Bessbrook station.

I undertake to look at that for the Member to see whether any additional measures can be put in place.

Mrs McKevitt: I welcome the Minister's response. Let us hope that some of the CCTV cameras have an infrared mode so that, when the lights go out, people are able to see the crime scene.

Will the Minister consider further security measures to ensure that users of public transport feel safe to leave their vehicles and know that they will be protected?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for her question. Of course, we will look at that as part of the issue. I am loath to highlight the problem to a scale that it discourages people and makes them feel that they will not be safe. There is no clear evidence to indicate that that is the case at any of our locations, and we want to build on the record levels for the use of public transport that we are enjoying. Security is important and being safe is very important, and those are key priorities, not only for me but for Translink.

Public Transport: Growth

T5. Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the financial pressures he is under, what measures are available to him to ensure continued growth in public transport, particularly to ease the pressure on the roads system at peak times. (AQT 1645/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I thank the Member for his question. I remain very positive about the progress that public transport has made over the last three-plus years.

On the bus side, numbers continue to be strong, with Metro showing the sort of steady progress that reflects its growing reliability and popularity. Rail, however, has been the star performer. Rail travel last year passed through the 13 million passenger journey barrier, taking it to levels not seen since the 1960s. I compare that to when we took over DRD, when 10 million passenger journeys were being made. Despite that programme, we have not reached a ceiling in rail. Further significant progress has been made on rail this year at the midpoint, and I expect that we may get close to 14 million journeys by the end of this financial year. If we reach that new high, I will no longer be saying, "record levels since the 1960s"; I will be taking pride in saying, "record levels since the 1950s". That is a change that I look forward to.

Mr Nesbitt: I thank the Minister for his answer and congratulate him on those record performances for public transport. Focusing on the road network, what measures are available to him within very constrained budgets to continue the growth of public transport and ease the pressures on our roads?

Mr Kennedy: I thank the Member for his warm congratulations. Despite the well-documented challenges facing my Department, I am determined to continue the progress that we have made in growing public transport in Northern Ireland.

The park-and-ride scheme is working well, and we will continue to increase the number of park-and-ride facilities, with seven new locations to come online in the next 18 months or so. You heard earlier where those will be.

I am pleased that we will be introducing some additional weekend rail services before the end of the year. That will give existing passengers greater choice and will act as an incentive to potential new passengers. We will work hard to keep any future fare increases at the level of inflation, and I will continue to press the Finance Minister on TaxSmart for rail travel, which is a measure that has the capacity to make public transport much cheaper.

Next month, we begin the £12 million refurbishment of the Enterprise service, which will greatly improve passenger service. Also, the introduction of audiovisual services on Metro buses will be positive for tourists as well as those who are blind and partially sighted.

Of course, I am pleased that Belfast rapid transit is being progressed and is still on target to be operational by 2017.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call Peter Weir for a quick question; no supplementary.

Car Parks: Development

T6. Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the locations and value of the strategic off-street car parks that he mentioned earlier as having been identified for local or regional development. (AQT 1646/11-15)

2.45 pm

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. Indeed, I am pleased that the Second Stage of the Bill transferring powers to local government for off-street parking was successfully moved earlier.

I was not sure whether the Member wanted a list for his constituency or more generally. His sign language is working very well. I thought that it was a film, but it is not. [Laughter.]

[Interruption.] And the same to you — oh, no, it wasn't that.

We will provide that information as quickly and as completely as possible.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: My sign tells me that the time is up. Thank you very much, Minister.

Social Development

Girdwood: Update

1. Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the application for development of the Girdwood site. (AQO 6894/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The development of Girdwood Park is well under way, with delivery of the entire plan a priority for not just my Department but right across central and local government. The infrastructure works for which my Department is responsible commenced recently, with completion due in autumn 2015. The outdoor sports pitch is expected to be delivered as part of that phase.

Construction is well under way on the Belfast City Council-led community hub, which is due to open in June 2015. Apex Housing has commenced construction of 60 housing units, which are due for completion in early 2016.

Looking at the remaining elements of the development, my Department is taking forward important preparatory work in the form of an economic appraisal to help to finalise plans for the indoor sports and mixed-use facilities, and that should be completed by March 2015. Development of the housing element along Clifton Park Avenue remains a priority and is likely to be the final phase of development.

Mr A Maginness: I take this opportunity to congratulate the Minister on his appointment, but —

Mr Storey: But? [Laughter.]

Mr A Maginness: — but could I also thank him for his detailed response. However, there is, as the Minister will know, a pressing housing need in north Belfast. Sixty units have been put forward by Apex Housing, but there is clearly a need for further housing. Will the Minister review the allocation of numbers of houses in that area?

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for his congratulations. Being in the post for a number of weeks now, I well know the challenges that are confronting me.

The Girdwood project is buying in key component parts to deliver a worthwhile project. I intend to visit the facility in the not-too-distant future to see it at first hand.

Mr Maginness referred to housing need. The demand for housing across north Belfast is always the issue. Since coming to post, I have become well aware of the challenges and sensitivities around housing. I will be conscious of those sensitivities and concerns. I trust that the one thing that the Member, and other Members, will find is that I will listen to those concerns and, more importantly, hear them.

Demand for housing across north Belfast remains high, with 1,438 applicants in housing stress at March 2014. The projected need for 2014-19 is 1,236 units. To help to address the need in that locality through the housing programme, 76 units are planned in 2014-15, 86 in 2015-16 and 121 in 2016-17.

However, I have to say that, as the Member will be aware, a review of housing policy is under way. I will take a particular look at that over the next weeks and months, because I have a concern about the way in which the Housing Executive categorises homelessness and the waiting list and the way in which it presents housing need. I am more than happy to meet the Member and other Members to have that discussion.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: This is my first opportunity to warn the Minister about the two-minute rule. [Laughter.]

Ms P Bradley: I am sure that the Minister is aware of the sensitivities about the site. What steps has he taken to ensure community engagement?

Mr Storey: Principal Deputy Speaker, that is not the first time that somebody has tried to call time on me. I appreciate your reminder.

I am very conscious of the concerns and sensitivities. It follows on from the comments that I made to Mr Maginness. Community engagement continues, first and foremost through the Girdwood community forum, which has a cross-community membership and provides a useful platform to address a range of issues. There have been community-based events to help to raise awareness, improve relationships and contribute to ideas. In response to some of the issues raised, I recently approved the issue of a community newsletter to some 18,000 homes in the area to provide clarity and certainty on government's commitment to the delivery of the entire plan. As the Member will know, if there are any particular concerns, she can relay them to me, and I will be only too happy to give them serious consideration.

Social Housing: 50:50 Policy

2. Ms Ruane asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will review the 50:50 allocation policy for social housing in Belfast city centre to ensure any future policy decisions will be based on addressing objective need. (AQO 6895/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive and registered housing associations allocate properties through the housing selection scheme. Applicant households are awarded points on the basis of their objective housing need. Properties are generally allocated to the person with the highest points. That is the case throughout Northern Ireland and will continue to be the case in Belfast city centre.

Ms Ruane: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Comhgairdeas leis an Aire as a phost nua. I join my colleague Alban Maginness in congratulating the Minister on his new post. I very much look forward to working with him.

I welcome the fact that the Minister has clarified that points are given on the basis of need. It is good to have that on record. Is he aware that large parts of Belfast city centre are now in dereliction? Will he let me know what his plans are to work proactively with local communities so that there is social housing to address the current waiting list?

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for her words. Obviously, the previous Minister and I have had exchanges in the past, and I have no doubt that that will continue in the future.

We need to remember a key element about the city centre, which is that we want to ensure that it is a shared space not only for recreational activity and economic prosperity but for housing. The original question referred to a 50:50 allocation policy: there is no such policy. The Member will be aware that Participation and the Practice of Rights (PPR) recently raised concerns on that issue. However, I assure the Member that the way in which we deliver housing will continue to be on the basis of need. I also remind the Member and the House that research was carried out by the University of Cambridge and the University of Ulster on a fundamental review of social housing allocation policy. That remains an area that I am considering as part of the follow-on from the report. Issues relating to the city centre and the way in which we deliver housing across Northern Ireland will be looked at on the basis of the information that we find in the report and consultation with Members.

Mr Hilditch: Minister, how is shared housing allocated?

Mr Storey: That is a valid question, and it was asked the first time that I was before the Assembly as Minister. In many respects, it goes to the heart of the way in which my Department, in conjunction with the Housing Executive, addresses the issue of housing in Northern Ireland. All social housing in Northern Ireland is allocated on the basis of need, and that ensures that the allocation of housing is compliant with Northern Ireland's equality legislation. We cannot socially engineer mixed social housing, and I would be the first to say that we should not do that in any circumstances. That is why I have tasked the Housing Executive to work with housing associations and local communities to support and encourage them to see the benefits of shared housing.

Achieving shared housing is not about forcing anything on anyone. We need to allow people to share housing because they want to, not because government says that they must. I want to see how we can provide choice for people to come together in a more natural way and not through some socially engineered plan that simply would not work. I also want to see how we can develop more social and affordable housing alongside each other so that people can have greater choice and flexibility about where they live and who they live beside.

Mr McKinney: I, too, join in congratulating the Minister, though the honeymoon must be coming to an end soon.

Mr Storey: It is over.

Mr McKinney: It is over. What is the Minister's assessment of the success or otherwise of shared housing schemes in Northern Ireland?

Mr Storey: It is all in how we measure and what we measure as success. Over the last few weeks, I have — I thank the Member for his words of congratulation — seen examples, and I plan to visit more examples of how there has been an attempt to deliver shared housing and shared provision. We still have a considerable way to go. It is all very fine setting targets and having it set out in policy papers, but I still think that there is an issue — I refer to the comments that I made in response to Mr Hilditch — of us being seen as a Government in Northern Ireland forcing a particular structure on people. We have to encourage the shared provision. Progress has been made, but not at the pace that I would like to see in terms of moving forward on the issue.

Mr McGimpsey: I, too, congratulate the Minister. In view of the disastrous situation in the Holylands, where we have seen student housing, in effect, driving out hundreds of families from a residential area, can he assure us that the Housing Executive land currently earmarked for social housing in other communities in inner south Belfast such as Sandy Row, Donegall Pass and the Village will not be permitted to go to student housing but will be retained by the Housing Executive for much-needed social housing?

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for his congratulations and share his concerns. I am well aware from correspondence that I received recently, particularly in relation to the development of the Northside project, how people have concerns around the increase in student accommodation. It is not a panacea and is not the answer to all our ills, but landlord registration is a way in which we can begin to create a sense of control over what is already there. I take the Member's point, particularly around how we ensure that land is designated and the discussions with the Housing Executive and other interested groups are held in a way that reflects the need but also reflects the community and the area in which that perceived need will be met.

EU Funding: Drawdown

3. Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department has met its target, as part of the Programme for Government commitments, to draw down an additional 20% of EU funding within this current mandate. (AQO 6896/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Programme for Government target is a Northern Ireland Executive target to facilitate the increased drawdown of competitive European funds by the end of March 2015, though all Departments will work collaboratively in relation to that. It is one of a number of Executive European priorities. Others include enhancing the profile of Northern Ireland in Europe, developing and maintaining a network of EU organisations and networks and influencing the development of EU policy.

My Department does not yet have a specific drawdown target because, having taken stock of its position and experience relative to competitive funds, it was not considered appropriate to put forward a target that had no sensible basis.

3.00 pm

Over recent years, my Department's focus has been on facilitating the maximum drawdown for Northern Ireland through fulfilling the role of an accountable Department for the Peace III creating shared public spaces theme. By the end of the programme in December 2015, we will have helped to deliver 18 capital projects to the value of €101 million.

Participation in EU competitive funding programmes cannot easily happen in a short time frame. The Department has had no obvious involvement in European competitive funds or networks; therefore, we have focused on building capacity. We have also raised awareness of funding opportunities with our partners in the voluntary and community sector. We are entering a new round of EU programmes and will examine those very closely for opportunities.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister for his answer. Does he accept that additional funding can be drawn down from European funds to assist with tackling disadvantage?

Mr Storey: This is an area that I have a particular interest in, given my past interest in European issues. At times, there has, rightly, been criticism of the way in which we focused and delivered European money in Northern Ireland. However, look at the capital projects under the Peace III creating shared spaces programme. In fact, some are in the Member's constituency, including the collaboration between Fermanagh District Council and Monaghan County Council on the Peace Link project at Clones and the Termon project in Tullyhommon and Pettigo. Many of those projects have contributed immensely and will continue to contribute. The Orange interpretative and education resource centres are also being funded through that process. Last Friday, I was in Londonderry at the launch of the commencement of building work on the Heroes of the Great Siege Shared History and Visitors Centre. That is another example of how that money can be used.

I take the Member's point and agree that we can do more. I have had discussions with my officials. You will be aware that the programme is being considered by the Commission. One of the pillars under which the programme will be delivered is young people and education, and I believe that there is more that we can do to ensure that we maximise the money that we receive from these funds. However, it is not only about maximising it; we must ensure that we focus and deliver it in a way that gives tangible benefit to the young people and communities in Northern Ireland.

Mr Gardiner: Previous targets have been set for domestic energy efficiency to secure match funding from Europe. Will the Minister provide an update on those projects?

Mr Storey: On the specific issue of targets, we have analysed funding calls regularly and disseminated that information through partner search to third party organisations. I do not have the information about the specific element that the Member referred to, but I assure him that I will write to him and provide an update.

Mr Douglas: I thank the Minister for his answers so far, particularly in relation to European funding. Will he outline the opportunities that he thinks exist in the next round of Peace IV funding?

Mr Storey: That follows on from the comments that I made to Mr Lynch. The main objective of the draft Peace IV programme is to promote social and economic stability in eligible regions, particularly through actions that will support good relations between communities. If ever we needed to ensure that that is the case in Northern Ireland, that is something that we need to continue to work at and strive towards.

The work that my Department leads on, regeneration and community development, can be greatly enhanced by the additional resources of somewhere in the region of €269 million that the programme brings. I will be seeking to maximise the benefits of the programme for communities that my Department works most closely with, given the relationship that my Department has with the community and voluntary sector. My Department will also play a key role in the implementation and the continuation of shared spaces, and I made reference to that already when I mentioned the capital projects. The theme there to build on many of the projects has been delivered in the current project.

In addition, other themes can contribute to our work to address poverty and to promote inclusion. As I said, my Department will work with communities to bring forward imaginative and effective proposals under the children and young people theme, so that they can avail themselves of the opportunities for improved access to education, employment and training.

I think that this is an example of how we could do joined-up government in a very focused way. Yes, as for the opportunities, the pot of money that we have, in real terms, is not what it was from the various Peace programmes in previous years. However, all Members around the House will be able to identify, in their own local community, projects that have been put in place as a result of the focus that there has been on European funding. I am having those conversations with my officials, and I look forward to being able to bring more positive news in the not-too-distant future.

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin agus seo í mo cheist. In the event of the successful drawdown of additional funding, can the Minister ensure that match funding will be available, where appropriate?

Mr Storey: I am glad to tell the Member that I am not the Finance Minister. Obviously, the Member will be well aware that the issue of ensuring that, when you have an allocation, you get match funding can become pretty challenging in the current economic circumstances and with the Budget pressures that we will face over the next few years. However, I will do all that I can in the responsibilities that I have in my Department to ensure, as I think we have demonstrated in the past, that there is a very healthy injection of finance from the Department in relation to some of the projects that I have mentioned in the House today.

Welfare Reform: Mitigation Proposals

4. Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Social Development what proposals he has developed to ensure that Northern Ireland is able to mitigate the impact of welfare reform. (AQO 6897/11-15)

Mr Storey: This is where two minutes is totally and absolutely inadequate, however we will endeavour to give the Member as full a response as we possibly can. I thank the Member for the question, which is very timely. Hopefully, we will develop that as we proceed.

A package of measures has been developed to take account of the views of the Executive subcommittee on welfare reform, the Social Development Committee and a wide range of other stakeholders, with the key objective of continuing to protect the most vulnerable. Members are already aware that the following payment flexibilities have been secured for payment of universal credit in Northern Ireland: all claimants will receive twice-monthly payments; a range of options will be available to split the single household payment; and the housing element of universal credit will be paid directly to landlords, ensuring that people remain safe in their tenancies and that social housing provision has a firm financial basis.

The Member will also be aware that, yesterday, I had the opportunity to meet Church leaders, and I thought that that was a useful and very valuable opportunity for me not only to have a discussion with them but, more importantly, for me to listen to the concerns that they brought. In my response to the Church leaders, I have set out in a letter, which is now on my Department's website and in the public domain, the elements in the package that had been agreed: the split universal credit payments; the direct payment of universal credit to landlords; social sector size criteria, which is commonly called the bedroom tax; the issue of sanctions; joint claims; medical evidence for personal independence payments; lone parent flexibility; the discretionary support scheme, and so we could go on.

The Member will have all of that information available to him, as will all Members. I believe that that is valuable and that it will help us to inform the current debate.

Mr McCarthy: I thank the Minister for a very detailed response. Like others, I welcome the new Minister to the Dispatch Box this afternoon, as I welcomed him to the best constituency in Northern Ireland, last week, when he was on a visit to Newtownards and Ballynahinch. Further to his answer, what efforts is the Minister making to engage with the business community about the importance of an agreed way forward on this very important subject? You informed the Assembly that you engaged with the religious community yesterday.

Mr Storey: The Member makes a valid point in relation to the business community. We all have a vested interest in having a resolution to this issue. No one needs think that, somehow, they can get out of the responsibility that they have, collectively, to bring about a solution.

I thank the Member for his words of welcome. I was glad to be in his constituency, and I look forward to visiting the constituency in the future. The issue of welfare reform has become vitally important, because I believe that, over the last number of weeks and months, we have lost sight of an informed discussion. There has been a lot of rancour, and a huge amount of concern. I will in no way underestimate or try to minimise the genuine concerns that many have about the changes to welfare.

I made this point to the Church leaders yesterday: I do not want people thinking that, somehow, I just have to say a few words that will satisfy everybody that I have ticked a box and that those words will not bear any resemblance to what can be done. I believe that good work has been done. I believe that the subcommittee, the Committee for Social Development and the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action (NICVA) have done good work. That is why I went to speak to the Church leaders, and I plan to speak at the NICVA conference next week. I will take the point that the Member has made in relation to engagement with the business community, and I will follow that through with those who have a voice from that very important sector.

Mr G Robinson: Will the Minister outline what impact the non-application of welfare reform will have on necessary repairs to the Housing Executive stock?

Mr Storey: I think the Member wanted to ask me about the package of measures and the concern that we have around significant changes to the welfare system in Northern Ireland. Do we believe that those measures will ensure that we will continue to keep the focus on those people in our community who have concerns and problems?

I know that issues have been raised with me about people who have a disability, people who have problems in relation to disability living allowance (DLA) and people who have problems regarding other elements of welfare reform. I can assure the House, not just the Member, that I am listening and genuinely interested in ensuring that we do not use the poor and those who have challenges and issues as some political pawn, as was said yesterday.

Equally, I want the House to grasp a point. Many families in Northern Ireland are trapped in the benefits system and, currently, that system does not allow them the flexibility to exit the process. I believe that the removal of the 16 hours a week is an example of how people can be given an exit from dependency on a benefit and huge opportunities to get into work, become more socially mobile and make, and continue to make, an invaluable contribution, first and foremost, to their families and, secondly, to the wider community.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Roy Beggs, very quickly.

Mr Beggs: Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. The Minister mentioned mitigation. Can he detail the cost of mitigation that he foresees in the first year? How will that be funded, given the current financial difficulties that exist in the Executive?

Mr Storey: It does not matter what you propose to do, if you put in place the cost of mitigation, there will be a cost. If you look at the proposals that my party has put forward in a paper to the Secretary of State, you will see that there is a cost identified in a transitional fund around the £30 million mark. There is obviously a cost that had previously been associated with the implementation of the Northern Ireland plus. You could be talking in the region of an additional £40 million or £50 million. There is no doubt that that creates a challenge.

The Member is right. In the current economic climate, we face a challenge to find additional money, or, at least, to take money from our current resources to implement this piece of legislation. I think, however, that that is money well spent. Let us remember, and the First Minister made the point yesterday from this Dispatch Box, and I think that I need to reiterate the concern that he expressed in this House: collective failure on our part to resolve this issue can ultimately lead to the doors being closed in this institution. I know that Members will say, "Here we go again threatening", but in any of the conversations that I have had in Northern Ireland or in the rest of the United Kingdom, there is a clear expectation that failure to resolve this issue will have serious consequences. The financial cost to Northern Ireland of the imposition of non-amended welfare reform is incalculable, as well as the impact that it would have in all the communities that we represent in this House.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: That ends the period for listed questions. I know that you are really looking forward to topical questions.

3.15 pm

Belfast City Centre Regeneration

T1. Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the development and regeneration of Lower North Street, Garfield Street and Royal Avenue in Belfast. (AQT 1651/11-15)

Mr Storey: I think that all those issues have been given priority. In relation to the transfer of those powers, there will be elements that will transfer to local councils, and many have had concerns in relation to that issue. I will give the Member a written response on that because I do not have the detail, but I hope that we will be able to get more detail to the Member later.

Mr McAleer: Go raibh maith agat. The Minister will be aware that the delay in the development is having wider negative implications for development in other parts of Belfast city centre. Can he give the House an assurance that he is proactively trying to deal with the matter?

Mr Storey: Yes, I can. As the Member can appreciate, a variety of issues has come across my desk in the past three weeks since I came into office, which, I believe, need to be given serious consideration as to the way in which my Department has interacted with other agencies and providers. There is a tendency to believe that, somehow, it can be delivered solely by one Department. I have found more and more, and I am sure that the Member will not be in any way surprised to hear, that a challenge for me on this issue and on other issues relating to housing, regeneration or development is ensuring that those partners have the same focus, the same intention and the same outcome that I have.

Welfare Reform: Northern Ireland Impact

T2. Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of current and not so current misinformation about the impact of the most recently introduced elements of welfare reform in Northern Ireland, what steps he is taking to fully understand the impact of welfare reform on Northern Ireland. (AQT 1652/11-15)

Mr Storey: This goes back to the point that I made about whether you call it misinformation or a lack of understanding of the import of all this. I am well aware that, for me to get a grasp of the complexities, it is vital that I listen to all the voices out there. There is a need for genuine debate about the impact of welfare reform and how it will be implemented in Northern Ireland. Since coming to office, I have met a range of groups and individuals who have an interest in welfare reform. As I said earlier, I met the Church leaders yesterday. That was an important event for me for the simple reason that they are key in the way in which they communicate information to their constituents, their congregations and their people. As I said, I also intend to go to the NICVA conference. Mr McCarthy asked a question about the business community, and I am going to the conference to ensure that we have an informed debate around the issue. I do not believe that we can just have sound bites in the media and exchanges that may all sound like very good entertainment. All Members of the House need to address the needs of the communities we represent. When I am in my constituency, I am asked about specific issues relating to welfare reform. I want to address the impact that it will have on those individual communities and families.

Mrs Hale: I thank the Minister for his comprehensive answer. He answered part of my supplementary question, which was this: what is he doing to understand the impact of welfare reform that can better inform the public debate?

Mr Storey: I had extensive discussions yesterday with the Church leaders on what more we could do in communication. We will continue that conversation about how we can improve our communication with them and the wider community.

My Department has published a series of information bulletins that analyse the impact of various elements of welfare reform on the population of Northern Ireland, and they are available on the website. I know that people get a bit sceptical when Ministers stand up and talk about everything that is on the website. However, if you visit the website and see the huge amount of information there, it would give you an understanding of at least the complexities of the issue. An analysis was completed during 2014, and I have asked my officials to update that bulletin. My officials will also continue to engage with the voluntary and community sector and claimant representative groups to ensure that they are informed.

We are also doing research on food banks to better understand who is using them and their reason for doing so. That has become an issue. Something that is not an anomaly but is certainly something that needs to be understood is the fact that, since we have seen an increase in food banks, we have seen a 20% reduction in crisis loans. I want to try to grasp some understanding of why that is the case. It is challenging when, in all our communities, we see people who have had to have access to food banks. We ask the reason why. It is too simplistic to say that it is the impact of elements of welfare reform or the way in which welfare reform would be implemented. However, I want to return to that issue.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Two minutes, Minister.

Mr Storey: Thank you, Principal Deputy Speaker.

Housing Association Grant Rates

T3. Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Social Development whether he intends to increase housing association grant rates. (AQT 1653/11-15)

Mr Storey: I could very simply say "Yes" and sit down, but I will not do that. In recent months, the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations has made representation about raising the costs and risks posed to delivery. My officials have been chairing discussions with the organisation to explore options, including housing associations raising rent to cover the additional cost. I have listened to the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations' concerns on cost increases, and my officials wrote to the association on 15 October this year confirming my decision on the new total cost indicators and the housing association grant rates. The average grant will now move from 46% to almost 52%.

Ms P Bradley: Hopefully he will answer this question just as fast. Can the Minister say what that will mean for housing associations and, of course, the construction of new social housing?

Mr Storey: Obviously, the increase in grant provided to the association gives the financial flexibility that it requires. It requires particular flexibility to achieve what, I think, is a challenging target of 2,000 new social homes this year and a similar number next year. Fixing grant rate up until the end of 2016 provides everyone involved with much-needed certainty for the foreseeable future. However, I say to the Member and the House that this is another area where we need to have a serious look at the way in which it is all delivered. I appreciate the work that the housing associations do. I think that there are other schemes and ways in which we could be inventive in generating the delivery of social housing.

I have a personal issue that I will have to get my head around, and that is the phrase — albeit that it is in the legislation — "using social housing" and the way in which we have a debate and discussion around housing. What do we really mean? There are definitions and ways in which people approach the issue. I will have conversations with officials tomorrow about how we move forward in a proactive way on the delivery of affordable, social, well-built houses, which, to the community that we represent, means something of worth and value.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

T4. Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development for up-to-date figures on the number of people in Northern Ireland who have benefited from the boiler replacement scheme. (AQT 1654/11-15)

Mr Storey: This is a good news story. I suppose that every Minister has elements of good news that they want to get out there. The difficulty is that, so many times, it is covered up by other things and does not make the headlines. Across Northern Ireland, over 15,800 homeowners have benefited. The scheme offers owner-occupiers a grant of up to £1,000 to replace inefficient boilers, is available to those who earn less than £40,000 a year and have an inefficient boiler of at least 15 years and is dependent on total gross income. Replacing an old, inefficient boiler with a new condensing boiler can, in an average three-bedroom, semi-detached house, see savings of up to £300 to £350 a year.

Mr Hilditch: I thank the Minister for that information. How much money has been allocated to the boiler scheme since it was started?

Mr Storey: Since the scheme commenced on 3 September 2012, a total of £12 million has been allocated to it by the Department, and that has been spent at a rate of £4 million a year for the three years up to 2014-15. An extra £6 million was obtained from European regional development funding, spread across the 2013-14 and 2014-15 financial years.

Omagh Town Centre Master Plan

T5. Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Social Development to personally investigate, albeit that he is not long in office, why his Department is declining, at this time, to offer support to Omagh District Council to assist with the review of the Omagh town centre master plan. (AQT 1655/11-15)

Mr Storey: Yes, I will indeed undertake that, but the Member also needs to ask why we have had a delay to date in the response to me and my Department on the issue of the regeneration proposals to local government, which are still being delayed. I have been waiting now for two weeks — in fact, since I came into office.

I need a response. If I do not have that response by Thursday, the powers will remain in my Department. I have no doubt that you and other Members across the Chamber will come to me with concerns about the fact that the regeneration, whether it is neighbourhood renewal, master plans or whatever, is not being delivered in a way that is in keeping with what the Member wants. However, I will come back to the Member and give him a specific answer in relation to Omagh.

3.30 pm

Mr McElduff: I will just say to the Minister that there are particular circumstances in Omagh, with the relocation of several schools to the Lisanelly education campus, which mean that several town centre sites are becoming available in a new and changing context. That is perhaps why the local authority needs DSD's support at ministerial level. I invite the Minister to reply.

Mr Storey: I am quite happy to give a commitment to give whatever help or assistance that we can. Surely the development of the master plan should have taken cognisance of the fact that there was a proposal for the Lisanelly site. I would be surprised and disappointed if that were not the case. However, I give the Member an assurance that I will pay particular interest to the issue and give him a response.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I apologise for not being in my place during topical questions.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Thank you very much for coming to the Chamber to apologise personally. Of course, it would have been better if you had been here to ask your question.

Executive Committee Business

Education Bill: Consideration Stage

Clause 2 (Functions of the Authority)

Debate resumed on amendment No 1, which amendment was:

In page 1, line 11, at end insert

“(2A) It shall be a duty of the Authority, when exercising its functions, to encourage, facilitate and promote integrated education.”.— [Mr Lunn.]

The following amendments stood on the Marshalled List:

Nos 2 to 5 and 8.

Mrs Overend: The future education of our children is in our hands, and legislative changes are crucial. We must not neglect our responsibility to get this right.

Last week, we discussed and debated the Minister's wish for the Bill to go through by accelerated passage. As you know, the Ulster Unionists were particularly disappointed that this procedure was approved overwhelmingly by Members. It has meant that we did not have much time to prepare and submit amendments; we really had only one day. Furthermore, we had only one day — yesterday — to analyse all the proposed amendments and decide on the best way forward. My colleague Mr Danny Kinahan, the Deputy Chair of the Education Committee, outlined our position on amendment Nos 1, 2, 3 and 5.

On the issue of the promotion of integrated education — with a capital “I” — versus shared education, there are differing views on what is shared education. As was discussed today, there is no definition of shared education in the Department. Does that mean, however, that the Members opposite do not feel that an amendment could be drawn up within the next couple of weeks for the next stage of the Bill that complements Mr McCallister's amendment?

There are differing views on what shared education is. In my mind, it relates purely to the various stages of sharing across Northern Ireland, which I believe are no bad thing at all. Members, including me, will be able to provide examples from their constituencies of places where visits or after-school clubs are joined together or where two schools share a teacher in a specialised subject, and of other places where buildings or even classrooms are shared. To my mind, it is acceptable that different people are at different stages, but they must all be encouraged to share more. It is desirable that our children should be encouraged to respect the background and religion of others, no matter what that is. We support amendment No 3 and suggest that the Minister could surely draw up a definition of shared education quite quickly, given that, as we know, he likes to work in an accelerated fashion.

Amendment No 4 wants:

“to encourage, facilitate and promote the community use of school premises”.

Those living in rural communities will especially recognise the central role that a school plays in its community. Often, a parent-teacher group organises social events on a premises, which brings everyone in the community into the school. We sometimes hear of exercise classes or history groups using school premises, and we are content that this type of community engagement should be encouraged.

Lastly, amendment No 8 is our Ulster Unionist amendment. The aim of this is to ensure that any changes to the Bill must be brought to the Assembly before it can come into force. I emphasise to those in the Chamber today the specific reason why Ulster Unionists tabled this amendment. It is because of clause 4(3) of the Bill. Members will have heard me quote this last week in the Chamber:

“The Department may by order make such supplementary, incidental, consequential or transitional provision as it considers necessary or appropriate in consequence of, or for giving full effect to, any provision made by this Act.”

I do not know what such supplementary, incidental consequential or transitional provision is planned by the Education Minister. I therefore would like the democratic opportunity to debate that fully in the House.

I assure the Members that we do not want to delay the prompt progression of the Bill or any further such necessary provisions. We are more than happy to work with others in a timely manner. I provide that assurance to the Education Minister and others. It is just that we do not trust the Minister of Education. Can the other parties in this House say that they can? If they cannot, I urge them to support our amendment.

Mr Agnew: I love coming to a debate in the Assembly knowing that we are going to get good and open discussion and that people are going to consider each aspect of the debate, but I come to this debate knowing fine rightly that that is not going to happen. It is no surprise that the DUP has tabled 10 petitions of concern on amendments to this Bill.

It kind of goes back to when we had the Second Stage debate and were told, “We want to fast-track this.” As I saw it then, the DUP and Sinn Féin had got together and decided, “We have created a Bill and we like it. We don’t want to give you time to scrutinise it, change it and make amendments. We just want to rush it through as quickly as we possibly can, so could you please leave it alone?” So when we try to make amendments, even in the limited capacity that we have through accelerated passage, we are told, “You are not getting changes, OK? We have agreed this. Move on. Get on with it. Get out of the way”.

However, I was elected to the Assembly to serve my constituents based on a manifesto, and I do not believe that my constituents and those who voted for me are getting their due respect through this use of petitions of concern and abuse of a system that was put in place to protect, I suppose, a majority from governing a minority in an oppressive way. You can call the Green Party many things, but we are not the oppressive majority — I think that that is safe to say — so I am not sure who the petition of concern is being used to protect.

The debate has left me confused as to where some parties are on education in particular. I apologise, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, I should declare an interest as an outgoing director of NICIE. My term will soon come to an end.

I wonder where parties are, because we have heard Peter Robinson talk about integrated education in positive terms, yet we heard Nelson McCausland earlier seemingly contradict that in remarks about the preferential treatment of the integrated sector. That preferential treatment is outlined in law, and I make no apologies for it. The preferential treatment has been supported by the Assembly and, I would argue, by his party leader.

When the DUP says that it wants a single-sector education system, I am just not sure what that looks like. Is it the tired old argument that if Catholics would just stop going to Catholic schools and come to controlled schools, we would have a single system and we would not need to worry about these other sectors and we could have our single education system? Is that still what we are talking about? If it is, it shows how little progress we have made.

The Ulster Unionist Party has stated clearly its position for a single shared education system.

I have heard Mr Kinahan explain what that means to him. It may be my ignorance, but I fail to understand what that is.

Mr Kinahan: You do not want to.

Mr Agnew: Possibly. The Member says that I do not want to understand. Maybe I do have some kind of block, so I am willing to give way if he wants to intervene, although I will make my point first, if that is OK.

To me, a single system is a single sector state education system; shared education is an attempt to bring sectors together. Shared, by definition, means more than one. It takes more than one to share: you have to have somebody to share with. At the minute, we largely talk about sharing between the Catholic sector and the Protestant sector, so I do not understand what a single shared education system is. Single is one and shared is more than one, so I am confused by that argument — genuinely. I want a single education system, but that necessitates moving away from the blocks that we have currently.

I will speak directly to the amendments before the Principal Deputy Speaker tells me to do so. At the outset, when Mr Lunn spoke to the Alliance amendment to place on the new authority a duty relating to integrated education, I said that I supported it. I think that it strengthens the current legislation and clarifies what we mean, or certainly what he and I would wish us to mean, by “to encourage and facilitate” integrated education. Essentially, we mean “to promote”. Mr Lunn’s tone might be somewhat different from mine, but I make no apology for saying that that means prioritising. I do not apologise for that because, from what I can gather, that was the intent of the law and is the will of the public. In my view, it is what is good for our society.

A segregated education system in a society that has faced so much division and conflict is not a good thing. So I make no apology for saying that we want to grow the number of children who are educated together — not together in one building but together in a single school with a single ethos, a single principal, a single uniform and single away days. It should not, as I said in a previous debate, be a case of one school going to Long Kesh and the other to the Maze.

I certainly believe in this, and every poll suggests that parents want greater provision of integrated education: 83% of parents in Belfast believe that integrated education is good for our society; and 72% think that integrated education should be prioritised. That is the term that was used. I know that, sometimes, polls are accused of being worded to get support, but the word "prioritise" was clear in the question: should integrated education be prioritised? Seventy-two per cent said yes, and yet 7% of children are educated in integrated schools currently.

I hear people say that the demand is not there, and I always say that it is about choice. However, with integrated education, saying that people are not choosing it is a bit like saying that people in Northern Ireland do not choose sunshine. If you want sunshine, why do you live in Northern Ireland? If you want integrated education, why do you not go to an integrated school? We hear parents say, "My child could, but they would have to get three buses and a taxi", or whatever it might be. That is the choice for some parents. They say, "My child could travel two hours to school and back each day, but I want integrated education in my area". For many people, that is not the reality. Amendment No 1 and my amendment, No 5, seek to provide that, but I have acknowledged that I think that amendment No 1 is perhaps the better of the two.

3.45 pm

I have no problem supporting amendment No 2:

"to encourage, facilitate and promote Irish-medium education".

Again, I think that the equality argument is being made, but if the best part of the 1,200 schools that we have are not integrated or Irish-medium schools, we are not starting from an equal position. I know that some people object to the term, but I have no problem supporting the positive discrimination that is outlined here.

Equally, I support amendment No 4 on the community use of schools. I think that the financial situation has led us to seek to maximise the use of public assets. I think that that is a good thing. We are moving away and should move away from the situation where schools sit empty for two months during the summer and in the evenings. In some cases, I have community groups meeting in my constituency office because they have nowhere else to go that they can afford. I think that we should use schools for the benefit of the community as a whole. I will listen to the Minister's response, but I fail to understand Sinn Féin's opposition to amendment No 4 because it is something that is departmental policy, and what this amendment would do is enshrine that in law. Policies come and go and lose favour, but legislation at least can be changed only after scrutiny through this House.

I support amendment No 8. I think that I am right in saying that Danny Kinahan said that he may not move it. Certainly, in principle, I have no problem with amendment No 8.

As much as I would like to support amendment No 3 from my good colleague in the naughty corner John McCallister, I have made my views on shared education clear. We had an opportunity. In every crisis, there was an opportunity. We had a crisis in falling enrollment numbers in schools and the segregated system's becoming unsustainable, which many argued. Credit is due to the Alliance Party for outlining the cost of division over the years. We had a clear cost. We could not continue to fund, in the segregated education system, two schools, whatever they might be, in one community. The obvious answer was to start educating children in the same school, with the same uniform and with the same principal and ethos, in an inclusive fashion and in a way that was efficient economically and also socially beneficial.

What did we do instead? We said, "No: we will not do that. We will agree this one-school idea, but we will have one building. We will keep the two uniforms, two principals, two boards of governors and two ethos, and we will enshrine in one enclosed area that these children are different. These children over here, in this uniform, are Protestant; these children over here, in this uniform, are Catholic. We will make sure the children know it because they will have different uniforms and school names to show it and they may play different sports. We will emphasise from day one, from the age of four when they enter school, that they are different from those kids over there. They might share the same building and the same classroom, but they will not be part of the same school because they are not the same; they are fundamentally different." If that is the progress that we have made since the Good Friday Agreement, I weep. I really, really do.

I cannot support the amendment. I suppose that anybody could intervene and tell me that I am wrong and that that is not what shared education is, but we are actually being told that we cannot support John McCallister's amendment anyway because we do not know what shared education is; we have not defined it. It is not just the case that we have not defined it in legislation.

We do not even have a working definition of it. The parties that wrote 'Together: Building a United Community' (T:BUC), have not even agreed on what shared education is. We are guaranteed that we are going to have 10 shared education campuses. What is a shared education campus? They do not know yet; they have not agreed it, but we are going to have 10 of them. Brilliant, great. I cannot wait to achieve that goal. It will be such a step forward for education in our country.

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Member for giving way and for raising concerns regarding the definition of shared education. Does he agree that it is startling that we are told that is difficult to define shared education, when Programme for Government target 72 is to:

"ensure all children have the opportunity to participate in shared education programmes by 2015"

and target 73 is to:

"substantially increase the number of schools sharing facilities by 2015"?

Mr Agnew: I absolutely agree with the Member. We agree the headlines and then work out what the story is. I do not think that that is a good way to do government. I certainly do not think that it is a good way to do education, and it reflects another failure on the part of the Executive.

Mr McCallister: It is fair to say that this Bill is a dog's dinner, and I am not even sure that the dog would eat it, given the opportunity. This is why, last week, I warned against accelerated passage of the Bill, and that was why the Ulster Unionists and the Green Party voted against it. It is why I said to Mr Lunn that it was a mistake; and why I say to him today that he is now paying the price for not getting the Bill through a proper Committee Stage, working through it and giving the integrated sector the chance to come and present to the Committee, and working through and scrutinising amendments. This is not the way to do legislation.

Let me pick up on one of the most recent points, the intervention that Mr Lyttle made in Mr Agnew's speech. You are quite right, Mr Lyttle, that those targets are in the Programme for Government. I remind you: you are part of the Government, and it is your responsibility. You are in the Government; you are a part of it; you are part of this mess.

Here is the problem with some of the Bill and these amendments. I also warned in the debate last week that, at times, it almost felt as though the DUP and Sinn Féin were talking about two separate Bills. It seems to have come true; this Bill is of slightly doubtful parentage. That is how we have ended up in this place with 22 amendments proposed, some of which come from Executive parties — and those parties are entitled to propose amendments — but 10 of the amendments, almost half of them, are subject to petitions of concern.

Most people in the Chamber know that I have been working on a private Member's Bill on reforming this place. I have had some research done into the number of petitions of concern used. This raises the number of unionist petitions of concern, since 1998, from somewhere in the mid-40s to the mid-50s. This is a record number of petitions of concern used on one day and on one piece of legislation. Too many Members stood up last week and said that this is a relatively simple, uncontroversial Bill and that is why we should ignore the Assembly's processes, just use this place as a rubber stamp and not pay much heed to it. That is why it is such a mistake to do it in this way.

Now that I have that off my chest, I turn to some of the amendments. I will comment on some of the integrated education stuff. Let me address Mr Agnew's point about the difference between integrated and shared education, whereby there may be two separate schools in one building and all that. Does he not accept that, even in the integrated sector, there are differences between pupils? In his contribution, Mr Lunn said that there would be no problem with Catholic pupils in an integrated school being trained up for the holy sacraments, which is right and proper; but you are having differences in that. You are making differences. Unless you move to a truly secular education system where there are no differences, that is the only way you could do it. I do not quite accept —

Mr Agnew: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCallister: Just a second.

I do not quite accept his making such a difference or saying that, somehow, shared education is such a second choice compared with integrated.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way. I kind of accept his point. Integrated almost highlights the differences; it brings you in and says, "There are differences. Here's what they are. Let's talk about them, and let's respect them." It is part of the integrated ethos. It is not about Protestant and Catholic children accidentally ending up in the same school — I welcome that where that is happening — but it is about addressing some of those differences. It is not sticking a different uniform on those children and dividing them from the age of four.

Mr McCallister: I accept that. I readily accept, as, probably, many in the Chamber do, that, if we were starting with a blank canvas and designing our education system, the Minister may well do something very different. He may well be closer to what the First Minister has described. However, we are where we are, some 70 years into state education and with different sectors. No matter how much the Green Party or the Alliance Party wish away the Catholic Church or the Presbyterian Church, we are not going to get rid of different interests.

Mr Lyttle: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCallister: Yes.

Mr Lyttle: I appreciate that the Member is developing an argument, but he should be careful about the language that he uses. He should reflect on the fact that he just said that the Alliance Party is wishing away the Catholic Church, which is completely inaccurate language to use.

Mr McCallister: I included the Presbyterian Church. I am a Presbyterian. I was not being offensive to any one side; I was trying to distribute it all out equally in the efforts of equality.

The point is that we, in the Assembly, have an education system that has evolved over many years. It may not be exactly how we would like it to be, but we have to protect and look after the various interests and see how the system develops, how we develop the shared education ethos, how we protect parental choice, and how we build in the faith-based ethos that people want to see. I would like to see many more kids from a non-Catholic background in the Catholic sector. I want to see that flexibility and people wanting to pick a school because it is a good school.

Some commented that some integration has happened very organically. That is very welcome, and I think that we should all encourage it.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Beggs] in the Chair)

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Member for giving way; it gives me the opportunity to raise a point. There seems to be an argument being developed today that making a straightforward proposal for a duty to facilitate, encourage and promote integrated education is some form of social engineering and that the current system has just organically developed. Does the Member agree with the First Minister that the current education system is a form of apartheid that is fundamentally damaging to our society?

Mr McCallister: I am glad that Mr Lyttle has some idea as to what the First Minister wants out of education. I do not. One day, he is talking about there being some form of apartheid in our education system, and, the next day, they are fighting hard to keep sectoral interests alive. I warned about this in last week's debate: you cannot have both; you cannot say that you want a single education system while supporting all the other sectors. My view is closer to what the Minister is trying to do. It is about shared education. It is a more realistic option starting from where we are at the moment. That is why I have tabled the amendments.

I do not have any issue with the Alliance Party amendments. It was probably obvious to a man on a galloping horse that the Alliance Party would table those amendments. My disappointment with the Alliance Party is that it was so blasé last week about letting the Bill go through with accelerated passage. It has suddenly been caught out because the DUP has used the petition of concern mechanism.

That is a complete abuse of the mechanism, but that is the system. I did not design it.

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCallister: Mr Lunn.

4.00 pm

Mr Lunn: I am listening to all this with interest, because we seem to be getting the blame for everything. Does the Member think that not having accelerated passage for the Bill would have opened the mind of those who have a closed mind on the issues we are talking about? If we discussed this Bill for a fortnight rather than a couple of days, it would not make any difference. They have a complete blind spot on some of the things that we and, I think, you are trying to promote.

Mr McCallister: You only need to look back to the debate all day yesterday and last night in the Chamber to see the advantage of taking our time and, as it was a private Member's Bill, working with the Minister as well as the Committee to see how you improve legislation. That is the way it should be done. Granted, in this instance, the Minister would not have had time to do that, but he would have had time to put the Bill through a Committee Stage. That way, you would have had a much better chance; you would have had the voice of the integrated sector making the case at Committee for the amendments that the Member feels so passionately about. He is bitterly disappointed that the use of the petition of concern has ended things in this way. It is very regrettable that we have got to that point.

My reason for tabling the amendments on shared education in this group and one that will be debated later is that it is not just about setting a vision; it is about the destination and building a society that is very much at ease with itself. We need a society that does not always divide into our two camps. You can have more organic integration between many of our schools, and that is something that we should want to see progressed.

I accept Members' frustration about the pace of the Minister's work on shared education. On 22 October 2013, he made a ministerial statement on advancing shared education. That was a year ago tomorrow. In fairness, the Minister probably feels some disappointment that he has not been able to move as fast as he perhaps would have liked to.

We hear too much talk about what is in our Programme for Government. There is a complete disconnect between that Programme for Government and what we are delivering on the ground. I readily accept that point, but the parties with Ministers must look to those people and say, "Why are you still there?".

As I said, I have no great problem with the Alliance amendments on integrated education. If they are pushed to a Division, I would certainly vote on the principle that a petition of concern was not necessary. You should have come here and had the debate. I would happily have been part of that and would have voted accordingly.

With regard to my amendment No 3 on shared education, I had a conversation with the Minister, and I want to hear some assurances from him that he will bring forward new legislation to define shared education and will make sure that he can deliver that. My big concern, given the state of the Northern Ireland Executive, is whether the Minister can get that legislation out of the Executive. Can the Minister get it through Committee and into the Assembly? That is my big concern. I am minded to take his advice and not move amendment No 3 on that basis, but I will look for some comfort in his response to this debate and how quickly he thinks we can get a definition and get a Bill laid before the Assembly. That is one area where he and I agree, and we need to move much, much more quickly on that to advance.

Amendment No 4 is about the community use of school premises. Colleagues mentioned David McNarry, who brought a private Member's Bill late in the last Assembly term, if my memory is correct. It is important that communities use school premises because we have many schools. As Mr Craig said in an intervention to Mr Sheehan, there are schools out there, and why should they not be used for two months over the summer holidays or in the afternoons and evenings? A great example of that is Rathfriland High School — my old school — which has a new 3G football pitch, part-funded by Education, DCAL and Banbridge District Council. The pitch is used by the school through the day and by the community centre and wider community at night. That is the sort of thing we need to see replicated.

The assets in our school estate run to millions of pounds. Why would we not want them to be used? Why would we not want people coming in and seeing around our schools and using them? Why do we not want to see the link made between parents being at school functions and events, getting to know the school, becoming comfortable with it and seeing what is going on, and the education of our children? That is something we should all welcome.

I understand some of Mr Sheehan's concerns, but I remind him that this is a Department that spends £1.8 billion on education and £160 million to £170 million some years on capital investment. This is one of the biggest-spending Departments in the Northern Ireland Executive. We have a huge asset base, so it is only right and proper that we use it. Mr Sheehan made a point about the authority not owning the schools in the Catholic maintained sector. I want to see us embracing the community use of school premises, and I hope that they would embrace this and a later amendment and say, "This is our opportunity to really make sure that our school becomes the hub of a community". That is why I am so supportive of amendment No 4.

I probably touched on amendment No 5 being too specific in its reference to Catholics and Protestants, which is probably slightly unneeded. I hope that Mr Kinahan moves the UUP amendment. It is a sensible change; it makes sense to do that.

The amendments in the group are very much designed by all Members to try to improve the Bill within a limited window of opportunity. I am disappointed that petitions of concern have been used in such large numbers over the amendments, but we are where we are. I thank Members who will support the amendments that I tabled, and I will support some of the others.

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. As has been stated, amendment Nos 1, 2 and 5 would place a duty on the Education Authority to encourage, facilitate and promote integrated and Irish-medium education. I should make it clear that there already exists a duty on my Department to encourage and facilitate the development of Irish-medium education under article 89(1) of the Education Order 1998 and to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education under article 64(1) of the Education Reform Order 1989. Both those duties are taken seriously by my Department.

The Department will fulfil its duty through its strategic management responsibilities for the authority and will hold it to account through the management statement and financial memorandum. Indeed, that is how the Department meets its duty as described in current legislation in respect of the ELBs. Regardless of what happens — I know that the vote is something of a foregone conclusion, with petitions of concern tabled — the new authority will have a duty on it. My Department's duty is reflected on and part of the role of the authority.

I now turn to some of the comments made by Members in the debate. I disagree with some of Mr Lunn's comments on my Department's role regarding integrated education. I assure the House that I will live up to my responsibilities with regard to the ruling in the Drumragh judgement. However, I will not take the legal interpretation of that judgement from certain newspapers or columnists; I will take it from legal advisers. I will not go into some of the commentary from the weekend, but it was a bit off the mark. Duties are called for by some of the amendments, but, regardless of what happens today, the authority will not be able to dismiss its duties on that matter, and a number of Members referred to that.

Amendment No 3, tabled by Mr McCallister, would place a duty on the Education Authority to encourage, facilitate and promote shared education. I support the principle of the amendment and where it wishes to bring us. However, there is a certain flaw, at this stage, in tabling the amendment. I will cover some of the points. Mr McCallister will be reassured to know that I am preparing a stand-alone Bill on shared education that will address the amendment. Work has commenced on a shared education Bill that I am keen to introduce to the Assembly in this mandate. I do not believe, therefore, that this legislation is the right vehicle to bring forward that programme of work, which, I think, the vast majority of Members support. I do not think that it can be achieved by a simple clause being added to the Bill, although the clause may be relevant to the next Bill. Certainly, I am more than happy to engage with Mr McCallister on that matter in preparation for the Bill, or perhaps he will wish to table an amendment to the future Bill. If we accept today's amendment, the challenge is this: how would anyone hold the authority to account for facilitating and promoting shared education if there is no legal definition? That is the difficulty. There is a definition of shared education. My Department has a definition of shared education. That is how we brought forward the shared education campuses, contrary to Mr Agnew's suggestion —

Mr Agnew: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will give way in a moment.

That is contrary to Mr Agnew's suggestion that we simply sent out a note saying that, if anybody had any ideas for what a shared education campus should look like, they should send us a letter and we would think about it. We sent detailed criteria to all bidders and judged it against detailed criteria. In the first bid, three campuses were successful. We have reissued the bids and hope for wide interest on that. A shared education definition has also allowed us to move forward in a number of areas, including the announcement by the First Minister and deputy First Minister only a number of weeks ago of a £25 million programme for shared education, with a significant amount of that money coming from Atlantic Philanthropies. We have also made quite a significant bid to the next round of European funding to advance shared education. There is a definition, but there is no legal definition.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Minister for giving way. I previously asked a question for written answer on the definition of shared education. The answer came back — I paraphrase, because I do not have it in front of me — that there is no definition.

Mr O'Dowd: That just goes to prove that even I can get it wrong: there is a definition. There is a definition on my Department's website. It depends how you framed the question, of course, and I am more than happy to revisit it. However, be assured that the shared education campuses, the £25 million funding secured from the Executive and Atlantic Philanthropies and other shared education programmes run on a definition.

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to the Minister for giving way. He will be aware of the work done by Queen's University's centre for shared education. If the definition is so well advanced, will he not consider, if the amendment is made, bringing it forward at Further Consideration Stage?

4.15 pm

Mr O'Dowd: No, because I do not think that it is an amendment-style piece of legislation. First and foremost, it will be a short Bill, but it deserves — you have made this argument yourself today — proper scrutiny by the Assembly. There is no reason why it should go through an accelerated passage stage. It requires to be debated because there will be some contrary views on what the legal definition of shared education should be. If Mr McCallister's amendment comes forward, either as a substantive clause in the Bill or an amendment, there will be questions about how that clause and that duty will work. It deserves the scrutiny of the Assembly, rather than a simple clause attached to a Bill that is going through under accelerated passage.

Mr Lunn: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will, yes.

Mr Lunn: Far be it from me to promote either the definition or the cause of shared education — as everybody knows, I have mixed views about it — but I wonder how helpful a firm legal definition would be. Shared education has been with us in various forms for donkey's years. It is shared classes, shared facilities, shared transport, shared campuses and shared teachers. There may not be a firm definition, but everybody has a pretty clear vision of what it means, surely.

Mr O'Dowd: Yes. I will respond to one of the points that you raised. Sharing among whom? What is a shared class? What is a shared trip? We are injecting significant amounts of public money into this programme, and we want to be assured that what we are involved in is not a joint trip, a joint class or a joint programme. We want to ensure that young people are coming together to share education and learn about each other from each other. Our community relations work in the Department has changed over a number of years as community relations work and equality and diversity work have evolved. Teachers tell me stories of how they were involved in community relations work a number of years ago. They went on a bus to a venue, and the other school went on its bus to the venue. They went into the venue and this school sat here and that school sat there, and that was community relations. We have moved beyond that, but we need to give shared education its right place in educational features, in the Education Department and in education policy. It deserves its own Bill and deserves legislative recognition, and I believe that that is where Mr McCallister's amendment belongs at this time.

I will move on to amendment No 4. Again, I fully support the principles behind the amendment — to encourage, facilitate and promote the community use of schools — but, again, how do we hold the authority to account and how does the authority hold the schools to account for not encouraging, facilitating and promoting the community use of schools? The amendment, in my opinion, does not do it. When we issued guidance earlier this year, I think, and had a joint launch with the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure in terms of community use of schools for sports clubs etc, I said that, if schools did not improve the community use of their premises, we should look at legislation. At this moment in time, I believe that the guidance provides them with many of the answers to the unanswered questions that they were asking in relation to insurance and how to work with your local education and library board. I was interested to hear Mr Craig's —

Mr Craig: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: Just let me finish this point, and then I will bring you in.

I was interested to hear Mr Craig's point on how you ensure child safety etc. All those questions were posed and answered through our guidance. Currently, around 80% of schools are involved in community use. I would like to see that increased to 100%. I am very conscious and agree with Members that, with restricted budgets, our schools should be community facilities and community centres and should be used for a wide range of activities other than their formal role of education, but I believe that, to achieve that, if the current guidance does not work and Members want to move to legislation, it deserves more legislation than a simple clause.

I will bring in Mr Craig.

Mr Craig: I thank the Minister for giving way on that point. I think that he and I fundamentally agree on the community use of schools. I can quote several good examples of how that is done, and Laurelhill Community College is a prime such example. However, I have also met representatives of schools who refuse to do that, some of whose schools have ended up being closed because of their failure to engage with the community. On several occasions, Minister, I have also come across a board putting obstacles in the way of the community use of a school. That is why I agree with John that there should be something in the legislation that forces them to promote the community use of schools.

Mr O'Dowd: Again, I find myself not disagreeing with the Member. The question that I keep coming back to concerns an amendment. What is the meaning of:

“encourage, facilitate and promote the community use of school premises”?

How will that be used as a guarantor? I will use your example: if, in your opinion, a board or the authority is not helping a school, how will you hold them to account under that? It needs to be fleshed out. It requires further work and deserves much more than an amendment to a Bill.

Article 140 of the 1989 order places a duty on the board of governors of each individual controlled school and trustees and managers of voluntary and grant-maintained integrated schools to:

“have regard to the desirability of school premises being made available ... for use by members of the community served by the school.”

Mr McCallister: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: Just give me one second.

The amendment does not duplicate that provision, but I think that the current provision goes much further. I accept that “desirability” is not a very strong word in legal terms, and perhaps legislation or an amendment at Further Consideration Stage could be used to amend the current order and add greater value to the intentions of the proposer of the amendment and many of those who support it.

Mr McCallister: Maybe I could correct the Minister: Mr Allister is much angrier than I have ever been.

I agree with Mr Craig. School involvement in the community and the community use of schools are very patchy across Northern Ireland. Some are much more open to it. Mr Craig rightly pointed out that, in some cases, even the board, or individuals on the board, can also be problematic. The amendment is one way of making this much more even across Northern Ireland.

Mr O'Dowd: Apologies to Mr McCallister. I read in a recent article that Mr Allister is actually quite cuddly — [Laughter.] — but I do not believe everything that I read in the newspapers either.

We want to achieve the same outcomes, but I question whether the amendment will achieve those outcomes. I do not think that the amendment should be moved, but, if it is moved and the House supports it, so be it. It will not do any harm to the Bill, and it certainly will not do any harm to the objectives that you set out. However, I would certainly like to return to it in the future. If the current guidance does not achieve its goals and there is no significant increase in the level and type of community use of schools, we should return to it through a broader legislative framework.

I also alert Mr Rogers, who —

Mr Newton: I thank the Minister for giving way. There is, at this time, an ambition and plan for Elmgrove Primary School and Avoniel Primary School to move to a new build on the Avoniel site. The secret of the success of investment there will be to build a relationship with Belfast City Council so that the adjacent Avoniel playing fields and Avoniel leisure centre can form part of the plan. If we are to wait until the work necessary, as you describe it, is done, the opportunity for the real enhancement of primary education in what is a difficult area is likely to be lost.

Would it not be appropriate to allow this amendment to go through on the basis that we are working towards that aspiration?

Mr O'Dowd: I do not have the full details of the case that you are referring to, but on the broader principles, as you outlined, even now, you could achieve that goal. You do not need this amendment to achieve that goal, and there are many fine examples of current investment that is going into schools and of the previous investment that has gone into schools where we have worked with other statutory agencies, including the council.

In fairness to Belfast City Council, it came to me about two years ago and discussed with me its leisure plans moving forward. Ever since, we have been working along with Belfast City Council, back and forth, alerting it to our proposals, and it has been alerting us to its proposals, to see whether there is a way that we can work in tandem in the provision of community facilities. However, this amendment is not necessary to achieve the goals that you speak of. As you said, it is a matter for the House. If the House wishes to agree it, it does no harm to the Bill, and it maybe sends out an alert that things need to change.

Mr Rogers said that, while he was supportive of the amendment, he did not wish any further burden to be placed on school leaders. If we pass this legislation, there will be a further burden placed on school leaders. To what degree, I do not know, but, certainly, there will be another aspect. It may not be significant, and it may, in fact, be insignificant, but there will be some aspect of the authority placing extra scrutiny on schools to ensure that they are open to community use. That may not prove to be significant or a difficulty.

I turn to amendment No 8. Again, this is an unnecessary amendment. Clause 4, which amendment No 8 wishes to amend, is a normal, regular clause, which we include in every piece of legislation that comes before this House and will be in existing legislation that governs many of the functions and roles of Departments and public bodies moving forward. There seems to be a conspiracy theory boiling in the Ulster Unionist Party that I will use this clause to bring forward all forms of legislation that I will not have to bring before the House and that I will do away with all and sundry under this devilish clause that I have dreamt up.

I wish it were that simple, but it is not. Mrs Overend says that she does not trust me. She does not have to trust me under clause 4 because, once I bring forward a negative resolution to the Committee and the Assembly is alerted that there is a negative resolution in play, any Member of the Committee can pray against it or any Member of the Assembly can pray against it. Once that happens, it has to come before the Assembly for full scrutiny. So, it is not a case of me going into a dark room somewhere under candlelight and writing out legislation, signing it off and then it becomes law. That cannot happen under clause 4. I have to come before the Committee. All the members of the Committee have to agree. All the Members of the Assembly have to agree because, once one Member objects, it has to go to affirmative resolution. So, whether Mrs Overend trusts me or not, I assume that she trusts herself. Therefore, under clause 4 as it is currently drafted, her rights and the rights of Members of this Assembly to interrogate legislation have not been diminished in any way, and it is not unique in any way to this legislation.

I think that Mr Kinahan or maybe Mrs Overend suggested that I let them know what I am going to bring forward. I have no plans to bring forward any matters at this stage. Over this last three years as Minister, I think that I brought, maybe, two negative resolutions to the Committee. Maybe it was three, but that is about it, tops. I do not expect, that, as a result of the six-clause Bill here, I will be bringing forward weekly resolutions. A number may come through over a period of years, but, as I said, under the current drafting of this clause, any Member of this House can ensure that it goes through full Assembly scrutiny.

There I leave it, Deputy Speaker. I have made my views known on the various amendments before us, and so be it.

4.30 pm

Mr Lunn: It has certainly been an interesting morning, and most of the afternoon. First, I will deal with accelerated passage. Mr McCallister has consistently opposed that procedure. In the normal way, so we would we; and I think he probably knows that. However, as the Minister has just said, this is a six-clause Bill. We were in a situation where the Minister came to the Committee and made a plea for accelerated passage. That plea was accepted by four of the five parties represented on the Committee on the basis that using the normal procedure had the potential to cause enormous difficulties down the line if we did not get the Bill through before 1 April. It was likely that that would happen; so, we accepted accelerated passage.

I have used the word "simple" before. It really is quite a simple Bill, but some of us have used the opportunity to try to amplify it slightly and to tie down a few things, particularly about representation and making it absolutely clear that the obligations currently on the Department and the board will transfer to the new authority, with the slight extra pressure of the use of the word "promote". Frankly, there is nothing here that the normal passage and discussion would have changed, except that we might have had more amendments. I do not think that it would have made any difference in the number of petitions of concern that were put down. It may be that all of our perfectly sensible and rational suggestions are going to be voted down here by the petition of concern. We will have discussions with the parties to see if we can come up with something and agree on one amendment, particularly on the representation on the authority, for Further Consideration Stage. We will see if the DUP sticks to its guns and uses its mighty wrecking ball to come in again and ruin the amendment. We will just have to see.

I heard the Minister's comment about clause 4(3). That is a regular one, is it not? I think that the Ulster Unionists are being oversensitive about that.

Mr Agnew gave us quite a lurid description of some examples of shared schooling. I completely agree with him, but I am not totally against shared education, per se. As I said to the Minister in an intervention, I wonder why we are so hung up on the legal definition, when you think that over half the schools in Fermanagh, for instance, are already sharing in a perfectly acceptable way. We had an example at the Committee, just last week.

The arrangement at Cross and Passion College and Ballycastle High School is a fantastic example of how this can come about and how it can be developed.

I will go back to our amendments. Amendment No 1 is a pretty straightforward attempt to enshrine the use of the word “promote” into legislation. As I said a few hours ago, the Assembly voted to accept this on 23 November 2010 and nobody objected to it. The vote was 39-0, so it was not a huge turnout, but no party objected to it. So, we feel that it is reasonable to ask to bring that into legislation, and this is a convenient time to do it. It might be better if there were some way in which we could amend the 1989 Order, which would bring it through, but this is a way to do it. I remain extremely disappointed by the DUP’s opposition to that amendment. I do not accept their objections or the rationale or reasons they give for those objections. The new concept that has come up, recently, from both unionist parties that we need a single school system is so unrealistic that it does not hold water.

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to Mr Lunn for giving way. Does that not show that, while the five parties are in the Executive, there is no straight Executive policy as to what the future of education might look like? The Minister is for shared education, the Alliance Party is for integrated, the Ulster Unionists and the DUP are a mix between one single system and a bit of everything. Maybe Mr Rogers can correct me, but until you work out the Government of Northern Ireland’s policy to deal with education, you will get a petition of concern in respect of amendments. You need to get a policy. A Government with no policy on education is not very well placed to help our children.

Mr Lunn: Mr McCallister appears to want support from us for his amendment but continually castigates us for every action that we try to take. The Alliance Party is not purely into integration. That must be clear by now. A single school system, in theory, may have some merit. Maybe 200 years down the line, this country might come to that conclusion; frankly, I doubt it. We have no intention, unlike, I suspect, the proponents of a single school system, because their vision of a single school system does not include Catholic maintained, integrated, or Irish-medium. That is what a single school system is to my colleagues to the left.

We favour faith-based education. We favour parental choice in education, and I know that Mr McCallister agrees. Those are the two words that matter. It is the option for a parent to send their children to the nearest good school of their choice. If we can get to the point where Protestant children feel perfectly comfortable going to a Catholic school, and some of them do, that is excellent. That is parental choice.

Mr Hazzard: I thank the Member for giving way. Will the Member then agree that such parental choice should not be described by his colleague as educational apartheid and segregation?

Mr Lunn: I recall his intervention, although maybe I was not paying enough attention. If Mr Lyttle wants to clarify that, he is perfectly welcome to intervene, to get me off the hook.

Mr Lyttle: I was referring to a comment made by the First Minister, who referred to the education system as a form of apartheid, yet my point was that the track record of delivery in trying to address that seems very scant.

Mr Lunn: Yes, the system that we have at the moment has elements of enforced separation, but it should not be enforced; it should be open to any parent and child to go to the school of their choice. I continue to say on behalf of the integrated movement that there is no barrier whatsoever, spoken or unspoken, for any child to come to an integrated school. That is what it is about.

We are 40-odd years down the line with integrated schools. I think that Brian Mawhinney set up the first one way back then. We have, I think, 1,150 schools in the Province, unless the Minister has closed any this week, 62 of which are integrated. Where is the threat? I keep looking at the unionists when I say that, but where is the threat to the CCMS? It has come out into the open this week through the press in its response to our review of these matters and stated quite unequivocally, as it did at the Committee only two weeks ago, that it wishes that the appropriate authorities would stop trying to promote integrated education. When its representative came to the Committee, he said that it would never countenance a Catholic school transforming to integrated status. He said that they exist to open Catholic schools, maintain them and close them. If the option is to allow the amalgamation of a Catholic school with a local controlled school to form an amalgamation, integration or call it what you like, they will say no. They will close that Catholic school and distribute the children around other Catholic schools. I am determined to be even-handed here.

I move to amendment No 3, which is Mr McCallister’s amendment on shared education. I do not know whether he will move it or not; it is up to him. If he does, we will support it.

It is a good concept.

Amendment No 4 refers to community use. I appreciate that this has been much discussed over the last few years through Mr McNarry’s private Member’s Bill and, more recently, by the Department. At the end of the day, this is a desirable thing that should be happening. In any of my contact down the years with schools, whether it was in my old days, or my children’s or my grandchildren’s day, schools were being used by the community, and that needs to be encouraged. There is not a very strong onus in the wording of Mr McCallister’s amendment. It makes the point to the new authority that it is something to be encouraged. I am sure that there are things that the boards could have been doing and probably have not been doing to explain to schools how to do it, how to get round the insurance problems, the staffing and security problems, and how to work out leases if it came to that. There are things that could be done. For my money, the amendment is valid and has a place in the Bill.

Amendment No 5 is from the Green Party. Of course, I would support it, would I not? However, it does not advance the situation as far as I can see. All that it does is to restate what is already in legislation. There is no harm in it, but I do not see the point in it. However, we will not vote against it.

With regard to amendment No 8, I must say that I have never managed to fully get my head around affirmative and negative resolution, and I fancy that I will leave this place in a few years’ time still not knowing what it all means. Given the suspicion that Mrs Overend talked about towards the Minister, if the Ulster Unionists would be more comfortable with affirmative resolution — everything has to come before the House rather than being slipped through as she put it, or under candlelight as the Minister put it — that is fair enough. If that provides reassurance to people who have some doubts on those matters, why not? If that amendment is moved, we will vote for it.

That is about it from me, Mr Deputy Speaker. We have a long way to go with this yet. I fancy that we are in for more trouble over the next few hours. However, we will be moving our amendments and trying to put them to a vote.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Members should note that, as amendment Nos 1 and 5 are mutually exclusive, if amendment No 1 is made, I will not call amendment No 5. Before I put the Question, I remind Members that amendment No 1 requires cross-community support due to a valid petition of concern.

New Clause

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): We now come to the second group of amendments for debate, which concerns departmental grant aid to sectoral bodies. With amendment No 6, it will be convenient to debate amendment No 7. Members should note that amendment Nos 6 and 7 are mutually exclusive.

Members should resume their seats and desist from talking in the Chamber. Members. Order.

Mr O'Dowd: I beg to move amendment No 6: After clause 3 insert

Grants to sectoral bodies

3A. The Department may, subject to such conditions as it thinks fit, pay grants to any body which is recognised by the Department as representing the interests of grant-aided schools of a particular description.”

The following amendment stood on the Marshalled List:

No 7: After clause 3 insert

“Funding of Sectoral Bodies

3B. The Department may, subject to such conditions as it thinks fit, pay grants to any body which is recognised by the Department as representing the interests of controlled schools, or any body which is recognised by the Department as representing grant-aided schools of any other particular description “.— [Miss M McIlveen.]

Amendment Nos 6 and 7 are concerned with the funding of bodies that represent the interests of grant-aided schools. Unlike the other education sectors, the controlled sector has lacked a funded body to provide it with a voice and support it. I want to address that deficiency.

I have already given a commitment to fund the establishment and running costs of that body to my Executive colleagues, the Education Committee and, during Second Stage, to Members. I also set out the functions that that body will be funded to undertake. I also agreed with Executive colleagues to explore a more robust underpinning to my commitment. That can be best delivered by making that provision within the Bill.

Underpinning will also include a number of administrative measures. My Department's corporate and business plan will include a requirement for the Department to provide funding for a controlled sectoral support body, and the funding of a controlled schools sectoral support body will require a formal contractual agreement between my Department and the body. That will set out clearly the objectives against which the organisation is required to deliver.

The further amendment tabled by Miss McIlveen and Mr McCausland is therefore unnecessary. The additional wording refers to:

"as representing the interests of controlled schools".

That is superfluous. The amendment that I proposed states that funding can be provided to any body that is recognised by the Department as representing grant-aided schools of any description. That encapsulates all sectoral interest groups and avoids the potential difficulty in seeking to name all those groups.

My stated commitment to providing funding for a controlled sectoral support body negates the need for the inclusion of a specific reference to the body in legislation. In light of that, I trust that amendment No 6 will be agreed. However, if amendment No 6 falls, I will not oppose amendment No 7.

Miss M McIlveen: Throughout the various incarnations of the Education Bill that have come before the House, the DUP has consistently advocated the controlled sector being afforded the same representative rights as every other sector in education in Northern Ireland. One of the many fundamental concerns that we had about the first Education Bill was that the controlled sector was being placed at a clear disadvantage compared with other sectors in education in Northern Ireland. My concern with the first Bill was that while the ethos of other schools was to be protected, that of controlled schools was to fall by the wayside.

The Catholic maintained sector is represented by CCMS, the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools. It describes itself as the advocate for the Catholic maintained schools sector in Northern Ireland. CCMS was established under the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989. While its primary purpose is to provide upper-tier management for the sector, with the principal objective of raising standards, it has a much wider remit. The body, in its own words, states that it:

"has a wider role within the Northern Ireland education sector and contributes with education partners to policy on a wide range of issues such as curriculum review, selection, pre-school education, pastoral care and leadership."

It also states that it:

"supports trustees in the provision of school buildings and governors and principals in the effective management and control of schools."

The Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 imposed a duty on the Department of Education to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education. As a result, the Department began to grant-aid the Northern Ireland Council for Integrated Education — or NICIE, as it is known. NICIE describes itself as "an ethos body with a representational role", and it is a voice for its sector.

The Department of Education set up Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta (CnaG) in 2000 as the representative body for Irish-medium education. Its purpose is:

"to promote, facilitate and encourage Irish-medium Education."

Schools represented by NICIE teach around 7% of the children in Northern Ireland; those represented by CnaG less than 1%; and those by CCMS around 37%. The controlled sector up to this point has had no equivalent body to promote, encourage and facilitate the development of the controlled sector, despite educating around 41% of the children here.

I welcome the fact that the Minister outlined, during Second Stage, the role of this new body. That was agreed by the Executive on 9 September. At a time of budgetary constraints, falling enrolments in areas, area planning and a move towards shared education, it is perhaps more important than ever that the controlled sector has its own voice. The Education Authority cannot advocate for the controlled sector as it will be the one taking the decisions. A separate, funded body is required, similar to those for the Catholic-maintained, integrated and Irish-medium sectors.

This is a massive step forward for the sector; one that we, as a party, particularly welcome, and it is welcomed by those in the controlled sector. While we welcome the amendment tabled by the Minister, which means that the Department can pay grants to any body that is recognised as representing the interests of grant-aided schools, including voluntary grammars, the controlled sector wants to see as robust an underpinning as possible of its position. Therefore, we have tabled an amendment that specifically refers to the controlled sector as well as allowing for the ministerial discretion contained in the Minister's amendment. The Minister may believe that this is unnecessary, but our amendment is about giving the maximum comfort to the controlled sector. As I indicated during Second Stage, this is a natural consequence of the uncertainty that has been hanging over education for the past seven years and the controlled sector's lack of representation while others have had theirs.

Members should be mindful that what is being tabled today is a power not a duty. While this is not the controlled sector body being on an equal basis with other bodies, it goes some way to address the gap in support and advocacy. I very much hope that the Assembly, particularly those Members who talk most about equality and fairness, will recognise the need for this and support this amendment.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I welcome the opportunity to speak on this group of amendments. It was outlined in earlier comments that there could be no doubt that this Minister has demonstrated a welcome commitment to address various gaps, for want of a better phrase, in relation to controlled sector advocacy and the role of a controlled sector body in the months and years ahead.

I specifically mention the investment that was made in research to bring together a body under the guise of the former ESA Bill and how that will now progress in the months ahead. At a recent Committee meeting, and at an earlier stage, a commitment was given that the financing of such a body would be underpinned in DE's corporate business plan.

5.30 pm

Sinn Féin welcomes the fact that those issues are being addressed. However, I agree with the Minister in that I do not feel that the DUP's amendment is necessary. Indeed, I think that its Members are being quite mischievous. We are more than happy to support the Minister's amendment. It is inclusive of all sectoral interests and actively avoids falling into the prescriptive nightmare of naming one group or another.

The DUP needs to be careful. It seems that it is OK to use one sense of logic about levelling the playing field when it comes to the controlled sector, but that same logic does not apply to the integrated or Irish-medium sectors. I am quite happy to give way if somebody wants to intervene, but it seems like hypocrisy to say that there is a historical imbalance and that we need to address certain gaps, so we need to name the controlled sector. If that is levelling the playing field, surely the extension of such logic is, equally, what we discussed this morning about the Irish-medium and integrated sectors.

I put that to the DUP and would appreciate it if somebody cleared it up. It is an imbalance that needs to be addressed. As I said, Sinn Féin is content that the Minister is continuing to engage with controlled sector representatives. That is positive and to be welcomed. We are happy to support the Minister's amendment. If that is not accepted, we will support amendment No 7.

Mr Rogers: Throughout the ESA process, I was adamant that a sectoral body for controlled schools was essential. Just as the SDLP wants proper representation and authority for all sectors, the same should be the case with funding arrangements and not selecting any one side for preferential treatment. I declare an interest as chair of Grange Primary School's board of governors.

I understand why some Members opposite interpret CCMS as creating preferential treatment for the maintained sector. However, we have to go back to the original reasons why CCMS was set up in the 1989 Order, which was to raise standards. It provided an invaluable service to the Catholic maintained sector. However, 25 years later, we are in a different educational landscape. We will support amendment No 6. Drawing attention to a particular sector in amendment No 7 gives, rightly or wrongly, a perceived preference to that sector. While I cannot fault Members opposite for fighting their corner, I am fighting for all corners.

Mrs Overend: In this second group of amendments, I see two amendments of the same type. It just seems that the DUP has gone slightly further than the Education Minister to specify the controlled sector. Naturally, the Ulster Unionist Party supports amendment No 7.

In the House and in Committee, the Minister has said that he is setting up a sectoral body for the controlled sector, as it seems that he is unwilling to remove CCMS. Whichever way it is, it is important that all sectors are on an even keel. We have a number of concerns about the amendment. It seems that the formation of the controlled sectoral body is not enshrined in the legislation, and we are to take the Minister's word in the Chamber that that is what he wants to do. I wonder why he does not want to put that in legislation.

Other sectoral bodies supporting other types of education could be funded under the wording of this amendment, I presume, but they are not specified. I believe, therefore, that the amendment is very open-ended. Does the Minister plan to do the same for other groups, such as the voluntary or integrated sectors? I look forward to the Minister's response to that.

I also want to question the Minister about how he intends to assess the validity of any group that is applying for grant aid from the Department. Is there a chance that funding for more than one group within one sector can be successful? Those are a number of questions that need to be answered. The amendments seem open-ended, and we need clarification on those matters.

Mr Lunn: We are perfectly happy to support amendment No 6, and, if it does not pass for some reason, we are just as happy to support amendment No 7, the reason being that there is not a pick of difference between them. They both say that:

"The Department may, subject to such conditions as it thinks fit, pay grants to any body".

That is the first line of both of them. The second one happens to specify controlled schools. Frankly, so what? It is any body that the Department thinks fit. To me, it is another example of perhaps the slight lack of trust. Mrs Overend said that she is prepared to take the Minister's word on some aspect — I forget what it was — but at the same time does not —

Mrs Overend: I did not say that.

Mr Lunn: Those are your words. Frankly, I have no problem with the establishment, as I have said many times, of a controlled sector body. I think that it is high time that we had such a body to mirror the operation of CCMS, NICIE and CnaG. I am sure that this section is necessary in such a Bill, so whichever one of them goes through, I do not really mind, but I think that, normally, if there was not a level of suspicion around, it would probably be amendment No 6. It is a question of the Queen's English, but we had all this with the ESA Bill when different lines of perfectly straightforward text meant different things to different people, and it looks like we are at it again here. We will support amendment No 6 or No 7.

Mr McCausland: The system of education that we have in Northern Ireland is complex, and, over the years, we have built up a complex system of governance and an architecture of governance and support. It has been built up over 40 years and added to from time to time. We are not starting with a blank sheet.

It was pointed out by Mr Hazzard that there appears, in his view, to be some inconsistency in the position taken by the DUP, but the basis of our amendment is that, whilst CCMS and NICIE have their basis in the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 and therefore have a quarter of a century of history behind them, for that quarter of a century there was a gap, and he himself admitted that. It was never addressed over that period. CCMS and NICIE have their basis in the 1989 Order, and we are seeking a basis in this piece of legislation for a sectoral body for the controlled sector.

We have seen very clearly the benefits of having a sectoral body, because we have seen the operation of the other sectoral bodies over a long number of years. It is a research body, a support body and an advocacy body. It promotes the ethos of that sector and speaks up for that sector. Even today, we have seen in the 'Irish News' how CCMS is able to speak out clearly and unmistakably on behalf of the sector that it represents. It is important, therefore, that there is a sectoral body for the controlled sector.

We have talked a little bit about equality. The fact is that we will never be able to achieve full equality in the education system because we have a situation where the trustees in the maintained sector own the very buildings and the ground, and that gives them a different situation from those in other sectors. I commend our amendment No 7 because I believe that it gives us a solid basis for what has long been needed, and that is a sectoral body for the largest sector, namely the controlled sector, which, as my colleague pointed out, represents 41% of the children in Northern Ireland.

Mr Craig: I will start off by declaring an interest as a member of the board of governors of Killowen Primary School and Laurehill Community College, both of which are controlled sector schools.

In fairness, I am also the product of a controlled school and proud of that fact.

I look with envy at the CCMS and how it has supported its sector. I recognise and give cognisance to the fact that there are better educational outcomes in that sector than in the controlled sector. That clearly underlines the need for a sectoral body for the controlled sector.

We cannot continue with the situation of not fully supporting, in every way we can, 41% of children in Northern Ireland. Every report on the controlled sector clearly highlights the underachievement in the sector. Whether you call it a lack of trust or a lack of faith, it does not really matter. That is why we support our amendment No 7, which puts the wording "controlled sector" into the Bill. We dearly want the sectoral support body to be set up and improvements brought about in the controlled sector. I support amendment No 7.

Mr McCallister: There is probably not a huge difference between the two amendments. The one thing that I point out is that the debate clearly points to the lack of trust at the very heart of our Government between the two large parties in that Administration.

The one guide for legislation is that, if there is doubt and you have concerns about something, you are probably better off putting it in the Bill. That is why I am probably closer to supporting the DUP amendment, which is amendment No 7.

Mr O'Dowd: Thank you, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank Members for their contributions. I listened to the arguments put forward but remain convinced that my amendment provides the best means by which funding can be provided to a sectoral support body for the controlled sector and, if appropriate, other sectoral representative bodies.

I believe that the concerns raised by Members are taken into account in the amendment; in my written commitments to Executive colleagues at an Executive meeting; through the inclusion of a sectoral body for the controlled sector in DE's corporate plan; and, moving forward, in Hansard.

For the record, I want to make it clear that the debate on the two amendments is not about whether there will be a controlled sectoral body, because there will be a funded controlled sectoral support body in the future. My officials have engaged with members of the controlled sector on how we can move that forward and, as each stage of the Bill is progressed, those engagements will intensify. So, the current debate is not about whether there will be a controlled sectoral support body; there will be one.

To a certain extent, I understand the reassurances sought by Members opposite and by some in the controlled sector, who want the sector to be named in the Bill. They believe that, moving forward, that would give them more certainty. Mr McCallister referred to a lack of trust. No one is naive around these parts. I suspect that there is a lack of trust, but I also suspect that there is uncertainty about the future. They want the controlled sector to be named in the Bill so that, if there is a change in Administration or whatever it may be, there will always be a reference point in legislation to why and how a sectoral support body for the controlled sector will be funded. However, I believe that as the controlled sectoral body builds with financial support from my Department, makes its place known and registers its commitment to education with the controlled sector schools, it will itself ensure its certainty and its funding.

I have accepted the need for a controlled sectoral support body. I do not necessarily agree with comments that the controlled sector had no voice. It was the role of the education and library boards to give a voice to controlled schools. Whatever the strengths and weaknesses of that, I now accept the argument that the controlled sector deserves to have its own body to give it a voice, to support it and to move it forward.

5.45 pm

A number of questions were posed during the debate about the purpose of the amendment. I think that Mrs Overend said that amendment No 6 is open-ended and that you could fund anyone under it. Technically, yes. They would certainly have to represent a sector of grant-maintained schools. If they were seeking funding from my Department, they would have to come forward with a proposal. That proposal would have to pass a business case, so it would have to represent value for money. Obviously, it would then be the decision of the Minister as to whether he would choose to fund that body moving forward. There are already provisions in legislation. Article 115 of the 1986 Order, I believe, allows me to do that anyhow, and we do use it sensibly and sparingly because, apart from the fact that we have significant budgetary pressures, I am conscious of a responsibility to deal responsibly with public funds.

We fund a number of bodies currently. For instance, we fund the integrated sector, which was referred to. It is funded through various articles. It is funded under article 64 of the 1989 Order, but it is not named, in that sense. CnaG is funded under article 89 of the 1998 Order, but, again, it is not named as one of the funded bodies. Other bodies are funded even though they are not named in legislation. There is a plethora of support organisations, particularly in the Irish-language sector, but we only fund one. We fund Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta. I appreciate that there are fewer bodies in the integrated sector, but, again, we fund one main body to promote the work of the integrated sector. Again, it boils down to business cases and proposals coming forward that we would only require to fund one sectoral support body in the controlled sector as well. So, I do not think that it opens the floodgates for representative bodies coming forward to say that they expect funding because this amendment is passed tonight.

Some Members referred to the role of CCMS and the role that it has played in improving education, particularly in the Catholic sector. That is very true, and I pay tribute to it for the role that it has carried out in improving educational outcomes not only in the Catholic sector; its input to the broader education debate has been very valuable. It has engaged at all levels of the education sectors and, at times, made interesting interventions. I do not agree with its intervention this morning as it was reported in newspapers. In fairness, I have not read its actual submission to the Committee. I do not agree with it as reported in the media.

Certainly, CCMS has made a significant contribution to education, both in the Catholic sector and across education, and that has come about, yes, as a result of legislation, as the Chair of the Committee pointed out. It has also come about because of the way that CCMS has developed its own organisation, the way it has engaged with its schools and the way it has gained the respect of schools in the Catholic sector moving forward. I have no doubt that the controlled sectoral support body will achieve that. It will take time to build, but I have no doubt that it will achieve those goals as well.

There are still huge challenges in the Catholic sector around educational attainment for young people. Huge challenges exist there as well, so we should not be under any illusions that it is all sorted in the Catholic sector and that everyone else is being left behind. CCMS will be the first to admit that there are huge challenges there, but its work has been vitally important in moving that on.

I have mentioned the role of NICIE in the integrated sector and CnaG. They, too, have spent this last number of years building their organisations and gaining the trust and respect of the various sectors and working with them in the promotion of their various sectors and have done very good work in doing so. It is now the turn of the controlled sector. Once again, I put on the record that, regardless of which amendment passes tonight, there will be a sectoral support body for the controlled sector.

It will be funded by the Department. The terms and conditions of what work will be carried out is reported in Hansard and in the Executive minutes. It will be in my Department's corporate plan. I have no doubt that they will move forward from strength to strength, regardless of which clauses are passed tonight.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I remind Members that amendment Nos 6 and 7 are mutually exclusive. If amendment No 6 is made, I will not call amendment No 7.

Mr Kinahan: I welcome the chance to put these forward. It is slightly strange when the first amendment, which is ours, is so different from the others. I welcome what we have just heard on the controlled sector body. I am pleased that we seem to be moving towards that. I also welcome the fact that we seem to be going quite quickly through things. I will do my best to be quick and concise as well.

Amendment No 9 proposes that the chairman be appointed on merit through a fair and open public competition. It is implicit that that would happen, but we would rather make it more explicit to ensure that it happens, so that whoever is appointing is not appointing a lackey. In the vision that I have for the shared future, we will get someone who will drive education forward, someone who wants to make education better for the pupils, rather than necessarily fighting the political battles that we have in here. We need to make sure that it is opened up, it is the best person for the job and it is not a closed shop. Let us start moving everything so that we get a world that works for education. We propose amendment No 9, so, obviously, I support it.

Amendment No 10, which is the Alliance amendment, wants to increase the political names on the board by two. Initially, I looked at it and thought that it seemed right because Alliance is the party that fights hardest for integrated, but do we want more politicians involved? I would love it if it were more UUP members, but it causes me discomfort because there is another side to it: it would be gerrymandering to give another to the DUP. We do not support the amendment; I do not think that we need more politicians on the board. I remember last week the Minister saying, "Let us keep this concise. Let us push it forward and get it working". We have to keep that in mind. I go back to the point that there are a lot of people missing from the board — we will get into that as the debate goes on — but we do not support amendment No 10 and will oppose it.

Amendment No 11, which is another Alliance amendment, deals with appointing the 11 remaining people on the board. The Ulster Unionist Party, as I have said before, would like to have every sector on the board. I feel that we are losing our way. We keep referring to how things were, whereas we should look at the proportions of how things exist at the moment. The voluntary grammar sector has a very large proportion — somewhere between 40% and 50%, depending on how you count it — of our pupils, and we are not putting them on the board. That very much drives our attitude to many of the amendments: if the voluntary sector is not there, we are not supporting them. It should be there with the right proportions. Equally, we want to see all sides of the community included, rather than having no sides. I would like no sides if we could get there, but it does not seem to exist, so we will go back to making sure that everybody is there instead.

We then have to think about the actual size. Are we getting too big? I suggest that we all use the next two weeks to talk to one another to find a suitable way forward to make sure that we get a board that will work and represent all sectors. We will oppose amendment No 11.

Amendment No 12 is the Sinn Féin amendment. It completely omits the voluntary sector, and therefore I cannot support it. It is essential, and part of our discussion this morning was that we needed to find a way forward of sharing our education. It is not just sharing across religions; it is sharing across types of school. Rather than one side going for one, it is getting everybody working together. We will not support amendment No 12.

I agree with the idea in amendment No 13, but it deals with only one or two sectors. Again, it leaves out the voluntary sector. As I have said, you cannot have that. We have to have a body that represents the schools as they are now and start looking forward. We spend our lives looking backwards, so we will oppose amendment No 13.

Amendment No 14 is the SDLP amendment. It comes closest to exactly what we wanted. When we were preparing our amendments, those are exactly the lines that we were going down. However, there was not enough time because of accelerated passage for us all to talk to one another, so it was better to step back and put in the few amendments that we have done and take these as they happen.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair)

I am totally against the use of the petition of concern at any time. I find it really depressing that anyone can use a petition of concern. We are a democratic body. People voted for us and we were elected, and that is how we should be doing things. The petition of concern was to protect the religious side of things. It is just being used by one side to stop things. We need to get into a new world where we are going forward, as I have said. Please let us stop using petitions of concern. I almost think that you should wear a badge of dishonour; it is just not how democracy should work.

We keep referring to 1986. We are now 28 years on from the 1986 Order. Are we not moving forward? Are we not looking for new ways of doing things? Let us keep trying to do it. In all the amendments, there are elements of people just fighting for their own.

Again, I go back to my point that I want to see us sitting down over the next two weeks and trying to find a way forward that will work for everyone.

6.00 pm

I made a speech on Saturday at our conference about the need to be agile and to fit with the way that businesses and schooling must work together to respond to the world. We are so slow in here; we are not moving forward; we are always going backwards. Let us try to find a way so that we are all agile, moving quickly and responding quickly. Despite saying that, this is the amendment that I would like to support. So, we support amendment No 14.

As such, we will also support amendment No 15, which adds in two spaces for the voluntary sector, which I think is right, because there are distinctly two groups. It also adds in Irish and integrated, and that is exactly what I wanted to see happening. This is how we should be going, and I think that that is being generous to the Irish. I was asked last week whether we would be putting Irish in there, and it is absolutely right that we do. Although it is a very small percentage of our pupils, they are the other sector and they should be there. Integrated is likely to be the one that expands, and we need to find a way of putting that change in place for the future. So, probably at the next stage, we will try to put in some review clause that looks at the numbers on the board being reviewed every five to 10 years. I would like to find a way forward, so we are working on that.

Amendment No 16 is our own amendment. It asks for no less than two teachers. Something that I have been very aware of, particularly after going to one school, is this: one of the more experienced but younger teachers said that many of the older teachers did not know how to use technology, did not know how things were working and that they were not totally au fait with many of the new ideas coming from other places. We need to find a way that does not bin the past and the experience but, equally, sucks in how we can all work together. I thought that one way was to get practising teachers on the board at the same time. There will be many there who will have experience through CCMS, or transferors and others, but, in most cases, they are all people who have been and done it in the old ways. I want to get a little bit more youth into it so that we understand the technologies of where we are going in the future. That was really what was driving me there. I think that we should have serving teachers involved so that we know about the things that are going on in schools at the very time.

Through amendment No 17, John McCallister is looking to specify the period for eight years, which I think is very, very sensible. We should support it. I am tempted to call it the Obama rule with the two American periods for the president. I think that it is right to limit it. I am slightly more concerned with the second half of the amendment, where you get to having been out for four years. I think that we should be looking to find a way to make sure that the person is still interested or involved in education or has the experience. Another question may need to be asked to make sure that they have not just gone away and lost interest and got out of touch. Otherwise, we support amendment No 17.

Amendment No 18 is the DUP amendment about the interim chief executive. It talks about the chief executive being appointed by the authority after a year. I think that that is very sensible and absolutely the right way forward. Again, get the authority to appoint them so that we move on in a world where they are building it with less political deadlock.

Amendment No 19 is Mr McCallister's amendment, which would appoint a standing committee to encourage, facilitate and promote shared education. Of course I support that. It is extremely good, and I think that we should be looking at some of the other recommendations that came from the body to see whether there is a way of building on that so that we put in some of the targets, timelines and the other things to make sure that shared education happens. We will support amendment No 19.

Amendment No 20 is the same thing. It encourages the use of school facilities and suggests a stranding committee to do so. I listened to the points made earlier. I struggle with it slightly, and I can see, as Mr Rogers said, it putting more pressure on the principals and the schools. It will vary throughout all the schools depending on whether the problems are insurance or whether too many other facilities would be better somewhere else, but it is the right way forward. As we build new schools and as we do it, it is the right thing to do. So, we will support amendment No 20.

As I said, we need to find a way forward to get all the sectors involved in a proportionate way and build so that we have something that works for the future. That means that the Ulster Unionist Party will support amendment No 9 and amendment Nos 14 to 20 but oppose amendment Nos 10 to 13.

Miss M McIlveen: As I outlined earlier, it is vital that the integrity of the 1986 order is protected. That Act set out the make-up of the boards on a 40%, 40%, 20% basis. This Bill is for the replacement of those five boards with a single authority, and it is no more than that. In those circumstances, the make-up of the authority should reflect those of the boards. It is for those reasons that we have tabled petitions of concern in respect of amendment Nos 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15. I said earlier that the Bill is not ESA by the back door, and I would certainly not like to see it being ESA by amendment either.

Amendment No 10 is one of self-interest for the Alliance Party, to gain a place on the authority. Despite the fact that, as Mr Kinahan pointed out, on party strength in the Assembly, the DUP would actually be a beneficiary of an additional place on the authority, we do not believe that we can support amendment No 10 either, particularly if we are to remain consistent in our approach to the integrity of the 1986 order.

The DUP is happy to support amendment No 9 as tabled by Mr Kinahan and Mrs Overend. We have consistently fought for and sought assurances that appointments are carried out in a thorough and fair, open process.

The DUP recognises that, with the existing time constraints, it would be impractical for the authority to be in place to make the appointment of the first chief executive. However, we do not feel that it is appropriate for the Department to appoint the first chief executive and then for them to be in place for maybe 10 to 15 years. An authority that sets the strategic agenda will want to have a chief executive that it feels will be capable of delivering that agenda. To ensure that the authority will have confidence in its chief executive, it should have a say in who that will be in the longer term.

The appointment of a chief executive is a key role that is played in many boards and should not be denied to the Education Authority, particularly at an important juncture when so many potentially seismic changes are coming through area planning and shared education. For that reason, amendment No 18 sets out a process by which that can be achieved. The interim chief executive will be in place to steer the authority through its initial period, but within one year the authority will begin the process to appoint a permanent chief executive. That will mean that there will be stability through the process of the establishment of the authority and for a reasonable time following that to ensure delivery. I feel that that process will also ensure public confidence in the appointment process, and I commend the amendment to the Assembly.

My party and I are happy to support amendment No 16. The voice of the teacher is often lost on such boards. I know that teachers did historically have a place on some education and library boards and made a valuable contribution to the discussions. I believe that that would be similar in this instance, and I think that it is important that they are there. Practical, hands-on experience of the impact of decisions is a valuable asset on any board, and the amendment would ensure that that voice is heard.

As I indicated earlier, we will support amendment Nos 19 and 20 as tabled by Mr McCallister. Unfortunately, we do have concerns about amendment No 17 as tabled by Mr McCallister. He has enjoyed a good run today, but sometimes good things come to end. We seek some clarity on it. We do not really feel that it is appropriate to limit the nominated persons on the authority to eight years. The proposed eight-year cap would evidently not apply to any other person serving on the board, only to those nominated by parties. I need to get clarity from the Minister as to whether that would extend to the other appointments and whether that would cause some sort of disparity among those on the board. If that is the case, we feel that it would be an effective guillotine on some of the experience and expertise that there might be, particularly if, after eight years, members left in one fell swoop. However, obviously that will change with party strengths, so, in many respects, there may be a natural change anyway.

As I am conscious of the time, I am happy to conclude on those remarks.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I will start with amendment No 17, which Miss McIlveen has just concluded on. I find myself in almost total agreement with everything that she said. We will oppose amendment No 17.

I will go through what Sinn Féin is going to do on these amendments. We will support amendment Nos 9 and 10; we oppose amendment No 11; amendment No 12 is our amendment; we oppose amendment Nos 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18; and we will support amendment Nos 19 and 20.

I will start at the end. Some may say that there is a contradiction in our position given that, earlier, we opposed amendments on shared education and encouraging schools to open their premises to the community. These two amendments place no statutory duty on the board or the Department about encouraging, facilitating and promoting shared education or the community use of school premises. We feel that setting up a committee to encourage, facilitate and promote shared education would be a help in bringing forward the shared education Bill, on which work has begun. On that basis, we will support both those amendments.

I will go through the amendments in order. Amendment No 9 is for appointments to be made on the basis of merit through a fair and open public competition. We are happy to support this amendment. I think that it is probably totally unnecessary because all appointments will be made in the way that the amendment describes, but we are happy to support it anyway.

Amendment No 10, tabled by the Alliance Party, would increase the number of political representatives on the board from eight to 10. I think that, on the basis of fairness, the Alliance Party should have a seat on the board and that it is unfair that the Alliance Party is excluded. I say that in the knowledge that the DUP would increase its representation on the board. However, in the interests of inclusivity, we will certainly support amendment No 10.

Of amendment Nos 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15, we think that our amendment is the best. It is the most inclusive. It does not include the voluntary grammar sector for a good reason. I said that I would be open to persuasion on the inclusion of voluntary grammar schools on the board. I have not been persuaded of that. I do not think that the argument is particularly strong. The voluntary grammar sector cherishes its voluntary status. It makes no sense for that sector to be on a board that is administering funds for other sectors. In my view, that is a good reason for not including it on the board.

Mr Kinahan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Sheehan: Sure.

Mr Kinahan: Thanks very much. Do you not realise that, although the board may be talking only about money that is going to other people, it does affect that sector because it all comes out of the same pot? So many decisions made by that board will affect the voluntary grammar sector that the logic is to include it. I go back to the point that it should be given proportional representation. If it comes to something that is nothing to do with that sector, maybe it should say, "Excuse me from this meeting", and then step out, which is what we all should do when we declare an interest. There are ways to do it, and it is better to include the sector than to exclude it.

6.15 pm

Mr Sheehan: I am not so sure that a lot of what would be discussed at the board would affect them, because their dealings would not be with the board. Voluntary grammars, as I understand it, deal directly with the Department, although I stand open to correction if I am wrong on that. That is another good reason why voluntary grammars should not be included on the board.

Steven Agnew's amendment No 13 is, again, not inclusive because there is no mention of Irish medium having a seat on the board. For that reason, we will oppose that amendment.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way, and I acknowledge his point. I recognised that, in the first group of amendments, others brought forward amendments to include the Irish-medium sector, which I supported. For that reason, I will not be moving my own amendment.

Mr Sheehan: OK. I thank the Member for that intervention.

Amendment No 16 suggests that two persons should be appointed by reason of being teachers serving in grant-aided schools at the time of their appointment. I am not saying that teachers could not fulfil that role, but teachers are trained to teach; it does not necessarily qualify them to go on this board. A lot of people could argue that the people appointed by political parties would not necessarily be qualified either. However, I am not sure why we should specifically mention teachers, as opposed to, for example, classroom assistants, other educationalists or an accountant. The mention of teachers limits our opportunity to appoint from a broader spectrum of people with expertise in operating a board.

I have dealt with amendment No 17. Amendment No 18 is on the issue of the appointment of the interim chief executive. To some extent, I again find myself in agreement with the DUP that there is a need for stability and for the new board to have strategic direction. The Minister has already agreed that the person will be appointed in an interim role, but I think that that requires a minimum of two years, and that is not spelt out in that particular amendment.

I think that I have covered all the amendments, so I will finish on that point. Go raibh maith agat.

Mr Rogers: I will be as brief as possible as well. The SDLP has emphasised how critical it is for the authority's board to accurately reflect our unique education landscape. That landscape has changed considerable since 1989 and will no doubt change considerably more over the next 25 years.

Like others, I am concerned about the use of so many petitions of concern. Listening to the Member who has just spoken, I think we should find good reasons for inclusion rather than exclusion. I am just thinking of a couple of towns, one of which has four grammar schools and three non-grammars. Surely if you are planning future education provision there through area planning and that, everybody needs to be around the table. Think of another town that has a maintained primary school, a controlled primary school, an integrated school and an Irish-medium school. If you are thinking of future planning in that area, you really need everybody around the table.

On the amendments, very quickly, it is worth stating about amendment No 9 that all appointments are based on merit and made through open public competition. I understand that the reasoning behind amendment No 10 is to ensure that as many political parties as possible are represented on the authority. However, it is a strategic education authority.

With due respect to all my colleagues around the Chamber this evening, who knows the education system best? Our Politicians or our educators? I say that we should not make the imbalance worse.

Amendment Nos 11 to 15 are subject to a petition of concern, but I would support amendment No 11 as a second preference to ours as it gives representation to all sectors. However, it would mean a reduction in controlled sector, maintained sector and community representatives. As I heard other Members saying, there are so many aspects to be facilitated, particularly of the controlled sector and the community, that that could be problematic.

To my mind, amendments No 12 and 13 leave out at least one important sector. The level of representation proposed fails to create a relevant and fairly constituted board.

As to amendment Nos 14 and 15, rather than altering the proposed membership, we believe that four additional seats should be created on the authority: two for voluntary grammar; one for Irish-medium; and one for the integrated sector. As well as easing competition for the community representative places, it is essential that all sectors, particularly those that educate over 50% of our post-primary children, are represented. The Bill is about children. It is about creating the correct educational opportunities for our children. We must keep that in mind.

Amendment No 16 would ensure teacher representation on the authority, which could only be good. We are happy with and will support amendment No 17. Amendment No 18 proposes:

"An interim chief executive of the Authority shall be appointed by the Department."

It goes on to propose that the authority will subsequently select its own permanent chief executive. To me, that makes good sense. Finally, we support amendment Nos 19 and 20.

Mr Lunn: I will go through the amendments in much the same way. Amendment No 9 addresses the need to appoint:

"on the basis of merit through a fair and open competition".

Frankly, in what other way would the Department or the Minister be allowed to appoint? I agree with others that it makes no difference whatsoever, so we will happily support it. Amendment No 10 is our proposal to increase political membership to 10, which is designed to bring the Alliance Party or someone whom we nominate on to the authority. I refer to the precedent of the Policing Board, which has 10 politicians representing all five Government parties. Our amendment would even give the DUP an extra member — every silver lining has a cloud. I am not sensing enormous support for that amendment, but I want you all to think about it all the same because I think that we have a right to be there. I will leave it at that.

There is a plethora of amendments similar to our amendment No 11, each giving an individual party's thoughts on how to make up a board. We tried not to increase the size of the board by too much, so it would go up from 20 to 22, and we had to adjust the transferor and maintained schools figures, each down by one. However, we think that that would provide a balance to the board.

Some people say that 22 is too many, but the SDLP's amendment goes beyond that by bringing the number up to 24 or 25. There are several points to be made here. The only board that I had any great dealings with over the years was the much-lamented, but not missed, South Eastern Education and Library Board. That was a board of 20 to cover just one educational area. I fancy that the Belfast Education and Library Board has even more. Tot up the number of people on the five boards that we have at the moment. The other day, someone gave a figure of 60 to the Committee, but I think that that was on the low side. It is more like 80 to 100. If we can get that number down to 22, 20 or 23, so what? I remind Members that this board started in Cairtriona Ruane's time, when it was supposed to be the ESA board of seven members. I remember being castigated, right, left and centre, for suggesting that that was a bit too small. I see you laughing, Chris, but it was before your time. It really was just too tight for something as ambitious as ESA.

With regard to the question about the voluntary grammars, I will say this: nobody fought harder against ESA than the voluntary grammars and the Governing Bodies Association on their behalf. They also made it absolutely clear that, if ESA came about, they wanted a place on the board. That was unequivocal.

Mr Kinahan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Yes.

Mr Kinahan: I just feel that that is slightly unfair on the voluntary grammars. They obviously wanted their position on it, and they were not included. That is why they were fighting it. I think that we need to accept that. They wanted to be part of the system. They were not fighting against everyone else but to be included.

Mr Lunn: Yes: I think I got that. I think that you are actually saying the same thing as me. If ESA or a similar-type body, such as the one that we are now discussing, were to come about, I think that, in the light of the number of pupils and the percentage of the school population that they represent, the voluntary grammars would want a place on it. It amuses me slightly that the Alliance Party is promoting the cause of the voluntary grammars to have a place on this board, but I think that it is fair.

You will notice that our amendment does not actually say "voluntary grammars", but "grammar schools". The reason for that is that there is also the section of controlled grammar schools. It is a moot point as to whether the controlled grammars have the greatest affinity with the controlled sector body or the voluntary grammars. I think that they have synergy with both. For that reason, we are quite happy just to leave it there with “grammar schools”.

I really do not think that a 22-person board will rock the universe. I think that it is still within the range of what is acceptable. In a way, it does not really matter what I think, does it? We have yet another petition of concern. The same applies to amendment No 12. Who has proposed this one? It is the Sinn Féin one, which does not refer to grammars at all. There we have a difference of opinion.

All of these amendments in this respect are petitioned by our good friends over here. Maybe we need to get together between now and the next stage — at least, some of the parties — and see whether we can come up with a compromise selection that is representative and does not offend anybody. I think that it can be done. It may well be a challenge for the DUP Members over here as to whether they can run with something like that. At least, we should put it before them. Clearly, none of these amendments will pass tonight.

Amendment No 13 was Steven Agnew’s. I think that he will not move it, so I will not comment on it.

The SDLP amendment would have been our next choice, frankly. It is fair enough. It includes voluntary grammars, but also Irish-medium and integrated schools, so that is OK.

Amendment No 16 is the one about teachers. I have no objection whatsoever to teachers or representatives of the teaching profession having a place on the board, but I think it ties into what we eventually decide about the make-up and size of the board. I would keep an open mind on that. I have to oppose the amendment as it stands. I am open to persuasion that there might be a place. If you are talking about two teachers, and there are only three community places, that balance is not right. If it were one teacher and four community places, and if the other bodies that we would like to see represented were already in there, then we might run with that. There is certainly no harm in having people from the chalk face feed into a board like this.

Mr Sheehan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Yes, sure.

Mr Sheehan: I am just wondering which sector that teacher would be from.

Mr Lunn: I do not know. I will move on. [Laughter.] Well, I think that the point of having a teacher there is to provide a teacher’s background, expertise and chalk-face experience. On that basis, I do not think that it really matters too much which sector the teacher comes from if you get the right teacher, principal or whatever.

Mr Kinahan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Yes, go on.

Mr Kinahan: I do not want to prolong this too long. I sat and thought about this over the ESA Bill, trying to think of different ways to ensure that we had that sort of hands-on experience. I was looking at whether we should ask CCMS for one of theirs to ensure that they always had a practising teacher there or whether the controlled sector would do it. I thought, right, this time, let us just put in a broader one, and then we can try to work it, but, again, it comes back to the point that we all need to start talking to each other and find a solution to it. It is a sensible idea. How we actually fit it is difficult.

6.30 pm

Mr Lunn: I thank Mr Kinahan for that. I would not be one bit surprised if we were to see two amendments next time: one of which says that we need a teacher from the controlled sector and another that says we need a teacher from the maintained sector. However, we will see whether we have learnt any wit in the meantime.

Amendment No 17, proposed by Mr McCallister, is about the eight-year period. We are not that keen on this because we think that it is up to parties to nominate their own people. If someone has finished their eight-year term and is doing a terrific job, maybe that party does not have an ideal replacement. It seems a bit prescriptive to say that you have to come off the authority for four years and then you can go back on. So, we do not want to support that.

We agree with amendment No 18 about the interim chief executive, the DUP will be delighted to know. However, I have a query. Pat Sheehan raised the point that, officially, an interim chief executive may have to be appointed for two years. I would like to hear what the Minister has to say about that. I would not get too hung up about whether it is one year or two; if the rule says that it must be two, or if it needs to be two to get the right person, let us go for it. If it can be done for one year, that would allow the authority to bed in and then be in a position to appoint its own chief executive.

Amendment Nos 19 and 20 relate to the standing committees to encourage shared education and the community use of school premises. I must say that I am very surprised that Mr McCallister has not suggested a standing committee to encourage integrated and Irish-medium education.

Mr McCallister: I was leaving that to you.

Mr Lunn: No, I do not approve of these measures. If you are going to set up a high-powered authority to run the whole education system across the Province, I really think that you should be able to trust it to sort out its own system of standing committees. I doubt whether the authority would come up with a proposal that it needs a standing committee to encourage, facilitate and promote the community use of school premises; I think that it might have different priorities. The authority will already have what is in the Bill previously, — I forget the wording of it; those were your words — to promote, facilitate and encourage the use of school premises for community purposes. I think that that is probably good enough.

The same argument applies to amendment No 19, about shared education.

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to Mr Lunn for giving way. There are lots of examples. The Executive break into Executive subgroups when they want to keep a focus on something. This is a way of making sure that something happens with the amendments that we have already passed, and that there is a focus on, and a mechanism for, delivering some of those outcomes.

Mr Lunn: That is fair enough, and I am sure that the authority, as it develops, will establish subcommittees as it goes along. However, there are a lot of subjects out there that are very important. What about a standing committee on area-based planning?

Mr Kinahan: [Interruption.]

Mr Lunn: Yes, but there is any number of subjects. I say, just leave it up to the authority; do not tie their hands and insist they must set up particular standing committees in this way.

Amendment No 20 is the last for now. Those are our views on the situation.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I am aware that time is moving on fast, so I will try not to go over any of the ground that my colleague Pat Sheehan has already been over. He outlined our position on amendment Nos 9, 10 and 11.

Let me touch on Sinn Féin's amendment No 12, which would give representation on the board, as of right, for the integrated and Irish-medium interests. We feel that it is correct that, if transferors and trustees have a place on the board, so too should those who represent the interests of Irish-medium and integrated education. Mr Sheehan rightly outlined the pros and cons around a place for grammar schools. Indeed, putting in place something for grammars would be a replication; they can get on through the transferors anyway.

I will touch on the voluntary grammars later. I have been lobbied by Irish-medium and integrated education groups, but I have not been lobbied by voluntary grammars for a place on the board. I know that other Members may have. Obviously, it is their prerogative to bring forward amendments, but there is something about the voluntary status and the principle that they follow that separates that out.

Granting membership on the board to Irish-medium and integrated interests would provide a clear indication that the Department recognises and cherishes the statutory duty to facilitate and encourage Irish-medium and integrated education. It would also send out a timely signal to all in our society that the Assembly cherishes every sector that educates our young people. I repeat what I have said today: some in the Chamber may believe that a fair playing field can be achieved by erecting hurdles and laying down petitions of concern; however, all that does is copper-fasten division, fear and suspicion. We should be looking to be more inclusive. We have missed an opportunity today to show support and demonstrate confidence in Irish-medium and integrated education, and even in the controlled sector. We could have walked away from here today with everybody being winners, but, unfortunately, a whole raft of petitions of concern has scuppered that possibility.

I will not dwell too much on amendment Nos 14 and 15; Mr Sheehan outlined our thoughts on those. Amendment No 16 proposes that there be two automatic places for teachers on the board. It will be difficult enough to squeeze a fair representation of society into four community places. If you automatically give two of those to teachers, it will prove to be impossible and entirely inequitable to reduce that to two. Again, as has been touched on, why two teachers? Why not two principals, caretakers or bursars? If the authority is about strategic oversight and a vision, why would you automatically include teachers? There has been talk about not overburdening principals and everything else. We hear about the pressures on teachers, and yet we are going to select two teachers to go on to that body as well. We have to bear that in mind.

In saying that, I recognise entirely that, in large sections, be it health or education, we need to take the opinions of those who work at the coalface right into the consideration room. I am not necessarily sure that that means that you have to appoint somebody to the board to do that; there are other ways of doing it. A new authority should be cognisant of the fact that the views of teachers are paramount, but that does not mean that we should automatically give them 50% of the community's representation.

As my colleague outlined, we will oppose amendment Nos 17 and 18. As has been outlined by many Members, political parties should be left to their own discretion to select their nominees. The Member who spoke previously talked quite well about experience in a particular party. As for amendment No 18, I do not see the point in establishing a board and then, within a year — the amendment does not say "at least a year"; it says "Within one year" — a process will begin to appoint a new chief executive. I would like to see an authority being given a year to bed down and set a strategic programme of work. As far as I remember — the Minister can confirm this — it was outlined at the Committee that it was a two-year period. A two-year period would certainly be more favourable than "Within one year".

Finally, I am more than happy to support the establishment of standing committees to look at the community use of schools and shared education, although I take on board much of what Mr Lunn said about the authority being able to set its own programme of work. Go raibh maith agat.

Mr Craig: Frankly, I find it impossible to argue against amendment No 9; there is a lot of common sense in the statement. The fact that it is there is good. If it were not there, I would like to think that those principles would have been applied anyway. Therefore, we will support amendment No 9.

Mrs Overend: Will the Member give way?

Mr Craig: Yes.

Mrs Overend: I thank the Member for that comment. Does he agree that, if there is fair and open competition, there might be more of a possibility of a woman getting the job?

Mr Craig: I do not know what to say about that that will not get me into trouble, so I am just going to go silent on it.

If it is fair and open, it is possible for everyone and anyone to get that job.

Amendment Nos 10 to 15 are the ones that I find fascinating, because in them we see the wish lists for the sectors of those who tabled them. That is the difficulty I see with amendment Nos 10 to 15: they represent everybody's wish lists. We are back to a lot of the arguments that we witnessed when we were debating the ESA Bill. On balance, there is a structure in the Bill that I have accepted and all of us welcomed, and we will keep that balance and not bow down to the wishes of each Member of the House and whatever vested interest they have in some of the other sectors. That is largely where we are coming from on those amendments.

Amendment No 16 argues for the inclusion of two teachers. I am supportive of that for a very simple reason: no board of governors in Northern Ireland sits without a teacher representative on it, so teachers do participate in the management of our schools. Therefore, logically extending that, why should they not have a place or position in the overall management of the school estate? I have absolutely no difficulty with that. Sometimes in life, those who are at the coalface and see the real issues never get an opportunity to interface at a level where they can bring about obvious changes that they can see the results of on a daily basis. Amendment No 16 makes an effort to rectify that by allowing those at the coalface to sit up with those who manage the estate and give them an opportunity to bring their common-sense approach from the coalface to that board. That is something that I strongly welcome.

Amendment No 17 and the issue of the two terms has been discussed. We will use that word "equality". If it does not apply to all members, it is fundamentally wrong. That is the only issue I have with that amendment. If it applied to all members, it would be fair enough.

Mr McCallister: Will the Member give way?

Mr Craig: I certainly will.

Mr McCallister: The Minister might well refer to this, but other members who are appointed would be subject to the public appointments process. It is in the guidance for public appointments that there is a limit of two terms. While it would not be enshrined in law for two terms, it would be if the amendment was passed for political members and it would be in the guidance for other appointed members.

Mr Craig: I thank the Member for pointing that out. I will listen with interest to see what the Minister has to say with regard to that. I am not convinced that that is the case, but we are here to be convinced. That is what the debate is all about.

Amendment No 18 is our clear attempt to bring about a fair, open and transparent process that allows the board to have its say in the appointment of the chief executive. I think it was my colleague from Lagan Valley Mr Lunn who asked whether it would be one year or two years. All we are saying in the amendment is that the process of replacing the interim chief executive should start after a period of one year. I have seen these processes, and they can last a month, three months, six months or even a year, which would give the Minister his two years. That is a matter for the board itself.

Mr Sheehan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Craig: Yes.

6.45 pm

Mr Sheehan: I seek some clarification on what you just said. You said that after a year, a process should begin. The amendment states:

"Within one year of the date of the first meeting".

"Within one year" could mean anything; it could mean nine months, six months. That is an issue.

Mr Craig: I do not think that it is an issue. We are clearly saying that the board should make that judgement call about its level of preparedness. Only the board could make that call. "Up to a year" is the actual wording. If it meets monthly, from its first meeting until its twelfth meeting, the board has the flexibility to decide whether it is ready to replace the appointed chief executive. I doubt that that will happen within the first six months. I doubt that it will happen within the first nine months, to be honest with you, because there will be so much infrastructural and organisational change within that time.

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for giving way. It might be useful if the Minister could confirm later on the modalities in relation to the issue. If we had an appointment by the Minister, would it be an accounting officer of the Department? If so, does that bring into serious question the relationship between the Department and the structure of the board, which is set up, as we have been debating all day, on the basis of the 1986 Order?

Mr Craig: I thank the Member for his intervention and wish the Minister all the best in answering that question. I look forward to hearing that answer.

The flexibility is there for the board to make its own appointment within a year or to start the process and not necessarily make the appointment within that year.

In amendment Nos 19 and 20, the Member is putting in mechanisms for action to be taken on shared education and community involvement in the school estate, both of which I strongly support. I understand his wish to see such action.

Mr Agnew: We have various amendments on the make-up of the board. As was alluded to, a lot of these discussions probably took place over the ESA Bill. I was not on the Committee, but I have no doubt that they took place.

In terms of principles, the DUP has sent out a clear message today that it does not want to see the integrated sector have any representation on this board. I have yet to hear a DUP Member justify that. Again, apologies: I should declare my interest as a director of NICIE. They have been given alternatives that they could support. Every amendment includes representation for integrated education. From listening to Mr Kinahan, although there is not a UUP proposal, it sounds like that party's proposal would be to have representation for the integrated sector. We have every party in the House, with the exception of the DUP, acknowledging that the integrated sector is an important part of our education system and should have a voice on what has been described by the Minister as the strategic body for the future of education in Northern Ireland. I fail to understand why the DUP is so opposed to this proposal and so set on the make-up of the board as it is in the Bill. Only it can answer that.

The Green Party welcomes the cross-party support for integrated education that is recognised in the amendments. I will use the excuse of the short timeline that we had to get in amendments, but I recognise the failure of our amendment to include the Irish-medium sector, and, for that reason, I will not move our amendment.

I am not opposed in principle to any of the other amendments. However, I favour the Alliance amendment in that it would change the way in which we have done things. We have a new Bill and a new authority, and we do not have to do what we did before just because it is the way we always did it. The amendment would bring in the Irish-medium and integrated sectors without increasing the size of the board and reduce by one the number of places for the transferors of controlled schools and the trustees of maintained schools. If we believe in moving away from a segregated sector — I have clearly stated that I do — this is a step. It is small step but a good step. For that reason, I will support amendment No 11 tabled by the Alliance Party, which deals with the make-up of the board.

That said, the Alliance Party also proposes to increase political representation by two to ensure that it has representation. I have heard why that is fair to the Alliance Party but not why it is good for determining the future direction of our schools. It would probably be good for the Alliance Party to be there, because, of the five parties of choice in the Executive, it has promoted integrated education most strongly. I would welcome that voice being there. However, if we were to increase the size of the board to make sure that the Alliance Party is there, I cannot help think, "Why not increase it a little more to make sure that the Green Party is there too?". I am certainly not opposed in principle, but I am not sure that it is necessary.

It is clear from the debate that each proposal for who sits on the board is a little about power and control. Too little has been said about what is good for our education system, and I acknowledge my own fault in that. Nobody in all this has really lobbied for academic excellence, research, evidence-based decision-making and who could best provide that. I am not sure that increasing the number of political parties or sectors on the board will give us that. It is typical of Northern Ireland politics and always seems to be reflected in our education system that it is about how we can share it out, equally but separately.

That said, I support amendment No 11, followed by amendment No 12 and the SDLP proposals on the make-up of the board. I also support amendment No 9. It explicitly states what is probably assumed. I have made my views on shared education pretty clear. However, given the amendment that was passed in the first group, I am certainly not opposed to a standing committee either for shared education or for the community use of schools.

The DUP has an amendment on the interim chief executive. I was compelled, to some extent, by the Minister's argument for two years. He can correct me if I am wrong, but it seems to be, "Trust me, I'll have somebody in place within two years". This amendment is a solid proposal for starting a process within one year. I do not see a huge conflict between the two positions, so I am happy to support amendment No 18. Given my understanding of the processes, I see no problem with Sinn Féin coming back and inserting the word "two" instead of "one". If that is competent, I have no problem with it.

I turn to the issue of teachers. I support the principle. It appears that teachers would take up two of possibly four places, depending on how many amendments pass, but there are petitions of concern, so none of them will pass. I support the principle of having that, but not one of the bodies that are representative cannot appoint teachers themselves. I support the principle and think that a message has been sent out, but there should be an onus on those who are appointing people to the board, whether it be parties or the Department, to bear in mind the principle that teachers should have a say.

Mr McCallister: I will work my way through the amendments. Again, it is a shame that, given the number of choices that we have been presented with on the make-up of boards and who should be on it in various amendments, that has not been allowed to work its way through an Assembly process where it can be debated — you argue your case, put it to a vote and see what gains support.

I will start at amendment No 9, standing in the names of Danny Kinahan and Sandra Overend. It states that the chair of the authority is to be appointed on merit in an open competition. That is an eminently sensible amendment and something that we should all want to see encouraged in any appointment. Like others, I am happy to support that.

My difficulty with amendment No 10 — not to be too hard on Mr Lunn — is that it is maybe slightly self-serving to increase the size of the board to get your party onto it. I have this thing about the sense of entitlement — it sometimes applies to being in government here — and I think that it is detrimental. I am not convinced that increasing the size simply to get an outcome or to bring someone into that is a particularly good way of doing our business. The other option would be to do better in elections, and that applies to all of us. Mr Agnew was looking for a place: I suspect that, to get you and me onto it, Mr Agnew, it might need to be increased significantly. I am not proposing that at any point, but I have a concern that an amendment like that can become a little self-serving, and that is why I am reluctant to support it.

Amendment No 11 is from the Alliance Party. My one problem with it — others have made the point — is that it is not specific about voluntary grammar, because there would be grammar representation coming through the controlled sector anyway.

The amendments in the group can probably all be counted as being mainly on the same issue. Sinn Féin's amendment No 12 adds in the integrated and Irish-medium sectors. That is a sensible amendment that I have no issue supporting. I have a note on the Green Party's amendment — why not include? — but Mr Agnew has already dealt with that point. Amendment Nos 14 and 15 are SDLP amendments that, taken together, are about appointments and add in the voluntary grammars and Irish-medium. SDLP or Sinn Féin? The SDLP one is possibly the better amendment. Again, it is a dreadful shame that we are not debating the merits of the amendments without, effectively, the guillotine hanging over them. It is a pity that we are not doing that.

Amendment No 16 is a UUP amendment on community appointments to be teachers. Many people are happy for that to go ahead, and it is an important and sensible move.

The amendment standing in my name is more or less a term limit. My reasons for it are really to avoid the almost perpetual political favour whereby you can get appointed and, as I said in an earlier intervention to Mr Craig, that the Minister's code on public appointments recommends that.

So, why not put it in the Bill for political appointments? I know that some are reluctant to do that, but I think that they should serve for two terms and then come off of a term. Mr Lunn's argument against it would be this: what would happen if a political party had no one else suitable? It would be a fairly poor political party that qualified electorally but could not find someone else to fill that spot after eight years.

7.00 pm

I just think that it is a better way of keeping the board fresh. I did not want to be too prescriptive in the amendment, but, when the board is established, I want it to stagger elections or appointments so that you do not end up with the entire board changing at the end of an eight-year period. It is an amendment designed to keep the board fresh and stop political appointees being there forever. It is also in line with the guidance on public appointments that the Minister referred to, so it would be a sensible amendment for the House to make. I strongly hold to that, and I think that it is better for any organisation to have an element of freshness or newness at any given point. I would like to see that.

Amendment No 18 is a DUP amendment concerning the interim chief executive. As others said, it is a sensible amendment and not desperately far from where the Minister wanted to go. Mr Sheehan raised a point about whether the period would be two months, three months, six months or nine months. It would just mean that, at some point, maybe after 364 days, the process would have to get under way. Too many times, there have been difficulties or delays in getting the process started, so I think that it is sensible to put in the Bill that the process must start after a certain time and be run for a certain time. In appointing someone at the level that I suspect the board or the authority will look for, it is more likely to be a lengthy process. Other large public authorities such as Northern Ireland Water have had difficulties in getting a chief executive. So, I think it is a sensible amendment.

I move on to my amendment Nos 19 and 20. The Assembly has before it amendments on shared education and the need for the community use of schools. I think that the committee proposed in each of my amendments is a vehicle that can start to drive that change. The Minister was reluctant to support earlier amendments, but this is a way to drive some of that. I hope that this could help to drive forward the Minister's shared education agenda and that there is much more progress when the Education Authority is established and in the years to come than there has been in years gone by. We really want to see that.

We have talked about the community use of schools and mentioned David McNarry's Bill. I think that it is about three and a half or four years since that Bill was talked about in the Assembly. Yet, as Mr Craig said, the community use of schools is very patchy across Northern Ireland. We have to change that and use those facilities. In difficult budgetary times, we want schools to be at the very centre of our communities, and the proposed committee could do that. With that, I conclude.

Mr O'Dowd: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I do not oppose amendment No 9, which seeks to insert a requirement that the chair be appointed:

"on the basis of merit through a fair and open public competition"

However, the question that I ask its proposers is this: how else did they think that the chair would be appointed?

It is quite clear, both in the original clause and in all employment legislation and rules under the Commissioner for Public Appointments etc, that the chair could not be appointed on any basis other than on merit through a fair and open public competition. In my bid to win the trust of the Ulster Unionist Party, I am not going to oppose this amendment.

Amendment No 10 seeks to increase the political membership of the education authority from eight to 10.

Again, I am supportive of this, not on the basis that it gives the DUP another member but that it gives the Alliance Party representation on the body, and I think that is inclusive. We have striven to create an inclusive society, so it is only right and proper that the Alliance Party is given a seat on the board.

I do question some of the commentary around, "Why give more representation to political parties?". I am proud to be an elected representative. I am proud to be a member of a political party, and I do not think that we should run down politics so easily or quickly. Political parties and politicians stand before the electorate and are elected or not elected, whatever the case may be. Once you are elected, and once your political party carries a mandate, I am of the firm view that that should be respected. Those who criticise from the sidelines and those who are paid to sit in studios and criticise the actions of politicians should, in my opinion, put up or shut up and go and stand for election and see whether their ideas on how society should be run are welcomed by the people. If they are, they are more than welcome to tell me how to do my job. I think that no harm is done to the Bill — in fact, I think that the Bill is improved — by the representation of all of the Executive parties on the body.

I turn to amendment Nos 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15. I acknowledge that Mr Agnew has withdrawn amendment No 13. With regard to amendment Nos 11, 14 and 15, I have listened to the arguments that have been put forward by my colleagues on these amendments, which seek, through a range of permutations, to alter the composition of the membership. However, I cannot support them. I am strongly opposed to any reduction in the number of transferors and trustees, as they represent the majority of our schools and, as such, this needs to be reflected in the membership of the authority.

I note the concern regarding the absence of representation for grammar schools, although it is possible that the transferors may choose a representative from the controlled grammar schools as one of their board members. Indeed, any of the political parties could choose a representative of the voluntary grammars as their representative on the board. As voluntary grammar schools are funded directly by the Department and have no direct funding relationship with the education and library boards nor will they have any with the Education Authority, I do not feel that there is any requirement to have representatives of the voluntary grammar schools on the board. Should this position change, it should be open to review.

As was stated in the previous debate, I think by the former chair of the Education Committee, voluntary grammars cherish the voluntary principle more than they cherish academic selection. So, if they wish to remain voluntary, allow them to do so but do not give them a place on a board that will govern all schools other than theirs. Mr Kinahan suggested that perhaps they could step out of the meeting at that time. They would be out of the meeting all day, because the authority will not be engaged with their schools. The continued funding for the voluntary grammars will run through my Department. I have many differences with the voluntary grammar sector, but my opposition to this is not on the basis of academic selection. My opposition to this is on the basis of the voluntary principle, which they hold dear. If they hold it dear, the reaction to that is surely then that they are not sitting on the board.

I believe that four community members is the minimum number acceptable to ensure representation. To reduce community members would not provide a broad representation in terms of background, skills and experience. It will be no surprise to the House that I am prepared to accept the arguments put forward around the deficit in representation for both the integrated and Irish-medium sectors, as set out in amendment No 12.

Mrs Overend: I thank the Minister for giving way. I noticed that his colleague Mr Sheehan discussed this matter as well, and you are opposing voluntary grammar schools going onto the board.

The reason for that is that they report directly to the Department of Education. Maybe I have not picked this up. Can you clarify who the integrated sector reports directly to? Is it the Department of Education? Does it currently report to the education and library boards? Likewise, who reports to CCMS?

Mr O'Dowd: It depends on the category of the school. There are controlled integrated schools and controlled Irish-medium schools. So, it depends on the category of the school. I am not sure that the voluntary sector would be overly amused with the term "report directly to the Department", but I like the ring to it. [Laughter.] The Department governs their finances.

I oppose amendment No 16, which proposes to allocate no fewer than two of the four community membership positions to serving teachers. I believe that to appoint two persons to the board of the authority by reason of their being teachers would not be in the best interests of community representation or fair recruitment on the basis of merit. If the amendment passes, the two teachers will not be representing teachers; they will be representing themselves. There are approximately 20,000 serving teachers in society. I do not know how we are going to select two teachers who will represent the wide and diverse views among the teacher population out there.

I accept that the vast majority of our teachers are dedicated to the delivery of high-quality education, but under that is a wide divergence of views on how you deliver high-quality education. How do we select two teachers who will represent the teaching profession? We cannot do so. They would be there representing themselves as individuals. I do not think that that is fair or right, particularly coming out of the community representation. What about parents in community representation? Why should they not be able to apply through this opportunity? Why should the chairs of boards of governors not have a right to a place on the authority? Why should the secretary to the board of governors of a school not have the right to be on the authority?

Mr Craig said, correctly, that there is a teacher representative on the board of governors of every school. That is correct, but that teacher can liaise with the other teachers in the school, regardless of the size of the school. They can liaise with them; they can engage with them; they know the mood of the teachers in the school, and they can reflect that back to the board of governors. Two teacher representatives on this body will not be able to represent the views of approximately 20,000 teachers.

Mr Kinahan: Thank you for giving way, Minister. I have listened to your points. Again, I go back to this point: if we had not had accelerated passage, we could have covered a lot of these points and discussed them. I want to leave the amendment in unless I can find some way; we need to find some way so that principals, vice principals and others who are hands on with the running can be involved. There are ways of doing it. Maybe we could try to sort it out amongst ourselves over the next two weeks.

Mr O'Dowd: Perhaps one thing we should be looking at is trade union representation on the board. At least, they have a mandate from their trade unions to represent the views of the boards. There are around five teachers' trade unions. You might want to suggest to them that they send a representative from that collective body. I understand the principle behind the amendment, but, in practice, it does not work. We cannot select two people, honestly, and say that they represent the teaching profession. They will not do so; they will represent themselves. If the Member is considering not moving that amendment, I would encourage him not to.

I move now to amendment No 17. I spoke on limiting the appointment period for political nominees to eight years in relation to amendment No 10. Why single out political nominees? Mr McCallister will say that the Commissioner for Public Appointments guidance states that you should not serve for more than two terms on a body. That is right, but it is only guidance. Here, we are putting in legislation that politicians — our political representatives — cannot serve for more than eight years on a body. So, there is a distinct difference between what the guidance from the Commissioner for Public Appointments states and what we are going to pass into legislation here. So I am opposed to that on the basis that some other Members had asked why we would treat political appointments differently from other appointments.

7.15 pm

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to the Minister for giving way. The very fact that it is in guidance, and your best practice as a Department in appointing people to various boards states that eight years or two terms is the limit, and someone would effectively get marked down if they wanted to stay on longer than that. Just because it is only in guidance, why would we not want to bring that across to political appointments?

Mr O'Dowd: Why do we not bring it across to all appointments? This is not guidance; this is legislation. There is a distinct difference between guidance and legislation, although if the Member is suggesting that we bring it across to everyone, let us look at that, but we would have to look at a rotation in the board, with over a third of the board changing over every four years to keep continuity in the body. As an unashamed politician and political activist, I am not going to pick on political representations for the sake of it.

Moving on to amendment No 18, which refers to the appointment of the chief executive, again I urge Members to consider this very carefully. I am going to seek to appoint an interim chief executive to the authority; I need the interim chief executive in place before the actual authority gets up and running. I need to select an individual who has the capability to organise the new authority, to look after a £1.8 billion budget, to be in charge of, one way or another, about 70,000 staff, and to go through the process of change management, which Mr Newton quite rightly focused on.

I have to ensure that I will be able to select an individual and ensure that individuals are prepared to come forward for that selection process. If individuals who are interested in that post are looking at a piece of legislation and saying, "In the best-case scenario, I will be in that job for just over a year. In the worst-case scenario, I could walk in, and the authority and I will not click right away, and that authority will start looking rid of me within three months." Who is going to apply for that post? I urge Members to carefully consider that we allow the interim chief executive to be in post for two years before the re-selection process begins to ensure that we can select a candidate or candidates coming forward. There is not a significant number of them who can come forward to carry out the post for an interim period of two years. The two years might even turn off many people, but I think that it is a fair compromise. I know that there are concerns across the House about the role of the Minister in appointing the first chief executive.

Mr Agnew: Will the Minister give way?

Mr O'Dowd: I will in a moment. I think that two years is a fair compromise.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Minister for giving way. I said in my contribution that I felt that he had made a compelling point for a two-year period. Will he then put that into the legislation at Further Consideration Stage to give the Assembly confidence that that will happen, rather than just an assurance?

Mr O'Dowd: Yes. I would be prepared to do that. I have listened to the views of Members across a number of debates now, and whether I agree with their reservations or concerns or not, there are reservations and concerns there. We have largely tried to work through a Bill that we can get agreement on. If Members would be more satisfied if I were to bring forward an amendment at Further Consideration Stage outlining a two-year period, I would be more than happy to do that.

Based on my concerns, I want to be able to appoint a candidate to the post who believes that they will be in post for a time and can carry forward a significant piece of public service in the education sector for that two-year period, without looking over their shoulder as to when the authority is going to say, "Time is up."

Turning to amendment Nos 19 and 20, I support the appointment of standing committees around the community use of schools and shared education. Mr Lunn raised concerns. The Assembly can pass legislation and set up all the standing committees for the authority, but I think that that would be wrong.

So, let us draw a line under it tonight, allow the authority the responsibility to run its functions and give it due regard and respect, recognising that its membership is more than capable of establishing the standing committees and other committees that it needs in the timescales and in the order that it believes is best to deliver its programme of work. I caution Members. Yes, the principle is very good and does not do damage to the Bill, but let us not get carried away with ourselves. At the next stage, we will all bring forward a standing committee that we would like to see established.

That brings to an end my comments on this group of amendments.

Mr Kinahan: I will be as quick as I can. This has been a really healthy debate by everyone. It has shown many different ways forward and given us all much food for thought, particularly on points such as that that the Minister just made on the two years. I think that we have all gained a whole lot from this. I am not going to go through it amendment by amendment. I look forward to us all talking to each other in the next two weeks and finding suitable ways forward so that the Bill works.

I was not condemning politicians — just to answer on that point — but sometimes we do not have to be on everything. However, it was a very healthy debate, and I conclude on that.

"Living Wage Accredited Employer

2A. The Education Authority must become a living wage accredited employer in accordance with the accreditation scheme administered by the Citizens UK

Living Wage Foundation before the end of 31 March 2016.— [Mr Agnew.]

Mr Agnew: Many Members here were in the Chamber yesterday when we debated at length how best to protect vulnerable women from ending up in prostitution. Time and again, those who sought to do that cited poverty as a key factor in driving women into prostitution.

The number of people who are in in-work poverty is greater than the number of people who are in out-of-work poverty. With amendment No 22 I seek to set a standard in the case of the new Education Authority so that no worker paid directly by the authority or by a contractor appointed by that authority will be paid less than a living wage, less than what is needed to meet reasonable costs of living.

The amendment is based on the principle of making work pay, which is a term that is often used to justify cutting our welfare system. It should be a positive phrase that says that people should have value in their work and should, through their endeavours, at least have what we would consider to be the minimum acceptable standard of living. The Education Authority that we are establishing through the Bill would become the biggest employer in Northern Ireland with 35,000 staff, 32,400 of whom would be based in schools. If we want to value our education system and those who work in it, we should recognise the work that they do by paying them a living wage.

The good news is that the education sector is one of the better sectors at paying a living wage. A study by Oxford Economics has education at the top of a list of sectors in terms of paying the living wage, but even in the education sector approximately 10% of workers do not receive the minimum wage. That is a significant figure but modest in terms of resource in correcting that wrong.

The living wage has increasingly become part of public policy. Belfast City Council has become a living wage employer. I am delighted to see the new North Down and Ards shadow council supporting the living wage. It will seek to become a living wage employer after an Alliance Party amendment that mirrored an amendment put forward by the Green Party was passed. I welcome Alliance's support in that debate for the principle of a living wage.

The principle is based largely on work carried out by the Living Wage Foundation and research funded in large part by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation. Let us look at some of the evidence around it. The Oxford Economics report looked at Northern Ireland. The living wage as calculated by the Living Wage Foundation is £7.56. If that was to be rolled out to everyone in Northern Ireland, Oxford Economics estimates, it would lead to an increase of £221 million in wages and create net 2,500 jobs.

I previously proposed an amendment to a motion looking at public procurement contracts, which is something that Oxford Economics looked into. Doing that alone would create 180 jobs. This is an argument of fairness, but it is also a strong economic argument that one of the best ways to drive our economy is to put more money in the pockets of those who are lower paid because we know that that money will largely be spent and spent in the local economy. Therefore, it would have a greater impact than, for example, a corporation tax cut to large businesses, which would have their headquarters offshore or certainly off these shores. This is something that we can do that would have an immediate and direct impact on our economy.

Amendment No 21 concerns pay policy statements. This is starting to come into public policy in Great Britain through the Localism Act. The principle is simple: we connect the pay of the highest member of staff — in the case of the Education Authority, that is likely to be the chief executive — with the lowest paid. It also introduces transparency. I have not been prescriptive because that would have been another debate and, perhaps, would have required more scrutiny. I have not set the limit, but there would be a ratio between the lowest and highest paid. If we wanted to increase the chief executive's salary, we could do so only if we brought up the pay of every lowest-paid member of staff in an organisation. That is right and fair, and, increasingly, it is what the public will demand.

Look at the conclusions of the Hutton report, which recommended the introduction of the Localism Act 2011. It describes the pay ratio as a framework to ensure:

“that senior pay in public services is fair and seen to be fair, and will preserve the ability of public services to recruit talented individuals while reassuring the public that their tax money is not being unfairly creamed off by ‘fat cat’ public sector executives.”

Given that we are likely, going on past evidence, to recruit a chief executive on a six-figure salary, the minimum that we can expect is a living wage for those paid the lowest salary in the education sector.

We have had much debate about who gets to be on the new board. Alas, after the vote that we have just had, the Alliance Party will not be there to take its position. We have proposed £8,000 a year for the board members, and the board will meet 12 times a year. By my calculation, that is £667 a meeting. I am not sure of the exact requirements, but, if we take it that a board meeting is four hours long, which is perhaps a fair assumption, each board member would receive £167 an hour. I ask for £7.56 an hour for the lowest-paid workers in the education sector. The request is modest, and it should be passed by the Assembly.

I mentioned the Localism Act, which went through Parliament unchallenged by MPs, some of whom sit in the Assembly. Furthermore, an early day motion has been tabled in the House of Commons signed by Gregory Campbell, Rev William McCrea and Jim Shannon of the DUP. I note that, yet again, the DUP has tabled a petition of concern against the amendment. I regret that. I fail to understand, given its hand-wringing yesterday about the plight of those in poverty, why the DUP does not want to do something to address poverty by making work in public service and education pay. What could be a more worthy public service? I further fail to understand how it can support in the House of Commons a living wage for cleaners but table a petition of concern at the very idea of a living wage for a relatively small number of education staff in Northern Ireland. I hate to be cynical, but it smells like the welfare reform debate all over again. The DUP will oppose welfare reform in the House of Commons so that it can tell people it opposed it, but, when it has the power to do something about it here, it will introduce welfare cuts.

Mr Hazzard: I thank the Member for giving way. You touch on a very important point. It is a disgrace that there is a petition of concern from the DUP. The DUP and others in the House tell us, especially in relation to welfare reform, that we should look at mitigating effects. The living wage is one such way of eradicating poverty traps in our society, and yet the DUP has attached a petition of concern to the discussion.

Mr Agnew: I totally agree. We have all these strategies and targets to reduce and eradicate poverty. However, when it comes to it, the Assembly and the Executive, largely at the insistence of the DUP, reject any efforts to address poverty through work.

They talk about bringing jobs to Northern Ireland — FDI, better quality jobs and whatever — but I am saying let us make the Executive and our public Departments responsible employers and set a standard that we hope the private sector can follow.

8.15 pm

Unlike the minimum wage, which we now have in place and which was introduced in one fell swoop, those in the living wage campaign recognise that we can do this in stages so that there are none of the shocks that some may fear. We will see direct benefits. Each economic analysis that I have seen has always talked about net jobs, because there is an acknowledgment that there will be an impact on employers, and that is why we want to start with the public sector. Everything that we have looked at suggests a net increase in employment, a net increase in tax take and a net increase in fairness, in my opinion.

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Member for giving way and appreciate the research that he is trying to bring to the debate tonight. All of us need to recognise that the cost of living and, indeed, relative wages are an issue for the Assembly to be concerned with.

He refers to the Oxford Economics research in setting out those benefits, but will he agree and recognise that we have to be realistic and acknowledge that it also sets out potential offsets in relation to potentially reduced hours, reduced non-wage benefits and, at worst, some job losses as well? We need to take that into the balance. I acknowledge that he mentioned staged introductions and a voluntary campaign, but does he acknowledge as well that campaigning to make sure that the national minimum wage is at an appropriate standard is just as important?

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for his intervention, and, of course, with any transition, there will always be some level of disruption. As I say, I think it is the overall effect that we look at. Whilst there will be some negatives, overall, whether it is in job creation, money spent in our economy or tax intake, in net terms we will end up better off as a society. He outlined some of the possible things — such as reduced working hours, etc — and Oxford Economics says that those are some possible outcomes. Another possible outcome could be — it will be up to the employer — reduced top-level pay to fund it. So it is about choices as well. The Oxford Economics report outlines what some of the choices could be, and some are more palatable than others.

I think that this can be a very positive proposal. As I say, I know that the Members from the Alliance Party will speak at some point on their position. I know that they oppose my amendment in this Chamber, but, as I say, I welcomed their motion in the North Down and Ards shadow council to make it a living wage employer. I hope that they will consider supporting the same principles for members of staff in the new Education Authority.

I am conscious that it has been a long two days. I can address points raised in my winding-up speech if I have not covered them, but the basic principles of the two amendments are fair and decent wages for the lowest paid, and transparency and accountability for the wages of those at the higher end of the scale.

Mr Newton: I rise to speak against amendment Nos 21 and 22 in group 4 under pay policy statements and living wage.

Let me say first of all, on amendment No 22, that nobody on this side of the House — certainly nobody in the Democratic Unionist Party — is opposed to addressing issues that will take people out of poverty. It was for that reason that there was a very strong contention that welfare reform, in particular, needed to be addressed. It was also for that reason that the then Minister, Nelson McCausland, spent considerable time addressing issues, particularly the bedroom tax, and set aside £30 million to help those most in need. We will not take any lessons from Mr Agnew on how to address issues of poverty.

One should not just dismiss his amendment out of hand. You cannot dismiss it out of hand. There is a living wage movement, and it is probably worthy of debate in the Assembly. As Mr Agnew said, debates are taking place in other places, and it is probably worthy of a debate and a motion, but it is not appropriate for this legislation. I suppose that it is, in many ways, something that the House should aspire to achieve, but not in this legislation.

Mr Agnew: Will the Member give way?

Mr Newton: Yes, I will give way.

Mr Agnew: Perhaps he was coming to this, but why not in this legislation? To some extent, this is the low-hanging fruit. The employer already pays a living wage or more to the majority of its staff. Why not start here?

Mr Newton: It is a matter of looking at it not just within one Department, section or area but across all Departments. To fail to do that would cause resentment.

Amendment No 21 is nearly as long as the Bill itself, and, when I read it, I could not get my head round what it was trying to achieve. It attacks the integrity of the 1986 Education Order. The arrangements are already there, and I will come to those. I refer to the proposed schedule 1(17B)(3), which states:

“The statement must include the Authority’s policies relating to—

(a) the level and elements of remuneration for each chief officer,

(b) remuneration of chief officers on recruitment,

(c) increases and additions to remuneration for each chief officer,

(d) the use of performance-related pay for chief officers,

(e) the use of bonuses for chief officers,

(f) the approach to the payment of chief officers on their ceasing to hold office under or to be employed by the Authority”.

That is all in the 1986 Education Order. It is there and is operated via the Staff Commission as a pay policy review committee. The Staff Commission assists in pay policy implementation. The 1986 Order refers to the establishment of the Staff Commission and states:

“There shall be a body to be known as the Staff Commission for Education and Library Boards”

— in the future, it will be for the Education Authority.

The Order continues that the Staff Commission will be in place for:

“the purposes of exercising general oversight of matters connected with the recruitment, training and terms and conditions of employment of officers of boards and of making recommendations to boards on such matters.”

In a different way, and not related in percentages up, down or relative to it, it is all there in the 1986 Education Order. That flows down into what are currently the various education and library boards. I picked out two examples, the North Eastern Education and Library Board and the Department’s ‘Guidance for Boards of Governors on the Formulation and Implementation of Salary Policy’. All of the guidance is there on the matters that you are trying to bring into this Bill. You refer to what the Department has produced, and it is there, in guidance notes on pay policy and salary policy, to address the issues that you are telling us need to be addressed in some way in this legislation. I think that it is admirable that someone would go to this extent. It is questionable whether such a major change is required in what is really a very small piece of legislation. For those reasons, we will be voting against it.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I think that it is important, as we reflect not only on the debate but the amendments, that we do so in the context of the Bill. I think that it is important to reflect on the fact that the context of the Bill is local government reform. I stress the word “reform”. During the debate, it has been said that the timeline for agreeing and implementing the new future for education is April 2015. It has been stressed in the debate that the legislation is minimal and would deliver only structural and technical change, but it is very clear that that single Education Authority will overarch that issue of compatibility with local councils.

In the interests of time, I will be brief. I want to concentrate my remarks on support for amendment Nos 21 and 22. I agree with the proposer of those amendments that this is about setting a standard. I think that the House and, indeed, the Department can show leadership on this. The amendments require the Education Authority to prepare a pay policy statement and to become a living wage accredited employer. It is our view that the decision to implement that policy would have to be considered in the wider context of the Bill and with regard to the Executive’s current pay policy. I think that that needs to be said.

Sinn Féin fully supports amendment No 22, which is on the living wage. As the proposer has alluded to, the current campaign very clearly advocates the introduction of a living wage, calculated at £7.65 an hour. If we are, ultimately, through this Bill, about setting a standard, we need to be mindful that, for the first time ever, there are more people in work who are living in poverty than those out of work. That casualisation of labour through low pay, zero-hours contracts, growing self-employment and underemployment, it has to be said, presents an ever-growing challenge to those of us who are actually concerned with the rights of working people.

As the proposer has said and as research has backed up, it is estimated that the living wage would stimulate economic growth by increasing gross wages by £221 million. It has been stated that it would lead to the creation of 2,500 jobs and deliver a £1,300 annual pay rise for 173,000 low-paid workers.

It would also lead to reduced reliance on in-work benefits such as working tax credits and housing benefit and, importantly, lead to increased productivity among workers.

8.30 pm

Mr Agnew: Will the Member give way?

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Yes.

Mr Agnew: Does the Member agree that these are the only welfare cuts we want to see — people coming off welfare because they are getting paid better wages?

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Absolutely. If we are serious about the eradication of poverty, it is about utilising the tools available to us. I certainly believe that the living wage is one of the tools that should be utilised. In our view, it is for the Department, alongside the Executive, to look at that collectively and work collectively to eradicate the poverty traps that have been alluded to.

One of the first steps that need to be taken is an effort to ensure that all jobs created through public procurement contracts are paid at or above the living wage. That needs to be a very clear statement of intent. We are on the public record, as are others, in calling for the living wage, and I think that that is appropriate. I listened to the DUP spokesperson, but I am not clear why it is not appropriate in this legislation. However, I welcome the fact that the DUP would consider having that debate in the Assembly. I put the challenge down to do that.

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Member for giving way. Given that the Member’s party holds the ministry for education, has the Member attempted any costings on the roll-out of this proposal and, indeed, how much the proposal in relation to all public procurement contracts having a living wage attached to them would cost?

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: I thank the Member for that intervention. That is an important part of this discussion. My understanding is that some Departments are considering the models around living wages and are effectively and actively seeking those reports forthcoming. That is an important part of this debate.

Mr Hazzard: I thank the Member for giving way. I am aware that I am engaging with another party through a party colleague on this issue, but does the Member agree that, if you are going to pay the living wage, there will, of course, be a cost? However, there is also the cost of employing chief executives on top salaries. We need to look at tackling poverty, and the living wage is the best way of doing that.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I encourage all Members to face the Chair and face the mic so that Hansard can pick up everything that they are saying.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Gabh mo leithscéal. I thank the Member for the intervention. As we outlined previously, the impact of the implementation of the living wage on the individual, the economy and on productivity is very clear and has been laid out by research.

If the DUP and the coalition Government in London really believe in the mantra of making work pay, the best thing they can do is to introduce the living wage, rather than having so many families who are in work being dependent on welfare payments. We have to reflect on the fact that over half of the children living in poverty in the North live in households where one or both parents are in work. I, therefore, challenge the DUP to vote as they have voted in district councils, as has been pointed out, to do something that would assist some of the most disadvantaged in our society.

I agree that all Ministers with responsibility, across the board, should ensure that everyone who works in the Civil Service, for example, is paid a living wage. Additionally, Ministers with responsibility for jobs, the economy, health and the Central Procurement Directorate should direct them to stop being obstructionist when it comes to the inclusion of social clauses in public contracts. We should stop them setting the barriers so high that they exclude local businesses from getting Executive contracts. I call on all Departments to ensure that they include a living wage condition when they put out future contracts. I support amendment Nos 21 and 22.

Mr Rogers: Continuing with that theme, I was interested in the response that my colleague Margaret Ritchie got from Iain Duncan Smith when she asked how many meetings had taken place between OFMDFM, the Finance Minister, the Social Development Minister and the Minister for welfare in England. To the best of my knowledge, there were no meetings. However, in respect of the pay policy and living wage —

Mr McCausland: Will the Member give way?

Mr Rogers: Yes.

Mr McCausland: I find it strange that the Member says that there were no meetings. Either I was imagining it or I was sitting in the same room with Iain Duncan Smith in regard to matters about welfare reform. The Member will also be aware that the bulk of negotiations regarding welfare reform took place not with Iain Duncan Smith but with David Freud because it was his speciality. He was driving that forward at a hands-on level. I do not know the exact form of the question, but it is disingenuous and misleading of the Member to present it in that way. Meetings took place; otherwise we would not have negotiated the package of measures that we negotiated for Northern Ireland. I have not seen the answer that was received or the form exactly in which the question was asked, but meetings took place with Iain Duncan Smith and David Freud. In fact, members of Mr Rogers's party met David Freud here at Stormont.

Mr Rogers: I thank the Member for his response. It would be useful to look at the reply that Margaret Ritchie got over the past three years.

Getting on to the pay policy statements and the living wage, I welcome Mr Agnew's amendments regarding the pay policy of the new authority. With the new authority set to employ over 35,000 people, it will become the largest employing body in the North. It is vital that it implement provisions to protect low-paid workers. It is disgraceful that the living wage has become another target for a petition of concern. The SDLP fully supports the living wage as one crucial measure in alleviating in-work poverty. With no existing pay schemes in place, there is an ideal opportunity to set the standard for the rest of the North's workforce. This is a really good starting point to have maximum accountability and transparency in the new authority.

Mrs Overend: At this stage, I hardly feel like debating the two amendments in the final group. The petition of concern means that neither is likely to gain the support to succeed — not that I am saying that I will support them anyway, but just the same.

Amendment No 21 calls for pay policy statements to be prepared on an annual basis. That seems like an overly cumbersome exercise that only seems to draw out the variation of remuneration of those in the Education Authority. However, maybe the Member could clarify whether the exercise goes into the detail of variation in skill sets, qualifications and experience, or is it just the money? Moreover, from my understanding, pay policy statements are made through national agreements. Can the Minister clarify that position?

We will not support amendment No 22, which calls for the Education Authority to become a living wage accredited employer. The Ulster Unionist Party has been clear on other occasions that, instead of supporting the living wage, we should increase the minimum wage in line with inflation. We believe that a living wage is not the answer; it is too simplistic and would simply set employees and employers against one another. Instead of jumping on the populist living wage bandwagon, we in the Ulster Unionist Party believe that it would be a much better use of time advocating an increase in the UK minimum wage because the latter has increased by well below inflation and is no longer adequate. It should be increased, just as the state pension increased in line with inflation. That concludes my comments on the group.

Mr Lunn: I have listened with interest, particularly to Mr Agnew's initial proposition. I must say that I am on a bit of a learning curve. This is not an area of expertise for me, so I have more questions than answers. I am curious to know what the Departments controlled by Sinn Féin, for instance, do at the moment. There is an obvious question about departmental staff rather than the staff who will be employed by the new authority. Do they pay a living wage? I ask that question.

Mr Agnew made a point about the DUP in Westminster. I think that he accused three DUP MPs of signing a motion to pay the living wage in Westminster, yet they seem to oppose it here.

Mr Agnew: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Just a minute. Much as I enjoy embarrassing the DUP, I am not too sure that this is an embarrassment for them, because wages are considerably higher across the water. I would have thought that it would be much easier to pay the living wage at the present level there. It would be more common perhaps than it would be here. It would be easier to introduce. I will give way.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way. I was not accusing those DUP MPs at all. Maybe I should have been clear. I was commending them and accusing their colleagues in the Assembly of not following suit.

Mr Lunn: I will not play with words. I thought that you were pointing up the fact that the DUP had taken a different attitude at Westminster to what they appear to be taking here. Are we agreed?

Mr Agnew: Yes.

Mr Lunn: Yes. [Interruption.]

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Order. Through the Chair.

Mr Lunn: I am also quite taken by the fact that the Alliance Party appears to have supported this in North Down, especially since the senior representative from North Down, who was here a little while ago, told me to oppose this. [Laughter.] In fairness, a lively debate is going on in the party about the living wage, and we have not decided yet. It would not surprise me in the least if one of our new shadow councils, which seems to have been the case, has proposed, supported or adopted something like that.

I really wanted to hear from the Minister. My colleague asked whether there were any costings for this and how much it would cost. What extra wage bills would we saddle the new authority with if this were to become part of the legislation? I am very wary of it. Once again, it is the subject of a petition of concern. It is not going to be decided tonight. Maybe it is something that we will have to go back to. It is a bit like the standing committees that we discussed earlier. We have now saddled the new authority with the responsibility to have those two standing committees. I know that it is not a great comparison, but how many things do we need to load on to them, perhaps without knowing the full facts? I look forward to hearing from the Minister. We will oppose this tonight.

Mr McCallister: To be clear: I cannot bring any further clarity about what the Alliance Party's position is on the living wage, Mr Lunn having illustrated that he is not 100% sure.

This is where I slightly disagree with Mrs Overend's comments about raising the minimum wage. I would prefer it if employers who could afford to pay the living wage did so, and that would be one way round this. It is vital that we get some answers to Mr Lunn's points to the Minister about how much it would cost the new authority. Companies or businesses that can afford to pay the living wage should do so.

I am a little concerned about amendment No 21 and the issue of how much of this you put into the public domain with regard to what the salary grades are likely to be and balancing that with the rights of the individuals who will work in the new authority. I am not convinced about the ratio and linking it from the lowest paid to the highest paid. To get someone suitable to head up an organisation of this size, the Minister may have to pay a fairly significant salary to the chief executive.

If you end up with that, where are you going to draw the line if the lowest paid are on the living wage and it had to rise above that level? I just have concerns around that.

8.45 pm

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way. The reason for the ratio is that the median of top-level salaries has been increasing by a greater proportion than the lowest pay. It is to try to stop that. As for the chief executive being employed, that is why I have left the setting of the level to the Department — so that, while we might set a level that allows them to be employed now on an appropriate salary, over time we could look at that ratio and see whether it is decreasing, because, ultimately, a decrease in inequality of pay is what we mean when we say that we are going to decrease poverty.

Mr McCallister: I am grateful to Mr Agnew. I am disappointed that there is a petition of concern. I am not unsympathetic to his amendments overall or to the thrust of what he is trying to do. If the Minister was minded to bring any of that back at Further Consideration Stage, I would want to see how much it was likely to cost and what level of burden we would be putting on the new authority at that point. It would be important to know that.

On the issues around a living wage, it has become quite obvious over the last 15 or nearly 20 years that close to 14% of our welfare spend is on tax credits, so we are effectively, at times, subsidising low pay with tax credits. That is not good for anyone. It is not good that we have working poor who are struggling to make ends meet. The rapid rise in food inflation over the past five or six years has pushed families very close to the edge. I am certainly sympathetic to the idea, and I am disappointed about the petition of concern, but for us to make a decision and really scrutinise it, I would like to see it come back with many more facts and figures around what the cost would be and how realistic it would be to do. Is it a likely runner? The Minister may well have the answers to some of those questions in his response. Overall, I am not unsympathetic to the broad thrust of moving to that.

I will also point out that I would prefer to see the Assembly and Executive going down the route of a living wage by putting it in their Programme for Government — if, indeed, that meant anything. If it was an Executive decision that it is right that the Government of Northern Ireland should become a living-wage employer, that might be a very different set of circumstances. It might be much easier to get the resources and research done to match how it is going to be paid for over time as we move to that. As Mr Agnew rightly pointed out, it does not have to be done all at once, but you would want a plan as to how you were going to pay for that and take those steps.

I am not unsympathetic, but, on the details tonight, I will have to vote against the amendments.

Mr O'Dowd: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. The hour is late and the debate is somewhat academic, considering the fact that a petition of concern has decided the outcome of the two amendments. However, I support the living-wage proposal in principle, and I think that it should come into practice. I do question whether it is worthwhile bringing such measures forward in a Bill, but I accept the right of a Member to do so. It has also allowed the Assembly to debate a very important measure and to outline the benefits of an introduction of a living wage. I think that it has been properly put into the context of tackling poverty and bringing in a welfare cuts agenda that we could all live with, because we would be putting people on a living wage and bringing people off benefits.

It is a shocking figure that 50% of children living in poverty come from households in which the parents are working.

They are not people who are afraid to go to work. They are not people who, as one Tory Minister put it one time, lie in their houses watching 32- or 40-inch televisions or whatever it was as others pass by on their way to work. Those people are going out to work, and their children are still living in poverty.

There is an onus on the public sector — on the Government and on the Executive — to use its finances in such a way as to alleviate poverty and set an economic pathway that lifts people out of poverty and towards prosperity. The Executive have limited funds, but, obviously, we invest significant amounts of funds into the economy. There needs to be a significant debate as to how we best use those funds to stimulate the economy. A living wage is about stimulating the economy.

On the Executive's current pay policy, Mr Lunn asked what current Sinn Féin Ministers did. We are bound by the Executive pay policy, which is aligned to that set by the British Government. At the end of the day, the British Government fund the Executive on the basis of the Barnett formula. The money that comes across in their calculations of wages is what the Executive are forced to live with. However, considering the ongoing discussions about the Budget and future economic direction and the engagement with the British Government, this is an opportune time to raise the issue of the living wage.

On current practice for the policy statement and management statement and the financial memorandum of the authority, as Mr Newton pointed out, boards publish a lot of the information sought by Mr Agnew in his amendment. However, I think that Mr Agnew's amendment on this matter certainly does no harm to the Bill. Openness and transparency in all public pay is important.

I am aware of the trade union campaign in support of the introduction of a living wage. As was stated, it is currently calculated at £7.65 an hour. In response to a recent request from trade unions, education and library boards are conducting an examination to determine how many staff are paid below the target figure. This exercise will be complete in the coming weeks. We will then discuss it with representatives of the appropriate trade unions, which will give us more information on exactly how many staff in the Department of Education are under the living wage parameters. I am more than happy to make those figures public to the House to allow that debate to take place.

I support the principle of a living wage, and I support moving towards it. I note that Mr Agnew said that this is not an overnight event. It is a programme of change and a process of bringing all those who are under the living wage up to the living wage standard. Especially in a society such as this that is so reliant on public sector funding, it is about government using public sector funding to its optimum to drive the economy and give everyone a fair chance in that economy.

Mr Agnew: As someone said, we need more time to debate and consider this matter. I will take every opportunity to ensure that the Assembly does debate it. It is the second time that I have brought up the issue. The first time was in an amendment to a private Member's motion, and this time it is in an amendment to a Bill. Whilst, unfortunately, the petition of concern is valid and likely to ensure that this is blocked by the DUP, regardless of the will of the Assembly, I am glad that we have had the debate. I am heartened by the level of support in the Assembly for the principle of the minimum wage. I hope that those who are undecided will increasingly be swayed by the arguments, which I think are compelling in an economic and social sense.

Mr Lunn: I thank Mr Agnew for giving way. I would just like clarification. The amendment would commit the Education Authority to becoming accredited by 31 March 2016, but you talk about a phased way of bringing it in. Is it feasible to bring it in on that timescale?

Mr Agnew: In the limited time that we had to bring forward these amendments, we debated the timescale; I think it gives a year. The current minimum wage is £6.51, so we are talking about roughly a £1 per hour increase for a relatively small number of staff. The Minister acknowledges that he does not have the exact figures but will seek them out and publish them. We do not have the exact figures for the number of staff, but, across the public sector, it is estimated that about 10% of part-time staff do not get paid the minimum wage. I think that within the education sector, it is around 10% of staff. So it is a relatively small number.

When we look at the savings, the issue of cost has come up. The most inevitable question to be raised, and rightly so, was what the cost of this would be. I suppose that part of the purpose of moving to a single authority is cost savings. We always say that any cost savings should be put into front-line services. Well, front-line services mean our staff. As well as that, the research also shows that productivity is higher when staff pay and conditions are improved. Lower turnover of staff means less money spent on recruitment etc. Again I come back to the whole idea of the net cost being a benefit, if that makes sense, except in year 1. Certainly, were this to be passed this evening, I would consider supporting any amendments that looked at that timeline. However, again, what was important to me was to get the principle debated and discussed, and, if it needs to be tweaked, that can be done at Further Consideration Stage.

I will go through some of the contributions and arguments that have come up. Robin Newton's main argument seemed to be that it was a long amendment, for which I apologise. That was the pay ratio one. I apologise that it was long. He said that it replicated, to some extent, provisions in the 1986 Order. However, the amendment goes further and adds something new, and that is the pay ratio, which is key. People are fed up with seeing the wages of those at the top continually increase, even in a time of recession and even, in many cases, in the public sector, although that has been checked to some extent. This amendment says that we are not going to check it only in hard times; we are going to check it and, if there are going to be pay rises at the top, there should be pay rises at the bottom. The benefits should be shared, and that should be a principle throughout our public sector. So it is certainly not contradictory to the 1986 Order: it builds on and enhances it, increases fairness within the pay policy and ensures transparency.

I thank Maeve McLaughlin for her comments. She reminded us that more than half of children in poverty have at least one parent who is working. I say again that I make no apologies for using a Tory slogan: "We need to make work pay". However we do not do that by cutting the welfare state; we do it by literally making work pay by paying better wages.

Seán Rogers's support was brief but welcome; I acknowledge that.

Sandra Overend talked about a populist bandwagon. Unfortunately, she is not here. I can be accused of many things in the Green Party, but had I wanted to be populist, I would have joined a different party. I take my stances on principle. This is a principle that I support and if it is populist — great. I look forward to seeing all those votes at the next election. However, as I say, I take stances that are at times popular and stances that are unpopular, but I do so based on principle — what I think is right. The clarity that she sought was on whether or not it would go into skills. As I say, the principle is about setting pay and conditions, and linking those at the top end to the bottom end.

9.00 pm

I go back to the definition of poverty. Sometimes we refer to poverty as simply having a low income, but it is about inequality. The measure of poverty is inequality: the gap in income between the lowest and highest earners. The only way that we can truly tackle poverty is through tackling inequality. Some will say that they are against poverty because bad things are bad and that they are for reducing poverty because good things are good. However, when it comes to measures to address poverty, they run away from them because they do not fundamentally believe in tackling inequality. If so, that is fine, but I ask them to stand up and say that they support poverty because if you fail to tackle inequality, you accept poverty. I think that that is unacceptable.

Trevor Lunn raised the issue of cost, and the Minister has agreed to come back to that. I hope that, in my intervention, I addressed some of what Mr Lunn asked. I do not have the Department's figures — if the Minister does not have them, I cannot have them — but the research shows that, where this is implemented, the benefits outweigh the costs, and, on that basis, I hope that the Member will have confidence in the proposal.

I thank Mr McCallister for his contribution to the debate. He said that he would prefer my proposal on the living wage to come from the Executive, and I absolutely agree. That is why I keep putting it forward and will continue to do so until the Executive do the same. I am sure that, if the Executive did all the wonderful things that we would like them to do, he and I would probably give up politics and do something a bit more relaxing. I do not know — maybe he is an enthusiast. I do it because the Executive are not doing the things that I believe in, and I will keep pressing them to do so. In that regard, I welcome the Minister's response. I also welcome that the Minister is investigating this issue in his Department. That is important, as is his commitment to transparency and putting on public record the performance of his Department in paying a living wage. Once we have that, we can get a road map for making this a policy that will apply in his Department and be supported by him.

What I propose may seem radical, but when you take into account that both amendments represent policies supported or implemented by the Conservative Party, you see that it is not really that radical. At Westminster, the principle of a pay ratio was embedded through the Localism Act 2011, which was introduced by a Conservative-Liberal Government. I welcome that. It may seem radical in Northern Ireland because we are often a bit slower to come to these things, but it is being normalised in GB and should, I think, become normal here.

David Cameron has said that a living wage is the direction of travel — this from a party that opposed the national minimum wage. If that party can come to these ideas, I think, hope and believe that the Assembly can take those principles on board and start to implement them through our public governance.

I realise that I did not address the issue raised by Chris Lyttle. The difference between the living wage and the minimum wage is that the living wage is based on the cost of living, which is what we deem the minimum that a family can live on. I welcome the increase in the minimum wage in line with inflation, which he supports. I certainly support that as well, but it is about changing the underpinning principle to one that states that every working family should be able to meet their basic living costs.

I will conclude —

Mr P Ramsey: [Interruption.]

Mr Agnew: Apologies. I will conclude by saying that if the ambition of the Assembly is to be as radical as the Conservative Party, it is setting the bar pretty low, but, in this place, it would be a welcome ambition.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Before I put the question, I remind Members that amendment No 21 requires cross-community support due to a valid petition of concern.

Going for Growth Report: Executive Response

Published at 5.00 pm on Thursday 16 October 2014

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development) and Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): We wish to make a written statement to the Assembly to advise Members of the publication of the Executive's Response to the Agri-Food Strategy Board's Going for Growth report.

Agri-food is one of our most successful industries with a proven track record for growth. With sales of over £4 billion per annum, it is our largest manufacturing sector and accounts for over 10% of private sector employment. In recognition of this, the Programme for Government includes a commitment to develop a Strategic Action Plan for the Agri-Food sector to 2020.

In response to this commitment, we appointed the Agri-Food Strategy Board (AFSB) chaired by Tony O'Neill, to make recommendations in respect of the growth targets, strategic priorities and actions to be included in that Plan. The AFSB published its report, Going for Growth in May 2013, setting challenging targets for the sector to grow sales by 60% to over £7bn, create 15,000 new jobs, grow sales outside NI by 75% to £4.5bn and to increase value added to £1 billion by 2020. Central to the success of Going for Growth and the achievement of those targets will be delivering on the AFSB's Strategic Vision to 'grow a sustainable, profitable and integrated Agri-food supply chain, focussed on delivering the needs of the market'.

Since the publication of Going for Growth, Executive Departments and Agencies have considered its targets and recommendations, their response to these and the appropriate actions to take this forward.

The Executive agreed its formal Response to Going for Growth on 26 June 2014 and we are delighted to now announce that the agreed Response is being published today on the DETI<sup>1</sup> and DARD<sup>2</sup> websites.

In its Response, the Executive commends the ambitions of Going for Growth and welcomes its Strategic Vision and growth targets.

The Response highlights the Executive's key commitments to supporting delivery on the aims and objectives of Going for Growth and also contains a detailed action plan which outlines how Departments and Agencies will address over 80 recommendations that fall to the Executive to lead on. At a strategic level, the Executive has collectively agreed to give priority support to this sector and, in particular, proposals for a 'Farm Business Improvement Scheme' worth up to £250m, as recommended by the AFSB which will be taken forward as part of the Rural Development Programme 2014-2020. This support is very significant given the current challenging fiscal environment that all Departments face, and demonstrates our real commitment to the long-term sustainability of the agri-food sector.

Departments have already made progress on a number of fronts including:

- launching an Agri-Food Loan Scheme aimed at improving access to bank finance;
- deferring the introduction of charges for Export Health Certificates for meat and dairy products;
- launching a review of agri-food marketing and promotional activities to identify options for improved delivery;
- opening a third tranche of the Manure Efficiency Technology Scheme;
- commencing a major review of local business regulation (including regulation of elements of the Agri-Food sector);
- establishing a new government / industry Strategic Partnership to develop a long term strategy to eradicate TB from the local cattle population;
- launching a loan scheme to support the Sustainable Use of Poultry Litter;
- launching a joint all-island Chalara control strategy; and
- appointing a contact point at AFBI to advise academics and businesses on applications to EU R&D funding programmes, and increasing the number of DARD-funded postgraduates.

In considering how to progress the recommendations made by the AFSB, we agreed that Executive Colleagues would ensure that actions are built into the day to day activities of their Departments and reflected in Departmental Business Plans, ensuring that progress can be easily monitored and managed. In addition, DETI and DARD will ensure that the Agri-Food Strategy Board receives regular reports on progress against actions and targets to assist the Board in its advisory role. DETI and DARD will also report progress on a quarterly basis in respect of the Programme for Government Commitment.

Successful delivery of the AFSB's Vision will require the Executive and Industry to work together in partnership. We would like formally to record our thanks to the Chair and Board members for their time, effort and commitment in developing Going for Growth.

The Executive has shown its commitment to doing all that it can to support the sector in realising its ambitions and maximising its potential to our local economy, and we sincerely hope that everyone will play their part as we move forward into what we firmly believe will be an exciting future for the sector.

Finance and Personnel

Public Expenditure: 2014-15 October Monitoring Round

Published at 3.30 pm on Tuesday 28 October 2014

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel):

The purpose of this Statement is to detail the outcome of the Executive's October Monitoring allocations for 2014-15.

My Statement to the Assembly on 13th October addressed the non-ringfenced Resource expenditure elements of this monitoring round. Therefore, aside from some technical issues, the focus in this Statement is on the Capital DEL position. The non-cash ringfenced Resource DEL element is handled separately since this is strictly controlled by HM Treasury and cannot be used for any other purpose.

On Capital DEL, the Executive entered this monitoring round with an overcommitment of £38.6 million, whilst on Resource DEL, following Executive decisions on 9th October the overcommitment stands at £25.0 million.

There were a number of reduced requirements surrendered by departments in this monitoring round. These amounted to £0.3 million Resource expenditure and £56.4 million Capital investment. In addition £12.9 million Capital DEL has been surrendered by the Social Investment Fund. Full details are provided in the tables accompanying this Statement.

The Executive has agreed that departments can use Resource expenditure reduced requirements surrendered in this monitoring round to offset against agreed Resource DEL reductions. Of course AOCC are exempt from these reductions and as a consequence the £0.1 million they surrendered as a reduced requirement has been returned to the 'Centre'.

There are a number of technical issues that impacted on the 'Centre' position and these are detailed below.

It is good practice that departments seek to manage any emerging pressures within their existing allocations before bringing forward bids for additional allocations. The public expenditure control framework stipulates that internal departmental movements across Spending Areas in excess of the de minimis threshold require the Executive's approval. The movements agreed by the Executive in this round are also detailed in the tables.

Members will note the transaction between DE and DCAL. In agreeing the June Monitoring Round, the Education Minister agreed to provide DCAL with £1 million of Resource DEL from within the DE budget to address pressures relating to City of Culture Legacy programmes. This adjustment has been agreed as a reduction and reallocation.

Departments may also, for a number of reasons, seek to reclassify expenditure from Resource to Capital or vice versa. All such reclassifications need Executive approval and these are also shown in the tables provided with this Statement. Furthermore, departments may also, subject to DFP approval, seek to move budgets between the ringfenced and non-ringfenced Resource DEL categories. The impact of these moves is shown in the table detailing the ringfenced Resource DEL position.

All these issues impacted on the total amount of resources available to the Executive in this monitoring round. Once these were all taken into account, the Executive had £30.6 million of Capital DEL available for allocation. On Resource DEL, the overcommitment is slightly reduced to £24.7 million.

Delivering Social Change/Social Investment Fund/Childcare Strategy

Before turning to the Capital DEL allocations, I will provide an update on the Executive Funds held at the 'Centre' that cover allocations under the Social Investment Fund, Delivering Social Change Programme and Childcare Strategy.

As part of Budget 2011-15 the Executive set aside £11 million Resource and £15 million Capital in respect of the Social Investment Fund in this financial year. The Executive also agreed, as part of the Budget Realignment exercise, that Delivering Social Change projects should be funded from this centrally held fund. In addition, the Executive also set aside £3 million Resource for this year to fund Childcare Strategy initiatives.

All of the Resource DEL funding available for the Social Investment Fund was allocated in the June Monitoring Round, whilst £12.9 million Capital DEL remained unallocated. On the Childcare Strategy, a total of £1.5 million Resource DEL remained unallocated. OFMDFM requested and the Executive has agreed that funding set aside for the Childcare Strategy can be used for the purpose of the Delivering Social Change Programme in this year.

OFMDFM has also advised that the £12.9 million Capital DEL funding relating to the Social Investment Fund is not required in this year and has been surrendered to the 'Centre' as a reduced requirement.

OFMDFM has now confirmed the following RDEL transfers totalling £1.5 million under the Delivering Social Change banner to be processed in this monitoring round:

- £0.2 million to DHSSPS for the Family Support Hubs;
- £0.1 million to DEL for Community Family Support;
- £1.2 million to DSD for Nurture Units (£0.3m) and Social Enterprise Hubs (£0.9m).

Since this funding is accessed from existing central funds set aside by the Executive for this purpose, these transactions are handled as technical transfers (rather than allocations). Following these transactions there is no further Resource DEL or Capital DEL funding held at the 'Centre' relating to the Social Investment Fund or Childcare Strategy.

Bids Submitted

Against the funding available, departments submitted bids totalling £97.7 million in respect of Capital expenditure. The individual bids are also included in the tables attached to this Statement. Following Executive agreement on the non-ringfenced Resource DEL elements of this monitoring round, no further Resource DEL bids were considered in this round.

Allocations

The level of allocations made by the Executive was informed by a judgment on the level of overcommitment that should be carried forward to the January Monitoring Round and the relative priority of bids submitted.

The Executive agreed Capital DEL allocations totalling £43.5 million. The individual allocations are detailed in the tables and include:-

- £4.7 million to DCAL for City of Culture Legacy projects and Museums maintenance;
- £13.5 million to DSD for Co-Ownership Housing;
- £19.0 million to DRD for Roads Structural Maintenance (£15.0m), Bus and Rail Infrastructure (£1.0m) and Local Transport Safety Measures (£3.0m);
- £2.3 million to DARD for CAP Reform ICT costs;
- £4.0 million to DHSSPS for Medical Equipment, ICT and Health and Safety.

In the June Monitoring Round, the Executive agreed that £20.0 million should be held at the 'Centre' to be allocated to DHSSPS subject to the department demonstrating that it is taking the necessary actions to ensure it remains within its Budget Control total. My officials have been working closely with their DHSSPS counterparts and have confirmed that DHSSPS have considered the position and are taking the necessary actions to address the budgetary pressures faced, this year. In line with my recommendation, the Executive agreed this allocation to DHSSPS in the October Monitoring Round. It is also expected that DHSSPS will not breach their 2014-15 Budgetary Controls Totals.

Ring-fenced Financial Transactions Capital Funding

Members will recall that we exited the June Monitoring Round with £30.2 million of ring-fenced Financial Transactions Capital unallocated in the 2014-15 year. In the June Monitoring Round, I encouraged Ministers to continue with their efforts to identify suitable projects that could avail of this form of funding that can only be used for loans or equity investments in the private sector. It is disappointing that no bids for this funding have been received in either the June or October Monitoring Rounds. Under the terms of the scheme negotiated with HM Treasury, there is scope to carry forward up to 10% of our allocation in 2014-15 into next year, this equates to £6.3 million. Any underspend exceeding this threshold will be lost to Northern Ireland.

DETI has advised that it will be unable to spend all of the ring-fenced Financial Transactions Capital previously allocated to them in this year, declaring a reduced requirement of £5.0 million due to slippage on the Agri-food loan scheme. As a consequence, the Executive will exit the October Monitoring Round with unallocated ring-fenced Financial Transactions funding of £35.2 million. There is now a risk that some of this funding could be lost to Northern Ireland. I once again encouraged Ministers to come forward with proposals as soon as possible that can avail of this form of funding.

Together Building a United Community - Capital Programmes

Under the terms of the Economic Pact, the UK Government agreed the Executive could access an additional £100 million of RRI borrowing for shared education and housing schemes, with an initial profile of £50.0 million in each of the 2014-15 and 2015-16 years. A number of schemes totalling £99.5 million over three years have now been notified to the UK Government. The revised profile is £14.9 million (2014-15), £26.8 million (2015-16) and £57.8 million (2016-17). In 2014-15, DE will receive a total of £8.4 million for a range of shared education schemes, although £6 million of this has already been allocated for the Lisanelly project. DEL will receive £0.5 million for the Craigavon Further Education project and DSD will receive £6.0 million for a number of schemes related to shared housing.

Pay and Workforce Restructuring

Given the significant challenges facing the Executive's budget both this year and in the years ahead, I reminded Ministers of the need to exercise restraint in agreeing public sector pay awards and highlighted the need for the Executive to consider further measures, including the need for workforce restructuring.

October Monitoring Outcome

October Monitoring concluded with an overcommitment of £12.8 million on Capital DEL and £24.7 million on Resource DEL.

Conclusion

I am extremely pleased to report that the local economy is continuing to recover and that confidence levels and employment are increasing. I believe that the work of the Executive in attracting investment and jobs has been an important catalyst for this recovery across many sectors of our economy.

I also welcome the £43.5 million of Capital DEL allocations agreed in this monitoring round. This will benefit a number of departments, however the funding for our transport infrastructure and social housing in particular will provide a welcome boost to our construction sector.

I do however remain concerned about the public expenditure outlook, particularly on the Resource side. However, I believe that if the Executive can work in a strategic manner to address the key issues upfront we can deal with these challenges in a way that will minimise the impact on our most valuable public services.

I commend this Statement to the Assembly.

Update of Oral Statement on 14 October 2014

Published at 11.30 am on Thursday 30 October 2014.

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Further to my Oral Statement of 14 October on the October Monitoring Round and my recent attendance at the Health Committee, I would like to update the House in relation to a number of important financial matters affecting my Department in 2014/15.

Firstly, as I have previously advised the House, I very much welcome the £80m which has been made available to my Department in 2014/15 through the June and October Monitoring Rounds. However, given the scale of the challenge I face, even with this additional funding there will still be consequences for the provision of health and social care services. It will simply not be possible to maintain current levels of service provision in the absence of all the required funding.

In terms of the deployment of the £80m additional allocation, this will focus on the provision of front line services. However, while I have decided that the additional funding will permit £14 million of investment in elective care, this is much less than the full extent of the pressure and thus the current restrictions on the use of the independent sector will have to continue.

Support will be provided to unscheduled care and patient flow, with the aim of reducing the number of breaches in Emergency Department waiting time standards, including through the challenging winter period. Some £31m will be devoted to protecting unscheduled care, investing in domiciliary care and addressing the implications of Trust contingency plan proposals. As I signalled in my Oral Statement of 14 October, I have decided to provide support so that NICE drugs and treatments can continue to be provided, to invest in the Altnagelvin radiotherapy centre during 2014/15, so that it can open as intended in 2016 and to support the cath labs in Altnagelvin so that they can continue to provide a vital service, 24/7 as planned. Together these specialist services will benefit by some £8m. Further support will be provided to the voluntary and community sector and the Family Fund along with other regional commitments which will receive some £8.5m. Some £8m has also been directed at funding TYC transitional costs in 2014/15, allowing the Integrated Care Partnerships to make further progress and ensure that there is a greater equity in reformed services across Northern Ireland. Finally I intend to make allocations of £4m to support increased nurse staffing levels to maintain safety and quality on acute wards, £3m to meet some of the increased demand in childrens' services, £2m to resettle mental health and learning disability clients and £1.5m to provide some support to vital public health initiatives.

Since my Oral Statement, I have considered the range of competing pressures and priorities across health and social care. In doing so, my clear focus has been to ensure that the services we provide are safe and effective, while seeking to achieve financial balance for the Department, as is required of all Ministers.

To achieve these twin aims, in addition to the £170m of savings required in 2014/15, the Trusts will also need to implement a range of contingency proposals. Some of these proposals will inevitably cause concern in local areas. However, each Trust has provided assurances that their services will remain safe, with appropriate staffing levels in place. Such proposals, including the temporary closure of some minor injuries units, closure of some beds and amalgamation of wards and outpatient clinics, will be implemented on the understanding that alternative arrangements are put in place to maintain safety and mitigate the impact on patient flow. Elective care treatments will be focused on urgent procedures, assessed by clinicians in priority order, and potentially provided on different sites in order to reduce locum and agency spend. Domiciliary care and aids and adaptations will be provided in order to best manage risks and meet the highest priority needs within the resources available. I expect the full engagement of the Trusts in their local areas so that the public is fully aware of any changes that will impact on them and should Trusts propose to make any significant service changes permanent, those proposals must be subject to consultation, as appropriate.

The extent of the pressure on my budget means that I have had also to impose further cuts in other areas including a 2.5% cut to my other Arms Length Bodies, my own Department's administration costs and to pharmacy spend. I have decided to follow the lead of the Finance Minister and exercise a degree of restraint over pay, given the financial challenges and the need to prioritise front line service provision. Subject to the necessary approvals, staff will therefore receive either the incremental progression they are entitled to or a 1% non consolidated pay award if they are at the top of the pay scale. Consultation processes will also commence shortly which could mean that higher and lower clinical excellence awards will not be made for 2012/13 and 2013/14.

Given the significant financial challenges, I have had to make difficult choices in both allocating resources and determining the measures needed to secure break even. These decisions reflect what is achievable in maintaining safety and minimising costs between now and the end of the financial year. These financial challenges will continue in 2015/16, and our planning for that requires urgent Executive agreement to a draft Budget, including how Welfare Reform cost pressures will be addressed. It is vital that health and social care receives the necessary funding to meet the needs of the local population.

Anti-Slavery Day: Interdepartmental Ministerial Group On Modern Slavery

Published at 12.00 noon on Monday 20 October 2014

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Human trafficking and slavery are dreadful crimes which have a devastating impact on victims. Every effort must be made to combat these crimes and ensure that the perpetrators, who deceive and exploit vulnerable people for their personal gain, are brought to justice.

The Department of Justice is committed to working with colleagues across the United Kingdom to ensure that the response to trafficking and exploitation is as effective and robust as possible. The Justice Minister represents Northern Ireland on the Interdepartmental Ministerial Group on Modern Slavery, which has published a statement to mark the occurrence of Anti Slavery Day on 18 October.

This statement outlines the activity across the United Kingdom, on both a legislative and non-legislative basis, to tackle trafficking and exploitation. It also outlines the work that the administrations intend to take forward over the coming year.

Copies of the statement will be available in the Assembly library.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr McCallister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of renaming the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister as the Office of Joint First Ministers.

(AQO 5375/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): There are no plans to rename the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister.

Mr Kinahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they consulted all relevant members of the Executive before the announcement of the targets within Together: Building a United Community.

(AQO 5372/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Together: Building a United Community Strategy is the culmination of many years of hard work and the outcome of extensive consultation with the community and political representatives, including Ministerial colleagues.

It reflects the consultation on the draft Cohesion, Sharing and Integration document as well as the All-Party group on Good Relations.

The Strategy was considered and agreed by the Executive last May, including the targets.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the (i) type; (ii) scale; and (iii) cost of separation and division that the Together: Building a United Strategy seeks to address.

(AQW 30618/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Addressing the challenges left by a legacy of division within our society is a strategic priority for all of us in the Executive and it is vital to build a stronger, more united, diverse and reconciled community.

Our commitment to tackling division and building a united community is clear. One of the key priorities within the Programme for Government is to build a strong and shared community. This can only be achieved when we work to reduce segregation and separation.

Mr Wells asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they have any plans to review the provisions of the Ministerial Code.

(AQO 5492/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: As the Member will be aware, there have been a number of recent legal judgments in which adherence to the Ministerial Code has been a core issue. We are in the first instance carefully studying these judgments to determine what lessons can be learned and whether, for example, there are areas in which further clarity about its provisions may be needed to ensure that the Code remains effective as the key accountability mechanism for the Northern Ireland Executive.

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what discussions were held within their Department on the First Minister's statement in February 2014 that he was not prepared to be First Minister of a government which is kept in the dark on matters which are relevant to Northern Ireland.

(AQO 5818/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: No Ministerial discussions were held on this matter.

Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Programme for Government 2011-15 target of increasing the drawdown of European funds.

(AQO 6003/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We would refer you to the answer we gave to AQO 5484/11-15 on 10 February 2014. These are the most up to date figures available and show that we remain well on track to meet this Programme for Government target.

As soon as figures for 2013/14, Year 3, have been validated, we will publish the updated drawdown value.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to provide a copy of the business case submitted by the Strategic Investment Board and agreed to by their Department to commission the Colliers International report into the peace building and reconciliation centre at the Maze/Long Kesh site.

(AQW 33504/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Departmental agreement was not required for the Strategic Investment Board's business case for the Colliers International report into the Peace Building and Reconciliation Centre.

A number of documents relating to the Colliers International report are now available on the SIB website.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what discussions were held between the Strategic Investment Board and their Department that led to the commissioning of the Colliers International report into the peace building and reconciliation centre at the Maze/Long Kesh site.

(AQW 33505/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Strategic Investment Board agreed with OFMDFM officials that it would commission a market research report to help determine the evidence required. Ministerial consideration of this issue was not sought, nor was it required as it was commissioned through SIB.

Mr Kinahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they have been invited to appear before the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee inquiry into the administrative scheme for on-the-runs.

(AQO 6141/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The First Minister was invited to appear before the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee in his party leader role to give evidence as part of the Committee's inquiry on this issue when it visited Belfast on 9 and 10 June.

Mrs Dobson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the number of Central Good Relations Fund 2014/15 applications (i) received; (ii) approved; and (iii) rejected; and for their assessment of the time taken to (i) make a decision on each application; (ii) inform applicants of the decision; and (iii) release funding to successful applicants.

(AQW 35253/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Two hundred and twelve applications were received for the Central Good Relations Fund 2014/15. Two hundred of these applications were for project funding and 12 were for small grants.

Five of the 12 small grants applications have been approved and 7 were unsuccessful. All small grant applicants have been advised of the decision relating to their application.

Of the 200 project applications for project funding, 21 have been approved based on the current available budget. The remaining applications for project funding will be re-considered if further funding becomes available.

The closing date for applications was 10 February and decisions were made in tranches. All applicants are advised as soon as decisions are made.

Funding is released to applicants in line with the terms of their letter of offer which they must sign prior to any funding being released.

It should be noted that the Central Good Relations Fund is a small central scheme designed to distribute funding in year. We primarily fund good relations work through the Community Relations Council and all District Councils. The fund does not and will not replace mainstream core or project funding.

Mr Gardiner asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline how the funding for programmes within the Together: Building a United Community will be delivered.

(AQO 4653/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In addition to the £36m allocated to good relations work in the current CSR period a further £5.4 million has been allocated from the 2014 June Monitoring round to OFMDFM, DCAL and DOJ to support the delivery of the Together: Building a United Community Strategy. This shows the commitment of the Executive to ensure the delivery of the actions and commitments contained in the Together: Building a United Community strategy.

Senior Responsible Owners have been appointed for each of the seven headline actions and are working to produce indicative costs, establish realistic cost profiles and identify funding sources which will inform our decisions on the way forward and the funding required.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given the arm's-length body status of the Victims and Survivors Service, what authority their Special Advisers have in its operation and to give directions to staff, and what supervision exists to ensure Special Advisers do not abuse their positions.

(AQW 35427/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Our Special Advisers are accountable to us. They have no direct authority for the operation of the Victims and Survivors Service, as the responsibility for this lies with the Service.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the recommendations arising from the research report from the Victims' Commissioner on the Victims and Survivors Service that have been (i) implemented; and (ii) rejected.

(AQW 35470/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We have accepted all 70 of the recommendations emanating from the Independent Assessment of the Victims and Survivors Service. Of these, 41 have been fully implemented and 16 partially implemented. We anticipate that all recommendations will be implemented by March 2015.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the Ulster Human Rights Watch Service as funded by the Victims and Survivors Service (VSS) (case reference 13/1928) in relation to (i) outcomes; and (ii) value for money as compared to similar VSS funded schemes.

(AQW 35471/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Victims and Survivors Service (VSS) has a monitoring and evaluation framework in place which is used across the Victims Support Programme. Ulster Human Rights Watch has submitted reports which show that it has delivered services and support in line with the outcomes outlined within their Letter of Offer.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister in relation to the 2013 HM Treasury Consultation on Tax Free Childcare Payments/Childcare Payments Bill, to detail (i) the response from their Department; (ii) the stakeholders their Department consulted; and (iii) the responses they have received to the consultation.

(AQW 35485/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: As the Member will know, the OFMDFM Committee wrote to the Department requesting this information. A copy of the Department's response has been placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in relation to the Victims and Survivors Service, to detail (i) how staff vacancies are filled; and (ii) whether an audit of staff, matching levels of work to grades, has been conducted.

(AQW 35608/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Victims and Survivors Service (VSS) operates a standard recruitment process. Vacancies are filled through publicly advertised recruitment processes in line with Departmental guidelines. When required temporary positions are procured through recruitment agencies.

A number of VSS staff were transferred from the Community Relations Council and NI Memorial Fund under TUPE arrangements. As part of that process, a review of positions was undertaken and grades relative to the role and position assigned. Any new positions are subject to a review by DFP which is based on the skills and competences required for the role and the appropriate grade is applied. The Independent Assessment of the VSS which reported in February 2014 also made recommendations in relation to staffing issues. We welcomed and accepted all of their recommendations.

As an Arm's Length Body, VSS is required to operate in line with all standard Departmental guidelines and policies. Adherence and compliance is reviewed through a number of mechanisms which include Accountability and Audit and Risk Committee meetings and through a programme of internal audits, which VSS has been subject to throughout the year.

Mr Storey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what legislation is in place to protect Christians in Northern Ireland.

(AQO 6541/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The 1998 Fair Employment and Treatment Order currently protects individuals from unlawful discrimination on the grounds of religious belief. The term religious belief includes any religion or similar philosophical belief.

Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the development of the former Crumlin Road prison.

(AQO 6543/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Visitor Attraction and Conference Centre at the Crumlin Road Gaol, operated by Belfast Tours Ltd, continues to be extremely successful. It exceeded expectations by achieving 136,000 paying visitors and hosting 466 conferences and special events during the first 12 months of the Gaol opening to the public. Over 100,000 people visited the Gaol between 1 December 2013 and the end of August 2014. The company employs 35 people.

Belfast Distillery Company has been identified as the developer to regenerate A Wing as a boutique whiskey distillery, tasting rooms, restaurant and visitor attraction on the history of whiskey-making in Belfast. The company anticipates that it will commence development work later this year, initially employing 30 people, increasing to 60 when fully operational.

Our Department continues to undertake work on the site to enhance the visitor attraction, protect the buildings and provide infrastructure to facilitate further regeneration. Restoration and protection work was completed on the Warders Cottages in 2013/14. This work has further contributed to an enhanced urban environment for local communities.

Our officials are currently preparing to market the opportunity to develop D Wing and the undeveloped Cottages. It is anticipated that this marketing exercise will take place early in 2015.

Mr Elliott asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether all of the £80 million of the Social Investment Fund will be allocated by March 2015.

(AQO 6546/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Delivery plans are being finalised for projects identified for funding under the £80 million Social Investment Fund with letters of offer out for a number of projects in all 9 zones.

The full list of projects prioritised across the zones can be found at <http://www.ofmdfmi.gov.uk/index/delivering-social-change/social-investment-fund/sif-projects.htm>.

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given the proposed one year extension of the Historical Institutional Abuse (HIA) Inquiry and thus a similar period of additional wait for victims for potential redress, whether departmental officials will scope potential models of redress to learn lessons from other jurisdictions in order to inform thinking and expedite decision making ahead of the recommendations in the Inquiry report.

(AQW 35785/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We do not underestimate the complexities of dealing with institutional abuse and every opportunity must be provided for those impacted by the allegations of institutional abuse to be heard in an open forum. The Historical Institutional Abuse (HIA) Inquiry Chairman has therefore reluctantly made a very persuasive and compelling case for a one year extension to the timeframe.

On consideration of all of the relevant evidence, the Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry Chairperson will submit a report to the NI Executive which will include recommendations on the requirement or desirability for redress to be provided by the institution and/or the Executive to meet the particular needs of victims.

The Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry Terms of Reference state "the nature or level of any potential redress - financial or the provision of services - is a matter that the Executive will discuss and agree following receipt of the Inquiry and Investigation report".

We will not pre-empt the work of the Inquiry or any future decisions that the Executive may make by speculating now about redress or potential models of redress.

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the issue of religious inequality in North Belfast and the need for a time bound, resourced strategy to tackle this has been raised at any Executive meeting since May 2014; and if not, whether the issue will be discussed in the near future.

(AQW 35786/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: All aspects of Executive business, including the processes by which the Executive considers and reaches a decision on any matter, are confidential.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what steps the Executive will take to ensure that the Coalition Government's Tax-Free Childcare Scheme will be promoted and accessible in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 35948/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive has agreed to seek to extend the provisions of the Westminster Childcare Payments Bill to Northern Ireland by means of a Legislative Consent Motion. Subject to the Assembly agreeing such a Motion, parents who live here will be able to claim support under the proposed new Tax Free Childcare Scheme in the same way as those living in England, Scotland or Wales.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the use of plastic ear tags on livestock is due to an EU requirement; and if so, to outline the differences with the practice in other parts of the UK.

(AQW 35896/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The rules governing the identification of livestock, including means of identification, are laid down in EU law.

Under Council Regulation (EC) 1760/2000, cattle must be identified with a primary and secondary tag bearing the same number. The specifications for ear-tags are set out in Commission Regulation (EC) No 911/2004 and state that the primary ear-tag shall: be of flexible plastic material; be tamper-proof and remain easy to read throughout the bovine's lifetime; not be re-usable; be designed in such a way that it remains attached to the animal without being harmful to it; and carry only non-removable inscriptions. Member States may approve an alternative material for the secondary tag provided it carries the same information as the primary tag.

The official means of identification for cattle here is two yellow plastic tags, and the use of metal secondary tags is not permitted. The policy reflects health-and-safety concerns about operators reading small metal tags and aims to reduce scope for errors in identifying animals, since such tags can wear down over time.

In Britain, secondary ear-tags may be made from a range of approved materials and types, including metal and plastic types.

Under EU Regulation 21/2004, sheep and goats must carry two identifiers bearing the same number, and in the case of sheep, one of those identifiers must contain an electronic identification device (EID). The Regulation specifies that ear-tags should be capable of being attached to the animal's ear without harming it and that they must be easy to exclude from the food chain. Ear-tags must also be made of non-degradable material, be tamper-proof and remain easy to read throughout the lifetime of the animal. They must also be non-reusable, and the codes printed on the tags must be non-removable.

DARD require that sheep be identified with an EID device (EID tag or bolus) in addition to a conventional tag. All official tags for identifying sheep are plastic. This is in line with the rules in Britain.

Council Directive 2008/71/EC sets out the system for the identification of pigs and specifies that a pig must be identified with an ear-tag or tattoo before it leaves its birth holding but does not set out a specification for ear-tags. Ear-tags for pigs do not need to be approved by DARD; however, the tags need to be printed with the holding code of the keeper by a licensed tag supplier. Ear-tags can be made of plastic or metal or a combination of both and can be of any colour. This also applies in Britain.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many people applied for the position of Chair of the TB Strategic Partnership Group.

(AQW 35988/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There were four applicants for the position of Chair of the TB Strategic Partnership Group.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline (i) the appointment process carried out for the Chair of the TB Strategic Partnership Group; (ii) the targets set for this role; and (iii) the timescale in which these targets are to be reached.

(AQW 35991/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The process for the recruitment of the Chair of the TB Strategic Partnership Group (TBSPG) followed the spirit of the Commissioner for Public Appointments NI (CPANI) Code of Practice. The position was publicly advertised in the local press. All applications for appointment were considered strictly on the basis of merit against pre-determined criteria for this post, with independent assessment, openness and transparency of process. Applicants who fulfilled the criteria were interviewed, following which the names of those deemed suitable for appointment were provided to me. I announced my decision by Press Release on 22 July 2014.

The Chair of the TBSPG will be expected to build on the existing EU Commission annually approved TB Eradication Programme and to: lead the development of a long term strategy to eradicate TB; produce an associated action plan to implement the strategy; provide advice to me on how the strategy and its outcomes can be achieved; determine who should lead on the implementation of the various elements and advise on how they will be funded; reach agreement with a range of stakeholders on their roles in delivery; and further the objectives of securing the progressive reduction of disease levels and programme costs towards eradicating bovine TB by as early a date as possible.

Following the appointment of the TBSPG Members, I expect that the TBSPG will quickly get to work to scope the sequence and timescale for each of the components of the substantial and important tasks outlined above. I shall, however, wish to receive the TB eradication strategy and the implementation action plan by as early a date as possible.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what management schemes are being put in place for the regeneration of Belvoir Forest.

(AQW 36012/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service manages Departmental owned woodlands in line with best practice sustainable forest management standards. This requires all our forests to have forest management plans which provide an appropriate balance between economic, environmental and social objectives. The long term management plans for Belvoir are to develop a predominantly broadleaf woodland using natural regeneration and supplementary planting to re-establish the woodland. The management plans for forests in County Down will go through a formal review process in 2015 and this will provide an opportunity for both strategic and local consultation on our Forest Management Plans in Belvoir forest.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the projects funded under the village renewal aspect of the Rural Development Programme in North Antrim, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36068/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I take your question to mean the total amount committed to village renewal projects through letters of offer. Village renewal projects include the preparation of village plans and the support of integrated village initiatives which promote cross-community development and regeneration. Projects in the North Antrim area are detailed in the table below.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what is the current status of the DARD Directed AFBI Research Work Programme 2014/15.

(AQW 36094/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is continuing to fund a considerable portfolio of research in 2014/15 via the DARD Directed AFBI Research Work Programme addressing the Department's evidence and innovation needs relating to (1) performance in the market place (2) social and economic infrastructure in rural areas (3) animal and plant health & animal welfare and (4) sustainable environment. We are also well advanced in the processes for preparing the DARD-directed AFBI Research Work Programme for 2015/16.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has to maintain the current woodland environment and encourage the transition to native woodland within Belvoir Forest.

(AQW 36103/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In line with sustainable forest management standards, all Departmental owned forests have forest management plans which provide an appropriate balance between economic, environmental and social objectives. The management plans for Belvoir forest outline the long term management objectives to maintain a woodland environment by developing a predominantly broadleaf native woodland. This transition will be carried out using natural regeneration and supplementary planting to re-establish the woodland.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what sustainable management methods will be employed to ensure forestry operations will not damage current forest biodiversity in Belvoir Forest.

(AQW 36104/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service manages Departmental owned woodlands in line with sustainable forest management standards and associated best practice guidelines. At Belvoir, adherence to operational guidelines and close working with the NI Environment Agency and RSPB ensured that the biodiversity value of the forest, in particular the ancient woodland remnants and veteran trees, was protected while necessary tree disease felling operations were completed. Subsequent operations associated with the regeneration of the felled areas will be managed to the same standard.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 35845/11-15, to detail the felling program for (i) 2013/14; and (ii) 2014/15.

(AQW 36105/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The timber sales programme in 2013/14 totalled 412,768 m<sup>3</sup>. This was made up of 11,040 m<sup>3</sup> of timber from thinning operations and 401,728 m<sup>3</sup> of timber from clear fell operations. Spruce species accounted for 84% of the total programme volume.
- (ii) The timber sales programme for 2014/15 is ongoing at this stage of the year but it is anticipated to total 411,000 m<sup>3</sup>. 18,000 m<sup>3</sup> of timber is expected to come from thinning operations and 393,000 m<sup>3</sup> of timber is expected to come from clear fell operations. Spruce species are again expected to account for around 84% of the total programme volume.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 35845/11-15, to detail the volume of timber supplied to maintain the annual supply of wood for industrial processing in each of the last three years; and the monetary value realised.

(AQW 36106/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Please see table below detailing the volume of timber supplied to maintain the annual supply of wood for industrial processing in each of the last three years and the monetary value realised.

	Volume supplied (cubic metres)	Income from timber sales
2013-14	412,768	£8.2 million
2012-13	425,525	£8.15 million
2011-12	438,927	£8.34 million

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the Test and Vaccinate or Remove (TVR) policy that is being used to tackle the continuing issue of Bovine tuberculosis; and what process is being used to measure any success of the TVR policy.

(AQW 36125/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I must clarify that "Test and Vaccinate or Remove (TVR)" is a wildlife intervention research project, it is not a policy. TVR field activities commenced on 27 May 2014 in a 100km<sup>2</sup> area near Banbridge/Rathfriland in Co. Down.

The aim of the project is to consider the effects of implementing TVR on badgers in an area with high confirmed TB in cattle; high cattle herd density; and high badger density. Badger TB prevalence and ecological factors relating to the TVR intervention will be measured; and cattle TB prevalence in the TVR area will also be measured and compared with TB prevalence in similar non-TVIR control areas. The data gathered during the project will also be interrogated by disease transmission and economic models to help inform the optimum strategic approach towards controlling TB in the badger population here. In addition it will develop expertise in relation to trapping, testing and vaccination of badgers and quantify the field logistics and costs of wildlife intervention.

In the first year all badgers captured will be sampled, micro-chipped, vaccinated and released. In addition up to 40 badgers will have Global Positioning System (GPS) collars fitted to record their movements. This initial approach is essential for two reasons: (a) to establish baseline data on normal badger movements; and (b) to reduce any potential disease risk should there be any adverse perturbation (that is disturbance of badgers) following the subsequent removal of test positive badgers. Ecological monitoring will also take place throughout the 5 year research project, which is scheduled to end in 2018.

The TVR project will be reviewed annually and it is anticipated that a final report will be available by 2019. Some information will become available as the TVR research project progresses, but care will have to be taken to prevent premature conclusions being drawn prior to completion of the project and the subsequent analysis of all the data.

The TVR project has obtained broad spectrum support from farmer, veterinary and environmental representative stakeholders. I am also encouraged with the degree of support the TVR wildlife intervention research project has received from farmers and landowners in the Banbridge/Rathfriland area.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the illegal abattoir in Forkhill, South Armagh; and what steps her Department has taken to ensure that further illegal abattoirs are being deterred.

(AQW 36126/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Responsibility for investigating illegal slaughter in the north of Ireland lies primarily with the Food Standards Agency (FSA) and Local Councils. However my Department, through Veterinary Service Enforcement Branch (VSEB), investigates any associated breaches of animal health or welfare.

A criminal investigation is ongoing in respect of one individual for a number of alleged animal health and welfare breaches, associated with the discovery of an alleged illegal abattoir in Forkhill.

My Department engages closely with the FSA, the PSNI and other enforcement agencies tackling and deterring rural crime including illegal abattoirs.

I have met with the Chief Constable and the Minister of Justice on a number of occasions to highlight my concerns regarding rural crime including farm-related rural crime and the impact it has on the farming community. The work of the PSNI's Rural Crime Unit is discussed at these meetings. In addition, actions taken by DARD's VSEB to tackle livestock theft in co-operation with the PSNI are also considered.

DARD's VSEB use their range of powers to carry out unannounced inspections of farm animals and premises suspected of involvement in rural crime. More serious criminality is referred to the police with DARD officers providing assistance and expertise. VSEB assists the PSNI by sharing intelligence, exchanging training and conducting joint operations and investigations. VSEB also participates in multi-agency investigations with other regulators, including the Food Standards Agency, HMRC and cross border agencies.

DARD continues to work with the Department of Justice, the PSNI and representatives of the farming community on a number of joint initiatives. These are aimed at reducing rural crime and raising awareness of action that can be taken to help prevent rural crime, including Farm Watch, the Freeze-branding initiative and the Crimestoppers Campaign.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how long her Department had known about the investigation in Forkhill before the illegal abattoir was uncovered.

(AQW 36127/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Responsibility for tackling illegal slaughter of cattle in the north of Ireland lies primarily with the Food Standards Agency (FSA) and Local Councils.

My Department, through Veterinary Service Enforcement Branch (VSEB), works closely with the FSA and the PSNI to investigate allegations associated with illegal slaughter. This particular investigation was a multi-agency investigation led by the PSNI. It is not appropriate to disclose the nature, or the timing, of information shared between enforcement agencies regarding a particular criminal investigation.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what lessons her Department has learned from the Single Farm Payment crisis in 2013; and what action her Department will take to avoid a repeat of this crisis in 2014.

(AQW 36128/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The 2013 Single Farm Payment campaign achieved the best ever payment outcome to date with 90.16% of claims finalised in December 2013 and 96% of claims finalised by February. All inspection cases were paid by April 2014 which was two months earlier than the previous year and four months earlier than the year before.

My Department has set even more challenging targets in 2014, one of which is to have 93% of Single Farm Payment (SFP) claims issue this December. Inspections have commenced much earlier this year. Processes have been updated to minimise the number of farm visits and to ensure that when we must visit a farm, all information that may be required for future reference is captured. My Department has committed to have 500 remote sensing inspection cases paid in December.

I have committed to improving communication links between the Department and farmers especially those who have been inspected by providing information to them as early as possible within the constraints of the Regulations.

This year my Department engaged in an active targeted promotion campaign to encourage an increased uptake of the Single Application online service. It has resulted in a 52% increase uptake in 2014 compared to 2013. The online submission of SFP forms helps to reduce processing times.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions have taken place with her counterparts in the Irish government to promote an all-island approach to agri-food production.

(AQW 36129/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I engage in a wide range of discussions with the Dublin Government to promote an all-island approach to agri-food production. Whilst regular formal discussions take place at North South Ministerial Council meetings on issues such as Animal Health and Welfare, Rural Development, CAP reform and Plant Health, there are numerous other discussion groups, collaborations, working groups and cross-border meetings that examine areas of co-operation. For example:

- My officials meet regularly with their counterparts in the south to discuss a range of legislative, regulatory and enforcement related matters on issues of mutual interest (e.g. identification and movement of livestock, animal welfare and transport, plant health etc) to ensure insofar as is possible a consistent all-island approach;
- The College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) works in partnership with a number of counterparts in the south, including Teagasc, on research, development and technology transfer and exchanges information relating to nutrient management, as well as the beef, sheep, dairy, crops and mushroom industries; and
- My officials also work with colleagues in the South to facilitate trade. For example, they have established a dairy International Trade Working Group; agreed certificates for exports from either the north or the south which permit meat from animals sourced from across the island and they have also been able to draw on the south's experiences of export negotiations.

I also meet regularly with Minister Coveney to discuss topical issues impacting on the agri-food sector; most recently we have worked jointly to maintain the cross-border beef trade and address labelling issues in an effort to ensure that producers across the island are not placed at a disadvantage.

Moving forward, as my Department leads the implementation of the Executive's Response to Going for Growth, officials will explore possibilities for further collaboration with the Dublin Government to the benefit of the local agri-food sector.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether research through the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute in the areas of arable crops, grass breeding, apple research, mushroom research and beef, dairy and sheep research, is under threat; and how potential cuts to the research programme is compatible with the focus on research in 'Going for Growth'.

(AQW 36145/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: AFBI is currently developing proposals to address an expected 25% reduction in its existing sources of revenue up to 2020. Clearly, this represents a very significant challenge for the organisation and options are being explored by AFBI including both cost reductions and alternative potential revenue streams across all areas of its work programme. In this process DARD and AFBI are working closely together to develop a sustainable way forward for the Institute which best meets the needs of the agri-food sector in the north of Ireland within the confines of available resources, and in doing so, will give due consideration to addressing the recommendations and targets of the "Going for Growth" report produced by the Agri-Food Strategy Board.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the plans for the veterinary laboratory in Omagh.

(AQW 36146/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The laboratory in Omagh is part of the estate leased by DARD to the Agri-food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI). DARD and AFBI agree that the high operating cost of AFBI's estate as a whole needs to be addressed as a priority. Work is ongoing to establish a clear roadmap for the future of the AFBI estate, informed by AFBI's strategic vision and scientific priorities. All options are being explored, but I have no set plans at this point for the AFBI laboratory in Omagh.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the cuts that have been required in research; and (ii) the reasons for the cuts.

(AQW 36147/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Public expenditure is under very significant pressure with in-year cuts of 2.1% announced by the Executive as part of the June monitoring round. As a result, the Department has asked all business areas, including our main science provider AFBI, to develop savings proposals which are currently being considered. My recent response to AQW 35923/11-15 highlighted the fact that strategic plans for cost-savings and alternative revenue streams are being developed by AFBI, working with DARD, for the period through to 2020.

As I indicated in my response to AQW 36094/11-15, new research within the DARD directed AFBI Research Programme has not been commissioned in 2014/15 as DARD's budget is already fully committed for this year, although it is important to note that a considerable portfolio of research started in previous years continues to be funded.

In relation to the industry-led Research Challenge Fund, the budget for the latest tranche was reduced from £1m to £750k, as this amount has never been fully committed in the past. The balance has been used to offer an additional 4 PhD studentships which will help drive innovation in the industry and foster future local world class leaders in industry, research, and education with £52.6k required for savings plans.

Finally, I recognise that difficult choices will have to be made across all areas of expenditure and my Department will continue to engage with our stakeholders to ensure appropriate prioritisation of key evidence gaps and innovation for the research and development work programme for 2015/16 and beyond.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether there are plans to provide training and create jobs in native woodland creation and management in departmental owned woodlands.

(AQW 36163/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service creates and manages native woodlands as an integral part of their overall management of Departmental owned woodlands. This is in line with sustainable forest management standards and ensures woodlands are managed on a landscape basis with an appropriate balance between economic, social and environmental benefits.

The management of Departmental owned woodlands is carried out by trained foresters with competencies including the management of native woodlands.

Forest Service also chair the Native Woodland Group with whom they have produced and published a booklet entitled "Native Woodland Definition and Guidance" to assist all woodland managers, including private landowners, in the creation and regeneration of native woodland.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farmers in East Londonderry have received financial support through the Countryside Management Scheme, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36164/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The number of farmers in East Londonderry that received financial support through the Countryside Management Scheme (CMS) and related schemes in each of the last 5 years is outlined in Table 1. The data is based on the last five financial years and shows the total number of participants in the NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) and in Legacy Agri-environment schemes. Legacy Agri-environment (AE) schemes refer to the AE schemes that were introduced under the Rural Development Programme 2000-2006, namely the Countryside Management Scheme (CMS) and the Environmentally Sensitive Areas Scheme (ESA).

Year	Number of farmers that received support through CMS in East Londonderry
April 2009 – March 2010	910
April 2010 – March 2011	1024
April 2011 – March 2012	1008
April 2012 – March 2013	939
April 2013 – March 2014	944

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of farmers in (i) Northern Ireland; and (ii) East Londonderry that currently receive support through the Less Favoured Area Compensatory Allowance for farming in naturally less favourable areas.

(AQW 36166/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Based on the Less Favoured Areas Compensatory Allowance (LFACA) 2014, claimed on the Single Application Form 2013:

- (i) As at 19 September 2014, 13,368 farm businesses have received support;
- (ii) As at 19 September 2014, 914 farm businesses in the East Londonderry constituency have received support.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department has promoted the Northern Ireland Countryside Management Scheme to encourage voluntary participation by farmers.

(AQW 36168/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department's Countryside Management Unit (CMU) encouraged voluntary participation by farmers in the NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) by engaging in an active promotion campaign during the application periods in 2008 and 2011. A series of farm walks were organised to provide information to interested participants on the options available and the many benefits that agri-environment schemes can deliver.

NICMS featured on the DARD exhibit at Balmoral Show and other local agricultural shows. Visitors to the shows were able to discuss their eligibility for NICMS and the options available to them with Countryside Management advisors.

CMU published a number of press articles in the farming press to highlight the opening of NICMS for application and to provide information on the scheme. The Department's website also contained advice on applying for NICMS and details of the scheme.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail her Department's plans to change the financial element of the Animal and Public Health Information System.

(AQW 36187/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) is nearing the end of its useful economic life and plans are being developed for its replacement. All current IT expenditure on APHIS will be kept to a minimum between now and the implementation of the new system.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what her Department is doing to communicate to and advise farmers on rural crime.

(AQW 36201/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am personally very aware of the concern that farm related crime causes the farming community, although the responsibility for combating rural crime falls primarily to the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the PSNI. However, my Department works closely with DOJ, PSNI and farming organisations on a number of joint initiatives which aim to raise awareness of actions that farmers can take to reduce incidences of rural crime. These initiatives include Farm Watch, the Freeze-branding initiative and the Crimestoppers Campaign.

In addition, the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) has facilities available which can be used by the PSNI for workshops, seminars and meetings aimed at raising awareness of crime prevention measures among the farming community. Students on CAFRE programmes also learn about appropriate responses to rural crime through input from visiting speakers, information leaflets and participation of the College Farms in PSNI-led programmes such as Farm Watch.

I have also ensured that all of the DARD Direct offices currently stock Rural Crime Leaflets at the front desk where members of the public can access necessary information in relation to this issue.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions her Department is considering on the ownership and traceability of horses, in light of the horsemeat scandal in 2013.

(AQW 36211/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In response to the horse meat fraud in 2013, the EU Commission wrote to Member States with its 5 Point Action Plan, which contains a number of measures in relation to food fraud, country of origin labelling and actions in respect of horse passports.

On 11 September 2014 Member States agreed Commission proposals to strengthen the horse passport system including the mandatory recording of horse passports in a central national database. The new EU regulations will apply from the 1 January 2016 with the centralised database to be in place by 1 July 2016.

DARD officials are continuing to work with counterparts in Defra, Scotland and Wales with a view to improving the quality of horse passports including new Minimum Operating Standards for Passport Issuing Organisations (PIOs) which were issued in February 2014.

DARD officials are also working with counterparts in Dublin on the sharing of information on equines here and in the south.

Given the all-island nature of the equine industry it is important that we co-operate on the arrangements we put in place to strengthen the horse passport system and help to prevent food fraud throughout the island.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what further steps the Farm Safety Partnership will take to reduce farm deaths and accidents.

(AQW 36288/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As you are aware the Farm Safety Partnership, which comprises of representatives from the Health and Safety Executive for NI, DARD, Ulster Farmers Union, NFU Mutual, Young farmers Clubs of Ulster and NIAPA, has been working since May 2012 to address the very serious issue of safety on our farms. In April this year the Partnership launched its second action plan covering the period from April 2014 to March 2017.

The aim of this action plan is to influence future behaviour so that farmers, their families, and their employees are capable, motivated, and able to work safely to reduce accidents on farms. A number of interventions are contained in the action plan to achieve this aim. The interventions will cover the four areas of Information and Promotion of SAFE Working, Training and Education, Motivating Good Behaviour and Discouraging Poor Practice, and Support and Assistance.

The first Action plan was successful and other jurisdictions have shown interest in the good work of the north's Farm safety Partnership. I was pleased to hear that this good work has seen a reduction in the number of deaths on our farms (a 67% drop in 2013/14 when compared to 2012/13) but we still need the Partnership's work to continue and I am sure the Partnership's second action plan will work hard to tackle this key issue.

The partnership has also developed a programme of events to highlight issues. An example of this is the recent PTO safety campaign and this is being followed up w/c 29 September with HSENI inspectors carrying out enforcement visits to a number of farms.

My Department as a Partner in the Farm Safety partner has been working on integrating farm safety as part of the Business Investment Scheme and I recently launched the FarmSafeNet online tool. To date there has been over 323 businesses that have successfully completed FarmSafeNet.

The partnership is also continuing its very successful Think Safe campaign.

Over the three years the Partnership will carry out the actions in its action plan to continue to make our farms safer.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department is communicating with farmers on single farm payment issues; and to provide the general letters on this issue that have been sent to farmers.

(AQW 36289/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department issues a range of letters to farm businesses on Single Farm Payment matters throughout a scheme year. These letters contain specific business information but are issued to all farm businesses. A copy of these letters is enclosed and has also been placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the progress of the Farm Safety Action Plan.

(AQW 36290/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Farm Safety Partnership has launched its second Action Plan on 7 April 2014. This Action Plan will cover the years 2014 to 2017.

The aim of this action plan is to influence future behaviour so that farmers, their families, and their employees are capable, motivated, and able to work safely to reduce accidents on farms. A number of interventions are contained in the action plan to achieve this aim. The interventions will cover the four areas of Information and Promotion of SAFE Working, Training and Education, Motivating Good Behaviour and Discouraging Poor Practice, and Support and Assistance.

A number of actions have been taken since the launch of this action plan and include:

- The continuation of the Partnership's Think Safe campaign,
- Securing a BBC TV package towards the end of August to promote farm safety over a number of days,
- Continuing with the very successful Farm Safe Awareness programme,
- The launch of the FarmSafeNet online tool and to date over 323 businesses have completed FarmSafeNet,
- Considered the potential to deliver Farm Safety Training via a number of mediums (recommendation will be brought to the Partnership in due course),
- Development of a Make It safer tool to aid farmers to consider the dangers on farms and take appropriate action,
- Integrating Farm Safety into the Business Investment Scheme of the new RDP,
- CAFRE continued provision of farm safety instruction to students as part of its courses and the tractor driving courses for 13 to 15 year olds,
- Continue the Rural Schools programme which provides presentations to children on farm safety (in 2013/14 over 12,000 children in 93 schools received a farm safety presentation).

- The partnership is in the process of identifying Farm Safety Champions who will be deployed to provide a network of people to facilitate the farm safety message throughout the north of Ireland,
- HSENI continue with their Advisory inspections,
- Work continues on the development of an Affiliate Scheme,
- The partnership developed a programme of work which includes items such as the Child Safe Calendar competition, PTO Advisory week, Animal Handling spotlight week, development of Visual Safety Guides.

The Partnership continues to work through its action plan and will continue to work towards making our farms safer.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action is being taken to research and develop detection equipment to warn farmers of toxic fumes during slurry handling operations.

(AQW 36294/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As Part of its second Action Plan, launched in April 2014, the Farm Safety Partnership, which comprises representatives from Health and Safety Executive for NI, DARD, Ulster Farmers Union, NFU Mutual, Young farmers Clubs of Ulster and NIAPA, is in the process of setting up a Slurry Working Group. The remit of this group is to review slurry handling operations with a view to making working with slurry safer. This will include considering potential detection and warning systems for farmers when handling slurry.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what remit her Department has in relation to checking the identification tags of cattle presented to a market for sale.

(AQW 36308/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The responsibility for checking cattle identities at markets lies with the market operator. Cattle should be correctly identified with two yellow plastic matching ear tags before being moved to a market. If an ear tag is lost in transit to the market, the market operator can obtain a matching replacement tag. Cattle cannot be sold with only one ear tag.

The market operator should check the description and ear tag numbers of the animals presented in the market against the information recorded on the movement document that accompanied the animals to the market. The details of the movement of the animals to the market are uploaded by the market operator to the Department's database, the Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS). APHIS carries out several validity checks, including checks that the ear tag number exists on the database, the ear tag number is recorded in the herd of the seller and the animal is not under any movement restriction.

DARD staff are not routinely present in markets, however, members of Veterinary Service Enforcement Branch (VSEB) conduct regular, risk-based/targeted, unannounced inspections of markets assessing compliance with animal identification along with other statutory requirements, e.g. welfare and bio-security. Where there is evidence of non-compliance at a market appropriate enforcement action is taken, including the prosecution of the market operator where this is appropriate.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what agri-environment schemes are currently operational; and whether they will be maintained within the new Rural Development Programme for 2014-2020.

(AQW 36372/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Currently there are six agri-environment schemes in operation, namely; the Habitat Improvement Scheme (HIS); the Countryside Access Scheme (CAS); The Environmentally Sensitive Areas Scheme (ESA); the Countryside Management Scheme (CMS), the NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) and the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS).

It is intended that approximately £60m of the Rural Development Programme 2014-2020 budget will be used to fund existing agri-environment agreements, therefore helping to ensure that environmental benefits associated with ongoing agri-environment schemes can continue to be delivered.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many agri-environment scheme participants are there currently in East Londonderry.

Mrs O'Neill: On 01 September 2014 there were 828 agri-environment scheme participants in East Londonderry.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has to ensure the appropriate Animal and Public Health Information System software changes are made within six months, to assist marts to show residencies of cattle.

(AQW 36400/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has prioritised this APHIS enhancement to add the residency count to the market download. The original target delivery date was December 2014. My officials have worked hard to bring this about quickly, while ensuring that system performance is not compromised. I am pleased that we have already made significant progress in developing this enhancement. It is therefore likely that we can have this change delivered before the December target date.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on her Department's plans to refresh the Think Safe Campaign.

(AQW 36401/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As you will be aware the Think Safe Campaign has been running since 2013 and indications are it has been very successful.

The Health and Safety Executive manage this campaign on behalf of the Farm Safety Partnership.

The Campaign is a key feature of the Partnership's second action plan covering the years 2014 to 2017 and will continue subject to budget limitations.

HSENI have produced two new radio adverts and is considering the possibility of a new TV advert within the scope of Farm Safety Partnership's second action plan.

My Department co-financed the campaign in 2013/14 and this year and will continue to do so subject to budget constraints.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the level of funding available for farm diversification projects in 2014/15.

(AQW 36427/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There will be no further calls for funding under the current Rural Development Programme 2007-13 as all funds are fully committed and the Department is moving towards closure.

However our proposals for the new Rural Development Programme 2014-2020 include a Rural Business Support Scheme, which will make funding available for applications from rural businesses including farm diversification, micro and small business development and small tourism projects.

My Department is currently working to finalise the new Rural Development Programme 2014-2020 with the aim of submitting it formally to the European Commission for consideration in October 2014. The Rural Business Support scheme will be delivered on the ground by new Local Action Groups and it is hoped that animation for applications can start in April/May 2015. The date for the opening of any calls will depend on the programme being signed off by the European Commission and on getting the necessary business case approval.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the days on which the Union Flag is flown from buildings within her Department's remit; and whether she has issued any instructions to staff on the flying of the Union Flag on any buildings within her Department's remit.

(AQW 36453/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DARD policy in relation to the flying of the Union flag is to comply with the provisions of the Flags Regulations (NI) 2000, as amended by the Flags Regulations (NI) Amendment 2002. In accordance with these Regulations the Union Flag is flown on the designated days outlined below.

On the Above Days Flags Should Fly from 8am Until Sunset.

Officials within my Department are responsible for issuing instructions to the relevant staff on the flying of the Union flag.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to the level 2 agricultural qualification at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise for the Young Farmer Scheme, how many applicants made payment by the deadline of 24 September 2014; and whether flexibility will be afforded to those who make payment after this date.

Mrs O'Neill: CAFRE received payment from 2327 applicants by 24 September 2014.

Further to this, CAFRE sent a letter to those applicants who did not confirm their application and make a payment by 24 September. This communication confirms their withdrawal from the application process. However, if for any reason applicants wish to continue they should contact CAFRE by 4.00pm on Tuesday 30 September 2014 and make their payment.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of applications received for the level 2 agricultural qualification at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise for the Young Farmer Scheme.
(AQW 36455/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department received 3,495 applications to the Level II Agriculture Qualification during the application period in August 2014. The qualification is one of the eligibility criteria required for the Young Farmers' Scheme and the young farmer and new entrant categories of the Regional Reserve.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the current size of the fishing fleet.
(AQW 36470/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: On the 1st January 2014, there were 136 over ten metre vessels and 218 ten metre and under vessels giving a total fleet of 354 licensed vessels. Full statistics on the fishing fleet can be found at <https://www.gov.uk/government/statistical-data-sets/uk-sea-fisheries-annual-statistics-report-2013>

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the current grants available to farmers.
(AQW 36471/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The following table lists Departmental grants providing funding to farmers with the exclusion of subsidy schemes. The majority of these grants are now closed to applications, but the table includes relevant dates where grants are currently open. The NI Rural Development Programme 2014-2020 will provide a range of new grants and opportunities for farmers but is not yet open to applications.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the current grants available to the fishing industry. (AQW 36472/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The European Fisheries Fund (EFF) provides grant funding to assist the fishing industry and is currently open for applications. However, all applications must be made by the 31st December 2014 and spending completed on most projects by the end of September 2015. This is to facilitate the closure of the EFF programme on the 31st December 2015.

Work is well under way to implement the European Maritime and Fisheries Fund (EMFF) as a successor to the EFF. The EMFF scheme is currently scheduled to open for applications in the spring of 2015. Our regional share of the EMFF will allow some €29.1 million to be committed to support the fishing industry in the five years to 2020.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, following the decision by a farming union group to organise a conference on rural crime in November 2014, what additional steps are being taken by her Department to highlight and deal with the problem. (AQW 36665/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Responsibility for tackling rural crime lies primarily with the PSNI, however my Department, through its Veterinary Service Enforcement Branch (VSEB) works with the PSNI in tackling rural crime at an operational level through the sharing of intelligence, the exchange of training and the conducting of joint operations and investigations.

In particular VSEB uses its enforcement powers to carry out unannounced inspections of farm animals and premises suspected of involvement in rural crime. More serious criminality is referred to the police and DARD officials assist the police through the provision of expertise.

VSEB staff have been working closely with the PSNI, An Garda Síochána, and colleagues in the south's Department of Agriculture Food and the Marine and other Agencies (e.g. Local Councils, Food Standards Agency) in a number of investigations into livestock theft and livestock substitution.

DARD also continues to work with the Department of Justice, the PSNI and representatives of the farming community on a number of joint initiatives aimed at reducing rural crime and raising awareness of action that can be taken to help prevent rural crime, including Farm Watch, the Freeze-branding initiative and the Crimestoppers Campaign.

The UFU organised Rural Crime Conference is a good opportunity for my Department to engage with other stakeholders and encourage best practice and co-operation across the board.

I have met with the Chief Constable and the Minister of Justice on a number of occasions to highlight my concerns regarding rural crime and the impact it has on the farming community. Reducing levels of rural crime is a key priority of mine and my Department will continue to work closely with the Department of Justice, the PSNI and other partners in seeking to raise awareness and to reduce levels of rural crime, including farm related crime.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action is being taken, in addition to seminars, to educate Basic Payment Scheme applicants about new greening requirements.

(AQO 6734/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Over the past two months, DARD has issued a series of Press Articles providing an introduction to greening requirements and more detailed information on Crop Diversification and Ecological Focus Areas.

There are plans to issue a greening bulletin on the DARD website in the autumn. This will bring the DARD advice available on this subject into a single publication.

A series of seminars on Greening was undertaken during week commencing 15 September to advise farmers about what will they will be required to do to comply with the new 'greening' requirements.

Farmers need to be aware of the classification of fields they farm to understand what obligations they have to comply with greening requirements. Over the coming weeks, DARD will provide an online facility for farmers to check whether the fields they farm are classified as Permanent Grass, Arable or Permanent Crops. For farmers who are not able to access the DARD website, this information can be accessed through their local DARD Direct office.

Later this year, we will write to farmers who are most likely to have crop diversification or ecological focus area requirements to advise them of how the greening rules might affect their business and what they will need to do to meet them.

The Farm Advisory System (FAS) will assist farmers who wish to discuss how greening affects their farm business and identify what steps they need to take to comply with the new greening requirements. Farmers can access this service by contacting their local DARD Direct Office where they can speak to a CAFRE Crops Development Adviser.

There are a number of areas in relation to greening around which further clarification is being sought from the European Commission. It is anticipated that this clarification will be received over the coming weeks and months.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why the move of her departmental headquarters to Ballykelly has not received a full cost-benefit analysis by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

(AQO 6730/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I can advise the Member that a very significant amount of analysis has been completed by my Department in determining the location and costs to develop the new Headquarters building in Ballykelly. The costs of the project, as identified in the business case, were shared with Ministers, including the Finance Minister.

On 26 June the Executive agreed to progress with the project and to provide the necessary funding based on the analysis provided. The costs will continue to be scrutinised as we move through the various stages of the project. I can further advise the Member that there are robust governance arrangements in place to ensure that costs are contained to the minimum necessary to deliver the project.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the definition of an active farmer.

(AQO 6732/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Delegated Act implementing the CAP Reform agreement contains a provision that in 2015, entitlements to be issued under the new support regime must be allocated to the person enjoying the decision making power, the benefits and the financial risks in relation to agricultural activity being carried out on the land for which an allocation is requested.

This provision has particular relevance in the north of Ireland for land let under conacre arrangements. In general terms, it means that in 2015, when all existing SFP entitlements are abolished and new entitlements established, then landowners renting out land in conacre will not be able to establish entitlements on that land. The principle being that where land is let, then the farmer actively farming the land will be the one claiming direct payments on that land.

My Department is reviewing the information it holds for all farm businesses which submitted a Single Application Form in 2014 and will be writing to all businesses which the review suggests may not meet the active farmer conditions outlined to be allocated entitlements in 2015 proposing that a claim form will not be automatically issued to them next year. If the circumstances of those businesses have changed, they will be given the opportunity to advise us of the change and request an application form in 2015.

If we receive an application form next year from a claimant where our records show there is no evidence of agricultural activity e.g. a cross check with APHIS shows they have no herd or flock, my officials will investigate that business and where it is found that someone has not met the scheme requirements or artificially created conditions in an attempt to meet the criteria, they will be excluded from benefitting from this support and may also face penalties.

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the Rural Development Programme 2014-2020.

(AQO 6733/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The RDP Stakeholder Consultation Group considered the near final draft of the Programme at their last meeting on 24 September. My officials are working to finalise the draft programme with formal submission to the EU Commission expected in October. Formal approval by the EU Commission will depend on the nature and extent of the comments on the draft programme. My officials are working to obtaining an EU Commission decision by April 2015.

In conjunction with seeking EU approval on the overall funding package, my officials are working to design the detail of the schemes. The date for the opening of any calls will depend on the programme being approved by the European Commission and on getting the necessary business case approval.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the Rivers Agency's role in the South Belfast Flood Alleviation Schemes.

(AQO 6735/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: River Agency is working in partnership with NI Water on an integrated project to address flooding issues in the Sicily Park and Greystown areas of South Belfast. The proposed scheme involves upgrading existing infrastructure and a business case is currently being prepared to establish the most cost effective options.

Rivers Agency is also proposing to take on responsibility for three privately maintained urban drains in the area, so that they can be upgraded and maintained at public expense. Subject to approval by the Drainage Council in October 2014, the upgrading works will follow over the next twelve months.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the measures taken by her Department to achieve the 'Sport Matters' commitment to increase sports participation amongst women, older people and people with disabilities.

(AQW 36165/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Progress against the targets set out in the Sport Matters Strategy is monitored by the Sports Matters Monitoring Group (SMMG), which I chair. Following the SMMG meeting in November 2013, the Group agreed to the publication of the annual 'Sport Matters Implementation Group Progress Report' for the period October 2012 to September 2013.

This report details activities and progress against all the targets within the Sport Matters Strategy, including those to increase sports participation amongst women, older people and people with disabilities. Currently, the targets to increase participation amongst adults, women and older people are deemed to be on track. The target to increase participation amongst people with disabilities is deemed to be on track, but with some delay.

Examples of activities to address these targets include Sport NI's Active Communities Programme, Active Clubs Programme, Disability Sport NI's Disability 5 Star Challenge and ongoing investment in sporting facilities which are accessible by all members of local communities. The report is available on the DCAL website through the following link: www.dcalni.gov.uk/sport\_matters\_progress\_report\_2012-2013.pdf

The next annual progress report will be considered by the SMMG at its meeting in December 2014 and will be made publically available at that time.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the measures taken by her Department to achieve the 'Sport Matters' commitment to ensure that 90 per cent of the population are within twenty minutes of quality accredited, multi sports facilities.

(AQW 36167/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport Matters aims to achieve 90% of the population in the north accessing quality accredited, multi-sport facilities by 2019. In 2013, a review indicated a level of 73% assessed against a baseline of 65% in 2007.

My Department, through Sport NI is delivering significant investments to assist with achieving the target including a Community Capital Programme investment of £10,427,075 in over 46 capital projects. They aim to invest a further £17.5m of Lottery funding over a five year period.

Sport NI's Report, 'Bridging the Gap' encouraged the strategic development of sports facilities and bodies including District Councils and Universities, have used this to prioritise investment. SportNI also developed Active Places NI, a comprehensive database of sports facilities. They are currently working in partnership with Councils to deliver a Sports Facilities Strategy and 11 District Council Area Reports. The Strategy and Reports will provide a framework for the strategic delivery of sports facilities throughout the north.

Sport NI and the Department of Education have recently worked in partnership to publish the guidance toolkit Your School/Your Club to encourage the creation of multi-sport hubs within the school estate for use outside of school hours.

In developing the quality of facilities, Sport NI has invested significant financial and other resources into the development of a number of quality accreditation schemes.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when her Department last reviewed whether it needed all of the information it requests for grant applications and performance reviews in the Arts; and what steps her Department is taking to reduce the overhead costs of these processes.

(AQW 36177/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department's funding for the Arts is mainly administered by the Arts Council. The Arts Council reviews the requirements of its grant programmes prior to the opening of each funding round.

The Arts Council (in consultation with the arts sector) has recently reviewed the monitoring requirements for its largest programme, the Annual Funding Programme. As a result, it has reduced the requirement for two monitoring returns a year to a single annual return.

The Arts Council has also been liaising with Belfast City Council with a view to reducing the reporting requirements on organisations which are in receipt of annual funding from both bodies.

A Civil Service wide project is ongoing to reduce bureaucracy in grant funding.

A final draft "Code of Practice" for grant funding has been developed for use by the Departments. The Code consists of principles and best practices which should be applied in grant funding the voluntary and community sector.

This "Code of Practice" is due to issue to departments for comment. When agreed the "Code of Practice" will be applied by all departments.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding is available to assist cricket clubs with the installation of walls to protect residential areas; and whether any such funding has been awarded in the last five years.

(AQW 36194/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, is responsible for the distribution of funding to sport in the north of Ireland.

Sport NI is currently considering a £17.5m Lottery investment that will seek to integrate the facility needs of community participants and performance athletes (where practicable) within the same multi-sport environment. This investment opportunity will take a strategic approach to identifying key sports and partners that have the potential to realise community benefits, produce high performance results and own/operate large scale sustainable facilities.

Subject to the outcomes of this work, a range of partners, including some cricket venues, may be in a position to avail of some of the funding.

In the last five financial years, Sport NI has provided funding to Cricket clubs for the provision of perimeter fencing as detailed below:

Year	Organisation Name	Project Title	Fund	Grant Amount
2013-14	Woodvale Cricket and Tennis Club	Perimeter Fencing	Exchequer	£48,498
2013-14	North Down Cricket Club	Supply and installation of ball stop fencing to a 140m length of boundary.	Exchequer	£30,000

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding her Department, or any of its arm's-length bodies, provided to the Ardoyne community festival held in August 2014.

(AQW 36205/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Neither my Department nor its Arm's Length Bodies provided funding for the Ardoyne Fleadh in August 2014, although I do not preclude funding being made available to the fleadh in the foreseeable future.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 35410/11-15, to detail the value of the support received by each of the clubs.

(AQW 36267/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Under the Boxing Investment Programme, the Irish Amateur Boxing Association received almost £170,000 for the supply of equipment to Boxing Clubs which are affiliated to the IABA.

The value of support received by each of the clubs is detailed at Annex A. Boxing clubs deemed to be within the Greater Belfast area are marked with an asterisk within the table for your information.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the steps her Department is taking to address sports participation rates in the top 30 per cent most deprived areas, where rates are significantly lower than the national average.

(AQW 36368/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL secured funding of £4.5m within the current CSR period towards a programme for promoting equality, tackling poverty and social exclusion through sport. This funding was distributed equally between Ulster Council GAA, Ulster Branch Irish Rugby Football Union and Irish Football Association over a three year period and up until 31st March 2015. Programmes and projects are being implemented by these sports and include opportunities across the north of Ireland, including in the top 30% most deprived areas.

Sport NI also delivers a range of programmes and projects with this focus. These include: -

1. Active Communities

Active Communities is a Sport NI National Lottery Funded initiative that provides opportunities for participation in sport and physical recreation in communities throughout the north of Ireland, and especially among underrepresented groups. The initiative is delivered in partnership with local District Councils across the north of Ireland.

In 2013/14, a total of 109,129 people participated in Active Communities a total of 1.04 million times. 34,267 (31.4%) of those participants came from the 0-30% most disadvantaged communities in the north as follows:

Most Disadvantaged %	National Population %	Participants %	Participants
0 – 10	9.1%	12.1%	13,205
10 – 20	9.8%	10%	10,913
20 - 30	9.9%	9.3%	10,149
Total	28.8%	31.4%	34,267

In addition, Sport NI is undertaking the following:

- Investment in and deployment of 117 Active Communities coaches;
- Embedding targets for engagement in and benefits for sports clubs in areas of greatest need through the Active Clubs programme;
- Prioritising applications from areas of greatest need through the Active Awards for Sport programme;
- Engagement with schools in, or serving, areas of high social need through Activ8 initiatives;
- Through the Midnight Street Soccer programme, Sport NI has invested £329,600 in football programmes serving targeted areas of greatest need; and
- Sport NI is working with strategic partner organisations such as Outdoor Recreation NI and Disability Sport NI to support improved engagement in areas of high social need through outdoor (adventure) activities and for people with a disability.

2. Boxing Investment Programme

The Boxing Investment Programme specifically targets boxing clubs that could have a positive impact on participant rates in Super Output Areas and Neighbourhood Renewal areas. This was accomplished by prioritising projects to boxing clubs based in or near these areas.

3. Tollymore National Outdoor Centre

Sport NI's national outdoor centre at Tollymore is also developing interventions for increasing participation opportunities for people, especially among underrepresented groups, and includes the following measures in relation to the most deprived areas:

- Providing 'outreach' programmes for those who live in areas of greatest need;
- Developing partnerships with a range of organisations, to provide hill walking, canoe-sport and mountain biking opportunities in areas such as the Belfast Hills and the Lagan Corridor;
- Developing a network within community youth workers to ensure opportunities for training are maximised;
- Provision of a wide range of open days and introductory skills courses and sessions. A number of these courses will be provided off site to provide groups from areas of greatest need with the opportunity to participate in adventure sports;
- Developing, piloting and rolling out low cost leadership training in a number of off-site locations;
- Establishing a support structure for those who work in adventure sports in areas of greatest need, which will provide CPD opportunities; and
- 20 bursaries to be provided for leaders who work with groups in areas of greatest need.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what communication her Department is having with the relevant stakeholders to address the delay in the development of the Dungiven Sports Complex as a City of Culture Capital Legacy Project. (AQW 36449/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Limavady Borough Council is responsible for developing plans for a £7 million sports and community facility in the Dungiven area. My officials and I have met with the Council a number of times in this regard.

I understand that the project is still at the initial stages of development and planning. A draft business case for a phased element of the project was received by my Department and Sport NI is currently working with Limavady Borough Council to produce a final draft of the business case.

My Department is still committed to seeking to provide the £2.5 million funding sought by Limavady Borough Council towards the development of the project. Provision of this funding will be subject to budget availability and the approval of a business case, which will include confirmation of necessary partnership funding for the project.

I will be meeting Liam Flanigan again, Chief Executive, Limavady Council to discuss the way forward for the Dungiven sports and community facilities project.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what responsibility her Department has for ensuring that funding allocated for City of Culture Capital Legacy Projects in the North West is appropriately distributed and used. (AQW 36450/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I secured over £2m for the January to March 2014 period to support continuation of key projects from the City of Culture's cultural programme and to prevent the loss of key benefits, partnerships and momentum after December 2013. This included strategic investment for sports facility development and other capital projects.

To ensure that additional funding for the North West is appropriately distributed and used, I have established a North West Office. Officials work on the ground, directly with communities and organisations in the North West to provide support. A North West team of three officials is in place with the Branch Head currently based in Derry in Orchard House.

My officials work closely with Sport NI and other relevant stakeholders to ensure sports capital projects in the North West are delivered.

Additional capital funding to support a sporting and cultural infrastructure programme across the North West will be subject to sufficient funding being made available through the October monitoring round.

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she will host a civic reception in Parliament Buildings to honour the Down Ladies Football team after they won the All-Ireland Intermediate Final at Croke Park. (AQW 36659/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It was an incredible achievement for the Down Ladies Football team to win the All-Ireland Intermediate Football title and I have previously publicly congratulated the team on their success.

I intend to host a reception in Parliament Buildings on Tuesday 7 October 2014 for all Ulster GAA team successes during 2013/14, including the Down Ladies Football Team, to celebrate their remarkable achievements.

Department of Education

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education, given that he recently noted that selection should be seen not only as an educational issue but also a social action issue, for his assessment of whether the segregation of children and young people in the education system is as a social action issue as well as an educational issue.

(AQW 35806/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Our education system is founded on the principle of parental choice, and has a rich diversity of school types within it.

My school improvement policy, 'Every School A Good School', and my Department's commitments in the Executive's Programme for Government, take into account the impact of wider social issues in helping or hindering progress.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education how many (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools in East Londonderry currently require (a) major capital repair works; and (ii) completely new school buildings.

(AQW 36056/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Prior to my major capital investment announcement of 24 June 2014, my Department considered proposals submitted by Education & Library Boards and other school authorities on potential new build projects for schools in their areas that required major capital works. Nine schools were submitted for consideration by the Western Education & Library Board as follows:

- (i) Primary Schools (PS)
  - Ballykelly PS
  - Roe Valley Integrated PS
  - Millstrand Integrated PS
  - Listress PS
- (ii) Post Primary Schools
  - St Paul's College
  - North Coast Integrated College
  - Coleraine Academical Institution
  - Loreto College
  - Dominican College

When the approved protocol for selection of 2014 new builds was applied in June, Roe Valley IPS was announced to be advanced in planning for a new school build.

The remaining schools put forward were not included in my announcement at that time due to area planning/sustainability issues and/or budget constraints.

Subsequent to my June announcement, on 18 August 2014 I approved the amalgamation of Listress PS, Craigback PS and Mullaghbuoy PS and a new build will proceed in due course.

Regarding other major works I can confirm that Coleraine Academical Institution has been approved under the School Enhancement Programme for partial refurbishment consisting of rewiring, refurbishment of heating distribution, Mechanical and Electrical Services and a building fabric upgrade.

The selection of new major works has, in the main, been on the basis of effecting rationalisation; supporting unmet need; addressing serious accommodation inadequacies and schools operating on split sites, substandard conditions or overcrowding; or addressing undue reliance on temporary accommodation.

The reality is that the budget settlement for Education means the need for investment far exceeds the funds available to me and many schools in need of investment are competing for limited capital funding.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the money allocated as a result of the joint health and education project part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies targeting early intervention.

(AQW 36224/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Early Intervention Transformation Programme (EITP) is part of the Delivering Social Change /Atlantic Philanthropies Signature Programme, aimed at improving outcomes for children and young people through embedding early intervention approaches. The EITP programme has total investment of £30m over four years. The programme consists of three projects, Early Intervention Transformation, Dementia and Shared Education. DHSSPS lead the development of the Early Intervention Transformation project in partnership with the other funders.

The EITP seeks to transform how mainstream services are delivered to children to deliver a long term legacy of improvement. There are three EITP work streams, which are focused on families and children with differing levels of need.

Work Stream One in which DE is involved, aims to improve outcomes for children by supporting parents to understand and fulfil the critical role they play in their children's development in the early years. This work stream is focused on improving outcomes relating to universal early years provision through changing practice in midwifery, health visiting and funded pre-school early years settings. There are three components of Work Stream One, as detailed below:

Getting Ready for Baby – focused on transforming maternal care, both hospital and community based, from the initial GP appointment to delivery;

Getting Ready for Toddler – focused on embedding early intervention in core health visiting, with a focus on improving the social and emotional development of children prior to attending pre-school nursery; and Getting Ready to Learn – focused on improving outcomes for children in pre-school by engaging and empowering parents to build strong home learning environments.

Detailed proposals will be developed in collaboration with key stakeholders across health and early years education. Proposed timescales aim to introduce the programme in 2015.

The level of investment for the Getting Ready to Learn component, which DE is leading, is likely to be approx £3.25m (£1.25m/£1m/£1m) over 2015-18.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the proposed timescales for the joint health and education project on early intervention that will be part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies.

(AQW 36226/11-15)

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the proposed funding in 2015/16 for occupational studies courses.

(AQW 36246/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Occupational Studies (OS) is counted as an applied course under the Entitlement Framework and is typically taken by learners at Key Stage 4. It provides young people with opportunities to sample work-related learning within occupational contexts and to develop their skills in literacy, numeracy and ICT.

In line with the principles of breadth and balance within the Entitlement Framework OS provides a different learning opportunity that may suit some of our young people better. In terms of the employability prospects for vulnerable young people or indeed any young person, OS allows them an opportunity to test out an area before embarking on further training or pursuing employment in that area.

Schools are funded through the Local Management of Schools arrangements to meet their statutory duties, including delivering the curriculum and providing appropriate access to courses for their pupils. Therefore it is a matter for schools to manage their budget and ensure their curricular provision meets the needs of their pupils— the Department does not provide specific funding for specific courses. Under the Entitlement Framework the Department has provided additional support while schools expand their curricular offer to meet their statutory requirements. This additional funding provides a contribution to courses delivered on a collaborative basis. Based on the Entitlement Framework Audit which schools complete each year, over the years 2011/12 – 2013/14 schools have received in the region of 3m/ 3.3m/ 2m towards the cost of OS courses delivered on a collaborative basis.

Also based on the Audit, the available pupil level information may include some double counting as it does not identify where a pupil is undertaking more than one OS course. In 2011/12 there were 11,121 pupils across the range of OS courses; in 2012/13 there were 12,280 pupils; and, in 2013/14 there were 12,426 pupils.

My Department has asked CCEA to ensure that guidance for teachers clearly maps the OS specifications to the statutory cross-curricular and other skills at Key Stage 4, to support teachers in considering the appropriateness of OS for their pupils and to make clear where this course supports literacy and numeracy development in particular. My Department also agreed to the recommendation that the grading of OS courses be changed from “pass” to “distinction/ merit/ pass” from the 2013/14 school year. This is to better recognise the achievements of our young people, who are at the centre of all my work.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the impact of occupational studies courses in improving employability among vulnerable young people.

(AQW 36247/11-15)

Mr O’Dowd: Occupational Studies (OS) is counted as an applied course under the Entitlement Framework and is typically taken by learners at Key Stage 4. Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education how many children diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder have received funded education outside of Northern Ireland, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36270/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have advised that the number of children diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder who have received funded education outside of the north of Ireland, in each of the last five academic years, is as follows:

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education, in relation to the Middletown Centre for Autism, to detail (i) how many children with autism spectrum disorder have been referred the centre, broken down by Education and Library Board; and (ii) how many children from the Republic of Ireland have benefited from the centre, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36272/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Chief Executive of the Middletown Centre for Autism (MCA) has advised that the number of children who have been referred to MCA in the north of Ireland, broken down by Education and Library Board, is as follows:

	BELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	WELB
1 September 2009 – 31 August 2010	1	0	0	1	0
1 September 2010 – 31 August 2011	1	1	1	1	1
1 September 2011 – 31 August 2012	1	1	1	1	1
1 September 2012 – 31 August 2013	2	1	1	1	1
1 September 2013 – 31 August 2014	7	6	6	6	6

The Middletown Centre for Autism also provides a range of support and intervention to professionals, parents and children with autism. Parents can avail of a range of training courses provided free of charge by the Centre and can access a broad range of online learning resources, including training video materials.

The Centre is also currently expanding its programme of direct support and intervention to children with complex autism who are referred to it by the ELBs.

In the south of Ireland referrals to the Learning Support and Assessment Service in MCA only commenced this year and the number of children who were referred was six. Prior to this the Department of Education and Skills had prioritised the provision of training and support for the parents of children and young people with autism.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how much funding has been made available by his Department to deal with the transport needs of children from North Belfast attending Coláiste Feirste, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36274/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Belfast Education and Library Board has advised me that pupils from North Belfast attending Coláiste Feirste who are eligible for assistance with transport under the Home to School Transport Policy have been provided with the following funding in respect of sessional tickets (bus passes) in the last three school years. No funding was provided for taxis or buses.

Year	Cost
2012/13	£14,250

In addition, my Department has a statutory duty to encourage and facilitate Irish medium education and, reflecting this duty, recently agreed to provide a grant under Article 89(2) of the Education (NI) Order 1998 to Coláiste Feirste. The grant is to be used for the purpose of removing barriers for some pupils attending the school, primarily those for whom public transport or other transport services are not readily accessible. The grant will be available for 3 years to give the Board of Governors of Coláiste Feirste time and space to actively engage with Translink and other transport providers to establish a long term solution to the transport needs of pupils attending the school, with a view to the grant no longer being required.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of specific grants which have been made by his Department to individual schools to deal with the transport needs of pupils, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36275/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under existing Home to School Transport Policy, assistance with transport is generally only provided by Boards to eligible pupils either in the form of a seat on a bus / taxi or a monetary allowance.

However, my Department has a statutory duty to encourage and facilitate Irish medium education and, reflecting this duty, recently agreed to provide a grant under Article 89(2) of the Education (NI) Order 1998 to Coláiste Feirste. The grant is to be used for the purpose of removing barriers for some pupils attending the school, primarily those for whom public transport or other transport services are not readily accessible. Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of teacher redundancies, broken down by (a) sector; and (b) Education and Library Board, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36276/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of teacher redundancies over each of the last three academic years is detailed in the tables below. Please note the figures for CCMS have been broken down by Education and Library Board area and incorporated into the overall figures below.

The symbol # indicates that due to the small numbers involved a high level of suppression would be required to prevent the identification of an individual. This guidance is in accordance with the confidentiality principle of the Statistics Authority's Code of Practice on Official Statistics.

Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated Schools are not included in this request.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how his Department will support the establishment of a Greater Shankill Children and Young People zone; and to detail what progress has been made identifying a budget to implement the framework for the action zone over the next five years.

(AQW 36295/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am encouraged by the commitment shown by the community leaders and the Greater Shankill Community Convention in declaring a Zone that aims to improve the life chances of children and young people in the area, and by the recognition that the community itself has a particular and significant role to play.

I have already given a commitment to support the work of the Convention and I have responded positively to a request to nominate a senior DE official to engage with the Steering Group on the next steps in taking forward the work to improve outcomes for the children and young people of the area. That engagement is well underway. This is in addition to the work that the Department and the Belfast Education & Library Board is already undertaking in the area.

The focus that the Convention is adopting in its engagement with government departments is on how we make best use of the very considerable resources already provided for programmes and projects that operate within the Greater Shankill area. Recognising that improving children's educational achievements and life chances requires a partnership approach, the focus of the Ministers who have endorsed the Zone is on how we work together to plan and implement our various programmes in a joined up manner so that they deliver the most effective impact for children and young people in the Greater Shankill.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail for each of the last three years (i) the requests made by individual schools for an increase in their admission and enrolment numbers; and (ii) the outcome in each case.

(AQW 36331/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my responses to AQW 15270/11-15 and AQW 30500/11-15, I explained that prior to the middle of the 2012/13 school year, the Department of Education did not electronically record statistics on the numbers of schools requesting temporary increases to their admission and enrolment numbers and, of these, which requests were approved. This means that some of the data requested is unavailable and could only be extracted by a manual exercise at disproportionate cost.

The years for which this data is available are the 2013/14 and 2014/15 (to date) school years and the figures, as close as possible to the format you have requested, are as follows:

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the number of children educated outside of a school environment.

(AQW 36334/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The best place for children and young people to be educated is in school. It is recognised, however, that for some young people a school placement cannot be sustained and education outside the school environment may be necessary to meet their educational and other needs.

This is known as 'Education Otherwise Than At School' (EOTAS) and legal responsibility for this rests with the Education and Library Board (ELB) in which the young person resides. EOTAS encompasses a broad range of ELB funded interventions, allowing for a flexible response based on the assessed needs of the individual young person. While normally delivered in a group setting within specialist centres, EOTAS can include ELB provided tuition services delivering one-to-one teaching, in a home or other setting.

Each year, my Department collects statistics on the number of pupils in EOTAS provision. Data is currently held to 2013. The figures, broken down by board area are in the table below:

Date	BELB	WELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	Total
October 2009	225	155	179	161	146	866
October 2010	236	129	190	128	143	826
October 2011	172	87	192	125	111	687
October 2012	141	103	159	65	116	584
October 2013	164	90	64	134	106	558

* Figures are collated for the first week of October each year and include pupils in any form of ELB delivered EOTAS provision. They do not include children receiving Elective Home Education (EHE).

Under existing legislation a parent may choose to educate his/her child at home (EHE). ELBs are aware of 258 children being home educated, however, this figure does not include those children who have never been registered at a school and who have never been brought to the Boards' attention by another agency or individual.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has issued guidance through a circular in relation to elective home education.

(AQW 36335/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department has not issued guidance through a circular in relation to Elective Home Education. However, the Education and Library Boards (the Boards) have recently each held a public consultation on their draft home education guidance/policy documents. The Boards are currently undertaking an analysis of the responses to the consultation exercise and a revised draft of each Board's document will be submitted to my Department in due course.

On 18 September, the Department published guidance (the Guidance) on Education Otherwise Than At School (EOTAS). The Guidance provides clarification on the legal basis for EOTAS provision, the process by which pupils must be referred for possible EOTAS placement and the ongoing role which schools are expected to provide for their registered pupils receiving EOTAS support.

However, I would note that the Guidance does not address home tuition services, which operate under fundamentally different referral and support processes, nor does it apply to elective home education, where a child's parents have chosen to withdraw the child from mainstream provision.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of pupils with a statement of special educational need, broken down by Education and Library Board, in each of the last five years.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of statements of special educational need issued to pupils in the South Eastern Education and Library Board, in each of the last ten years.
(AQW 36349/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education and Library Board has advised that the number of statements of special educational need issued to pupils in the South Eastern Education and Library Board, in each of the last ten academic years, is as follows:

2004/05	2005/06	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
419	465	395	384	469	425	424	331	499	487

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to outline any changes in the process of issuing a statement of special educational need to children in each of the last three years; and what impact the changes have on the time it takes to issue a statement.
(AQW 36350/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There have been no changes in the statutory process of issuing a statement of special educational needs to children in the last three years.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has a mission statement for non-grammar post-primary schools.

(AQW 36356/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My vision for all schools is outlined in my school improvement policy, Every School a Good School (ESaGS), which sets out the overarching approach to raising standards and tackling underachievement. It focuses on promoting the factors that local and international evidence tell us are at the core of a good school, and that is child centred provision, high quality teaching and learning, effective leadership and a school which is connected to parents and its local community. ESaGS also outlines how schools themselves are best placed to identify and implement actions that will ensure our children and young people receive the high quality education they deserve.

In keeping with this each school will have its own mission statement. In my experience this statement often reflects the key characteristics which are outlined in Every School a Good School.

The Member will want to be aware that all post primary schools are secondary schools; a grammar school is so defined due to its historical ability to charge fees or through Departmental designation, and a non grammar school is a secondary school that is not a grammar school. Grammar status has nothing to do with a schools admission criteria.

My vision is the same for all secondary schools, irrespective of its classification as a grammar school, or not

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education how he plans to recoup all the money he has spent on the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 36358/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The completion of the Education Bill, for which I am seeking accelerated passage, will ensure that a significant part of the money spent on ESA will support the delivery of the Education Authority and allow it to move forward more rapidly once established.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education how many schools provide their pupils with educational support materials online.

(AQW 36359/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not collate information about the resources used to deliver the curriculum.

A range of online resources for teaching and learning are available to all schools via the C2k managed ICT service which is free to all grant-aided schools. The decision of the resources that are used is a matter for each teacher/school to determine, as is the decision on whether or not such resources are provided in hard copy or online to pupils.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education whether he has any plans for recognised good schools to adopt struggling, inner city and deprived schools to help improve educational performance.

(AQW 36360/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: One of the key principles underpinning Every School a Good School, the school improvement policy, is the recognition that the improvement process is a collaborative one, requiring communication and cooperation within the school and between schools.

While I have no plans for recognised good schools to adopt struggling, inner-city or schools in areas of disadvantage, there are many examples of effective cooperation between schools.

Area Learning Communities (ALCs) provide a vehicle for collaborative working amongst schools on an area basis. The Department is currently working with ALCs to explore how this successful model can be used to develop closer working arrangements between primary schools and post-primaries on an area basis.

Work is also being taken forward separately through the Achieving Belfast and Achieving Derry-Bright Futures programmes to develop area learning clusters in the Belfast Board area and a Nursery and Primary Schools Learning Community in the Derry City Council area.

Schools are supported in sharing good practice by their managing authorities and by the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI). The managing authorities will work with schools that are meeting challenges effectively to identify those activities that are resulting in marked improvements and will disseminate this to schools that are doing less well. Good practice will also be identified and disseminated through school inspection and through guidance provided by the ETI an example of which is the ETI 'Survey of Best Practice in English and Mathematics in Post-Primary Schools'. Examples of best practice are also available to schools and teachers on the ESaGS.tv website.

There may be occasions when more formal arrangements of support between schools are considered appropriate. For instance, where the ETI find the quality of education to be less than satisfactory the school is placed in formal intervention and receives targeted support provided by their local Education and Library Board (ELB). In some cases support has been provided through the secondment of a principal with the skills and experience necessary to drive forward the improvement.

In other cases, staff from the school in formal intervention have visited local schools to experience and learn from identified good practice.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the average time taken to issue a statement of special educational needs to a pupil, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36363/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer the Member to my answer to AQW 35239/11-15 tabled by Danny Kinahan and published in the Official Report on 12 September 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education what proportion of departmental funding has been allocated to independent counselling services for post-primary school pupils, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36442/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Independent Counselling Service for Schools (ICSS) is funded by the Department of Education and is available to all post primary schools and special schools with post primary age pupils. ICSS spend over the last three years is detailed below:

Year	Total DE budget			ICSS spend			% of resource budget
	Resource £000	Capital £000	Total Budget £000	ICSS Post Primary	ICSS Special Schools	Total ICSS

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education why funding is not provided for school crossing patrols at post-primary schools.

(AQW 36457/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Funding is provided within the Department of Education overall Block Grant to the Education and Library Boards and is used for the purposes of determining the need for, and, if required, the deployment of school crossing patrols. The ELBs have advised me that 33 post-primary schools currently have school crossing patrols.

All requests for the provision of a school crossing patrol are based on identified need regardless of whether the school is primary or post-primary. Criteria relating to traffic and pedestrian volumes are measured in conjunction with consultation with other agencies (e.g. Roads Service, PSNI etc) and a decision is made on the basis of all of the information gathered.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education whether all teachers are provided with an up-to-date laptop for class work preparation.

(AQW 36478/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the previous C2k contract all teachers were provided with laptops to facilitate delivery of the curriculum, completing administrative tasks and uploading data to the School Information Management System. I am aware that those laptops are now six to seven years old and due to their age there is an issue with their performance.

I can assure you that the Department of Education is taking this matter seriously and is continuing to work towards a suitable solution within an extremely constrained and uncertain financial environment.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the estimated timescale for the establishment of the proposed single education board.

(AQW 36482/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The timescale for the establishment of the proposed Education Authority will depend upon the Assembly's consideration of the Education Bill. I am seeking agreement to the use of the accelerated passage procedure so that the Bill may complete its passage in time to allow for the establishment of the Authority by 1 April, 2015, or as soon as possible thereafter.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education whether the joint health and education project, part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies targeting early intervention, intends to distribute expenditure through his Department and its arm's-length bodies, or through community based applications.

(AQW 36483/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) lead on the Early Intervention Transformation Programme (EITP).

The 'Getting Ready to Learn' element of Work Stream 1 of the EITP, which DE leads on, provides an important opportunity to enhance how early years practice engages with parents to help them develop and maintain a positive home learning environment. Detailed proposals will be developed in the next few months in collaboration with key stakeholders across health and early years education. At this point, no decisions have been made on how the 'Getting Ready to Learn' expenditure will be distributed.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the effect class size has on children attending primary schools in areas identified as suffering from social deprivation and educational underachievement.

(AQW 36560/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department has carefully considered local data and international research on the issue of class sizes.

As regards local data we looked at the relationship between pupil-teacher ratios and assessment results at the end of key stages 2 and 3 and at GCSE. Our analysis showed there is no evidence of a correlation between class size and pupil outcomes. International research evidence also suggests that, except during the very early years, there is little correlation between class size and pupil outcomes.

While evidence suggests that smaller class sizes in early years can have a positive impact on outcomes, it has also consistently highlighted that the quality of teaching and allowing teachers the flexibility to adapt their teaching in different situations, are the most important factors in determining educational outcomes. These key factors are reflected in core Departmental policies, namely DE's literacy and numeracy strategy and the revised curriculum. In view of the evidence surrounding the early years, it is DE's policy to keep classes for our youngest pupils, (Years 1-4), to a maximum of 30 pupils.

I recognise that pupils from disadvantaged backgrounds have greater obstacles to overcome and their schools need additional resources to help them do this. In response to this I made changes to the way schools are funded in order to target additional resources at schools serving high proportions of disadvantaged pupils.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education whether a development proposal is planned on the future of Malvern Primary School in West Belfast; and if so, to detail (i) when; and (ii) how the views of the parents and the local community will be ascertained.

(AQW 36561/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The responsibility for planning the controlled schools' estate in Belfast lies, in the first instance, with the Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB).

BELB's primary area plan states its intention to close Malvern Primary School (PS), but it has not yet published a statutory Development Proposal (DP) to support that intent. I understand that the Board will shortly commence work on a DP: but until it does, neither I nor my Department has any role.

The statutory DP process facilitates extensive consultation and has two distinct stages. Prior to publication, the onus is on the proposer (in the case of Malvern PS, this is BELB) to consult with the Board of Governors, teachers and parents of the affected school. The Board also has a duty to consult with all other schools likely to be affected.

Once a DP is published, a two-month objection and comment period begins, during which anyone can make their views known directly to my Department. During this stage I endeavour to engage with concerned or interested parties to listen to their views on a proposal, before I decide whether to approve it.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education whether there has been an official recognition that Malvern Primary School is no longer in intervention and is now classified as 'good'.

(AQW 36562/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In line with the Department's procedures separate letters issued to the Chief Executive of the Belfast Education and Library Board, the chairperson of the Board of Governors of Malvern Primary School and the Principal of Malvern Primary School to officially advise that the school had exited the formal intervention process. These letters were dated 12 February 2014 which is the date the school exited formal intervention.

The letters acknowledged the support provided to the school by the BELB and commended the hard work and commitment shown by the Board of Governors, the Principal and the whole school staff to effect the improvement.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how his Department recognises the improvements made in the 'value added' to pupils' education in Malvern Primary School by the teachers, with reference to levels of progression and the school's own statistical analysis.

(AQW 36563/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The progress that our pupils make academically and qualifications that they achieve are important benchmarks for our education system. However, it is also important to recognise that a school's contribution to young people is about more than the achievement of levels or qualifications. The Department recognises the quality of provision in any school, including the contribution of teachers to the progress made by pupils, through the evaluation made by the Inspectorate.

On inspection, the ETI takes the context of the school into account, including: the free school meals percentage; the numbers of pupils on the special educational needs register, pupil enrolment trends; school type; staffing; the attendance, behaviour, motivation and work ethic of the pupils; the parental and community support, intake and gender. The ETI also collects evidence relating to the achievements of children from a variety of sources including lesson observations and assessment outcomes.

The Follow-up inspection of Malvern Primary School in December 2013 acknowledged the good quality of the pastoral care which focuses on supporting and developing the social and emotional wellbeing of the children and highlighted the good standards achieved by the children in information and communication technology.

The Follow-up inspection also recognised that the school's internal performance data shows that almost all of the children, including those who require additional support with aspects of their learning, make good progress in English and Mathematics and achieve in line with their ability, or above expectation.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Education, given the increase in school age children who are diagnosed with Autism spectrum disorder, to detail the key elements of his Department's Autism strategy, particularly, how his Department is addressing equalities in service provision in the Western Education and Library Board area.

(AQW 36570/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Executive's Autism Strategy (2013-2020) and Action Plan (2013-2016) sets out its commitment to improving services and support for people with autism, their families and carers, throughout their lives. The Strategy and Action Plan have been prepared as a result of the Autism Act 2011 which required the DHSSPS to lead on the development and implementation of a cross-Departmental Autism Strategy.

Both the Strategy and Action Plan have been developed through a process of collaborative and consultative working between people with autism, their families and carers, representatives from all government departments in the north, including the Department of Education (DE), and some key community and voluntary sector organisations.

A number of actions focus on education, which outline the specific input required from DE, the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) and Middletown Centre for Autism (MCA):

- Provide joined-up timely support services to meet the needs of children and young people with autism;
- Continue to build the capacity of schools and youth service to meet effectively the needs of children and young people with autism;
- Provide parents/carers of children and young people with autism with effective support and advice which will ensure that they are informed, involved and supported effectively by the school, the ELB and other agencies;
- Implement a common model of professional support and provision for children and young people with autism to meet their needs;
- Formalise protocols for collaboration between education and health autism services;
- Expand educational-led trans-disciplinary assessments, support and intervention mainly for children and young people with autism presenting with more complex needs;
- Provide life skills training for young people with autism whilst in post-primary education to help prepare for their transition to adulthood.

DE will work closely with the ELBs and MCA, as appropriate, to monitor progress on the implementation of each action.

DE and ELB Service Provision

Following publication of the 'Report of the Task Group on Autism' (2002), DE funded the ELBs to establish an inter-board Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD) Group to provide support to children on the autistic spectrum within each ELB. To ensure consistency across all ELB's an ASD advisory team was established in each ELB to enhance existing ASD services.

The ASD advisory service continues to provide valued and worthwhile practical support to schools and is a resource of knowledge and skill, with the capacity to raise the standards of education and the social inclusion for children on the autistic spectrum and can provide tailored support to match a child's individual needs to ensure that they reach their full potential. ELBs also provide autism-specific training in schools and all ELBs deliver a range of autism-specific training for school staff.

In addition MCA provides a range of support and intervention to professionals, parents and children with autism. Parents can avail of a range of training courses provided free of charge by the Centre and can access a broad range of online learning resources, including training video materials.

The Centre is currently expanding its programme of direct support and intervention to children with complex autism who are referred to it by the ELBs.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the (a) design; (b) print; (c) distribution; and (d) translation into Irish costs of the leaflet "School Attendance Matters, A Parent's Guide",

(AQW 36601/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: "School Attendance Matters: A Parent's Guide" was issued to the parents/carers of all Year 1 and Year 8 pupils in September 2013. This year, it was distributed to the parents/carers of all pupils, following a recommendation by the NI Audit Office in its "Improving Pupil Attendance: A Follow-up Report".

Officials, in partnership with staff from the Education Welfare Service (EWS), designed the leaflet. The estimated staff costs for this are £3,612.

The total cost of printing and distributing the leaflet in 2013 and 2014 was £27,146.

The leaflet was translated into Irish by a Departmental official in the normal course of their duties.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education how many pupils have commenced primary school education in the (a) Maintained; and (b) Irish-medium sectors in the Dungiven area, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 36628/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below. The information provided relates to the 2013/14 school census, the 2014/15 school census takes place on the 10th October this year, provisional figures will be available in December, finalised figures in February.

Number of year 1 pupils that reside in Dungiven SOA and attend Catholic Maintained and Irish Medium schools, 2011/12 – 2013/14

	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
P1 pupils attending Catholic Maintained schools	20	25	19
P1 pupils in Irish medium education	*	*	8

Source: NI school census

The pupils in the table above represent all P1 pupils in the Dungiven SOA for each year.

Notes:

1. Figures refer to year 1 pupils resident in the Dungiven SOA.
2. Pupils with unknown or invalid postcodes (totalling to less than 0.1% of the overall primary school pupil population) have been excluded from the analysis.
3. Irish medium education refers to pupils in Irish medium schools or units.
4. denotes fewer than 5 pupils suppressed due to potential identification of individual pupils. *
5. Irish medium education is not considered to be a separate management type, so the figures in the table above do not necessarily add up to the total number of pupils.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of employers attitudes to employing people over 50; and what steps he is taking to improve employment prospects for older people.
(AQW 35892/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): Since its introduction in September 2008 Steps to Work (StW) has been my Departments main adult return to work programme. StW aims to assist unemployed and economically inactive adults, including those aged over 50, to find and sustain employment.

With support from the Northern Ireland Executive's Economy & Jobs Initiative the programme was flexed to include a strand, Step Ahead 50+, to help address the particular challenges faced by the long term unemployed aged over 50 and to help them compete more effectively for jobs.

The Department's new employment programme, Steps 2 Success (S2S), has been designed to improve the performance of the Department's employment programmes. Its primary purpose is the delivery of a flexible personalised service tailored for all ages to meet individual need which will help people move into and remain in employment. S2S is for all eligible jobseekers irrespective of their employability need or age.

S2S is an employment programme with a funding model based on payments by results thus ensuring that the main focus is on employment outcomes.

The Work and Families Bill presently at Committee Stage in the Assembly includes provision which, once enacted, will extend the right to request flexible working to all employees with 26 weeks' continuous service. There may be particular benefits for older people, who may wish to remain in work but require greater flexibility. Successful requests will enable employers to retain the skills and expertise of older people who may otherwise think of leaving work or moving to an alternative job.

Working in conjunction with other Departments, OFMDFM developed and consulted on a new draft Active Ageing Strategy which aims to improve attitudes to and services for older people. Responses are currently being analysed in detail by OFMDFM.

My Department has a key role under the Strategy's Self Fulfilment theme which states:

"We will support older people to develop to the fullest of their potential through promoting education, training, leisure and arts opportunities which will support the development of life skills, positive mental, emotional and physical health and well-being".

There are two DEL-specific proposals for actions under the "Self-fulfilment" Strategic Aim. They are:

- Ministers wish to develop a programme whose target audience would be the hard to reach, long term unemployed, specifically targeting economically inactive 50+ year olds.
- DEL will consider the development of a signature programme to target economically inactive older workers in the context of the Strategic Framework to address Economic Inactivity in Northern Ireland; and
- DEL, in conjunction with OFMDFM, will explore how we may better promote the benefits of further education opportunities amongst older workers.

On 26 March this year I attended and spoke at a breakfast briefing, hosted by the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland, Claire Keatinge, during which the Commissioner launched the findings of a report entitled – 'Valuing an Ageing Workforce'. I have shared the report across all key policy areas of my Department to help raise the more general concepts which it promotes. I met again with the Commissioner on 22 September when we discussed economic inactivity, apprenticeships, and a Business Champion for older people.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many people during 2014 enrolled with the ApprenticeshipsNI programme under the auspices of the Northern Regional College.
(AQW 36050/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the academic year to 30 April 2014, 192 people enrolled with the ApprenticeshipsNI programme at Northern Regional College.

Mr B McCreagh asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many people graduated with a degree in performing arts from (i) Queen's University; and (ii) The University of Ulster in each of the last three years; and how many of these graduates are now employed in the Arts Sector.
(AQW 36176/11-15)

Dr Farry: Information on the number of people who graduated with a degree in performing arts is difficult to provide, as the coding system used by the Higher Education Statistics Authority (HESA) to classify degree subjects does not have a specific subject grouping for Performing Arts.

A general subject category "Creative Arts & Design" can be identified in the HESA coding system, which can be broken down into a number of more specific subject areas, some of which may relate to the performing arts.

Table 1 provides details of the number of students graduating in subject areas related to "Creative Arts & Design" from Queen's University, Belfast (QUB) and the University of Ulster (UU), from 2010/11 to 2012/13.

Notes:

The latest available data are for the 2012/13 academic year.

Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5 in line with HESA Policy.

Information on the number of graduates employed in the “Arts sector” is also difficult to provide, as the Standard Occupational Classifications (SOC) used by HESA in their Destination of Leavers Survey do not have a clear category for those in employment in the ‘Arts Sector’. In addition, many of the SOC codes reference general job types such as management, teaching professionals and administrative jobs, but do not specify the sector these jobs are associated with, which could well relate to the “Arts sector”.

We can provide information on the number of graduates in some sort of employment, six months after graduation, who responded to the Destination of Leavers Survey. Table 2 provides details the number of graduates from subjects in “Creative Arts & Design” at Queen’s University, Belfast (QUB) and the University of Ulster (UU), who indicated they were in some sort of employment, six months after graduation.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, in light of the continual refusal of St. Mary's University College to integrate and in the interests of equality, parity of esteem and the promotion of inter-educational training as opposed to sectorised, separated status, whether he will move to restrict, reduce or remove departmental funding for an establishment which will not embrace inclusion.

(AQW 36195/11-15)

Dr Farry: Following the publication of the International Review Panel's report - Aspiring to Excellence, and as detailed in my statement of 1st July, I have commenced engagement with the four Initial Teacher Training providers to seek a way forward.

It would not be appropriate for me to comment on this issue while these discussions continue.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the salary increases that have been paid to lecturers in each (i) Higher Education College; and (ii) Further Education Institute, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36202/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) Higher Education Colleges (St Mary's and Stranmillis)

The most recent salary increase for higher education college lecturers was awarded for the academic year 2014/15. The percentage salary increase for the most recent three academic years is as follows:

- 2012/13 1.0%
- 2013/14 1.0%
- 2014/15 2.0%

The pay increases represent the uplift agreed at national level and have been awarded at both colleges. They do not take account of increases due to progression up the pay scale and so increases given to individual lecturers may vary from these headline figures.

(ii) Further Education Colleges

The most recent salary increase for further education college lecturers was awarded for the academic year 2012/13. Subsequent years are still the subject of negotiation at the lecturers' negotiating committee. The percentage salary increase for the most recent three academic years for which figures are available is as follows:

- 2010/11 1.78%
- 2012/13 0%

The pay increases were awarded across all six institutions of further education. They do not take account of increases due to progression up the pay scale and so increases given to individual lecturers may vary from these headline figures. Further education lecturers, in common with all public sector staff, were subject to a two-year pay freeze for 2011/12 and 2012/13.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the next steps on the proposed Teaching Block at University of Ulster Magee campus.

(AQW 36217/11-15)

Dr Farry: Officials from the University of Ulster and from my department are engaged in the normal iterative process of preparing and reviewing the business case for this capital development. Once the business case has been approved it will be submitted to DFP for its review and approval. Following DFP approval, a bid for funding will be submitted. As I have stated previously, the first opportunity to do this will be in the bidding process for the 2015-16 financial year.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department is taking to help Queen's University Belfast close the gap to Trinity College Dublin in the World University Rankings.

(AQW 36233/11-15)

Dr Farry: It is pleasing to note that Queen's has risen in the rankings from 172nd place in 2013 to 170th in 2014. My Department is continuing to take steps to develop the higher education sector in Northern Ireland through the implementation of Graduating to Success, Northern Ireland's higher education strategy. The strategy recognises the critical importance of our universities in terms of economic and social development and sets out my aspirations for the sector to 2020. Implementation of the strategy, driven by the four guiding principles of responsiveness, quality, accessibility and flexibility is currently underway.

A key aspect of this work is my Department's support for the Higher Education Academy (HEA) to engage with our higher education institutions and support them to improve the quality of teaching and learning.

It is important to acknowledge that different ranking systems are based on measurement of a range of different factors. The exact methodology used to determine the importance of each factor is not always clear. League tables can provide a useful guide, however they are just one of a number of tools used to measure the performance of our universities. That said it is clearly important for all our HEIs to strive to continuously improve across the board.

There are a number of indicators which demonstrate that the QUB is performing well in a range of important areas. For example one of the most important measures in terms of quality is the Institutional Audit process carried out by the Quality Assurance Agency (QAA).

The results of the most recent Institutional Audit, published in March 2009, stated that the QAA had confidence in both the academic standards of the QUB awards and the quality of the learning opportunities available to students. This is the highest rating that can be achieved. As well as this the QAA carried out a mid-cycle review of the University in 2011-12 which resulted in a positive outcome. The University will undergo the QAA's new Higher Education Review in 2015-16.

Another measure of an institution's performance is its impact on the economy and the main UK indicator is the "Higher Education – Business & Community Interaction Survey" (HEBCIS) published annually by HESA.

HEBCIS reports on a range of activities including the commercialisation of new knowledge through collaborative research, the delivery of professional training, consultancy and services by universities to businesses and community groups culminating in activities intended to have direct social benefits to the community in Northern Ireland.

The latest HEBCIS for Academic Year 2012/13 shows that both main NI universities are continuing to out-perform their UK counterparts. They secured income from business and community interaction in 2012/13 of some £92 million, representing 2.6% of the UK total. This is an impressive performance in a context where Northern Ireland accounts for only 2.1% of UK GVA (Gross Value Added) and for 2.0% of the UK's FTE (Full Time Equivalent) academics.

Of the £92 million earned by the Northern Ireland universities, the majority (£55.7 million / around 60%) is directly attributable to Queen's University Belfast, underlining its importance to stimulating innovation within the Northern Ireland economy.

Queen's University also continues to score highly in the National Student Survey (NSS) which asks students to provide feedback on their courses. The NSS results for 2014 indicate that student satisfaction at the QUB is 86% which meets the UK benchmark for similar HE Institutions.

Taking all of this into account, I have confidence that Queen's is meeting the high standards expected of a world-class university and that it is engaged in a process of continuous improvement which supports the aspirations for the sector, articulated in Graduating to Success.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail any changes made to the Board of Governors of Stranmillis College over the last three years.

Mr W Patterson	Mr T McGonigal

Appointments made by me, including that of the Chair, follow public competitions run in accordance with the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments Northern Ireland (CPANI).

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his recent meeting with the National Union of Students and Union of Students in Ireland.

(AQO 6695/11-15)

Dr Farry: At their request, I met with NUS-USI on the 17th September to discuss a wide range of issues.

I was able to provide an update on the Review of Higher Education Funding and discuss student representation on further education college governing bodies.

It will come as no surprise to Members that a large part of our meeting concerned further education student support, including the Hardship Funds and Further Education Awards.

During the meeting I reiterated the fact that the level of expenditure against these Funds is demand-led and emphasised that support is available from one or both funds and that they are interchangeable.

I need to be very clear about what I mean by demand. Applicants to the Hardship Funds are assessed under set eligibility criteria, which have not been changed. If deemed eligible under these criteria, they will be paid.

Demand therefore equates to the number of eligible applicants to the Funds. No student who meets the eligibility criteria has been turned away, and so demand has been met.

Demand, in these terms, has decreased in recent years. In part, I believe this is to do with an increase in applications for Further Education Awards, which are distributed at the start of each term and are designed to prevent the need for students to apply to the Hardship Funds. However, if necessary, students can avail of both Funds.

Despite what has been reported in the media in recent weeks, there has been no cut in funding across the support that the Department provides for further education students. In fact, expenditure has grown.

As highlighted within the 'Pound in Your Pocket' report, student hardship remains an issue. With this in mind, I have asked the Union to work with the colleges to identify ways to improve awareness of the Funds.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the competitive position of Northern Ireland's universities.

(AQO 6702/11-15)

Dr Farry: My central objective is to ensure that Northern Ireland continues to have a world-class and internationally recognised higher education sector. Our universities are key partners in the economic transformation of Northern Ireland and are central to our inward investment narrative and efforts to create more jobs and business start-ups. They are key providers of higher level skills and research.

I have been pleased to be able to provide additional undergraduate places, all in STEM subjects, to set in train the doubling of the number of publically-funded PhDs over this decade, to facilitate additional Masters courses, and to make new investments in research activities.

Nevertheless, in light of the underlying squeeze on public sector funding over the course of the 2011-15 Budget period, there is an ongoing challenge to maintain the competitive position of our universities.

The universities in Northern Ireland receive grant from my Department for funded undergraduate and post-graduate places and tuition fees from the students.

Taking these together, the universities receive between £1,000 and £2,500 less per student than their counterparts in England and Scotland.

In total terms, for the number of students being funded in the current year, our universities receive up to £39m less than they would in England or £22m less than they would in Scotland. This funding gap is growing and it directly impacts on the competitive position of our universities.

In terms of research funding, our universities are also funded at a lower per capita rate than those in England or Scotland. Not only is their competitiveness compromised but also that of Northern Ireland, as research and innovation are key catalysts for economic growth and prosperity.

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the business case for the Northern Regional College Ballymoney Campus.

(AQO 6703/11-15)

Dr Farry: The College is currently liaising with my Department in the preparation of an Outline Business Case to explore options for the provision of further education throughout the College region, including the Ballymoney area.

This business case will identify the value for money option, funding requirements and procurement route. Until the Business Case has been assessed and approved, I am not in a position to be definitive about the College's plans for the Ballymoney area.

The approval of the College's Outline Business Case will need to take account of the recommendations of a stock-take exercise, which provided a comprehensive analysis of the current position in relation to the core functions of the College across financial, corporate, staff, curriculum and estates planning.

The exercise built on the progress already made through the Business Improvement Plan, which the College previously initiated in response to concerns about its financial position.

The assignment was led by my Department and taken forward with the full cooperation of the College's governing body and management team.

I can assure you that my Department is working very closely with the College to ensure that learners, employers and the wider community in the College's catchment area will benefit from state of the art accommodation and equipment comparable to that which are now available in many other College areas. The completed Business Case approval is expected by January 2015.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the Review of Agency Workers and the Impact of the Agency Workers Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2011.

(AQO 6704/11-15)

Dr Farry: During the passage of the Agency Workers Regulations Northern Ireland 2011, I gave a commitment to review the effectiveness of the legislation once the regulations were in place for a period of time.

In 2013, my Department commissioned a review of the Agency Workers Regulations to gain a better understanding of their impact on agency workers, agencies and hirers.

The review concluded in May 2014 and the key findings were presented to the Employment and Learning Committee on 18 June 2014. The research found that there was no evidence from agencies, hirers or workers to suggest that the average length of assignment has been adversely impacted by the Agency Workers Regulations.

The Report makes six key recommendations, which focus on improved information and guidance for workers, employers and agencies. My Department will now take forward the implementation of the recommendations in partnership with key stakeholders.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much revenue expenditure has been allocated to Further Education Colleges in each of the last four years.

(AQO 6705/11-15)

Dr Farry: Over the last four years, I have been committed to ensuring that my Department provides sufficient funding to the further education colleges to enable them to continue their vital work in up-skilling the local population.

In the 2011-12 academic year, the further education sector received a recurrent budget allocation of £143.9 million. This rose to £146 million in 2012-13, £146.9 million in 2013-14 and finally £149.4 million in 2014-15.

This represents an increase of £5.5 million over the four-year period in actual spend, but represents a reduction in real terms.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he has any plans to review the training allowances for young students.

(AQO 6706/11-15)

Dr Farry: Training allowances for young students are currently provided through the Education Maintenance Allowance, known as EMA, which is designed to encourage 16 – 19 year olds from disadvantaged families to continue in full time education. My Department jointly manages this with the Department of Education.

Through EMA, Training for Success participants automatically receive a non means tested allowance of £40 per week, with further bonuses available in line with achievement. Assistance with other costs is also provided dependent on personal circumstances.

Learners on other programmes may receive a means tested allowance of £30 per week, with further bonuses again available, dependent on achievement.

The Northern Ireland cross-departmental strategy for young people Not in Education, Employment or Training, 'Pathways to Success', also provides for EMA to be paid to young people participating in projects funded by the European Social and the Collaboration and Innovation funds.

My Department is currently conducting a comprehensive review of youth training. The Department is also developing the United Youth Programme.

The review of youth training is examining the range of training provision available to young people at level 2, and will publish its interim report in the coming months. Concurrently, we are developing United Youth Programme concepts via a co-design process with a view to piloting some new approaches for young people, below level 2, early in 2014.

As part of the review, training allowances for young people across our programmes will, of course, be considered. I believe that this is necessary to ensure we have a consistent approach to allowances across all our training provision.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what progress has been made on his engagement with universities and Further Education Colleges on the development of training and qualifications that are fit for modern employment.

(AQO 6707/11-15)

Dr Farry: I am acutely aware of the need to ensure that the curriculum and qualifications meet the needs of employers as well as students. That is why, in the new apprenticeship strategy, Securing our Success, I said that there would be one qualification for each occupation at the relevant level.

The qualifications and curriculum will be developed through the Sectoral Partnerships, made up of employers, employer representative bodies, colleges of further education and our universities. I have already begun discussions with both the universities and colleges.

Until the new qualifications are developed, the colleges of further education are using the available range of awards and units within the Qualifications and Credit Framework and National Qualifications Framework to maximise the relevance of the educational and training offer for both learners and employers in the modern economy.

Where employers require units to be developed, the further education colleges have worked with awarding organisations to ensure provision is developed in line with the national occupational standards.

In addition, the Higher Education Strategy recognises that higher education must be responsive to the needs of the economy. The strategy emphasises the importance of increasing the number of students undertaking higher-level courses in economically relevant subjects.

In a drive to ensure that higher-level qualifications are fit for modern employment, I am committed to delivering key projects within the strategy which promote graduate employability and knowledge exchange activities between our universities and Northern Ireland businesses.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the budget pressures on the South West College.

(AQO 6708/11-15)

Dr Farry: In common with the rest of the Further Education sector, South West College has had to wrestle with tightening budgets over the course of the past decade, including this current budget period. Through its approach to income generation, it has fared a little better than some other colleges.

Looking ahead, to 2015/16 and indeed even greater budget uncertainty for 2016 - 2020, the Further Education sector, including South West College, faces an even tougher financial climate and no college will be exempt from this.

At present, the full extent of the proposed budgetary reductions facing my Department is unclear, but I anticipate there will be a significant impact on front line services offered by the colleges.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether (i) Tamboran Resources have requested a further extension to their phase one work programme; (ii) she has granted or refused an extension; and (iii) licence PL2/10 has now ceased to be in operation.

(AQW 35851/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): These matters remain to be fully informed.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 34079/11-15, for a breakdown of the £534,502 expenditure on hospitality by her Department's arm's-length bodies.

(AQW 35898/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The breakdown of £534,502 expenditure on hospitality provided by the arms length bodies in 2013/14 is detailed below:

- Invest NI: £509,144
- NITB: £19,692

- CCNI: £896
- HSENI: £4,770

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what current commitments her Department has in relation to the promotion of jobs in South Down; and whether such commitments have been achieved.

(AQW 35934/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During the first 3 years of this Programme for Government period (2011-12 to 2013-14) businesses supported by Invest NI committed to create over 800 new jobs in the South Down constituency.

Since projects typically take between 3 to 5 years to fully implement, meaningful data on the number of jobs created against the 800 promoted will not be available until after this time-frame.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much public money has been allocated to the Game of Thrones television series.

(AQW 35967/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI, through its funding support to the Northern Ireland Screen Commission (NI Screen), has provided £12.5million of financial assistance to Home Box Office (HBO). This funding helped to secure the pilot episode of Game of Thrones in 2009 plus five full series.

In order to capitalise on the opportunities the Game of Thrones presents for Northern Ireland as a tourism destination the following has been invested in promotional activity:

- the Northern Ireland Tourist Board has invested approximately £330,000 on all marketing and PR activity including hosting two global exhibitions; online marketing activity; product development and hosting domestic and international journalists; and
- Tourism Ireland has negotiated an agreement with HBO to lend HBO's name and logo to Tourism Ireland campaigns to promote Northern Ireland for holidays in markets across the world. Tourism Ireland has spent in the region of £224,000 on its multi-market campaign on Twitter and Facebook which generated in the region of £1.28million in Equivalent Advertising Value.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the subsidies provided to renewable energy companies operating wind turbines, in the last ten years.

(AQW 36005/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Wind turbines and other renewable electricity technologies receive support under the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO) in the form of Renewables Obligation Certificates (ROCs) issued to generators. As the NIRO is a market-based support mechanism, the actual value of a ROC to a generator will depend on the supply and demand for ROCs during a given obligation period, and the individual arrangements reached between generators and the supplier or other person to whom they sell their ROCs. Table 1 sets out the approximate value of ROCs issued to wind generators in each financial year since the NIRO's introduction in 2005.

Table 1: ROCs issued to onshore wind generators 2005/06 – 2012/13

Year	ROCs issued ('000)	Total value (£'000)
2005-06	254	£9,000
2006-07	321	£11,725
2007-08	405	£15,280
2008-09	593	£23,303
2009-10	715	£29,260
2010-11	695	£28,266
2011-12	1,127	£47,955
2012-13	1,060	£47,460

Notes:

1. Source: Ofgem RO Annual Reports
2. ROCs issued rounded to nearest thousand
3. Approximate value of ROCs issued is calculated by multiplying the number of ROCs issued by the buyout price in that year plus 10% (round to nearest £000)

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 33121/11-15, to outline the results from the investigations by The Trading Standards Service into the 15 private tenancy agreements, to determine whether they are unfair or misleading under the Unfair Terms in the Consumer Contract Regulations 1999.

(AQW 36010/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Department's Trading Standards Service (TSS) has met with the lettings agencies involved to provide advice and to make recommendations on how these private tenancy agreements should be changed to comply with the current guidance.

In all cases, the agents have shown a willingness to engage in the process positively and this process has proved to be effective.

As a result, 14 out of the 15 agreements have either been changed or are in the process of being changed. One agency has closed down.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she has granted, or is currently considering, a request for an extension of Tamboran's work programme, following the Minister of the Environment's decision requiring exploratory drilling at Belcoo to be subject to an Environmental Impact Assessment.

(AQW 36011/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This matter remains to be fully informed.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what current commitments her Department has in relation to the promotion of jobs in West Tyrone; and whether such commitments have been achieved.

(AQW 36013/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During the first 3 years of this Programme for Government period (2011-12 to 2013-14) businesses supported by Invest NI committed to create nearly 1,300 new jobs in the West Tyrone constituency.

Since projects typically take between 3 to 5 years to fully implement, meaningful data on the number of jobs created against the 1,300 promoted will not be available until after this time-frame.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what departmental services she has made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36016/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Individuals who apply for a Debt Relief Order can use the counter services at the Post Office Network to pay their application fee.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what assistance her Department can offer to private sector companies who provide 3G communications services in North Antrim.

(AQW 36035/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As a fully privatised sector Mobile communications is one of the most competitive areas of the UK telecommunications market and the four main Mobile Network Operators are currently investing significantly to upgrade their 2G and 3G networks in Northern Ireland. Government can only intervene where the market has failed and in compliance with EU competition law and state aid rules.

For those areas that are not currently being addressed by market forces, the UK Government is implementing the £150 million Mobile Infrastructure project which aims to address mobile voice and basic data not-spots across the UK by March 2015. While the project is focused on 2G technology, it is understood that opportunities will be taken to upgrade to 3G where possible. Northern Ireland is in line for 72 new mast sites under this project.

My Department is maintaining a watching brief on these ongoing initiatives and will assess the need for further government intervention once they have completed.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many of the jobs created by Invest NI in Upper Bann during 2013/14 financial year offer a salary which is (i) less than 25 per cent over; and (ii) 25 per cent or more than the average private sector wage, expressed as a number and as a percentage of all the new jobs created by inward investment projects during this period.

(AQW 36096/11-15)

Mrs Foster: It should be noted that Invest NI does not have a Programme for Government target to promote jobs with average salaries 25% above the Northern Ireland Private Sector Median (NI PSM). The target only relates to the number above the NI PSM.

During 2013-14 Invest NI offered support to promote 423 new jobs in the Upper Bann constituency, 27 of which related to inward investment.

Of these 27 jobs, 25 were secured under the Jobs Fund scheme, for which Invest NI does not have job quality targets; therefore, these have not been included in the answer to question (i) and (ii).

The remaining 2 jobs had salaries which were 25% or more above the NI Private Sector Median salary. This represents 100% of those jobs with a relevant job quality target.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of new jobs created in Upper Bann through first time international investors, that were supported by Invest NI, during the 2013/14 financial year.
(AQW 36098/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During 2013-14 Invest NI promoted 27 new jobs through inward investment projects in the Upper Bann constituency. None of these projects were taken forward by first-time international investors.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of new jobs created in Upper Bann through inward investment projects supported by Invest NI during the 2013/14 financial year.

Mrs Foster: During 2013-14 Invest NI promoted 27 new jobs through inward investment projects in the Upper Bann constituency.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the financial assistance provided by Invest NI to companies in Upper Bann during 2013/14 financial year.

Mrs Foster: During the 2013-14 financial year Invest NI offered support to the value of £7million to projects in the Upper Bann constituency.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of jobs promoted by Invest NI in the Software and Computer Services sector in each of the last three years, broken down by constituency.
(AQW 36124/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The table below shows the number of jobs promoted by Invest NI in the Software and Computer Services sector in each of the last three years (2011-12 to 2013-14), broken down by constituency.

Invest NI New Jobs Promoted within the Software and Computer Services Sectors (2011-12 to 2013-14)

Notes

1. New Jobs Promoted represents the number of jobs expected to be created by the project.

- 2 Invest NI revises performance data on a regular basis to ensure that it reflects implemented projects; therefore, the data above may differ to previously published information.
- 3 'Location not determined' relates to mostly new FDI projects, whose precise location details are not decided
- 4 The figures do not include those jobs promoted through the Regional Start Initiative. Projects supported under this scheme cannot be allocated at this level.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to list the postcode areas where her Department has identified poor broadband coverage.

(AQW 36242/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the NI Direct website (<http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project>) where details of the postcode areas to be addressed by the current Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP) can be found. This project aims to improve the broadband connectivity for more than 45,000 premises by the end of 2015.

In addition, my Department is currently consulting on the proposed intervention area for the Superfast Roll-out Programme Phase 2 (SRP2) project which seeks to increase the coverage of superfast broadband services to 95% of premises by 2017. The consultation document, which can be found on the DETI website (http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-telecoms-index/consultations\_from\_2014/superfast\_rollout\_programme\_phase\_2.htm), contains a list of postcodes where it is considered additional public intervention may be required when the NIBIP is complete.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how the £1.24 million cost of the report into the Northern Ireland Events Company represents value for money.

(AQW 36261/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Under Article 425(2) of the Companies Order 1986, the Department may appoint Company Inspectors in certain specified circumstances. In the case of the Northern Ireland Events Company, it appeared to the Department that there were circumstances in the management and conduct of the Company which suggested that public money may have been misused. These circumstances fall within Article 425(2) of the 1986 Order. The public interest served by the conduct of an investigation into the affairs of the Company in such circumstances is both clear and significant and cannot be assessed in simple monetary terms. I am, therefore, satisfied that the cost of the investigation into and report on the Northern Ireland Events Company was in the public interest.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department plans to reduce the level of Renewable Heat Incentives for new commercial biomass boilers.

(AQW 36264/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The non-domestic Renewable Heat Incentive, (RHI) has been in place since November 2012 and supports biogas, biomass, ground heat pumps and solar. Tariffs haven't been reduced and are reviewed annually in line with inflation.

A consultation on phase II of RHI was undertaken last year, (July – October) with a focus on support for a range of new technologies. There are no proposals in the consultation to reduce incentives. Phase II developments will be taken forward in 2015.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what work her Department has carried out on making Wi-Fi available in all parts of Ballycastle.

(AQW 36304/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During 2009/10 my Department supported a small number of pilot projects providing free wi-fi in town centres, one of which was in Ballycastle. Working with internet service provider -The Cloud and Moyle District Council, DETI made funding of up to £25,500 available for a project that would: -

- examine the impact of delivery of a number of wi-fi access points in a town with a tourism focus;
- examine the relative merits of deploying a series of hotspots within existing business premises through creation of an external mesh;
- promote environmental sustainability in terms of encouraging mobile browsing; and
- assist visitors to the town by providing reliable, cost-effective "pay-as-you-go" access to a broadband service as part of the overall experience of visiting business premises such as restaurants, guest houses, public houses and café/coffee shops.

A post project evaluation completed in 2010 concluded that although the number of host businesses was lower than had been anticipated, the level of use was significant and as such the project was considered successful.

Following completion of the pilot, The Cloud entered into commercial discussions with host businesses about the ongoing use of the service to meet both their own broadband needs and to offer a service which complements their traditional business by offering wi-fi access to customers. The outcome is that this service is continuing.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what analysis her Department has carried out on the benefits the Giro d'Italia has had on Ballycastle town.

(AQW 36306/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) is undertaking an evaluation of the Giro d'Italia Grande Partenza, based on research among event attendees over the period of the race and the associated festival activity. This will also include an assessment of the return on public investment. It is hoped that this report will be available by end October.

Interim results have identified that there were 230,000 spectators over the period of the event.

NITB's survey has demonstrated that spectators along the Giro d'Italia Grande Partenza route felt it would improve Northern Ireland's global image and reputation as a tourist destination and host of major events. Further benefits included increased civic pride. Any such benefits to Northern Ireland's global position and perception will likely benefit its constituent regions and towns, including Ballycastle.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what initial assessment has been made of the success of the Northern Ireland Airshow held in Portrush on 6 and 7 September 2014.

(AQW 36327/11-15)

Mrs Foster: 'Air Waves Portrush' was an extremely well attended event and appears to have achieved record numbers of visitors.

No assessment has been carried out by my Department or the Northern Ireland Tourist Board in relation to the event.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions have taken place with mobile phone operators to improve mobile phone coverage in and around the village of Derrygonnelly, Co Fermanagh.

(AQW 36394/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department maintains regular contact with the Mobile Network Operators (MNOs) but there have been no discussions specifically around coverage in Derrygonnelly. The member will be aware that the telecommunications market is fully privatised and independently regulated, with investment decisions taken on the basis of commercial return. In recent years the MNOs have been investing significantly to improve their 2G and 3G networks. For instance, to the end of 2013, 'EE' had invested some £30 million in its Northern Ireland network while 'Three' had invested over £12 million.

To address areas where the market is not currently investing, the Department of Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) is currently implementing the Mobile Infrastructure project which is focused on 2G technology. However, it is understood that operators will future proof the infrastructure being deployed, in order to further support 3G, 4G and beyond, where possible.

Following a review of the National Implementation Plan, which took account of the impact of MNO investment, Northern Ireland is now in line for the deployment of 72 nominal, new mast sites which should help improve mobile services across Northern Ireland, including County Fermanagh. Once completed, DETI will assess the need for further Government intervention.

Department of the Environment

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment on how many occasions, detailing the dates and venues, have departmental officials or associated agency staff held meetings with him in which a briefing was included on the detrimental impact that the proposed Single Tier Taxi System, in its present format, will have on Belfast Public Hire Taxis and smaller private hire taxi operators.

(AQW 35809/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): The reforms to the taxi industry under the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 are designed to deliver a safe, fair and fit for purpose industry. I have met with representatives of the taxi industry and its users, and with my officials, on many occasions and have explored many different aspects of the reforms. These have on many occasions included discussion of the concerns of Belfast Public Hire taxi drivers on the potential impact of the reforms on their activities.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 33401/11-15, to detail (i) the reason why his Department did not pursue enforcement action in relation to unauthorised extraction of sand from Lough Neagh Special Protection Area; (ii) who was responsible for the decision; (iii) when the decision was taken; and (iv) what consideration was given to the requirements of the Environmental Impact Assessment, Habitats and Wild Birds Directives prior to reaching the decision.

Mr Durkan: I am aware that the dredging of sand has been an inherent part of Lough Neagh's environmental and economic existence for over 70 years. The operations on the Lough provide a significant contribution to the surrounding areas and the wider economy through employment, investment and environmental management.

I can confirm that historically, enforcement action in relation to unauthorised dredging on the Lough has not been pursued. I am unaware why this situation arose but I am now committed to dealing with the issue. Having been made aware of the matter, I have asked officials to investigate. A live investigation is currently ongoing.

I will of course make my decisions on how to regularise this breach in light of the need to balance the value of the mineral to the economy, the environmental implications of the development and the degree to which adverse effects can be mitigated.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment what steps he is taking to address health and safety concerns at Roe Valley Country Park following the damage to two paths caused by a heavy thunderstorm in June 2014.

(AQW 36001/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Part of the riverside pathway along the West Bank area of the Country Park was damaged as a result of a landslide which followed thunderstorms and flash flooding on 26 May 2014. Another section of pathway in the West Bank area, had previously suffered significant damage as a result of a landslide in the Autumn of 2006 and it is deemed to be beyond repair.

These two sections of pathways have been fenced off at both ends with warning signs displayed at the barriers advising: 'Caution Landslide'. The barriers and signage are checked on a daily basis for any damage or faults and are repaired as necessary.

It is unfortunate that these pathway sections have had to be closed to ensure public safety. However, previous repairs have remained vulnerable to extreme weather so there is a need to seek an alternative, more permanent solution, bearing in mind the current financial constraints. I can assure you that as funding becomes available, NIEA officials will seek to re-instate public access, initially to the riverside pathway.

Meanwhile, visitors can still enjoy over 10 miles of walkways which remain readily accessible within the Roe Valley Country Park.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department will investigate the building works that are currently affecting a conservation at The Commons, Donaghadee.

(AQW 36004/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Following several reports within the past month of vegetation clearance from concerned members of the public, community groups and elected representatives of scientific staff from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) carried out site visits at The Commons, Donaghadee on 28 August 2014 and again on 22 September 2014.

The Commons at Donaghadee is adjacent to Outer Ards Area of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI). Outer Ards ASSI was declared on 23 December 2002.

ASSIs are afforded legal protection against specified operations or activities that could be damaging to the ASSI scientific features for which the site was declared.

Following the 2 site visits above it was found on both occasions that the vegetation clearance lay outside the ASSI also NIEA scientific staff observed absolutely no evidence of "building works" having being undertaken in this area.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment, following storm damage to paths during June 2014 in Roe Valley Country Park, what action is being taken to fully restore the paths and ensure the safety of people continuing to use them.

(AQW 36057/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Part of the riverside pathway along the West Bank area of the Country Park was damaged as a result of a landslide which followed thunderstorms and flash flooding on 26 May 2014. Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many Planning Enforcement Actions have led to criminal convictions.

(AQW 36077/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table below outlines the number of prosecution cases that were initiated and the number of convictions for planning enforcement related offences in the last 3 years, and first quarter of 2014/15.

	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15*
Prosecution cases initiated	126	145	72	1
Convictions	41	80	53	9

* Provisional 1st quarter figures from April to June 2014.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of the Environment what departmental services he has made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36091/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Post Office holds stocks of driver literature forms for the Driver and Vehicle Agency. Other than this, the Post Office currently does not carry out any customer services on behalf of the Department of the Environment.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, since its introduction as part of the MOT test, whether the diesel emissions test has ever been discontinued; and if so, to detail (i) why it was discontinued; and (ii) whether the EU institutions were informed.

(AQW 36113/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The European Roadworthiness Directive required Member States to introduce a diesel emission test (metered smoke test) from 1 January 1996. The Motor Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1999 provided for the introduction of the diesel emission test from 1 January 2000. A compliant emission test was initially introduced in Northern Ireland on 1 March 2006.

However, the test for cars and light goods vehicles was suspended in June 2006 for health and safety reasons relating to the build-up of fumes in the test hall. This was because the emissions from these vehicles are assessed under full throttle conditions.

Subsequent efforts to secure the necessary investment in infrastructure to protect against fumes through an existing PFI contract proved to be unsuccessful. The PFI contract was terminated in 2013. The re-introduction of a safe emissions test will require significant investment in the Vehicle Testing estate. Following a prolonged period of complex legal negotiations the Department has put in place the necessary contractual arrangements which will allow this investment to take place. The Driver & Vehicle Agency has embarked on an infrastructure programme which will modernise the services it offers its customers and provide capacity to meet the increasing demand for vehicle tests. This programme will include the re-introduction of a safe emission test for diesel cars and light goods vehicles. In the meantime, the emissions from cars and light goods vehicles will continue to be subject to a visual inspection and heavy goods vehicles and buses continue to be tested in full compliance with the European Roadworthiness Directive.

The EU institutions have not been informed of the partial suspension of the diesel emission test. The DVA have always planned to re-introduce the test as soon as contractual constraints were removed and a planned programme is now underway.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35226/11-15, whether his Department are acting on their statutory powers in this instance to pursue a prosecutable offence; and if not, to detail the reasons for this.

(AQW 36135/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department determined that the provision of taxi services at Ravenhill Rugby Ground was compliant with the requirements of the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 and other related legislation and therefore no prosecutable offences are currently being pursued.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with his counterpart in Westminster in relation to the practical difficulties following the removal of vehicle licensing from Coleraine.

(AQW 36149/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I wrote to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Robert Goodwill MP, on 13 August 2014, on behalf of Northern Ireland customers to express my disappointment that the level of service provided by DVLA was not of the high standard expected in Northern Ireland.

In response to my letter, Claire Perry MP, replied confirming that she was aware that there were issues with a small number of records resulting from the transfer of the service, reassuring me that these would be rectified as a matter of priority.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what actions are in place to distinguish Northern Ireland registered vehicles from vehicles registered in other parts of the UK by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to ensure that vehicles are not considered due MOT after three years rather than the four years required in Northern Ireland; and (ii) what steps are in place to ensure vehicles brought into Northern Ireland are exempt from MOT until they are four years old.

(AQW 36191/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Responsibility for vehicle registration and licensing now rests with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea. I have been advised that DVLA's solution to the differing MOT requirements between Northern Ireland and GB was to develop their system to determine when a vehicle is due its MOT based on the postcode of the registered keeper. Therefore, vehicles with a BT postcode will be prompted for an MOT after 4 years, with the remaining postcodes prompting after 3 years. Northern Ireland customers who purchase a GB registered vehicle which is aged between 3 and 4 years old will be unable to use the online relicensing facility, however, they are able to tax their vehicle over the counter in the Post Office.

In terms of ensuring vehicles brought into Northern Ireland are exempt from an MOT until they are four years old, the DVA conduct annual vehicle tests (MOT) in compliance with The Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. This Order provides DVA with the statutory powers to test vehicles from four years old. The Agency does not conduct tests on vehicles less than four years old as it has no powers to do so.

DVA's vehicle test booking system will prevent the booking of a vehicle that is not due an annual test and the system will inform the customer accordingly. DVA also publishes the vehicle test due dates on its test application forms and online.

Mr Brady asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the problems encountered in relation to the taxation of vehicles since this function was transferred to Swansea.

(AQW 36317/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As a result of the transfer of vehicle registration and licensing services to the DVLA in Swansea, some transitional issues emerged which affected customers in the North.

I wrote to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Robert Goodwill MP, on 13 August 2014, on behalf of local customers to express my disappointment that the level of service provided by DVLA was not of the high standard expected here.

In response to my letter, Claire Perry MP replied confirming that she was aware that there were issues with a small number of records resulting from the migration of the information, reassuring me that these would be rectified as a matter of priority.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment, if a farmer has all groups/categories on their drivers licence, whether they are required to have a Certificate of Professional Competence to move their own animals from (i) farm-to-farm; (ii) farm-to-mart; and (iii) mart-to-farm.

(AQW 36396/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver Certificate of Professional Competence (Driver CPC) requirements were introduced throughout Europe by EU Directive 2003/59. The Directive was transposed into UK law by The Vehicle Drivers (Certificates of Professional Competence) Regulations 2007, and took effect in September 2008 for category D1 and D (bus) drivers and in September 2009 for category C1 and C (lorry) drivers.

Article 2 of the Directive sets out the exemptions, however, the Directive does not exempt farmers or agricultural vehicles from the requirements to hold a Driver CPC.

I am aware that the European Commission is reviewing the Directive and as part of the review process a number of key stakeholders, including the National Farmers' Union, took part in discussions on the effectiveness of implementation in October 2013. As a result, the UK response to the Commission called for clarity about what driving activity is intended to be in scope and for further detail in relation to the exemptions set out in Article 2, referring to the requests from the agricultural sector.

The conclusion of the review is still awaited. Therefore in the circumstances outlined above, there is no current exemption for farmers.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on investigations into possible habitat destruction at the Second Commons in Donaghadee.

(AQW 36443/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Following several reports over recent weeks of vegetation clearance at the Commons, Donaghadee, from concerned members of the public, community groups and elected representatives, scientific staff from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) carried out site visits at The Commons, Donaghadee on the 28 August 2014 and on 22 September 2014.

The Commons at Donaghadee is adjacent to Outer Ards Area of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI) which was declared on 23 December 2002.

ASSIs are afforded legal protection against specified operations or activities that could be damaging to the ASSI scientific features for which the site was declared.

Following the two site visits, NIEA scientific staff were satisfied that the vegetation clearance lay outwith the designated ASSI.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Rathlin 1 well is subject to cement bond logging oversight by his Department; and whether any future wells will be subject to cement bond logging regulation.

(AQW 36501/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE Planning do not have the remit to regulate cement bond logging. Regulation of any cement bond logging undertaken at a well would fall to the Health and Safety Executive and DETI.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what measures have been (i) considered; and (ii) implemented following the Better Regulation consultation.

(AQW 36578/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In May 2013, my Department published a consultation paper on "Proposals for an Environmental Better Regulation Bill". The key legislative measures proposed in the paper were to provide for an integrated environmental permitting regime and to rationalise the powers of entry associated with environmental inspection and investigation. Together these measures will provide a simpler and more streamlined regulatory regime and ease the administrative and compliance burden on Northern Ireland businesses.

My Department has taken into account the comments received on its proposals and has been working with key stakeholders to finalise the draft Environmental Better Regulation Bill. The Bill is currently at an advanced stage of drafting and, subject to the approval of the Northern Ireland Executive, should be introduced to the Northern Ireland Assembly during its current mandate.

My Department has also been engaged in the initial scoping of options for the subordinate legislation needed to give the Bill practical effect.

In addition, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) has been developing Prosperity Agreements; a new tool to make it easy for responsible companies to do good business. They are voluntary agreements through which NIEA and an organisation can explore opportunities for reducing environment and heritage impacts in ways that create prosperity and well-being.

The likely outcomes for businesses will include improved service from NIEA, reducing the need to deal individually with different parts of the Agency in an un-coordinated way or having to spend too much time on process and not enough time on outcomes. Prosperity Agreements will entrench minimum compliance and allow business to work with the NIEA on opportunities that exist to create a better environment and a stronger economy.

I launched the first Prosperity Agreement on 21 August 2014 with Linden Foods and Linergy and more are expected over the next year.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the 2014/15 pay scales for (i) Professional and Technical Officers; (ii) Recruitment Agency Staff; (iii) Curatorial Grade D; (iv) Higher Scientific Officers; (v) Senior Scientific Officers; and (vi) Principal Scientific Officers.

(AQW 36594/11-15)

Mr Durkan: NICS pay and grading is negotiated centrally by DFP. Management and Trade Union Sides are currently engaged in negotiations on the terms of the 2014 pay offer to Non Industrial staff. Therefore the information provided is based on the current pay scales for the period 1 August 2012 to 31 July 2014 and set out in attached table. Comprehensive information on NICS pay is also available from the DFP pay website www.dfpni.gov.uk/pay.

NICS Grade	Pay scale effective from 1 August 2014

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what is the process to have a path designated as a public right of way; and what criteria is used to judge an application for such a designation.

(AQW 36734/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Responsibility for the assertion, protection and maintenance of public rights of way lies with the local council under Article 3 of the Access to the Countryside (NI) Order 1983 (the Order). Public rights of way are established under common law. They exist, whether designated or not designated.

A public path can also be created by agreement under Article 11 of the Order or, where it appears to a district council that there is such a need and subject to confirmation by the Department, under Article 12 through the use of compulsory powers. Both Articles include provision for the creation of a public right of way where appropriate.

There is no description of the process or criteria for assertion of a public right of way within this legislation. The Department has provided guidance notes on the law, practices and procedures in Northern Ireland in "A guide to public rights of way and access to the countryside", more commonly referred to as "the Red Book". This includes an explanation about how rights of way are established under common law and how a council can assert a public right of way. Section 4 of the Red Book is: Asserting and recording public rights of way. This includes the type of evidence a council may seek to make a case for a formal assertion. ## Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether a letter dated 2 February 2012 from Turkington Holdings Ltd was received by his Department and, if so, (i) what action resulted; and (ii) did a reply issue.

(AQW 28360/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): A letter dated 2 February 2012 from Turkington Holdings Ltd was not received by the Department.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what action he intends to take in relation to practices by the Royal Bank of Scotland's Global Restructuring Group in exposing their customers to aggressive Vulture Funds who are bidding for the disposal of Ulster Bank debts.

(AQW 35346/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am meeting with representatives from the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Ulster Bank in the near future to discuss RBS Capital Resolution's strategy for addressing impaired loans in the Ulster Bank.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the outcome of his meeting with the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on 4 December 2013 and in particular his concerns that similar practices of the Royal Bank of Scotland's Global Restructuring Group were occurring in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 35348/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I used the meeting with the Financial Secretary to the Treasury to raise a number of concerns I had about the Ulster Bank. These included the implications of the Government Review of RBS for the future of the Ulster bank, which had yet to be published at that time, and the concerns raised by Lawrence Tomlinson.

In terms of the latter, I await the outcome of an ongoing FCA review, which is expected in early 2015.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what cuts will be made to his budget as a result of the lack of agreement on Welfare Reform.

(AQW 35402/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The quantum of the total cut to the DFP budget for 2014-15 is yet to be confirmed.

As part of June monitoring, DFP was required to surrender £3.2m to contribute to the financial pressures faced by the Executive. At least a further £3.6m will be required in October monitoring, representing an overall 4.4% reduction to the DFP budget.

In order to deliver these reductions, the Department has critically reviewed all vacancies and has also reduced other areas of uncommitted expenditure. This will impact principally on the services delivered to other departments by Enterprise Shared Services.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the differences in predefined minimum/maximum salary scales for employees of the Northern Ireland Civil Service compared to their counterparts in the rest of the UK; and (ii) whether his Department plans to implement regional pay.

(AQW 35558/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I attach a link to the NISRA publication Statistical Bulletin: Pay Statistics for the Northern Ireland Civil Service 2013 which show the minimum and maximum pay points of the payscale for each general service grade from AA to Grade 6 in the NICS, the Scottish Government, and various UK Departments.

The Department for Finance and Personnel currently has no plans to implement regional pay.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current estimated population of the Greater Belfast area, for the purposes of the designation of a Travel to Work Area.

(AQW 35633/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The latest estimate of the population of the Belfast Travel to Work Area, relating to June 2013, was 903,500 persons.

Background Note

1. The Northern Ireland mid-year population estimate relates to the usually resident population of Northern Ireland including Her Majesty's Forces stationed here. Most recently, mid-2013 population estimates were published on 26 June 2014.
2. The current 11 Travel to Work Areas in Northern Ireland were defined in 2007 using 2001 Census information on home and work addresses. Travel to Work Areas are continuous groups of Super Output Areas.
3. The Belfast Travel to Work Area contains the whole of Ards, Belfast, Carrickfergus, Castlereagh, Newtownabbey and North Down Local Government Districts, as well as a minor part of Banbridge Local Government District and major parts of Antrim, Down, Larne and Lisburn Local Government Districts. Population estimates by Super Output Area have been used to derive the population estimate for the Belfast Travel to Work Area.
4. The Office for National Statistics is drawing up plans to create updated UK Travel to Work Areas using commuting flow data from the 2011 Census. It is intended that the updated Travel to Work Areas will be published in 2015.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people were economically inactive in each of the last three years, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 35675/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Estimates of the number of people who are economically inactive by constituency are shown in the attached table.

Estimates are based on the Labour Force Survey, a sample survey, and are therefore subject to sampling variability.

Table: Number of people who are economically inactive (aged 16-64) by Assembly Area

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the Rates Revaluation Programme.
(AQW 35699/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The revaluation project remains on target to deliver new rateable values that will be used in non domestic rate bills from 1 April 2015 onwards. Land & Property Services intend to provide ratepayers with early sight of the individual values when they are released on the Department's website in early November 2014.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether his Department will introduce rates relief or provide a rebate for rate payers who, at this time of economic challenge, are burdened with control of derelict properties in towns and villages where the levels of social deprivation, unemployment and economic inactivity are very high.
(AQW 35705/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Only properties that appear in the Valuation List fall liable for rates. If a property is derelict and incapable of beneficial occupation it will not be in the Valuation List and therefore rates will not be payable.

Occupiers of premises adjacent to derelict properties can at any point submit an application to the District Valuer in LPS to review their rateable value, if they consider the rateable value of their property to be adversely affected by neighbouring derelict properties. The District Valuer will review each situation on a case by case basis to determine if any adjustment to the rateable value is warranted.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the findings of his Department's inquiry into alleged political interference of the Board of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.
(AQW 35728/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This is not a matter for the Department of Finance & Personnel.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) when the report on the conduct of the Minister of Social Development's Special Advisor will be published; (ii) whether the findings of the report will be shared with Mrs Jenny Palmer; and (iii) the reasons for the delay in publishing the report.

Mr Hamilton: This is not a matter for the Department of Finance & Personnel.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQO 6287/11-15, for an update on the equal pay claim from the Northern Ireland Office and the administrative staff of the PSNI.
(AQW 35745/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As I have previously stated, it has been clearly established that there is no valid equal pay claim upon which to base a settlement for this group. However, I hope that the paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before the summer recognises the moral argument put forward and will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff. I now await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion since my recommendation and any expenditure will require their agreement. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the specific circumstances in which a ratepayer may be entitled to partial or full rate relief.
(AQW 35748/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The award of Rate Relief is dependent on a number of factors (or specific circumstances). These can include:

- household income;
- the number of dependants in a household; and
- the claimant's weekly rating liability.

It is therefore difficult to give exact situations where customers will be entitled to either full or partial awards of Rate Relief.

Rate Relief is only awarded after a customer's eligibility for Housing Benefit has been assessed and is a means to provide assistance to those who may not be entitled to receive full Housing Benefit.

The parameters/circumstances for determining Housing Benefit and Rate Relief are set by legislation.

More information can be found at www.nidirect.gov.uk/housing-benefit-rate-relief or by contacting LPS on 0300 200 7802.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, since the inception of the Small Business Rates Relief Scheme, to detail (i) the number of small businesses that have benefited from the scheme in South Down; and (ii) how much the scheme has saved businesses in South Down.

(AQW 35832/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information on the number of small businesses that have benefited from the Small Business Rate Relief scheme in the South Down Constituency is not available. However, since the scheme began in April 2010 the number of non-domestic properties that have benefitted in the Banbridge, Down and Newry & Mourne Council areas, and the amount by which those properties benefited, is provided in the table overleaf.

District Council	Number of Non-Domestic Properties that Benefited from SBRR since April 2010	Amount of SBRR
Banbridge	829	£1,595,638
Down	1,418	£2,717,294
Newry & Mourne	1,872	£3,422,202

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35099/11-15, for an update on the progress of his Department's proposed settlement on the issue of Equal Pay for PSNI and Northern Ireland Office staff, following the circulation of the proposal to the Executive.

(AQW 35929/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As I have previously stated, it has been clearly established that there is no valid equal pay claim upon which to base a settlement for this group, so this is not an 'equal pay issue'. The recommendation and associated expenditure set out in the paper I circulated to Ministerial colleagues before the summer requires their approval, but has not yet been brought forward for discussion. The matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of people that have received (i) partial; and (ii) full rate relief, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 35989/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The number of people who were in receipt of (i) partial; and (ii) full rate relief, as at 31st March in each of the last five years is shown in the table below.

Year	Number of People Receiving Rate Relief at 31st March Each Year from 2010 to 2014
	Partial Rate Relief	Full Rate Relief
2010	11,248	334
2011	14,359	463
2012	16,238	518
2013	17,002	559
2014	16,920	587

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what departmental services he has made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36017/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department has made the following services available to the public via the post office network:

- Members of the public are able to pay their rates bills in Post Offices that have the Payzone Service. Rates can be paid in full in one payment to avail of a four per cent discount or by instalments.
- The Post Office is also a Go ON NI partner and uses the Go ON database of internet access points and libraries as part of the Get Connected campaign. Members of the public can ask in the Post Office where they can access the web and Post Office staff will use the database to advise them of the three nearest access points.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the rationale for charging a tenant, as opposed to the landlord, rates on property valued over £150,000.

(AQW 36037/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The domestic rating system has developed and is long established as a tax on the occupier however the owner or landlord is normally liable for rates in respect of lower value rental properties. This has been a feature of the Northern Ireland rating system for over 85 years.

A valuation limit is applied because the evidence shows that collection and recovery difficulties tend to occur in lower value rented properties because as a rule they are occupied by a more transient population. The general principle that the occupant is liable remains for higher value properties.

The valuation threshold had to be changed when all domestic properties were revalued in 2007 on a capital value basis. The setting of the £150,000 threshold was informed by a consultation undertaken by DFP in 2006, which was based on a study undertaken by the Institute of Revenues, Rating and Valuation in 2005. Evidence for the continuing transient nature of private rented housing in Northern Ireland was obtained from Northern Ireland Statistical Research Agency's Continuous Household Survey.

Having said all of this, I have asked my officials to review the whole question of landlord liability next year, as the current arrangements can cause confusion.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in relation to apartment reform, how many times has the Apartments Interdepartmental Implementation Group met.

(AQW 36043/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Apartments Report Implementation Group has met on two occasions in full plenary session. In addition there have been numerous bilateral exchanges between the departments represented, whether by correspondence or by separate meetings between departments directly affected by a particular aspect of the relevant recommendations.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people have (i) applied for; and (ii) are in receipt of Lone Pension Allowance in North Down, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36076/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Lone Pensioner Allowance is administered jointly by Land & Property Services (LPS) and Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE).

The number of applications and recipients of Lone Pensioner Allowance administered by LPS in the North Down District Council area is given in the table overleaf for each of the last five financial years. Information on the number of NIHE applications and recipients broken down by district council is not available.

Number of Applications and Recipients of LPS-administrated LPA in North Down DC from 2009/10 to 2013/14

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

Number of Recipients	1,783	1,900	1,989	2,019	2,080

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of incorrect rating valuations on commercial properties made by Land and Property Services, that were later rectified and new bills issued, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36085/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Rate bills are issued by Land & Property Services (LPS) at the beginning of each financial year. Supplementary bills are issued regularly as a consequence of in-year changes. These changes include: physical alterations to a property such as an extension, subdivision or demolition of part or the whole of a property; occupier changes; or changes to the valuation of a property following a challenge.

LPS billing systems do not distinguish the historic reason for each supplementary bill issued in-year. It is, therefore, not possible to provide the detail requested.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the local consultants involved in the sale of the National Asset Management Agency's Northern Ireland debt portfolio to Cerberus Capital Management.

(AQW 36095/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department is not responsible for NAMA which is an agency of the Irish Government. I therefore do not hold this information.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the future of companies whose borrowings lie within the Project Achill portfolio, should it be sold by Ulster bank to external financial interests.

(AQW 36097/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I am due to meet with Senior Management in the Ulster Bank in the near future to discuss the bank's approach to loan portfolio disposals and the implications of that for debtors.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what measures he has put in place to prevent disbarred company directors from serving on boards and committees which administer public funds.

(AQW 36159/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: When recruiting for new members to serve on the boards or committees of DFP-sponsored bodies, applicants will be asked to provide details of any probity issues that could call into question their own reputation and/or damage the reputation of the body to which they are applying. This would include reference to disbarred company directors.

The selection panel will then fully explore and assess these issues at interview. If the applicant fails to provide a satisfactory response and demonstrate a clear commitment to the principles of public life, he or she will be judged not suitable for appointment.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the schedule of financial penalties that will result from the failure to implement Welfare Reform, over the next five years.

(AQW 36175/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Chief Secretary has confirmed that the cost of not implementing welfare reform will be £87 million this year and £114 million next year. This will increase significantly over time. DSD estimates from January suggest that the cost could rise to £343 million per annum by 2018-19.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps are being taken to ensure that specific companies are not referred to when tender documentation is prepared by the Central Procurement Directorate.

(AQW 36208/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) prepares its tender documentation in accordance with the Public Contracts Regulations. The Regulations set out the rules which contracting authorities must follow when describing technical specifications. Contracting authorities are required to specify requirements in generic technical or performance terms. They must not incorporate technical specifications which refer to a specific company, material or goods of a specific make or source which has the effect of favouring or eliminating particular suppliers.

There can be exceptions to this obligation where the subject of the contract makes the use of such references indispensable, or the subject of the contract cannot otherwise be described by reference to technical specifications which are sufficiently precise and intelligible to all suppliers. However, where this exception applies, any such references in the technical specification must be accompanied by the words "or equivalent".

Where technical specifications are prepared for departments by external consultants, CPD requires them to likewise comply with the Regulations. CPD has introduced a requirement that consultants must undertake robust quality assurance checks to verify that specific companies have not been named inappropriately, before CPD accepts documentation prepared by them for inclusion within tender competitions. Departmental Jobs

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current number of jobs in each Department, broken down by (i) constituency; and (ii) each local government district.

(AQW 36221/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The information requested, based on the most recent available data at 1 January 2014, is set out in the attached tables.

Notes:

Data is not held on the number of jobs in each Department. Data is presented by headcount (number of staff in post).

Excludes NICS staff on career break.

Data was sourced from HRConnect and additional DOJ databases as at 1st January 2014.

The local government districts (district council areas) presented precede Local Government Reform and are in line with the data source date.

The local government districts (district council areas) presented are those in which staff posts are located.

A small number of staff had invalid or missing constituency data (5 & 6, respectively); district council area data was missing for 62 staff.

'Other' denotes staff in the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland, the Office of the Attorney General for Northern Ireland, staff of the Assembly Ombudsman for Northern Ireland / The Northern Ireland Commissioner for Complaints, and the Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry Team.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the recommendations his Department have made to the UK Government and NI Executive regarding the devolution of additional taxes and/or duties.

(AQW 36232/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Officials are currently taking this work forward and the recommendations from this analysis should be put to Northern Ireland Executive and Government Ministers in the coming months.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of small businesses which have qualified for the Small Business Rate Relief Scheme in East Londonderry, in each of the last four years.

(AQW 36234/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Information on the number of small businesses that have qualified for the Small Business Rate Relief scheme in the East Londonderry Constituency is not available. However, since the scheme began in April 2010 the number of non-domestic properties that have benefitted in the Coleraine, Derry and Limavady District Council areas in each of the last four years is provided in the table below.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much was allocated in the block grant from Westminster and how much was spent, broken down by Department, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36235/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The tables in Annex A detail HM Treasury control totals for Resource and Capital DEL and provide detail of outturn against Final Plan for each of the last five years. In interpreting this information, it should be noted that since 2011-12 the Budget Exchange Scheme has allowed the Executive to carry forward underspends up to an agreed cap of 0.6 per cent on Resource DEL and 1.5 per cent on Capital DEL. The Department of Justice is subject to separate end of year flexibility arrangements.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what analysis his Department has made concerning the impact on the local economy of the Scottish Executive setting a different rate of Corporation Tax to the rest of the UK as part of a potential devolution settlement.

(AQW 36283/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department has not carried out any specific analysis in relation to this matter.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the outstanding arrears payable on domestic properties in Belfast; and (ii) how many properties this effects.

(AQW 36310/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: At 31st March 2014, there was (i) a debt balance of £16,365,426 in Belfast District Council relating to (ii) 15,364 domestic properties.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many domestic properties in Belfast are currently regarded as empty and subject to the payment of rates; and of these, what percentage have been issued a rates bill.

(AQW 36313/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Since the introduction of Rating of Empty Homes in October 2011, a vacant domestic property is treated the same as an occupied domestic property for rating purposes. There is no longer an onus or any financial advantage to a ratepayer to inform LPS that their property is vacant. Bearing this in mind, at the end of August 2014 a total of 4,043 vacant domestic properties in the Belfast City Council area had a rating assessment raised for 2014/15. At the end of August 2014, bills had been issued in respect of 80% of these properties.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many domestic properties in Belfast have (i) application-based; and (ii) automatic exclusions from the payment of rates.

(AQW 36314/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Since the 1st October 2011 introduction of Rating of Empty Homes, rates are payable on all vacant property unless certain conditions exist. Rating of Empty Homes legislation allows for exclusion by application only, unless the empty property is owned by the company or persons that built it. As at 31 August 2014, (i) 1,947 vacant domestic properties had application-based exclusions and (ii) 1,716 vacant domestic properties had automatic exclusions. Exclusions are not applied to occupied properties.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of domestic properties in Belfast where ownership is unknown or unclear; and whether the details of such properties have been published.

(AQW 36315/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As at 31st August 2014, in the Belfast District Council area, there were a total of 349 domestic properties with a rating liability where the ownership had not yet been established.

The details of these properties have not been published.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the arrangements for ensuring rates are collected on empty domestic properties; and how many court enforcement actions were undertaken last year in (a) Belfast; and (b) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 36316/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Since the introduction of Rating of Empty Homes legislation in October 2011, rates are payable on all domestic properties, including properties that are vacant. Land & Property Services (LPS) will pursue the collection of rates for vacant properties through the normal rating cycle which can mean the pursuit of legal (Court) action to recover outstanding debt.

Where a ratepayer fails to pay their bill, LPS will issue a reminder notice requesting immediate payment. Ratepayers are urged to make contact to discuss their circumstances and agree payment arrangements if they are experiencing financial difficulties. If a payment or an arrangement is not made, LPS will issue a Court process. In 2013/14, a total of 3,229 Court processes were issued across Northern Ireland for vacant domestic properties. Of these, 648 were in the Belfast City Council area.

Where a ratepayer continues to refuse to make payment, the debt will be secured in Court. This allows the debt to be collected through the Enforcement of Judgements Office (EJO). In 2013/14, a total of 1,461 Decrees were awarded for vacant domestic properties across Northern Ireland. Of these, 386 were in the Belfast City Council area.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on equal pay for PSNI and former Northern Ireland Office staff.

(AQW 36362/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I refer you to my written answer provided in response to AQO 6661/11-15 on 23rd September, which provides an update relating to this issue.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) how much of the £500m which was budgeted for the A5 road was spent and to provide a breakdown of this expenditure; and (ii) how much of the £500m was reallocated and to provide details of where this money was reallocated.

(AQW 36380/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: During the first three years of the current Budget period, Capital DEL expenditure on the A5 road scheme was £15 million (2011-12), £16 million (2012-13) and £9.6 million (2013-14). The Minister for Regional Development would be better placed to provide a breakdown of this expenditure.

The table attached at Annex A details the changes in funding set aside for the A5 scheme during the course of the current Budget period. Details of all allocations are detailed in the Ministerial Statements to the Assembly following each relevant Budget exercise or monitoring round.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current number of vacant domestic properties, where an owner has not been traced for the purposes of the payment of rates.

(AQW 36411/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As at 31st August 2014, there were 2,637 vacant domestic properties with a rating liability where ownership had not been established for the purposes of the payment of rates.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much Annually Managed Expenditure is taken up by Pension Credit. (AQW 36446/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Provisional Outturn reported expenditure on Pension Credit in 2013-14 of £320 million. The 2014-15 Annually Managed Expenditure opening budget provision for Pension Credit is £314.3 million.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much Annually Managed Expenditure is taken up by Working Tax Credit.

(AQW 36447/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC) administers the Working Tax Credit for Northern Ireland and the spend is not included in the NI Annually Managed Expenditure figurework. The Working Tax Credit, along with some other tax credits, is paid by HMRC directly to eligible NI claimants. This expenditure is in addition to the DEL and AME budget allocation to Northern Ireland.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether, since coming to office, he has issued any 'ministerial directions'; and if so, to detail (i) when; and (ii) in respect of what subject matters.

(AQW 36462/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have not issued any ministerial directions.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the amount of capital spend returned by each Department in the last year.

Mr Hamilton: Through the in-year monitoring process departments declared capital reduced requirements of £181.6 million in 2013-14 and £224.0 million to date in 2014-15. The departmental breakdown of this is detailed in the attached table.

It should be noted that not all reduced requirements relate to capital spend returned. Reduced requirements are also declared when additional EU income is recognised or additional asset disposals are recorded.

The in-year monitoring process provides a formal system for reviewing spending plans and priorities for each financial year in light of the most up to date position. It provides the Executive with an opportunity to re-direct any surplus resources to other priorities. This includes any reduced requirements surrendered by departments.

Full details of reduced requirements and allocations are detailed in my Statement to the Assembly that follow each monitoring round.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there has been an assessment made of the additional cost pressures that will be created through the implementation of Welfare Reform.

(AQW 35493/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): My Department has engaged with officials in the Department for Social Development to assess the financial implications for passported benefits under Universal Credit. Indications are that this would be broadly cost neutral. In line with normal budgetary planning processes my officials will continue to liaise with their counterparts in the Department for Social Development and other Departments as appropriate to consider any potential budgetary pressures.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the income received from private consultations, operations and procedures, in the last three years.

(AQW 35798/11-15)

Mr Poots: Income received from Private Patients as recorded in HSC Trust financial accounts, in each of the last three years, is set in the table below.

	2013/14 £'000	2012/13 £'000	2011/12 £'000
Total	4,883	5,308	4,956

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the barriers faced in recruiting carers in West Tyrone; and (ii) the measures being taken by his Department to overcome these barriers, particularly in the Omagh and Strabane districts.

(AQW 35857/11-15)

Mr Poots: Homecare services in West Tyrone are delivered via its in-house service and six independent sector homecare provider agencies.

1. The Western Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the in-house domiciliary care service currently has no unfilled vacancies. In accordance with the objectives of Transforming Your Care, the Western Trust continues to progress the reform of its in-house homecare service to ensure optimum homecare capacity is available.

With six independent sector homecare providers operating in West Tyrone, the locality has a relatively high concentration of providers.
2. Recruitment issues are a matter for individual Health and Social Care Trusts. At present demand for homecare services exceeds the Western Trust's funded budget. This is the position across Northern Ireland not just in Tyrone. In such circumstances there will always be individual cases which will present a challenge in meeting the level of assessed need within the resources available. The Trust is in discussions with the Local Commissioning Group to explore how this demographic growth pressure might be addressed through the targeting of additional investment.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average cost per mobilisation for the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service in (i) 2010/11; (ii) 2011/12; (iii) 2012/13; and (iv) 2013/14.

(AQW 35858/11-15)

Mr Poots: The average cost per mobilisation for the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service over the last four years is set out in the table below.

Year	Cost of Mobilisation
10/11	£2,521
11/12	£2,797
13/14	£3,102

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service call-outs were due to unwanted fire signals in (i) 2010/11; (ii) 2011/12; (iii) 2012/13; and (iv) 2013/14.

(AQW 35859/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of mobilisations to unwanted fire signals by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue over the last four years is set out in the table below.

Year	Unwanted Fire Signals
10/11	6,868
11/12	7,846
13/14	7,699

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much money has been recouped from owners of properties that repeatedly mobilise the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service for unwanted fire signals in (i) 2010/11; (ii) 2011/12; (iii) 2012/13; (iv) 2013/14.

(AQW 35860/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service do not recoup the costs of responding to repeat unwanted fire signals.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 35028/11-15, why the information on the General Practitioner Prescription List is not available in light of the answer provided to AQW 2379/10.

(AQW 35870/11-15)

Mr Poots: A General Practitioner can prescribe any licensed drug to a patient as long as it is not included in Schedule 1 of the Health and Personal Social Services (General Medical Services Contracts) (Prescription of Drugs Etc) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2004 – commonly known as the “prohibited list”. This list has not been amended since the Regulations were made in 2004.

The answer to AQ 2379/10 was based on the regional system in place for the prescribing of specialist medicines in Northern Ireland. The prescribing of these medicines is determined by a red and amber ‘traffic light’ system. Drugs considered more appropriate to be prescribed by a hospital consultant are maintained on a ‘red’ list. Where patient care is shared between hospital consultants and GPs, the drugs are maintained on an ‘amber’ list. The list is advisory, and does not enforce boundaries as to who can actually prescribe particular medicines.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of (i) the payment of supplier invoices by Health and Social Care Trusts; (ii) the current backlog of unprocessed invoices; and (iii) the consequences of the current backlog to patients and future relations between suppliers and Trusts.

(AQW 35871/11-15)

Mr Poots:

1. The average time taken by each Health and Social Care Trust between being invoiced by a supplier and making a payment to the supplier is shown in the table below.

	Average days taken in 2014/15 (to end of August) by Trust to pay invoice
Belfast	22.8
South Eastern	22.0
Northern	18.8
Western	23.4
Southern	13.0
NI Ambulance Service	23.2

2. The current backlog of unpaid invoices is shown in the table below, with a comparison with the backlog as at 30 April 2014:

HSC Trust	Invoice Backlog inherited by BSO
	Volume of Invoices at 30 April 2014	Volume of invoices at 15 September 2014.
Belfast	14,767	1,958
Northern	4,490	438
Western	5,649	783
Ambulance Service	864	147

HSC Trust	Invoice Backlog inherited by BSO
	Volume of Invoices at 30 April 2014	Volume of invoices at 15 September 2014.
Total	25,770	3,326

The responsibility for the payment of Southern and South Eastern invoices has only recently transitioned to the BSO Accounts Payable Shared Service Centre. Southern and South Eastern invoices were not part of the original backlog as at 30 April 2014 and are not therefore included in the table for comparative purposes.

3. The BSO and HSC trusts are working closely with suppliers to minimise the impact of these issues for suppliers and patients. This has included the establishment of a dedicated Backlog Team to deal with unpaid invoices.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average time taken by each Health and Social Care Trust between being invoiced by a supplier and the supplier receiving payment.

(AQW 35872/11-15)

Mr Poots: The average time taken by each Health and Social Care Trust between being invoiced by a supplier and making a payment to the supplier is shown in the table below.

	Average days taken in 2014/15 (to end of August) by Trust to pay invoice
Belfast	22.8
South Eastern	22.0
Northern	18.8
Western	23.4
Southern	13.0

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service will publish and implement the job evaluation for manual technicians.

(AQW 35905/11-15)

Mr Poots: NIFRS expect the Job Evaluations for Manual Technicians to be completed in early 2015. A decision on timetable for publication and implementation will be taken thereafter.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the reasons why the Stroke Implementation Management System is not yet being employed to support service development, research and audit, despite the recommendation published in his Department's report, 'Improving Stroke Services in Northern Ireland (2008)', that it would be in use by 31 March 2010.

(AQW 35919/11-15)

Mr Poots: The implementation plan for the recommendations from the Stroke Strategy stipulated that the development of a business case for a stroke information system would follow agreement of a model for thrombolysis and re-organisation of Stroke Services. The system has now been piloted in the Southern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. Following successful evaluation of the pilot, the system is now ready for regional implementation. Stroke co-ordinators will be working within HSC Trusts to ensure implementation and update within the next twelve months.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the actions he intends to take to increase the percentage of stroke patients who are admitted directly to a Stroke Unit from the current figure of 40 per cent provided by the Stroke Association to the 100 per cent target which, according to his Department's report, 'Improving Stroke Services in Northern Ireland (2008)', should have been achieved by 31 March 2012; and (ii) his assessment of the impact the diversion of stroke patients directly to Stroke Units would have in terms of alleviating the documented pressures on Emergency Departments.

(AQW 35920/11-15)

Mr Poots: The challenging public expenditure climate since the publication of the Stroke Strategy has led to a reduction in resources for the implementation of its 14 recommendations. This has resulted in delay in implementation of the full strategy including Recommendation 5 which focussed on admission of patients to stroke beds. In order to make further progress, this issue has been reflected in my Department's Cardiovascular Service Framework which has set a key performance indicator (KPI) to ensure that, by March 2015, 80% of acute stroke admissions will be admitted to a Stroke Unit, rising to 90% by March 2017.

Performance against this indicator will be monitored by the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency. Currently 45% of emergency admissions for stroke were admitted to Stroke Units as their ward of first admission. Not all patients can be admitted directly to a Stroke Unit; some patients need to be admitted to Intensive Care Units, High Dependency Units and Coronary Care Units for stabilisation.

Approximately 2,700 emergency admissions to hospital are linked to Stroke. Early assessment and diagnosis, including appropriate brain imaging and assessment by the stroke team, is carried out in the Emergency Department. Initial assessment of patients in the Emergency Department will continue but this will be kept under review, particularly as efforts are made to increase the proportion of patients who are admitted to stroke units as the ward of first assessment. It is anticipated this could result in a positive impact on Emergency Department pressures.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps his Department is taking to (i) increase the number of families choosing to foster children; and (ii) to make the process from application to attainment as efficient as possible.

(AQW 35947/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) Recruitment of foster carers is a continual activity and is based on the ability of prospective foster carers to match and build a relationship with the children and young people who require foster care. At the end of June 2014 there were 2146 foster carers in Northern Ireland. The Regional Adoption and Fostering Service (RAFS) supports local Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts, in the recruitment, assessment and training of foster carers, maintains an overview of the overall fostering position and undertakes recruitment drives as required. In addition, Fostering Network (NI), on behalf of the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB), provides a dedicated helpline for foster carers and runs annual recruitment campaigns. The British Association for Adoption and Fostering (BAAF) also receives funding from the HSCB to provide advice, consultancy services and training for prospective foster carers and professionals in Northern Ireland. Furthermore, under Transforming Your Care, additional funding has been made available to put in place professional foster care schemes for the most difficult to place children.
- (ii) Currently the HSCB and HSC Trusts are reviewing fostering services which will identify areas of need and enable better targeting of recruitment. This has the potential to reduce the time spent on processing applications in respect of potential foster carers. Currently, the expected timeframe for the completion of assessments is between 4 and 6 months. Also, my Department is currently finalising new Fostering Regulations which, among other things, will enable independent fostering agencies to assess their own foster parents, without requiring a further assessment by a Health and Social Care Trust, as is currently the case. This will shorten the process for those who apply to become foster carers through independent fostering agencies. The new Regulations will also bring fostering agencies within the scope of inspection and regulation by the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the commissioning arrangements and associated costs for Health and Social Care Trusts to utilise private healthcare firms when Trusts have not reached contracted volumes.

(AQW 35995/11-15)

Mr Poots: Commissioning health and social care services is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care Board. The Board has advised that it does not fund Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts to utilise private healthcare firms when Trusts have not reached contracted volumes.

However, each year the Board agrees with each HSC Trust what additional action is needed in those specialties or service areas where a Trust's contracted capacity is not sufficient to ensure that elective access targets are met. This additional action normally represents proposals to secure additional activity which can be delivered either through extra sessions within the Trust, or through the transfer of patients to purchased capacity within the Independent Sector (IS).

In securing additional IS capacity, HSC Trusts are free to seek tenders and award contracts consistent with good procurement practice. To facilitate Trusts in securing IS capacity, the Board has established an IS Procurement Framework. I am advised by the Board that in 2013/14, the cost of procurement of elective care services from the IS was £66.9 million.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what departmental services he has made available to public via the post office network.

(AQW 36020/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department does not currently utilise post offices for the delivery of any health or social care services.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the estimated change in the number of people diagnosed with dementia between 2003 and 2013.

Mr Poots: The information requested is available for the period from 2006 to 2013, and is set out in the table below.

The information is drawn from the dementia register which was introduced in 2006/07 as part of the Quality and Outcomes Framework, when dementia was included as an area within the clinical domain.

Dementia Prevalence per 1,000 GP List Population

Year	Number on Dementia Register	List Size at January each year	Prevalence per 1,000 List Population
2004/05	No Dementia Register	1,796,033	N/A
2005/06	No Dementia Register	1,796,977	N/A
2006/07	9,550	1,814,308	5.26
2007/08	9,751	1,833,450	5.32
2008/09	9,971	1,852,027	5.38
2009/10	10,637	1,863,701	5.71
2010/11	11,246	1,882,678	5.97
2011/12	11,882	1,898,099	6.26
2012/13	12,278	1,909,338	6.43
2013/14	12,811	1,921,215	6.67

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 33808/11-15, to detail (i) the date that the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) will conduct the employee engagement survey designed to measure the level of job satisfaction and morale, given the NIFRS corporate business plan 2014/15 commits the organisation to completing this by December 2014; and (ii) whether staff in the Lisburn Headquarters will be included; and (iii) whether staff in service Headquarters will be provided with the survey results; and if so, when he expects the results to be published.

(AQW 36028/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS), in response to the financial challenges it faces in 2014/15, has decided to postpone the Employee Engagement Survey until 2015/16. No definitive timescales for the Survey have been agreed.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the required ratio of carers to dependants is being fulfilled in private care homes in North Antrim.

(AQW 36031/11-15)

Mr Poots: All nursing and residential care homes in both the statutory and private sectors are required to operate in compliance with minimum standards.

These standards require that at all times there must be enough staff with the appropriate skills to meet the assessed needs of the residents – taking into account the size and layout of the home, as well as the Statement of Purpose and fire safety requirements.

The Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) is responsible for the registration and inspection of nursing and residential care homes. RQIA provides guidance to registered homes on the minimum staffing levels they should maintain and, through inspection, ensures compliance with these levels.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he is aware of the work of Cloud Medical Imaging and their ability to centralise radiology images; and for his assessment of whether such a system could deliver benefits to the Health Service.

(AQW 36038/11-15)

Mr Poots: Northern Ireland has a central integrated system for accessing, storing and sharing imaging data, known as NIPACS. Cloud medical imaging is a new technology which uses wifi for access. It is likely that my Department's regional imaging review currently under way will investigate new systems and make recommendations, where necessary as to whether such systems could deliver benefits to the Health Service. However in the short term it is unlikely cloud medical imaging will be used within the current NIPACS contract.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) procurement; and (ii) ongoing contractual costs in relation to Picture Archiving and Communication Systems, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36039/11-15)

Mr Poots: NIPACS is a managed service regional revenue contract. The contract was procured by DHSSPS through competitive dialogue viz OJEU. There was no capital investment in the project. Three vendors received an invitation to participate and this was followed by a Trial and Final Best and Final Offer (BAFO).

The contract was awarded to Sectra Limited on 30th September 2008 for a ten year term and the option to extend for the following periods:

- a. for up to 4 years (Prime Extension Period); and
- b. by no more than 2 consecutive 6 month periods for a total of 12 months (Secondary Extension Period).

The ongoing contractual costs of the NIPACS contract are as follows:

Year	11/12*	12/13*	13/14*
Revenue costs £	2,465,250	3,157,501	3,270,558

Note: *Actual revenue payments including service penalty deductions

In addition to the regional NIPACS picture archiving service the Royal Victoria Hospital and Belfast City Hospital have legacy PACS systems which are both part of much larger separate PFI contracts on each site. It is not possible to provide the individual breakdown of the PACS components of the PFI Unity Charge.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what procurement procedures are in place in relation to Picture Archiving and Communication Systems across radiology imagery devices.

(AQW 36040/11-15)

Mr Poots: The procurement for Northern Ireland Picture Archiving and Communication Systems (PACS) was completed and a contract awarded in September 2008 for a minimum period of 10 years. This contract makes provision for extension of services up to 2022, and in that context, a procurement process is not currently required.

In addition to this, the Royal Victoria Hospital and Belfast City Hospital also have PACS systems which are part of separate PFI contracts between the Belfast Trust and the PFI suppliers. Renewal and replacement of the PACS is part of the overall contract in each case and these are due to expire in 2022 (RVH) and 2031 (BCH).

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many firefighters are stationed at Bangor Fire Station.

(AQW 36072/11-15)

Mr Poots: 43 fire fighting staff stationed at Bangor Fire Station, as follows:

Wholetime Firefighter

Watch Commander	4
Crew Commander	4
Firefighter	23
Total	31

Retained Firefighter

Watch Commander	1
Crew Commander	2
Firefighter	9
Total	12

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many firefighters are stationed at Holywood Fire Station.

(AQW 36073/11-15)

Mr Poots: 20 fire fighting staff are stationed at Holywood Fire Station, as follows:

Retained Firefighter

Watch Commander	1
Crew Commander	4
Firefighter	15
Total	20

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 34544/11-15, to provide a monthly breakdown of the number of renal transplant recipients who have been repatriated from Belfast to other units since April 2012.

(AQW 36082/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of renal transplant recipients repatriated from Belfast Trust broken down by month is not available.

Following a manual exercise carried out by Belfast HSC Trust, it was identified that there were 101 renal transplant recipients repatriated from the Belfast City Hospital transplant unit to sub-regional units between April 2012 and March 2014. These repatriations took place consistently over time, averaging one patient per week.

In order to provide the monthly breakdown, it would be necessary to carry out a further manual trawl of all patient notes. At present, resources are not available to undertake this activity.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the types of cancers that the Health Service can and cannot treat with Intensity Modulated Radio Therapy and Stereotactic Body Radio Therapy.

(AQW 36090/11-15)

Mr Poots: The decision whether to use IMRT (intensity modulated radiotherapy), stereotactic body radiotherapy (SBRT) or more conventional conformal treatment is a clinical decision. It is determined by a consultant oncologist on the basis of which treatment plan is most suitable for any individual patient, taking account of specific disease and anatomical factors.

IMRT is used routinely for radical treatment of head and neck cancers, lung cancers and prostate cancers. Other cancers (e.g. lower or upper gastrointestinal, gynaecological cancers) can also be treated using IMRT in cases where a clinician determines this would be clinically more beneficial than conventional conformal treatment.

Clinicians use SBRT, also known as stereotactic ablative radiotherapy (SABR), to treat small, well defined tumours that are deep within the body. They are most likely to use it for tumours in the lung, liver or pancreas. IMRT and SBRT are used to treat patients at the Belfast Cancer Centre.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what timescale has been set to incorporate the projects outlined for the Integrated Care Partnership.

(AQW 36114/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) is responsible for the overall coordination of Integrated Care Partnership (ICPs) implementation. The ICPs have put in place structures and processes to review current care provision against the commissioning specifications for each of the ICP priority areas with a view to identifying opportunities to address gaps in service provision and to improve care pathway integration.

Most ICPs submitted proposals to their Local Commissioning Group (LCGs) by the end of July 2014 and discussions have subsequently been ongoing between ICP leads and the LCGs to address implementation / service delivery issues. In some areas, discussions continue with LCGs to reach final agreement on the content of the ICP proposals.

ICPs continue to work to ensure that proposals can be implemented as soon as possible so that service users and carers will experience the benefits of enhanced integrated care. Decisions in respect of the current financial position will impact on the timescale for full implementation

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans are in place to make the Diabetes Education and Self Management for Ongoing and Newly Diagnosed (DESMOND) Structured Education Programme available in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area for people who have Type 2 Diabetes.

(AQW 36116/11-15)

Mr Poots: Within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, some Practice Nurses and Diabetic Specialist Nurses currently provide education for patients with Type 2 diabetes. The Diabetic Specialist Nursing resource is limited and therefore patient education is based on clinical need. In order to provide a wider self management approach in line with Transforming Your Care, Trust staff have worked in partnership with the Northern Diabetes Integrated Care Partnership to develop a revenue business case that would support the establishment of a sustainable internationally recognised model of structured education programme for patients with Type 2 diabetes - Diabetes Education and Self Management for Ongoing and Newly Diagnosed (DESMOND). A decision regarding the delivery of a patient education programme for people with Type 2 diabetes within the Northern HSC Trust area has not yet been determined as discussion is ongoing about the potential to adopt a regional uniform approach to procuring structured patient education programmes for people with Type 2 diabetes across Northern Ireland.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people living with (i) type 1; and (ii) type 2 diabetes, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36130/11-15)

Mr Poots: Under the Quality & Outcomes Framework (QOF) of the General Medical Services contract, the total number of GP-registered patients aged 17 and over diagnosed with diabetes mellitus is recorded. Though practices record 'type' of diabetes within their systems, the data download available to DHSSPS does not specify this diagnosis. The number of patients, aged 17 and over, on the QOF diabetes register in each Trust area is shown in table 1 below.

Please note that the figures are based on the GP practices located within each Trust area according to practice post code, and that patients may not reside in the same trust area. From 2011/12 practices 473 and 475 and have been included in Southern Trust as this is where they have traditionally been managed, though their postcode would otherwise place them in South Eastern Trust area.

Register sizes are taken from the Payment Calculation and Analysis System (PCAS) as at National Prevalence Day, 31 March each year.

Care should be taken when looking at trends in prevalence over time, as year-on-year changes in the size of QOF registers can be influenced by various factors including: changes in prevalence of the condition within the population; demographic changes, such as an ageing population; and improvements in case finding by practices.

Table 1: Patients on Diabetes Mellitus register in GP practices located in Trust area

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why there is not a diabetes education programme in place in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36131/11-15)

Mr Poots: In 2013 as part of developing an expert patient model, the Northern Health and Social Care Trust Diabetes Service introduced an internationally recognised structured education programme for adults with Type 1 diabetes – Dose Adjustment for Normal Eating (DAFNE). This intensive programme enables people with Type 1 diabetes to optimally manage their diabetes giving individuals an in-depth understanding of the relationship between individual food intake, physical activity and insulin adjustments.

Within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, some Practice Nurses and Diabetic Specialist Nurses currently provide education for patients with Type 2 diabetes. The Diabetic Specialist Nursing resource is limited and therefore patient education is based on clinical need. In order to provide a wider self management approach in line with Transforming Your Care, Trust staff have worked in partnership with the Northern Diabetes Integrated Care Partnership to develop a revenue business case that would support the establishment of a sustainable internationally recognised model of structured education programme for patients with Type 2 diabetes - Diabetes Education and Self Management for Ongoing and Newly Diagnosed (DESMOND). A decision regarding the delivery of a patient education programme for people with Type 2 diabetes within the Northern HSC Trust area has not yet been determined as discussion is ongoing about the potential to adopt a regional uniform approach to procuring structured patient education programmes for people with Type 2 diabetes across Northern Ireland.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how Antrim Area Hospital responds to patients arriving by ambulance who have suffered a stroke

(AQW 36133/11-15)

Mr Poots: Patients brought to the Emergency Department by ambulance are assessed by Northern Ireland Ambulance Service paramedics using the FAST assessment tool. The Emergency Department are pre alerted about FAST positive patients who in turn alert the stroke team.

For all patients assessed as ROSIER (Recognition of Stroke in the Emergency Room) and FAST positive and with a known time of onset of symptoms of less than four hours, consideration is given to the potential suitability for thrombolysis treatment with alteplase. This is the administration of a clot busting drug which breaks down and disperses a blood clot in the brain. It is considered a suitable treatment for approximately 15% of presenting strokes and is licenced to be delivered within 4.5 hours of onset of symptoms but most effective if delivered early after symptom onset.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will introduce Atrial Fibrillation checks during the next flu vaccination programme.

(AQW 36134/11-15)

Mr Poots: I welcome the innovative proposal put forward by healthcare professionals to include a targeted, opportunistic, assessment programme for Atrial Fibrillation for those most at risk, alongside the annual flu vaccination programme.

Any decisions to take forward this opportunity will be informed by the current financial position

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 35570/11-15, to detail the instances that patients from each Health and Social Care Trust have been referred to a service outside this jurisdiction, broken down by service or treatment.

(AQW 36169/11-15)

Mr Poots: Given the low number of Extra Contractual Referrals (ECRs) made for mental health or addiction services, only limited information can be provided in each instance for data protection reasons as individuals or their treatment plan could potentially be identified.

In 2013/14, the HSCB received 24 ECR requests for mental health or addiction services in total from the five HSC Trusts. The HSCB approved 21 of these ECR requests; these were for Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services, Eating Disorder, Obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD), Mental Health & Deafness, Mental Health Assessment, Acquired Brain Injury, Personality Disorder & Eating Disorder, Personality & Eating Disorder & Alcohol Dependence Syndrome.

To ensure total anonymity it is not possible to provide further breakdown on these figures.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what monitoring is in place to ensure that the Northern Health and Social Care Trust engages with Integrated Care Partnerships.

(AQW 36170/11-15)

Mr Poots: Membership of the Integrated Care Partnerships (ICPs) in the Northern Local Commissioning Group (LCG) area includes Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) clinicians, local GPs and other local health and social care providers.

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB), which is responsible for the overall coordination of Integrated Care Partnership (ICPs) implementation, has put in place a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) governing the interaction between all ICP members. The MoU requires that participating organisations are fully committed to working with the agreed care pathways developed by the ICPs – as endorsed by the LCG.

The HSCB currently monitors the implementation of all ICPs, including those in the Northern Local Commissioning Group area, through a Regional ICP Implementation Project Board.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what work is being completed to ensure the roll out of the Frail Elderly Pathway which incorporates (i) nursing home in reach project; (ii) dementia shared care; and (iii) nursing home proactive ward round.

(AQW 36171/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Local Commissioning Group in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust is working locally with the Northern Integrated Care Partnerships (ICPs) to develop these services.

In addition, ICPs across Northern Ireland continue to work to ensure that service improvement proposals can be implemented as soon as possible so that service users and carers will experience the benefits of enhanced integrated care. Decisions in respect of the current financial position will impact on the timescale for full implementation

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what work is being conducted to ensure that Atrial Fibrillation screening checks, that could detect potential strokes victims, are performed with other routine procedures in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 36174/11-15)

Mr Poots: The UK National Screening Committee (UK NSC) reviewed the screening of people aged over 65 in July 2014 for atrial fibrillation. It found that it is not clear that those identified as at risk through screening would benefit from early diagnosis. The NSC advice is that a systematic population screening programme for atrial fibrillation is not recommended.

NICE Clinical Guideline (CG180) on the management of atrial fibrillation states that whilst general population screening is beyond its scope, it recommends targeted/ opportunistic screening of symptomatic patients, or those with risk factors which may allow identification of AF patients.

The general position across Health and Social Care Trusts is that subject to available resources, the flu vaccination programme is currently being considered as providing an opportunity to carry out a targeted screening of those aged over 65 for atrial fibrillation.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what percentage of research and development expenditure is spent on life sciences; and how does this compares to (i) England; (ii) Scotland; and (iii) Wales; and if the percentage is lower than in other UK regions, what steps his Department is taking to address this.

(AQW 36178/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC R&D Division of the Public Health Agency advises that 100% of the research and development expenditure that it allocates on behalf of the Department is spent on life sciences, covering all aspects of health and social care research.

The table attached summarises the level of funding provided by my Department for life sciences research, in each of the last ten years.

Financial year	DHSSPS allocation (£)
2005/06	12,730,000
2006/07	12,104,000
2007/08	12,206,000
2008/09	13,324,000
2009/10	12,452,000
2010/11	11,276,000
2011/12	10,189,416
2012/13	10,386,000
2013/14	11,749,000
2014/15	13,402,804

The comparable annual Research & Development budget figures from Health Departments are as follows: for England (£1.1bn); Scotland (£69m); & Wales (£43m). However, due to organisational differences across the UK countries, direct comparisons are extremely difficult.

Following a report in 2012, commissioned by my Department to evaluate the impact of HSC R&D funding, the Minister at that time decided to provide additional investment in R&D with Northern Ireland contributing to the National Institute for Health Research Evaluation Trials and Studies Co-ordinating Centre in England. This has allowed local researchers to bid for a collective funding pot of £100m annually and with a predicted £4.14 return on every £1 invested from the HSC R&D fund there has been a significant return on investment after the first year of Northern Ireland contributing to this NIHR fund.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the digitalisation of hospital scans, and the steps being taken to move away from the old Portable Document Format (PDF) system.

(AQW 36179/11-15)

Mr Poots: Since 2009 all hospital scans undertaken in the HSC in Northern Ireland have been stored and shared electronically. I am advised that such scans have never been stored using the portable document format (PDF).

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many 'public health' funerals have taken place, broken down by (i) Health and Social Care Trust area; and (ii) average cost.

(AQW 36180/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the frequency of respite available to adults with severe learning difficulties in Hollybank, Magherafelt; and what criteria is used to assess need.

(AQW 36181/11-15)

Mr Poots: The frequency of respite services available to adults with severe learning difficulties in Hollybank Respite Unit is dependent on the individually assessed needs of the carer and may change according to need and availability. Respite is planned 6 months in advance and allocations are made bi-annually.

Carers' assessments are carried out to give an indication of the requirements for respite and potential service users of Hollybank need to meet the criteria for residential care.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what technological enhancements his Department will put in place to improve integrated care.

(AQW 36189/11-15)

Mr Poots: Innovative technology is already being deployed across health and social care to improve patient and client outcomes, and support the delivery of integrated care and service reform. The regional telemonitoring service enables people with long-term conditions to self-monitor and manage their condition without the need to visit their GP practice or hospital clinic, while their data recordings are electronically captured and transferred to their healthcare professional. The regional telecare service supports people, particularly the elderly, to continue to live independently for as long as possible through the use of sensors to mitigate risk. As well as triggering emergency response services, data collected from sensors can be used to inform decisions about the individual's care. Through the continued roll-out of NI Electronic Care Record and the electronic NI Single Assessment Tool, technology is supporting health and care professionals to make safe and timely decisions about an individual's care and treatment.

I am committed to building on Northern Ireland's reputation for world renowned, high quality health and social care research and I want to strengthen links between the health, academic and industry sectors in the development and application of innovative technology solutions to meet health and social care needs. For example, the report of the Economy and Jobs Initiative Task and Finish Group, published in May 2013, made a number of recommendations aimed at using technology to deliver improved health and social care services while at the same time supporting the local economy. My Department is working in partnership with DETI and other stakeholders to take forward these recommendations.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many instances of disciplinary action have resulted in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust in consequence of the Independent Review of Estate Services; and to detail the outcomes.

(AQW 36203/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised that internal disciplinary procedures in relation to this matter are ongoing and have yet to reach conclusion.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether a community psychiatric nurse can request and receive information from a psychiatrist on the condition and treatment of a patient, without the approval of the patient.

(AQW 36220/11-15)

Mr Poots: Communication of clinical information between mental health professionals, within the boundaries of professional guidance around confidentiality and information sharing, can occur as part of the overall management of the person they are treating.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the money allocated as a result of the joint health and education project part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies targeting early intervention.

(AQW 36225/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Early Intervention Transformation Programme is one of three proposed projects being delivered as part of a Delivering Social Change/Atlantic Philanthropies initiative. Each of the three projects will be managed as part of the overall Delivering Social Change Programme. The Early Intervention Transformation Programme is the largest of the three, with a combined investment of £30m over four years by a collective of five Government Departments and Atlantic Philanthropies.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the level of funding provided by Atlantic Philanthropies and the Executive that targets care for dementia patients.

(AQW 36227/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Delivering Social Change Signature Programme, which is a joint NI Executive and Atlantic Philanthropies initiative, will contribute approximately £6.2m to support efforts to improve care and support for people living with dementia.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the proposed timescales for the joint health and education project on early intervention that will be part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies.

(AQW 36228/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Cross Departmental Health and Education Programme on Early Intervention which is part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies has been established and will continue in operation until 2017/2018.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients have been (i) sent home from hospital under the Transforming Your Care initiative; and (ii) readmitted to hospital within 48 hours, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36236/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of patients who have been (i) sent home from hospital under the Transforming Your Care initiative; and (ii) readmitted to hospital within 48 hours is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have been diagnosed with prostate cancer, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36238/11-15)

Mr Poots: The table below shows the number of males diagnosed with Prostate cancer in Northern Ireland in the years 2010 to 2012, by year of diagnosis and Health and Social Care Trust.

Trust	2010	2011	2012	Total

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average waiting time for an assessment or diagnosis of Autistic Spectrum Disorder, in each Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 36239/11-15)

Mr Poots: The average waiting time for an assessment or diagnosis of Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD) is not centrally collected. Data in relation to children is collected by the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board in aggregated time bands, based on the length of time a child has waited for a diagnostic assessment. It is possible to calculate the median time band which is an alternative statistical measure.

Table 1: Patients waiting for Diagnostic Assessment by HSC Trust area and length of time waiting at 31 August 2014

HSC Trust	Length of Time Waiting, by weeks
	0 – 4	>4 – 8	>8 – 13	>13	Total
Belfast	35	53	88	221	397
Northern	55	62	107	105	329
South Eastern	13	39	37	88	177
Southern	6	4	10	0	20
Western	23	29	43	37	132
Northern Ireland	132	187	285	451	1,055

Source: HSC Board, please note these figures have not been validated by the Department

Note: These figures refer to children only

The median time band for a child waiting for a diagnostic assessment at 31 August 2014 in the Belfast Trust was over 13 weeks, in the Southern Trust was 4 – 8 weeks and in the Northern, South Eastern or Western Trusts was 8 – 13 weeks.

This information is currently not available for adults.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department is aware of unfilled shifts within the Western Urgent Care Out-of-Hours service; and whether his Department, whilst maintaining professional standards, will act to remove any barriers preventing the recruitment of GPs, including doctors outside the region to take part in this scheme.

(AQW 36241/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am aware of the difficulties GP Out of Hours (OOHs) providers, including Western Urgent Care (WUC), are encountering in filling some OOHs shifts.

The Health & Social Care Board (HSCB) is working with all of the OOHs providers in order to try and address the issue of unfilled shifts. In supporting both GP and nursing colleagues the HSCB has invested an additional £1.5million to the OOHs budget during 2014/15 in order to support the provision of OOHs services across NI. The western area has been allocated its share of funding to support the 5 centres in the Western LCG area.

The HSCB meets regularly with the Trusts to review performance and continue to explore opportunities to improve OOHs services in line with the Regional Strategic Framework for GP OOHs services. This focuses on: -

- Simplifying access;
- Improving organisational efficiency; and
- Improving alignment with other healthcare services.

WUC has already taken action to address issues around the delivery of GP OOHs services such as on-going recruitment for GPs, flexible working arrangements, enhanced payment rates for difficult to fill shifts, liaising with members of the Local Medical Committee in relation to encouraging GPs to work OOHs from their local centre as well, as the recent recruitment of a pool of nurses to assist with OOHs provision in the western area.

It is a requirement for GPs wishing to provide primary care medical services, including OOH, anywhere in Northern Ireland to apply for inclusion on the NI Primary Medical Services (PMS) Performers List. In addition, the HSCB, in conjunction with the Patient and Client Council, NI Medical and Dental Training Agency and my Department, is keen to ensure that patients' safety is paramount when including GPs on the PMS Performers List. To this end the HSCB introduced a GP development scheme in June 2013. All doctors applying to be included on the performers list must undertake this training...

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many nurses are currently employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Board.

(AQW 36251/11-15)

Mr Poots: The numbers of staff requested can be found in the HSC Workforce Census March 2014 publication, released on 11th September. A hard copy of this was sent to the NI Assembly library, or it can be found on the Departmental website at: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/workforce-statistics/stats-hsc.htm

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many GPs are employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36253/11-15)

Mr Poots: GPs are not employed by Trusts but are independent contractors who hold a contract with Health and Social Care Board. We can however, provide information on the GP practices that are physically located within the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

In September 2014 there were 207 Principal and Salaried GPs employed in GP practices that had a postcode within the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area.

Please note that this figure includes only Main GP Practices and excludes Branch Practices as Branch Practices are seen as having the same GPs as the Main Practice.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of (i) 79 per cent of the Northern Ireland Health and Social Care Workforce being female; and (ii) the risks associated with potential staffing shortages considering that of this number only 54 per cent work full time.

(AQW 36259/11-15)

Mr Poots: Staffing matters are the responsibility of Health and Social Care Trusts based on service need and available resources.

Appointments to positions in the HSC are based on specific criteria and are merit based. The terms and conditions and the wide variety of available job roles for HSC staff are such that we attract applications from all sections of the community and it is clear that many women take the opportunity to have a fulfilling career in this field.

Staffing levels are managed on a funded establishment basis of full-time equivalent staff and it is for HSC employers to manage alternative working patterns within this. I expect HSC employers to balance the need for flexible working patterns with the requirement to maintain safe and effective round-the clock services.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how his Department plans to distribute the recent £6m of funding which has been provided to support three new projects which will improve health and social care services for people living with dementia.

(AQW 36262/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Dementia Services Project is being funded under the Delivering Social Change Signature Programme, a joint NI Executive/Atlantic Philanthropies initiative. The Project involves three workstreams, with an overall budget of approximately £6.2m.

The projected funding for each of the workstreams is as follows:

- (i) Awareness Raising, Information and Support - £3.18m;
- (ii) Developing Human Capital - £1.56m; and
- (iii) Respite, Short Breaks and Support to Carers - £1.52m.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of full time staff, working in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, who are currently on sick absence.

(AQW 36263/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Health & Social Care Trust has advised that the number of full-time staff on sickness absence at present is 391.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many porters are currently employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36340/11-15)

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many health records staff are employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36342/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health & Social Care Trust has advised that there were 87 medical records staff employed by the Trust at September 2014. The Trust has advised that this does not fully represent the entirety of 'health records' staff, which would be difficult to attach an absolute number to.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the success of the Cooperation and Working Together Partnership, in terms of sharing resources and expertise on a North/South basis; and to detail the projects that have benefited people in West Tyrone.

(AQW 36378/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Cooperation and Working Together (CAWT) Partnership has a proven track record in the delivery of EU-funded cross-border projects on behalf of my Department and the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland, and currently act as the delivery agent for the INTERREG IVA project 'Putting Patients, Clients and Families First'. This overarching project spans the area of Northern Ireland (with the exception of Greater Belfast) and the 'necklace' counties of Cavan, Donegal, Leitrim, Louth, Monaghan and Sligo, and receives EU support of £24m/€30m. While overall activity is currently due to end on 31st March 2015, the CAWT Partnership has already significantly exceeded their targets for the project.

Putting Patients, Clients and Families First comprises 12 strands, with patients and clients in the West Tyrone area benefiting from all areas of activity. I have included more information on these 12 strands at Tab A.

Tab A

Strands within the Putting Patients, Clients and Families First project

- Development of cross border acute hospital services – vascular, ENT, urology and ophthalmology
- Establishment of additional and new sexual health/GUM clinics in the border region
A new GUM clinic established in Tyrone County Hospital with EU funding has now been mainstreamed by the Western Health and Social Care Trust with the support of the Commissioners, the Health and Social Care Board.
- Development of Eating Disorder services
- 'Time IVA Change' border region alcohol abuse prevention project
All aspects of the project were delivered in West Tyrone with the support of local community and voluntary organisations.
- Improving outcomes for Children and Families
- Support for Older People
Assistive Technology is being delivered across the Western Health and Social Care Trust area including West Tyrone.
- Citizenship for People with Disabilities
Day Opportunities experiences and placements were facilitated right across the whole Western Health and Social Care Trust area including West Tyrone. Disability Action and Mencap assisted people with disabilities to access services and activities in their communities. In addition, under the Community Awareness Programme, Castlederg GP Practice was supported to implement best practice in relation to facilitating access by people with disabilities.
- Tackling Diabetes in high risk clients
Both education programmes and Pre-pregnancy clinics take place in the Diabetes Centre, Tyrone County Hospital, Omagh.
- Prevention and management of Childhood Obesity (UP4IT!)

- The Lisanelly area of Omagh was one of the pilot areas for the 'UP4IT' obesity project.
- Promoting Social Inclusion and Tackling Health Inequalities
In Castledearg, the CAWT Social Inclusion project engaged with the Derg Valley Healthy Living Centre, Churchtown Community Association and Rainbow Surestart to deliver a range of different programmes to those women most at risk of social inclusion.
- Cross Border Workforce Mobility – Leadership Development and cross border exchange of knowledge and skills Health service staff from the Western Health and Social Care Trust (including those from the Omagh and Strabane Council areas, have benefitted from these project initiatives).
- 'Turning the Curve' – Autism Support Project
Young people with Autism in West Tyrone have participated in the Transition support and Summer Schemes delivered by the project. Families and carers have also benefited from the project.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) how many applications were received; and (ii) how applicants were interviewed for the post of Chair of the Western Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36386/11-15)

Mr Poots: Six applications were received for the position of Chair of the Western Health and Social Care Trust (WHSC) in the recent Public Appointment competition.

Interviewees were assessed using a criteria based selection process. The panel which carried out the interviews for the WHSC competition consisted of three members; the Permanent Secretary of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety; an expert panel member and an independent assessor who was allocated by the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments in Northern Ireland.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what activities were funded by his Department to promote drugs awareness and prevention in Banbridge, in the last three years; and to detail the costs involved.

(AQW 36387/11-15)

Mr Poots: Through my Department's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase Two, the Public Health Agency commissions a range of alcohol and drug awareness and prevention services in the Banbridge area and these are set out as follows:

- REACT Ltd One Stop Shop – this service provides advice, general information, sign-posting and health behaviour information (on alcohol and drug misuse, mental health, suicide, relationships, etc) for those aged 11 to 25 years in a young people friendly environment. Funding over the last three years is set out below:

2014/15	£115,858

- REACT Ltd Community Alcohol and Drugs Support Service, Banbridge – This service provides group work and interventions with young people, parents and the community, as well as accredited training in alcohol awareness for both young people and adults. The programme targets vulnerable individuals and groups with alcohol and drug misuse issues, and their families/parent/carers are offered the opportunity to access relevant and appropriate support services. Funding over the last three years is set out below:

2012/13	£35,605
2014/15	£36,753

- REACT Ltd Community Education and Training Service, Banbridge & Newry and Mourne – this service delivers accredited alcohol and drugs education/training courses to address identified workforce development and community education needs across the southern area with particular focus on Banbridge and Dromore. Funding over the last three years is set out below:

2012/13	£19,250
2014/15	£19,612

Other PHA funded services:

There are a range of other alcohol and drug, and related, services funded by the PHA available to residents of Banbridge, though it is not possible to break down the costs of these specifically to that area – these include:

1. CHILL - Young People's Treatment Service for under 18s

This service is available across the southern area. CHILL provides counselling, mentoring, and group work for young people, parental support and therapeutic group work.

2. The SHSCT Outreach Addiction Service.

This service, available across the southern area, consists of eight practitioners including community addiction nurses, dual diagnosis practitioner, hospital substance misuse liaison practitioners, a child and family liaison practitioner and a CAMHS alcohol and drugs specialist.

3. The BME Alcohol and Drugs Coordination Service.

This service is co-ordinated by one dedicated staff member who has identified the specific needs of the target group, developed appropriate intervention programmes, and ensures the integration and co-ordination of the delivery of these programmes through the Community Alcohol and Drug Support Worker network. This service is available across the southern area.

4. Early Warning/DAMIS.

Staff from all PHA-funded services are trained in awareness of legal highs/EDOCs (Emerging Drugs Of Concern) and organisations are actively involved in the Regional DAMIS (Drugs And Alcohol Monitoring Information System) initiative.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why specific training is not provided to nursing home staff to care for adults with Progressive Supranuclear Palsy and Corticobasal Degeneration.

(AQW 36392/11-15)

Mr Poots: Progressive Supranuclear Palsy and Corticobasal Degeneration are very rare conditions that would not be commonplace within nursing homes. However, where a specific training need for nursing home staff is identified, then Health and Social Care Trusts will help facilitate such training as required to enable them to provide appropriate care for service users.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients with diabetes were (i) treated in an Emergency Department; and (ii) admitted to hospital in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36397/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of patients with diabetes who were treated in an Emergency Department is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Information on the number of patients admitted to HSC Hospitals within the Northern HSC Trust with a primary diagnosis of diabetes is provided in the table below for each of the last three years.

Year	Patients admitted via an emergency department	All patients
2011/12	171	219
2012/13	196	245
2013/14	178	242

Source: Hospital Inpatient System

Notes

Diabetes has been defined using International Classification of Disease (revision 10) codes E10 to E14, searched for in the primary diagnosis position only.

Figures relate to individual patients admitted. As such, patients could be admitted to hospital more than once during the year with a diagnosis of diabetes and would only be counted once.

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 35868/11-15, why the budget and the provision of staff for services in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area is so low.

(AQW 36414/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) allocates funds to HSC Trusts based on the agreed capitation formula. The Western Trust receives 17.2% of the total £1.174m for Personality Disorder Services. This is its capitation share and reflects its position as having the lowest population of the 5 HSC Trusts in Northern Ireland.

Regarding the provision of staff, the constitution of the community Personality Disorder Service can vary between Trusts, and therefore it can be misleading to make direct comparisons between staff numbers across Trusts. In the case of the Western Trust, the funding has been used to provide Clinical Psychologist posts, which are more expensive than some other posts such as practitioners or support workers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what checks or provision is made for people returning to Northern Ireland from countries which have had an outbreak of the Ebola virus disease.

(AQW 36420/11-15)

Mr Wells: In order to reduce the risk of international spread of Ebola Virus Disease, and in line with World Health Organisation guidance, the countries affected by the disease have introduced exit screening at airports to ensure that individuals who are unwell do not board flights.

It is important to note that the risk of infection for travellers is very low since person-to-person transmission results from direct contact with the body fluids or secretions of an infected patient and is not airborne.

Current advice from the World Health Organisation states, that there should be no general ban on international travel with the affected countries and that risk to travellers is very low. There are therefore no entry restrictions for individuals travelling from the affected countries to the UK.

The Public Health Agency (PHA), through its Health Protection Service, has communicated with colleagues covering all sea ports and airports in Northern Ireland informing them of the current situation in relation to the outbreak and directing them to sources of further information, including actions to be taken should a sick traveller, potentially with an infectious disease, come to their attention.

The World Health Organisation will continue to monitor the situation and amend recommendations if necessary.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the expected date for the restoration of full accident and emergency services at Downe Hospital.

(AQW 36422/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust took the decision to temporarily reduce the opening hours of the Downe Hospital emergency department from 4th January 2014 because of a shortage of suitably qualified middle grade doctors. Despite repeated efforts by the Trust to recruit doctors, this position has not improved and the Trust is therefore at present unable to give a date for resumption of the previous opening hours.

The Trust has taken a number of actions to mitigate the effects of the temporary reduction in the emergency department's opening hours, including direct admission by GPs to the Downe Hospital at times when the department is closed and provision of a nurse-led minor injuries service from 9am to 5pm on Saturday and Sunday.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many maintenance staff are currently employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36432/11-15)

Mr Wells: The numbers of staff requested can be found in the HSC Workforce Census March 2014 publication, released on 11th September. A hard copy of this was sent to the NI Assembly library, or it can be found on the Departmental website at: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/workforce-statistics/stats-hsc.htm

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many ward clerks are currently employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36433/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Trust advises that it does not have a specific job or grade called 'ward clerk', and as such is unable to answer this question.

It currently employs 14 payroll staff by headcount, and 72 in Human Resources. These figures were obtained directly from the Trust, and have not been verified by the Department.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQO 6676/11-15, to detail (i) where the addictions treatment unit will be based in Omagh; and ii) where the mental health unit, currently based in the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital, will be located.

(AQW 36456/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) The recent HSCB review of inpatient addiction services in Northern Ireland has recommended that Tier 4 (i.e. inpatient) HSC provided services be reconfigured into 3 sites across Northern Ireland. It is currently envisaged that provision will be consolidated within the three existing units i.e. the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital in Omagh, Holywell Hospital in Antrim, and the Downshire Hospital in Downpatrick. However, decisions have not yet been finalized and ultimately the location of these services is a matter for the appropriate HSC Trust, in consultation with the HSCB and the PHA.
- (ii) The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) undertook an analysis of demand for and access to acute mental health services in the Western Trust area. The HSCB report of findings on this issue, which was submitted to the Department in May 2014, was inconclusive and the Western Trust has been asked to develop a full business case to assist in determining the need for and location of this facility. This will take account of financial and value for money considerations together with the HSCB report findings. A final decision on the location of the unit will not be taken until this business case has been completed.

After that, timing of the project will be subject to budgetary availability and this project will need to be considered alongside all other demands on the capital budget as we move to the next budgetary period commencing in 2015/16.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to fund a province-wide television advertising campaign to raise awareness of drugs abuse.

(AQW 36550/11-15)

Mr Wells: Given the limited resources that are currently available for advertising campaigns, due to restrictions imposed by OFMdFM, the Public Health Agency focuses its advertising budget on areas that are proven to be effective. Looking at the evidence, these types of public information campaigns generally seem to have minimal impact on levels of substance misuse and at worst have been shown on occasion to increase drug-seeking and risk-taking behaviour.

However, I feel that we have to do more to get information out to those at risk. The PHA has been working with a number of young people to see what sort of very targeted messages are likely to get through to that peer group – particularly when a new drug that is of particular concern emerges. In addition, I have asked the PHA to keep the evidence for such a wider public information campaign under review and to re-consider the need for such a campaign, should the current evidence change.

Department of Justice

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Justice how many applications for Legal Aid for personal injury claims have been made within the last twelve months; and of those applications, to detail the number (i) granted; and (ii) refused; and of those refused, how many were appealed and granted on appeal.

(AQW 35911/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I am advised that the Legal Services Commission does not record applications by personal injury claims. It records applications for money damages cases, the majority of which are personal injury claims. From September 2013 to August 2014 there were 1,346 civil certificates granted for money damages cases and 813 applications were refused. Information on the number of applications which are refused, appealed and granted on appeal is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35309/11-15, whether he will order a Serious Care Review in the interests of public safety and risk management.

(AQW 36063/11-15)

Mr Ford: I understand that the PSNI is conducting an internal review of the case and any learning from this will be shared (where applicable) with partner agencies within the Public Protection Arrangements Northern Ireland (PPANI).

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) how many sets of accounts have been filed by the Police Federation of NI; (ii) on what dates were they filed; (iii) where are the accounts held; and (iv) who signs the accounts off on behalf of his Department.

(AQW 36066/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Association for Northern Ireland Regulations 1991 state that the central committee shall keep accounts for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland (PFNI) and that the central committee shall have these audited each year by an independent auditor.

The regulations state that, at the end of each financial year a summary of the PFNI accounts, together with a copy of the independent auditor's report, shall be made available to the central committee at the annual conference.

The regulations also state that a copy of the accounts shall be sent to my Department and published in a manner approved by the central committee for the information of members.

I confirm that, while a copy of the accounts is not routinely sent to my Department, it is not the responsibility of my Department to sign off PFNI accounts.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Justice what departmental services he has made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36089/11-15)

Mr Ford: No departmental services are available to the public via the post office network.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of Prison Officers in each prison who currently possess a criminal conviction for (i) a driving offence; or (ii) an other offence.

(AQW 36101/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of Prison Officers in each prison recorded as currently possessing a criminal conviction for a driving offence or other offence are as follows:

	Driving Offence	Other Offence
Maghaberry Prison	2	0
Magilligan Prison	2	0
YOC Hydebank	0	3

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to provide a copy of (i) the complaints policy; and (ii) the code of conduct of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland, as required of a government funded body.

(AQW 36196/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Federation for Northern Ireland is not a government funded body. I do not hold a copy of any complaints policy for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland; any such policy is a matter for the Police Federation. Office-holders and members of the PFNI as PSNI officers are subject to the PSNI Code of Ethics. The Code is prepared and issued by the Northern Ireland Policing Board and is also reflected in Regulations. I have placed a copy in the Assembly Library. Public complaints against PSNI officers remain the responsibility of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35310/11-15, given the example set by the Northern Ireland Prison Service who regard all new psychoactive substances as banned substances, what action he will take to replicate this outside a prison setting and within legislation.

(AQW 36197/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service treat any pill or substance that was not issued by the Prison Pharmacist or Medical staff, as possession of an unauthorised article or substance and a breach of Prison Rules as set out in The Prison and Young Offenders Centres Rules (Northern Ireland) 1995. This would include new psychoactive substances (NPS).

In terms of the legal position outside the Prison environment, NPS are illegal if they contain substances banned under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

This legislation is a reserved matter and its adequacy in dealing with NPS is currently being reviewed by the Home Office.

Whilst this review is ongoing my Department continues to support the joint action taken by local Councils and the PSNI to remove these harmful substances from sale.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of times, in the last twelve months, that G4S staff at Dungannon Court House have reported faulty palm scanners, including all dates and correspondence received; and (ii) whether these matters are routinely reported to his Department; and if so, whether audits are conducted to ensure risk assessment, public safety and quality control.

(AQW 36198/11-15)

Mr Ford: Palm scanning devices across the Court Estate are owned and maintained by G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Limited. G4S conduct daily audits of all handscanning information and are required to report any anomalies to the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS). Any faults are reported by G4S staff directly to their employer. No reports of faulty palm scanners have been reported to NICTS in the last twelve months. NICTS conducts Security and Health and Safety audits of all its premises.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the effectiveness of Youth Conferencing; and, of the number of participants in Youth Conferencing, how many have reoffended within six months, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36230/11-15)

Mr Ford: Whilst a reduction in reoffending is the desired goal, the youth conference in itself is not just another method for reducing offending, but also a means of giving the victim and the community a voice in the process. In Northern Ireland we have a high rate of direct victim participation, with victims participating in 46% of conferences in 2013/14. Victims are given the opportunity to have a direct input, have their views heard and to feel part of the process. This is often not the case with "traditional" justice and is a valuable addition to what can be a very difficult experience for those who have been hurt and harmed. In 2013/14 99% of victims who took part in Youth Conferencing reported satisfaction with the process.

Youth Conferencing is focused on the delivery of bespoke plans aimed at reducing offending. The plans are also designed to improve the young person's life chances and to make direct amends to the victim where appropriate.

In relation to reoffending the Department of Justice does not, as yet, hold a continuous series of reoffending information for the period in question. The Department has recently revised the methodology used to calculate reoffending analysis. The first publication in this new series was published in June 2014 and provided one year reoffending information for a cohort of offenders given a community disposal or released from custody during the 2010/11 financial year.

Across the adult and youth 2010/11 cohorts, 4161 individuals had received at least one Youth Conference Order. Of these 180 (43%) had reoffended within six months of receiving the order.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the correlation between young offenders and areas of deprivation.

(AQW 36231/11-15)

Mr Ford: Research elsewhere supports the view that there is a link between crime and deprivation but no specific research has been undertaken by my Department in relation to young offenders in Northern Ireland.

The Department's Strategic Framework for Reducing Offending - which sets out the Executive's long-term approach to reducing offending in Northern Ireland - recognised that offending behaviour can be linked to wider factors including problems with family, health, social care, education, training and employment, poverty and deprivation and housing. Whilst not related specifically to young offenders, the link between deprivation and offending is highlighted within this Framework.

1 Please note the 2010/11 cohort was divided into youths and adults (18+), based on age at baseline conviction or release, and two publications were produced accordingly. For youths, 198 of 370 (54%) had reoffended within one year of receipt of the Youth Conference Order and 23 of 46 adults.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, with the exception of drug testing services how many contracted services in the Northern Ireland Prison Service are currently outside their specified contracted time frame and working on the basis of an extension.

(AQW 36252/11-15)

Mr Ford: Northern Ireland Prison Service does not have any contracts outside their specified time frame.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 34514/11-15, to provide a copy of the evidence on which the assertion is based that in one of the two contracts, it was the employees of G4S Secure Solutions (UK) who specifically requested zero hours and declined offers of full-time, or part-time, employment.

(AQW 36257/11-15)

Mr Ford: My response to AQW 34514/11-15 advising that it was the employees of G4S Secure Solutions (UK) who specifically requested zero hours and declined offers of full-time, or part-time, employment was based upon information provided by G4S to Departmental officials.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35311/11-15, (i) how many times a decision has been taken to extend this contract; (ii) the dates these decision were taken; and (iii) the agency responsible for making the decisions on each occasion.

(AQW 36258/11-15)

Mr Ford: This contract is administered, and has been extended, by the Scottish Prison Service. The Northern Ireland Prison Service has not had any role in the extension of the contract.

The Scottish Prison Service first advertised the tender in March 2009 and the contract commenced in September 2009.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of PSNI officers, who are members of the 1988 pension scheme, who (i) will be; and (ii) will not be affected by the impending Police Pension reform.

(AQW 36280/11-15)

Mr Ford: The most recent police pension scheme became operational on 6 April 2006. The PSNI has estimated the number of officers in each of the schemes as follows:

PSNI officer	1988 Scheme Members	2006 Scheme Members
affected by police pension reform	2,559	1,957
not affected by police pension reform	2,128	34

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of PSNI officers, who are members of the 2007 pension scheme, who (i) will be; and (ii) will not be affected by the impending Police Pension reform.

(AQW 36281/11-15)

Mr Ford: The most recent police pension scheme became operational on 6 April 2006. The PSNI has estimated the number of officers in each of the schemes as follows:

PSNI officer	1988 Scheme Members	2006 Scheme Members
affected by police pension reform	2,559	1,957
not affected by police pension reform	2,128	34

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice how many consultation meetings on Police Pension reform have taken place since June 2010; and what evidence and records exists from each of these meetings.

(AQW 36285/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since June 2010, 34 consultation meetings on Police Pension reform have taken place under the auspices of the Police Negotiating Board of the United Kingdom. In line with normal practice, such consultations are carried out in confidence.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice how many indications of concern his Department has received from PSNI officers over the impending Police Pension reform.

(AQW 36286/11-15)

Mr Ford: To date, I have received indications of concern from eleven individuals for or on behalf of PSNI officers, over the impending Police Pension reform.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline his Department's consultation process with PSNI officers on Police Pension reform.

(AQW 36287/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 3 July 2014, my Department published a statement detailing the bodies to be consulted when making changes to pensions regulations. Consultation is targeted at those bodies with a direct responsibility for police pensions and the recognised staff associations and representative bodies. This approach is consistent with that of other Departments in relation to the changes to public sector pension schemes.

My Department has issued two information circulars (PPSD 04/13 & PPSD 05/13) which detail the need for pension reform and advise on how these changes may affect officers in the police pension scheme. The PSNI advises that these circulars were made available to officers on 13 May 2013 and 3 January 2014 respectively.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35331/11-15, in each year, how many people were registered within each of the denominations; and how many individual journeys were claimed for by each chaplain.

(AQW 36322/11-15)

Mr Ford: Table A below shows the average number of prisoners registered for each year within each of the denominations.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice how many searches, primarily aimed at finding illegal drugs, have been undertaken in each prison, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36329/11-15)

Mr Ford: NIPS does not search solely for illegal drugs; searches are targeted at all unauthorised articles. The figures for all searches are set out in the table below.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35666/11-15, (i) why the external contractor in this matter is permitted to dictate the terms of a public contract service; (ii) whether this is a special dispensation or privilege; (iii) whether the extension gives the contractor an advantage over other potential tenderers; (iv) how a sitting service provider can be permitted to write up and prepare a tender which they are already holding before it is advertised; and (v) whether this practice is lawful.

(AQW 36337/11-15)

Mr Ford: As stated in AQW/35666/11-15 the contract is administered by Scottish Prison Service, the provider is a third party laboratory. The contractor has not been allowed to dictate terms and no special dispensation or advantage has been gained. The practice whereby NIPS is buying into a contract between the Scottish Prison Service and the laboratory is entirely lawful.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35540/11-15, whether he wishes to review his answer given the prisoner in question was charged with drug dealing and his address on arrest was reported as the Prisoner Assessment Unit; or whether said prisoner was not moved as planned earlier this year.

(AQW 36338/11-15)

Mr Ford: I do not intend to review the answer provided in AQW 35540/11-15.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice why PSNI Officers who were recruited after April 2007 have larger pension contributions than staff under an earlier scheme.

(AQW 36351/11-15)

Mr Ford: Officers in the PSNI who are members of the new police pension scheme pay lower pension contributions than those in the 1988 scheme. Officers joining the police service since 6 April 2006 have been eligible for membership of the pension scheme, governed by the Police Pensions (Northern Ireland) Regulations 2009. Officers' pension contribution rates were reduced (from 11% in the 1988 scheme) to 9.5% which reflected the terms of the new scheme.

In 2010, the Chief Secretary to the Treasury advised that public sector workers should pay an average of 3.2% more of pay for their pensions by April 2014/15.

Adoption of a three tier model of pension contributions from 2011 reflected the Executive's view that low earners should be protected and that higher earners should pay more while minimising an increase in the opt out rate. Currently a PSNI Officer in the 2006 scheme pays pension contribution of between 11% and 12.75% depending upon rank, whereas their counterparts in the 1988 scheme pay between 14.25% and 15.05%.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice what consideration has been given to transitional or provisional arrangements for PSNI officers pensions compared to England and Wales; and to detail these considerations.

(AQW 36364/11-15)

Mr Ford: The reforms of police pensions, including the transitional and provisional arrangements for PSNI officers, are part of the wider reforms to public sector pensions, agreed by the Assembly when it passed the Public Sector Pensions Act (NI) 2014. The changes to police pensions were also agreed nationally through the Police Negotiating Board and are, therefore, in line with changes being introduced in Great Britain.

Information circulars PPSD 04/13 & PPSD 05/13 provide details on transitional and provisional arrangements for PSNI officers' pensions. I have placed copies in the Assembly Library.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 31801/11-15, for an update in respect of the costs incurred, including the costs of the further Preliminary Investigation concluded on 3 September 2014.

(AQW 36377/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated costs of the case to date are given in the table below.

Cost Type	Estimated Cost (£)
Legal Aid <sup>1</sup>	118,354

Prosecution <sup>2</sup>	73,201
Court (Judiciary and Staff Costs)	12,542
PSNI costs <sup>3</sup>	-
Facilities (e.g. Courtroom Accommodation)	4,492
Legal Costs arising from Judicial Review	16,240
Total	224,829

- 1 These costs were determined in accordance with The Magistrates' & County Court Appeals (Criminal Legal Aid) (Costs) Rules (Northern Ireland) 2009. All cases were certified to be Very High Cost cases in accordance with Rule 9.
- 2 In the absence of detailed records of time spent on individual cases it is not possible to produce precise costs for a particular case. The costs listed include expenses paid and fees paid to prosecuting counsel/CSO.
- 3 PSNI costs are not routinely recorded for individual cases.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice (i) for an update on the development of the new police training college; (ii) how much of the £105m budgeted for the college has been spent; and (iii) given the delay, whether any money has been reallocated to other projects.

(AQW 36382/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Programme Board commissioned a review of the project in early April. It established that the current design for the College would cost £25m more than the approved business case. The design review and value engineering exercise identified potential savings in the region of £18m. Further work and analysis was commissioned to validate the potential savings. This work has now been completed and a cost report, presented to the Programme Board on 25 September, is being considered.

In parallel, work is continuing to ensure that all the conditions of approval attached to the outline business case are fully addressed.

As at 31 August, the total spend on the project was £9.6m. This excludes the £2.85m in relation to site acquisition.

No funding has been re-allocated to other projects.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice by what percentage the privatisation of sections of the prison estate is expected to reduce running costs.

(AQW 36399/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prison Service has no plans to privatise any section of the prison estate.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether a legal aid certificate was granted in respect of the person; and if so, (i) on what date; and (ii) whether this covered a law firm as well as senior and junior counsel.

(AQW 36428/11-15)

Mr Ford: As indicated in the response to AQW/34725/11-15 legal aid was not granted in this case.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35311/11-15, what provision exists to allow extensions of tenders and contracts; and to provide copies of this provision.

(AQW 36429/11-15)

Mr Ford: This contract is administered, and has been extended, by the Scottish Prison Service. The Northern Ireland Prison Service has not had any role in the extension of the contract.

The Scottish Prison Service first advertised the tender in March 2009 and the contract commenced in September 2009.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35311/11-15, on what date the tender was first (i) advertised; and (ii) awarded.

(AQW 36430/11-15)

Mr Ford: This contract is administered, and has been extended, by the Scottish Prison Service. The Northern Ireland Prison Service has not had any role in the extension of the contract.

The Scottish Prison Service first advertised the tender in March 2009 and the contract commenced in September 2009.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice what was the average annual cost to the public purse of incarcerating a prisoner in each year between 2008 and 2013, broken down by prison.

(AQW 36459/11-15)

Mr Ford: The average annual cost to the public purse of incarcerating a prisoner in each year between 2008 and 2013 is set out in Table A below. This average cost is for Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) as a whole as the cost per prisoner place (CPPP) is not broken down by prison on an annual basis.

Table A: Cost per Prisoner Place (CPPP)

2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
£81,340	£77,831	£73,762	£71,398	£66,494	£62,898

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice whether he plans to adjust the threshold at which the Probation Board for Northern Ireland arrives at an assessment of dangerousness.

(AQO 6689/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are no plans to adjust the threshold at this time. As I outlined in my response to a previous question on this matter, the determination of dangerousness in respect of offenders is a matter for the courts.

The Probation Board assists in this process by assessing the risk of serious harm presented by offenders, using its Risk of Serious Harm procedures. These are rigorous and structured procedures resulting in the production of pre-sentence reports for the courts to use as information to support their determination of dangerousness for offenders. These procedures were most recently reviewed in 2013.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the development of a new women's prison facility.

(AQO 6690/11-15)

Mr Ford: Following approval of the Strategic Outline Case by the Department of Finance and Personnel in July, NIPS Officials are in the process of appointing an Integrated Design Team, which will progress the Project through the Business Case, Exemplar Design and Procurement processes to construction and handover of the new facility.

Officials are at an advanced stage in the process of developing plans for a step-down facility on the Hydebank Wood site for women prisoners nearing the end of their sentence and preparing to return to the community. I am hopeful that this facility will be available by summer 2015.

I am also pleased to inform you that work is now completed on the upgrade of Ash House infill. This will provide a range of additional educational, training and support services for female prisoners.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Justice for an update on equal pay for PSNI and Northern Ireland Office staff, including a timeline for the resolution of this issue.

(AQO 6691/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am pleased that the Finance Minister has submitted a draft paper on this matter for consideration by the Executive. I continue to be supportive of a centrally funded and centrally driven solution.

As this draft paper is currently with the Executive for consideration, I am unable to provide a timeline for the resolution of this issue.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Justice to outline his Department's position on the need for legislative powers to deal with the prohibition of legal highs.

(AQO 6692/11-15)

Mr Ford: The emergence of New Psychoactive Substances is of serious concern to us all.

The legislation governing the sale and distribution of drugs remains a reserved matter. However, these substances can have a devastating impact and it is clear that more needs to be done.

The initial success of Belfast City Council's use of existing legislative powers to remove these harmful substances from sale has been replicated in both Omagh and Larne and my Department will continue to support further action by Local Councils across Northern Ireland.

In December 2013, the UK Government announced a Home Office-led Review of the effectiveness of the current legislative response to new psychoactive substances. I understand that this Review is informed by exploring the range of approaches taken internationally in order to identify legislative options for enhancing the current response.

Given the urgency of dealing with these dangerous substances, I wrote recently to the Minister of State for Crime Prevention recently seeking an update on progress.

In the meantime, my Department, the PSNI and Local Councils, will continue to do all that we can to remove these harmful substances from our communities.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Justice for an update on pension payments to RUC widows.
(AQO 6693/11-15)

Mr Ford: I remain keen to give effect to the will of the Assembly that, under Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, police widows who remarry or who have remarried after 1 January 1989 should retain, or have reinstated, their pensions. However, there are a number of technical issues that need to be resolved with the Department of Finance & Personnel and with HM Treasury before I can give approval for payments to commence.

I have written to the Finance Minister seeking to address these issues urgently and I understand he is engaging with HM Treasury on the matter. I await a substantive response.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Justice whether he has any plans to engage with the Law Society and Bar Council to resolve the outstanding issues of Legal Aid.
(AQO 6694/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have a continuing process of engagement with the Law Society and Bar Council in respect of reform of legal aid. This includes discussions on remuneration in the Crown Court and for all types of civil legal aid.

I am consulting with both organisations on the introduction of a statutory registration scheme and on a range of secondary legislation flowing from the Legal Aid and Coroners' Courts Bill.

I plan to publish a consultation document on the scope of legal aid on which I will wish to engage closely with the legal profession.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to explain his reference in replying to AQO 6682/11-15 to criminal activity by dissident unionists; and to identify any such groups to which he was referring.
(AQW 36677/11-15)

Mr Ford: I would refer you to the reply I gave Mr Sydney Anderson (Upper Bann) to AQO/5032/11-151 during Question Time on 19 November 2013.

1Official Report (Hansard) Tuesday 19 November 2013, Volume 89, No 6.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether Northern Ireland Prison Service drugs testing is out of contract.
(AQW 36689/11-15)

Mr Ford: The NIPS drug testing is not out of contract.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the Northern Ireland Community Safety College project at Desertcreat.
(AQW 36807/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Programme Board commissioned a review of the project in early April. It established that the current design for the College would cost £25m more than the approved business case. The design review and value engineering exercise identified potential savings in the region of £18m. Further work and analysis was commissioned to validate the potential savings. This work has now been completed and a cost report, presented to the Programme Board on 25 September, is being considered.

In parallel, work is continuing to ensure that all the conditions of approval attached to the outline business case are fully addressed.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 34553/11-15, how many road sweepers and vacuum tankers are available for use in any one council or constituency area.
(AQW 35535/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): My Department's Transport NI Operations & Maintenance unit has a total of 24 vacuum tankers located at depots across four Divisional areas.

There are an additional 12 dual-function vehicles, which are generally used as road sweepers, but can also be used for gully cleaning.

Details of the locations of the equipment and the council areas serviced are set out in the following table (equipment can be shared across depots to help meet particular pressures):

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much has been collected from car parking fines in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 35592/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the amount collected from Penalty Charge Notices in each of the last three financial years, are set out in the table below:

	2011/2012	2012/2013	2013/2014
Amount (*)	£3,843,785	£4,271,524	£4,624,187

(* amounts collected may relate to Penalty Charge Notices issued in an earlier financial year)

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department has spent on archeological digs in each of the last three years.

(AQW 35953/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of my Department's spend on archaeological works in each of the past three years are set out in the table below. For completeness I have included figures for 2011/12.

Year	Spend on archaeological works (£K)
2011/12	95.0
2012/13	694.2
2014/15 (to date)	343.2

It should be noted that these figures include the costs of archaeological investigation carried out in advance of the road construction, archaeological works carried out during the road construction contract and the post excavation process (carbon dating / preservation/recording/ production of archaeological reports etc).

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what discussions are on-going to resolve the impasse between his Department, Ards Borough Council and the Crown Estates on the new sewage pumping station at Millisle.
(AQW 35982/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Legal negotiations and site purchasing processes in relation to the new pumping station at Millisle have been taking longer than anticipated. NI Water is unaware of an impasse but continues to engage with all the parties in order to complete the process as quickly as possible.

Crown Estates must transfer a strip of land to Ards Borough Council prior to NI Water purchasing the entire site from the Council. Lands & Property Services are currently working with Crown Estates' commercial agents to assess the value of the land before any purchase can take place.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the cost of upgrading a sewerage system.
(AQW 35984/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The cost of upgrading sewerage systems varies greatly depending on the size of the system to be upgraded and the extent of the work required. NI Water currently operates approximately 15,000 km of sewers and during 2013/14 replaced or upgraded approximately 25km of sewers.

NI Water does not usually upgrade sewerage systems in their entirety, rather work is targeted at resolving particular issues in parts of the systems through base maintenance work, taking action to improve discharges thereby improving water quality and enhancing capacity. Individual projects will usually involve a combination of these types of work.

As an example the current upgrade to the sewerage infrastructure in the Bangor area has cost an estimated £3m to date and has involved the upgrading of sewers, construction of a new pumping station and providing extra storage capacity for times of heavy rainfall.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any interested parties are in discussions to buy Donaghadee bus station.
(AQW 35985/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that the former Donaghadee bus depot is currently going through the D1 Land and Property Services disposal process and two public sector bodies have shown initial interest.

Both parties are doing initial due diligence exercises.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the implications for councils of the transfer of off-street car parks; and what investment will be required to bring the car parks up to the required standard.
(AQW 36009/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The transfer of off-street car parks to councils will necessitate them acquiring the necessary powers to create and dispose of off-street car parks and to enable them to carry out enforcement activities. The Off-Street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill will provide district councils with these powers. It would:

transfer to councils certain powers under the Road Traffic Regulation (Northern Ireland) Order 1997; and provide councils with decriminalised powers of enforcement under the Traffic Management (Northern Ireland) 2005.

Councils will also need to obtain the necessary assets to execute the related parking function and this will be effected by means of a transfer scheme to be made under Section 122 of the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014.

Councils will be empowered to operate off-street car parking, however, my Department has offered councils the option to utilise its contracts and arrangements up until at least October 2016, to operate and manage car parking on their behalf should they wish to do so.

Car parks are maintained to an appropriate standard and will continue to be operated by my Department until 31 March 2015.

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 30061/11-15, for an update on the progress by Transport NI and NI Water on the Drumbeg Mews development in Lisburn, following the serving of an Article 11 notice on the developer on 8 June 2010; and when this issue will be concluded.

(AQW 36034/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised the Developer failed to complete the storm sewer serving the development at Drumbeg Mews in Lisburn.

Northern Ireland Water has completed a technical and economic assessment of a number of solutions to resolve the uncompleted storm sewers within the development. This involved the design of a dedicated storm outfall sewer to serve Drumbeg Mews and a number of other adjacent developments at this location. The detailed design and estimated costs are currently under review.

Northern Ireland Water's programme is to decide on a final solution within the next four weeks and, subject to the necessary finance being made available, it proposes to undertake the work to bring the sewers up to an adoptable standard during this financial year and commence the project at the earliest opportunity.

In order to avoid nugatory work, the final road surface cannot be progressed until the issues regarding the sewers within the development have been resolved. All other outstanding matters have been addressed. My officials have continued to correspond with their counterparts in Northern Ireland Water at quarterly meetings to receive updates on the design process.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether TransportNI will provide signage for A26 traffic for the Ballymena Park and Ride at the Balee Roundabout.

(AQW 36048/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Ballee park and ride site is an existing facility which is well established and well used, on the Antrim Road out of Ballymena, on the Ballymena to Belfast transport corridor.

I can confirm existing signage for the car park accords with my Department's current policy, which states the facility should be signed from the nearest A or B class road which, in this case, is adjacent to the car park.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development in how many instances during the past month has his Department been unable to repair non-functioning streetlights due to resource limitations.

(AQW 36049/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the outcome of June monitoring, my Department is facing a significant budget shortfall. Consequently, I have had to take the difficult decision to suspend work by external contractors to repair street lights that fail, unless they pose an electrical or structural hazard.

My Department's in-house Operations and Maintenance staff will strive to deal with as many street lighting defects as possible, giving priority to electrical and structural safety defects, followed by large group light outages, smaller groups and then individual street lights.

As of 19 September, my Department was aware of approximately 5,300 street lights that were not functioning.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many potholes have been repaired in North Down over the last three years.

(AQW 36051/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: For record purposes, my Department groups together the number of surface defects which are identified during cyclical safety inspections, reports from members of the public and elected representatives.

The data below indicates repairs associated with potholes, kerb/ flagging defects and ironwork carried out on footways and carriageways within North Down:

Year	Number of Surface Defects
2011/12	3719

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development how many times since May 2011 has he transferred an Assembly Question to a Freedom of Information request; and of these, to detail (i) the number that resulted in the supply of the requested information; (ii) who provided the advice regarding the transfer and whether the departmental solicitor was involved; (iii) when this procedure became departmental practice; and (iv) whether the relevant Member was advised of this procedure in advance of the transfer.

(AQW 36065/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Since taking up my post in May 2011 I have never transferred an Assembly Question to a Freedom of Information request.

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the potential obstacles in the disposal or maintenance of redundant reservoirs.

(AQW 36107/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water considers that the only potential obstacle it faces in disposing of redundant reservoirs is that the location of some reservoirs could mean there will be limited demand for them, especially in the current economic climate.

NI Water is continuing to fulfil its responsibilities in respect of maintaining redundant reservoirs and is not aware of any potential obstacle that would prevent it from doing so.

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any plans for the disposal of NI Water's redundant reservoirs.

(AQW 36109/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In accordance with the terms of its operating licence, NI Water has an obligation to dispose of assets that are no longer of use and 24 reservoirs have been identified for disposal during the current financial year.

NI Water appreciates the potential for local community use through continued public ownership and it agreed to offer these reservoirs to the public sector in the first instance, to determine any expressions of interest, prior to advertising them for sale on the open market. Expressions of interest were invited from the public sector in accordance with the Department of Finance and Personnel's Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland guidance document.

Expressions of interest have now been received for several reservoirs and NI Water will be meeting with the interested parties in the near future with a view to progressing sales to public sector bodies. Where no clear expression of interest has been received from the public sector, NI Water will consider the potential for selling on the open market and advertise accordingly.

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any grant funding is available to local councils to assist them in the procurement of redundant reservoirs.

(AQW 36110/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Department for Regional Development does not provide grant funding to assist with the purchase of redundant reservoirs.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new rail routes are being considered by his Department.

(AQW 36119/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I set out my strategic direction for railways investment over the next 20 years in the Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy, which I published in May of this year.

The Strategy includes proposals for feasibility studies of extensions to the network west along the road network on the A6 towards the Castledawson roundabout and along either the M1/A4 or A3/A29 corridors in the vicinity of Dungannon and Armagh. Also, the feasibility will be considered of re-opening the Antrim to Knockmore line, with an option of a future rail link to Belfast International Airport should air passenger numbers grow towards 10 million, as is predicted by the airport operator.

Progress in implementing the Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy will depend upon the resources made available in future budget rounds.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the operating costs of NI Railways in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36120/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The cost of sales reported in the NI Rail accounts is as follows:

	2013/14 £'000	2012/13 £'000	2011/12 £'000
NI Railways	60,361	58,199	54,929

Note: Operating costs exclude costs included in the cost of sales figures.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many trains are currently operated by NI Railways.

(AQW 36121/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that NI Railways currently operate a fleet of:

- 23 x 3-car Class 3000 units; and
- 20 x 3-car Class 4000 units.

During peak times, Monday to Friday, Translink has advised that there will typically be 37 train units in service.

In addition NIR operate two locomotive-hauled Enterprise trains on the Belfast-Dublin route. Each train contains seven passenger coaches.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department provides in subsidies to NI Railways.

Mr Kennedy: In 2013/14 the Department provided £21.7m of revenue subsidies and £22.3m of capital subsidies. Combined these subsidies account for 70.1% of the total NI Railways turnover figure for 2013/14.

By comparison the 2011/12 NIR accounts show that the Department provided £23.9m of revenue subsidies and £19.4m of capital subsidies. Combined this accounts for 76.7% of the turnover figure.

Similarly, looking at a five year comparison, the 2009/2010 NIR accounts show that the Department provided £23.6m of revenue subsidies and £16.5m of capital subsidies. Combined this accounts for 77.3% of the total turnover figure for the year.

The amount of revenue subsidy does not include Concessionary Fares support as this is subsidy to the passenger, not to the operator, and is provided by way of reimbursement.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many staff are currently employed by NI Railways.
(AQW 36123/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that as at 31 August 2014, 929 staff were employed by Northern Ireland Railways.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what guidance is provided to drivers in relation to the drop-off locations for passengers of the Door-2-Door Transport scheme,
(AQW 36148/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Door-2-Door transport scheme ceased operating on 31 March 2013 and an interim service operated by Disability Action and known as the Disability Action Transport Scheme (DATS) started on 1 April 2013.

Disability Action, who has operational responsibility for DATS, has carried out a review of the various pick-up and drop-off points and has instructed its drivers to only pick-up or drop off passengers at set locations which take account of the safety of the passengers, members of the public, other road users and the driver. Passengers are advised of these arrangements when booking their trips.

In circumstances where a passenger requests an alternative pick-up or drop-off location, Disability Action will consider the request; however the safety of all concerned is the deciding factor.

I understand that you contacted Disability Action directly on this issue and that it replied to you on 9 September 2014.

All Disability Action drivers have been MiDAS trained (the Minibus Driver Awareness Scheme), which emphasises the importance of being mindful to the safety of other road users in addition to personal and passenger safety. Drivers should not pick-up or set down passengers where they are likely to cause an obstruction or safety hazards for others.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Regional Development to provide details, including the date of commencement, of scheme 61817/U1701 Ballynamullan Bridge, Farmhill Road, Omagh.
(AQW 36158/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The work planned at Ballynamullan Bridge on the Farmhill Road in Omagh consists of strengthening the existing masonry arch structure and providing an arch extension on the downstream side of the bridge. This work will improve the road geometry at this location by providing a 6 metre wide road to allow vehicles to pass and will provide a section of footway in the vicinity of the bridge.

It is hoped that work on this scheme will begin on the ground during January 2015.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development for a breakdown of the work carried out by Enterprise Managed Services Ltd on behalf of NI Water in 2008/09, including the amount paid for each element of the contract.
(AQW 36182/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In 2008/09 Enterprise Managed Services Ltd carried out work to the value of £2,505k for Northern Ireland Water under the Meter Survey and Installation Contract that had been awarded to them following a competitive market tender process. The work carried out and the amount paid for each element is provided in the table below.

Item Description	Amount Paid
Property survey	£120k
Combined survey and meter installation	£1,721k
Meter installation at new build properties	£309k
Streetworks Notification	£43k
Meters and ancillary metering supplies	£312k

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the works planned for the A26.
(AQW 36185/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is continuing to progress the procurement of the A26 Dualling scheme. My officials are currently assessing tender submissions, and it is anticipated that construction could commence in late 2014.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the annual cost of electricity to power the street lighting network.

(AQW 36216/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Information on the cost of electricity for street lighting for the current financial year is commercially sensitive, however, I can confirm the cost of electricity to power the street lighting network in 2013/14 was £10.6 million.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development why phase 2 of the Derry-Coleraine rail scheme has been delayed beyond the end of 2015.

Mr Kennedy: The matter was raised previously in AQW 32620/11-15 (April 2014).

The initial Procurement Strategy for the Coleraine to Londonderry Renewals Project Phase 2 would have seen the Signalling & Telecomms elements of the works designed and delivered by one contractor as a single appointment Design and Build Contract. The pre-qualification questionnaire and process for this approach resulted in suitable responses from three separate contracting teams. However, the tender process produced only one bidder. The Project Team and Translink Board concluded that the single tender did not offer value for money. As a result, it re-considered its Procurement Strategy and revised it so that the design and build elements would be taken forward separately.

The difficulties encountered with the first procurement process have resulted in a delay to Phase 2 completion. Translink previously reported the delay in September 2013 and I expressed my disappointment to the Assembly at that time.

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on Portavoe Reservoir, given that works have now been completed.

(AQW 36330/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water's essential reservoir safety maintenance work at Portavoe Reservoir was completed in early August 2014, and since then the reservoir has been refilling naturally.

Over 400 live swan mussels were successfully returned to the reservoir on 5 August 2014 and the reservoir is to be stocked with fish in the New Year, in advance of the 2015 angling season. NI Water will continue to work closely with the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to monitor progress at the site.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of the serious incident on 22 September involving a Translink bus transporting children from Castlederg to school, whether there is any early indication as to the cause of the accident; and what lessons can be learned.

Mr Kennedy: I would like to put on record my sincere best wishes for all those affected by this incident particularly the children and their families. I would also like to put on record my thanks to the Translink bus driver and the Emergency services who acted so promptly to deal with the situation.

I am advised that at 08.20 on 22 September the Translink 96H service from Castlederg, with 55 passengers on board, collided with a car on the Omagh Road Drumquin, resulting in both vehicles going off the road and the bus ending on its side. All passengers were evacuated via the broken rear windscreen. Buses following also stopped to offer assistance. I am further advised that the Translink driver rang the emergency services and that the PSNI, Ambulance Service and Fire Services all attended the scene, 48 people were transferred to hospital including both the Translink driver and the car driver. A medic and PSNI Officer travelled with the children. I understand there were no critical injuries. The bus and car are extensively damaged.

My Department was informed of the incident by Translink and I understand the responsible authority for school transport in the area (Western Education and Library Board) was also informed. As you would expect the incident will be subject to a full investigation by the PSNI and it would not be appropriate for me to comment further at this time. Clearly the safety of bus passengers including school children must be of paramount concern to myself, the Minister for Education and the bus licensing authorities. I believe it would be best to await the outcome of that investigation before drawing conclusions or determining lessons learned.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the investments his Department plans on make in Ballymena Railway and Bus Station.

(AQW 36398/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that there is no change in position since the matter was raised previously in AQW 34407/11-15 (July 2014) and AQW 35379/11-15 (September 2014).

The refurbishment of Ballymena Bus and Rail Integrated Station has commenced project scoping and feasibility review. The project is included in Translink's Corporate Plan and is scheduled for execution during 2016/17 and 2017/18 financial years, subject to the successful conclusion of the approval process and securing of the necessary funding.

Department for Social Development

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people on the Common Waiting List for social housing as of 1 September in each of the last ten years, broken down by local council area.

(AQW 35867/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The information is not available in the format requested: The Housing Executive advises that it cannot provide the data at 1 September as they do not report on that timeframe. They have however provided the information in the table attached detailing the number of people on the Common Waiting List as at 31 March for each of the last ten years, from 2005 to 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development what communication his Department has had with Neighbourhood Renewal Projects in East Londonderry regarding departmental funding in the immediate to short term future.

(AQW 35999/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The project promoters of all currently funded Neighbourhood Renewal projects were written to in June 2014 confirming that they will continue to receive Neighbourhood Renewal funding, in line with their Contracts for Funding, up to 31 March 2015. Project promoters were also advised that from 1 April 2015, under the Reform of Local Government, the new Causeway Coast and Glens Council will be responsible for urban regeneration and community development and will therefore take all decisions regarding funding from this date. This is dependent on the Executive agreeing to the immediate introduction of the Regeneration and Housing Bill and the legislation being in place by 31 March 2015.

Officials in my Department are assisting the shadow Council regarding its plans for regeneration and community development from 1 April 2015.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of (i) the First Minister's view that non-implementation of Welfare Reform will cost £1bn per annum; and (ii) of the estimated additional annual cost of each social security programme which would emerge in the event that the Welfare Reform Bill was not enacted by the Assembly.

(AQW 36021/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The costs to Northern Ireland of not implementing Welfare Reform will continue to escalate the longer decisions are delayed, impacting the monies available for public services in Northern Ireland now and in the future.

The First Minister is right to set out the potential scale of the financial risks which Northern Ireland is facing and, as Minister for Social Development, I cannot disagree with his statement on the potential costs. The scale of the financial costs for each social security programme should the Welfare Reform Bill not proceed will largely be determined by decisions of the Executive on how it wishes in the future to deliver social security and tax credits for Northern Ireland claimants and by the level of the adjustments made by UK Ministers to the NI Block DEL as a result of not implementing welfare reform.

It would be remiss of me not to highlight the significant financial advantages that Northern Ireland has under the current social security arrangements. Over £6 billion of social security and tax credit spending is provided directly by HM Treasury to Northern Ireland each year. The level of support is approximately £3.5 billion over and above the amounts derived is HM Treasury from the National Insurance Fund for Northern Ireland. Breaking parity puts this support potentially at risk.

I remain committed to and am working to secure agreement to implement Welfare Reform as I believe that this will deliver the best possible outcome for Northern Ireland.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on social housing plans in South Antrim.
(AQW 36060/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In the South Antrim Parliamentary Constituency area there are five schemes totalling 77 units currently under construction. These are at:

- Ballydonagh Road, Crumlin (Clanmil) - 39 family units
- 73 Islay Street, Antrim (Clanmil) - 1 family unit
- Ballyduff Primary School, Newtownabbey (OakleeTrinity) - 30 family units
- 103 Ballyeaston Road, Newtownabbey (Triangle) - 3 learning disability units
- 83 Ballyeaston Road, Newtownabbey (Triangle) - 4 learning disability units

In addition, the Social Housing Development Programme for 2014/15 - 2016/17 includes eleven new build schemes totalling 121 homes. These are at:

- 4-6 Main Street, Crumlin (OakleeTrinity) - 4 family units to start 2014/15
- Glenavy Road, Crumlin (Triangle) - 3 learning disability to start 2014/15
- Norfolk Court, Antrim (OakleeTrinity) - 12 mental health to start 2014/15
- The Old Mill, Crumlin (Clanmil) - 32 family units to start 2015/16
- Chainé Court, Ballycraigy (Fold) - 10 family units to start 2015/16
- Moylinney Closure ( OakleeTrinity) - 24 mental health to start 2015/16
- Abbey Gardens, Antrim (Triangle) - 13 learning disability to start 2015/16
- 53 Mill Road, Crumlin (Clanmil) - 11 family units to start 2016/17
- Ballyduff Road, Carnmoney (Apex) - 6 family units to start 2016/17
- 19-23 Moss Road, Newtownabbey (Apex) - 6 family units to start 2016/17

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 34987/11-15, for his assessment of course attendance not being mandatory; and whether he will ensure that the Northern Ireland Housing Executive changes its policy to ensure staff are properly trained.

(AQW 36093/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised me that they will continue to ensure that their professional and administrative Human Resource (HR) staff remain knowledgeable and competent in the submission of applications for retirement to NILGOSC. Where attendance at a NILGOSC course is deemed necessary to maintain that the level of competence, this will be mandatory.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development how many applications for Disability Living Allowance, for the Care Component and/or the Mobility Component, were declined without a medical examination, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36137/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In most instances when determining entitlement to DLA, the evidence considered includes the completed claim form, reports from GPs and other Health Care professionals. However, in a small number of cases, the Agency may also request that its Medical Service Provider complete what is known as an Examining Medical Practitioner (EMP) report. This report gathers information on the diagnosis, the history of the condition, treatment and the severity and likely disabling effects of the condition on day-to-day living.

The table below shows the total number of Disability Living Allowance applications refused where an EMP report has not been sought by the decision – maker when determining the application. The information available is not broken down by Care and/or Mobility Component.

Year	Total Number of DLA Applications Refused (no EMP Report)
2011/12	8275
2012/13	7916
2013/14	7775

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development, following recent concerns that have been raised, for an assurance that his Department is managing the offices of the Appeals Services effectively.

(AQW 36153/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Appeals Service (TAS) is managed by the NI Courts & Tribunals Service of the Department of Justice, under the terms of a Service Level Agreement with this Department. TAS has the necessary procedural guides in place for staff and checking guides for management. It is also subject to standard governance arrangements, to include management checklists, assurance statements and risk registers, all of which are completed quarterly for senior management information and consideration in both Departments. This Department is managing the offices of The Appeals Service effectively

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development whether temporary ongoing transfers within the Civil Service can be used to ensure that Appeal Services offices are operating with only the necessary number of staff.

(AQW 36154/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There is no formal policy for temporary transfers within the NICS. Staff complements in both Appeals Service offices are kept under review to ensure appropriate staffing levels are maintained in line with business requirements, current workloads and future projections.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development given that financial support can be accessed from the Green Investment Bank, what consideration has been given to including a district heating scheme in a social housing project.

(AQW 36162/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department has no plans to include a district heating scheme in a social housing project. Where existing estates are concerned the Housing Executive has already carried out feasibility studies and decided against. The main problem is that in existing estates many former social houses have been sold so there are insufficient properties in public ownership to make such a scheme viable and owner occupiers are generally reluctant to participate.

Where new schemes are concerned, housing associations have responsibility for determining the type of heating to be provided in their new developments. I would suggest that in the first instance you make contact with their representative body, the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations (NIFHA). If NIFHA is interested in exploring a scheme of this nature my Department would be content to consider. NIFHA's Chief Executive is Mr Cameron Watt at cwatt@nifha.org

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development what Housing Executive related works are planned for Broombeg in Ballycastle; and when these works will be completed.

(AQW 36184/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that Broombeg and Broombeg View are included in an External Cyclical Maintenance scheme with an estimated start date of early December 2014.

In addition, the following flats are included in a Health and Safety (Fire Doors) scheme which is currently programmed for Spring 2015: -

- Broombeg: Numbers 4, 5, 6, 7, 13, and 14
- Broombeg View: Numbers 3, 4, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16 and 17

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the reasons why it is possible for a person to have more points allocated for housing in Rocavan Meadows, Broughshane than any other area of Ballymena.

(AQW 36200/11-15)

Mr McCausland: All applicants are assessed in accordance with the Housing Selection Scheme which is administered by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The housing assessment is based on the individual needs of the applicant and not locality. Therefore applicants for Rocavan Meadows would not have a higher level of points than applicants for other areas of Ballymena.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development how many licences for a gambling premise are currently active, broken down by constituency; and to outline how this compares with 2009.

(AQW 36301/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Licensing of gambling activities is mainly the responsibility of the courts and district councils; my Department is responsible for the issuing of track betting licences.

My Department does not hold the information which has been requested regarding licences issued by courts or district councils. In respect of track betting licences, my Department has granted two licences for horse racing and two licences for greyhound racing.

The consultation 'Future Regulation of Gambling in Northern Ireland' carried out by my Department in 2011, and available on the Department's website, outlined the size of the industry here at that time. I would also refer the member to the answer provided to AQW 30097/11-15 in respect of the number of bookmaking office licences granted in 2008/09 and 2013/14.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what engagement has there been with organisations representing the visually impaired in regard to the drafting of guidelines under the Licensing of Pavement Cafés Act (Northern Ireland) 2014. (AQW 36355/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department was actively engaged in discussions with the Inclusive Mobility and Transport Advisory Committee (Imtac) throughout the drafting of legislation to regulate pavement cafés. Also, during the passage of the Bill relevant organisations gave evidence to the Social Development Committee about aspects of the regulatory framework including the preparation of guidelines.

My Department remains committed to engaging with Imtac on the content of the guidelines for the implementation of the Licensing of Pavement Cafés Act (Northern Ireland) 2014. Indeed, officials recently advised Imtac that they expect to be in position to approach the committee about the guidelines in the very near future.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department will increase support to assist with the development of a new masterplan for Omagh Town Centre, given that the development of the Lisanelly site will free up additional sites in the town for potential regeneration. (AQW 36384/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A review of the Omagh Town Centre Masterplan has been commissioned by Omagh District Council and consultants have been appointed to take this forward. My Department had funded and launched the previous Masterplan in January 2009. Whilst I am fully supportive of this review of the Masterplan, due to funding pressure I cannot, at this time, offer any funding to the council to assist with the delivery of the review.

My Department has been developing Comprehensive Development Plan to for the area around Kevlin Avenue/Dublin Road. This work also involves examining the impact of sites that may be freed up with the re-location of the schools to the new School Campus at Lisanelly. Part of this project required a detailed traffic study (undertaken in conjunction with Roads Service with funding from DSD). This Comprehensive Development Plan and its associated outputs will provide significant data to support the review of Omagh Town Centre Masterplan.

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development what checks his Department completes, in terms of verifying qualifications and establishing suitability for a role, when an organisation or project funded by his Department employs a member of staff. (AQW 36417/11-15)

Mr Storey: In line with standard Government practice, the Department for Social Development (DSD) provides funding to organisations for salaried posts, not individuals. The Department is not the employer and therefore accepts no responsibility or liability for staff employed by an organisation to which it provides funding for salaried posts. The organisation is responsible for all matters in connection with the employment of its staff, including verifying qualifications.

When appraising an application for grant funding which includes expenditure for salaried posts, the Department requires the applicant to provide copies of the job descriptions for those posts and supporting evidence that each salary is in line with suggested duties, skills and level of responsibility of the posts, using the benchmark of comparable posts as set out in the National Joint Council (NJC) Pay Scales. The Department also requires a declaration from the organisation's Chairperson that each post-holder has the relevant skills and experience to carry out the duties of their post effectively.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the comprehensive development schemes delivered in North Down, in each of the last five years. (AQW 36421/11-15)

Mr Storey: During this period, my Department has been working on the Queen's Parade comprehensive development scheme in North Down as identified in the Bangor Town Centre Masterplan.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development what measures are in place to safeguard those under the PSNI Witness Protection Scheme and current or former security personnel living in a Northern Ireland Housing Executive property. (AQW 36441/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that they do not have any particular measures in place for these groups but would deal with each case on an individual basis as required. In relation to the Witness Protection Scheme this is an operational matter for the PSNI and I would suggest the Member contacts the PSNI for further information on this.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people in Northern Ireland currently in receipt of (i) Attendance Allowance; and (ii) Pension Credit. (AQW 36487/11-15)

Mr Storey: At May 2014, which is, the latest published figures there were;

53,210 Attendance Allowance recipients and (ii) 88,860 Pension Credit recipients.

The information provided is an Official Statistic. The Production and dissemination of all such Statistics is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the current status of the Women's Centre Childcare Fund. (AQW 36649/11-15)

Mr Storey: Contracts for the Women's Centres Childcare Fund programme have been issued for 2014/15 and it is not yet known whether these will be impacted by anticipated budget restrictions across DSD programmes.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the total sum of compensation his Department is now facing in respect of defaulting on contractual obligations with Capita and Personal Independence Payments. (AQW 36666/11-15)

Mr Storey: The failure to progress welfare reform is having serious financial implications for Northern Ireland which will increase the longer delays continue.

The contract with Capita for the provision of assessment services for claimants of Personal Independence Payment places obligations on both Capita and the Department. The total financial consequences for my Department should the Northern Ireland Executive decide not to implement the Personal Independence Payment can only be determined once any legal and commercial discussions have been concluded with Capita.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on his Department's position on the revitalisation of Queen's Parade, Bangor. (AQW 36745/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department in partnership with North Down Borough Council undertook a Revitalisation Project on Queen's Parade with the aim of encouraging economic regeneration by encouraging increased footfall in the town centre. Project 24 has proved to be a major success and has built on the town's vibrant art and craft scene through the creation a new space for artists to work and display their art. Project 24 was developed on the basis that it would be an interim project while plans were being prepared for the comprehensive development of the Queen's Parade site by the Department after acquiring the site in early 2013.

In relation to the Queen's Parade development, a Consultancy Planning Team was appointed on 6 March 2014 and my officials in partnership with North Down Borough Council are currently working with the Consultancy Team to complete the additional land acquisition, statutory processes and Planning Approval by March 2015

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 35867/11-15, to detail the number of people who were classified as being in housing stress in each year. (AQW 36746/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table attached provides details of the number of people who were in housing stress at 31 March in each of the last ten years by Council area.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Brady asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the claim made in the recent Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action report that the implementation of Welfare Reform would remove £750 million from the economy. (AQO 6716/11-15)

Mr McCausland: At the time of the publication of the report my predecessor was publicly critical the inaccuracies in the report and the negative impact it could have on people claiming benefit. My predecessor also met with NICVA to discuss his concerns regarding the analysis and the accuracy of the findings.

I have previously stated that the cost of £750million, which has been quoted by media commentators and political opponents of the Bill, does not reflect the cost of implementing the Welfare Reform Bill in Northern Ireland. The report includes costs of nearly £300 million arising from the changes which have already taken place in the tax and benefit system for example the move of the up rating of benefits from RPI to CPI and the restriction on tax credit income levels. The Executive nor the Assembly have devolved responsibility for the tax system and therefore have no control over these changes. The £750 million also includes over £100 million to be saved by moving people off long term sickness benefit which they have been receiving for many years and where, if they are deemed able, they are being asked to re-engage with the labour market. These people are an economically inactive group which the Executive is seeking to get back into work. This reassessment programme has already been completed and is not part of the bill. The report also takes no account of the positive financial impact of Universal Credit, enhanced childcare provision, the removal of hours limit and financial cliff edges which are prominent features of the current benefit and tax credit systems. I can therefore provide reassurance that the Welfare Reform Bill 2012 will not remove £750 million from the economy and as mentioned in the recent blog from the Chief Executive of NICVA, commentators have used the £750 million figure in a way that it suits them. As my predecessor stated in this Assembly "Let's get the scare tactics off the table and have a genuine debate about how we implement welfare reform".

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the flexibilities he has secured on the proposed introduction of the Under Occupation Charge. (AQO 6717/11-15)

Mr McCausland: While I am supportive of reform of the benefit system where it seeks to support people back into work and offer help to those who are genuinely in need of assistance, I am also very aware of the concerns people have about the Welfare Reform proposals and the need to protect the vulnerable in our society.

Under-occupation in the social rented sector exists for all sorts of reasons and I believe there that there are a number of challenges specific to Northern Ireland, which do require additional consideration. This includes the nature of our housing stock, the level of under-occupation and our concerns related to the segregated nature of our housing.

This makes managing under occupation here more difficult.

You will be aware that my predecessor met with Lord Freud on a number of occasions to ensure GB is fully aware of the specific circumstances here and has successfully negotiated a package of measures which will mitigate and ameliorate the more negative elements of the Westminster Welfare Reform package. This includes measures which are designed to assist existing tenants who would be specifically impacted by the Under Occupation provision.

The package of measures which my predecessor has negotiated needs to be agreed by the Executive. The continued deferral of Welfare Reform will result in increasingly significant financial implications for all of the devolved institutions here. For that reason it is incumbent upon us all in the Executive to demonstrate mature political leadership and reach consensus on how best to change the social security system rather than refusing to reform the system.

I cannot make these decisions on Welfare Reform alone.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister for Social Development, given the recent offer by the British government to Scotland of significant changes to Welfare Reform, what efforts he is making to negotiate similar changes.

(AQO 6718/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Proposals for devolution of any aspect of the social welfare system to Scotland from Westminster arising from the Scottish 'No' vote is a matter for the UK government in consultation with the Scottish Executive. I am not aware that any offer has been made by the UK Government to make significant changes to either the social welfare system or the Welfare Reform Bill (UK) 2012, so I am therefore unable to comment on what changes I would be expected to carry out negotiations.

However, I have already successfully negotiated a package of measures in the best interests of the people of Northern Ireland which is the envy of every other region in the United Kingdom. This package needs to be agreed with the Executive and then brought to the Assembly to enable the Welfare Reform Bill in Northern Ireland to become law.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department has engaged with any relevant stakeholders to identify the demand for supported housing for young people with special needs.

(AQO 6719/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Yes. My Department and the Housing Executive engage with a range of stakeholders to identify the demand for new supported housing services. This is done primarily through a joint commissioning structure in place with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, and Health and Social Care Trusts, to identify the need and plan for the delivery of housing support services for vulnerable and disadvantaged young people.

Within this partnership the relevant Health and Social Care Trust is responsible for the identification of demand for supported housing for young people with special needs.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the current levels of child maintenance payment arrears.

(AQO 6720/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Child Maintenance Service has made significant progress in recent years, getting more money for more children and as a consequence reducing the arrears outstanding.

During 2013/14, over £27m was either collected or arranged, supporting 22,123 children across NI. This represents an extra £2.9 million for 731 more children than the previous year.

As a result, the arrears balance at 31 March 14 was £78.818m, some £2.691m less than reported for the previous year. The number of cases with a current liability, which were not paying fell from 2,616 to 1,629 during this same period, further underlining my commitment to better support separated families.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the land currently owned by his Department that will be transferred to the new Fermanagh and Omagh District Council.

(AQO 6722/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department will transfer the relevant powers, budgets and physical assets associated with the delivery of the Regeneration and Tackling Deprivation functions, which will be the responsibility of the new councils under the Reform of Local Government.

The lands currently owned by my Department, which have been identified, for transferring to Fermanagh and Omagh District Council are:

- Grosvenor Military Barracks
- Lay-by at Slater's Cross, Belleek

It is important to note that the transfer of the above lands maybe subject to further change as my Department will continue to progress regeneration activities up to the date that operational responsibility transfers to the new councils.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the Supporting People programme, including performance against the 2014 targets.

(AQO 6723/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Supporting People programme has been in operation for over ten years and my Department is currently conducting a policy and value for money review of the programme.

Supporting People has provided housing advice to help some of the most vulnerable people in our society to live as independently as possible. The programme has been instrumental in assisting with the Department of Health's resettlement programme, moving vulnerable people from long stay institutions into independent living in the community. The 2014 target of assisting 17,000 vulnerable people to live independently is currently on target to be achieved.

Unfortunately, the large hole in our public finances has budgetary implications for services like Supporting People which helps to meet the needs of some of the most vulnerable in our society. While I will do what I can to protect important services such as Supporting People, this will be extremely difficult unless all the parties reach consensus on issues such as Welfare Reform and the budget.

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the impact that the changes in the budget and criteria for departmental grant aid are having on the voluntary and community sector.

(AQO 6724/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There have been no recent changes to funding commitments made by my Department. All projects currently in receipt of funding will continue to do so in line with their Contracts for Funding, up to 31 March 2015.

However, budget reductions are anticipated in future years and may result in significant financial pressures. My officials are in the process of considering the priorities across all of the programmes currently being delivered.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Wells asked the Assembly Commission, pursuant to AQW 35242/11-15, to detail (i) the total cost of sending letters to MLAs regarding their pension entitlements during 2014; and (ii) whether a less expensive means of transmitting this information to MLAs is being considered.

(AQW 36190/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): During 2014, letters were issued to MLAs regarding their pension entitlements by post on two occasions. As noted in the response to AQW 35242/11-15, these letters were classified as 'Restricted' under the Assembly's Information Assurance Policy due to the personal and financial information contained in them. Due to the timing of the issue of the letters they were sent to Members' home addresses via Royal Mail Recorded Delivery rather than leave them in Members' pigeon holes during recess.

- (i) The total cost of issuing the two letters to Members was £362.92.
- (ii) These letters would routinely be distributed to Members via their pigeon holes in appropriately marked envelopes thus avoiding postage expenses. This is the preferred option.

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to detail the estimated cost of the Equality Impact Assessment (EQIA) on the Review of the Policy on the Flying of the Union Flag at Parliament Buildings.

(AQW 36458/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The estimated cost of the Equality Impact Assessment on the Policy Review of the Flying of the Union Flag at Parliament Buildings is £14,500. Consultancy costs total £11,500 and £3,000 will be spent on advertising costs which forms part of the formal public consultation process.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what progress is being made on resolving the issues which arose from the Haass discussions.

(AQO 5493/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): There is currently no agreement on the process to deal with the issues arising from the Haass discussions.

Mr Ross asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on their forthcoming overseas trade missions.

(AQO 6277/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Plans are being made for a visit to China. The programme will include the official opening of the Executive's Bureau Office in Beijing and a series of meetings at senior Government level. The visit will coincide with an Invest NI Trade Mission to China and we plan to support a number of events associated with the Trade Mission during the week.

Securing international projects requires long-term relationship building and raising awareness of the many advantages of investing in our local economy. We will continue to work with Invest NI in targeting countries and organisations in an effort to secure trade and investment opportunities.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, of the £26m allocated to six Signature Programmes under the Delivering Social Change framework, what proportion of funding has been allocated to delivering benefits for people with disabilities.

(AQW 35915/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Delivering Social Change framework was set up by the Northern Ireland Executive to tackle poverty and social exclusion. It represents a new level of joined-up working by Ministers and senior officials across departments to drive through initiatives which have a genuine impact on the ground.

The framework aims to deliver a sustained reduction in poverty and associated issues across all ages and to improve children and young people's health, well-being and life opportunities thereby breaking the long term cycle of multi-generational problems.

In line with the identified key priorities we announced, in October 2012, a £26m package of six Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes which focus on early interventions.

The Signature Programmes were set up to improve literacy and numeracy levels, offer increased family support and to support job creation within local communities – all of which were identified as being key priorities.

Whilst each of the six signature programmes has the capacity to positively impact on people with disabilities, we are unable to specify the proportion of funding within each that directly supports this group.

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether discussions will be held with other governments regarding any changes which may follow from the recent Scottish Referendum result, in how the workings of the British-Irish Council may operate under future administrations.

(AQW 36210/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The operation of the British-Irish Council is kept under review. Any changes arising from the result of the Scottish Referendum which would have implications for the Council would be the subject of collective discussion by its member administrations.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what action has been taken on the current 10 year strategy for children and young people; and the new strategy due in 2016.

(AQW 36519/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The current ten year Strategy for Children and Young People provides the overall strategic direction to departments, agencies and arm's length bodies for the Executive's work in relation to all aspects of the lives of children and young people. This can be seen for example in the delivery of children's health and social services, childcare, education and employment.

In addition, since 2012, the Delivering Social Change (DSC) framework which seeks to address the linked issues of child poverty, social disadvantage and improving children's lives has also contributed significantly to the achievement of the objectives set in the ten year Strategy.

In July 2014, a decision was taken to develop a separate Child Poverty Strategy 2014-2017 (in accordance with the Child Poverty Act 2010), and to engage further with stakeholders and departments in the development of a new strategy to replace the current Strategy for Children and Young People when it ends in 2016. This process will involve children and young people; parents and representative community and voluntary organisations.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the work undertaken by UNESCO on the child rights indicators.

(AQW 36521/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: UNESCO has provided a draft report to the Department setting out the findings from their study on the development of a Child Rights Indicator Framework here. The Department has now considered the draft report and will meet with UNESCO shortly to discuss the development of the final report. Officials will then arrange a meeting of the Project Reference Group to present the final report and to discuss how the findings can be taken forward.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the children's budgeting pilot.

(AQW 36602/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Children's Commissioner has recently contracted the Social Research Unit (SRU) in Dartington to carry out research into investment in children across the Executive. Following recent discussions with the sector, it was agreed that this research would be critical in informing the approach we take to any budgeting pilot.

SRU has now completed a trawl of departments and a meeting is being arranged with SRU and with the Commissioner to review progress to date and to discuss how their work can inform our approach. We will then meet with representatives from the children's sector to take their views on the way ahead.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the new children's strategy, including (i) the stakeholders approached to co-design the strategy; and (ii) the actions taken to take the design forward.

(AQW 36605/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: As indicated in our response to AQW 36519/11-15, we are in the early stages developing a new children's strategy which will replace the current 10 year Children and Young People's Strategy when it expires in 2016. At this stage we are still in the process of identifying stakeholders and will consult with them fully as we move forward.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their Department's definition of an 'older person'.

(AQW 36819/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department is currently in the process of finalising its Active Ageing Strategy, which was subject to public consultation earlier this year. For the purposes of the Strategy, an older person is defined on the basis set out in the Commissioner for Older People Act (Northern Ireland) 2011.

The Act defines an older person to be a person aged 60 or over; however, in particular circumstances, a person aged 50 or over can also be categorised as an older person.

Mr Sheehan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the progress that is being made in Delivering Social Change.

(AQO 6743/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Delivering Social Change provides a framework to foster a more effective cross departmental working approach to tackle poverty and social exclusion. It is a more streamlined and joined up method to ensure tangible and sustainable outcomes for those most in need.

The benefits of Delivering Social Change are illustrated by the multi-departmental, multi-agency and multi-sectoral implementation of key cross-cutting signature programmes. Considerable progress is being made in achieving positive outcomes through the delivery of these programmes.

Not only are they already seeing tangible outcomes on the ground, they will inform joined-up and evidence-based policies that will, in time, provide a significant influence on mainstream programme expenditure.

We announced last month the development of three further signature programmes being developed in partnership with, and co-funded by, Atlantic Philanthropies. These programmes will focus on Dementia, Early Intervention and Shared Education and are a positive example of collaborative working to improve the lives of those who need it most.

Looking to the future, using a co-design process with stakeholders, a new Delivering Social Change Strategy for Children and Young People post-2016 will be developed. This is another example of a new way of working under Delivering Social Change.

The Executive is also working on a longer term approach to improve the quality of life for our communities in the areas of health, education, employment, family and community cohesion. The outcome of this work will be a framework for future social policy interventions and investment plans.

The Executive remains committed to Delivering Social Change to tackle poverty and social deprivation.

Mr McElduff asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on Delivering Social Change for Children and Young People.

(AQO 6745/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Following consultation with stakeholders we took the decision in July to move forward separately the work on the Child Poverty Strategy 2014-2017 and Delivering Social Change for Children and Young People. The Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People will continue until 2016.

We propose to work with stakeholders using a co-design process to develop a new strategy for Children and Young People post 2016, and this work will begin shortly.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to provide the business case for her Department's tree felling programme.

(AQW 36375/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Forestry Act (2010) places a duty on the Department and provides the powers to operate a forestry programme, which includes felling of trees, in line with best practice sustainable forestry management standards. My Department's Forest Service prepares annually a Business Plan in which the extent of that felling programme is set out together with the costs and revenues planned for the delivery of the forestry programme. The annual Business Plan is prepared and targets are approved in the context of the Programme for Government and in compliance with expenditure and income budgets secured for the Spending Review period.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions she has had with the Minister for Regional Development to ensure that farmers are better prepared for severe weather.

(AQW 36473/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have had no discussions with the Minister for Regional Development regarding preparing farmers for severe weather.

There are a number of steps farmers can take in preparation for extreme winter weather. Many of these steps are normal management practice for the vast majority of farmers but I would encourage all farmers to reassess them now before the winter sets in.

Farmers should also keep a close check on weather forecasts and make appropriate adjustments where severe weather is expected. Measures such as moving stock to less exposed fields and securing vulnerable buildings are basic steps that would help lessen the effects of severe weather. Farmers are also advised to check and consider the insurance cover they have for livestock and farm buildings.

CAFRE will reinforce the message and present practical information to farmers on preparing for winter in the coming weeks through press articles and the DARD website.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of animal cruelty cases reported to her Department, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36474/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The welfare of animals here is protected by the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. It contains a range of offences including those relating to activities which may cause animals to suffer unnecessarily. However, it does not contain an offence specifically referred to as 'animal cruelty'.

My Department is responsible for investigating animal welfare cases in respect of farmed animals. Often cases do not, upon investigation, reveal unnecessary suffering. However, it is important to note that all complaints are treated seriously regardless of the nature of the allegation.

The figures for farmed animals provided in Table 1 relates to the number of farm animal welfare inspections carried out in response to welfare complaints received by my Department's Veterinary Service in the last three years.

Table 1 Farm Animal Welfare Inspections

Year	No of Reported Inspections
1Sept 2011-31August 2012	113
1 Sept 2012-31August 2013	147

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 34582/11-15, whether Forest Service did not grant any approvals for Infastrata or agree to any work to be undertaken at this site.
(AQW 36498/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The land on which Infastrata plan to undertake works is not on land owned by my Department, it is on land owned by NI Water. Forest Service has not granted any approvals or authorised the works.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail all the correspondence with Forest Service regarding the proposal to drill an exploratory well at Woodburn Forest.
(AQW 36499/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department's Forest Service manage trees on land at Woodburn Forest, which is owned by NI Water. Consequently Forest Service has received and responded to numerous correspondence and requests in relation to Infastrata's proposals to carry out exploratory drilling works at Woodburn Forest. The corresponding parties involved are: Infastrata PLC (and their agents RPS and Jet PR), NI Water, members of the public and elected representatives.

Correspondence with Infastrata and its agents relate to requests for meetings and clarification of the various departments' roles in this matter. Details of permissions, project proposals, public communication plans and technical matters, have been received by Forest Service and include copies of correspondence exchanged between Infastrata and NI Water, DETI, and DOE Strategic Planning Division.

Forest Service has corresponded with NI Water relating to their role as landowner of the forest area, and with DETI regarding clarification of the role of DOE Planning Service in respect of Environmental Impact Assessment processes for forestry land. In addition Forest Service has dealt with correspondence from members of the public on two occasions, and with elected representatives also on two occasions. This has included the release of documents under FOI.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail all cultural, language and heritage projects supported by the Rural Development Programme, including the amount awarded to each project, since 2011.
(AQW 36502/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Quality of life Axis (Axis 3) of the Rural Development Programme 2007-13 has awarded £7.2m to support 94 project applications with a rural heritage, cultural or language theme since 2011. Details of the projects are listed in the table below.

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, for the 2011-15 budget period, to detail (i) the budget reductions over £1,000, broken down by (a) the name of the item; (b) the amount of the reduction; and (c) the reduction as a percentage of the previous funding awarded; and (ii) the impact of Welfare Reform penalties on that budget.

(AQW 36512/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Executive has agreed four sets of budget reductions for my Department over the 2011-2015 Budget period. The first set was part of the Final Budget agreed by the Executive for this period in early 2011 and the associated 'Savings Delivery Plans' are available on DARD's website. These can be viewed in the following link.

<http://www.dardni.gov.uk/print/dard-budget-2011-2015-savings-delivery-plans-summary.pdf>

The reductions in these 'Savings Delivery Plans' as a percentage of the previous funding awarded are not readily available and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost.

The other three sets of reductions were agreed by the Executive in the intervening period and are summarised in the following Table 1 below.

Table 1 - Budget Reductions

Description	Date Executive	2012/13		2013/14		2014/15
	Agreed Reduction	£'000	%	£'000	%	£'000	%

Corporate Services Group Staff Costs	July 2014	-	-	-	-	374	3.3

* As these reductions are receipts the calculation does not apply

The Executive has not agreed any cuts for departments in relation to Welfare Reform and therefore this issue has not had any impact on my budget.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute study on Recreational Sea Angling will be published.

(AQW 36607/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: It is my Department's intention to publish the Inshore Fisheries Strategy and the results from the survey on Recreational Sea Angling on the same day. The publication date will be on or before the 31 October 2014.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the main findings of the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute study on Recreational Sea Angling.

(AQW 36609/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: AFBI's survey on Recreational Sea Angling will provide an insight into sea angling activity and the range of species caught by anglers in our local waters.

It is my Department's intention to publish the results from the survey on or before the 31 October 2014.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department plans to fund further education in the equine sector.

(AQW 36668/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department already funds further education in the equine sector through the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) at its Enniskillen Campus. This provision includes full-time programmes at BTEC Level 2 Diploma and BTEC Level 3 Extended Diploma.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the implementation of any animal welfare legislation.

(AQW 36669/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I understand the Member has clarified the question, advising that an update is sought on any welfare legislation that is being brought forward.

I do not propose to bring forward any animal welfare legislation at this time. Following recent consultation with Councils and DOE, I have agreed to defer transferring responsibility for the licensing of non-farmed animal establishments, including petshops, riding and boarding establishments, to Councils until 2016. This is to allow the restructuring from 26 to 11 Councils under Local Government Reform to bed in and become established.

In the interim, my Department's Veterinary Service will continue to undertake the animal establishment licensing role, including processing new applications, reviewing existing licences and dealing with complaints. My officials will continue to engage with Councils and DOE to consider how best to transfer the licensing function to Councils and how it should be structured between the new 11 Councils.

You will be aware that earlier this year I initiated a review of the implementation of the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. This work is being led by senior officials in my Department and the Department of Justice. I anticipate a final report will be available to me early in 2015 at which time I will consider any recommendations made.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps her Department has taken to encourage the wider community to promote and facilitate farm safety.

(AQW 36728/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since May 2012 my Department has been working as a Partner of the Farm Safety Partnership to improve safety on our farms. The Partnership also includes representatives from the Health and Safety Executive for NI, Ulster Farmers Union, Young Farmers Clubs of Ulster, National Farmers Union Mutual and NIAPA.

The Partnership launched its second Action Plan on 7 April 2014. This Action Plan will cover the years 2014 to 2017.

The aim of this action plan is to influence future behaviour so that farmers, their families, and their employees are capable, motivated, and able to work safely to reduce accidents on farms. A number of interventions are contained in the action plan to achieve this aim. The interventions will cover the four areas of Information and Promotion of SAFE Working, Training and Education, Motivating Good Behaviour and Discouraging Poor Practice, and Support and Assistance.

The Action Plan has 17 key actions including the following:

- Continue to expand upon the farm safe Information and Promotion Programme through advertising, media, events and other communication channels,
- Deliver a series of seasonally relevant Farm Safety Spotlight Weeks to capitalise on existing one to many contact opportunities,
- Identify and utilise Farm Safety Champions to promote and encourage good farm safety management,
- Develop and implement a Farm Safety Awards Scheme to recognise excellence, good practice and innovation,
- Develop an Affiliate Scheme to encourage businesses and organisation to support the aims of the Farm Safety Partnership in the north of Ireland.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the steps her Department has taken to provide greater access to support and services which will assist and encourage safe working on farms.

(AQW 36730/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since May 2012 my Department has been working as a Partner of the Farm Safety Partnership to improve safety on our farms. The Partnership also includes representatives from the Health and Safety Executive for NI, Ulster Farmers Union, Young Farmers Clubs of Ulster, National Farmers Union Mutual and NIAPA.

The Partnership launched its second Action Plan on 7 April 2014. This Action Plan will cover the years 2014 to 2017.

The aim of this action plan is to influence future behaviour so that farmers, their families, and their employees are capable, motivated, and able to work safely to reduce accidents on farms. A number of interventions are contained in the action plan to achieve this aim. The interventions will cover the four areas of Information and Promotion of SAFE Working, Training and Education, Motivating Good Behaviour and Discouraging Poor Practice, and Support and Assistance.

The Action Plan has 17 key actions including the following:

- Develop with the assistance of farmers a suite of Visual Safety Guides demonstrating safe working methods,
- Continue to Deliver and further develop a Farm Safety Awareness Programme,
- Identify, develop and promote a suite of Accredited Farm Safety Training programmes,
- To Develop and display a simple resource (Making it Safer) to allow farmers to risk assess their farms and identify simple solutions to manage risk,
- Develop and deliver a Farm Safe Awareness Programme to farm Development Groups to encourage co-operation sharing and knowledge transfer between small groups of farmers,
- Promoting safety through Grants by implementing a system to ensure that safety is a key cross cutting component of Rural Development Programme grants,
- Develop and implement an Advice & Support Scheme to provide a suite of easily accessible advice and support services to assist farmers to properly manage health and safety.

A new web based Farm Safety tool called FarmSafeNet was launched recently by me. This was developed by the industry led Farm Safety Partnership. To date 323 businesses have successfully completed FarmSafeNet.

In addition my officials have been working closely with the HSENI to develop a Make it safer tool to be made available to all farmers. The aim of this tool is to provide farmers with an easy to use tool to help them identify the dangers on their farms and manage these ultimately leading to a safer environment in which they work.

My Department also intends to include Farm Safety as a feature of the new Business Improvement Scheme under the Rural Development programme.

As the partnership works through its action plan my Department will continue to support the actions taken to ensure that farmers have access to tools and material that will assist them in making their farms a safer place to work and live.

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of visitors to Tollymore Forest Park in the last two years.

(AQW 36740/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service currently holds information on paying visitors to Tollymore Forest Park based on ticket sales made at the point of entry for motor vehicles and overnight stays on the caravan and camping site. Day visitors also enter the forest on foot at a number of locations without charge and therefore these numbers are not recorded. The paying visitor numbers for the last two years are as follows:

FY 2012 – 2013

98,889 day visits and 25,862 overnight campsite visits

107,493 day visits and 24,787 overnight campsite visits

In order to capture more comprehensive figures to include non-paying as well as paying visitors, a visitor survey has been commissioned, which includes Tollymore Forest Park. We are expecting to receive results of the survey at the end of this financial year.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 35925/11-15, for her assessment of the consolidation of the Agri-Food and Bioscience Institute sites.

(AQW 36751/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The ultimate purpose of any future investment in the AFBI occupied estate will be to deliver an estate that meets future business needs. Therefore, as I have indicated previously, it must be informed by AFBI's strategic vision and scientific priorities and pay proper regard to issues such as cost effectiveness, biosecurity and contingency capacity and, of course, fall within the bounds of affordability and value for money. There is scope for consolidation, but the future form of the AFBI occupied estate will follow function and work is continuing to consider these matters appropriately.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether any Rural Development funding, or other departmental funding, has been paid to Foyle Recyclers Limited; and, if so, (i) when payment was awarded; (ii) how much was awarded; and (iii) for what purpose was the funding to be used.

(AQW 36761/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since my appointment as Minister in May 2011 my Department has not made any payments to Foyle Recyclers Ltd.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps her Department, via the relevant official in the Agri-food and Biosciences Institute, will take to attract increased funding from Europe in order to promote Northern Ireland as a research and innovation hub for the agri-foods industry.

(AQW 36814/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since his appointment, a year ago, the NI Contact Point (NICP) for agri-food, funded by my Department, has developed a strategy to help maximise opportunities for the agri-food supply chain in the north of Ireland to win competitive EU research and innovation funding through Horizon 2020.

In commencing to implement the strategy, our NICP has already led a series of one-to-one meetings and workshops with a number of agri-food companies, trade support bodies and research providers. A peer-support/mentoring programme and brokerage function have been developed to connect potential partners with consortia and support proposal development. These initiatives will be built on further over the next 2-years.

Strong north-south links have been developed by the NICP with the Irish National Contact Point network and his direct counterpart covering agri-food and with academic institutions including Teagasc, University College Dublin, Dublin Institute of Technology and Waterford Institute of Technology. Our NICP has been working with colleagues in InvestNI and the Office of the NI Executive in Brussels to develop linkages with the European Regions Research and Innovation Network (ERRIN) and European Regions for Innovation in Agriculture, Food and Forestry (ERIAFF) network. These linkages and collaborations will be used as an important framework on which Horizon 2020 proposals can be developed.

In summary, our NICP, based in AFBI, is working hard to facilitate increased drawdown of EU competitive research funding by the agri-food sector and research providers across the north and this work is set to develop further from the very solid start which has been made.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many trade shows her Department has identified for the promotion of angling tourism in 2015, in (i) the UK; (ii) the Republic of Ireland; and (iii) the rest of Europe.

(AQW 36415/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): My Department will attend the following number of trade shows between January and March 2015 as follows:

- |       |                  |   |
|-------|------------------|---|
| (i)   | North of Ireland | 1 |
| (ii)  | Britain          | 0 |
| (iii) | South of Ireland | 1 |
| (iv)  | Rest of Europe   | 4 |

Planning for attendance at trade shows in 2015/16 will commence in the near future and will be dictated by current budgetary constraints.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the amount in overpayments to staff of Waterways Ireland for subsistence rates from 2002 to 2011; and whether the overpayments have been independently validated by Internal Audit and recovered.

(AQW 36418/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: A validation exercise has been conducted by DCAL Internal Audit to verify the amount of overpayments made to staff of Waterways Ireland for subsistence rates from 2002 to 2011. The exercise has confirmed the amount as £129,058. From 2011 to present the correct rates have been applied. The verification report has been agreed by Sponsor Departments and will shortly issue to Waterways Ireland. Now that the amounts overpaid have been validated recovery action will commence.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what mechanisms are in place in her Department to monitor funds which it has allocated, and which are being facilitated and executed through district councils.

(AQW 36451/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Department currently provides funding to councils for two main purposes - for Community Festivals across the north and for City of Culture legacy (specifically to Derry City Council).

In the case of festivals, while my Department has overall policy responsibility for the Community Festivals Fund, responsibility for making awards to individual festivals has, since 2008, been devolved to councils.

Monitoring arrangements include the requirement for each council to provide an annual report to the Department which provides details of festivals supported and an assessment of their impact on local communities. The expenditure of councils is also, of course, subject to annual audit by the Local Government Auditor.

Since it is not a recurring programme, the arrangements around funding Derry City Council (DCC) for City of Culture Legacy are different. A detailed letter of offer provides a monitoring framework which deals with internal processes, financial management and governance matters within DCC. A North West team within the Department exercises an oversight role over Legacy activities and financial support. Funding requests from DCC are accompanied by approvals from its own internal audit function and are subject to further scrutiny within the Department.

The Department occasionally makes smaller grants available to councils for discrete projects. Letters of offer set out conditions for spend which is usually verified by reference to supporting documentation and/ or physical inspection.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action she will take following the recent complaints regarding changes to mobile library services.

(AQW 36464/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that since the new mobile library schedules and timetables came into operation on 6th January 2014 it has received 5 complaints:

Complaint Made (2014)	Number of Complaints	Location
January	2	Ardglass
February	2	Ballymena & Plumbridge
May	1	Belfast

Libraries NI has a Customer Feedback Policy and an associated system which records and monitors complaints. None of the complaints received were significant in nature and all were resolved by Libraries NI.

Libraries NI has informed my officials that the changes to mobile library services have been well received and its efforts to inform the public have been appreciated. The new strategy has resulted in an increase in mobile library usage of 12% in Quarter One of 2014/15 compared with the previous year. It has also resulted in improved access to services to the public as well as efficiency savings (the number of vehicles was reduced by 2).

If you are aware of any other issues concerning the mobile library service you may wish to raise these, in the first instance, with the Chief Executive of Libraries NI, who will then have the opportunity to address these concerns.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why her Department declared capital reduced requirements of £8.2 million in 2013-14 and £35.3 million in 2014-15.

(AQW 36553/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The reduced capital requirements of £8.2million in 2013/14 and £35.3million in 2014/15 both relate to the Regional Stadium Programme.

Spend in 2013/14 was restricted significantly by the delay to the IFA project brought about by the State Aid Judicial Review challenge (which was subsequently withdrawn).

Spend in 2014-15 has been restricted significantly as a result of the Judicial Review brought by a Casement Park residents group (MORA) against the DOE's planning approval for the Casement Park Stadium.

It should be noted that the reduced capital requirement in 2013/14 and 2014/15 are a result of legal challenges and the capital sums previously eased will be required in 2015/16 to complete the stadium projects.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much her Department has spent on Libraries NI in the last three years; and what steps her Department is taking to prevent job losses and reduced services across the 96 branches.

(AQW 36554/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Over the last 3 financial years, my Department has made the following budget allocation to Libraries NI (LNI):-

Budget allocation	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
Recurrent	£33.132m	£30.172m	£32.2m
Capital	£2.243m	£1.711m	£9.092m
Total	£35.375M	£31.883M	£41.292M

Libraries NI is required to prepare a revised budget to enable it to save £1.4m of its 2014/15 opening budget of £34.4m. In making reductions, Libraries NI is seeking to prevent job losses by protecting the contractual hours of its permanent staff across all of its branches. A number of agency staff are, regrettably, being released. These individuals are employed by a recruitment agency, not Libraries NI, and are normally deployed to back fill temporary vacancies, maternity leave, sickness absence and short term promotions. In most cases, posts covered by released agency staff will remain vacant until they can again be filled.

The need to make savings has the potential to impact on services. Libraries NI remains committed to doing all in its power to ensure quality services to the public are maintained. Work is already under way to try to reorganise permanent staff time tables in order to minimise any adverse service impact. My Department also stands ready to support Libraries NI as it seeks to identify areas where savings might potentially be achieved through efficiencies.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action is being taken to protect front line service delivery within libraries.

(AQW 36573/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI is required to prepare a revised budget to enable it to save £1.4m of its 2014/15 opening budget of £34.4m. As a consequence of the need to make savings, there is the potential for an impact on front line service delivery within libraries. Libraries NI is, however, committed to doing all in its power to ensure quality services to the public are maintained. Work is already under way to try to reorganise permanent staff time tables in order to minimise any adverse service impact. My Department also stands ready to support Libraries NI as it seeks to identify areas where savings might potentially be achieved through efficiencies.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the cuts to funding for local public services which has led to Libraries NI making recent staff cuts; and what reassurances she can give to staff that her Department is working to mitigate the effects of funding cuts.

(AQW 36729/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: All service areas across my Department and its Arms Length Bodies have been affected by the recently announced budget reductions and are obliged to plan for savings of up to 4.4% in 2014/15. To meet this target, Libraries NI is required to prepare a revised budget to enable it to save £1.4m of its 2014/15 opening budget of £34.4m.

Decisions on how Libraries NI budget reductions are managed at local level across the Public Library Estate is a matter, in the first instance, for the Authority's Board and Senior Management Team. While the need to make these savings has the potential to impact on local public services, Libraries NI remains committed to doing all in its power to mitigate the effects and to quickly communicate these changes to its staff. To this end, work is already under way to try to reorganise permanent staff time tables. In addition, posts that were, until now, covered on a temporary basis by recently released recruitment agency staff will remain vacant until they can again be filled. My Department also stands ready to assist Libraries NI as it seeks to identify areas where savings might potentially be achieved through efficiencies.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the provision of facilities for the development of sport at an elite level; and whether there are plans to expand the provision of these resources.

(AQW 36731/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My strategy for sport, Sport Matters, has a number of specific targets dedicated to improving the sporting infrastructure in the north of Ireland. One of these targets (PL23) is for the provision of a minimum of ten new or upgraded facilities to support athlete development in Olympic/Paralympic sports. An associated Sport Matters Action Plan and annual Progress Reports provide detail on the actions being taken and the progress of delivery against these targets. The most recent report shows that this target has been met with 21 sports facilities being provided that are considered to contribute to this target. Examples of facilities provided include the 50 metre pool in North Down and new or upgraded facilities for boxing, cycling, basketball, hockey and athletics. Facilities were also upgraded for rowing and disabled equine sports in the Coleraine area.

In addition, the Sports Institute for NI (SINI) and a number of the satellite Performance Development Centres are recognised for making a major contribution to individual athlete development.

Sport NI is also currently developing a capital programme which aims to invest £17.5 million Lottery funding in sporting facilities over a five year period. This programme will seek to integrate the facility needs of community participants and performance athletes within the same multi-sport environment.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail her Department's role in the Ballymena Business Centre initiative to provide twenty arts and craft businesses five months free retail space in Ballymena town centre; and whether there are plans to encourage this initiative beyond the Ballymena area.

(AQW 36732/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ballymena Business Centre initiative has received funding from my Department's Creative Industries Innovation Fund (CIIF), which is administered by the Arts Council:

Finance Year	Organization Name	Programme	Grant Amount	Project Description
2014-2015	Ballymena Business Centre Ltd	Creative Industries	£20,000	Creative Incubation Space - Ballymena Business Centre will provide 2000 sq. ft. of retail and exhibition space in Ballymena town centre, free trading for a period of months inclusive of rent, rates and service charge.

With regard to plans to encourage this initiative beyond the Ballymena area, an evaluation of project activities and supported outcomes is a requirement for all grant recipients. The outcomes and learning from this project will be captured and the Arts Council and other sectoral organisations, such as Craft NI, can use this insight to inform future initiatives elsewhere.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether her Department plans to investigate and report on the governance and affiliation issues which prevented some athletes from participating in the 2014 Commonwealth Games, in order to prevent a reoccurrence in 2018.

(AQW 36754/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for nominating and selecting participants for the 2014 Glasgow Commonwealth Games rests with the governing body of the sport concerned, its International Federation and the NI Commonwealth Games Council.

I recognise that there are athletes from the north of Ireland, whose chosen sport is Hockey and Rugby Sevens, who cannot currently compete at the Commonwealth Games as part of Team NI. Following the debate in the Assembly on 30 September 2014, I have written to the Governing Bodies of Hockey and Rugby Sevens to see what can be done to provide our local athletes with the opportunity to compete in these sports at the Commonwealth Games.

In addition, athletes from the north of Ireland who participate in weightlifting, cannot currently be selected for the NI Commonwealth Games Team, as there is no weightlifting governing body in membership of the NI Commonwealth Games Council. Sport NI has provided advice to representatives from the sport locally around the formation of a governing body to represent this sport here. The matter is now with weightlifting representatives to commence the governing body recognition process with Sport NI.

Neither DCAL, nor Sport NI, are aware of any other governance and affiliation issues which prevent other local athletes from the opportunity to compete and as such I have no plans to carry out any investigations in this regard.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what steps she is taking to encourage stakeholders, including local councils, to invest in sport.

(AQW 36815/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport Matters, my Department's Strategy for Sport and Physical Recreation for 2009-2019, recognises that investment in sport is required by a range of stakeholders, including local councils. The Strategy contains twenty six high level targets which set out the key strategic priorities for investment across the north of Ireland. The Strategy also recognises that no single individual or organisation can deliver these targets alone.

The Strategy's implementation structure includes a Monitoring Group, which I chair, and three Implementation Groups, all of which meet twice per year. These groups include representatives of all the main stakeholders involved and as part of this, an associated Action Plan and annual Progress Reports, which are published on the DCAL website, provide detail on the actions being taken forward.

This structure provides me with the opportunity to monitor and encourage ongoing investment in sport by all stakeholders. In addition, my Department and Sport NI seek to work in partnership with local councils and other stakeholders, where possible, to ensure provision of sporting programmes and facilities. Examples of current activity include the Active Communities programme, Active Clubs, Disability Sport NI's Disability 5Star Challenge and the Boxing Investment Programme. In addition, Sport NI is also working in partnership with Councils to deliver a Sports Facilities Strategy and 11 District Council Area Reports. This work will provide Sport NI with a framework for the strategic delivery of sports facilities throughout the north.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what steps she is taking to improve the sporting infrastructure such as velodromes and other facilities.

(AQW 36818/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My strategy for sport, Sport Matters, has a number of specific targets dedicated to improving the sporting infrastructure in the north of Ireland. These include implementing a certification process which will improve safety at sports grounds; the delivery of the regional stadia programme; to have a minimum of ten new or upgraded facilities to support athlete development in major competitions; and, to ensure that 90% of the public have quality accredited, multi sports facilities within twenty minutes travel time. An associated Sport Matters Action Plan and annual Progress Reports provide detail on the actions being taken and the progress of delivery against these targets.

My Department and Sport NI are delivering significant investments to assist with achieving these targets. Examples include investment of £110 million in respect of the Regional Stadia Programme and the Sport Matters Community Capital Programme which invested almost £10.5 million in over 46 capital projects.

Sport NI is also currently developing a capital programme which aims to invest a further £17.5 million Lottery funding in sporting facilities over a five year period. This programme will seek to integrate the facility needs of community participants and performance athletes within the same multi-sport environment. As part of this, Sport NI has consulted with sports governing bodies to identify their priorities for high performing athletes going forward. Sport NI is also working in partnership with Councils to deliver a Sports Facilities Strategy and 11 District Council Area Reports. Together this work will provide Sport NI with a framework for the strategic delivery of sports facilities throughout the north.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the support given to boxing clubs in East Belfast since 2011.

(AQO 6762/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI has allocated Lottery funding of three million, two hundred and seventy thousand pounds to invest in the sport of boxing across the north of Ireland. This investment is helping to address some, but not all of, the equipment and facility needs identified. The programme also provided the Irish Amateur Boxing Association (IABA) with funding to employ a Development Manager, who would help clubs apply to the programme, including those in East Belfast.

The IABA received almost one hundred and seventy thousand pounds for the supply of equipment to boxing clubs which are affiliated to the IABA. In the East Belfast area, Eastside Amateur Boxing Club and City of Belfast Boxing Academy received boxing equipment from this grant worth two thousand two hundred and fifty six pounds and one thousand seven hundred and forty one pounds respectively. In addition, both of these Clubs have received indicative letters of offer for thirty nine thousand, two hundred and ninety four pounds and ninety two thousand, one hundred and eighty eight pounds respectively for capital works under the capital element of the programme.

In addition, in 2011, Eastside ABC received thirty thousand pounds funding for a pre-fabricated structure which included a boxing ring, gym, shower and changing facilities under the Sport Matters: Capital and Equipment Programme.

The Sports Institute NI provided support to the highly successful 2014 Commonwealth Games Boxing Team towards their preparation for the competition, including bronze medallist Alana Audley-Murphy from Eastside ABC.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department promotes angling in South Antrim.

(AQO 6756/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department is working closely with the Loughs Agency and Inland Fisheries Ireland in jointly promoting the recreational angling product in Ireland, including South Antrim, through participation in key angling shows throughout Ireland, Britain and Europe.

My Department had an enhanced presence at this year's Irish Game Fair held at Shanes Castle, Antrim. The event attracted a considerable number of visitors and my Department promoted a number of new initiatives to encourage greater interest in angling, particularly among children.

My Department manages Stoneyford Reservoir and Toome Canal which are very popular waters for anglers within my Department's Public Angling Estate. There are a number of excellent private fisheries in South Antrim including the Six Mile Water and the Lower Bann.

I believe that angling offers considerable potential for development and my Department is working closely with Sport NI, the Tourist Board and Loughs Agency in implementing the key recommendations of the strategic review of angling in the development of the sport, in promoting health and well being and in increasing angling tourism.

As part of this approach, my Department established a Community Outreach Initiative and it is working with local community organisations and angling clubs in promoting the broader health and well being value of angling. We have supported a number of outreach events in the South Antrim area to date, working in partnership with local organisations, including First Cast NI, in targeting young people, women and those with disabilities.

The Department is also in the process of developing a Fishery Management Plan for Lough Neagh and its tributary rivers, a number of which are located in South Antrim. The Plan aims to promote, develop and enhance commercial and recreational angling within the Lough Neagh catchment. My officials have consulted with local angling clubs, including those with an interest in quality salmon and trout rivers such as the Lower Bann and the Six Mile water.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the proposed reduction in opening hours in each library from November 2014.

(AQW 37049/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that it is not yet possible to detail any proposed temporary reduction in opening hours in individual libraries from November 2014.

Libraries NI is currently working to identify any opening hours reductions that may be required as a result of releasing agency staff and ceasing the payment of additional hours to permanent part-time staff who have been providing cover. This process also involves reorganising the timetables of permanent staff. In doing so, Libraries NI will seek to maintain opening hours at times when libraries are busiest and to ensure, where possible, that scheduled programmes, such as Rhythm and Rhyme, school class visits etc can continue with minimum disruption.

Libraries NI has initially indicated that any reduced opening hours will, in the most part, be implemented through reducing the number of late nights that larger libraries are open. It is anticipated that libraries currently open 18 hours per week or 25 hours per week will continue at that level, although in some cases, there may be ad hoc closures, with advance notice provided to the public, if staffing levels cannot be maintained.

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the action her Department has taken to support the development plans of the Salto Gymnastics Club, Lisburn.

(AQO 6759/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: As the member will be aware, I met with him and the Chief Executive of Salto towards the end of 2013 to discuss the expansion plans for their facilities. I recognised the greatly increased demand for participation following the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games and Salto's successful hosting of the Chinese artistic gymnastic teams for a pre-games training camp.

I encouraged Salto to work closely with Sport NI and subsequently Salto received support from Sport NI's technical unit on the feasibility of the proposed extension.

The next step is to develop a business case for the project. My Department attempted, in the June monitoring round, to secure the required budget to produce a business case but was not successful. However, it is my intention that my Department will continue to seek the budget for the production of this business case.

If budget is secured for it, the business case produced will support any application by Salto for capital funding.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what steps her Department is taking to improve disabled facilities and access points in museums and arts organisations.

(AQO 6760/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: All venues constructed under the Arts Council's Capital Build Programme are compliant with the 1995 Disability Discrimination Act. Similarly, all refurbishment and new-build work carried out by National Museums is subject to a Universal Access Review at the design stage. The Museums Council has also recently provided some grants to local museums to enhance their disability access. These measures allow the physical needs of those with disabilities to be considered in detail from the outset.

However, it is important that museums and arts venues do more than meet the basic statutory requirements to overcome the physical barriers to participation. These organisations must also address issues surrounding intellectual and economic access.

My Department has provided the Arts Council with funding to produce an Arts and Disability Equality Charter. This was developed by disabled people to encourage and reward good practice at arts venues. This Charter is a hallmark of good access and is operated through a partnership of the Arts and Disability Forum, Adapt NI and Open Arts.

The Arts Council also requires its funded organisations to demonstrate the practical measures they pursue to engage with disabled people as members of the audience or as participants in their work.

In the museums sector National Museums and the Museums Council also work closely with Adapt NI to audit museum sites to help improve intellectual and physical access to museums. National Museums also provides free access to all of its sites for visitors with disabilities and their carers.

These initiatives continue to improve both the design of facilities and the provision of services for those with disabilities.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the extent of the historical film archive under her Department's control.

(AQO 6761/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The historical film archive under my Department's control is in PRONI. It comprises 307 reels, mainly in 8mm and 16mm format, and 23 video cassettes.

The historical film archive spans a period beginning in 1912 and extending to 1992. The archive includes both original material and copies of broadcasts by companies such as RTE, UTV and BBC.

The historical film archive comprises footage from both official and private sources. The official sources are primarily the former NI Government Information Service and the Ulster Tourism Development Association.

The earliest footage relates to the signing of the Ulster Covenant but the film archive also depicts news and scenes from across the island, North and South, including footage of sport, agriculture, industry and housing.

The archive also includes film footage relating to the conflict such as coverage of riots in Belfast during August 1969.

The PRONI catalogue currently contains details of 134 reels of film and video tapes, giving a brief description of the content.

The catalogue is available via the PRONI website or by visiting the PRONI building in Titanic Quarter.

Some of the older films have been transferred to video and are available to watch at PRONI.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the sustainability of the commercial fishing of Lough Neagh.

(AQO 6763/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The long term sustainability of the Lough Neagh commercial fishery is a key priority for my Department. The fishery makes a significant contribution to the local economy and some three hundred families around the Lough derive income from it.

I recently visited the Lough Neagh Fishermens Co-operative Society's facilities at Toome and I was impressed with the Co-operative's positive approach to the future management and sustainability of the fishery.

I have commissioned the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) to undertake further research on fish stocks throughout the catchment. AFBI's work provides an important scientific basis to my Department's role in the conservation and protection of the fishery and will inform the development of the Lough Neagh Fishery Management Plan.

There has already been extensive work carried out on salmon and eel stocks and a suite of conservation measures are already in place in respect of these species.

There is currently no scientific evidence on other fish stocks that would confirm that any factors, including commercial fishing, are having a detrimental effect on stocks. AFBI is currently carrying out a research project on Lough Neagh that will provide information on the location and population levels of all fish species in the Lough. AFBI and my Department are also carrying out research into commercial fishing methods on the Lough and the potential impact this may have on stocks.

The habitat in and around Lough Neagh is important and my Department is undertaking habitat survey work on the tributaries flowing into Lough Neagh. This will identify areas where poor habitat is limiting fish stock levels and where further remedial work is required.

I am also concerned at the potential detrimental impact on fish stocks of sand dredging in Lough Neagh and my Department is in discussions with other Government Departments and stakeholders on the need to regulate such activity.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what is her Department's annual spend on maintaining and running museums.

(AQO 6764/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department's investment in maintaining and running museums is undertaken through funding National Museums.

In the 2013/14 financial year, in order to help maintain and run its respective museums, my Department provided National Museums with £14.43m. This consisted of £12.98m of resource and £1.45m of capital funding.

In addition, the NI Museums Council received funding of £288,000 in 2013/14 from my Department to support local museums in maintaining and improving their collections.

In 2013/14 my Department also provided £30,000 to the Somme Heritage Centre as part of a three year funding programme to support work aligned to the Decade of Centenaries programme.

The Budgets for 2014/15 are currently under review and are subject to in-year revision.

Department of Education

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of teacher posts advertised, broken down by (a) sector; and (b) Education and Library Board, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36277/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The number of teacher posts advertised in each of the last three academic years is detailed in the tables below. Please note the figures for CCMS have been broken down by Education and Library Board area, and incorporated into the overall figures below.

The figures provided by the Western Education and Library Board for the 2012/13 and 2013/14 years include all posts for which they, as the lead board, advertised for the DE Signature project.

The symbol # indicates that due to the small numbers involved a high level of suppression would be required to prevent the identification of an individual. This guidance is in accordance with the confidentiality principle of the Statistics Authority's Code of Practice on Official Statistics.

Please note these figures do not include Voluntary Grammar Schools (VGS) or Grant Maintained Integrated (GMI) Schools.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of (i) staff employed on site; and (ii) number of pupils currently attending Tamnamore Learning Centre in Dungannon.

(AQW 36479/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are currently 5 teachers and an additional 5 support staff employed on site. Currently there are 14 children enrolled at the Tamnamore Learning Centre in Dungannon.

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education, for the 2011-15 budget period, to detail (i) the budget reductions over £1,000, broken down by (a) the name of the item; (b) the amount of the reduction; and (c) the reduction as a percentage of the previous funding awarded; and (ii) the impact of Welfare Reform fine on that budget.

(AQW 36514/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Budget 2011-15 outcome for education produced major challenges as the level of funding available over the period 2011-12 to 2014-15 was less than had previously been in place. The shortfall between the Department's anticipated spending requirements and the Budget 2011-15 outcome was some £101m/£187m/£229m/£306m over the 4 years. At that time, a Savings Delivery Plan was developed to seek to contain expenditure within the budget allocated for education and to address Ministerial priorities and protect frontline services.

On 12 January 2012, having secured additional funding from the Executive, I announced further funding of £30m / £15m / £75m over the period 2012-13 to 2014-15 also to be allocated directly to schools. This is over and above an extra £40m that I reallocated to schools in November 2011 from within the then existing education budget. As a result of these 2 measures and subsequent internal budget reviews, there has been a reduction in the level of savings to be delivered from that originally planned. The savings to be delivered are now £101m/ £147m/ £175m/ £206m.

Details of the information requested are set out below.

Note – Table may not add due to roundings

The Executive have agreed to ringfence Education from further reductions in the June Monitoring Round and have yet to announce the October Monitoring Paper.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Education what discussions he has had with the Belfast Education and Library Board on the provision of a new primary school on the Belfast City Hospital site.

(AQW 36569/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Neither I nor my officials have had any formal discussions or correspondence with the Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) regarding the provision of a new primary school on the Belfast City Hospital site.

The responsibility for planning the controlled schools' estate in Belfast lies in the first instance with BELB. It is a matter for the Board to publish the necessary development proposals to establish this new school. To date it has not done so and therefore neither I nor my Department have any role at this stage.

I must stress that capital investment for this project cannot be considered by my Department without the support of an approved development proposal.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education what discussions were held between the Southern Education and Library Board, the Council For Catholic Maintained Schools and Lismore Comprehensive School to allow pupils to continue to use Drumcree College facilities as a satellite amenity.

(AQW 36658/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have been advised by CCMS that discussions were held with the SELB in early February 2014 about the financing of a satellite unit on the Drumcree site.

I am further advised that CCMS officials met the Chair of the Board of Governors and the principal of Lismore College in April 2014, to advise on the options being considered for the future of Drumcree College and to discuss any implications for Lismore College.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of funding his Department provided to nurture units in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36767/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The level of funding provided for the last 3 years to established nurture units by the Department of Education is as set out in the Table below:

Year	Total funding
2011/12	NIL
2012/13	£52,000
2013/14	£420,000

In addition to DE funding, OFMDFM are funding 20 new Nurture Units as part of the Delivering Social Change Nurture Signature Project and over the period requested, DSD have provided funding for a number of Nurture Units as part of their Neighbourhood Renewal Programme.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Education to outline the process followed by schools when a complaint of bullying has been made.

(AQW 36793/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under Article 3 of the Education (NI) Order 1998 as amended by Article 19 (3) of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 2003, all schools are required to have a discipline and good behaviour policy which addresses how the school will respond to incidents or complaints of bullying.

This policy must be developed with input from pupils and their parents and must be readily accessible. Principals and Boards of Governors (BoG) are required to adhere to the school's policy when responding to a complaint of bullying.

Typically an anti-bullying policy will ask parents to raise their initial concerns with a teacher and/or the school Principal. If they are unhappy with the school's subsequent actions they can then escalate their complaint by writing to the BoG. The governors will then review the complaint and determine if school policies have been correctly observed.

The precise nature of these arrangements is, however, a matter for each school to decide and not one in which the Department has a role.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education to detail the action he has taken to hasten the payment of increments to those employed in the education sector, given the delays which have prevented implementation.

(AQW 36796/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have secured the agreement of the Department of Finance and Personnel that where there is a clear contractual/statutory obligation on the part of employers to pay incremental progression payments at a point in the year prior to the settlement of pay negotiations, the Department of Education will be granted temporary cover for employers to make the necessary payments. This approach will enable employers to meet their contractual obligations in a timely manner and will ensure that staff employed in the education sector, do not have to wait for pay awards to be agreed before they receive their incremental progression.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education who will be responsible for collating information on the numbers of teachers absent from work as a result of a physical assault in school, should a decision be taken that such information should be made available to the public.

(AQW 36798/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Employing Authorities are responsible for the collation of information on the numbers of teachers absent from work as a result of physical assault. My Department does not employ teachers

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education what support is provided to pupils who cannot attend school regularly due to illness in relation to ensuring (i) their education is as unaffected as possible; and (ii) they are able to undertake examinations.

(AQW 36833/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: All Education and Library Boards (ELBs) provide support to pupils unable to attend their registered schools because of illness. This normally takes the form of one-to-one tuition which may be delivered in the home or another suitable location.

One-to-one tuition will form one element of the ELBs 'Education Otherwise Than At School' (EOTAS) services delivered under Article 86 of the Education (NI) Order 1998. One-to-one tuition is not intended to be an alternative to regular school attendance but to help the pupil to keep in touch with education and minimise the disruption to their learning during their treatment and recovery.

There are variations in how tuition services are delivered across each ELB, however, all have common core features. Each ELB:

- Provides a tuition service for children of compulsory school age;
- Provides 4-4 ½ hours of one-to-one tuition for each student per week focusing on English, Mathematics and Science/ICT;
- Will liaise with the pupil's registered school to identify the pupil's educational baseline; and
- Will expect the pupil's registered school to provide additional notes, homework and e-learning opportunities etc to supplement the personal tuition it provides.

A pupil's registered school is expected to support them in taking any external examinations which they are able to undertake. While some ELBs can make arrangements to directly enter pupils to sit their exams, most liaise with the school to ensure that they enter the young person, in line with their examination arrangements for all other pupils.

It should be noted that there is no statutory requirement for ELBs to make any form of EOTAS provision available for children above compulsory school age and most do not routinely make tuition available to pupils aged 16+. Most Boards do, however, have exceptional circumstances provisions allowing them to consider extending its provision on a case-by-case basis.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what plans he has to review the membership of the Lisanelly Programme Delivery Board in light of the Executive's decision to establish a single Education Board.

(AQW 36854/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Lisanelly Programme Board was reconstituted in January of this year and includes appropriate representation appointed by the school authorities involved in the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus Programme.

The Executive has agreed to the introduction of a draft bill to the Assembly to establish a single education authority. Consideration will be given to revising the membership of the Lisanelly Programme Board in line with emerging structures when that process is complete.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 33589/11-15, what action he proposes to take in regard to the Education and Skills Authority Implementation Team now that the Education and Skills Authority is no longer a Programme for Government 2011/15 commitment; and to outline the implications for staff who have been backfilling posts.
(AQW 36855/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A streamlined Education and Skills Authority Implementation Team (ESAIT) has been retained as an integral part of DE. This comprises 15 staff: the CEO Designate and 14 full-time equivalents. The CEO designate is currently acting as interim Chief Executive of the Southern Education and Library Board with the remaining staff engaged in work to support DE and the Education and Library Boards (ELBs).

It is intended, following introduction of the Education Bill, that ESAIT staff will be utilised to support the implementation of the single Education Authority and will begin the necessary work as directed by the Programme Management Board (PMB).

The small number of staff currently backfilling posts for staff seconded from ELBs to ESAIT will continue to do so until the new Education Authority is established, after which they will revert to their substantive posts.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 30072/11-1, for an update on progress.
(AQW 36857/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The first meeting of the Regional Advisory Group (RAG), took place on 11 June 2014 followed by a workshop on 3 October 2014. The RAG agreed the Terms of Reference for engagement and future dates for workshops. The workshops are intended to provide an arena for stakeholders to engage with and provide advice to the Education and Library Boards and the Youth Council to inform the development of the 2015-16 Regional Youth Development Framework.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how many meetings of the Strategic Planning and Policy Forum have taken place since its inception.
(AQW 36858/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Strategic Planning and Policy Development Forum has been in operation since February 2011. It provides an opportunity for all of the recognised Trade Unions, employers and Sectoral Support Bodies to work with the Department to help shape and influence policy development and strategic planning before decisions are made.

The Forum meets quarterly and since its inception, there have been fifteen meetings.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 36350/11-15, given that there have been no changes to the statutory processes, what changes have been made to procedures of administrative processes, in the last three years.
(AQW 36873/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that there have been no changes to ELB administrative procedures regarding the statutory assessment and statementing process in the last three academic years.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education whether he is aware of the situation whereby young people in Beechcroft Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service inpatient unit are being denied access to education if they are enrolled in further education; and if so, what steps are being taken to ensure that this situation is remedied.
(AQW 36890/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The education unit at Beechcroft is funded by the Department of Education to provide education for young people who are inpatients at Beechcroft and are registered in schools across the north of Ireland. All registered pupils entering Beechcroft receive education in the appropriate Key Stage, aligned with their individual educational requirements and taking account of their therapeutic needs.

In the case of inpatients that are aged 16+ and attending Colleges of Further Education, they are outside of compulsory education. Colleges are managed and funded by the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) not the Department of Education.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education to detail the expected pupil intake at Coleraine High School for the 2015 academic year.
(AQW 36896/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A Development Proposal was approved on 26 September 2014 for the amalgamation of Coleraine Academical Institution and Coleraine High School as a new voluntary grammar school to be established from 1 September 2015 or as soon as possible thereafter. As a result of this, the intended admission number for the new school for the 2015/16 academic year is 150 pupils.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the stakeholders identified; (ii) the number of responses received; and (iii) a breakdown of the nature of responses during the consultation period leading up to the merger of Coleraine High and Coleraine Institution and increased enrolment at Coleraine College.
(AQW 36899/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A statutory Development Proposal (DP) is required where a significant change to a school, such as an amalgamation, is proposed. The DP process is contained in Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986.

Prior to the publication of a DP, the statutory process requires the proposer to consult with the Board of Governors, staff and parents of pupils at the school or schools concerned. In the case of the Coleraine schools, the North Eastern Education and Library Board is the proposer of the DPs for the controlled schools – Coleraine High and Coleraine College – while the Trustees of Coleraine AI, a voluntary school, are the proposer for its DP. The Board is additionally responsible for consulting any other school which would, in its opinion, be affected by the proposal.

You may wish to contact the North Eastern Board and Coleraine AI in respect of their pre-publication consultations.

The Department's role in the process commences once a DP is published. The publication of the DP initiates a two-month period during which objections and comments can be sent directly to the Department. With regard to Development Proposals 288, 289 and 290 for the amalgamation of Coleraine Academical Institution and Coleraine High School, no comments were received during the two-month period.

You may wish to note that my decision on each DP and the documentation on which I based that decision are available on the Department of Education's website: http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/schools-and-infrastructure-2/area-planning/14-schools\_estate\_devprop\_pg.htm.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education for an update on the introduction of the Elluminate Scheme for pupils who are unable to attend classes.

(AQW 36940/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Elluminate is one of a number of available e-Learning tools which can be used to help pupils who are unable to attend classes, however, it should not be considered the only appropriate e-Learning tool to help such pupils.

The Joint Working Party (which is comprised of representatives of the teaching unions and employing authorities) set up a working group to develop a protocol on Home to School e-Learning. This protocol is nearing completion and some final amendments are currently being considered.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education to outline the projected savings from the creation of a single Education Board.

(AQO 6770/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The business case for the establishment of the New Education Authority (which will replace the five Education and Library Boards and the Staff Commission) has not yet been finalised, it is anticipated that savings will be realised comparable in scale to those expected from ESA (£185m over its first 10 years).

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed new build for Dromore High School.

(AQO 6774/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I approved a protocol which was used to prioritise those schools to be advanced in planning for inclusion in my announcement of 24 June 2014. While Dromore High School was submitted as a potential project by the SELB and was scored under the protocol, it did not attract a sufficiently high ranking to be included in the announced list. However, I have asked the Southern Education and Library Board to undertake an assessment of options for purchase of land for a potential future new build project for the school. An economic appraisal has been prepared and submitted to DFP for approval. A decision is anticipated before the end of November.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education what steps he is taking to improve the security in schools for both pupils and staff.

(AQO 6773/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The steps to improve the security in schools for both pupils and staff are detailed in the Department's guidance entitled "Security and Personal Safety in Schools". This guidance can be accessed on the Department's website and details the roles and responsibilities of the Employing Authority, Board of Governors and the School Principal.

Should a school have concerns about security measures they should in the first instance contact the relevant managing authority.

School security is a major factor in the design of a new school building. However, many existing schools were not designed with security in mind. If the school authority considers that security at these schools needs to be improved, then depending on the management type of the school and the type of works proposed, an application for a capital minor work may be considered by, either the education and library board, for controlled schools, or the Department, if it is a school in the non-controlled sectors.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the impact of the current budgetary pressures faced by the Executive on his Department's Major Capital Projects.

(AQO 6775/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The current in-year pressures faced by my Department are related to the recurrent budget and, as such, have a minimal impact on progression of Major Capital Projects.

It is not possible to assess the potential impact in FY15/16 and beyond as the capital budget for this period has yet to be agreed by the Executive.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Education for an update on a new build for Parkhall Integrated College, Antrim.
(AQO 6776/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A new school for Parkhall Integrated College was included in my January 2013 Capital Announcement.

The project is well advanced in planning and a revised RIBA Stage D was to be submitted to my Department by 6 October 2014. A revised planning application has also to be submitted to Planning Service but concerns regarding a Flood Risk Assessment and Traffic Management proposals have still to be addressed.

It is anticipated that construction work will start in May/June 2015 with the main construction works completed by June 2017.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education what measures he is taking to assist pre-school organisations to address learning barriers amongst young children.

(AQO 6777/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In 'Learning to Learn - A Framework for Early Years Education and Learning', I set out a series of actions aimed at ensuring that all children could access high quality early learning experiences that equip them to develop improved cognitive, social and emotional skills and which lay important foundations for future learning and development.

A key action was to target barriers to learning by:

refocusing the use of extended schools (ES) funding for eligible statutory settings to ensure that the extra support helps identify and address underdeveloped social, emotional, communication and language skills of young children; and establishing criteria, similar to that used for ES, for non-statutory settings in the Pre-School Education Programme to access additional resources proportionate to the amount they receive per place.

ES funding has been refocused, and I have recently announced almost £200,000 additional funding for 94 non-statutory eligible pre-school settings offering funded pre-school places in 2014/15. This additional funding will help identify and address barriers to learning at the earliest opportunity.

Additionally the Special Educational Needs Review's (SEN) capacity building programme operated an early years pilot in DE funded pre-school settings across all boards for three years to September 2014. This aimed to increase the capacity of staff in participating settings to identify, assess and make provision for children with special educational needs. Boards are making interim arrangements from October 2014 to March 2015 to ensure the momentum of the pilot continues subject to a comprehensive evaluation and decisions about the future shape of SEN provision in pre-school settings.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Education to outline the functions and funding arrangements of the Controlled Schools Sectoral Body, which is to be established as part of the new Education Bill.

(AQO 6778/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The new organisation that will provide representation and support for Controlled Schools shall be funded by my Department in accordance with my commitment to provide for the new organisation. Since the Executive meetings of 9 and 25 September, this commitment is now shared by the Executive. I have also instructed my officials to explore a more robust underpinning to my commitment.

The functions that this body shall be funded to perform have also been formally agreed by the Executive on 9 September, 2014. These are:

- To provide a representational and advocacy role for controlled schools, including advice and support in responding to consultation exercises in respect of education policies, initiatives and schemes, and in regard to relationships with the Department, the Education Authority and other Departments;
- To work with schools within the sector to develop and maintain the collective ethos of the sector including, where appropriate, a role in identifying, encouraging and nominating governors and in ensuring ethos is part of employment considerations;
- To work with the Education Authority to raise educational standards;
- To participate in the planning of the schools estate, assessing current and ongoing provision within the sector, participating in area-based planning co-ordinated by DE and the Education Authority (including membership of the Department's Area Planning Steering Group) and engaging where appropriate in strategic planning processes, including community planning; and
- To build co-operation and engage with other sectors in matters of mutual interest, including promotion of tolerance and understanding.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Education for an update on the progress of the shared access to school estate facilities strategy.
(AQO 6779/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Departmental Guidance Community Use of School Premises: A Guidance Toolkit for Schools which seeks to encourage and assist schools in providing for community access to school facilities was published and issued to all schools in January 2014.

Staff in post and salary figures relate to staff who are employees of the Department for Employment and Learning. Details relating to Payroll only staff (i.e. Office of the Industrial Tribunals and the Fair Employment Tribunal (OITFET) Chairmen, Board Members and Industrial Court Members) are not included.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the increase in the number of temporary workers between April and June 2011 to April and June 2014 and the permanency of these positions.

(AQW 35649/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department of Finance and Personnel's Labour Force Survey includes a question about whether a job is permanent or non-permanent. On the basis of the Labour Force Survey, there was an estimated increase of 17,000 in the number of temporary workers between April – June 2011 (34,000) when compared to the statistics for April – June 2014 (51,000).

It is likely that the increase in temporary jobs reflects the current fluidity.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the imbalance in the community background of the admissions to the Institute of Professional Legal Studies at Queen's University, Belfast; and what steps are being taken to address this imbalance.

(AQW 35936/11-15)

Dr Farry: Queen's University, Belfast is responsible for its own policies and procedures, including admissions and any issue in relation to imbalance is a matter for the University to address. However, Departmental officials contacted the university and it has provided the following details on the admissions process:

"The admissions process to the Institute of Professional Legal Studies (IPLS) and the Graduate School of Professional Legal Education at the University of Ulster is governed by the Council of Legal Education, made up of representatives of Queen's University Belfast, the University of Ulster, the Law Society of Northern Ireland, the Bar Council of Northern Ireland and the judiciary.

"In order to apply to be admitted to IPLS, applicants must already have obtained a qualifying law degree. Most IPLS applicants are graduates of either the School of Law at Queen's University Belfast or the School of Law at the University of Ulster.

"In addition to having a law degree, applicants must sit a competitive admissions exam. The mark obtained in this exam, combined with a weighting for the classification of their law degree is used to compile orders of merit for the Solicitor course and the Bar course respectively.

Additionally, in order to be admitted as a Solicitor trainee, applicants must have independently obtained an apprenticeship in a solicitor's firm.

In order to be admitted as a Bar trainee, applicants must have graduated with at least a lower second class classification."

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what departmental services he has made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36088/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not make any services available to the public via the post office network.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many people have graduated with an Upper Second-Class Honours or above from (i) Queen's University, Belfast; and (ii) the University of Ulster since 2011.

(AQW 36412/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details the number of students graduating from Queen's University, Belfast and the University of Ulster with an Upper Second Class Honours or above, since 2011.

		2010/11	2011/12	2012/13

Notes:

- (i) Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5 in line with HESA policy.
- (ii) The latest available data are for the 2012/13 academic year.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for a numerical break-down, by (i) gender; (ii) age; (iii) disability; and (iv) ethnicity, of the Governing Bodies of each Further Education College, including the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise.

(AQW 36452/11-15)

Dr Farry: As part of my Department's commitment to equality of opportunity, membership of the Governing Bodies of the six further education colleges is monitored in line with the requirements of Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

However, Governing Body members are not compelled to provide this information and do so on a voluntary basis. As such, my Department only holds incomplete records in relation to the information requested. The table at Annex A outlines the information held on each further education college Governing Body at 30th September 2014.

Responsibility for oversight of the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) belongs to the Department for Agriculture and Rural Development. The Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development has advised me that CAFRE does not have a Governing Body.

Governance is provided within the structure of the Department. A College Advisory Group exists to provide advice at a strategic and operational level to the College Director and College Management Team. This group comprises representatives from external stakeholder groups across a number of sectors which are relevant to the work of the College. DARD does not hold Equality Monitoring information about this group; however the gender breakdown is two females and eleven males.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 35621/11-15 and AQW 35622/11-15, whether the organisations listed in AQW 35621/11-15 have staff who hold the qualifications stated in AQW 35622/11-15 to enable them to deliver the Extractives and Minerals Processing apprenticeship frameworks.

(AQW 36488/11-15)

Dr Farry: When the ApprenticeshipsNI contracts were awarded both South West College and Southern Regional College had the appropriate teaching/training staff in place to deliver the Extractives and Minerals Processing apprenticeship framework.

South West College continues to have staff who hold the qualifications to enable them to deliver the Extractives and Minerals Processing apprenticeship frameworks

Since the award of contract, there have been some staff changes in Southern Regional College and additional specialist staff are required for a few areas of delivery. The college is confident that if a demand was identified then they could recruit the required specialist staff in advance of training commencing.

Neither Training Supplier has been approached to deliver training for this framework. Should a need for Extractives and Minerals Processing apprenticeship framework training be identified, both Training Suppliers have provided assurance that they will be in a position to deliver the appropriate training.

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the budget and staff compliment of the Disability Employment Service for the 2011-15 budget period; and any anticipated reductions in funding or staffing for the 2015 period or the 2016-2020 budget period.

(AQW 36515/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Disability Employment Service is an integral part of my Department's Employment Service. Its specific role is to support and assist people with health conditions and disabilities to progress towards, move into and stay in employment.

The Disability Employment Service provides a range of disability related employment programmes and services including Access to Work, Workable, Work Connect, the Job Introduction Scheme and Condition Management Programme.

In the 2011-15 period, the staff complement has remained at a relatively consistent level. In April 2011, the total complement was 43 whilst at September 2014, it was 39. This slight reduction was due to some internal reorganisation following the full roll-out of the Pathways to Work initiative, as well as local management responding favourably to staff requests for more flexible working hours, as opposed to any suppression of posts.

The Department is currently working on the development of a new Disability Employment Strategy for Northern Ireland. This is being developed in close partnership with the local disability sector.

A major consideration for the Department emanating from the strategy is the appointment of specialist Disability Employment Officers who would deliver a dedicated, person-centred service for people with significant disability related barriers to employment. At present, it is envisaged that this would require approximately nine additional members of staff to deliver this service.

The budget expenditure on specialist health and disability programmes, managed and delivered by the Disability Employment Service during this period is as follows:

- 2011/12 - £12.922m
- 2012/13 - £12.983m
- 2013/14 - £14.137m
- 2014/15 to end of September - £7.373m

The disparity between annual expenditure is primarily due to the demand led nature of specialist disability employment provision. During these years, the Disability Employment Service baseline budget has remained consistent, and it should be noted that, during this period, no client has been refused access to the range of provision due to financial constraints.

In relation to future years, all government departments are and will be required to make difficult financial decisions, so it is impossible to say at this time how the Disability Employment Service will be impacted.

However, I have total confidence that the Disability Employment Service will continue to play a key role, working with key partners and stakeholders to ensure that people with disabilities are provided with the tailored support and assistance they need to help them achieve their employment goals.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the tendering process for catering services at the Northern Regional College.

(AQW 36526/11-15)

Dr Farry: The tendering process for catering services at the Northern Regional College is an operational matter for the College itself. My Department has no role.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps he will take to ensure that the Northern Regional College follows its statutory duty under the Acquired Rights Directive in relation to any change of catering provider.
(AQW 36527/11-15)

Dr Farry: A change of catering provider is an operational matter for Northern Regional College (NRC); my Department has no role.

As an employing authority in its own right, NRC is responsible for adhering to all relevant aspects of employment legislation. This includes the provisions of the Acquired Rights Directive, as implemented through the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why an in-house bid was not supported for the tendering of the catering contract for the Northern Regional College.
(AQW 36528/11-15)

Dr Farry: The tendering process for catering services at the Northern Regional College is an operational matter for the College itself. My Department has no role.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what use his Department has made of video conferencing facilities in the last three years.
(AQW 36593/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the last three years the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) has made increasing use of video conferencing facilities in order to improve operational effectiveness and reduce the Department's carbon footprint, travel time and associated costs.

DEL owns seven standalone Video Conferencing Units. These have been distributed throughout Northern Ireland and can be used by all staff.

All DEL staff at Grade 7 and above have been provided with desktop video conferencing and sixteen Careers Service staff (mobile workers who use laptops with inbuilt web cameras) and have been provided with headsets so that they can use video conferencing.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 24665/11-15, when this facility will be approved; and when construction will begin.
(AQW 36604/11-15)

Dr Farry: I am pleased to advise you that the Business Case for the Armagh, Banbridge and Craigavon campus developments in the Southern Regional College has received all the necessary approvals and the procurement of a Design Team has begun. The site for the Craigavon campus has not been formally identified although there are a number of options under consideration. Construction cannot commence until the design has been completed and Planning Approval has been obtained. Thereafter the construction element of the contract will be tendered and an Award of Contract can be made.

My Department and the Southern Regional College wish to pursue this without delay. However the mandatory protocols for major capital developments including the notifications to the Official Journal of the European Union, detailed design phase and securing relevant statutory approvals, are such that construction is still some time off and unlikely to commence until late 2016. My officials however, will be ensuring that all steps possible will be taken to mitigate potential delaying factors.

You should note that no capital funding can be committed by the Executive beyond the current budget period and while my Department has not been allocated any capital budget from the Northern Ireland 'block' post 2014-15, the working assumption is that the Executive will honour existing contractual commitments in future spending review allocations.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the long term future for the services, training opportunities and skills based classes currently provided by the Northern Regional College based at Union Street, Coleraine.
(AQW 36675/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Northern Regional College is currently preparing a business case for the provision of further education in the Ballymoney, Coleraine and Ballymena areas. Until the outcome of that business case is known and associated funding identified, it is not possible to provide details on the future curriculum to be provided by the College.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many student accommodation places each university provided in each of the last ten years; and how these figures compare with the growth in the number of university places.
(AQW 36712/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The Universities are responsible for their own policies and procedures, including those relating to student accommodation.

As my Department does not hold the information you have requested I have asked officials to refer your question to the higher education institutions so that they can respond to you directly on this matter.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of students who left Northern Ireland to attend university in other parts of the UK in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36766/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details the number of Northern Ireland Domiciled enrolments in universities in England, Scotland and Wales from 2010/11 to 2012/13.

Academic year	First year enrolments				All enrolments
	England	Scotland	Wales	Total	England	Scotland	Wales	Total
2010/11	5,090	1,360	235	6,690	11,690	4,520	515	16,730
2011/12	5,555	1,365	265	7,185	12,500	4,440	570	17,510
2012/13	4,235	1,135	215	5,585	11,800	4,195	575	16,570

1. The latest available data are for the 2012/13 academic year.
2. Figures in the table have been rounded to the nearest 5 in line with HESA policy.
3. Figures for NI domiciled enrolments at the Open University have been excluded from the above table. Although the Open University is defined as an English Institution, it is likely that any NI domiciled enrolments will not be based in England.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when he expects people working in the Further Education sector to be paid their increments from 2012/13.

(AQW 36805/11-15)

Dr Farry: Further education employers inform me that the increments from 2012/13 were paid as follows:

Non-Teaching Staff	paid April 2012
Lecturing staff	paid September 2012
Principals and Vice Principals	paid September 2012 or the anniversary date of appointment

Mrs Overend asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what discussions he has had with the Minister of Education on the pay increments which have yet to be paid to staff in the Further Education sector.

(AQW 36806/11-15)

Dr Farry: Responsibility for pay issues in the further education sector lies with my Department, insofar as approving the regularity and affordability of any pay remit to be submitted to the Department of Finance and Personnel. College employers are directly responsible for agreeing pay settlements with staff representatives and making any subsequent payments. As the Department of Education has no role in this matter, I have not had any pay-related discussions with the Minister of Education.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department has taken to advertise further and higher education as an accessible and viable option for young people who are Not in Education, Employment or Training.

(AQW 36822/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department has a keen interest in promoting participation for all young people into education, including those who are Not in Education, Employment or Training (NEET), and actively promotes further and higher education through the 'Skills to Succeed' communications campaign, which includes strands on Essential Skills, Apprenticeships, Training for Success, Foundation Degrees and 'Reach Higher' which encourages widening participation in higher education – also referred to below.

In addition, my Department's Careers Service supports all 16 and 17 years olds who are NEET. Careers advisers currently work with these individuals to ensure they receive information, advice and guidance tailored specifically to their individual needs. This includes advice on a range of options including provision offered within both further and higher education.

Further education colleges currently offer an extensive range of courses as part of their curriculum provision from non-accredited, beginner courses, up to and including Level 5 provision. These courses are marketed proactively by colleges using their websites and prospectuses and by the active use of a variety of advertising opportunities through local press publications and also through social media. As part of their widening access and participation plans, colleges also provide community information events which are targeted at under-represented groups including young people in NEET situations.

In addition, where colleges are delivering projects under the Collaboration Innovation Fund, the European Social Fund or the Department for Social Development's Neighbourhood Renewal, the young people participating are made aware of opportunities for progression to mainstream programmes in further and higher education.

Regarding higher education, my Department launched its Reach Higher advertising campaign in early 2014, running a series of advertisements across a variety of outlets including television, radio and adshels/billboards. This campaign was intended to increase awareness of the potential value, accessibility and benefits of higher education to young people from disadvantaged backgrounds.

In addition, the Department has also been working closely with all higher education institutions to promote Foundation Degrees. This promotion campaign started in 2013 and will continue to run throughout 2014/15, communicating the message that a Foundation Degree can equip any individual with a combination of technical skills, academic knowledge and other vital skills to help secure employment. There are a wide range of subjects on offer, and the flexibility to study part time makes Foundation Degrees more attractive and accessible.

In May 2012, the Northern Ireland Executive agreed a cross-departmental strategy specifically for those young people in the Not in Education, Employment or Training (NEET) category, the "Pathways to Success" strategy. 'Pathways to Success' has a particular focus on helping those young people who face barriers to participation, while also dovetailing with complementary proposals to tackle the wider problem of youth unemployment in the current challenging economic context.

The strategy, which is led and implemented by DEL, is made up of a three tier package aimed at:

- preventing young people missing opportunities for education and training, and/or becoming unemployed;
- helping young people in the 16-18 age group, especially those facing barriers; and
- assisting unemployed young people aged 18-24 more generally.

In respect of further and higher education, the 'Pathways to Success' strategy specifically states that: "a range of measures are in place in recognition that young people who enrol on further education provision may require encouragement, motivation and support to complete their studies".

In addition to the programmes I have outlined above, there are three programmes that are directly focused on those young people facing barriers to employment, education and training. Firstly, the Collaboration and Innovation Fund, which is aimed at exploring new approaches to address the specific and general employability barriers faced by those young people aged 16 to 24 who are not in education, employment or training (NEET). Funding of over £9.2 million has been allocated to 24 organisations from the community, voluntary and educational sectors to deliver project activity between December 2012 and March 2015. To date, 3,910 young people have commenced project activities, and of the 2,488 leaving the programme 1,781 have completed activities and 1,296 have moved into positive outcomes of employment (363), education (306) and training (627).

Secondly, the Community Family Support Programme, which focuses on the needs of the most disadvantaged families, to enable young people to re-engage with employment, education, or training. This programme has received further financial support from OFMDFM, and has been designated as a Signature Project under the Delivering Social Change initiative. Currently there are 118 participants on the programme who are aged 16 to 18.

Finally, the Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS), which is an initiative designed to help unemployed people in the community overcome those issues that may be preventing them from finding and keeping a job. During the period April 2013 to August 2014, LEMIS case loaded 4,092 individuals to the programme and 1,587 (38%) of these were young people aged 16-24 not engaged in education, employment or training. As a result, 502 (31%) young people moved into positive destinations, 229 (14%) commenced employment, 248 (15%) commenced training and 25 (1.5%) moved into education.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the plans for a new cruise ship docking area in Belfast Harbour.

(AQW 36293/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In 2013, Belfast Harbour announced a £7million capital investment for the creation of a new purpose built cruise facility (the only purpose built facility on the island of Ireland) at Alexandra Quay in Titanic Quarter.

Environmental testing of the proposed berth pocket has revealed heavy metal contamination which will require to be removed. Belfast Harbour is continuing to liaise with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency and Planning Service, on the appropriate Environmental Impact Assessment and consenting process to address this contamination, prior to the commencement of construction works.

Belfast Harbour is also engaging with its cruise line customers, to ensure that the new facility is appropriate to cater for the larger cruise ships which are being introduced on western European itineraries and which Belfast has been very successful in attracting for future calls in 2015 and beyond. It is hoped to conclude this customer engagement in the coming months and the resultant feedback from this engagement process will also be assessed in designing the final cruise ship offer.

Belfast Harbour is working towards having the new facility available for the 2016 cruise ship season.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what work the Tourist Board is carrying out to improve tourism (i) product; and (ii) accommodation in Ballycastle.

(AQW 36305/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Over the financial period 2009 - 2012 the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) has contributed approximately £323,000 through the Tourism Development Scheme (TDS) to tourism projects in the Ballycastle town, seafront and harbour areas, which includes Rathlin Island.

Projects, mainly relating to the Causeway Coastal Route (CCR) which runs through Ballycastle, included visitor infrastructure and public realm works, visitor interpretation, strategic benches, public art and a Town Heritage Trail. An additional £342,619 of investment was leveraged from these projects.

In addition NITB has provided support to develop tourism in the Ballycastle area by:

- Collaborating with key tourism stakeholders to facilitate implementation of the Causeway Coast and Glens Tourism Area Plan 2012-2017.
- Working in partnership with the Causeway Coast & Glens Heritage Trust to deliver sustainable tourism initiatives within the designated Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty.
- Providing ongoing marketing and promotional support to Ballycastle and the local area through its traditional media, online marketing channels, consumer website www.discovernorthernireland.com in addition to a number of familiarisation trips.
- Supporting the development of a high quality tourism industry by delivering on a number of regulatory certified and accreditation schemes with 74 properties now certified in the Ballycastle area.

Since the 1st April 2013, Invest NI has offered assistance of circa £100,000 to tourism accommodation projects in the Ballycastle area. This assistance was directed at increasing jobs in the Tourism accommodation sector as well as improving e-business and management information systems and helping tourism businesses improve their energy and resource efficiency.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the Gobbins Project in Larne, including the (i) cost of the project; (ii) the groups funding the project; (iii) the amount these funding groups have input; and (iii) who will run the facility when it is completed.

(AQW 36309/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The £5.7million Gobbins project at Islandmagee is nearing completion. The project is being lead by Larne Borough Council on behalf of the North East Partnership cross border group.

DETI (£2.5million) and the Rol Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport (£1million) have committed £3.5million of financial assistance under the SEUPB administered Interreg IVA programme to support the refurbishment of the historic Gobbins Cliff path walkway and construction of a purpose built tourist centre at the site. Additional funding of £2million is being provided by Larne Borough Council, alongside £0.2million from Ulster Garden Villages.

Completion of works is anticipated by December 2014, with the facility due to be operational by Spring 2015. Initially the attraction will be operated by Larne Borough Council, thereafter by the newly formed Mid & East Antrim Council from April 2015.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what analysis her Department has made concerning the impact on the local economy of the Scottish Executive setting a different rate of Corporation Tax to the rest of the UK.

(AQW 36346/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has not carried out an analysis on the impact of the Scottish Executive setting a different rate of Corporation Tax to the rest of the United Kingdom.

The focus of the Northern Ireland Executive is on securing these powers for Northern Ireland, with a decision expected to be made on or before the Chancellor's Autumn Statement on 3 December 2014.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in light of the further Game of Thrones filming in the Roe Valley region, what opportunities there are for the area to be highlighted in wider tourism promotional material.
(AQW 36416/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Both the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) and Tourism Ireland are aware of the phenomenal success of Game of Thrones and have actively promoted filming locations for Seasons 1 to 4, through their social media channels and websites; www.discovernorthernireland.com and www.ireland.com.

Currently, HBO is filming Season 5 in Northern Ireland, including the Roe Valley region. There can be no promotion of active filming sites during the pre-production and production period due to issues of health and safety, non-disturbances to filming and public access permissions. However, once Season 5 is aired in 2015, NITB will include all new locations in marketing materials, social media activity and update the Game of Thrones location map.

Tourism Ireland will endeavour to build the Roe Valley region into any future Game of Thrones-themed promotional activity for media and trade. The Roe Valley Country Park and tourism enterprises in the area are already listed on Ireland.com and tourism enterprises from the region have also joined Tourism Ireland at consumer and travel trade events overseas.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) how many ministerial directions were issued in 2013/14; (ii) to outline the purpose of each direction; (iii) whether any companies benefited from a direction; and (iv) if so, which companies.
(AQW 36419/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Approval for one Ministerial Direction was given by the Executive in 2013/14. The Direction related to the payment of a grant to a company to support a project. The company who benefited from this direction was Delta Print & Packaging Ltd.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what efforts her Department is making to reduce (i) electricity; (ii) gas; and (iii) oil costs for low-income households.
(AQW 36486/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department continues to support supply competition in energy markets to ensure consumers can access energy supplies at least cost. The electricity market throughout Northern Ireland and the gas market in Greater Belfast are fully open to competition, thus allowing consumers to choose suppliers. The gas market in the "10 Towns" licence area outside Belfast will be fully open to competition from April 2015.

I welcome recent announcements that consumers will not have increases in electricity or gas prices this winter.

I continue to support the option for consumers to choose pre-payment electricity and gas meters to help with budgeting of their energy costs. Plans to provide gas to main towns in the West, and further provision of gas networks within current licence areas, will provide energy consumers with the option to switch to gas from other fuels.

Research has shown that there is a competitive oil distribution market in Northern Ireland, and this is evidenced by heating oil prices in Northern Ireland generally being lower than oil prices in many areas of Great Britain, and the Republic of Ireland.

My Department also participates in the Department of Social Development led cross sectoral fuel poverty partnership, and is working with stakeholders to promote energy efficiency.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much financial support Invest NI provided to the haulage sector, broken down by recipient, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 36491/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Financial support to the haulage sector is in the form of loans made via the Carbon Trust, which is supported by Invest NI. The interest-free business loans support investment in low carbon equipment and the creation of successful energy-saving and renewable projects. Table 1 below details loans provided over the last five years.

Haulage businesses are also able access extensive advice and guidance through Invest NI's Business Support team.

Table 1: Value of financial support to businesses operating in the road haulage sector in each of the last five years.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when Gaelectric was granted a mineral prospecting licence.

(AQW 36497/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI Mineral Prospecting Licence (MPL) No. GDL 1/10 was awarded to Gaelectric Developments Limited on 1 February 2010. The company relinquished this MPL in May 2013.

DETI Mineral Prospecting Licence (MPL) No. GDL 2/11 was awarded to Gaelectric Energy Storage Ltd on 1 December 2011 and is currently due to run to 30 November 2015.

The MPL was awarded to explore for halite (rock salt) to determine whether the deposits were of a sufficient thickness and depth to enable caverns to be created for a Compressed Air Energy Storage (CAES) project.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what progress has been made on broadband provision in North Down.

(AQW 36532/11-15)

Mrs Foster: North Down is already one of the best served areas of Northern Ireland in terms of broadband availability. However, recognising that there are some locations where difficulties remain, a number of postcode districts within the constituency have been included in the intervention area for my Department's Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP)

This £23.5 million project aims to provide improvements in access to basic and superfast fixed-line broadband services to a further 45,000 premises across Northern Ireland by the end of 2015.

The project is being delivered in eight phases, each of which requires an extensive survey and design process. This takes account of technical feasibility, quality of existing infrastructure in the area, reasonable costs, number of anticipated customers etc and seeks to achieve the greatest value for money and the highest number of beneficiaries.

The areas where improvements have already been made under the first two phases of the project are published on the NI Direct website. In addition consumers can use the online postcode checker to find out when work is scheduled to be carried out in their area. This information can be accessed at: <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project>.

DETI officials will continue to update the information on NI Direct as the project progresses.

My Department has also been indicatively allocated £7.24million by Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK) for the extension of superfast broadband and is seeking to match this, to provide a potential funding pot of £14.48million.

Between 26 August and 26 September, a public consultation was carried out on the proposed intervention area for a further project, which will utilise this funding support with the aim of extending superfast broadband services to at least 95% of premises across Northern Ireland by 2017.

Once the response to this consultation is analysed and, subject to value for money considerations, it is proposed that a mini-competition will be taken forward, using an existing framework, to find a suitable supplier with contract award anticipated in early 2015.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for a breakdown of the expenses paid to senior management in the enterprise, trade and investment sector in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36536/11-15)

Mrs Foster: A breakdown of reimbursement of Travel and accommodation, and Subsistence expenses paid to members of the DETI Senior Management Team for the financial year 2013/14 is outlined below.

Car Parking	£2,352.25
Taxi Fares	£80.82
Bus Fares	£23.60
Rail Fares	£243.84

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps are in place to encourage social entrepreneurship in the third sector.

(AQW 36542/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI has a central role in developing social economy policy, with responsibility for the community and voluntary sector lying with the Department for Social Development.

Developing the social economy has long been a government priority and the Executive is well aware of the important contribution which this particular sector makes. This is why we have continually affirmed our commitment to the social economy and the broader Third Sector through measures to boost the strong entrepreneurial tradition which exists here, as seen in the NI Economic Strategy which seeks to promote the Social Economy and its contribution to economic growth.

In terms of current support for the social economy sector, my Department has been involved in a range of initiatives including:

DETI funding of Social Enterprise NI, to design, manage and deliver a three year Social Economy Work Programme (SEWP) with the objective of identifying and implementing a programme of initiatives to enable the continued growth of a sustainable social economy sector.

Invest Northern Ireland provides support to new and existing social enterprises through the following programmes:

Invest Northern Ireland's Social Entrepreneurship Programme (SEP) which focuses on supporting new social economy businesses with the potential to grow, helping them to build the skills and capabilities to make an impact on the local economy. The programme offers support at both the business idea and business planning stage. In 2013/14 the SEP supported 55 new social enterprise start ups.

Invest Northern Ireland's Jobs Fund was one of a range of measures that Invest NI put in place in response to the economic downturn. Jobs Fund includes two measures to support social enterprises, recognising the potential that the social economy has to develop employment opportunities, especially for those most remote from the labour market.

Social Enterprise Employment Grant – in 2013/14 109 new jobs were created with employment grant support;

The Social Enterprise Franchise Programme provided support to social enterprises interested in franchisor/franchisee business models.

The establishment of 11 Social Enterprise Hubs (SEHs) as one of the six signature projects being taken forward under OFMDFM's Delivering Social Change initiative (DSC). This provides an operational hub in each of the Social Investment Fund areas to provide advice, help generate ideas and support the development of new social enterprise projects.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the cross-departmental strategies designed to increase communication with HEI, FEC and University students regarding the importance of innovation, in which her Department is involved.

(AQW 36546/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Executive's recently published Innovation Strategy highlights the importance of increasing innovation across all sectors of the economy. The Innovation Strategy emphasises the important role that universities and further education colleges have to play in helping transform our economy into one that is truly knowledge based. My Department therefore works very closely with the Department for Employment and Learning and other stakeholders including the Universities, Colleges NI, and the Northern Ireland Science Park to reinforce the importance of innovation and entrepreneurship and identifying new ways of strengthening the culture of innovation across the education system.

Underpinning the Innovation Strategy is the need for much better collaboration and commercialisation of research so that we can drive innovation, productivity and growth. Through Invest NI, a range of programmes including the Proof of Concept, Innovation Vouchers and Knowledge Transfer Partnerships, are in place to accelerate the commercialisation of new ideas and research.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 35763/11-15, whether her Department has put targets in place for the new Business Development Executive in order to increase Foreign Direct Investment in the life sciences and connected health sectors.

(AQW 36556/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest Northern Ireland will develop targets for this position in line with operational priorities. The identification and cultivation of Foreign Direct Investment opportunities is one facet of this role, along with the development of trade and partnering opportunities for Northern Ireland companies, increasing R&D activities and encouraging greater collaboration between bodies in Northern Ireland and the US. Targets will be set accordingly.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department will work to improve broadband coverage in the Whitebridge Road area and in local town lands between Carrickmore and Ballygawley.

(AQW 36575/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would advise that the postcode districts covering the Whitebridge Road area of County Tyrone (BT79 9 and BT70 2) are scheduled for improvements under my Department's Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project.

This will include areas in the townlands of Altanagh, Altnagore, Ballygawley, Ballymackilroy, Cloghfin, Eskerboy, Fallaghearn, Gleneeny, Gortfinbar, Inishative, Killynmorgan, Knockonny, Lisgonnell, Lurganboy, Tanderagee, Tirnaskea and Tullyglush.

To assist consumers my Department has established an online postcode checker which will enable them to find out when work is scheduled to be carried out in their area. The checker can be found at <http://www.online.detini.gov.uk/Broadband/Start.aspx>.

In addition, postcodes within the areas above have also been included in the proposed intervention area for the Superfast Roll-out Programme Phase 2, a consultation around which was closed on 26 September. This project seeks to extend superfast broadband to 95% of premises across Northern Ireland by 2017. If value for money is demonstrated, a mini-competition will be taken forward, using an existing framework, with anticipated contract award in early 2015.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many people are contributing home-generated electricity to the grid; and what is the total number of Kwh contributed.

(AQW 36589/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The information requested is not available from my Department or from Northern Ireland Electricity. Information on electricity consumption and renewable generation in Northern Ireland for the year ending March 2014 is available on the DETI website at: http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-stats-index/energy\_statistics.htm

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many individual households are living off the grid and supplying all their own electricity and energy needs.

(AQW 36590/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The information requested is not available from my Department or from Northern Ireland Electricity. Information on electricity consumption and renewable generation in Northern Ireland for the year ending March 2014 is available on the DETI website at: http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-stats-index/energy\_statistics.htm

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what use her Department has made of video conferencing facilities in the last three years.

(AQW 36592/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Department has Video Conferencing (VC) facilities in all its main buildings. Not all VC connections are logged on the units. However, from the information available for the last 3 years the department has made use of video conferencing on at least 626 occasions.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of local start-ups which received InvestNI support in each parliamentary constituency in (i) 2011-12; (ii) 2012-13; and (iii) 2013-14.

(AQW 36640/11-15)

In addition to the assistance offered above, Invest NI provides support to local starts via its Regional Start Initiative. This programme has been operational since October 2012 and is delivered on behalf of Invest NI by Enterprise Northern Ireland following a successful tender competition. Participants on the scheme are not offered financial assistance but receive valuable advice and guidance on starting a business helping ensure their success.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the Tourist Board's granting of £4m capital funding for the Waterfront Hall extension was subject to the outsourcing of operational management of the Waterfront Hall from Belfast City Council; and whether any similar stipulations or conditions were attached to the Tourist Board's decision to grant this funding.

(AQW 36656/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) issued a Letter of Offer for up to £18,564,400 of grant aid to Belfast City Council for the development of the new Belfast Waterfront Convention & Exhibition Centre.

£4million of that total was provided through NITB's Tourism Development Scheme, while £14.5million was secured through the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) and is being administered through NITB.

NITB does not comment on specific conditions included in its Letters of Offer of financial assistance or grant aid awarded to its clients, given the potentially commercially sensitive nature of such documents.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB) granting £14.5m of capital funding for the extension of the Waterfront Hall (i) was subject to the outsourcing of operational management of the Waterfront Hall from Belfast City Council; or (ii) any similar stipulations or conditions were attached to SEUPB's decision to grant this funding.

(AQW 36660/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) issued a Letter of Offer for up to £18,564,400 of grant aid to Belfast City Council for the development of the new Belfast Waterfront Convention & Exhibition Centre.

£14.5million of that total was secured through the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) and is being administered through NITB.

NITB does not comment on specific conditions included in its Letters of Offer of financial assistance or grant aid awarded to its clients, given the potentially commercially sensitive nature of such documents.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 36394/11-15, to detail the proposed location of the 72 nominal, new mast sites.

(AQW 36755/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As the member will be aware, the Mobile Infrastructure Project is being delivered on a UK national basis by the Department of Culture, Media and Sports (DCMS) and my Department therefore does not hold information to the level of detail requested.

However, I am advised that the latest data on the numbers and possible locations of nominal sites will be contained within updated implementation plans, which are currently being prepared for each of the Northern Ireland District Councils impacted by the project. This process is expected to be completed within the next three weeks and a copy will be made available to the Member.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration has been given to the clauses relevant to her Department in the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Bill currently progressing through Westminster.

(AQW 36824/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Consideration has been given to extend to Northern Ireland those clauses contained in the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Bill relevant to my Department, which relate to company and insolvency law. These proposals will modernise procedures, add transparency and increase public confidence in companies. Additional measures will assist small and medium sized enterprises to access finance and deliver solutions to late payments.

It is my intention to seek Executive agreement to bring forward a Legislative Consent Motion to the Assembly, to enable these aspects of the Bill to apply to Northern Ireland.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many enterprise centres and business parks have access to fibre optic broadband; and when she plans to have this facility available in all such locations.

(AQW 36922/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not hold a definitive list of business parks and enterprise centres across Northern Ireland nor does it routinely gather information on the provision of broadband services to such facilities.

However, based on the database of Invest NI owned parks and the locations of the thirty-two Local Enterprise Agencies, it is estimated that approximately 85% and 75% respectively are served by fibre-enabled cabinets.

For those locations where fibre-based services are not currently available which may include business parks, my Department is in the process of implementing the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project, the aim of which is to provide improvements in access to basic and superfast fixed-line broadband services to over 45,000 premises, both business and residential, across Northern Ireland by the end of 2015.

Furthermore, my Department has also been indicatively allocated £7.24million by Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK) for the extension of superfast broadband and is seeking to match this, to provide a potential funding pot of £14.48million.

Between 26 August and 26 September, a public consultation was carried out on the proposed intervention area for a further project, which will utilise this funding support with the aim of extending superfast broadband services to at least 95% of premises across Northern Ireland by 2017.

Once the response to this consultation is analysed and, subject to value for money considerations, it is proposed that a mini-competition will be taken forward, using an existing framework, to find a suitable supplier with contract award anticipated in early 2015.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether any potential tenants have withdrawn from tenancies in enterprise centres and business parks due to the lack of fibre optic broadband connectivity.

(AQW 36924/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not hold the information requested.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what progress is being made on the establishment of the Enterprise Zone in Coleraine as announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

(AQW 36997/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The UK Government's Economic Pact, published on 14 June 2013, set out 3 commitments in relation to Enterprise Zones, focusing on Enhanced Capital Allowances (ECAs) which permit 100% first year allowances for qualifying plant and machinery expenditure. The pilot Enterprise Zone announced in the Budget statement on 19 March will only offer ECAs as an incentive.

The pilot project, which involves the establishment of a data centre by 5NINES in Coleraine, has the potential to promote economic development and further investment in the area.

HM Treasury has responsibility for designating an Enterprise Zone offering ECAs. Discussions are ongoing between the relevant stakeholders to put the necessary arrangements in place prior to formal designation of the zone by HMT.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what research her Department had undertaken on the affordability of energy for business and domestic users; and what actions and new initiatives have been taken following this research.

(AQW 37038/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I remain committed to delivery of the Executive's agreed Strategic Energy Framework and all my actions are informed by the duty to protect the interests of consumers. My Department is currently undertaking an assessment of the costs and benefits of the Executive's 40% target for renewable electricity generation by 2020. The results of this work will be published later in the year and will feed into the mid-term review of the Strategic Energy Framework which is due to commence in 2015.

My Department has worked with the Utility Regulator to complete research into the technical feasibility and costs associated with extending the gas network to the West. This has since been taken forward by the Regulator through a competition for new gas licences. Increased energy choice brings the potential for lower costs for householders and businesses. More recently my Department has co-operated with the Utility Regulator on electricity security of supply, and in assessing the relative size of electricity network costs on business and domestic customers in Northern Ireland compared to neighbouring jurisdictions. I am currently assessing policy options in response to this work.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the progress of the £23.5m spending package aimed at improving rural broadband, as announced in February 2014.

(AQW 37041/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement project aims to provide improvements in access to basic and superfast fixed-line broadband services to over 45,000 premises across Northern Ireland by the end of 2015, particularly, in rural areas.

The project is being delivered in eight phases, each of which requires an extensive survey and design process which takes account of technical feasibility, quality of existing infrastructure in the area, reasonable costs, number of anticipated customers etc and seeks to achieve the greatest value for money and the highest number of beneficiaries.

The areas where improvements have already been made under the first two phases of the project have been published on the NI Direct website. In addition consumers can use an online postcode checker to find out when work is scheduled to be carried out in their area. This information can be accessed at: <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project>.

DETI officials will continue to update the information on NI Direct as the project progresses.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what progress has been made in improving rural broadband provision in Newry and Armagh in the last twelve months.

(AQW 37042/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not hold information on broadband provision in the format requested. However, telecommunications regulator Ofcom, through its annual infrastructure reports, gathers data on broadband availability, speeds and uptake across all council areas in the UK.

The latest report, which was published in October 2013 and covers the period June 2012 to June 2013 shows that there have been improvements in the Newry and Mourne District Council and Armagh City and District Council areas in a number of categories including: -

- Number of premises with broadband connections of 2mbps or less

- Number of premises with access to superfast broadband services
- Average download speeds
- Broadband take-up

Details can be found on the Ofcom website at <http://maps.ofcom.org.uk/broadband/broadband-data/>.

Further improvements are expected in the next 12-18 months as the roll-out of my Department's Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project progresses.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in relation to the lead partner's strategy for the expenditure of the £23.5m funding package announced in February 2014, whether work is still scheduled to be completed by the end of 2015.

(AQW 37043/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I can confirm that the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project is currently progressing according to schedule and the supplier is indicating that it is expected to complete by the end of 2015 as anticipated.

Department of the Environment

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of the Environment how many enforcement notices have been issued by his Department in respect of family homes or residential properties, in the last ten years.

(AQW 36140/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): In searching the Department's records, cases are not categorised by whether the alleged breach relates to a residential, commercial, industrial properties or business etc, rather Planning Enforcement record based on the type of breach or alleged offence.

On that basis the table below shows a 10 year breakdown of types of notices served.

It should be noted that these figures are based on unvalidated management information and do not form part of Planning's Official Statistics.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the procedure and timeline for the development of a new West Tyrone Area Plan, or similar plans, which cover the Omagh and Strabane districts.

(AQW 36243/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As you will be aware, from April 2015 under Local Government Reform, the current Strabane District will be covered by the new Derry City and Strabane District Council whilst Omagh District will form part of the new Fermanagh and Omagh District. Planning functions are also transferring from the Department to these new Councils at this time, including plan-making responsibilities.

Part 2 of The Planning Act 2011 places a statutory requirement on each council to prepare a Local Development Plan for its district. Therefore, with the transfer of functions in April 2015, these two new Council areas will have the responsibility for initiating and preparing their own Local Development Plan (LDP).

The new LDP will consist of two separate development plan documents covering the whole of the council district:

- (i) A Plan Strategy (PS) which will set out the council's vision, objectives and growth strategy for the area along with strategic policies; and
- (ii) A Local Policies Plan (LLP) which will set out the council's detailed policies in relation to the development and use of land in its district.

The PS will be produced first, scrutinised at the independent examination stage and then adopted. Subsequently, the LPP will be prepared in line with the PS, examined at independent examination and then adopted. It should be noted that before the council prepares its PS, it must prepare and publish a Preferred Options Paper (POP). Public participation in formulating the LDP and progress through to adoption will be facilitated through the council's Statement of Community Involvement (SCI) and an LDP timetable to be agreed between the council and the Department. The Department will provide guidance setting out further details of how the council should prepare the timetable and how it can estimate the indicative dates for each step of the LDP preparation process.

Overall, the proposed local development plan process from the agreement of the timetable to adoption of the Local Policies Plan would have an 'indicative' timeframe of some 40 months. However, it should be emphasised that it is the responsibility of each council to set its programme for plan production, taking into account factors such as availability of resources, the input of statutory consultees, the number of representations received, etc. and only indicative dates are used for each stage in order to allow a degree of flexibility.

I would draw your attention to the proposed Planning (Local Development Plan) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2015 which set out the procedures and processes for local development plan preparation. This draft legislation was published for consultation on 28 May 2014 and is available to view on the DOE Planning website

http://www.planningni.gov.uk/index/policy/policy\_legislation/consultations/phase\_1\_public\_consultation\_document\_planning\_reform\_and\_transfer-2.pdf

In January 2014, I announced that I was setting up Development Plan teams within the Department to work in liaison with Statutory Transition Committees and shadow Councils on preparatory studies in the run up to the Reform of Local Government in April 2015. The purpose of the preparatory studies is to facilitate early capacity building for councillors, existing Council staff and DOE Planning staff, as well as to provide a sound information base for the new Councils to make planning decisions and bring forward their own Local Development Plans within a shorter timeframe.

Consequently, the respective Development Plan teams, based in Omagh and Derry, have agreed a programme of Preparatory Studies with the STCs and have now commenced delivery of those Papers – covering key Plan topics including Growth Strategy, Population, Settlements, Housing, Economic Development and Town Centres. These baseline Papers, delivered to the new shadow Councils over the period up to April 2015, will help the new Councils to be in a strong position to commence their new local Development Plans when they are formally empowered to do so, in the period after April 2015.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of the Environment to detail how many (i) breaches of planning control have been identified by the Planning Service; (ii) of these cases has the Planning Service decided not to take any enforcement action; (iii) demolition notices have been issued; and (iv) demolition notices have been carried out, broken down by Divisional Planning Office, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36244/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Tables 1 and 2 outline the number of breaches that were identified for planning enforcement related offences in the last 3 years, and first quarter of 2014/15

It should be noted that these figures are based on unvalidated management information and do not form part of Planning's Official Statistics.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to make a statement to the Assembly to clarify his commitment to openness and transparency within his Department, particularly recognising the impact of the potential loss of public confidence, including that of consumers and service providers, by refusing to publish video footage taken by enforcement staff at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013, as well as reports compiled or emanating from this, and the full extent of legal advice sought and obtained on this matter.

(AQW 36302/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have no plans to make a statement to the Assembly on these issues.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether there have been proposals by Bombardier Aerospace to increase the amount of waste they intend to accept at the proposed gasification facility in East Belfast; and if so, to provide details of the proposals.

(AQW 36319/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning permission was granted for the construction of a combined heat and power generating station for the treatment of refuse derived fuel (RDF) by gasification on 23 January 2014. The throughput of the facility shall not exceed 120,000 tonnes per annum as restricted by a condition of the approval.

My Department has not received any further applications in relation to this restriction.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department requires companies who are granted planning permission to dispose of contaminated waste to provide notification to his Department of the facility where that waste is disposed of and/or processed.

(AQW 36320/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The company is under no obligation to inform NIEA of the location of disposal; however they are under obligation to follow Duty of Care Regulations, 2002. This includes using a Registered Carrier, keeping statutory records and using an authorised disposal site. On request from NIEA the company involved is required to produce evidence of this. NIEA regularly undertakes unplanned or routine inspections of authorised waste sites to regulate against these issues.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 33132/11-15, for an update on setting up of a public inquiry into the waste crime in Northern Ireland; and to outline the Executive Ministers that have yet to respond.
(AQW 36321/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As I said in the Assembly during the debate, I would seek the support of my Ministerial colleagues for establishing an Inquiry. I am still waiting for the outcomes of this Executive discussion.

In the meantime, I am continuing with implementing action in response to the Mills Report into Waste and focussing my Department's efforts on making progress in improving waste management in Northern Ireland.

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35011/11-15, on what basis was an Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificate granted, given that consents to extract did not exist for these sites and all planning permissions have subsequently been refused.
(AQW 36323/11-15)

Mr Durkan: At the time of application, the Department was satisfied that the gravel site at Mobuoy Road, Campsie was operating within the regulatory framework as required by the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme Code of Practice. It was confirmed that planning permission (reference: A/93/0302 and A/1998/0662) was in place, and consent to discharge effluent from the site was not required.

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the environmental improvements achieved as a result of his Department issuing an Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificate for Campsie Sand and Gravel, at Mobuoy Road, Derry.
(AQW 36324/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Between 2006 and 2010, Campsie Sand and Gravel Ltd submitted three independent environmental audit reports as required by the Code of Practice of the Scheme. Based on these reports, the Company carried out environmental improvements in relation to Archaeology and Geo-diversity, Biodiversity, management of oil, Waste Management, Surface Water, Groundwater, Landscape, Noise, Energy, Restoration and Aftercare, Secondary Aggregate Usage and Air Quality.

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of the Environment why his Department informed the River Faughan Anglers on 8 December 2011 that all the sites at Mobuoy Road had been restored or were in the process of being restored; and what evidence this was based on.
(AQW 36325/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The response at that time was in the context of a submission by the agent/operator that extraction at some of the sites had ceased. Accordingly, restoration had taken place or was ongoing.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment what research he has commissioned during 2014 on the advantages and disadvantages of fracking in areas which would be designated as prime sites for exploratory drilling.
(AQW 36326/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have commissioned my Departmental Officials to cooperate with authorities in the Republic of Ireland (ROI), on an extensive research programme, into the environmental impacts associated with unconventional gas exploration and extraction. The research programme is being funded by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Department of Communications Energy and Natural Resources (DCENR) and the Department of the Environment (DOE).

The research programme has been designed to produce outputs that will assist regulators in NI and ROI in fulfilling their statutory roles regarding any potential hydraulic fracturing activity. The research programme will involve five projects:

- Baseline assessment of water
- Baseline assessment of seismicity
- Assessment of air quality
- Examination of impacts and mitigation measures
- Examination of the regulatory framework

The research will examine case study areas with the potential for shale gas, such as the current licensed area in Fermanagh. The research commenced in August 2014 and is expected to report in the latter part of 2016.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of planning enforcement issues in the Strabane District Council area, broken down by ward.
(AQW 36361/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Table 1 below outlines the number of Enforcement cases that have been opened in the Strabane District Council Area from 2011/12 to Quarter 1 of 2014/15. At 30 June 2014, there were 55 live Enforcement cases in Strabane District Council.

The Department does not hold information relating to Enforcement cases in such a way that can be reported at ward level.

Table 1: Enforcement cases opened in Strabane District Council Area 2011-12 to 2014-15 Q1

Financial Year	No. of cases
2011-12	62
2012-13	68
2013-14	72
2014-15 Q1	10
Total	212

Notes: An enforcement case is opened when there has been an alleged breach of planning control.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) how many planning applications for centralised anaerobic digestion plants have been approved; and (ii) how many live applications are being processed, in each of the last five years. (AQW 36365/11-15)

Mr Durkan: According to the Department's records, 3 applications for centralised anaerobic digestion (AD) plants have been issued in the last 5 years.

The majority of applications for Anaerobic Digestion (AD) plants do not specify whether it is for a farm based AD or a centralised AD, and some applications whilst not specifically described as being centralised may accept residues and feedstock from external sources.

Consequently for the purpose of completeness a breakdown of all approvals for AD plants in the last 5 years has been provided below.

There are 21 live cases for Anaerobic Digestors as at 31 August 2014.

Number of applications for Anaerobic Digestors approved in the last 5 years, also including applications approved to date in 2014/15

		Financial Year of Application Approved
2009/2010	2010/2011	2011/2012	2012/2013	2013/2014	2014/2015	Total
3	4	23	51	30	2	113

Notes: 2014/2015 includes the number of approved applications up to 31 August 2014. (Figures 2014/15 is latest available, provisional, renewable energy information)

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) how he intends to meet the £250m cleanup costs for illegal dumping as identified in the Mills Report; and (ii) what discussions he has had with his Executive colleagues regarding these costs. (AQW 36381/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The precise cost of the clean-up is unknown. The Department is commissioning experts to conduct a thorough assessment of the environmental risks at the site and all the options for managing these risks and minimising the potential for environmental harm.

By clearly identifying and understanding the risks arising from the waste, the Department will be able to develop a long term and cost effective remediation solution for this site. These options can only be fully costed when the options have been identified and the relevant costs for each option detailed.

Works to date have dealt with managing all immediate risks due to leachate migration. Works in the short to medium term will continue to ensure that the leachate has no impact on the River Faughan adjacent to the illegal waste mass.

Whatever management options are chosen, the Department is continuing to pursue all legal means to recover the costs from the polluters associated with the illegal activity at Mobuoy Road. This is my first priority for funding remediation and other options will only be investigated if these are not fully successful.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, given his assurance to local residents that stringent planning conditions would be imposed, why it is necessary to remove planning conditions 25 and 26 from planning approval K/2013/0072, and how this accords with Article 6(3) of the Habitats Directive which precluded his Department from granting a development consent unless it is first satisfied beyond reasonable scientific doubt that the integrity of the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation would not be compromised.

(AQW 36383/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The developer, Dalradian Gold Ltd. has requested that the conditions appended to the planning decision notice be removed/alterd to reflect those on the discharge consent.

DOE Strategic Planning Division (SPD) received a planning application for non compliance (Article 28) with conditions 25 and 26 of planning approval K/2013/0072/F on 22 March 2014 relating to discharge parameters. This is the appropriate mechanism in order to not comply with conditions of a planning permission.

SPD has consulted with NIEA in relation to the appropriateness of non compliance with these conditions to ensure that the integrity of Owenkillew SAC will not be compromised.

NIEA Water Management Unit has issued a consent under the terms of the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999, (consent no 068/12/2), for the discharge of drainage arising from the proposed development, on 6 February 2014. The consent contains detailed conditions relating to water quality for this site. Monitoring to check compliance with the conditions contained in the discharge consent will be carried out by NIEA.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment to detail any existing legislation regarding attaching satellite dishes on (i) domestic; and (ii) commercial properties in terms of (a) positioning or (b) prevalence.

(AQW 36388/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Planning (General Development) Order (Northern Ireland) 1993 (as amended) grants planning permission for the installation of microwave antennas, including satellite dishes on both domestic and non-domestic properties.

This permitted development is subject to a range of limitations including the number of antennas that can be installed on a building, their permitted size and where they should be placed.

There are also additional limitations relating to the positioning of antennas on buildings in what are known as “designated areas”. These are conservation areas, areas of outstanding natural beauty, areas of special scientific interest, national parks and world heritage sites. In these areas, for example, the permitted development does not apply, if it would consist of the installation of an antenna on a chimney, wall or roof slope which faces onto and is visible from a road.

The installation of antennas including satellite dishes which do not meet the relevant permitted development tolerances, need approval through the planning application process.

The permitted development rules for installation of antennae on dwelling houses are set out in Class G of Part 1 of Schedule 1 to the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 and for other buildings, including commercial properties and blocks of flats, in Classes A and B of Part 18 of that Schedule. A description of those Classes along with their detailed limitations and conditions are set out for information below.

Permitted Development for microwave antenna on dwellinghouses

G. The installation, alteration or replacement of a microwave antenna on a dwellinghouse or within the curtilage of a dwellinghouse.

Development is not permitted by Class G if—

- (a) it would result in the presence on the dwellinghouse or within its curtilage of—
  - (i) more than 2 antennas;
  - (ii) a single antenna exceeding 100 centimetres in length;
  - (iii) 2 antennas which do not meet the relevant size criteria;
  - (iv) an antenna installed on a chimney, where the length of the antenna would exceed 60 centimetres;
  - (v) an antenna installed on a chimney, where the antenna would protrude above the chimney;
  - (vi) an antenna with a cubic capacity in excess of 35 litres;
- (b) in the case of an antenna to be installed on a roof without a chimney, the highest part of the antenna would be higher than the highest part of the roof;
- (c) in the case of an antenna to be installed on a roof with a chimney, the highest part of the antenna would be higher than the highest part of the chimney, or 60 centimetres measured from the highest part of the ridge tiles of the roof, whichever is the lower;
- (d) in the case of a dwellinghouse situated within a designated area, it would consist of the installation of an antenna—
  - (i) on a chimney, wall or roof slope which faces onto and is visible from a road;
  - (ii) on a building which exceeds 15 metres in height.

(A “designated area” means a conservation area, an area of outstanding natural beauty, an area of special scientific interest, a National Park or a World Heritage Site).

Development is permitted by Class G subject to the following conditions—

- (a) an antenna shall so far as is practicable be sited so as to minimise its effect on the external appearance of the building; and
- (b) an antenna no longer needed for reception or transmission purposes shall be removed as soon as reasonably practicable.

The relevant size criteria for the purpose of paragraph G.1(a)(iii) are that—

- (a) only 1 of the antennas may exceed 60 centimetres in length; and
- (b) any antenna which exceeds 60 centimetres in length must not exceed 100 centimetres in length.

The length of an antenna is to be measured in any linear direction, and shall exclude any projecting feed element, reinforcing rim, mounting or brackets.

Permitted Development for microwave antenna on buildings other than dwellinghouses (including commercial property and blocks of flats)

Class A. The installation, alteration or replacement on any building or other structure of a height of 15 metres or more of a microwave antenna and any structure intended for the support of a microwave antenna.

Development is not permitted by Class A if—

- (a) the building is a dwellinghouse or the building or other structure is within the curtilage of a dwellinghouse;
- (b) it would consist of development by electronic communications code operators already permitted under Part 17;
- (c) it would result in the presence on the building or structure of more than 4 antennas;
- (d) in the case of an antenna installed on a chimney, the length of the antenna would exceed 60 centimetres;
- (e) in all other cases, the length of the antenna would exceed 130 centimetres;
- (f) it would consist of the installation of an antenna with a cubic capacity in excess of 35 litres;
- (g) the highest part of the antenna or its supporting structure would be more than 3 metres higher than the highest part of the building or structure on which it is installed or is to be installed;
- (h) in the case of a building or structure situated within a designated area, it would consist of the installation of an antenna on a chimney, wall or roof slope which faces onto, and is visible from, a road.

Development is permitted by Class A subject to the following conditions—

- (a) an antenna shall, so far as is practicable, be sited so as to minimise its effect on the external appearance of the building or structure on which it is to be installed;
- (b) an antenna no longer needed for reception or transmission purposes shall be removed from the building or structure as soon as is reasonably practicable;
- (c) the length of an antenna is to be measured in any linear direction, and shall exclude any projecting feed element, reinforcing rim, mounting or brackets.

Class B. The installation, alteration or replacement on any building or other structure of a height of less than 15 metres of a microwave antenna.

Development is not permitted by Class B if—

- (a) the building is a dwellinghouse or the building or other structure is within the curtilage of a dwellinghouse;
- (b) it would consist of development by electronic communications code operators already permitted under Part 17;
- (c) it would result in the presence on the building or structure of—
  - (i) more than 2 antennas;
  - (ii) a single antenna exceeding 100 centimetres in length;
  - (iii) 2 antennas which do not meet the relevant size criteria;
  - (iv) an antenna installed on a chimney, where the length of the antenna would exceed 60 centimetres;
  - (v) an antenna installed on a chimney, where the antenna would protrude over the chimney;
  - (vi) an antenna with a cubic capacity in excess of 35 litres;
- (d) in the case of an antenna to be installed on a roof without a chimney, the highest part of the antenna would be higher than the highest part of the roof;
- (e) in the case of an antenna to be installed on a roof with a chimney, the highest part of the antenna would be higher than the highest part of the chimney stack, or 60 centimetres measured from the highest part of the ridge tiles of the roof, whichever is the lower;

- (f) in the case of a building or structure situated in a designated area, it would consist of the installation of an antenna on a chimney, wall or roof slope which faces onto, and is visible from, a road.

Development is permitted by Class B subject to the following conditions—

- (a) an antenna shall, so far as is practicable, be sited so as to minimise its effect on the external appearance of the building or structure on which it is to be installed;
- (b) an antenna no longer needed for reception or transmission purposes shall be removed from the building or structure as soon as reasonably practicable.

The relevant size criteria for the purposes of paragraph B.1(c)(iii) are that—

- (a) only 1 of the antennas may exceed 60 centimetres in length; and
- (b) any antenna which exceeds 60 centimetres in length must not exceed 100 centimetres in length.

The length of an antenna is to be measured in any linear direction and shall exclude any projecting feed element, reinforcing rim, mounting or bracket.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment when the report on the sewage overflow for Muckamore and Dunadry, promised in September 2014, will be published.

(AQW 36405/11-15)

Mr Durkan: You will recall that I previously wrote to you on 1 July 2014 to detail the investigation into two sewage-related pollution incidents at Muckamore, Antrim. I have checked with my Departmental officials, who are unaware of a commitment to publish a further formal report on these incidents, or on another incident at Dunadry. Nevertheless I am of course happy to update you on the investigation into these incidents.

You will be aware from my previous letter that there were two recent pollution incidents immediately downstream of Muckamore Bridge on the Antrim to Nutts Corner Road.

The first incident was on Friday 18 April 2014, when Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) staff confirmed that a discharge of sewage was occurring from a flap valve into the Six Mile Water, just downstream of Muckamore Bridge, Antrim. There was however no evidence of a plume in the river, suggesting a limited downstream impact at that time. Based on the evidence observed NIEA assessed this incident as 'low' severity.

As soon as the incident type had been investigated and confirmed, NIEA alerted Northern Ireland Water (NIW). NIW contractors were on site shortly afterwards and carried out a full investigation of the surrounding sewer network. This investigation found a sewer blockage approximately 500 metres away, causing an overflow from the sewer to the storm water system which in turn flowed to the Six Mile Water at Muckamore Bridge. NIW also found a second, lesser contributory blockage which was again cleared.

A second report of pollution from the same storm system flap valve at Muckamore Bridge was subsequently made to NIEA on Thursday 1 May 2014. NIEA staff travelled immediately to the site, but upon arrival found that any polluting discharge had stopped and there was no visible plume in the river. This second report was again assessed by NIEA as being of 'low' severity.

NIW's follow-up investigation to these incidents identified a number of misconnections to and from the sewer network, with the potential to cause low level but ongoing pollution. NIEA is currently working with NIW to schedule a programme of remedial work to address misconnections in the Muckamore area.

Encouragingly, NIEA staff have checked this outfall at regular intervals since but have not observed any further pollution incidents since 1 May.

As regards your question about a sewage incident at Dunadry, the only recent relevant incident my Departmental officials are aware of is a septic tank incident at Dunadry which was reported to NIEA on Tuesday 2 September 2014. Upon investigation NIEA staff found this to be due to be a minor sullage water discharge from a domestic property. The householder in this case had previously been successfully prosecuted by NIEA, but the discharge observed on this date fell well below a level which could have led to a further prosecution. NIEA is currently working with the householder to ensure the sullage water problem is permanently rectified.

Finally I would reassure you that NIEA have ensured that anglers and stakeholders on the Six Mile Water were kept informed of each of these pollution incidents and the overall response to them. For example NIEA staff met representatives from the Six Mile Water Anglers on 1 May and on 6 May 2014, when the response to the Muckamore incidents was discussed in detail. Likewise on the Dunadry incident, NIEA staff met on site with anglers and discussed the findings, and subsequently updated them by telephone.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment when he will outline his plans for dealing with matters relating to planning control, gravel extraction and the EU Habitats Directive.

(AQW 36406/11-15)

Mr Durkan: All major and local developments will be dealt with by councils under the new planning system. It is anticipated that following the implementation of the Review of Public Administration in 2015, the majority of minerals applications will be dealt with by councils and my officials are currently engaging with the Local Government sector to establish how best to process these types of applications post transfer of planning powers.

Any regionally significant development proposals will be determined by the Department.

The Habitats Directive will be fully considered in the processing of applications where appropriate.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment, following his recent written statement on planning and flood risk, what preventative measures will be examined where planning approvals are issued in areas prone to surface water flooding.
(AQW 36410/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Further to publishing Revised PPS 15 on 23 September, I can advise that planning approvals will not generally be forthcoming in areas of surface water flood risk which also coincide with river and coastal flood plains.

In areas of surface water flood risk outside of flood plains, development proposals will be carefully assessed to ensure that there are adequate means of mitigating and managing the flood risk to the new development and to nearby areas. The policy sets out the circumstances requiring a developer to submit a drainage assessment. Generally these relate to specified thresholds, for example residential development of 10 dwellings or more. A drainage assessment is also required for most development in areas where there is evidence of a history of surface water flooding. The drainage assessment must detail appropriate preventative measures; for example raising finished floor levels of the building or using various flood proofing methods of construction. Drainage assessments will be subject to consultation with DARD Rivers Agency or other relevant bodies and this will inform the conditions to be attached to any grant of planning permission.

Where a drainage assessment is not required by the policy, greater onus is placed upon the developer to assess flood risk and drainage impact and to mitigate the risk to the development and any impacts beyond the site. This applies particularly in areas of potential for surface water flooding, as identified by the Strategic Flood Map.

Irrespective of the type of flooding, preventative measures aimed to reduce flood risk are secured through the planning system prior to, rather than subsequent to, any grant of planning permission.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, with the exception of the enforcement officers tasked with obtaining video footage of taxi issues at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013, to detail the job description of staff within his Department, or any of its agencies, who viewed the footage or any report detailing the content.
(AQW 36423/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No other staff from the Department, or any of its agencies viewed the video footage of taxi issues at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013. An email summarising the events from the evening was provided to DVA senior management.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to video footage taken by enforcement staff at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013, to detail who outside of his Department or its agencies has had sight of the footage, including the PSNI and any relevant taxi operators and licence holders.
(AQW 36424/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No one from outside my Department or any of its agencies has viewed the video footage.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment why Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) Natural Heritage has returned a consultation response of "no comment" on planning application K/2014/0246/F regarding the removal of planning conditions 25 and 26 from planning permission K/2013/0072/F, when it was NIEA Natural Heritage that insisted on those conditions being imposed in the first instance, specifically to safeguard the site selected features of the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation.
(AQW 36436/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The site is upstream of the Owenkillew River Special Area of Conservation (SAC). Planning conditions nos. 25 and 26 relate to water discharge parameters and water quality effects on the features of the SAC. DOE's assessment has been carried out by NIEA's Water Management Unit.

DOE issued a consent, under the terms of the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999, for the discharge of drainage arising from the proposed development, to the applicant on 6 February 2014. This consent contains conditions formulated to ensure that water quality objectives set for the Owenkillew River will not be at risk of adverse impact by the proposed discharge.

Monitoring to check compliance with the conditions contained in the discharge consent will be carried out by DOE when the project commences.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the reasons why his Department was unable to deal with proposed explosives store as (i) a minor amendment to K/2013/0072/F as first suggested by his Department; and (ii) as permitted development under part 16(A) of the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 (as amended), as subsequently suggested by his Department.

(AQW 36437/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 19 August the Department requested a planning application to deal with matters that were being considered as a minor amendment to Dalradian Gold's planning approval K/2013/0072/F at Camcosy Road, Gortin.

Whilst the proposed changes to the existing planning permission are relatively minor, it was considered that they amounted to a material change to the approved plans.

The proposal had not been considered as permitted development under part 16(A) of the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 (as amended).

Mr Agnew asked Minister of the Environment, given that it was necessary to submit a full planning application K/2014/0387/F for an explosives store, whether he remains of the view that in the absence of those details from planning approval K/2013/0072/F, his Department legitimately and lawfully granted permission for an explosives store on 22 January 2014.

(AQW 36438/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department lawfully granted planning permission for application ref: K/2013/0072/F, which included information on the originally positioned explosives store, and it is currently dealing with a valid planning application for a revised explosives store position and associated works.

Mr Agnew asked nister of the Environment for his assessment of the view of legal representatives acting on behalf of the applicant for K/2013/0072/F when they state that a planning application is invalid if insufficient plans have been provided.

(AQW 36439/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The planning application to which the legal representatives refer (ref: K/2014/0060/F) was received by the Omagh Area Planning Office and deemed to be valid on 18 February 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment how many applications for the Third Sector Capacity Fund his Department has received from organisations in East Londonderry.

(AQW 36492/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Rethink Waste Capital Fund for the Third Sector was launched on 22 August 2014. The closing date for applications is 30 November 2014. To date, no applications have been received from organisations in East Londonderry.

The relevant link for potential applicants is: <http://www.wrapni.org.uk/content/third-sector-capacity-fund-capital>.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency are taking to encourage (a) businesses; (b) non-governmental organisations; (c) councils; and (d) associations or professional societies to be signed participants in Prosperity Agreements.

(AQW 36494/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Prosperity Agreements are voluntary agreements through which the NIEA and an organisation can explore opportunities for reducing environment and heritage impacts in ways that create prosperity and well-being.

I have instructed my Department to negotiate and develop Prosperity Agreements with organisations where significant environmental, social and economic benefits can be gained.

I regularly talk about this new initiative publicly and my senior Department officials are in discussions with a wide variety of businesses, trade associations, non-government organisations and councils about potential Prosperity Agreements.

We have also provided information about Prosperity Agreements and made the first signed Prosperity Agreement publicly available on the Department's website. There is a small team in the NIEA who ensure that organisations that are interested in discussing Prosperity Agreements further can access more information.

Finally, all NIEA staff are briefed on Prosperity Agreements so they can discuss them with organisations that are interested in the programme.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will introduce regulation to control the contents of any fracking fluid.

(AQW 36579/11-15)

Mr Durkan: It is not my intention to consider any such controls applicable to high volume hydraulic fracturing until the outcomes of the All Island Research Programme are known, post August 2016.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the estimated tonnage of concrete required to be poured on the protected habitat in relation to planning application K/2014/0387/F; (ii) whether Northern Ireland Environment Agency Natural Heritage carried out an assessment of the risk of peat slide prior to stating that it had no objection; and (iii) who is responsible for conducting the Habitats Regulation Assessment given that NIEA Natural Heritage states it is the responsibility of NIEA

Water Management Unit, yet the unit stated that it is concerned about the risk of peat slide and does not have the expertise to assess such a risk.

(AQW 36581/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The weight of concrete to be used in constructing the proposed development is not known. The floor of the proposed store is denoted as concrete on application drawings. The floor would sit upon geotextile and three layers of capping stone. The concrete floor slab is proposed at 200mm thickness over an area of 9 metres x 5 metres (45 square metres). No concrete is being poured on protected habitats.

In this case The Department is the 'Competent Authority' as defined by the Habitats Regulations. It is therefore the Department that is responsible for undertaking the HRA. As all potential effects on the SAC are related to impacts on water quality, the Department's water quality experts have been tasked to take the lead role. The Department has not identified any potential threat from peat slides, as peat depths on the site are less than 0.5 metres.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Northern Ireland Environment Agency took into account the impact on the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation from the construction of an explosives store when completing a Habitats Regulation Assessment, prior to consenting to the approval of K/2013/0072/F as is required by Article 6(3) of the Habitats Directive; and if so, to detail how this was; (i) possible and (ii) lawful, given the absence of details in the approval.

(AQW 36582/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The location and construction of the explosives store was assessed by the Department prior to the consenting of K/2013/0072/F. No potential effects were identified. A subsequent application has been made for the relocation of the explosive store. The Department has re-examined the HRA to include this amendment and again no likely significant effects have been identified. The Department has had sufficient information available to undertake a robust assessment of the explosive store construction on the SAC, the assessment was therefore both possible and lawful.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the changes made to the regulation of bus operators by the introduction of the Bus Compliance Audit Process; and (ii) the rationale for the introduction of the Bus Compliance Audit Process.

(AQW 36630/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Bus Compliance Audit Process was introduced at the end of June 2014 to ensure that operators comply with Directive EC1071/2009 which introduced new legal requirements aimed at modernising the rules governing road transport. These include rules relating to the operator's place of establishment, vehicle maintenance, facilities, drivers' hours and transport manager responsibilities and therefore necessitate a detailed inspection to be carried out.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the implementation of the Bus Compliance Audit Process.

(AQW 36631/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My assessment of the implementation of the Bus Compliance Audit process is that it provides assurances that rules relating to the operator's place of establishment, vehicle maintenance, facilities, drivers' hours and transport manager responsibilities are being met.

It also provides bus operators with a clear and transparent assessment of their current practices/processes and will identify any anomalies that need to be addressed to ensure that they are carrying out their processes in line with best practice.

I understand that a number of operators who have been subject to an audit have provided positive feedback to my officials regarding the benefits of undergoing such an exercise.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the timescales for the transfer of powers from Departments to local government.

(AQW 36648/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The functions agreed by the Executive are due to transfer to the new district councils on 1st April 2015 and work is proceeding on all the necessary legislation to achieve the reform of local government by that date.

The transfer of regeneration powers from the Department of Social Development will require primary legislation and Executive agreement to the introduction of this legislation is the next significant step in the local government reform programme. It is crucial that the DSD Bill passes through the Assembly process without delay.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35459/11-15, given the concerns and lack of clarity in a number of areas around this footage, whether he will now view the footage and provide a report of the contents.

(AQW 36652/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has determined that the current provision of taxi services at Ravenhill Stadium is compliant with the requirements of the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 and, as such, I do not intend to revisit this matter.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35226/11-15, in relation to video footage gathered at Ravenhill Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue by the four enforcement officers on duty on 23 August 2013, to detail (i) how many prosecutions have been taken based on the evidence to date; and (ii) how many prosecutions are pending.

(AQW 36653/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has determined that the provision of taxi services at Ravenhill Stadium is compliant with the requirements of the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 and other related legislation and as such no prosecutions are currently being pursued.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to the incident in which a taxi driver is alleged to have assaulted a woman following a pick up in Carryduff and drop off at the Carr Road area of Lisburn on 16 September 2014, to clarify that his departmental agencies are working with PSNI to establish whether this vehicle was pre-booked for the fare as per his Department's regulations and the requirement of all private hire taxis, or was it hailed on the street.

(AQW 36670/11-15)

Mr Durkan: This alleged incident has not been reported to the DVA. Incidents such as this would be subject to investigation by PSNI. We have not been approached by the PSNI about the alleged incident referred to.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment who is responsible for enforcing Local Landscape Policy Areas.

(AQW 36682/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Any alleged breach of planning control that occurs within a designated Local Landscape Policy Area (LLPA) will be investigated by the Enforcement section of the relevant DOE Area Planning Office.

The features or combination of features that contribute to the environmental quality, integrity or character of a designated LLPA will be of material consideration in any Enforcement investigation.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current number of MOT centres.

(AQW 36685/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are currently 15 MOT centres at various locations across Northern Ireland. Information about each test centre can be found on the NIDirect website via the following link:

<http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/index/information-and-services/motoring/mot-and-vehicle-testing/about-the-mot-scheme/where-are-the-test-centres.htm>

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current number of weighbridges.

(AQW 36687/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) maintains a network of 10 dynamic axle weighing machines situated throughout Northern Ireland.

Six of the weighbridges are self weigh and are operational on a continuous basis; the other four are based in DVA Test Centre locations and can be accessed by prior arrangement with the Test Centre Manager.

Self weigh facilities are located in Larne, Loughbrickland, Nutts Corner, Sprucefield, Belfast (Garmoyle Street) and Toomebridge. Test Centre weighing facilities are located in Ballymena, Coleraine, Cookstown and Mallusk.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of road deaths since 2010; and what steps his Department is taking to reduce road deaths.

(AQW 36749/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table below records road deaths in Northern Ireland in recent years

Year	Deaths
2009	115
2010	55
2011	59
2012	48
2013	57
2014 (to 1 October)	60

The PSNI's 'Detailed Trends Report 2013' provides a comprehensive analysis of fatalities over the 5 year period from 2009 including a breakdown by road user type. The report can be viewed at the following link:

http://www.psni.police.uk/2013\_detailed\_trends\_report\_-\_annual\_bulletin\_-\_published\_25th\_june\_14.pdf

It is important to remember that the number of road traffic fatalities in Northern Ireland has generally been declining since the early 1970s. Indeed, over the last five years (2009 to 2013) the number of people killed on our roads has halved.

I am however extremely concerned by the rise in fatalities in the current year. As Minister of the Environment, I have responsibility for ensuring that a strategic approach is taken to road safety. The Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy to 2020 sets out the key challenges and objectives for improving road safety. The Strategy identifies casualty reduction targets and details over 200 action measures to deliver improved road safety through education, engineering and enforcement. The implementation process is shared work, involving many parts of government – and all of us as citizens. It is encouraging to note that over half of the Strategy's action measures have already been implemented.

My Department continues to take a range of actions to reduce deaths and serious injuries on our roads. We focus on the principal causation factors, such as drink driving, speeding, carelessness and inattention; and on groups which are over-represented in the casualty figures. The Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill, which I introduced into the Assembly in May, seeks to address a number of these issues.

Perhaps most publicly, my Department addresses high risk behaviours through our information campaigns. In addition to the existing media programme, I have launched two new campaigns in 2014, addressing cyclist safety and inappropriate speed. Both of these have been identified as priority issues.

In addition, we are developing a strategy to improve motorcyclist safety. This work is being taken forward in partnership with the Motorcycle Safety Forum and other key stakeholders. In light of the continuing increase in motorcyclist casualties, we have also commissioned a statistical review of these casualties, including consideration of demographics, location and causation factors. This should allow us to determine areas for early intervention.

I cannot emphasise enough the fact that most of the casualties on our roads are caused by poor road user behaviour. Positively influencing human behaviour is a challenging and long term process. We have made great strides but this task requires continuing effort from all of us. My Department and our road safety partners can educate, engineer and enforce, but ultimately each of us has to take personal responsibility for our attitudes and behaviours as road users.

I believe that the measures I have outlined, along with others carried out by my Department and our partners, will help save lives on our roads. However I can assure you that I will continue to keep the position under review. I believe that every death on our roads is one too many. I will continue to work with all stakeholders to improve road safety and to reduce casualties.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the current policy for achieving sight lines for single wind turbines where an existing access is already in place.

(AQW 36794/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Development proposals that relate to access are normally assessed under Planning Policy Statement 3 – Access, Movement and Parking. Development Control Advice Note 15 'Vehicular Access Standards' also sets out the current standards for sightlines, radii, gradient etc. that will be applied to both new access and intensified use of an existing vehicular access onto existing public roads.

Consultation will normally take place and comment sought from Transport NI with respect to any proposals which include the creation of a new access or alteration and/or intensification of an existing access.

In circumstances where an existing access is available to facilitate development proposals, the Department will generally expect this to be used, unless there is an opportunity to provide a more acceptable access arrangement, having regard to both road safety and local amenity considerations. For a proposal for a single wind turbine, where an existing field access is to be used for the access for the wind turbine, access improvements may be required. However, each application is assessed on its own merits and on a case by case basis, based on site specific conditions.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36443/11-15, whether the area is part of a Local Landscape Policy Area (LLPA); and if so, what protection this provides to habitats within the LLPA.

(AQW 36889/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In accordance with PPS 6: Planning, Archaeology and the Built Heritage, LLPAs are designated to help protect those areas within and/or adjoining settlements which are considered to be of greatest amenity value, landscape quality or local significance and are therefore worthy of protection from undesirable or damaging development. They include:

- archaeological sites and monuments and their surroundings;
- listed and other locally important buildings and their surroundings;
- river banks and shore lines and associated public access;
- attractive vistas, localised hills and other areas of local amenity importance; and
- areas of local nature conservation importance, including areas of woodland and important tree groups.

The Commons, Donaghadee, is designated within the Ards & Down Area Plan as LLPA 8 – "The Commons" and coastline. It is described within the Plan as an attractive stretch of coastline affording views out to sea, a valuable area of local amenity importance with extensive public walkways, and including both passive and active recreational areas. Under Policy CON 2 of the Plan planning permission will not be granted to development proposals which would be liable to adversely affect environmental quality, integrity or character of LLPAs.

Habitats are specifically afforded protection by Planning Policy Statement 2: Natural Heritage; however this particular area is designated on the basis of its landscape and amenity value, not as a habitat.

Planning officials have investigated the vegetation clearance on this site and consequently did not identify a breach of planning control as the activity did not constitute development.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail all floor and room modifications in the Northern Ireland Civil Service office estate exceeding £5,000 over the last twelve months, including (i) the total cost in each case; (ii) the rationale for the work in each case; and (iii) whether his Department is aware of any planned work for the remainder of the current financial year.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what system is in place to measure the access and uptake of innovation amongst local companies.

(AQW 35732/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Invest NI offers a wide range of Research & Development and Innovation (R&D & I) schemes designed specifically to help companies of all sizes and all stages of their development to engage in R&D & I activities. The schemes range from Project Definition which offers support to businesses to plan and test the feasibility of R&D proposals, to individual company grants for R&D implementation through to the multi-million pound industry-led Competence Centres which are designed to encourage collaborative and strategic research by Northern Ireland businesses.

Invest NI has a team of Innovation Advisers who are actively involved with local businesses to raise awareness of the support available and to assist them to become involved in innovation and first time R&D by supporting in the initial application process. In addition to the above, this would include the provision of support to allow companies to access smaller scale innovation activities such as:

- Specialist technical advice and guidance;
- Product and process development;
- IP / Patents and manufacturing standard advice and assistance;
- Advice and support with regards to all elements of the design process;
- Tailored ICT and eBusiness support;
- Advice and assistance to help businesses identify projects to reduce energy, water, waste and raw materials costs.

The Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA) publishes an annual survey based estimate of Northern Ireland businesses' R&D activity as a National Statistic.

A separate biennial UK Innovation Survey is conducted by the Office for National Statistics and a Northern Ireland analysis is also produced by NISRA. This report contains information on the extent of innovation activity in Northern Ireland, the impact of innovation on businesses as well as barriers to innovation.

Both reports are available via the DETI website. http://www.deti.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-stats-index/stats\_publications\_2014\_onwards/innovation\_survey.htm

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of commercial organisations that have had rates bills written off in each of the last three years; (ii) the rationale for the decision with respect to each organisation; and (iii) the full amount written off in each case.

(AQW 36086/11-15)

Mr Hamilton:

(i) Detail the number of commercial organisations that have had rates bills written-off in each of the last three years

Information on the number of commercial organisations that have had rates bills written-off in each of the last three years is not available. The number of domestic and non-domestic properties for which some or all rates were written-off, in each of the last three years, is provided in the table below.

Sector	2013/14	2012/13	2011/12
Domestic	22,329	21,268	14,034
Non-Domestic	4,360	4,295	3,448

(ii) Detail the rationale for the decision with respect to each organisation

The rationale to write-off rating liability, with respect to each organisation, is not available. However, a number of primary factors are considered when determining any write-off. Primary factors include:

- Legislative
  - On legal advice.
  - Statute barred.
  - Where a company has been listed for more than six months for a strike-off from the Companies House register.
  - Where an insolvency order has been issued to the ratepayer.
  - In cases where the Enforcement of Judgments Office (EJO) has issued a Certificate of Unenforceability.
- Traceability
  - The debtor is untraceable and all reasonable steps have been taken to recover the debts.
- Economical
  - It is deemed uneconomical to recover.
- Discretionary
  - Where the circumstance of the case dictates a compassionate approach and makes recovery unreasonable.
  - The death of the debtor, where it proves difficult to recover the debt.

(iii) Detail the full amount written-off in each case

Information on the amount of rates written-off for commercial organisations is not available. The net amount of rates written-off in the domestic and non-domestic sectors, in each of the last three years, is provided in the table below.

Sector	2013/14	2012/13	2011/12
Domestic	£9,378,966	£8,414,756	£4,393,638
Non-Domestic	£22,246,389	£20,690,971	£17,493,775

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the amount of rates deferred per annum due to provisions made for pensioners.

(AQW 36448/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There are currently 35 ratepayers of pensionable age with active agreements in place to defer payment of rates within the terms of The Rates (Deferment) (Revocation and Savings) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012. The amount of rates deferred per annum is illustrated in the attached table.

Rating Year

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15	Total
Total	£21,748.97	£52,661.90	£53,935.94	£54,795.86	£55,707.88	£238,850.55

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what action he has taken to encourage HM Treasury to reduce VAT on tourist accommodation and visitor attractions.

(AQW 36503/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Following a Motion I brought to the NI Assembly in September 2012 in support of a reduced rate of VAT for the hospitality industry, my predecessor raised this issue with the former Exchequer Secretary, David Gauke MP. The former Exchequer Secretary responded that any reduction in VAT would need to apply across the United Kingdom as a whole and that, in his view, the cost of lowering the rate of VAT for the hospitality sector would be too high. I have no indication that the Treasury position on this has changed.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many social economy enterprises in East Londonderry have secured opportunities for growth through public sector procurement contracts, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36543/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Central Procurement Directorate monitors the level of participation and success of social economy enterprises in public procurement contracts awarded by Centres of Procurement Expertise. However, this data cannot be filtered by geographical location.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many small and medium enterprises in East Londonderry have secured business opportunities through public sector procurement contracts, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36544/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Central Procurement Directorate monitors the level of participation and success of small and medium sized enterprises in public procurement contracts awarded by Centres of Procurement Expertise. However, this data cannot be filtered by geographical location.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the estimated number of home owners that are over 70 and living alone and have not availed of the discount available on domestic rates payments.

(AQW 36564/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The information requested is not available.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how his Department assists micro-businesses, which have ten or less employees, to be better prepared for public sector procurement opportunities; and whether his Department will make the procurement process easier and more accessible for micro-businesses.

(AQW 36577/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Procurement Board has a continuous focus on encouraging SMEs to tender for public sector opportunities which in turn will help support economic growth in Northern Ireland. The category of SME includes micro-businesses.

CPD works closely with the All Island Public Procurement Steering Group, including key partners Invest NI and InterTradeIreland, to ensure practical advice and information on public procurement is available to SMEs. Workshops are available to help suppliers develop the confidence, knowledge and practical skills to tender successfully for public sector contracts, in addition to a set of helpful online resources. Regular 'Meet the Buyer' events enable over 1,000 suppliers to meet with public sector buyers each year, gaining an insight into the tendering process and how they can gain access to it.

CPD working in partnership with industry has implemented a number of initiatives to simplify the procurement process and reduce bidding costs. These initiatives include clearer specifications, removing the minimum eligibility requirements for low value supplies and services contracts and awarding contracts on lowest acceptable price where possible. Standard conditions of contract for supplies and services across all departments, agencies and non-departmental public bodies have been introduced from 1 October 2014.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for her assessment of the impact over the last three years on small and medium sized businesses of opening up the government procurement process.

(AQW 36591/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: A key objective of the Procurement Board is to use public procurement to support economic growth in Northern Ireland. There has been a continuing focus on ensuring that opportunities for local businesses to bid for contracts are maximised and on reducing bureaucracy in the procurement process.

The last three years of available data, covering 2010/11 to 2012/13, indicate that this objective is positively impacting on small and medium sized businesses (SMEs).

SMEs have increased their share of contracts awarded from 77% in 2010/11 to 80% in 2012/13, and increased their share of the total value awarded from 44% in 2010/11 to 62.1% in 2012/13.

The share of contracts awarded to SMEs based in Northern Ireland has remained constant over the last three years of available data, and accounted for over two thirds (68.1%) of all contracts awarded in 2012/13.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the Civil Service Redeployment Strategy.

(AQW 36776/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Redeployment Policy for the Northern Ireland Civil Service sets out arrangements for the redeployment of all permanent Northern Ireland Civil Service staff who, for whatever reason, become surplus to a department's requirement.

A primary aim of the Redeployment Policy is to ensure the absorption of surplus staff by means of redeployment either to other suitable posts in the same department, insofar as this is possible, or in another department. The employing department is responsible initially for making every effort to absorb its own surplus staff or to place them in other departments. Only when these measures have been exhausted can a formal surplus be declared to Corporate HR Resourcing Division, DFP.

If necessary, Corporate HR DFP may introduce various formal corporate measures to assist in the redeployment of surpluses and to maximise redeployment opportunities. In such circumstances, staff will be advised of the introduction of these measures.

Further information on the Northern Ireland Civil Service Redeployment policy is available in the NICS staff handbook which can be accessed on the following website: www.dfpni.gov.uk/index/working-in-the-nics.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 36866/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The current number of staff employed in the Department's Information Service is five.

In the financial year 2013/14, the latest complete year for which information is available, the total cost of Information Service staff in DFP was £198,442.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether malnutrition in the community results in costly hospital admissions, longer lengths of stay and increasing pressure on the Health Service; and what action is being taken to avoid such admissions.

(AQW 35863/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): My Department is committed to tackling the issue of malnutrition, not only in hospital settings, but throughout all care settings as a whole. The Promoting Good Nutrition Strategy', launched by my Department in 2011, aims to improve the quality of nutritional care of adults in Northern Ireland through the prevention, identification and management of malnutrition in all health and social care settings including people's own homes. The following table provides the estimated number of admissions over the past three years and the average length of stay where a diagnosis of malnutrition was present. It should be noted that in many of the cases, malnutrition was recorded as a secondary diagnosis and was therefore not the main reason for the patient's admission to hospital.

Admissions<sup>1</sup> to HSC Hospitals in Northern Ireland and average length of stay where a diagnosis of malnutrition<sup>2</sup> was present, 2011/12 - 2013/14

Year	Admissions	Average Length of Stay

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the services offered in Antrim Area Hospital to patients who have suffered a stroke.

(AQW 36132/11-15)

Mr Poots: Delivery of Stroke services at Antrim Area Hospital is the responsibility of the Northern Health and Social Care Trust. The Trust has advised that the current service delivers a comprehensive, multi-disciplinary response for patients diagnosed with a stroke. Future investment may be required to ensure its sustainability and to enable further developments.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what training is provided to medical staff in hospitals or nursing homes to enable the early diagnosis of Progressive Supranuclear Palsy and Corticobasal Degeneration.

(AQW 36141/11-15)

Mr Poots: Training in the early diagnosis of Progressive Supranuclear Palsy and Corticobasal Degeneration is included in the curriculum delivered to trainee doctors specialising in Neurology.

In addition, those foundation and core medical trainees who have an attachment to a neurology department during their training programme will gain exposure to these and other movement disorders.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what work is being conducted to provide enhancements to community respiratory teams in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 36172/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) has actively sought to make enhancements to the work of the community teams by collaborating with health and social care commissioners to address challenges that include an increasing demographic demand and a high level of smoking-related illness in the area.

The NHSCT has worked as an integral part of the Northern Respiratory Integrated Care Multi-disciplinary Partnership which has been established with the aim of providing integrated respiratory care across care settings with a focus on community and primary care.

The Respiratory Integrated Care Multi-disciplinary Partnership has developed a revenue business case for consideration by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) which, if supported, would provide an enhancement of the Specialist Respiratory Teams in respect of the nursing, physiotherapy and support staffing resource. Such enhancement would enable an expansion of the working day in order to provide an early evening Specialist Respiratory Team service and would facilitate the introduction of a modest weekend service. This enhancement would improve access to the Respiratory Specialist Teams for patients in the community with the aim of preventing avoidable admissions and facilitating early hospital discharge for patients with chronic respiratory illness as clinically appropriate. A bronchiectasis service would be established following a successful pilot and pulmonary rehabilitation would be expanded.

The time frame for this is dependent upon approval of the business case, funding allocation being received and recruitment processes.

In 2014, the NHSCT received a non-recurrent allocation for 2 whole time equivalent Band 6 and 0.5 Band 3 posts in order to provide oxygen therapy assessments. The Trust is in the process of sourcing temporary appointments.

At a regional level, the Service Framework for Respiratory Health and Wellbeing includes standards which recognise the role of community respiratory teams in the management of Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease (COPD), as well as their role in the social and emotional support of patients and carers. The Framework has undergone a fundamental review and was issued for public consultation on 1 October 2014.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what work is being conducted to streamline and enhance the Diabetes Foot Care Pathway within an acute setting in the Causeway area.

(AQW 36173/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) has worked as an integral part of the Northern Diabetes Integrated Multi-disciplinary Partnership in the development of a Diabetic Foot Pathway for the NHSCT, with an initial implementation planned for Causeway Hospital.

The Partnership has sought to provide a streamlined multi-disciplinary approach to diabetic foot care within the acute setting. The improved model is in line with the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) guideline CG119 "Diabetic Foot Problems: Inpatient Management of Diabetic Foot Problems" which provides evidence-based advice on the inpatient care of people with diabetic foot problems from hospital admission onwards. A revenue business case has been developed and if successful will provide dedicated access to a specialist multi-disciplinary foot care team.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how patients who are at most risk of deterioration are identified prior to being admitted.

(AQW 36188/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is assumed this question relates to patients being admitted via an emergency department. In the pre-hospital setting, on receipt of an emergency call the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) triages patients into three categories of emergency response based on the chief complaint and an assessment of the seriousness of the injury or illness. All NIAS paramedics and emergency medical technicians are trained in the clinical assessment of patients. NIAS personnel and emergency vehicles are trained and equipped to monitor a range of clinical and physiological parameters and detect any deterioration in a patient's condition on the way to hospital and take appropriate action.

On arrival in the emergency department, patients are triaged and assessed in accordance with the Manchester Triage system and given a clinical priority. Clinical observations (Early Warning Score) are recorded as part of the triage process. The triage process will identify patients with higher risk/time dependent conditions such as stroke and heart attacks and allow them to be prioritised accordingly. While a patient is awaiting assessment by a doctor or waiting to be admitted, ongoing assessment by nursing staff takes place in keeping with the patient's clinical condition and Early Warning Score which will determine the frequency of clinical observations.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to review the level and types of optometry care offered to children in the early years of their education.

(AQW 36192/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department's 2012 eyecare strategy "Developing Eyecare Partnerships, Improving the commissioning and provision of eyecare services in Northern Ireland" aims to improve the eyecare of the population in Northern Ireland, including children and young persons. The strategy is evidence based and the Health and Social Care Board continually reviews emerging optometric clinical practices to ensure that optometric eyecare provision is evidence based, safe and effective.

All Primary 1 children are invited to engage in an orthoptic-led universal vision screening programme which has an excellent uptake rate in excess of 90%. As with other screening programmes it is delivered in line with National Screening Committee guidelines and as such is subject to quality assurance and audit with oversight through the Public Health Agency. In addition over 90,000 NHS Sight Tests are provided by Primary Care (High Street) Optometrists to children aged 6-15yrs annually in Northern Ireland. Sight Tests are available for all children under 16, free of charge, along with assistance towards the cost of an optical appliance, if prescribed.

The HSCB regularly consults with ophthalmic clinicians across primary and secondary care to ensure that appropriate patient pathways are in place to manage children who have ophthalmic conditions.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to review the level and types of optometry care offered to young children before they begin formal education.

(AQW 36193/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Department's 2012 eyecare strategy "Developing Eyecare Partnerships, Improving the commissioning and provision of eyecare services in Northern Ireland" aims to improve the eyecare of all the population in Northern Ireland including children and young persons.

In relation to pre-school children the "Healthy Child, Healthy Future" Framework (2010) with its emphasis on the integration of services promotes and specifies the surveillance and screening of all children, including young children before they enter formal education. Through structured contacts and interventions at neonatal, new baby review, at 14-16 weeks', 1 year and at 2-2.5 years, there is opportunity to identify potential ophthalmic problems and signpost children and their parents to the most appropriate member of the healthcare team, which may be an optometrist.

The Health and Social Care Board continually monitor the level and quality of Optometry care provided within Northern Ireland and regularly engages with ophthalmic clinicians across primary and secondary care to ensure that appropriate patient pathways are in place to manage children who have ophthalmic conditions at all stages of their development.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of complaints received by each Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) how complaints relate to population size; and (iii) what steps his Department has taken to investigate the rise in the number of complaints, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36279/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of complaints received by individual HSC Trusts during the period 1 April 2013 to 31 March 2014 is outlined in the table below.

HSC Trust	No of Complaints
Belfast	2,514
Northern	997
South Eastern	1,343,
Southern	1,032
Western	800
NIAS	150

HSC Trust	No of Complaints
Total for N Ireland	6,836

Since the introduction of the revised HSC Complaints Procedure in 2009, there has been a steady increase in the number of complaints received across HSC Trusts. This is to be expected given the drive to promote the HSC Complaints procedure and improve access to complaints resolution. This is a positive indication of the improved culture of complaint handling across the HSC.

Not all HSC services are provided by every Trust. Some services are provided on a regional by a single Trust or on a sub regional basis by two-three Trusts. In such circumstances complaints are recorded against the HSC Trust which has responsibility for providing the relevant service. This may not necessarily be the patient's Trust of residence. It is not possible to separate out complaints made in relation to regional or sub-regional services and therefore it is not appropriate to relate numbers of complaints made to a Trust to the population of that Trust.

The figures in the table refer to the number of complaint issues received by each HSC Trust in relation to the services they provide.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that Craigavon Area Hospital is preparing to open the "Winter Ward" and that in the past two weeks, extra beds have been placed in all wards at night, to detail the reasons for the "effective closure" of eight rehabilitation/long term care beds in Loane House, Dungannon, which is compounding the bed crisis in Craigavon Area Hospital; and whether it is now common practice that patients are moved between wards from midnight to 6am, in order to avoid breaching target times.

(AQW 36345/11-15)

Mr Poots: In recent years there has been a notable reduction in demand for beds in Loane House over the summer months. This summer 10 beds were temporarily reduced due to lack of demand. This is normal practice in response to seasonal variation in demand and the beds at Loane House can be reopened as and when the need arises.

The Southern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that changes to beds in a non acute facility have no effect on the position at Craigavon Area Hospital, which is an acute facility.

The movement of patients regardless of the time is only considered to ensure that all patients are provided with safe, high quality care at all times.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can provide an assurance that the cardiac ambulance based at Tyrone County Hospital in Omagh will continue to operate from that location.

(AQW 36367/11-15)

Mr Poots: The operation of the cardiac ambulance (the 'mobile coronary care unit') based at Tyrone County Hospital is the responsibility of the Western Health and Social Care Trust.

The Trust has advised that mobile coronary care units were previously used to deliver thrombolytic therapy for patients with ST elevation myocardial infarction (STEMI) and to deliver resuscitation services for patients with out-of-hospital cardiac arrest. Mobile coronary care is now provided by a paramedic-delivered service as part of overall strategies to improve treatment of patients with STEMI and to improve resuscitation of patients with out-of-hospital cardiac arrest. Thrombolytic therapy has now been replaced by primary percutaneous coronary intervention (pPCI) provided for the entire west of Northern Ireland on a 24/7 basis in Altnagelvin Area Hospital.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can provide an assurance that the Cardiac Assessment Unit based in Omagh is not earmarked for closure; and that the unit will be relocated to the new Omagh Enhanced Hospital on completion.

(AQW 36369/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Western Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the cardiac assessment unit in Tyrone County Hospital is an essential and indispensable part of the Western Trust's cardiac service and will continue as such. The unit will move into the new Omagh Enhanced Local Hospital when it is complete.

The cardiac service on the Tyrone County Hospital site has been expanded recently, with four consultant cardiologists now covering the site, with a resultant increase in clinics and cardiological investigations performed.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether staff numbers at the Cardiac Assessment Unit in Omagh are being reduced, given that staff are being asked to take all time owed and holidays.

(AQW 36371/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Western Health Social Care Trust has advised that there are no plans to reduce Staff numbers at the CAU in Omagh. Staff working within the Unit have not been asked to take time owing or holidays other than the holidays that they have planned to take.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the out-of-hours GP services; and (ii) the number of times that each service has been closed since 1 January 2014.

(AQW 36440/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health & Social Care Board (HSCB) commissions GP Out of Hours (OOHs) services for Northern Ireland from 5 provider organisations:

- Belfast Health and Social Care Trust;
- Dalriada Urgent Care (Northern Area);
- South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust;
- Western Urgent Care; and
- Southern Health and Social Care Trust.

The number of closures that each service has had since 1st January 2014 is as follows:

- Belfast Health and Social Care Trust - There are 2 OOHs bases within the Trust area and neither of these has been closed since January 2014.
- Dalriada Urgent Care – There are 4 OOHs bases within the Trust area and there have been no closures since January 2014 when OOHs has been operational, however, after midnight the bases normally close and are covered by 2 mobile cars. OOH bases can be opened as required, to see patients.
- The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust – There are 3 OOHs bases within the Trust area and there have been no closures since January 2014.
- Western Urgent Care – There are 5 OOHs bases within the Trust area and there have been no closures since January 2014.
- In the Southern Health and Social Care Trust – There are 5 OOHs bases within the Trust area and there have been a number of closures since January 2014. The closures were as follows; Newry 1; Craigavon 2; Dungannon 3; Kilkeel 43; and Armagh 86. At these times patients received telephone advice; home visits as normal; or they were advised to attend a more appropriate service such as a Minor Injuries or the Emergency Department. If a face to face consultation was required, the nurse or doctor would have arranged an appointment at the patients nearest available OOHs base.

The HSCB is working with HSC Trusts and OOHs providers in order to try and address the issue of unfilled shifts. In supporting both GP and nursing colleagues the HSCB has invested an additional £1.5million to the OOHs budget during 2014/15 in order to support the provision of OOHs services across NI.

Given the demand being placed on GP OOHs it is essential that patients understand that the OOHs service is designed to deal with urgent calls only and that patients with non-urgent needs are best dealt with during the day at their local GP surgery, via self-care or accessing their local community pharmacy.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) for his assessment of the issue of patients who are not normally resident in Northern Ireland, accessing primary and secondary healthcare services; and (ii) what actions he has taken to address this.

(AQW 36444/11-15)

Mr Wells: Entitlement to health and social care in Northern Ireland is residency based. Non UK residents are normally charged for health and social care services that they receive here unless one of the exemptions included in the Provision of Health Services to Persons not Ordinarily Resident Regulations (NI) 2005 (the Regulations) apply in their case.

The Regulations also include a list of limited treatment that can be provided to all persons regardless of their status including;

- treatment given in an accident and emergency department (until such times as the patient becomes an in-patient);
- treatment for certain communicable diseases;
- treatment at a sexual health clinic (excluding HIV/AIDS where it is only the first diagnosis and connected counselling sessions that are charge free); and
- compulsory psychiatric treatment.

Available data indicates the number of non-UK citizens that have been provided with medical services over the last 5 years is as follows:

- 2009/10        6,658
- 2010/11        7,013
- 2011/12        6,980
- 2012/13        6,501
- 2013/14        7,368

In June 2013 an Access to Health Care Team was established within the Business Services Organisation. This specialist unit provides advice and guidance to HSC Trusts on how to deal with inappropriate access to health care. The Team has worked on systems and processes for trial and development with Trusts, to identify potentially chargeable patients from either overseas or EEA member states and systems are in place for Trusts to recover associated medical charges. The team provided specialist training for HSC staff and on an on-going basis provides expert and specialist advice to HSC staff across Primary, Secondary and Social Care Services.

Collaborative work between the BSO, HSCB, DHSSPS and the Home Office has resulted in a number of initiatives being taken forward in relation to the identification of patients who are not resident in Northern Ireland and who wrongfully claim health care services. Non resident patients from whom medical charges over £1,000 have not been recovered are not allowed back into the country until they clear any outstanding debt.

A Memorandum of Understanding has been developed with the Department of Social Protection in the Republic of Ireland to facilitate the sharing of information to assist in the determination of residency.

Mr Campbell asked the estimated expenditure on Health Service provision from 2003 to 2013.
(AQW 36468/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) final outturn, for the financial years 2004/05 to 2012/13 is as follows:

Financial Year	Total DEL <sup>(1)</sup> Final Outturn £bn
2012/13	4.81
2011/12	4.60
2010/11	4.52
2009/10(3)	4.53
2008/09	4.34
2007/08	4.00
2006/07	3.76
2005/06	3.46
2004/05(2)	3.24

Notes:

1. Comprises current expenditure and capital investment expenditure.
2. Earliest figures available.
3. Figures for 2009/10 and earlier years are not directly comparable with those relating to 2010/11 and later, due to issues such as the Review of Public Administration and changes in budgeting classifications (eg Clear Line of Sight).

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the joint health and education project, part-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies targeting early intervention, intends to distribute expenditure through his Department and its arm's-length bodies, or through community based applications.
(AQW 36484/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Early Intervention Transformation Programme seeks to act as a catalyst for transformative change in how services are delivered to children and families across Northern Ireland in order to measurably improve outcomes for children. Through this, it seeks to support children and families both earlier and more effectively, before problems become embedded. To this end, the Programme will not work as a general fund which accepts applications for funding, but rather will have clear objectives, outcomes, indicators and a range of targeted interventions to meet those objectives. These interventions will be delivered via a range of organisations. Where this provision is out-with the statutory sector, a tender process will be used.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the policies which are in place in each Health and Social Care Trust to ensure that patients and their relatives are informed which health professional has overall responsibility for their care, and of the means by which they can contact this individual when required.

Mr Wells: Care may be delivered in a number of different settings including primary, secondary and community. The policy or practice for informing patients or their relatives which health professional has overall responsibility for their care varies across these programmes of care and the services being offered. It is considered good practice to share the details of the lead health professional with patients clients and to share the most suitable means by which to contact them.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 32999/11-15, (i) how publishing information on less than five cases could compromise patient confidentiality; (ii) in how many cases the numbers were less than five; and (iii) will he now answer the original question that was asked in cases where the number of incidences was more than five.

(AQW 36524/11-15)

Mr Wells: To ensure that details relating to an identifiable person are neither directly nor inadvertently divulged, all statistical information released by the DHSSPS is processed for confidentiality in accordance with the strict disclosure guidelines set out by the Office of National Statistics. A copy of the guidance can be accessed at <http://www.ons.gov.uk/ons/guide-method/best-practice/disclosure-control-of-health-statistics/confidentiality-guidance.pdf>

These methods are sufficient to protect the privacy of individual information, but not so restrictive as to limit unduly the practical utility of the statistics produced by DHSSPS.

You have asked for a breakdown of SAI incidents classified by the nature of the incident. Each SAI is treated individually and each SAI typically involves a unique set of circumstances. Where any pattern or common factors are identified by the HSCB/PHA these will typically be reflected within learning letters issued to the HSC or in other HSCB/PHA communications which highlight learning emerging from SAIs.

The HSCB/PHA categorises SAIs by Programmes of Care. These include Mental Health, Acute Services, Family and Child Care, Learning Disability, Corporate Business/Other, Maternity and Child Health, Primary Health and Adult Community (including General Practice), Elderly, Physical Disability and Sensory Impairment and Health Promotion and Disease Prevention.

The purpose of the SAI system is to identify and promote learning from events. The investigation of an SAI provides a mechanism to effectively share learning in a meaningful way; with a focus on quality and safety, ultimately leading to service improvement for service users.

Incidents can occur in any setting including registered homes, in the community and in acute care settings and they are not always patient safety related. They may relate to child protection issues, estate type issues, information data breaches or health and safety issues relating to staff. The death of any child in receipt of HSC services (up to their 18th birthday) which includes hospital and community services, a looked after child or a child whose name appears on the child protection register are currently required to be always reported as serious adverse incidents. There is also a requirement to report, as part of the SAI process, the suspected suicide of a service user who has a mental illness or disorder (as defined within the Mental Health (NI) Order 1986) and known to or referred to mental health related services in the 12 months prior to the incident. The HSCB/PHA also does not collect information on SAIs on an individual hospital basis. This is only available on a Trust basis. Regardless of the setting in which a particular incident occurs an SAI investigation will often consider the engagements which took place with the patient/client in other settings and with other service providers. Issues of communication between service providers as well as with patients/clients can for example be one of the areas of learning which can be identified from an SAI investigation.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many Serious Adverse Incidents occurred in each of the last ten years broken down by (i) hospital and (ii) the nature of the incident; and whether in any case the Health and Social Care Trust's response was below standard and resulted in the death of patients.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are available in North Down for people living with dementia.

(AQW 36530/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust are responsible for providing services to people living with dementia in North Down. The Trust provides day care in two locations, namely the Dementia suite at Bayview and Fold Millbrook Court day centre. Support for people living with dementia and their carers is provided in conjunction with the the Alzheimer's Society. In addition the Trust works closely with third sector providers, such as Bryson House, to provide an active respite service and fund institutional placements in residential and nursing homes to offer respite for carers.

The Trust reviews on an on-going basis the provision of services to individuals with dementia in light of demographic needs and changes.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of registered childcare providers in North Down in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36531/11-15)

Mr Wells: At 16 September 2014, there were 311 childcare providers in North Down. This figure was taken from a live database of childcare providers which is updated on a regular basis and maintained by the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board. As it is a live database, it is not possible to use this database to provide figures for previous years.

The table below contains the number of childcare providers at 31 March in 2012 and 2013. These figures have been taken from the HSC Board's Delegated Statutory Functions Returns, which provide aggregated information on childrens social care activity including childcare. This information, available at HSC Trust level only, is published annually by the Department in 'Children's Social Care Statistics for Northern Ireland'. Figures have been provided for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area as the North Down constituency falls within its boundaries.

Table 1: The Number of Childcare Providers in the South Eastern HSC Trust at 31 March (2012 – 2013)

Area	2012 No. Childcare Providers	2013 No. Childcare Providers
South Eastern HSC Trust	1,158	1,176

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will direct further investment to enable increased access to early interventions, to redress the balance between mental health and other services.

(AQW 36548/11-15)

Mr Wells: Until the Executive agrees the budgetary position, I am unable to commit further investment in early mental health interventions.

However, in line with the Bamford recommendations, early intervention has been at the heart of mental health service development in the last number of years. A number of initiatives are being taken forward by the Health and Social Care Board to enable early and effective intervention for people with mental health care needs including:

- The development and implementation of a stepped care model across all mental health services, which promotes early intervention and the provision of appropriate mental health services in line with clinically assessed need;
- A programme for the establishment of Primary Care Talking Therapies Hubs across each Trust area, which will provide a range of psychological therapies and lifestyle support for people who are experiencing common mental health problems, and when fully developed will improve access to earlier support and care. The HSC Board has recently invested £1.7M to support the establishment of the Hubs;
- The HSC Board has also recently invested £1M to support the development of Primary Mental Health Care Teams within Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) across the Region, which will provide a wide range of early support for children, young people and their parents.

Subject to the availability of additional resources, the HSCB has further proposals to strengthen early intervention services including extending the range and scope of services provision within the Primary Care Talking Therapies Hubs and are considering opportunities to develop dedicated early intervention teams for young people with psychosis.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will fund an advertising campaign to raise awareness of drugs abuse in Banbridge.

(AQW 36551/11-15)

Mr Wells: As set out in my response to AQW 36837/11-15, there are a range of awareness raising and education services funded in the Banbridge area. In addition, further to AQW 36550/11-15, an advertising campaign in a local area would need to be considered very carefully to ensure that people are not stigmatised and that instead of preventing substance misuse, that we do not normalise drug misuse in the area.

However, the Public Health Agency will shortly be tendering for a revised range of drug and alcohol services across Northern Ireland. It is anticipated the new services will be in operation from April 2015 and will include a new model for Tier 1 community support services in each Trust area which will:

- deliver a three year integrated multi-agency education and prevention plan set in communities, workplaces and educational settings to raise awareness of the impact of alcohol and drugs locally;
- provide evidence-based community mobilisation initiatives to raise awareness and concern about substance misuse related harm and support policy implementation and change; and
- work with the local media to raise awareness and increase acceptability of the interventions provided to address locally identified substance misuse related problems.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps the Health and Social Care Board are taking to commission recently developed cancer drugs which are already available in other regions of the UK.

(AQW 36555/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has responsibility for commissioning specialist drugs, including cancer drugs in Northern Ireland.

Every patient in Northern Ireland has the same access to approved cancer drugs as any other patient in the UK. Both the HSC in Northern Ireland and the NHS in England and Wales are guided by the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) in making the difficult decisions about which of the many new drugs should be made routinely available to patients. All NICE approved cancer drugs that are available in England are either recurrently funded or available via a cost per case mechanism in Northern Ireland.

The Individual Funding Request (IFR) process governs access to unapproved specialist drugs in Northern Ireland. My officials are currently carrying out an evaluation of the IFR process. The evaluation, which is underway, will take full account of the measures that other devolved administrations are considering in their approach towards access to specialist drugs and will be completed by the end of the year.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has any strategy aimed at addressing inequalities in service provision for children who are on the Autistic spectrum in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 36572/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the Autism Act (NI) 2011 the Department is charged with the coordination of a cross-Departmental Strategy and Action Plan. The Autism Strategy (2013 – 2020) and Action Plan (2013 – 2016) set out the NI Executive's commitment to improving services and support for people with autism in Northern Ireland.

The Strategy and Action Plan are regional in scope and the provision of services and actions as contained within the Strategy are across all agencies and bodies with an expectation that there is consistency in delivery, including the HSC Trusts.

The Health and Social Care Board also reviews performance in relation to delegated statutory function relating to Children's Services and, where issues are identified, these are raised through the relevant performance monitoring meetings with the Trusts. This includes performance in relation to children with disability including Autism.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will commit to retaining and developing Acute Mental Health Services in Omagh.

(AQW 36574/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) undertook an analysis of demand for and access to acute mental health services in the South West earlier this year but their report was inconclusive. To assist in determining the location of the second acute mental health facility, the Western Trust has been asked to develop a full business case taking into account financial and value for money considerations together with the recent HSCB report.

Whilst I am committed to retaining and developing Acute Mental Health Services in the South West, no decision on the location of the unit will be taken until this business case has been completed.

After that, timing of the project will be subject to budgetary availability and this project will need to be considered alongside all other demands on the capital budget as we move to the next budgetary period commencing in 2015/16.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the effectiveness of mentoring schemes, such as the role of mentors working with Voice Of Young People In Care, in tackling issues among young people in care such as educational disengagement; and whether he will promote and increase similar schemes.

(AQW 36615/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board has advised that it commissions an advocacy and mentoring service for looked after children from Voice of Young People in Care (VOYPIC) to support them in education, help them remain in education, or access an educational place. It also helps address social isolation, low self esteem and poor interpersonal skills.

Mentoring is one of a range of support services provided to looked after or care experienced young people. For example, there are a range of Trust initiatives already in place aimed at enhancing the educational outcomes of looked after children and young people. These include: the appointment of an independent visitor for children who do not have family contact or support; assistance from dedicated LAC Education Teams; input from LAC Therapeutic Services; and befriender support. Trusts may also have contracts in place for services to young people, which have a mentoring component.

For older children in care, there is a specific input from Employability Services which includes on site employment and work placement based mentors. Equally a range of training schemes and prevocational initiatives incorporate mentoring support as a means of assisting young people to engage in and sustain training programmes and assist their transition towards future career goals. Older adolescents from age 16 also have entitlement to a Personal Advisor, whose role is to provide advocacy, mentoring and support through to age 21 in line with their care/pathway plan.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on his Department's targets linked to placement moves for young people who are in care; and to detail how these are monitored to ensure that they are being met so that young people in care are provided with as stable a living environment as possible

(AQW 36616/11-15)

Mr Wells: Robust assessment of need, coupled with placement choice and stability are key to delivering improved outcomes for looked after children and young people. To underscore this, one of the key strategic priorities set out in the Department's Commissioning Plan Direction for 2014/15 is to 'ensure the most vulnerable in our society, including children and adults at risk of harm are looked after effectively across all our services'. To support this priority a target linked to placement stability has been set. The 14/15 target is to increase the number of children in care for 12 months or longer with no placement change to 85%, a higher target than set initially.

Table 1 below sets out the percentage of children in care for 12 months or longer at September with no placement change in each of the last 5 years by Trust.

HSC Trust	Children in care for 12 months or longer at 30 September with no placement change					2013/14
	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Belfast Trust	79%	83%	84%	84%	78%	-
Northern Trust	78%	78%	78%	74%	76%	-
South Eastern Trust	82%	78%	81%	79%	78%	-
Southern Trust	59%	73%	66%	70%	75%	-
Western Trust	83%	83%	82%	85%	79%	-
Northern Ireland	77%	79%	79%	78%	77%	-
Target					82%	85%

The target is monitored by the Department's Community Information Branch using a child level information return completed by all Health and Social Care Trusts in Northern Ireland. The return which is completed annually provides a range of data on looked after children in care continuously for 12 months or longer including placement changes during the year. The information collected from the return is published annually on the Department's website in the statistical bulletin 'Children in Care in Northern Ireland'. The 2013/14 statistical bulletin will be published in July 2015.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Diabetes Education and Self Management for Ongoing and Newly Diagnosed (DESMOND) Structured Education Programme has been rolled out in Northern Health and Social Care Trust; and if not, to outline the reasons for this; and whether funding has been provided for it; and if so, how much.

(AQW 36619/11-15)

Mr Wells: Within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, some Practice Nurses and Diabetic Specialist Nurses provide education for patients with Type 2 diabetes. The Diabetic Specialist Nursing resource is limited and therefore patient education is based on clinical need.

In order to provide a wider self management approach in line with Transforming Your Care, Trust staff have worked in partnership with the Northern Diabetes Integrated Care Partnership Multi-disciplinary Team to develop a revenue business case that would support the establishment of a sustainable internationally recognised model of structured education programme for patients with Type 2 diabetes - Diabetes Education and Self Management for Ongoing and Newly Diagnosed (DESMOND).

A decision regarding the delivery of a patient education programme for people with Type 2 diabetes within the Northern HSC Trust area has not yet been determined as discussion is ongoing about the potential to adopt a regional uniform approach to procuring structured patient education programmes for people with Type 2 diabetes across Northern Ireland. The establishment of such a programme would be a new service to the Northern Health and Social Care Trust and as such would require new funding to commence. A business case for funding has been submitted by the Integrated Care Partnership Multi-disciplinary Team, however, given the current financial constraints facing the health and social care budget no funding has yet been identified.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has reached a view on providing for a statutory duty of candour, as raised in the Francis Report; and if not, what timescale applies for a decision.

(AQW 36621/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is important to note that the need for candour is already a professional requirement of many individual staff working in the HSC.

A statutory duty of candour, which was one element of the Francis Report, is under consideration by my Department. In considering the right approach for Northern Ireland, I expect that the work which was commissioned from Professor Sir Liam Donaldson to be relevant. That work due to report by the end of December and the publication of the report of the Independent Inquiry into Hyponatraemia-Related Deaths, may also have a bearing on this issue. Both these reports will produce a picture more specific to Northern Ireland and I await their findings before this issue is progressed more formally.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, following his public comments at a breakfast in support of the Children's Heartbeat Trust in Banbridge on 27 September 2014, whether he has begun a further period of public consultation into the future of children's congenital cardiac surgery.

(AQW 36623/11-15)

Mr Wells: I attended a fundraising coffee morning organised by the Children's Heartbeat Trust in Banbridge on 27 September 2014. At this event I paid tribute to the Trust for its work on behalf of children with congenital heart disease.

I am not yet in a position to publicly release the report or to indicate what my decision is likely to be on its recommendations. However, any decision about my Department's policy on the future of this service would, of course, be subject to public consultation in due course. My Department is discussing the arrangements for the publication of the report with the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland. I would expect to be able to announce the IWG's full recommendations together with the Minister for Health in the ROI and Dr Mayer within the next month.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many laboratory technicians are currently employed by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36624/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Trust advise that it has 81 staff (73.0 whole-time equivalent) employed within Laboratory Services at the Ulster Hospital.

This figure has been provided by the Trust, and has not been validated by the Department.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) type; and (ii) number of vehicles currently operated by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36625/11-15)

Mr Wells: At 1 October 2014, the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust operated a fleet of 158 vehicles. The type of vehicle and number of each type of vehicle is set out in table one below.

Table 1: Type of vehicle and number of vehicles operated by the South Eastern HSC Trust at 1 October 2014

(i) Type of vehicle	(ii) Number of vehicles
Bus 17 to 33 seats	41
Minibus 11 to 16 seats	6
People carrier 6 to 9 seats	30
Car up to 5 seats	14
Commercially orientated Vans	59
Commercially orientated lorry's	4
Agricultural Tractors	3
Dentistry mobile	1

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the next phase of the capital building works on behalf of the Southern Eastern Health and Social Care Trust at the Ulster Hospital.

(AQW 36626/11-15)

Mr Wells: The next phase of the Ulster Hospital Phase B Redevelopment will see construction progress from the current inpatient ward block to the new acute services block. This latest redevelopment programme commenced in June 2013 with construction of a new ward block which is due to be completed in late 2016.

Enabling works for the new Acute Services Block have already commenced and construction of the main building is due to start in Autumn 2015. The Acute Services Block will provide a new emergency department, inpatient radiology, assessment unit, specialist wards and support services.

The Trust has also plans for its inpatient mental health unit to be located on the Tor Bank site at the Ulster Hospital and is working with the Department to finalise a business case for this proposal.

There is no timeframe or plans agreed for the next phase of redevelopment, or for any further significant upgrade or replacement work at the Ulster Hospital site, beyond the completion of the ongoing work on the generic ward and acute services blocks.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has made an assessment of the impact on isolated communities, particularly older people and people in ill health, in the Ards Peninsula from the proposed abolition of funding from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust for independent advice services due to take effect in March 2014.

(AQW 36635/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust (SEHST) have advised that, following a review of all community service contracts, it was considered that the funding of independent advice services was no longer sustainable. Instead, their assessment was that it had become essential to direct the funding to specific health and social care services. Funding was reduced in 2014/15 and contracts will cease in March 2015.

As part of managing this change, SEHST is currently working in partnership with the Public Health Agency (PHA) and Local Commissioning Group to develop a model for tackling social isolation in older people across the North Down and Ards area. A number of other schemes are currently being progressed in the Ards area, including: a Shared Community Survey in the Glen Area, which included older people living in the area; and Peninsula Healthy Living which is managed by SEHST and supported by the Public Health Agency. As a result of a baseline scoping exercise, and needs assessments across the SEHST area, an Older People's Directory of Services has been produced and circulated.

Finally, I can advise that needs assessments are carried out on a regular basis and will influence the shaping of all services in the area.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) when the business case for a new fire station in Cushendall will be complete; and (ii) when the project will go to tender.

(AQW 36638/11-15)

Mr Wells: NIFRS is currently working on a Business Case to replace the fire station in Cushendall that will allow the project to be considered for progression once capital funding has been identified. As funding has not yet been identified it is not possible to say when the business case will be completed.

The project will not go to tender until the business case has been approved.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total number of mobilisations of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service in (i) 2010/11; (ii) 2011/12; (iii) 2012/13; and (iv) 2013/14.

(AQW 36667/11-15)

Mr Wells: The table below details the total number of mobilisations of NIFRS in (i) 2010/11; (ii) 2011/12; (iii) 2012/13; and (iv) 2013/14.

Year	No of Mobilisations
2010/11	30,784
2011/12	27,149
2012/13	24,308
2013/14	24,049

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the biologic treatments for people with severe rheumatoid arthritis; and to detail how he plans to improve the access to treatment.

(AQW 36693/11-15)

Mr Wells: Biologics therapies are used for the treatment of patients with a number of conditions including psoriasis, rheumatoid arthritis and inflammatory bowel disease (IBD). A range of approved therapies are available for patients depending on their condition. These treatments are provided by all five Trusts in Northern Ireland.

The total investment in biologic therapies (drugs and infrastructure) regionally across the different conditions is in excess of £45m. For rheumatoid arthritis the recurrent investment is around £34m per year.

For patients with rheumatoid arthritis there is a 3 month maximum waiting time to commence treatment from the date that the patient is deemed eligible by a clinician. Latest validated figures indicate that at the end of July 2014, there were no rheumatoid arthritis patients waiting longer than 3 months to commence treatment.

There are no plans to revise the current waiting time standard for these conditions.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Health and Social Care Board assists GP practices to seek additional improvement grant funding via applications to EU funding.

(AQW 36694/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the terms of their GMS Contract GP practices must provide premises which are appropriate to the delivery of the services that they provide to their patients.

Assistance with funding of premises improvements and developments, such as improvements grants can be provided by the HSCB under the GMS Premises Costs Directions, subject to the availability of funding.

Funding for improvement grants will generally be up to a maximum of 66% of the cost of the premises works. GPs can choose to source all funding, or the percentage of costs not reimbursed by the HSCB, from a private provider, or to apply where appropriate for alternative public sector grants/EU funding.

The HSCB does not actively seek out the various sources of EU or other funding on behalf of the contractors but will work with them on progressing their premises development proposal that they bring forward. The HSCB is required to ensure that there is no duplication of grant funding provided by the HSCB with any other grants secured from an alternative source.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people with significant lower limb impairment.

(AQW 36696/11-15)

Mr Wells: The requested information is not currently available.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many stroke survivors have full cognitive function but cannot access regular exercise using suitable equipment in close proximity to their home.

(AQW 36698/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information is not available in the format requested and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (further extended by the Disability Discrimination (NI) Order 2006) states there is a duty to "make reasonable adjustments to anyone providing goods, facilities or services to the public....including leisure centres."

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the provision of physiotherapists for people with a learning disability.

(AQW 36701/11-15)

Mr Wells: People with a learning disability in Northern Ireland can access physiotherapy services in a full range of settings, including their own home and schools.

The learning disability Physiotherapists within Trusts provide assessment and treatment to any individual with a learning disability. They enable the client to be as independent as possible by improving mobility, movement, function, and where necessary advising on appropriate equipment.

Physiotherapists can also work within a multidisciplinary team to support an individual's management within the home environment. This includes advising family and carers on moving and handling and the use of specialist equipment. This may include, for example, working closely with the occupational therapist in relation to wheelchair provision, specialist equipment and provision of adaptations within the home.

The Physiotherapy Service also has access to Hydrotherapy pools located in several special schools across Northern Ireland. This provides a valuable service to children with learning disabilities.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on what improvements to services available for people with autism have been made in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36703/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Autism Strategy (2013 – 2020) and Action Plan (2013 – 2016) were launched in January 2014 and include sixteen Strategic Priorities for cross-departmental implementation. This strategy forms the foundation for future improvement of services. A Regional ASD Co-ordinator, based in the HSC Board, took up post in September 2014 and will be driving forward the implementation of the strategy in co-operation with other agencies and with input from service users, carers and families and the voluntary sector.

In the last twelve months the HSC Board has carried out a review of ASD Services and an audit of the Care pathways; and progress is being made on the implementation of children and adult care pathways across all Trusts. This review will lead to further service improvements across all Trusts. All Health and Social Care Trusts have developed initiatives to improve ASD Children and Adult Services and these are summarised in the table below.

Summary of Improvements to HSC Autism Services

Regional initiatives

- A Regional Interdepartmental Group was established to drive the strategic priorities identified in the ASD strategy (2013-2020). This has involved the appointment of a Regional ASD Co-ordinator, who took up post in September 2014.
- Re-established regional Trust Co-ordinator meetings, which will facilitate regional and equitable improvement. Each Trust co-ordinator is a key member of the local cross-agency ASD forums and patient and service user reference groups. This provides an opportunity to capture patient, family and carer experience and involve service users in the development of services.
- A "minimum data set" has been established and Trusts are providing information which helps to understand the service and demands. This in turn will support further development of services.
- Additional training has been funded which is aimed at enhancing the skills of staff and therefore improving experience of care.
- Subject to available resources, it is aimed to undertake an audit of the experience of children, young people, parents and adults who engage with ASD services.

Children's Services

- The Northern Trust Spectrum Star Initiative – this is an outcomes based tool to maximise life opportunities and independence for people on the autistic spectrum. This is currently being used with children at transition stage and within the adult intervention service.
- The Southern Trust has developed a life skills group for those going to university/college.
- The South Eastern Trust is piloting support for a programme for personal relationship development with a National Autistic Society (NAS) Counsellor for young people aged 16 years and over.

Adult Services

- An Autism Advice service has been successfully piloted in the Northern Trust. Commencing in January 2014 this cross-agency "One-Stop Shop" provides person centred support to adults with autism and their families. The Belfast Trust has also developed this service and it is expected to commence in the near future.
- In the Southern Trust the Appointment of Experts by Experience programme is aimed at providing peer support.
- Also, in the Southern Trust support is provided to a group of young adults with autism, who meet weekly. Several specific training needs have been identified and programmes are being developed. These include "Re-mind" (mental health) DVD and work book for adults with autism; Sexual awareness training for males; "Cook it" programmes for adults with autism.

- The Southern Trust is developing a new website and is involving adults with autism in its design.
- The South Eastern Trust has developed a "Mood Matters" programme for carers, with a focus on mental health issues.
- Within the Western Trust local information leaflets are being developed and services are enhancing interfaces to deliver support.
- Within several Trusts there are plans to address housing issues for adults with autism, with proposals for specialist autism units and supported accommodation being explored.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline what improvements have been made under the Dementia Strategy in terms of Early Assessment and Diagnosis for Alzheimers.

(AQW 36706/11-15)

Mr Wells: A key objective for the regional Dementia Strategy Implementation Group is to raise diagnosis rates across NI to 75% and above. The most recently available figures show that NI has a diagnosis rate of 63.2% which is well above the UK average (46%). The rate for Belfast is 75.1%, which is the highest in the UK.

Recurrent investment over the past 2 years has led to the enhancement of memory services and the development of services where none existed previously. Criteria and protocols have been developed for referrals into memory services and work is on-going to achieve timely assessment and diagnosis.

This investment has also helped to increase the level of psychological support to individuals and carers. Trusts have been able to appoint Dementia Navigators and provide better support and information to people with dementia and their carers, through the increased involvement of Alzheimer's Society staff within memory services.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what strategies are being pursued to reduce the amount of compensation claims in the Health Service.

(AQW 36709/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department is committed to providing high quality, safe and effective health and social care services to all patients and clients in Northern Ireland. A wide range of strategies are in place to ensure that services are delivered in a safe and effective manner.

The Department is currently developing a review of clinical negligence settlement management processes within the HSC, to ensure the current settlement strategy is suitable for the contemporary HSC environment.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what percentage of the prison population are receiving medication for mental health conditions.

(AQW 36725/11-15)

Mr Wells: Mental health services within the Northern Ireland prison healthcare service are delivered by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

Prison healthcare records medical information for patients at each prison establishment, including current prescribed medical information, by using the Egton Medical Information System (EMIS). It was necessary to conduct a search of the EMIS to determine the percentage of the prison population receiving medication for mental health conditions, using the following criteria:-

- currently registered; and
- currently prescribed either an antidepressant medication, or a medication used in treating psychoses and related disorders.

The search yielded the following results:-

HMP Maghaberry	54 % of the prison population at that establishment.
HMP Magilligan	42% of the prison population at that establishment.
HMP/YOC Hydebank Wood	43% of the prison population at that establishment.

The above percentage figures are the most up to date, as at 1st October 2014 and provide an accurate estimate for those patients taking medications for mental health conditions.

There are limitations with EMIS in extracting information for specific conditions so to provide exact percentage figures would require an examination of individual patient records. That exercise would incur disproportionate cost to answer this AQW.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current number of people registered on the Independent Living Fund programme.

(AQW 36784/11-15)

Mr Wells: At 30 September 2014 there were 637 people in Northern Ireland in receipt of support from the Independent Living Fund.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that the Independent Living Fund will close on 30 June 2015, what will replace the programme.

(AQW 36785/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to the answer given by my predecessor, Edwin Poots MLA, in AQW 35542/11-15.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there is any process in place to ensure that current recipients of the Independent Living Fund continue to receive assistance when funding for the programme ceases on 30 June 2015.

(AQW 36786/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to the answer given by my predecessor, Edwin Poots MLA, in AQW 35542/11-15.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the current waiting time for referral to the Substitute Prescribing Team; and (ii) whether this team is resourced sufficiently to meet demand.

(AQW 36789/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) The average waiting time for a first time appointment with the substitute prescribing team in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust area is currently 6-7 weeks, this is within the regional target of 13 weeks.
- (ii) Over £1million per year is invested through the Health and Social Care Board in local HSC Trusts to operate relevant substitute prescribing services in each HSC Trust area. This funding covers staff and relevant drug costs and currently meets the demand of clients who wish/need to avail of substitute prescribing.

The number of GPs willing to work with this client group; limits the ability to move patients out of secondary care and into a shared care arrangement. The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust is considering, in conjunction with the Health and Social Care Board, ways of trying to initiate more GPs to take part in the scheme and undertake the required training.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of children under the age of three (i) with tooth decay; (ii) with a filling; (iii) who have never visited a dentist; and to detail the number of children under the age of (a) three; and (b) ten who have had a tooth extracted due to tooth decay; and what initiatives or campaigns are in place to improve the standard of dental care amongst children.

(AQW 36801/11-15)

Mr Wells: The requested information on the number of children with tooth decay or with a filling is not readily available. However, data on the total number of fillings and extractions carried out under General Dental Services in the age groups Under 3 and Under 10 years old is available in Table1:

Table 1: Total number<sup>1</sup> of fillings and extractions carried out in 2013/14

Treatments during 2013/14	Fillings <sup>2</sup>	Extractions
Under 3 years	38	14
Under 10 years	10,986	7,982

Notes:

- 1 Data excludes private treatments.
- 2 Excludes fissure sealants which are preventative treatments.

Information on those who have never attended a dentist is not available. Provided in Table 2 below is the total number of patients aged Under 3 and Under 10 registered in Primary Care, and those who are registered with a dentist. A patient is registered with a General Dental Practitioner if they have attended that practitioner within the previous 24 months.

Table 2: Under 3 years and Under 10 years old registrations for Primary Care and Dental Care

Age Group	All Dental Registered Patients <sup>1</sup>	All Patients registered for Primary Care <sup>2</sup>	% Dental Registrations
Under 3	20,673	72,162	28.6%
Under 10	178,551	268,978	66.4%

- 1 All patients in Northern Ireland registered with a General Dental Practitioner at April 2014.
- 2 All patients in Northern Ireland registered for Primary Care at April 2014.

Initiatives and Campaigns

My Department has been very proactive in introducing evidence-based programmes to improve the oral health of the population of Northern Ireland. To realise maximum effect these are mainly directed at children but other schemes are also targeted at adults from deprived areas and elderly patients in residential and nursing homes.

The following measures relate to children:

- Fluoride toothpaste schemes for young children in the most deprived areas.
- Preventive fissure sealant scheme delivered through the General Dental Services for young people.
- Enhanced capitation payments for dentists providing care to children from certain deprived areas.
- Focussing the work of the Community Dental Service (CDS) across the whole of Northern Ireland to improving the oral health of those with special care needs, which includes children from socially disadvantaged areas. They also deliver evidence-based oral health improvement programmes.

Since the implementation of these schemes, beginning in 2004, we have noticed a significant improvement in the oral health of our child population. There have been considerable reductions in the numbers of extractions under general anaesthetic, and the number of fillings carried out in children over this period. These evidence-based programmes continue with the aim of further improving the oral health of our population.

Across Northern Ireland the Public Health Agency also runs a number of healthy eating initiatives to improve both the general and dental health of children.

My Department has also supported a large research trial investigating the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of fluoride varnish and fluoride toothpaste in dental practices to prevent decay in young children. The trial is now in its final stages and the preliminary results are expected in autumn 2015.

Children's Dental Health Survey

Northern Ireland is participating in the 2013/14 UK Children's Dental Health Survey. This will be the fifth survey in a series carried out every ten years since 1973 (Northern Ireland has participated since 1983).

The survey involves children aged 5, 8, 12 and 15, and will cover topics such as dental hygiene, attitudes to oral health, and a dental examination will provide information on the condition of the children's teeth.

Findings from the survey will allow for comparisons in dental health and treatment over time and will help inform future dental health policy.

The fieldwork for the survey is now complete, with results due to be published early in 2015.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) whether he supports charging for car parking within hospital grounds; and (ii) what action he intends to take to remove, restrict or reduce car parking charges. (AQW 36802/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department's policy on car parking provision and management in the Health and Social Care (HSC) sector for Northern Ireland sets the direction for car parking management including charging and makes clear that decisions relating to specific HSC site car parking, including hospitals, rest with each Health and Social Care Trust.

The implementation of car parking arrangements continues to involve difficult choices and decisions. It is important that solutions adopted at each site must fit the particular needs and circumstances of each individual location.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the funding provided by his Department to raise awareness of drug abuse in the last three years. (AQW 36831/11-15)

Mr Wells: Through my Department's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2, approximately £8 million per year is invested – primarily through the Public Health Agency (PHA) - in a range of alcohol and drug related services. These services cover education, information, diversionary activities and awareness raising, early interventions, harm reduction, workforce development, and treatment and support.

In respect of awareness raising, the following service areas have been included: education programmes; community support and capacity building programmes; and workforce development programmes. Due to the way in which services have been procured, funding for these services has been stable over the last three years. Funding is as follows:

Total	£1,527,598	£1,527,598	£1,567,590

It is important to note that the funding outlined above does not represent the total investment in these areas as some of this work is also provided by the statutory sector. In addition, other services such as treatment and support also include an element of drug awareness but this cannot be disaggregated and has not been included. Funding is also awarded to address both alcohol and drug misuse and as such it is not possible to give a specific breakdown concerning solely drug misuse.

In addition, the Department and the PHA also operate initiatives such as the Drug and Alcohol Monitoring and Information System (DAMIS) which cannot be costed separately but which disseminates information on emerging trends and drugs of concern to local drug and alcohol co-ordination teams, relevant services, and the general public.

It should also be noted that further funding is also invested in this issue by other Departments – e.g. alcohol and drug misuse is a key part of the school curriculum as supported by the Department of Education, and through Policing and Community Safety Partnerships the Department of Justice also invest in services and programmes that raise awareness of substance misuse.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of deaths by suicide recorded in Upper Bann in the last nine months; and of these, how many people were known to Mental Health Services. (AQW 36836/11-15)

Mr Wells: The table below details the number of deaths registered due to suicide in the Upper Bann Assembly Constituency. The latest available figures are for Quarter 2, 2014, therefore figures presented relate to the nine month period ending June 2014.

Year and Quarter of Registration	Upper Bann
2013, Quarter 4	3
2014, Quarter 1	5
2014, Quarter 2	5

Source: Demography & Methodology Branch, DFP.

Currently it is not possible to determine the number of these people that were known to Mental Health Services.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many high risk patients have been discharged from the Secure Forensic Unit at Knockbracken Health Park into the community in the last six months; and whether he is content that adequate supervision and support can be provided after discharge. (AQW 36837/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Belfast Trust has advised that from the 1 January 2014 to 30 June 14, 7 people were discharged from the Medium Secure Unit at Knockbracken (Shannon Clinic).

All patients from the Shannon Clinic are discharged under the regional guidance on risk assessment and management in mental health services, "Promoting Quality Care". Patients are followed up by Community Forensic Teams, who work closely with the Criminal Justice System, including, Prison, Police, Courts, PBNI, housing and Social Services across Northern Ireland.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service. (AQW 36868/11-15)

Mr Wells: There is currently (i) six press officers and three administrative staff employed in my Department's Information Office. It holds responsibility for media liaison, provision of communications advice to the Minister and Department, departmental publications, advertising planning for HSC and ALBs and website services, including NI Direct liaison (ii) the budget allocation for 2014/15 financial year for these staff is £390,203.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety who will fund the proposed introduction of the Bexsero Meningococcal Group B vaccine once the outcome of the negotiations have been completed. (AQW 36886/11-15)

Mr Wells: Should the negotiations in relation to the Men B vaccine be successful and a vaccination programme be introduced, funding would be provided from within the health budget.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the views of patients will be represented on the working group examining the value of vaccines, as recommended by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation in February 2014; and when the group is expected to report its findings. (AQW 36888/11-15)

Mr Wells: JCVI has indicated that the working group should try to take into account public views on the methodologies available when assessing cost-effectiveness of vaccines. It will be for the working group to decide how this can be accommodated.

It is hoped that the group will produce its final report early in 2015.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether advice on mental health will be included in the “Choose Well” public information campaign.

(AQW 36894/11-15)

Mr Wells: The “Choose Well” public information campaign will include advice on mental health and the range of mental health services available. Year two of the Campaign will be launched by the Health and Social Care Board in December 2014.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why his Department’s capital reduced requirements for 2014-15 have totalled £15.3 million.

(AQW 36952/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the Executives budgeting rules, ring-fenced Executive funding must be returned to DFP if the money is not spent in 2014-15. Expenditure monitoring as part of the June monitoring exercise, identified five ring-fenced projects that were not going to progress at the timescale initially estimated. This re-profiling meant that a reduced requirement of £15.25m had to be returned to DFP.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he plans to publish his Department’s termination of pregnancy guidance.

(AQW 36957/11-15)

Mr Wells: Once I have given the issue my due consideration, I will bring a revised draft of the guidance to the Northern Ireland Executive. I intend to resolve this matter promptly.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a breakdown of the funding allocated to the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Community in the last three years.

(AQW 36958/11-15)

Mr Wells: Grant funding has been provided to two organisations in the last three years as follows:

Name of Organisation	2011/2012	2012/2013	2013/2014
The Rainbow Project	£32,443	£32,443	£32,443
Cara-friend	£31,705	£31,705	£31,705

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he expects the Chief Executive and Chief Fire Officer posts within the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service to cease being interim posts.

(AQW 36996/11-15)

Mr Wells: The interim arrangements surrounding the NIFRS Chief Executive and Chief Fire Officer roles are scheduled to end on 31 March 2016.

Department of Justice

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice what cross-departmental initiatives aimed at young people have been considered or implemented to reduce criminal activity related to significant levels of deprivation.

(AQW 36229/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): My Department is actively engaged in cross departmental working in delivering on the justice agenda to build a fair, just and safer society. This is also a central theme of my Department's Strategic Framework for Reducing Offending which recognises that offending behaviour can be linked to a number of wider factors, including poverty and deprivation. The Framework undertakes to explore ways to encourage and support joined up working between Neighbourhood Renewal Partnerships and Policing and Community Safety Partnerships (PCSPs).

Funding is provided by my Department to PCSPs across Northern Ireland to address local community safety and policing priorities which are identified in consultation with local communities. The partnerships address measures to tackle, for example, anti-social behaviour, crime and the fear of crime. A number of indices, including crime rates, population and deprivation are used to calculate the level of funding each PCSP receives.

My Department also contributes towards the Early Intervention Transformation Programme, which is a cross-departmental fund set up to target interventions at children most in need, including those living in areas of social deprivation, with the overall aim of improving their life outcomes, including the prevention of offending.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice what communication his Department has with the UK Government to ensure that there is appropriate access to information regarding individuals who have settled in Northern Ireland and possess a criminal record in their country of origin.

(AQW 36495/11-15)

Mr Ford: The UK relies on established processes, underpinned by European Union legislation, which address the exchange of criminal record information with EU Member States. The two applicable European Council Framework Decisions are 2009/315/JHA and 2009/316/JHA.

For non-EU countries, the UK relies on bi-lateral arrangements between countries.

This exchange of criminal record information is facilitated through the UK Central Authority (UKCA), situated in ACRO (Association of Chief Police Officers Criminal Records Office).

DOJ and PSNI officials are members of the UKCA Governance Board.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice whether the proposals contained within the Legal Aid and Coroners' Courts bill require individuals to pay their own legal fees until any application for criminal Legal Aid has been assessed and granted.

(AQW 36500/11-15)

Mr Ford: Criminal legal aid is granted by the judiciary. The way in which criminal legal aid is granted remains unaffected by the Legal Aid and Coroners' Courts Bill. Individuals eligible for criminal legal aid will continue to receive legal aid for their defence.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what proportion of legal aid expenditure is allocated to (i) civil; and (ii) criminal cases; and what impact the proposed reform of legal aid will have on this balance.

(AQW 36533/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below sets out the legal aid cash expenditure over a three year period to 2013/14.

On average, over this three year period, 52% of expenditure has been spent on civil business and 48% on criminal business.

£m	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14*	Average
Civil	53.4	48.4	54.7	52.2
Criminal	48.3	47.4	50.3	48.7
Total	101.7	95.8	105.0	100.8
Civil	53%	51%	52%	52%
Criminal	47%	49%	48%	48%
Total	100%	100%	100%	100%

*Note the figures published for financial year 2013/14 are currently unaudited.

I am currently taking forward a range of reforms affecting both civil and criminal legal aid which will impact on the levels of expenditure. Both criminal and civil legal aid are demand led and until the reforms are implemented, it is not possible to predict the precise impact on the proportion of expenditure.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice whether the £5.5 million business plan for the Police museum included a section to publicly mark the service and dedication of the Part Time Reserve.

(AQW 36540/11-15)

Mr Ford: The overall aim of the Police Museum project, as set out in the Outline Business Case agreed in July 2012, is to promote a better understanding of the history of policing in Ireland. It did not include specific reference to the Part Time Reserve. I subsequently allocated an additional £383,000 to the project to publicly mark the service and dedication of the Part Time Reserve and provide a lasting and enduring tribute to their role in policing in Northern Ireland.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice what consideration was given to the allocation of £383,000 from HM Treasury towards the RUC GC Foundation.

(AQW 36541/11-15)

Mr Ford: This money, £383,000, relates to the unallocated amount from the Police Part-Time Reserve Gratuity Scheme and will be made available to the Police Museum to publicly mark the service and dedication of the Part-Time Reserve. The RUC GC Foundation will have an important role in the ongoing work of the Museum.

Officials from my Department considered a number of options for the disbursement of this money. They met with a number of policing bodies to canvas views and opinions on how best to distribute this money.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of compensation claims paid to prisoners, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36566/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of compensation claims paid to prisoners, in each of the last three years is listed below.

Financial Year	No of prisoner claims
12/13	15
13/14	37
01/04/14 – 30/09/14	27
Total	79

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Justice what discussions he has had with the Chief Constable on the number of PSNI officers on sick leave.

(AQW 36571/11-15)

Mr Ford: The issue of sick leave for officers in the Police Service of Northern Ireland is a matter for the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board.

As Justice Minister I do, of course, have regular discussions with the Chief Constable about a wide range of policy-related issues. The Chief Constable has reflected his concerns regarding the increased level of police officer sick absence during such discussions.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 35791/11-15, (i) to outline the timeline for the completion and implementation of his Department's Estate Strategy; (ii) whether an Equality Impact Assessment was completed on the future of Downpatrick Courthouse; and (iii) how he will ensure the local economy is not negatively effected by the out workings of such a strategy.

(AQW 36576/11-15)

Mr Ford: (i)The DOJ Estate Strategy is being taken forward as two projects.

A DOJ Headquarters Accommodation Project is considering the headquarters accommodation needs of the core Department, its agencies and arm's length bodies, focusing on opportunities to co-locate and/or share accommodation. An outline business case for this project, considering options and identifying a preferred option, is due to be completed by the end of 2014 and then submitted to the Department of Finance and Personnel for approval. Subject to the approval process and, for example the availability of funding, a timetable to deliver the preferred option will then be delivered.

A DOJ Service Delivery Accommodation Project is considering the current regional network of DOJ owned and leased accommodation to identify how the Estate Strategy's objectives can best be met in future. It is planned that a service delivery accommodation needs analysis will be completed by the end of 2014. This will then be developed into a strategy and subject to consultation as early as possible in 2015.

- (ii) No Equality Impact Assessment has been completed on the future of Downpatrick Courthouse. As noted above, the DOJ Estate Strategy is still being developed and a service delivery accommodation strategy suitable for consultation will be part of that development process.
- (iii) As part of the process of developing the DOJ Estate Strategy, business cases, subject to Department of Finance and Personnel approval, will be developed. These, together with the consultation process, will consider wider impacts. The Department is also developing its Strategy in partnership with the Strategic Investment Board to ensure that the Strategy is in line with the Executive's wider Asset Management Plan.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36337/11-15, to detail the (i) annual cost; and (ii) total cost to date for the Northern Ireland Prison Service to buy into the Scottish Prison Service drug testing contract.

(AQW 36643/11-15)

Mr Ford: There has been no cost to NIPS for access to the drug testing contract administered by the Scottish Prison Service. Payment is made on the basis of the number of tests undertaken.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners in each prison have been supplied with computers, which they are permitted to retain in their cells, by Northern Ireland Prison Service Education, in each of the last three calendar years.

(AQW 36645/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service has 31 PCs which are available for in cell use. They are technically restricted to only provide Word and Excel applications and are available to inmates that have been identified by Learning and Skills as needing an in cell PC to complete an Open University course.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice what account has been taken regarding the security situation in Northern Ireland when devising and implementing electronic tagging policies.

(AQW 36654/11-15)

Mr Ford: The policies and procedures relating to electronic monitoring are continually kept under review in light of operational experience in consultation both with the commissioning agencies and the service provider.

Threats made against G4S staff have been rightly condemned but it would not be appropriate to make further comment at this stage whilst they remain the subject of a live criminal investigation by PSNI. DOJ, PSNI and G4S management have liaised closely on this matter with the safety of staff their primary consideration. This has resulted in the coordination of a range of actions, including the deployment of staff briefing, training and welfare services together with practical logistical measures aimed at supporting staff and the continued effective delivery of electronic monitoring services.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice what assessment has been made of the threat to G4S staff; and what measures have been put in place to better protect workers, particularly those involved in electronic tagging.

(AQW 36655/11-15)

Mr Ford: The policies and procedures relating to electronic monitoring are continually kept under review in light of operational experience in consultation both with the commissioning agencies and the service provider.

Threats made against G4S staff have been rightly condemned but it would not be appropriate to make further comment at this stage whilst they remain the subject of a live criminal investigation by PSNI. DOJ, PSNI and G4S management have liaised closely on this matter with the safety of staff their primary consideration. This has resulted in the coordination of a range of actions, including the deployment of staff briefing, training and welfare services together with practical logistical measures aimed at supporting staff and the continued effective delivery of electronic monitoring services.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36041/11-15, on what date the Deputy Chief Constable recruitment process was completed.

(AQW 36662/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 15 September 2014, I approved the recommendation of the Northern Ireland Policing Board for the appointment of the Deputy Chief Constable. The Board announced the appointment on 16 September 2014.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36041/11-15, why his announcement of the appointment of the Deputy Chief Constable on was not made on 15 September 2014 on the completion of the process and the submission of recommendation by the Northern Ireland Policing Board.

(AQW 36663/11-15)

Mr Ford: I met with the Chair and Chief Executive of the Northern Ireland Policing Board and approved the Board's recommendation on 15 September 2014.

It was agreed with the Chair and Chief Executive that a public announcement would not be made until relevant parties were informed of the outcome. The Policing Board announced the appointment on 16 September.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36041/11-15, whether he met Ms Catriona Ruane MLA and Mr Gerry Kelly MLA after meeting the Chief Executive Officer and Chair of the Board.

(AQW 36664/11-15)

Mr Ford: I met Ms Catriona Ruane MLA and Mr Gerry Kelly MLA after meeting the Chair and Chief Executive of the Policing Board. Following the meeting with both MLAs I then held a final meeting with the Chair and Chief Executive to convey my decision after receiving assurances that the procedures for the Deputy Chief Constable selection process were robust and properly adhered to.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, following the seizure of a multi-million pound illegal drugs haul in International waters off the coast of the Irish Republic, which involved the National Crime Agency, which organisations would be involved should a similar operation be required in waters off the Northern Ireland coast.

(AQW 36672/11-15)

Mr Ford: The precise agencies involved in any operation would be dependent upon a number of factors. These include the areas of responsibility, the commodities involved and the risk and harm associated with the operation.

In a situation such as that outlined in the question I would expect the PSNI to be involved. There may also be a role for the NCA, the UKBA and HMRC to play. The role of the NCA would be limited, if the operation was in Northern Ireland territorial waters, as drug operations fall into the devolved sphere.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36138/11-15 and given that there are officers who are dissatisfied with their regional board representatives and central committee, and these officers face sanctions if they raise concerns, (i) whether there is a facility which his Department will recognise to represent the views of these officers; and (ii) whether he will conduct a review into the running of the Police Federation to include member satisfaction.

(AQW 36686/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Federation for Northern Ireland exists to represent the views of all PSNI officers within the federated ranks. The Federation is recognised by my Department, together with other staff associations as set out in the Police Association for Northern Ireland Regulations 1991.

The Police Federation regional board representatives are elected every three years by police officers serving within the respective region. In the event that members are dissatisfied with the representation provided by those elected, this should, in the first instance, be raised through the relevant area representative or Regional Board and, if necessary, escalated to Central Committee. In the event that the matter is not resolved, the members then have recourse to the Chief Constable who has overall responsibility for the conduct of his officers. The Policing Board, which holds the Chief Constable to account, may also have an interest. It would be inappropriate for me, as Justice Minister to become directly involved in these matters until these other avenues have first been explored. That said, I am aware of the concerns of a small number of officers and, in discussions with the Federation officers, I have encouraged them to work towards a resolution.

It is inaccurate to claim that police officers who raise concerns about their representation within the Police Federation face sanctions solely for raising such concerns. There is however, a certain level of behaviour required of police officers encapsulated within their Code of Ethics, which requires concerns to be raised in an appropriate manner through the appropriate channels.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice (i) why the Juvenile Court is moving from Townhall Street courts to Laganside; (ii) what consultation was carried out with the Judges who preside in this court; and (iii) what arrangements are in place to meet the welfare obligations towards juvenile users of the court.

(AQW 36691/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Belfast Magistrates' Youth Court sittings are transferring to Laganside Courts as a result of the decision to temporarily close the Old Townhall building following significant reduction in Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) budget.
- (ii) Discussions have taken place with the Lord Chief Justice and District Judges directly impacted by the temporary closure regarding requirements and future arrangements for these courts.
- (iii) NICTS is working closely with key stakeholders and NSPCC Young Witness Service to ensure that, where possible, the recommendations relating to the operation and layout of the Youth Court, as set out in the Youth Court Guidelines, are applied and appropriate provision is made for vulnerable victims or intimidated witnesses attending these courts.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice which public bodies have the authority to remove Department of Justice records for examination.

(AQW 36697/11-15)

Mr Ford: A range of public bodies have the authority to remove Department of Justice records, in certain circumstances, and normally under warrant. As this would extend to certain GB bodies, it is not possible to provide a definitive list.

For example, the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (1984) gives the police powers, in defined circumstances, to remove "material relating to a crime", which in some cases may require a warrant; some regulatory bodies, like the Information Commissioner, if they suspect an offence has been or is being committed, can apply to a court for a warrant to enter premises and seize relevant records; Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs has a civil power to remove information and documents from a taxpayer or a third party for a reasonable period on issue of an "information notice", as well as powers under the PACE; the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland has authority (under the Public Records Act of Northern Ireland (1923) and the Disposal of Documents Order (1925)) to remove records which have been identified for permanent preservation in the approved Departmental Retention & Disposal Schedule, also under warrant.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Justice to detail the reoffending rate for people sentenced to (i) short; and (ii) long prison sentences.

(AQW 36721/11-15)

Mr Ford: Short prison sentences have been defined, for the purposes of this answer, as less than four years and long prison sentences as four years and over.

Of those who reoffended in 2010/11, 1,297 people had been released from custody at some point during the 2010/11 financial year. Of these;

- 1,172 had been sentenced to less than four years in prison, of whom 48% (562 people) reoffended within one year of release.
- 125 had been sentenced to four years or more in prison, of whom 22% (27 people) reoffended within one year of release.

Note that variations in offending related characteristics make comparing reoffending rates across these two groups problematic. No assumptions about the effectiveness of short and long term sentences can be made from the information provided.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Justice how the reoffending rate in Northern Ireland compares to other UK jurisdictions.
(AQW 36723/11-15)

Mr Ford: The reoffending rate<sup>2</sup> for the 2010/11 Northern Ireland cohort was 16.7%. Although this figure has been produced using similar methodology to the Ministry of Justice, variations in police detection rates, sentencing trends and offending related characteristics make comparing reoffending rates across jurisdictions (and indeed across different cohorts within the same jurisdiction) problematic.

The 2010/11 reoffending rate for England and Wales, produced by the Ministry of Justice, was 26.8%.

Scotland does not produce reoffending rates, but uses a different methodology to produce one and two year reconviction rates.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Justice to detail the prison population in each of the last ten years.
(AQW 36724/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice publishes average prison population figures in the National Statistics Northern Ireland Prison Population series. The most recent figures up to 2012 are given in Research and Statistical Bulletin 6/2013. The information in the table below is taken from this publication.

Average Northern Ireland Prison Population 2002 – 2012

Year	Average Prison Population
2002	1,026
2003	1,160
2004	1,274
2005	1,301
2006	1,433
2007	1,466
2008	1,490
2009	1,470
2010	1,465
2011	1,682
2012	1,774

It is anticipated that the next bulletin in this series covering average prison population for 2013 will be published in November 2014.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice what was the average cost per prisoner held in 2013 in (i) Maghaberry; and (ii) Magilligan prisons.
(AQW 36733/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) does not hold the average cost per prisoner by Establishment. Each year NIPS sets out the overall average Cost Per Prisoner Place in its Annual Report and Accounts, which for 2013/14 was £62,898.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36337/11-15, when the stated third party subcontractor in question tendered for the current contract with Scottish Prison Service.
(AQW 36782/11-15)

Mr Ford: The term 'sub-contractor' is not accurate. The process for bids from all contractors closed on 20 April 2009.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36066/11-15 to address points (i) and (ii) of the original question.
(AQW 36862/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department does not hold the information requested.

As the responsibility for the preparation of accounts for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland (PFNI), including filing, rests with the PFNI Central Committee, may I suggest that these questions are directed to the PFNI.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of people under eighteen that have been prosecuted for drink-driving in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36883/11-15)

Mr Ford: Drink driving offences may be prosecuted under the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. The most recent prosecutions and convictions data available relate to 2012.

Prosecutions and Convictions for drink driving offences where the defendant was under 18, 2010 – 2012

	2010	2011	2012

Notes:

1. Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is prosecuted is included.
2. The figures provided relate to prosecutions for all classifications of the offences specified.
3. Age of the defendant is calculated at the date of court finding.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the impact of dissident republican activity on the budgetary pressures faced by the PSNI in the last three years.

(AQW 36884/11-15)

Mr Ford: The allocation of funding within PSNI is an operational matter for the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board.

You may therefore wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the involvement of EU and non-EU nationals in organised criminal activity in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 36885/11-15)

Mr Ford: I welcome those external EU and non EU nationals who are living in Northern Ireland and contributing positively to society. There are, however, a small minority living here who, like local criminal groups, are involved in criminality. Additionally some criminal activity is organised by persons living outside Northern Ireland who may only enter the jurisdiction occasionally, if at all.

There are those from different external EU and non EU countries who are involved in various criminal enterprises. These include drug trafficking, human trafficking, organised mobile crime, robberies. This organised criminality mirrors much of that by local criminal groups but we have seen that those from outside Northern Ireland may bring new methods and these can then be shared between criminal groups.

The global nature of organised crime, which can be conducted by being physically here or, for example, through cyber methods, requires a joined-up multi-agency approach by law enforcement and Government with support from the community.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36066/11-15, whether an investigation is under way to establish why a regulation has been breached by accounts not routinely being sent to his Department; and if not, will he order such an investigation.

(AQW 36917/11-15)

Mr Ford: Responsibility for the submission of accounts for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland (PFNI) rests with the PFNI Central Committee.

The fact that the PFNI accounts have not been routinely copied to my Department has only recently come to light. My officials have already engaged with the PFNI Central Committee and asked that any outstanding documents be submitted as a matter of urgency.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Justice what consideration he has given to amending the Justice and Security Act (NI) 2007 to remove the power of an officer to stop and search individuals in a public place without reasonable grounds for suspicion.

(AQW 36945/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Justice and Security (NI) Act 2007 is an excepted matter and therefore is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice whether he has held any recent discussions with the Chief Constable regarding the increase in attacks on Orange Halls in isolated and border areas.

(AQW 36968/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have discussed these matters previously with the Chief Constable and will be raising the issue again when I next see him.

I know that the Police Service takes all such attacks seriously.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many times the case of Darius Porcikas was listed for trial in relation to the offences committed on 13 July 2011; and why each attempt to hold the trial was aborted or collapsed, detailing the dates of each attempt.

(AQW 37005/11-15)

Mr Ford: The case of Darius Porcikas was initially listed for trial on 14 October 2013. However on 12 September 2013 it was taken out of the list and put back until 25 November 2013 at the request of the prosecution. Subsequently a total of five trials were aborted.

The first trial commenced on 25 November 2013 and was aborted on 26 November 2013 as one of the jurors had heard about the case from a work colleague.

A second trial which started on 13 January 2014 was aborted on 14 January 2014 as concerns had been raised about the accuracy of interpretation by an interpreter employed by the Public Prosecution Service.

Trials three and four were aborted when the victim made prejudicial comments during her evidence in court. Trial three commenced on 11 March 2014 and was aborted on 12 March 2014. The fourth trial commenced on 18 March 2014 and was aborted on 20 March 2014.

The fifth trial started on 7 May 2014 but was aborted at the direction of the Judge as a juror highlighted a personal issue which may have called into question their impartiality.

The final trial commenced on 13 May 2014 and ended on 29 May 2014. Sentencing took place on 23 September 2014. Mr Porcikas received an Extended Custodial Sentence of 18 years with a further 3 years on licence.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, in view of the call by the Chief Coroner, on 3 October 2014 at a preliminary hearing into the Kingsmills Massacre, for inter-governmental engagement to address the need for timely and effective cooperation by the Garda, what steps he has taken, or will take, with his Republic of Ireland counterpart.

(AQW 37009/11-15)

Mr Ford: At the preliminary hearing into the Kingsmills Massacre on 3 October 2014, the Coroner agreed that PSNI should pursue the matter of securing engagement by An Garda Síochána in the release of material to the Coroner. If that approach is not productive, at the request of the Coroner the DOJ will take the issue up through the appropriate channels.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36677/11-15, to identify any such groups or organisations to which he was referring.

(AQW 37069/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have nothing to add to my earlier reply.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the concerns raised in a report by the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child regarding the lack of a clear system of co-operation to identify and respond to children who are particularly at risk of becoming victims, because of the failure to extend the National Crime Agency to Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37093/11-15)

Mr Ford: The report referred to expressed the strong concern of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child that, in the absence of National Crime Agency (NCA) operation in the devolved sphere in Northern Ireland, the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre (CEOP), which is integrated into the NCA, is not fully operational here. It suggested that this was an example of devolution leading to discrimination in the enjoyment of rights by children.

The background is that the PSNI are able to access information and advice from CEOP. What is missing, however, is access to operational support. Unless the Assembly agrees to a legislative consent motion, and the Westminster Parliament passes related legislation, the NCA will not have this ability. Clearly that places the PSNI at a distinct disadvantage compared to other police services in the United Kingdom. This is especially so given the pressure on the police budget.

Discussions are ongoing with the main political parties and others to seek to reach agreement on a way forward.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the number of safety speed restrictions that may be required to be put in place on the roads system due to corporate risk related issues.

(AQW 35275/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): My Department is responsible for the setting of speed restrictions within Northern Ireland. Officials routinely respond to requests received for changes to speed restrictions, as well as carrying out reviews at locations where a change in the nature of the road has been identified, for example, as the result of recent adjacent development.

My Department may implement temporary speed restrictions where it perceives there may be a danger to the public. However, this is not a practice that is widely used. The exact nature of the perceived danger will determine what measures are put in place, for example, the erection of warning signs, road closures, lane restrictions, weight restrictions or temporary traffic control. Some of these measures by their very nature will reduce traffic speeds.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many times a year does his Department cut grass in the North Down area.

(AQW 35526/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that, between April and October, my Department carries out grass cutting operations as part of its routine maintenance functions. The current policy throughout Northern Ireland, including North Down, is for five cuts in an urban environment and two cuts in a rural setting.

As you will be aware, following the recent announcement on June monitoring, my Department's Resource Budgets for day-to-day maintenance of the road network have been cut. As a result, I have had no option other than to stop issuing new work instructions to our contractors who currently undertake around one-quarter of our essential work, in the following areas: footway and carriageway patching including potholes, grass cutting/environmental maintenance, gully emptying, road marking maintenance/renewal and traffic sign maintenance/replacement.

My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff will endeavour to keep the road network in as safe a condition as possible. However, as they only have resources to complete around three-quarters of the total workload, they will not be able to provide the service the public would expect in normal circumstances.

In addition, I no longer have sufficient funding to pay contractors for the repair of street lights that fail, unless they pose an electrical hazard to members of the public. My Operations and Maintenance staff will, however, deal with outages on a priority basis. As Operations and Maintenance has only around one-quarter of the resources require to fix street all lights, it will take longer to fix single outages.

These have been difficult decisions to take but are necessary in order to try and protect areas such as winter service, where withdrawal of our work could have an even greater impact on the Northern Ireland economy and the public.

I realise these measures will impact on our contractors, road users and the public, but I have to make best use of my Department's limited resources.

I hope this reply helps to explain the rationale behind my decisions and reassures you of my ongoing commitment to continue to seek additional funding to the benefit of both the travelling public and the construction industry.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the assets held by his Department that are surplus to requirements.

(AQW 35887/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the location of land/ property deemed surplus to my Department's requirements, and currently being disposed of in line with the Department of Finance and Personnel's "Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland – March 2010", are as follows:

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Regional Development why the 21:20 x1 service from Dublin Airport to Belfast, jointly operated by Translink and Bus Eireann, was discontinued in June 2014; and whether there are any plans to reinstate the service.

(AQW 35894/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised me that following a review of passenger numbers on both the 21.00 hrs and 22.00 hrs services ex Dublin (City Centre) in preparation for the 2014 summer timetable, it decided that passenger usage did not justify the hourly frequency and decided to remove the 21.00 hrs service but continue with the 22.00 hrs service. This coincides with several flights arriving into Dublin Airport. This timetable change was made in June 2014 and there are no plans to reintroduce the 21.00 hrs service for the 2014/15 winter timetable.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the legislative process that is initiated when his Department has approved an application for an accessible/disabled parking bay; and (ii) what action he intends to take to reduce the average duration of this process, which is nine months at present, in order to ensure that people with severe mobility problems can access their homes or places of work in areas where a parking problem exists.

(AQW 35918/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department seeks to process applications as quickly as possible. Upon receipt the application is assessed, which includes checking the validity of the Disabled Blue Badge, checking the applicant is in receipt of the Higher Rate of Disability Living Allowance if they are under 65 years of age and checking the validity of the driving licence. In addition, an assessment of parking in the vicinity of the applicant's home is undertaken which consists of a number of surveys carried out at different times during the day and evening.

If the applicant satisfies the criteria, then a bay application will progress to the completion of the design stage, consultation with the local council, consultation with the Police Service of Northern Ireland and notification to frontagers/neighbours.

All of these important and sometimes fairly complex steps take time, but they must be completed by Transport NI before the legislative process can proceed.

Once my Department has approved an application for a disabled parking bay, and forwarded its instruction and supporting papers, the legislative process can commence. My Department makes at least six composite orders each year for disabled parking bays. Out of the 961 applications received for new disabled parking bays during the last three years, 367 were approved and legislated for. For example, in 2013/14 the orders provided for the creation of 111 new bays, the removal of 59 bays that were no longer required and the amendment of 5 bays.

My Department's primary legislation requires that it must follow a statutory consultation process for any disabled parking bays. This includes neighbourhood notifications and advertising of the Notice of Intention in the press. If an objection to a bay is raised during the consultation this must be considered and this can slow the progress, although on many occasions a particular bay with an objection is removed for further consideration to enable the rest of the bays in the order to be progressed. These statutory rules also need to be considered by the Committee for Regional Development, although the rule does not require to be laid before the Assembly.

On average each of the six or more disabled parking bay orders progressed each year by my Department take approximately four months to go through the full legislative process, which I trust you will agree is a reasonable timescale for progressing this important and beneficial subordinate legislation.

My Department already places great importance on providing disabled parking bays as quickly as is practicable in line with its policies and legislative procedures. However, I have asked for a further review of the process to see if there are any additional improvements that could be considered.

Mr Lytle asked the Minister for Regional Development what departmental services he has made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36199/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Since taking up my post in May 2011 I have not made any departmental services available to the public via the Post Office network.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many dropped kerbs have been built in Bangor over the last three financial years.

(AQW 36212/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Over the past three financial years the number of dropped kerbs provided in the Bangor area is as shown:

2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
56	80	55

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many dropped kerbs have been built in Holywood over the last three financial years.

(AQW 36213/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Over the past three financial years, the number of dropped kerbs provided in the Holywood area is as shown below:

2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many dropped kerbs have been built in Donaghadee over the last three financial years.

(AQW 36214/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Over the past three financial years the number of dropped kerbs provided in the Donaghadee area is as shown:

2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many dropped kerbs have been built in Millisle over the last three financial years.

(AQW 36215/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Over the past three financial years the number of dropped kerbs provided in the Millisle area is as shown:

2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will consult on the safety considerations involved at the railway crossing at Bushmills Road, Coleraine, railway crossing to establish whether a more effective system can be implemented at the location.

(AQW 36219/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink have advised that there is no evidence to suggest that the railway system at Bushmills Road, Coleraine crossing is ineffective as there have been no safety issues surrounding trains, equipment or railway procedure at this crossing, when properly used by those approaching the crossing. There are therefore no plans to consult on the introduction of a more effective system.

In response to a previous question (AQW 32176/11-15) I advised that the Coleraine/Londonderry Phase 2 project will modernise the signalling system between Coleraine and Londonderry. This will have a positive effect on the operation of this crossing and will be completed by the end of 2016.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development when the preferred option for the Craigantlet Roundabout Scheme will be announced.

(AQW 36291/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department commissioned a detailed study of a number of alternative layouts in relation to this scheme, many of which had been put forward by local residents. The report concluded that, of the options considered, three were worthy of further consideration.

These options were subsequently put forward for public consultation, which generated significant interest among local residents and road users. Officials have prepared a report on the consultation, which I will consider in detail before committing to a decision.

I hope to be in a position to announce details of the preferred scheme later this year.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development whether a peak time recovery vehicle service for the Belfast to Bangor A2 road is viable.

(AQW 36292/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department only requires the provision of a breakdown service on certain road work sites which utilise the hard shoulder as a running lane. In such cases, when trying to maintain two lanes of traffic in each direction, it is often difficult, if not impossible, to provide a refuge for broken down vehicles which unfortunately may lead to disruption for traffic.

This service is not provided on general traffic roads on any route across Northern Ireland and, given the current budget restraints, there are currently no proposals to introduce such a service on the A2, or any other heavily-trafficked route.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the communication and coordination between NI Water, Transport NI and other gas and utility companies to ensure that works which restrict roads access, which require roads to be excavated, are undertaken at the same time; and whether Transport NI ensures roads resurfacing is undertaken subsequent to, rather than before, works requiring roads excavation.

(AQW 36312/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Transport NI invites NI Water and other gas and utility companies to attend Divisional Road Authority and Utilities Committee meetings every six months. The terms of reference for these Committees include consideration of specific major projects, medium term and annual works programmes for both the Department and street works undertakers, and the potential for reducing disruption through common schemes or trench sharing.

In addition, Street Works Regulations made under the Street Works (Northern Ireland) Order 1995, require street works undertakers to provide a minimum of one month formal notification of their intention to commence major works. This notification is made through the Northern Ireland Street works Register and Notification System, and is communicated to Transport NI and all other utility companies with an interest in that geographical area.

Where temporary road closures or traffic restrictions are required to enable the works to take place, Transport NI can further use this opportunity for co-ordination of works.

Transport NI shares its resurfacing programmes with utility companies at Divisional Road Authority and Utilities Committee meetings, and is required to provide three months advance notification of each resurfacing scheme on Northern Ireland Street works Register and Notification System. This provides utility companies with an opportunity to consider whether they have works requiring excavation on a road programmed for resurfacing. Transport NI will defer resurfacing, where necessary, to allow such works to be carried out first. In the absence of any response from utility companies, Transport NI can then prevent utility companies from carrying out planned work on the resurfaced street for a period of 12 months from completion of the resurfacing.

However, situations do arise where a utility company must meet a customer request for a new connection or carry out emergency works on a recently resurfaced road. Transport NI cannot prevent utility companies from carrying out work in those circumstances.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps will he take to ensure that defaced road signs are replaced in such a way as to make further vandalism more difficult.
(AQW 36328/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is an offence under Article 33 of the Road Traffic (NI) Order 1981 for a person to unlawfully and intentionally interfere with or damage a traffic sign and anyone caught defacing road signs will be prosecuted.

However, as you will appreciate it can be difficult proving a case in this regard, as the courts will require substantial and clear evidence before an effective prosecution can be brought.

My Department carries out regular inspections of all public roads and footways, to ensure that essential maintenance needs are identified and remedial work is completed as necessary. During these inspections, all defects are noted, including defective or vandalised signs, in addition to those signs needing cleaning to improve visibility.

The need for an anti-graffiti coating will be considered by engineers before replacing any signage which is the subject of regular vandalism. Whilst this is done routinely for new signs, it is generally only done on a sign-by-sign basis for replacement or existing signs when the sign has either reached the end of its serviceable life, has been vandalised beyond repair or needs replaced to reflect changes to the local road network.

However, treating traffic signs with anti-graffiti coating only makes it easier for the graffiti to be removed and does not prevent the graffiti from being applied in the first instance. Officials will continue to remove graffiti from traffic signs and prioritise those deemed offensive or affecting road safety.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration his Department has given to the provision of a park and share facility for Portglenone.
(AQW 36366/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department aims to encourage people to consider using more sustainable forms of travel, including Park and Share, in order to reduce the number of vehicles on the roads and to ease congestion.

However, given Portglenone is within easy travelling distance of four Park and Ride/Park and Share sites in Ballymena, Toome, Randalstown and Antrim it is felt that it is currently sufficiently well catered for.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any Road Safety schemes his Department is planning to introduce to coincide with the launch of the Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland.
(AQW 36370/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I launched the draft Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland on 27th August 2014 for a twelve week period of public consultation. During the consultation period my Department is seeking views on the document and any other relevant issues which may not have been covered by the document.

Input received during the consultation period will be considered before the strategy is finalised and a Consultation Report outlining the Department's response to the issues raised will be published.

Following the finalisation of the Strategy a Bicycle Strategy Delivery Plan will be published. The Delivery Plan will include details of specific projects that my Department is planning to take forward. Officials in my department and in DOE are working closely together to support my vision of more cycling, done safely and with mutual respect for other road users.

A key task in developing the Delivery Plan will be to work with stakeholders in the assessment and development of current bicycle infrastructure and progressing opportunities for new routes.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department is considering improvements to street lighting, including in rural areas, to encourage people from all areas to actively participate in the Bicycle Strategy.

(AQW 36373/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department takes account of safety for all road users, including cyclists, when considering the provision or improvement of street lighting facilities, in both urban and rural areas.

Due to the ongoing pressure on my Department's resource budget for street lighting, further extensions to the street lighting network are generally not appropriate until sufficient resources are available to properly operate and maintain existing street lighting installations.

The draft Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland highlights four key elements which will contribute to achieving our vision for cycling in Northern Ireland. These are:

- a comprehensive network for the bicycle;
- safe spaces for the bicycle;
- greater numbers of people travelling by bicycle; and
- inviting places for all.

Once the Strategy has been finalised a Bicycle Strategy Delivery Plan will be published. The Delivery Plan will include details of specific projects that my Department is planning to take forward.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans are in place for a formalised footpath to the new public toilets in Derrygonnelly, Co Fermanagh.

(AQW 36391/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I understand that Fermanagh District Council's main objective in providing these toilet facilities was to provide a facility for passing motorists. As such, pedestrian traffic associated with the facility would be very limited. If it had been believed this facility would attract pedestrian traffic then, at the planning stage, Council would have been asked to provide a footway in conjunction with the development.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the sufficiency of the parking provided for in Rosnarick Close, Derrygonnelly; and what plans are in place to increase the number of spaces.

(AQW 36393/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As a general rule, my Department does not provide parking for amenity reasons. An exception to this is where the provision of residential parking, would be a benefit in terms of improved traffic progression along a main through route, and where there is no or limited parking available at present.

Rosnarick Close is a cul-de-sac housing development which currently enjoys both on-street and private parking provision with little or no traffic progression issues in the area. In cases such as this if an additional need is requested then my Department's position is that it will adopt any new parking areas providing they are constructed to proper standards by others.

I am aware this arrangement has worked successfully in the past where there are many examples of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, constructing new parking areas and the Department subsequently adopting them. There are other examples where my Department and Housing Executive have jointly funded the works, but only in cases where there are road safety or traffic progression concerns.

I cannot comment on the sufficiency of existing parking levels in Rosnarick Close, but I am content for my Department to adopt any new spaces if a third party, such as the Housing Executive, chooses to provide them.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) the number of devices which have connected to the Translink wi-fi service on buses and trains; and (ii) the total amount of data that has been downloaded and uploaded, since the introduction of free wi-fi on board public transport vehicles.

(AQW 36395/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below details the number of devices which have connected to the Translink wi-fi service on buses and trains and the amount of data downloaded and uploaded since the introduction of free wi-fi on board public transport vehicles.

	Goldline Coaches	Northern Ireland Rail
Number of devices which have connected to the Translink wi-fi system	361,591	449,340
Data downloaded	12.2 Terabyte	41.7 Terabyte
Data Uploaded	2.1 Terabyte	6.6 Terabyte
Total amount of Data used	14.3 Terabyte	48.3 Terabyte

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many unpaid penalty charge notices have resulted in court prosecution in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36426/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Penalty Charge Notices are a civil matter and therefore no prosecutions have taken place.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) how many ash trees on the A4 were removed to prevent the spread of ash dieback; and (ii) the cost of the removal.

(AQW 36477/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Penalty Charge Notices are a civil matter and therefore no prosecutions have taken place.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will examine the provision of school crossing warning signs on Connell Street in Limavady at the drop off and pick up point for school children.

(AQW 36506/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There is no school crossing patrol at this location and therefore erection of school crossing warning signs would not be appropriate. However, I note a large number of school children congregate in this area to wait for buses and I have therefore asked my officials to consider if any other signage would be appropriate and respond directly to you in due course.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Translink has in its reserves.

(AQW 36507/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Based on the audited Translink group accounts at the year end 31st March 2014, total reserves and liabilities are £25.026m. This is not the same as current assets or cash and bank balances.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the cost to Transport NI of replacing a street light.

(AQW 36508/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The cost of replacing a street light is dependent upon site-specific factors such as the extent of work required, location and type of road, and the type of equipment used.

However, the average cost of replacing the most commonly used type of street light, including the associated underground cabling, is approximately £1,650.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the cost to Transport NI of replacing a street light bulb.

(AQW 36509/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The cost of replacing a bulb in a street light is typically in the range of £30 to £50. The actual cost will depend on the type and wattage of lamp required, and factors such as the lantern mounting height and traffic management arrangements.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Transport NI has a stock pile of street light bulbs.

(AQW 36510/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm my Department carries a stock of the various types of lamps required for street lighting maintenance work carried out by Operation and Maintenance staff.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many bus drivers are employed by Translink.

(AQW 36511/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As at the 28 September 2014 Translink employed 1,813 full-time bus drivers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the site of the former Donaghadee bus station.

(AQW 36529/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The former Donaghadee bus depot is currently going through the D1 Land and Property Services (LPS) disposal process and LPS have formally valued the site. Two public sector bodies have shown initial interest and meetings have been held with them. Discussions are being progressed via LPS.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development for a breakdown of the expenses paid to senior management in the Northern Ireland Water in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36538/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The total expenses incurred for 8 senior managers in Northern Ireland Water for the last 12 months are £13,274. These expenses are set out in the table below. The 8 senior managers are made up of the Chief Executive and 7 NI Water Level 2 managers whose salary is analogous to NICS Grade 5 and above.

Mileage	£5214
Air fares	£3552
Rail, bus and boat fares	£184
Accommodation (GB & NI)	£82
Subsistence payments	£159
Excess Fares
Car Parking	£556
Taxi fares, car hire	£214
Miscellaneous	£3313
Total	£13,274

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on construction of the Strathroy Link Road, Omagh. (AQW 36547/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Strathroy Link Road is a requirement of planning consent associated with the development of the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus being taken forward by the Department of Education. The Department of Education has agreed to fund the majority of the project and will liaise with TransportNI throughout the planning stages to ensure the road is completed in time to allow the campus to open, as currently estimated, in September 2020.

The Strathroy Link Road is included in the Sub-Regional Transport Plan for the Omagh District Council area and its route corridor has been confirmed by completion of the Stage 1 Scheme assessment report. Further development work is ongoing and the geotechnical ground investigation is underway to help inform the detailed design of the carriageway and new bridge over the river Strule.

Consultations are underway with interested landowners/developers to acquire the land necessary for the project. Subject to the outcome of these negotiations, a vesting order may be published in early 2015.

It is anticipated construction will commence in the latter part of the 2016/17 financial year which would facilitate opening of the link road to traffic in 2018.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the findings and conclusions from the recent 20mph road safety pilot study in Langley Road, Ballynahinch; and whether his Department has any plans to replicate the study elsewhere. (AQW 36558/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Local consultation on the Langley Road, Ballynahinch proposal is ongoing and, subject to residents' support for the scheme, this will be followed by implementation of a Traffic Regulation Order. It is envisaged the pilot 20mph speed limit at Langley Road will be introduced early next year.

In addition, work is ongoing on five pilot schemes across Northern Ireland, all of which are at an early stage. It is therefore likely to be some time before any conclusions can be drawn from this exercise.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the total expenditure to date on the upgrade of the A5 road. (AQW 36585/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of expenditure to date on the A5 project, broken down by year, are provided in the table below:

Year	Development Costs (£)
2007/08	875,000
2008/09	8,350,000
2009/10	14,600,000
2010/11	11,395,000
2011/12	10,365,000
2012/13	12,329,000
2013/14	8,333,000
2014/15 spend to date (end of August 2014)	2,100,000
Total Development Cost	68,347,000

Year	Development Costs (£)
Land Costs	2,360,642
Overall Total	70,707,642

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the land acquisition that has taken place as part of the development of the A5 road.

(AQW 36587/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Vesting Order for the A5WTC scheme became operative in September 2012 but this was subsequently quashed by the Courts in April 2013. At that point all affected lands returned to the original landowners.

During the short time period when the lands were in the ownership of the Department, five landowners made a request for 90% advance land compensation payments, as they were legally entitled to do. Payments were duly made to them. When ownership of the lands then returned to all landowners on 15 April 2013, I gave each landowner the option of either returning their 90% payments, or negotiating the sale of their lands to the Department by agreement. One landowner opted to return the money while negotiations to complete sales are continuing with the remaining four.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the new traffic light controls and layout at the junction of the Killymeal Road and Killyman Road, Dungannon.

(AQW 36597/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: New traffic signals were introduced during the summer at the Killyman Road/Killymeal Road junction in Dungannon to replace a mini roundabout layout. The signals became operational on 23 July 2014 and have greatly improved pedestrian safety in the area through the provision of signal controlled crossing points.

The signals incorporate Microprocessor Optimised Vehicle Actuation to maximise the efficiency of the junction. Traffic modelling undertaken prior to the signalisation indicated that the junction would operate very efficiently on completion and observations at the site confirmed this to be the case during the summer months.

Since early September 2014, pedestrian and vehicle volumes at the site have increased dramatically and some reports have been received of increased peak hour journey times. It will always be the case that formally allocating more time towards improving pedestrian safety will reduce time available for vehicular movements through a junction and this becomes particularly evident when a mini roundabout, which has no formal pedestrian facilities, is replaced with traffic signals incorporating pedestrian phases.

I can however confirm that my Department's Traffic Management engineers and the signal supply company's design engineers have already been monitoring and adjusting the signal timings and phasing at this site with a view to ensuring the junction is operating as efficiently as possible. Further evaluation and adjustment to fine tune the signals will continue at the site over the next few weeks.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the change in the number of passengers using the bus and rail station in Coleraine since it opened.

(AQW 36599/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The new integrated bus and rail facility at Coleraine opened in September 2001; however patronage statistics are only available from 2004.

From 2004 to 2014 the statistics for the combined bus and rail station in Coleraine show that overall footfall has increased from 1.04m to 1.51m. An increase of almost a third in 10 years. NIR accounts for a higher share of the footfall numbers overall but there has also been growth on bus numbers.

Patronage in 2013/14 shows a daily average of 4,155 passengers using the facility.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to alleviate the parking problems in the Strand area of Holywood.

(AQW 36600/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Strand is typical of many residential areas in towns and cities where parking spaces are at a premium and where commuter parking is evident.

The Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan identifies a number of areas of parking restraint where residents parking will be considered, including Bangor in the North Down area. Whilst Holywood is not specifically identified within the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan in this respect, I can confirm that a number of streets in Holywood have been added to a list of areas for future consideration, once all the areas identified within the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan have been addressed.

Legislation governing all Residents' Parking Schemes is currently being finalised with the Departmental Solicitor's Office and I can confirm that publication of Notices for the first batch of Residents' Parking Schemes, which are concentrated in Antrim,

Londonderry and within Belfast, is currently scheduled for autumn 2014, with the formal consultation stage following as soon as possible thereafter. Subsequently, scheme implementation will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation process, particularly with regard to whether any objections are received.

These initial schemes, once implemented, are to be monitored for a period to gauge their success or otherwise. If these initial schemes prove to be successful, further consideration will be given to the development of schemes outside Belfast, including Holywood.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister for Regional Development who authorised the decision to withdraw parking enforcement from the Markets area of Belfast; and what was the rationale for this decision.

(AQW 36603/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The waiting restrictions on Stewart Street are currently being reviewed and regularised and, as a result, Transport NI has instructed NSL to temporarily suspend enforcement on this street only.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the restoration of Portavoe reservoir.

(AQW 36711/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water's essential reservoir safety maintenance work at Portavoe Reservoir was completed in early August 2014, and since then the reservoir has been refilling naturally.

Over 400 live swan mussels were successfully returned to the reservoir on 5 August 2014 and the reservoir is to be stocked with fish in the New Year, in advance of the 2015 angling season. NI Water will continue to work closely with the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to monitor progress at the site.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans are in place for gritting roads during periods of severe winter weather.

(AQW 36747/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is well prepared for the forthcoming winter season. Staffing arrangements are being finalised, pre-season checks on winter service equipment are almost complete and salt stocks have been replenished. From the end of October 2014, my Department will have approximately 300 personnel on standby ready to salt main roads. Contracts are also in place to enable contractors and farmers to help to clear roads during periods of prolonged snow.

In addition, my Department currently has arrangements with 25 of the 26 District Councils to salt city and town centre footways during times of prolonged ice and snow, and these councils will be contacted to ensure continuity of this service for the incoming winter season. My officials will be writing again to the remaining council to encourage it to come on board.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the increases in bus fares over the last four financial years.

(AQW 36775/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Bus fares have been frozen since May 2013 and were also frozen in 2011/12. The table below details the average increase in Translink bus fares over the last four financial years.

Year	Date of Fare Revision	Metro Average Increase	Ulsterbus Average Increase
2010/11	28.06.10	2.5%	2.5%
2011/12	N/A	0	0
2012/13	30.04.12	3.0%	3.0%
2013/14	06.05.13	3.0%	3.0%

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the increases in train fares over the last four financial years.

(AQW 36777/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Rail fares have been frozen since May 2013 and were also frozen in 2011/12. The table below details the average increase in Translink train fares over the last four financial years.

Year	Date of Fare Revision	NI Railways Average Increase
2010/11	28.06.10	4%
2011/12	N/A	0
2012/13	30.04.12	3.0%
2013/14	06.05.13	5.0%

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many NI Railways trains are currently in storage.
(AQW 36842/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Railways has no operational trains in storage.

One retired Class 450 train is being kept to provide engineering spares for support of NIR's Sandite train (a locomotive and carriage set which is used to apply Sandite to railhead to avoid wheel slip conditions during the Autumn).

In addition old MKII carriages for the Railway Preservation Society of Ireland in Whitehead remain in temporary storage in Lisburn station sidings.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to cut the budget for road gritting in winter 2014/15, as a result of current budget pressures.

(AQW 36876/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As I advised the Assembly on 8 September 2014, it is my intention to protect winter services for the forthcoming season.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on plans for a new Transport Hub at the former Waterside Train Station.

(AQW 36903/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In March 2014 I announced a new project to develop plans for an integrated transport hub on the site of the Old Waterside Station in Londonderry, subject to securing the necessary funding.

The focus of the project subsequently has been on identifying funding and key partners.

My Department's European Programmes and Gateways Unit has engaged extensively with Special European Programmes Body (SEUPB) and officials in Scotland and the Republic of Ireland to explore the potential for the project to be funded through the new INTERREG VA Programme.

The Co-operational Programme Document is currently being formalised by the Commission and the first Call for Suitable Applications is planned to be in Spring 2015.

A number of meetings have been held with key bodies in the North-West including Derry City Council and ILEX and further meetings are planned with wider stakeholders in the coming months to further develop the detail of the project.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the progress of the dualling of the Randalstown M22 to Castledawson section of the A6.

(AQO 6780/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased to inform the Member that I am progressing the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson dual carriageway scheme to be "shovel ready" in 2015.

The tender process commenced with the publication of a notice in the Official Journal of the European Union (OJEU) on 28 July 2014, seeking expressions of interest from contractors who wish to be considered to tender for construction of the scheme.

I hope to appoint a contractor early in 2015 in order to be in a position to commence works once the necessary funding is made available.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the scheduled works for Lagan Valley will be affected by the current departmental funding restraints.

(AQO 6781/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased to inform the member that my Department's Capital programmes, such as resurfacing schemes and minor works schemes, that have been scheduled for this financial year are unaffected by the current resource budget constraints.

Work in the Lagan Valley area is currently ongoing on a number of schemes including the A26 Moira Road near Chapel Road and Pond Park Crescent.

My Department intends to commence work on a number of other schemes in this financial year in the Lagan Valley area. These schemes include the A26 Moira Road near Lough Road, Thornleigh Drive, Old Kilmore Road and Halftown Road.

However, following the outcome of June monitoring, my Department is facing significant resource budget constraints. Regrettably, in order to live within budgets, I had no option other than to stop issuing new work instructions to our external contractors for routine maintenance work in Lagan Valley and right across Northern Ireland. This includes

- footway and carriageway patching;
- grass cutting/environmental maintenance;
- gully emptying;

- repair of street lighting outages
- road marking maintenance/renewal; and
- traffic sign maintenance/replacement.

My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff will endeavour to keep the road network in as safe a condition as possible and will be able to provide around three quarters of the resource previously available.

In relation to street lighting maintenance, Operations and Maintenance staff have limited street lighting resources and it will take longer to fix outages. They will endeavour to deal with group faults and single outages on a priority basis.

Work to deal with street lighting faults that cause an electrical hazard will remain unaffected and external contractors will continue to carry out this work.

Regrettably, my Department will not be able to provide the service the public would expect in normal circumstances.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the external contractor services that have been discontinued by Roads Service as a result of budgetary cuts.

(AQO 6788/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As a result of the current budget shortfall I have had no option other than to stop issuing new work instructions to external contractors, who currently undertake around one quarter of our essential routine maintenance work. The areas affected include footway and carriageway patching, bridge maintenance, grass cutting and environmental maintenance, gully emptying, road marking maintenance and renewal and the maintenance and replacement of traffic signs. In addition, work instructions to external contractors for the repair of street lights that fail have been stopped.

My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff will endeavour to keep the road network in as safe a condition as possible. However, as they only have resources to complete around three quarters of the routine maintenance workload and around one quarter of the workload associated with the repair of street lights. They will not be able to provide the service the public would expect in normal circumstances.

These have been difficult decisions to take but are necessary in order to try and protect areas such as winter service, where withdrawal of our work could have an even greater impact on the Northern Ireland economy and the public.

I realise these measures will impact on our contractors, road users and the public, but I have to make best use of my Department's limited resources.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the cycling strategy.

(AQO 6789/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I launched the draft Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland on 27 August 2014. The strategy will be subject to a twelve week period of public consultation, from 27 August 2014 to 21 November 2014.

My Department is actively engaging with stakeholders and the general public through a series of nine public consultation events, distributed across Northern Ireland:

- Cookstown
- Derry/ Londonderry
- Enniskillen
- Antrim
- Newry
- Ballymoney
- Portadown
- Belfast x2

Dates, times and locations of events have been widely publicised in the press and through social media.

I am also hosting the Northern Ireland – Changing Gear seminar on cycling in Belfast on Thursday 16th October in Belfast. The seminar is intended to contribute to peoples understanding of the approach to developing cycling in Northern Ireland that we are advocating in the draft Bicycle Strategy and I hope that this event will help us to begin the process of change.

Following the close of the public consultation process on the 21 November the Department will prepare and publish a Consultation Report outlining the Department's response to the issues raised by the end of 2014.

It is intended that the Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland will be finalised in early 2015.

I look forward to receiving your response to the consultation as I know you are a keen cyclist.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department has bid for any of the recently announced Innovation and Networks Executive Agency funding.

(AQO 6790/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Officials from my Department are attending the information days relating to the most recent call for applications under the Trans European (Transport) Network programme.

It is intended to submit an application, or applications, prior to the closure of the bidding period in February 2015. This will, of course, be dependent upon the compatibility of call criteria with project proposals.

My department has been successful in drawing down approximately £32 million under the previous 2007-2013 TEN-T programme period.

Furthermore, as I recently announced, my department has been successful in an application for TEN-T funding towards the design studies for the proposed Multi-Modal Transport Hub.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed southern bypass at Enniskillen. (AQO 6791/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Preferred Corridor associated with the A4 Enniskillen Southern Bypass was put on public display in July 2011, and the Stage 1 Scheme Assessment Report has also been available on my Department's website since 2011.

Since then various elements of work have progressed to assist the development of the preferred alignment including a preliminary geotechnical investigation, a detailed topographical survey and bathymetric (underwater) survey of the Erne river channel. Environmental walkover studies were also undertaken and work has commenced on a Flood Risk Assessment to demonstrate the effect of a new road on the surrounding area.

The Stage 2 report identifying the preferred alignment will be complete in late 2014. At that point I hope to be in a position to announce the publication of the findings of the report and the emerging preferred route.

Department for Social Development

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of (i) staff employed at each Appeals Service office; and (ii) cases that each office has handled in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36155/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The Appeals Service has offices in Belfast and Omagh. The number of staff employed in the Belfast office is 96 and there are 46 staff employed in the Omagh office.

The number of appeals handled<sup>1</sup> by each office is detailed in the table

Appeals Service Office	01/09/2013 -31/08/2014
Belfast Office	12,635
Omagh Office	7,120
Total	19,755

1 The number of appeals processed and disposed of in the 12 month period.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the differences in training between Administrative Assistant (AA) and Administrative Officers (AO) within his Department; and (ii) whether unpaid development opportunities for AA postholders have been delivered.

(AQW 36156/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) The nature of training provided to support individual staff in undertaking their duties is determined by the nature of the role and the needs of individual members of staff undertaking the role. A role undertaken by a member of staff in the Administrative Assistant grade will be different from the role undertaken by a member of staff in the Administrative Officer grade and as such would entail different training requirements.
- (ii) My Department has no record of unpaid development opportunities for AA postholders being delivered.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development how many Northern Ireland Housing Executive staff are also regarded as staff of the Strategic Investment Board or receive any remuneration from that source; and to detail the names of the staff. (AQW 36300/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that when its Board recommended the recruitment of a Director of Transformation in 2013, it asked the Strategic Investment Board (SIB) for assistance in filling this temporary role. This request resulted in the employment by SIB of Ms Mags Lightbody in November 2013.

Upon the retirement of Dr John McPeake in March 2014, a selection process was undertaken from within the Housing Executive for an interim Chief Executive. Ms Lightbody was appointed to the role following that selection and reports directly to the Chairman of the Housing Executive, Donald Hoodless OBE.

No other staff working in the Housing Executive are employed by the Strategic Investment Board.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what undertaking and commitment exists as to the number of housing units which will be provided following the demolition of approximately 250 homes in the mid-Shankill; and to detail the timescale of the works.

(AQW 36404/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Lawnbrook Urban Renewal plans propose a put back of approximately 100 new social and private homes in this area of mid-Shankill. The first phase of 28 social homes is now complete with a second phase of 26 due for completion in November 2014.

Plans to develop the remaining land for private housing have been delayed because of the downturn in the housing market. The Housing Executive is currently working with Land and Property Services to gather housing market intelligence to help inform how best to develop the vacant land. This work is expected to complete by 31 December 2014. The Housing Executive will then engage with the local community and political representatives about the way forward.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether the decision of his predecessor that no further action needs to be taken in relation to his Special Adviser and his treatment of Councillor Jenny Palmer accords with the recommendation of the Department of Finance and Personnel's fact-finding investigator.

(AQW 36460/11-15)

Mr Storey: This was a matter for my predecessor who concluded that no further action was required and communicated his decision to the Social Development Committee.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what additional promotion will take place for the Boiler Replacement Scheme between now and the end of the scheme.

(AQW 36465/11-15)

Mr Storey: The six NIHE grants offices have a promotional plan specific to their areas. Types of promotions include publicity at local events, leaflet drops, posters and information on the Boiler Replacement Scheme issuing to local community groups, Councillors, MLAs, health centres, libraries and citizens advice.

The offices are continuing to be proactive by generating mail-shots to potential applicants and to those already in the system offering advice and requesting that any outstanding documents/information are submitted as soon as possible to ensure completion.

The scheme continues to be promoted in the local press and the local energy companies are promoting the scheme and publicising its imminent closure through their own advertising and mail-shots which has resulted in additional enquiries.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what progress Housing Associations have made in identifying locations to meet housing demand in Coleraine.

(AQW 36466/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has determined a need for 150 new homes in Coleraine Town over the five year period 2013/14 to 2017/18. There are currently 20 dwellings under construction at Harpurs Hill with a further 106 planned for 2014/15 and 2015/16. These planned schemes are as follows:

- Chapelfield, Laurelhill Road, Coleraine (Apex) - 18 units to start 2014/15
- Laurelhill, Coleraine (Fold) - 28 units to start 2014/15
- 55 Mountsandel Road, Coleraine (Fold) - 5 units to start 2014/15
- Society Street, Coleraine (Fold) - 22 units to start 2015/16
- Captain Street, Coleraine (Habinteg) - 22 units to start 2015/16
- 31a Hazelbank Road, Coleraine (Apex) - 11 units to start 2015/16

Recognising the shortfall the Housing Executive has been actively engaged with housing associations over the past twelve months and a number of additional sites have been identified. These are currently being considered for entry to the new social housing programme, which will come forward to me in December for approval. At that point, the full extent of the new programme will be confirmed.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of whether the departmental target, set by his predecessor, for the provision of double glazing in Housing Executive properties by 2015, will be met.

(AQW 36469/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive currently estimates that around 7,360 dwellings require double glazing installation this year in order to meet the Programme for Government (PfG) target. To date this year the Housing Executive has started schemes for 2,845 of these dwellings. The Housing Executive is confident that all of the schemes that are required to meet the PfG target will start on site this year. However, there are a number of schemes currently programmed to start in the last quarter of 2014/15 and the Housing Executive is working with the double glazing contractors to ascertain if these can be advanced in order to have the installation works completed by March 2015.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to the results detailed in Phase 1 of AQW 35943/11-15, whether his Department is unable to fund the Coleraine Education Project after October 2014.

(AQW 36480/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Coleraine Education Community Project is a worthwhile project that successfully links nine schools in Coleraine that work with or have large number of pupils from the two Neighbourhood Renewal Areas of Coleraine East (Ballysally and Millburn) and Coleraine West (The Heights and Killowen) and the project will continue to receive funding up to 31 March 2015.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 35448/11-15 and AQW 36059/11-15, to detail the status under which the people who are living in the houses in the developments at (i) St Patrick's Barracks, Ballymena; and (ii) PSNI Kells; and whether his Department still views the developments as being under construction.

(AQW 36481/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department's previous answer in relation to the list of schemes still under construction was made in the context that schemes are not considered officially complete until the relevant housing association submits its completion documentation to the Housing Executive and the final payment of grant is made.

Where St Patrick's Barracks, Ballymena and PSNI, Kells are concerned there has been a delay in the housing associations sending in this documentation, even though both schemes have been allocated and are fully occupied.

The applicants in both developments were allocated from the Common Waiting List after having been assessed in accordance with the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development what communication his Department has had with universities to put mechanisms in place at the end of the academic year to encourage students to ensure their tenancy deposits are protected.

(AQW 36493/11-15)

Mr Storey: Since the introduction of the Tenancy Deposit Scheme, on 1 April 2013, my Department has been engaged in an information campaign on the protection of tenancy deposits, including communication with universities.

In July 2013 the Department wrote to all of the universities asking them to include Departmental guidance on tenancy deposit protection on each of their websites. In recent weeks each university and college has received information about the scheme. My officials have also been present at university fresher's weeks to encourage students at the beginning of the academic year to check that their landlord has protected the deposit with an approved tenancy deposit scheme administrator. Students living in the private rented sector are being advised that their landlord should have protected the deposit within 14 of receiving it and provided them with prescribed information within 28 of receiving the deposit. Where a landlord has failed to comply with these requirements then tenants are being encouraged to report this to their local council environmental health department who are responsible for enforcing the scheme requirements.

These steps are in addition to the publicity that each tenancy deposit scheme administrator undertakes individually.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development what steps his Department is taking to address low literacy and numeracy levels in East Londonderry, as part of a wider strategy to address educational underachievement amongst young people.

(AQW 36496/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department's Urban Regeneration and Community Development Policy Framework sets out the overarching structure and direction for the delivery of all urban regeneration and community development activity in NI. In particular it will tackle area-based deprivation and inequalities in areas such as educational underachievement amongst young people to reduce the gaps between disadvantaged communities and the rest of NI.

The Department, through its Neighbourhood Renewal Investment Fund, may support projects that are designed to address educational underachievement where a priority need has been identified and where resources are available. The following projects in Coleraine and Limavady are examples of this:

- Coleraine Education Community Project
- Ballysally Integrated Nurturing Project
- Skills Development & Education Programme
- Churchlands Community Supporting Families through Learning
- Millburn Community Development Worker

- Enjoying Learning and Achieving in Limavady, and
- DRIVE (Developing Relationships in Vulnerable Environments) Project.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development how many people have bought their homes from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36549/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the number of house sales in each of the last three years is as follows: -

- 2011/12: 167
- 2012/13: 185
- 2013/14: 379

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the developments listed in AQW 35449/11-15.

(AQW 36559/11-15)

Mr Storey: The two schemes previously listed are:

Balnamore, Ballymoney - Ark Housing submitted a planning application for three units on 15 September 2014 and is currently progressing the land transfer process from the Housing Executive, with a target to start construction before the end of March 2015.

Garryduff Road, Ballymoney - Triangle Housing is progressing plans for re-improvement of a former care home to provide nine units of accommodation for clients with learning disabilities. Also, Triangle is now considering an option to include a number of new housing units for active elderly on the site. A planning application will be made shortly. Whilst Triangle Housing is still aiming to start construction work before the end of March 2015, given the planning application has yet to be made and the scheme will be bigger than first envisaged, it may be that construction start will slip into 2015/16.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the provision of new family housing in (i) the redevelopment area of the Village; and (ii) Sandy Row in South Belfast.

(AQW 36568/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- (i) In the Village, Fold Housing Association has completed the first two phases of redevelopment comprising 87 new family homes. A third phase of 27 new homes is currently under construction, with completion planned for late 2015. Fold is also engaged in a rehabilitation scheme to bring 22 existing properties up to modern standards. Nine are already complete, with the remaining 13 planned to complete in spring 2015.

Plans to develop a phase 4 new build, which has been earmarked for 159 private homes, have been delayed because of the downturn in the housing market. The Housing Executive is currently working with Land and Property Services to gather housing market intelligence to help inform how best to develop the vacant land. This work is expected to complete by 31 December 2014. The Housing Executive will then engage with the local community and political representatives about the way forward.

- (ii) In Sandy Row, Helm Housing completed 18 new social homes on Albion Street in 2012/2013. There are no further schemes programmed.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development when will the Northern Ireland Housing Executive Gateway 5 Review be published; and whether he will place a copy in the Assembly Library.

(AQW 36617/11-15)

Mr Storey: A copy of the OGC Gateway Review 5: Operations review and benefits realisation report in relation to the Housing Executive's response maintenance contracts was provided to the Social Development Committee on 22 August 2014.

The Housing Executive has advised that, whilst it is not standard practice for Gateway Reviews to be published, copies of the review can be made available on request to the Housing Executive. I will also arrange for a copy to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the progress, including the projected timescale, for the transfer of neighbourhood renewal to local governments.

(AQW 36647/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Executive has agreed that responsibility for urban regeneration and community development would transfer to the Councils under the Reform of Local Government with effect from 1 April 2015.

However, in order to transfer that responsibility, I require Executive approval to introduce the Regeneration and Housing Bill to the Assembly. The draft Bill provides for powers currently available to my Department to be conferred on Councils to allow them, where necessary, to address issues related to social need and to take forward regeneration within their areas. The draft Bill has not yet been agreed by the Executive and I am working to secure the necessary approval as soon as possible.

As you are aware from April 2015 Councils will be free to take decisions about how they address urban regeneration and community development. They will have to do that within the community planning process that identifies the long term objectives for improving social, economic and environmental well being of their communities.

My officials continue to work closely with the Councils to assist them in putting in place effective arrangements to meet the needs of their communities. My Department is in the final stages of evaluating the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy and officials are continuing to review all existing contracts. Councils will be provided with the outcome of these reviews to enable them to take informed decisions about the arrangements they wish to put in place.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the duration of the Women's Centre Childcare Fund.
(AQW 36650/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Women's Centres Childcare Fund (WCCF) was introduced in 2006, as an emergency package, to provide funding to 14 Women's Centres. Contracts have been issued for 2014/15.

Future funding across all DSD programmes has not yet been determined therefore I cannot give an indication of the future duration of the WCCF.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the criteria for groups to apply for the Women's Centre Childcare Fund.
(AQW 36651/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Women's Centre Childcare Fund is not currently open for applications.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the budget that will transfer to local councils to provide grants for the voluntary and community sector; and whether there are any proposed cuts to the budget.
(AQW 36657/11-15)

Mr Storey: The budget due to transfer from my Department to Local Councils is currently in the region of £66 million pounds which includes a significant amount of support for the range of services delivered by the voluntary and community sector. Also included within the overall amount to transfer is funding for physical/capital projects, and awards to other service providers including Government Departments and statutory agencies, to deliver projects and programmes for the benefit of communities across Northern Ireland.

Once the functions have transferred, it will be for Councils and their locally elected representatives to decide how best to address the needs of their areas through their respective Community Plans. Whilst Councils will be required to have regard for the Urban Regeneration and Community Development Framework, which has been shared with them, there is no obligation on Councils to deliver programmes or support any groups, including those within the voluntary and community sector, in the same way that my Department currently does.

Each of the Councils has been apprised of their indicative allocation via a Financial Allocation Model developed by my Department; based on a collaboration of socio-economic need and population estimates. Final amounts to transfer remain to be determined and ultimately will be informed by the outcome of the Executive's 2015/2016 budget process. Accordingly, to help ensure prudent planning, Councils have been made aware that the overall budget to transfer may be subject to efficiency savings.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to the reference at page 15 of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's (NIHE) Draft Corporate and Business Plans to Savills' housing stock condition survey of NIHE stock in 2009 having "recently been revisited", to detail (i) when; (ii) how it happened; and (iii) the outcome of the survey.
(AQW 36676/11-15)

Mr Storey: As part of the Social Housing Reform Programme information and research gathering process there was a desk top review of the NIHE 2009 Stock Condition. In relation to the member's question (i) the review was undertaken in November 2013, (ii) this was by means of a consultancy commission, (iii) the key findings were summarised in pages Page 15 and 16 of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's (NIHE) Draft Corporate and Business Plan. Further detail is provided in the paper issued to the Social Development Committee on 01.05.14, entitled 'Future Income and Expenditure Requirements of the NIHE landlord Function'.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on when his Department will provide funding to the Armagh Neighbourhood Renewal Area.
(AQW 36707/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department has provided funding of approximately £4.5M to the Armagh Neighbourhood Renewal Area for the period up to 31 March 2014. Projects to a value of £473,822 are ongoing in the current financial year.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the date of the (a) most recent; and (b) next inter-departmental meeting on neighbourhood renewal.

(AQW 36708/11-15)

Mr Storey: The last inter-departmental Ministerial Group on Neighbourhood Renewal was held on 3rd October 2013 and the final meeting is due to be held on 27th November 2014 which as agreed should coincide with the publication of the evaluation of the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the number of properties which are still to benefit from the window replacement scheme in Bangor during the 2014/15 financial year.

(AQW 36742/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that they will install double glazing to the 243 remaining single glazed dwellings in Bangor in a scheme which is due to start this month.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the number of properties which are still to benefit from the window replacement scheme in Donaghadee during the 2014/15 financial year.

(AQW 36744/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the remaining 173 single glazed properties in Donaghadee are included in the Ards double glazing mop up scheme which went on site on 18 August 2014.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development why £3.35bn appears within the Strategic Investment Board's Business Plan 2014-15 in respect of the Housing Reform Programme; and whether it refers to the acquisition of Northern Ireland Housing Executive's stock.

(AQW 36756/11-15)

Mr Storey: The £3.35 billion is an estimate of the value of the assets of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and appears in Appendix H of the Strategic Investment Board's 2014-15 Business Plan. This is because an estimate of relevant capital value accompanies all programmes and projects that are listed. Therefore there is no reference to the acquisition of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's stock

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the process of abandonment of the steps leading to The Tunnel area of Armagh; and when he expects this stage of the redevelopment programme to conclude.

(AQW 36774/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Armagh Neighbourhood Renewal Action Plan includes an environmental improvement project which involves the abandonment of the steps in question. The project is being developed by Armagh City and District Council and I understand it is engaging with Roads Service as regards the abandonment process. In this respect, therefore, Council is best placed to provide an update on the current position.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department is the regulator for housing associations in Northern Ireland, which is also the registration, funding and policy making body for social housing; and if so, whether this is a conflict of interest.

(AQW 36790/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department undertakes the function of the regulator for Registered Housing Associations in Northern Ireland. Registration, regulation and inspection are the responsibility of the Governance and Inspection Team within Housing Group. Responsibility for funding for the social housing development programme has been devolved to the Development Programme Group within the NIHE. The team responsible for policy making in relation to social housing investment is the Housing Investment Team within Housing Group. I am satisfied that these arrangements are sufficient to prevent a conflict of interest.

You will be aware that the whole area of regulation will be reviewed as part of the Social Housing Reform Project.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will review the policy whereby the Housing Executive only replace oil fired central heating systems after fifteen years, taking into account the impact older systems that regularly break down can have on the health of older people.

(AQW 36832/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive's current Maintenance Investment Strategy covering the period to March 2015 provides for the replacement of boilers after 15 years. This policy is supported by fully servicing annually, leaving each installation in full working order. However, in the event of a breakdown, the Housing Executive's heating response maintenance contractors respond within 24 hours.

The Housing Executive has further advised that a stock condition survey is currently being carried out by Savills which will help them formulate a new five year Maintenance Investment Strategy and an Asset Management Strategy.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will protect his Department's budget for women's aid/ refuge services.

(AQW 36838/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Supporting People grant makes provision for housing support to be delivered by 9 Women's Aid providers in Northern Ireland with a total of £6.7m invested representing 9% of the total grant allocation.

The Supporting People grant for financial year 2014/2015 has been approved for £74m to ensure housing support services are maintained across all housing schemes.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has any plans to offer Voluntary Exit Redundancy packages in the near future for current staff.

(AQW 36839/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive is working on a Business Case, for submission to the Department for Social Development, for the voluntary early release of officers in order to assist the Housing Executive with its Transformation Programme. The Business Case will be subject to the approval of DSD and DFP.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people who have been awarded mobility allowance, broken down by level of allowance, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36851/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table below shows the number of Disability Living Allowance claimants who have been awarded the Mobility Component of Disability Living Allowance during the last three financial years.

Financial Year	*DLA High Rate Mobility Awards	*DLA Low Rate Mobility Awards
2011/2012	4,600	6,200
2012/2013	4,330	5,980
2013/2014	4,300	6,130

* Figures have been rounded to the nearest ten.

The information provided is an Official Statistic. The Production and dissemination of all such Statistics is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Copeland asked Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36666/11-15, to detail the obligations which were placed on Capita and his Department in the contract; and what estimations his Department has made in relation to the level of compensation.

(AQW 36981/11-15)

Mr Storey: The contract was signed in good faith by both parties to enable the delivery of Personal Independence Payment assessments. The contractual obligations placed on Capita include the organisation and management of an end to end assessment process including the delivery of a specified number of individual assessments. To enable this they are required to provide the necessary supporting infrastructure and workforce to deliver the Personal Independence Payment Assessment Service in Northern Ireland. The Departments obligations mainly relate to activities to facilitate Capita in meeting the service outcomes of assessment including activities such as approving health professionals, as well as contract management and financial responsibilities.

The contract contains a series of legal remedies in the event of either party breaching their obligations. Until there is clarity around the progression of the Welfare Reform Bill, my Department is not in a position to provide any detail on the outcome of these contractual provisions. Should the Welfare Reform Bill (NI) 2012 not progress, then there will be a need for discussions between the legal and commercial teams from the Department and Capita. In line with my answer to AQW 36666/11-15 any outcomes can only be determined once those legal and commercial discussions have been concluded with Capita. However it is clear that the current delays in progressing welfare reform could impact the approach and risk premiums of major suppliers in future contracts with Northern Ireland.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36137/11-15, to detail the number of Disability Living Allowance applications that were declined after a medical examination was completed.

(AQW 37006/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table below shows the total number of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) applications refused where an Examining Medical Practitioner report has been sought by the Decision Maker when determining the Disability Living Allowance application. The variations in numbers will be due to the nature and type of Disability Living Allowance applications received in any particular year.

Year	Total Number of DLA Applications Refused (EMP Report available)
2011/12	836
2012/13	1480
2013/14	914

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development, given his predecessors positive response in relation to supporting the most vulnerable, and the on-going campaign to 'Keep Supporting People', for his assessment of the future funding of the programme.

(AQW 37011/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Supporting People budget for 2014/2015 is approved for £74m and will make provision for housing support services to be maintained. The budget for 2015/16 is under discussion and I have no further information at this time.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development how many double glazing units remain to be installed; and whether he is on course to meet the target set out in the Programme for Government 2011/15.

(AQW 37047/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive currently estimates that around 7,360 dwellings require double glazing installation this year in order to meet the Programme for Government (PfG) target. To date this year the Housing Executive has started schemes for 2,845 of these dwellings. The Housing Executive is confident that all of the schemes that are required to meet the PfG target will start on site this year. However, there are a number of schemes currently programmed to start in the last quarter of 2014/15 and the Housing Executive is working with the double glazing contractors to ascertain if these can be advanced in order to have the installation works completed by March 2015.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr G Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what financial resources have been allocated to deliver the Together Building United Communities programme.
(AQO 4774/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): In addition to the £36 million allocated to good relations work in the current CSR period a further £5.4 million has been allocated from the 2014 June Monitoring round to OFMDFM, DCAL and DOJ to support the delivery of the Together: Building a United Community Strategy. This shows the commitment of the Executive to ensure the delivery of the actions and commitments contained in the Together: Building a United Community strategy.

Senior Responsible Owners have been appointed for each of the senior headline actions and are working to produce indicative costs, establish realistic cost profiles and identify funding sources which will inform our decisions on the way forward and the funding required.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to account for the late distribution of Good Relations funding in 2013/14; and for an update on the 2014/15 distribution process.
(AQW 33332/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The new Central Good Relations Fund 2013/14 was opened for applications when all necessary Departmental approvals were in place and funding could be distributed. A high number of applications were received and these had to be assessed. The applications were considered and applicants were advised as quickly as possible regarding decisions.

The 2014/15 Central Good Relations Funding scheme closed for applications on 10 February 2014. Again, there was a very significant demand for funding. Funding will be released in phases and to date over £1m of funding has been approved for priority projects. Our commitment to the delivery of Together: Building a United Community is clearly demonstrated through the decision to use the outcome of the June Monitoring round to increase funding to the Central Good Relations Fund by £300,000. Successful applicants in this tranche have already been contacted. We are considering further releases dependent on availability of funding throughout the remainder of this year.

We updated applicants regarding progress with the 2014/15 scheme on 24 March 2014 and 6 May 2014.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the delayed release of Good Relations Funding to non-governmental organisations for the 2014/15 financial year.
(AQW 33887/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The 2014/15 Central Good Relations Fund (CGRF) closed for applications on 10 February 2014. There was a very significant demand for funding. Funding will be released in phases throughout the year and to date over £1m of funding has been allocated. Our commitment to the delivery of Together: Building a United Community is clearly demonstrated through the decision to use the outcome of the June Monitoring round to increase funding to the Central Good Relations Fund by £300,000. Successful applicants in this tranche have already been contacted.

It should be noted that the CGRF is a small central scheme designed to distribute funding in year to support project delivery. We primarily fund good relations work through the Community Relations Council and the District Council Good Relations Programme. The fund does not and will not replace mainstream core or project funding.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the needs of victims/clients of the Victims and Survivors Service are independently assessed; and what changes have occurred in this process and the reasons for this.
(AQW 35545/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: All applications received by the Victims and Survivors Service (VSS) either from individuals or from groups are assessed against eligibility criteria to identify the needs of the client/group.

As a result of the Independent Assessment of VSS and following consultation with the Commission for Victims and Survivors and the Department, the assessment process has been simplified to allow Victims and Survivors better access to the support offered by VSS.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the overheads of the Victims and Survivors Service in 2013/14, including (i) how this is broken down; and (ii) its proportion of their total budget.

(AQW 36206/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness:

Expenditure	£
Staff Costs	1,357,913
Programme Costs	10,695,068
Operating Costs	774,699
Total Expenditure	12,827,680

It is not possible to provide a further breakdown of operating costs until the accounts have been audited by the Northern Ireland Audit Office.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the procedures and policies in place within the Victims and Survivors Service in respect of delivering clients details to outside bodies; and what security vetting is in place in relation to any such conveyance of information to such bodies.

(AQW 36297/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Victims and Survivors Service complies with Departmental guidance in respect of Information Security.

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the total estimated cost of the Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry.

(AQW 36467/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry has been carefully planned and costed to ensure that it meets the needs of victims and survivors and fulfils its Terms of Reference.

The current estimated cost of the Inquiry is £15.7 million. The financial implications for the 12 month extension requested by the Inquiry chairperson are presently under consideration.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when a final analysis of the responses received for Delivering Social Change for Children and Young People will be published.

(AQW 36518/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The final analysis of the responses received following a public consultation of the Delivering Social Change for Children and Young People Consultation document was published on the OFMDFM website on 29 September 2014.

These can be downloaded at the link below:

- Delivering Social Change for Children and Young People Strategy – summary and analysis of consultation responses (PDF 1.45MB)

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the child poverty strategy will be laid in the Assembly.

(AQW 36520/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are aiming to lay the Child Poverty Strategy 2014-2017 in the Assembly this Autumn.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether their Department has sought advice from the Social Mobility and Child Poverty Commission on the child poverty strategy, as per Section 13 of the Child Poverty Act 2010.

(AQW 36608/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Welfare Reform Act 2012 amended the Child Poverty Act 2010 to create the Social Mobility and Child Poverty Commission. The Welfare Reform Act repealed Section 13 (1) – (2) of the Child Poverty Act 2010 which required Northern Ireland Ministers, in preparing a strategy, to request the advice of the Child Poverty Commission and to give it due regard.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why there has been a failure to reference the seventh Delivering Social Change Signature Programme; and whether they will ensure that the Play and Leisure Signature Programme is given equal standing with the other Signature Programmes.

(AQW 36695/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In October 2013, Junior Ministers announced a potential £1.6m investment over three years, through a seventh Delivering Social Change (DSC) signature programme, to enhance play and leisure opportunities for children and young people. It is proposed that the Signature Programme would support new sustainable opportunities for play; raise awareness of the importance of play and ensure play is considered in the provision of local services.

The Play and Leisure Signature Programme has the same status as the other Signature Programmes and progress is monitored by the DSC Programme Board which is chaired by Junior Ministers. In liaison with sectoral experts significant work is currently underway to develop the Programme. Given the pressures on Departmental budgets across the Executive consideration is being given to a range of potential actions and the most appropriate method of delivery.

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what engagement their Department has had with Fusion 21 in each of the last two years, including (a) the dates of meetings; (b) the purpose of each meeting; and (c) and who was in attendance at each meeting.

(AQW 36827/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM has not had any engagement with Fusion 21 in the last two years.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the number of times the Delivering Social Change Programme Board has met since its inception.

(AQW 36852/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Since its inception the Delivering Social Change Programme Board has now met on a total of 15 occasions.

The first Board meeting took place on 2 April 2012, with the most recent meeting being held on 3 September 2014.

Mr B McCrea asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why their Department's capital reduced requirements for 2014/15 have totalled £5.5m.

(AQW 37085/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In June Monitoring the Department declared two easements in Capital totalling £5.498m:

1. Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation (MLKDC) surrendered £3.843m; and
2. Ilex Urban Regeneration Co Ltd (Ilex) surrendered £1.655m, as the Ilex Car Park project was brought forward to 2013/14 financial year thereby releasing funding in 2014/15 financial year.

The easements were made at the earliest opportunity to help aid the effective management of the overall expenditure position across the NI Block.

Mr G Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what progress is being made in the Together: Building a United Community strategy.

(AQO 6750/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Work is progressing across all seven headline actions that were announced alongside the publication of Together: Building a United Community.

The Department of Education received 16 expressions of interest in relation to the establishment of 10 Shared Campuses and announced the first three successful projects on 2 July. A second call for applications will issue shortly.

In respect of the United Youth Programme, a very successful Design Day was held on 23 January to mark the culmination of an extensive period of stakeholder engagement and the event attracted an attendance of more than 250 people and all of the feedback collected from that event will be used to build the final programme design. A design team has now been established to take forward development of the next stage of the Programme. Stakeholder engagement is ongoing with a view to commencing the pilot phase in January 2015.

With regard to summer schools, a number of summer schools and camps have already taken place during the summer of 2014 and further schemes are scheduled for the Halloween mid-term break. An evaluation of these schemes will be used to develop 100 summer schools and camps for the summer of 2015.

In relation to urban villages, stakeholder engagement is ongoing regarding the development of the first two locations, announced as the Lower Newtownards Road and Colin Town Centre.

Detailed project plans complete with anticipated budgets have also been developed in respect of shared neighbourhoods, interface removal and cross-community sports programme headline actions.

Work is progressing with the establishment of the Equality and Good Relations Commission and the associated underpinning legislative changes required.

Within the strategy, we had committed to commissioning a Review of Funding and Practice – this was carried out in two stages. Phase one was completed at the end of March with phase two coming to an end on 25 June. Work is continuing in finalising the report which will contain recommendations on a future funding delivery model that will support the strategic direction of Together: Building a United Community.

Work is continuing with departments to take forward work in relation to the other actions and commitments arising from the strategy.

We are convinced that a strategy of this depth and scale requires collective commitment and leadership across all departments and sections of our society. The Ministerial Panel and thematic subgroups will be central to achieving this. Work on establishing the range of subgroups is at an advanced stage and the Ministerial Panel has met on two occasions, 16 December 2013 and 2 October 2014.

The reporting mechanisms necessary to monitor progress on implementation of a strategy of this importance have been developed. The progress updates will inform a more substantive progress report on all aspects of the strategy's delivering for each Ministerial Panel meeting.

Mr P Ramsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the work of the One Plan Interdepartmental Coordination Group.

(AQO 6629/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Interdepartmental Co-ordinating Group provides strategic analysis and advice to the Executive, other departments and the One Plan Strategy Board on the most appropriate means through which Executive policies, programmes and projects can positively impact on the themes and programmes identified in the One Plan.

The Group also monitors progress and provides a forum for the discussion and resolution of cross-cutting issues that affect more than one department.

The Interdepartmental Group meets formally twice a year with the next meeting scheduled in October.

Progress continues to be made on the implementation of the One Plan across each of the Catalyst Programmes to grow the local economy and provide more jobs.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans he has to re-open the café in Tullymore Forest Park.

(AQW 36741/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): My Department is committed to working in partnership with organisations and local government to secure a more diverse range of facilities and attractions in our forests in line with local and regional recreation and tourism strategies.

A Memorandum of Understanding is in place between my Department's Forest Service and Down District Council for the development of recreation and leisure products in forests in the Council area.

Significant benefits have already been delivered in the Down council area with the development of cycling and walking trail provision in Castlewellan Forest Park.

In continuation of this, Down District Council is pursuing the most appropriate and sustainable end use for the range of buildings at Tollymore and Castlewellan Forest Parks including the old cafe building at Tollymore Forest. In this regard they have commissioned a study to investigate a range of options, and my officials in Forest Service will continue to work with the council in the development of their plans.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much the Agri-Food and Bioscience Institute has paid in the last year to use its site at Newforge; and what percentage of this site is currently in use.

(AQW 36752/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The lease charge payable by AFBI to my Department for use of the Newforge site in 2013/14 was £2,216,303. This included a rental charge of £1,500,000 and a maintenance charge of £716,303. The rental charge was advised by Land and Property Services and the maintenance charge reflected actual spend in the previous year.

The entire Newforge site is leased by DARD to AFBI and 100% of the site is available for use. There are areas within a number of buildings which are not utilised on a full-time basis. However, a percentage figure for site usage is not available.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is taking to ensure that farmers negatively affected by EU trade sanctions with Russia gain access to the European Commission's compensation scheme.

(AQW 36760/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The European Commission introduced a number of measures in response to the Russia import ban on food from the EU. It is a matter for those eligible for these schemes to decide whether they want to participate.

Of the measures introduced only one, a package for perishable fruit and vegetable market support, offers compensation directly to farmers and producer groups.

My officials have been in contact with local fruit and vegetable stakeholders who have communicated the view that this ban has not directly impacted on prices for local fruit and vegetable produce to date. Therefore, at this time the Department does not intend to participate in the fruit and vegetable scheme but will continue to review the situation going forward.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by her Department which (i) she has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36879/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has five budgetary pressures totalling £11.2m which I consider to be truly inescapable. These are set out in the table below.

Inescapable Budgetary Pressures

Description	£m
Non ring fenced Resource DEL
Rural Development Programme (RDP)	3.6
Land and Property Services (LPS) staff on the Land Parcel Identification System (LPIS) Project	2.8
AFBI Funding	1.3
Total Non ring fenced Resource	7.7
Ring fenced Resource DEL
Departmental Depreciation/Impairment	1.3
Capital DEL
Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) Reform ICT	2.2

The Department of Finance and Personnel's assessment of these pressures will form part of the Executive's consideration of In Year Monitoring.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she ensures that every farm business is aware of the restrictions in place on slurry spreading during the closed period.

(AQW 36901/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Nitrates Action Programme (NAP) Regulations place restrictions on spreading slurry and include a closed period for spreading from 15 October to 31 January. This measure promotes best practice to ensure that slurry is spread when the nutrients it contains can be used efficiently by growing crops and that water quality is protected.

When the NAP was first introduced in 2007, my Department published a comprehensive guidance document which was sent to all Farm Businesses. Press articles have been issued regularly on the various aspects of the NAP, including the closed period. Every year an article is published highlighting the dates of the closed period and encouraging farmers to plan ahead with slurry spreading operations. The most recent article was published on 12 September 2014.

My Department provides comprehensive advisory support and training for farmers on the NAP. Since the NAP was first introduced in 2007, some 620 NAP related training events have been delivered by the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) and were attended by 10,263 farmers. In addition, a range of 5 online calculators are available to help farmers manage slurry, manures and chemical fertilisers effectively and meet the NAP requirements.

My Department's Code of Good Agricultural Practice, published in 2008, also includes detailed advice on slurry management including storage and spreading. In 2011, following the introduction of the second Nitrates Action Programme for 2011-2014, an updated leaflet on the NAP Regulations was issued to all farm businesses.

Given this extensive communication, the closed period is now well established in farming practice. I encourage all farmers to continue to demonstrate good practice when spreading slurry. This will maximise its fertiliser value and help to ensure we build on the good progress that has been achieved in improving water quality.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why her Department's capital reduced requirements for 2014-15 have totalled £8.9 million.

(AQW 36950/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In the June 2014/15 Monitoring Round, my Department declared a single capital reduced requirement of £8.9m in respect of the HQ Relocations Programme as the related expenditure has been reprofiled into subsequent financial years.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when she will publish her report on Lough Neagh and clarify her Department's plans for the Lough.

(AQW 37014/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The report of the Cross Departmental Working Group on Lough Neagh was published on 5 June 2014 and can be viewed on the Department's web site at:

<http://www.dardni.gov.uk/potential-for-bringing-lough-neagh-into-public-ownership.doc>

The Cross Departmental Working Group are currently considering a revised, more representative public management structure for the Lough, incorporating both operational and strategic activity; and my Department is taking the lead in this work. I asked that proposals on the way forward be brought to me by autumn this year.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) a breakdown of her Department's bids in the 2014 October monitoring round; (ii) the bids for funding which are inescapable or required to meet her Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether she will place a copy of her Department's bid in the Assembly Library prior to the statement on the October monitoring round from the Minister of Finance and Personnel.

(AQW 37116/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department submitted six bids totalling £19.2m in the October 2014/15 Monitoring Round which I consider to be inescapable and these are set out in the table below.

Bids submitted in October Monitoring

Description	£m
Non ring fenced Resource DEL
TB Compensation	8.0
Rural Development Programme (RDP)	3.6
Land and Property Services (LPS) staff on the Land Parcel Identification System (LPIS) Project	2.8
AFBI Funding	1.3
Total Non ring fenced Resource Bids	15.7
Ring fenced Resource DEL
Departmental Depreciation/Impairment	1.3
Capital DEL
Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) Reform ICT	2.2

I understand that there is not a requirement to place a copy of these bids in the Assembly Library. However, my officials have fully engaged with the ARD Committee on our October Monitoring proposals and secured their support.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 36375/11-15, to provide copies of the current Business Plan and those of the last two years.

(AQW 37159/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As requested, below are links to the Forest Service Business Plans for 2014/15, 2013/14 and 2012/13.

- <http://www.dardni.gov.uk/business-plan-2014-2015a.pdf>
- <http://www.dardni.gov.uk/business-plan-2013-2014.pdf>
- <http://www.dardni.gov.uk/business-plan-2012-13.pdf>

Hard copies of any of the above documents can be provided if required.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many young people are eligible to take the Level 2 Agricultural Qualification at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise this year; and how this correlates to the number of available places.

(AQW 37313/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Level II qualification in agriculture provided by CAFRE, for those young people who do not already hold an agricultural qualification at Level II and who intend to apply for the Young Farmer's Scheme or Regional Reserve, does not have any formal entry requirements. 3,495 young people applied for this course by the closing date for applications and 2,797 subsequently progressed their application with CAFRE. These 2,797 young people have been offered places on the training course for this qualification. Delivery of this training course will commence on Monday 20th October.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the reduction in the current budget for (i) Ulster Rugby; (ii) the GAA; and (iii) the Irish Football Association to deliver the 'Promoting Equality, Tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion through Sport Programme', broken down by sport.

(AQW 36160/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The PETPSE through Sport budget for 2014/15 has been reduced by £700,000. Each of the three sports has suffered a reduction in their PETPSE budget for 2014/15, as detailed below:

	Soccer	Rugby	GAA
Capital Funding	£ Nil	£ Nil	£500,000
Revenue Funding	£100,000	£20,000	£80,000
Total Reduction	£100,000	£20,000	£580,000

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, for the 2011-15 budget period, to detail (i) the budget reductions over £1,000, broken down by (a) the name of the item; (b) the amount of the reduction; and (c) the reduction as a percentage of the previous funding awarded; and (ii) the impact of Welfare Reform penalties on that budget.

(AQW 36513/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Budgets are subject to constant scrutiny and can be amended for various reasons in order, for example, to reflect reprioritisation of objectives and changes in external circumstances. At the level of detail asked it is not possible to isolate those budget reductions which are a direct result of cuts.

The overall position in relation to the Department's budget is summarised in the table at Annex 1. This shows opening and closing budget allocations for 2011/12, 2012/13 and 2013/14 compared to the opening baseline for 2010/11. The 14/15 allocations are not included since agreement has not yet been reached by the Executive on cuts for this year.

The table shows, at Departmental and ALB level, budget reductions imposed as part of the CSR exercise and in-year budget movements separately. It also reports funding made available to new activities for example City of Culture and World Police and Fire Games. Some notes are included which explain significant levels of additional funding made available to existing services.

I am also placing in the Assembly library the Department's Savings Delivery Plans for the Budget period. These are the mechanism through which departments informed the Assembly and other stakeholders of where they planned to make budget savings. I hope you find these informative as well.

Finally, the Department has made no budget reductions in the current year in respect of the Welfare Reform penalty for 14/15. As you may be aware, the Executive has agreed to discuss the management of this penalty as part of October Monitoring.

Notes

- 1 The Department was able to secure additional funding in 13/14 for cultural programmes and for creative industries
- 2 NI Screen received additional funding in 13/14 for various PETPSE projects and in respect of the jobs and economy initiative.
- 3 Libraries received a measure of protection in the period, especially in 11/12.
- 4 The North South Bodies were reclassified as NDPBs in 12/13. This led to significant uplifts in Waterways Ireland's budget to deal with non cash costs but these have no effect on its spending power.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the funding her Department has provided to promote cycling in each of the last three years; and for her assessment of the impact of this financial assistance.
(AQW 36895/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, is responsible for the distribution of funding to sport in the north of Ireland. In the last three financial years (up to 31 March 2014), Sport NI provided total Exchequer and Lottery funding of £538,442 to promote the sport of cycling.

In addition, the Sports Institute NI (SINI), which is supported by my Department, provides specialist support to local, talented cyclists in the form of Sports Medicine, Physiology, Performance Skills, including lifestyle management, Performance Analysis and Strength and conditioning.

The impact of this funding has resulted in considerable international competition success for local cyclists such as Martyn Irvine, James Brown and Wendy Houvenaghel who all achieved medal success in the last three years.

Sport NI's investment to the governing body, Cycling Ireland, through its PerformanceFocus programme, is focused solely on High Performance Operations. The progression in this system has already achieved its four year target of moving from 'emerging' to 'established' which demonstrates improvements in high performance systems, coaching and service use. Other impacts include improvements in talent identification, governance and culture systems.

Furthermore, as part of the World Police and Fire Games legacy, DCAL has provided funding of £10,000 to VC Glendale for the delivery of a children's cycling training and participation programme in the Shankill and Colin areas of Belfast.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline any plans her Department has for language projects which encourage cultural integration with migrant communities.

(AQW 37016/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The table below details those honoraria payments made to staff in the Southern Education and Library Board deemed irregular by the NIAO for 4 of the last 5 financial years. The Board has advised that the audit in respect of the 2013/14 financial year is ongoing but it is not currently aware of any irregular payments.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether any of the £1m for legacy projects secured in the June monitoring round will fund projects in Derry affected by the decision not to continue the Northern Ireland Tourist Board Tourism Events Fund for 2015/16.

(AQW 37057/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: To clarify the position, the £1m secured in the June Monitoring Round was made available to DCAL for the purposes of cultural programming.

This funding was made available to support a range of arts and cultural activity linked to sport and creativity. The bid was submitted following the success of the DCAL cultural programme which ran in parallel with the World Police and Fire Games in August 2013. The business cases in relation to projects that might be supported are currently being worked through.

In relation to funding for City of Culture legacy projects, I submitted a significant bid to the June Monitoring Round to maximise ongoing development of a social and economic legacy from City of Culture 2013. This bid was unsuccessful.

My Department and the Department of Education have identified the potential to work together to develop a cultural led framework supporting educational outcomes for children and young people and particularly those from disadvantaged areas and backgrounds as a legacy of the 2013 City of Culture.

My officials are currently working with DE to identify a suitable programme up to a cost of £1m. I will be making further announcements relating to the detail in due course.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 35965/11-15, whether her Department's total expenditure for 2014 was for the end of the business year or the calendar year; and to outline her Department's capital expenditure to Waterways Ireland in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37096/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Departments expenditure for 2014 as detailed in AQW 35965/11-15 represents the amount provided to Waterways Ireland to date for the financial year 2014/15. My Department has provided the following capital funding for Waterways Ireland over the last 3 years:

Year	Amount
2011/12	£0
2012/13	£320,000
2013/14	£250,000

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much funding her Department has provided to the Northern Cricket Union and affiliated clubs in the last three years.

(AQW 37117/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, responsible for the distribution of funding to sport in the north of Ireland, has not provided any funding directly to the Northern Cricket Union in the last three financial years, up to 31 March 2014.

However, the following Northern Cricket Union affiliated clubs have received investment totalling £31,200 as detailed below:

Financial Year	Organisation Name	Project Title	Grant Amount
2013	North Down Cricket Club	Supply and installation of ball stop fencing to a 140m length of boundary.	£30,000
2014	Donaghadee Cricket Club	Coaching Qualifications for Donaghadee Cricket Club	£1,200

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why there was a delay of more than six months in responding to the letter sent to her by the Committee for Culture, Arts and Leisure on 5 March 2014, in relation to 'Líofa collation of information and delivery'.

(AQW 37124/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The delay in responding to correspondence of 5 March 2014, from the Committee for Culture, Arts and Leisure, in relation to Líofa, was due to the matter being under consideration.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the dates of all meetings of the Inter-departmental Charter Implementation Group since July 2012.

(AQW 37125/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Interdepartmental Charter Implementation Group has met on four occasions since July 2012, as follows:

- 5 July 2012
- 31 January 2013
- 21 November 2013
- 22 July 2014

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail all expenditure on the Líofa campaign.

(AQW 37126/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The actual expenditure incurred for Líofa, since it was launched in September 2011 to date is £526,405. This includes a spend of £196,957 for the 2013/14 advertising campaign, which was approved by the Executive.

The table below details the expenditure:

(AQW 37128/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The number of visitors to the (i) Ulster Museum; (ii) Ulster Folk and Transport Museum; and (iii) Ulster American Folk Park, in each of the last five years is outlined at Annex A.

*Re-opened on 22 October 2009 after £17.4m major refurbishment.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in her Department's Information Service.

(AQW 37157/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There are currently three Executive Information Service Officers and 1.5 administrative staff employed in DCAL's Information Service.

Information Officers provide a wide ranging professional communications service – including media, online, internal communications and advertising service – and are supported by administration staff in their duties.

The staff costs (including salary, national insurance employer contributions, superannuation and overtime and allowances costs) for the 2013-14 financial year were £238,630.

The Department had lead responsibility for a number of high profile events during this period, including the City of Culture celebrations and the World, Police and Fire Games.

There is currently one fewer Executive Information Service Officer in post than was the case during the 2013-14 financial year.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how the cuts to Libraries NI will affect each library in the Mid Ulster constituency.

(AQW 37163/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that it is not yet possible to detail the affect of any proposed budget reductions on individual libraries in the Mid Ulster constituency.

This information will be provided once it becomes available.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she is aware of any libraries in Mid Ulster which face closure as a result of the cuts being imposed by her Department.

(AQW 37164/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Decisions on how Libraries NI budget reductions are managed in Mid Ulster are a matter for the Authority's Board and Senior Management Team.

Libraries NI has informed me that the measures it is implementing may, on occasion, lead to libraries in Mid Ulster and other areas experiencing temporary or ad hoc closures. Libraries NI has also advised that none of the measures it plans to take include the permanent closure of any library.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what staff numbers are required by Libraries NI to deliver the quality and range of services of the 96 libraries it currently manages.

(AQW 37165/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has undertaken a series of reviews of its estate and service provision in recent years. It has concluded that, in order to provide the current range and quality of service across the library network, it would require in the order of 660-670 full time equivalent staff.

Clearly, as for all public bodies, every effort needs to be made to find more efficient ways to deliver services. Libraries NI will continue to seek to minimise the impact of budget reductions on front line services.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what staff numbers are required by Libraries NI to deliver the quality and range of services of the 96 libraries it currently manages.

(AQW 37170/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has undertaken a series of reviews of its estate and service provision in recent years. It has concluded that, in order to provide the current range and quality of service across the library network, it would require in the order of 660-670 full time equivalent staff.

Clearly, as for all public bodies, every effort needs to be made to find more efficient ways to deliver services. Libraries NI will continue to seek to minimise the impact of budget reductions on front line services.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many agency staff Libraries NI will keep in employment.
(AQW 37173/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that it is currently working through the process of determining its requirement for agency staff and as a result it is not yet possible to detail how many agency staff will be retained.

This information will be provided once it becomes available.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether staff from her Department could be redeployed to Libraries NI to ensure the continued service provision.
(AQW 37203/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL and Libraries NI are separate employers operating under their own terms and conditions on employment and requiring different skills. As such it would not be appropriate to redeploy DCAL staff to Libraries NI.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the level of reserves in each of her Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.
(AQW 37219/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Used in the accounting sense, reserves equate to the stake the taxpayer has in publicly funded bodies. I have made the assumption that the question refers to reserves in the narrower sense of cash held in my Department's arm's-length bodies.

None of these bodies holds cash reserves. A major objective of my Department's cash management policy is to minimise cash balances held around the DCAL family. Each body is, therefore, provided with cash by the Department on the basis of monthly instalments to cover immediate requirements, normally those for the succeeding month only.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the level of departmental funding provided to the Ulster Orchestra in the last five years.
(AQW 37264/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has provided the following funding to the Ulster Orchestra (through the Arts Council NI and the Creative Industries Fund) over the last five financial years.

Year	ACNI Funding £	Creative Industries £	Total £
2014/15	1,879,568		1,879,568
2013/14	2,031,966	48,206	2,080,172
2012/13	2,196,720		2,196,720
2011/12	2,205,315		2,205,315
2010/11	2,211,720		2,211,720

The Arts Council has also provided a total of £190,660 Lottery funding to the Orchestra during this period.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the budget of the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund in each year since it was established; and how much of this was allocated.
(AQW 37278/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund (USBF) has been in operation since 2010.

It has had a budget of £1m per year which it has used to support a wide variety of productions. This funding does not have to be spent in the current financial year and underspends can be carried forward into the next financial year. Annual budget details are outlined below:

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund (USBF) uses the criteria below when assessing applications:

1. How the proposal complies with the priorities of the USBF;
2. How the proposal contributes to increasing awareness and understanding of Ulster-Scots heritage, culture and/or language;

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the ways in which her Department supports statutory bodies, which are designated public authorities in their own right, to produce their own Disability Action Plans.
(AQW 37296/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Under Section 49B of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, public authorities are required to produce a disability action plan showing how they propose to fulfil the disability duties in relation to their functions. It is the responsibility of each of the Department's Arms Length Bodies (ALBs) to develop their own Disability Action Plan (DAP) in relation to their functions.

When the statutory duty to produce a DAP was first introduced in 2007 the Department's Equality Unit hosted a meeting of ALB Equality Officers to provide initial advice and guidance on the development of their plans.

The Department's Research and Statistics branch produces regular statistical bulletins on a number of areas of DCAL's business, including sport, arts, museums, libraries, angling and inland waterways, which present analysis by Section 75 groups, including those who have and do not have a disability. In addition, Sponsor Branches carry out audits of inequalities. The statistical bulletins and the audit can be used to inform the development of the DAPs of our ALBs.

As part of the Department's sponsorship and governance arrangements with its ALBs the disability duties are discussed at accountability meetings as necessary and are also included in the assurance statements completed by ALBs ensuring regular engagement on the matter.

Department of Education

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education to outline the future plans for the Tamnamore Learning Centre in Dungannon; and whether there is any investment planned for the centre.
(AQW 36476/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The Southern Education and Library Board have confirmed there are no plans to change the current status of Tamnamore Learning Centre. Any potential upgrading of the Centre, like all other Board facilities, is under continuous review in the light of need and available resources.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education whether there is a strategy to secure school budgets following the change in the formula relating to collaboration between schools.
(AQW 36504/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The formula you refer to relates to the mechanism for distributing additional funds to schools to support them in delivering their Entitlement Framework (EF) requirements.

The EF is about putting pupils first and the additional funding is a contribution to costs associated with expanding a school's curricular offer, with particular support targeted at courses delivered on a collaborative basis between schools, or with FE Colleges or training organisations. This funding, as an earmarked fund, was due to end by April 2014 but I have extended it through to the end of the current budgetary period, the 2014/15 financial year.

Schools receive their core budget through the LMS arrangements to pay for a range of matters including the curriculum, of which the EF is part. Every pupil in every post-primary school is entitled to have access to the same broad and balanced curricular offer, as a minimum, to support them in achieving their full potential, and every school must keep working towards the full requirements for the benefit of their pupils.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education what home tuition support is provided to pupils studying for A-levels examinations who cannot attend school due to illness, in the South Eastern Education and Library Board.
(AQW 36737/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education and Library Board provide home tuition for Children and Young people who are of compulsory school age. Responsibility for securing or providing education for Young people over compulsory school age who cannot attend their school due to illness is the responsibility of the school at which they are registered.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education how his Department identifies underdeveloped social, emotional, communication and language skills of young children; and to detail the mechanisms in place to monitor progress in these areas.

(AQW 36820/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: For young children in DE funded early years settings, assessment of children's learning is based on day-to-day observations of, and interactions with, children in a range of situations. Potential barriers to learning such as under developed social, emotional, communication or language skills are identified through careful observation, recording of responses to activities, and through close liaison with other professionals. It may be necessary to draw up individual plans to meet a child's needs or to identify appropriate support. I recently announced nearly £200,000 additional funding specifically to help eligible non-statutory pre-school settings to identify and address underdeveloped social, emotional, communication and language skills of young children in line with the Department's commitment set out in 'Learning to Learn – A Framework for Early Years Education and Learning'.

The statutory responsibility for securing provision for pupils with Special Educational Needs (SEN) rests with both schools, and the Education and Library Boards which are responsible under special education legislation for identifying, assessing and, in appropriate cases, making provision for children with SEN in their areas.

A range of tools are used to monitor progress in these areas both for young children generally and for children with SEN.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 36056/11-15, how many schools in the North Eastern Education and Library Board were submitted for consideration in the same way as those listed from the Western Board Education and Library Board.

(AQW 36846/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A total of twenty eight schools were submitted by the North Eastern Education & Library Board for consideration, six of which were in the East Derry constituency. Details of these six schools are as follows:

Primary School:

- Millstrand Integrated Primary School, Portrush

Post-Primary schools:

- St Paul's College, Coleraine
- North Coast Integrated College, Coleraine
- Coleraine Academical Institution
- Loreto College, Coleraine
- Dominican College, Portstewart

For completeness I can also confirm that a total of seventeen schools were submitted by the Western Education & Library Board, three of which were in the East Derry constituency.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 30077/11-15, how much finance has been expended to date in each of the projects listed.

(AQW 36856/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Finances expended against the 18 capital build projects announced in June 2012 up to 31 August 2014 amount in total to £32,732k. A breakdown is shown in the table below.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by his Department which (i) he has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36880/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: (i) The June monitoring round was the Department's first opportunity to bid for additional funding in the current year. The following provides the details of inescapable bids made to DFP at June monitoring

Special Education Needs: £10m

Special Education Needs is an increasing pressure on the Block Grant of the ELBs. The number of statemented children, as a % of all pupils, has increased from 4.3% in 2011-12 to 4.6% in 2013-14 and this upward trend is expected to continue in 2014-15.

Severance: £10m

Severance funding is required to fund school based teaching and non teaching redundancies and redundancies relating to staff within Arms Length Bodies.

Schools Surpluses: £5.0m

Under the procedures agreed by the Executive in June 2011, I bid to DFP for £5m for school surplus drawdown during 2014-15.

Schools Maintenance: £22.0m

I am on record as wanting ELBs to make a significant impact on the backlog of maintenance in their areas. The bid related to Boards' statutory and emergency response maintenance and statutory risk assessments in respect of environmental hazards such as fire safety; asbestos management and control of Legionella.

Staffing for Area Based Planning: £1.4m

The ELBs and CCMS identified that they required additional staffing resources in order to expedite work on area based planning.

Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment: £1.3m

CCEA identified that it required £1.3m in relation to the development, accreditation and support of revised GCSE and A level Qualifications. This work is required to implement the recommendations coming from the Fundamental Review of GCSE and A level Qualifications.

The two inescapable bids submitted by the Department at October monitoring are set out below:

Severance: £5.0m

Severance funding is required to fund school based teaching and non teaching redundancies and redundancies relating to staff within Arm's Length Bodies.

Schools Maintenance: £10.8m

I am on record as wanting ELBs to make a significant impact on the backlog of maintenance in their areas. The bid relates to Boards' statutory and emergency response maintenance and their ability to comply with Health & Safety and other statutory requirements.

- (ii) It is not appropriate for me to provide a response on behalf of DFP and therefore I would suggest that a response should be sought directly from DFP.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education what commitment to funding can he make for a new build following his acceptance of proposals to merge Coleraine High School and Coleraine Academical Institution, whilst increasing enrolment at Coleraine College.

(AQW 36897/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I would refer the Member to the response to AQW 29800/11-15 which confirms that Belfast Public Hire taxis are permitted to have dual tariffs programmed into their meters.

The Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) is responsible for ensuring that all meters fitted to Belfast Public Hire taxis are only installed with the permitted tariff/s and conform to the prescribed fitment, calibration and sealing requirements.

DVA Enforcement Officers routinely conduct roadside spot checks on taxi meters installed in licensed Belfast Public Hire Taxis to ensure they satisfy fitment requirements, remain properly sealed and to validate the tariff being used. Where a taxi meter is inspected and found to be insecure, unsealed or inaccurate, enforcement action can be taken including the issue of a Defect Notice or a Prohibition Notice. Where prohibition action has been taken this would result in the suspension of the vehicle's PSV Vehicle Licence until remedial action has been taken and the taxi meter re-tested and sealed by the Agency.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education to outline the arrangements in place to enable headteachers and senior management to attend training at the regional training unit; and how attendance at the unit is remunerated.

(AQW 36979/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department funds the Regional Training Unit (RTU) to support the professional development of leaders and senior managers in all schools in the North. It provides schools with periodic mail shots about its leadership/management training provision. Details on programmes/events available including how to apply for courses are provided on the RTU website (www.rtuni.org). The website also includes a significant bank of leadership/management development materials which can be used either in preparation for or as a follow on to programme provision. In general, there are no direct charges for participants on RTU training events and travel costs are met.

Teachers usually receive their normal salary whilst attending training courses. It is for employers to agree appropriate arrangements for the release of individuals to attend courses. If substitute cover is required, schools can seek reimbursement from centre funds under the Common Funding Scheme.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education how many staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) its arm's-length bodies are employed on zero hour contracts.

(AQW 37033/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not employ any staff on zero hour contracts. With the exception of the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB), none of the Arm's Length Bodies employ staff on zero hour contracts. The SEELB has 106 staff on such contracts.

Zero hours contract is defined as a contract where the employer does not guarantee to provide the employee/worker with work and will only pay the employee/worker for those hours which are actually worked.

The SEELB has advised that the types of posts included for the 106 include Home Tutors, Music Tutors, Primary Language Tutors, Youth Workers, Invigilators. The SEELB has also confirmed that it engages Primary Language Tutors on behalf of the 5 Boards. They do not have a contract of employment guaranteeing them a set number of hours; they are only paid for actual hours worked. They are on the Board's payroll system as "zero hours" therefore, they meet the definition "zero hours contract". This is one example which explains why SEELB has staff defined as "zero hours" and the other ELBs do not.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what steps his Department has taken to encourage business linkages with schools through Area Learning Communities, School Boards of Governors or by appointing business liaison personnel through Education and Library Boards.

(AQW 37037/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Area Learning Communities (ALCs) were established to facilitate curricular provision on an area basis to support post-primary schools in delivering the Entitlement Framework requirements. Whilst ALCs operate with a number of sub groups, including careers groups, it is a matter for an individual ALC to determine what links they make with business. ALCs could provide a useful forum through which businesses could more easily engage with schools given their relatively small number.

I encourage and welcome people within the local business community to engage in public service as school governors. Those that apply for and take up office as governors are in a position to make a valuable contribution to the work of school Boards of Governors (BoGs) due to their management skills and experience.

The reconstitution of school BoGs was taken forward during the 2013/14 school year. An extensive recruitment campaign was launched by my Department, together with the Education and Library Boards, to attract applicants to apply to become school governors. As part of the campaign, recruitment material was disseminated to a wide variety of organisations, including business organisations i.e. Business in the Community, NI Chamber of Commerce & Industry, law societies, banks, building societies, insurance companies, borough councils as well as voluntary groups, disability, Irish language and equality groups and libraries. Contact was also made with the NI Civil Service and the Chief Executive's Forum.

An advertisement was placed in all the daily and local weekly newspapers and a promotional video was also produced for the ESaGS.tv website. Business in the Community also carried an article about becoming a school governor in their online magazine.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Education to detail the combined total of performance related pay to officers and staff in the Southern Education and Library Board in the last five financial years.

(AQW 37060/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I can confirm that the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) has paid performance related pay (PRP) to officers and staff in each of the last five years, broken down as follows:

ELB	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
Performance Related Pay Paid	Nil	£20,692*	Nil	£77,448^	NilX

* PRP for 2008/09 was paid in 2010/11.

^ Performance related pay for 2009/10 and 2010/11 was paid in 2012/13 once approval was received.

X SELB awaits the approval of PRP for 2011/12 and 2012/13, consequently there was no PRP paid in 2013/14.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Education to detail the total amount of irregular honoraria payments made to (i) teaching staff; and (ii) non-teaching staff in the Southern Education and Library Board in the last five financial years.

(AQW 37061/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details those honoraria payments made to staff in the Southern Education and Library Board deemed irregular by the NIAO for 4 of the last 5 financial years. The Board has advised that the audit in respect of the 2013/14 financial year is ongoing but it is not currently aware of any irregular payments.

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Teaching staff	£61,211	£27,083	Nil	Nil
Non-teaching staff	£73,473	£91,229	Nil	Nil
Total	£134,684	£118,312	Nil	Nil

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education, following his recent announcement, to detail the expected timescale of the increased enrolment at Coleraine College.

(AQW 37064/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: On 26 September 2014 I approved a development proposal to increase the enrolment number at Coleraine College from 600 to 900 pupils with effect from 1 September 2015 or as soon as possible thereafter.

Accordingly, the admissions number at Coleraine College will increase from 103 to 140 from September 2015. The Department will review numbers annually and, from the 2016 school year, will increase the enrolment number on a phased basis in line with demand for places at the school until the approved enrolment number of 900 is reached.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how he is addressing educational underachievement in Kilcooley Estate, Bangor.
(AQW 37076/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since coming to office I have continued to implement policies to raise standards and tackle underachievement. Alongside the implementation of these policies, additional funding is being made available to specific programmes to target educational underachievement in areas of social deprivation such as the Kilcooley estate.

Through the common funding scheme I have redistributed the aggregate schools budget to target schools with high numbers of pupils from socially disadvantaged backgrounds. In this financial year I have also injected a further £10 million specifically targeting social deprivation into school budgets. Kilcooley Primary School received just over £135,000 of funding within its delegated budget under the Social Deprivation and Additional Social Deprivation elements of the funding formula in 2014/15. This represents an increase of approximately 33% compared to the equivalent TSN funding for the school in 2013/14.

Through the Delivering Social Change (DSC) literacy and numeracy programme to employ additional teachers, Kilcooley Primary School (PS) has been allocated additional part-time teaching support equivalent to 0.2 of a Full-Time Equivalent (FTE) teaching post. In addition, all the non-selective post-primary schools in the North Down area are entitled to additional teaching support through this programme so those pupils resident in the Kilcooley estate who attend these schools will also be benefiting from this additional resource.

Since January 2014, the SEELB's Curriculum Advisory Support Service (CASS) has provided advice, support and guidance for the Numeracy co-ordinator in Kilcooley Primary School. This has supplemented the school's provision of additional numeracy support for pupils on a par with the DSC Signature programme for literacy. The school have also joined a recently formed cluster group facilitating Numeracy co-ordinators in the North Down area.

Kilcooley PS provides a nurture room to support a child's social, emotional and behavioural development and to help the child become more receptive to learning and be reintegrated with their mainstream class. DSD currently funds this resource however this funding is due to end in March 2015. DE has committed to sustain the nurture provision to the end of the academic year.

Kilcooley PS currently qualifies for the funding through the Department's Extended Schools programme and has been allocated funding totalling £23,237 in 2014/15.

The Department also provides funding to the Kilcooley Neighbourhood Renewal Partnership (NRP) through the Community Education Initiates Programme. This programme aims to identify and allocate resources to community-based initiatives which have a specific focus on positive educational outcomes. A total of £37,510 has been made available in 2014/15 to support an on-going parental engagement programme.

The NRP is also funded by DSD to support a Transitions Programme. This programme provides additional literacy and numeracy support for primary 6 and 7 pupils in Kilcooley Primary School as they prepare for their transition to post primary school. The programme is delivered by the primary school in partnership with two local post primary schools – Priory College and Bangor Academy. Parental engagement in the transition process is also a core element of the programme.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education when work will commence on the extension and remedial works at Glenwood Primary School.

(AQW 37118/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: This project is still at an early stage of planning. The Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) have advised my Department that they anticipate completion of the Economic Appraisal in January 2015. When approved the detailed design of the new school can commence. The BELB has advised that they hope to start construction over the summer of 2016 with completion anticipated around September 2018. These timescales are dependent on approval of the economic appraisal and that no further delays occur.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 37155/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) There are currently 12 staff in the Department of Education's Information Service.

Four members of staff are responsible for media relations; website management, including the Department of Education pages on the NI Direct website; social media output; internal communications; advertising; and the preparation of ministerial briefings relating to school visits and school prize-giving ceremonies.

A Desktop Publishing Unit, comprising four staff, provide a design and print service to the Department and four administrative staff provide a support service.

Four staff work reduced hours therefore the full-time equivalent figure is 10.92.

- (ii) The projected cost of salaries for the current financial year 2014/15 is £399,150, assuming no further staff changes take place.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the effectiveness of the 'Food in Schools' policy on nutritional standards for school lunches and other food in primary and post-primary schools.

(AQW 37183/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education recognises that a healthy, balanced diet is vital for children's growth and development and that good nutrition makes a positive contribution to children's learning, concentration and educational performance. Therefore, the Department has proactively sought to improve the quality of food in our schools.

It is for this reason that I, along with the previous Health Minister, launched the Food in Schools Policy (the Policy) on 24 September 2013. The Policy sets out the overall aims and objectives of the Department in relation to food in schools. I would note, however, that compliance with the nutritional standards for food and drink in schools is a key, but not the sole, element of the Food in Schools policy. The Policy also describes the range of activities that are being or should be put in place to deliver improved nutrition and knowledge about food for our school children. This includes, for example, the provision of free, fresh drinking water and, through delivery of the curriculum, education on how to make healthy food choices and to prepare food accordingly.

Since September 2007 all schools have been required to comply with the nutritional standards for school lunches. Standards for other food and drinks provided in schools (breakfast clubs, tuck shops, vending machines etc) were also introduced in April 2008 and schools are also expected to adhere to them.

In seeking to determine the extent to which schools are complying with the nutritional standards the Education and Training Inspectorate's Nutritional Associates obtained evidence from inspections relating to the nature, range and quality of healthy eating policies and practices in schools over the period from January 2007 to March 2011. I am pleased to advise that their findings over this time demonstrated that the vast majority of schools inspected were making outstanding or very good progress in implementing the nutritional standards.

The Department intends to undertake a survey of all grantaided schools early in 2015 to determine how effectively schools are implementing the Food in Schools policy. I would note, however, that this will seek to assess the extent to which schools are implementing all aspects of the Food in Schools policy including compliance with the nutritional standards. The findings of the survey will be used to identify any further support or advice which may be required to assist schools in implementing the Policy and complying with the nutritional standards

In 2014-15 my Department provided some £4.2 million to support schools to effectively implement the Policy and the nutritional standards. In addition, the Regional Food in Schools Co-ordinator and the services of an independent, professional dietician – posts which are jointly funded by my Department and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety – provide support and advice to schools in this regard.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education to outline the ways in which his Department is collaborating with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to promote and encourage healthy eating in primary and post-primary schools.

(AQW 37186/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has proactively sought to promote and encourage healthy eating in our schools working closely with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and a range of initiatives are in place reflecting this collaborative approach.

I would refer the Member to my answer to her earlier assembly question (AQW 37183/11-15) published in the Official Report on 17 October which details some of the actions taken forward jointly by my Department and the DHSSPS in this regard including the development and publication of the joint "Food in Schools Policy" (the Policy) and the associated nutritional standards for school food.

In seeking to support schools to implement the Policy and the nutritional standards a Food in Schools Forum (the Forum) was established jointly by DE and DHSSPS. The Forum provides strategic leadership and guidance on food in schools. A key aspect of the Forum's remit is to consider and identify how healthy eating may be promoted and encouraged in schools reflecting the aims and objectives of the joint Policy.

Officials from both Departments are represented on the Forum along with representatives from the Education and Library Boards, the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA), the Food Standards Agency (FSA), the Public Health Agency (PHA) and Saferfood.

Through the Forum a range of measures have been and are being progressed to ensure that schools and the school catering service are equipped with the necessary resources to promote and encourage healthy eating.

This includes, for example, a range of Essential Guides (produced on behalf of DE/DHSSPS by the Public Health Agency (PHA)) which have been circulated to schools and which provide advice on, for example, the provision of healthier breaks, fresh drinking water, and healthier breakfast clubs as well as advice on how to establish a whole school food policy and how to improve the school dining experience. The Guides aim to help schools improve pupils' nutrition and implement healthier eating and drinking practices and include clear advice on the actions schools should take to encourage and promote each of these aspects of the Policy.

The DE/DHSSPS jointly funded regional Food in Schools Coordinator post has enabled a Food in Schools central resource to be developed using the C2k Fronter application (C2k's virtual learning environment). This resource – known as the "food @ my school" room - provides up to date information for schools in relation to promoting healthy food and nutrition in schools, highlighting relevant and curriculum-focused resources as well as sharing examples of how a whole school approach to all food in schools improves the health and wellbeing of pupils and staff. This is a key method through which the Departments are working to promote and encourage healthy eating in schools and raise awareness among principals and teachers.

In February 2014 DHSSPS and DE participated in the Food in Schools Policy Conference hosted by Stranmillis University College. The aim of the conference was to raise awareness and understanding of the Food in Schools policy within schools and to support schools in implementing it effectively. The Conference included presentations on a number of issues relating to food and nutrition which are available on 'food @ my school' room as a useful resource for schools.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of existing transport provision for school pupils in each Education and Library Board, including eligibility criteria for a free school bus pass for pupils.

(AQW 37188/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The existing school transport policy provides assistance for eligible pupils in the form of a seat on a bus (or other vehicle), or a sessional ticket ("bus pass"), or a monetary allowance in lieu of transport. Eligibility is based on attendance at a suitable school (one in the recognised categories of Catholic Maintained, Controlled or Other Voluntary, Integrated, Irish Medium, and Denominational and Non-Denominational Grammar) and distance (two miles for Primary pupils and three miles for Post-Primary). In the context of parents' legal duty to secure the regular attendance of their child(ren) at school, the distance criterion reflected the distance beyond which it was viewed that pupils may require assistance to facilitate their attendance. The suitable school criterion reflects parental choice in terms of the category of school they wish their child(ren) to attend.

This system presently assists almost 90,000 pupils at an annual cost of almost £75 million. However, given that the current policy has been in operation relatively unchanged for many years, I recently commissioned an Independent Review of the policy with the aim of ensuring that we are delivering the optimum service possible in all aspects of education here, so that there is equality of opportunity and access for all our young people and every child is enabled to achieve to their full potential. Transport is a key facilitator in this vision.

I am, at present, taking time to consider in detail the findings of the Independent Review Panel before making decisions on the way forward, and will publish the Panel's Report in due course.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education what provision is in place to ensure that the needs of any pupil attending a post-primary school, who has a physical disability, is appropriately met by school transport services.

(AQW 37192/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have informed me that pupils with both special education needs and a physical disability will be subject to the statementing process which will determine whether a pupil has special transport needs and if so how these should be addressed and for how long. Such statements may be the subject of regular review.

Pupils with a physical disability, but without special needs, will be subject to a medical process. As with the statementing process, the medical process will determine whether a pupil has transport needs and if so how these should be addressed and for how long.

Pupils with a short-term physical disability may, on production of suitable medical evidence, be provided with transport assistance for a short period.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37220/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The level of reserves in each of my Department's arm's length bodies as of 31 March 2014 is provided in the table below.

	£'000
Belfast Education and Library Board*	132,452
Western Education and Library Board*	109,783

North Eastern Education and Library Board*	304,677
South Eastern Education and Library Board*	255,331
Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment	(4,365)
Council for Catholic Maintained Schools	(3,619)

Total	946,393

* Figures extracted from unaudited accounts

Figures provided are based on the 2013-14 year end accounts, as amounts at 1 October 2014 are not available.

Reserves represent the total assets less liabilities of the arm's length body, and do not represent spending power.

The Education and Library Boards have significant reserves due to the value of land and buildings held.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education, given the continuing pressure on space and the number of pupils attending at Macosquin Primary School in Coleraine, whether he will examine the possibility of acquiring a small piece of land adjacent to the school to assist in the required expansion or replacement.

(AQW 37227/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Macosquin Primary School is a controlled school. As such, it is the responsibility of North Eastern Education & Library Board (NEELB) as the managing authority to monitor the school's accommodation needs. NEELB has indicated that it will give consideration to the possibility of acquiring additional land to extend the site.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Hollywood Multi-Schools project.

(AQW 37263/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Prior to my June 2014 capital announcement, South Eastern Education & Library Board identified a multi-schools project for Hollywood - Priory College; Hollywood Primary School (PS) and Hollywood Nursery School (NS) as one of its priorities for major capital investment. The schools were considered independently under 'The Major Works Projects - Protocol for Selection of Projects to Proceed in Planning.' The protocol subjected potential projects to Gateway checks for sustainability and area planning issues prior to the remaining projects being prioritised. Priory College did not pass the 'Gateway' and was therefore not included in my June announcement. Hollywood PS was scored under the protocol but did not achieve a sufficient score to be included in the list of announced projects due to budget constraints. Options for the future of Hollywood NS will depend on the decisions reached on the future of Priory College and Hollywood PS.

While Priory College, Hollywood PS and Hollywood NS will be disappointed that they were not included in the capital investment announcement in June 2014, this in no way implies that they will not be considered for funding at a later stage.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many post-primary schools in each sector provide metalwork and woodwork classes.

(AQW 37284/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not collate information about the practical classes run by post-primary schools in any sector.

Metalwork and woodwork are traditionally covered under the Science and Technology Area of Learning (AoL), and this AoL is part of the statutory curriculum for all post-primary schools. In addition, if a pupil wanted to follow a particular pathway which required metalwork or woodwork skills they should have access under the Entitlement Framework to much broader provision through the school's participation in their local Area Learning Community.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the current relationship between educational attainment and social disadvantage, and the perceived inequality in outcomes for school age students from the most deprived areas. (AQW 37294/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's evidence, based on a census of all schools/pupils, confirms that social deprivation, as measured by Free School Meals, is strongly correlated with and reflective of educational disadvantage and lower educational attainment. This is very much in line with international evidence which also reports the strong correlation between pupils' socio-economic background and their outcomes in education.

Despite improving outcomes at all stages, the attainment gap between our most and least deprived pupils remains. This inequality in outcomes is a reality not a perception.

In 2013, 34.9% (one third) of school leavers entitled to free school meals (FSME) achieved 5 or more GCSEs at A*-C (or equivalent) including English and maths compared to 68.4% (two thirds) of leavers not entitled free school meals. In 2012/13 pupil level data was received for the first time for primary school-age pupils. The figures show that 62.6% of FSME pupils achieved the expected level (Level 4) or above in Communication compared to 82.9% of non-FSME pupils and 64.1% of FSME pupils achieved the expected level (Level 4) or above in Using Mathematics compared to 84.2% of non-FSME pupils.

This lower level of achievement amongst pupils from socially disadvantaged backgrounds is consistent with levels of poverty, a lack of social mobility and a pattern of educational inequality. These factors impact on a child's education pathway from their earliest years.

The evidence shows that pupils from disadvantaged backgrounds have greater obstacles to overcome. Their schools need additional resources to help them do this. That is why I have redistributed school funding to target schools with high numbers of pupils from socially disadvantaged backgrounds and injected a further £10 million specifically targeting social deprivation into school budgets from April 2014.

I have also continued to implement policies and provide funding for a range of additional interventions, with a focus on improving standards and tackling educational underachievement. However, there are two other key issues.

Firstly, a socially balanced education system enables all pupils to perform better. While some schools persist in the use of academic selection, we will be unable to eradicate this social division.

Secondly, inequality in outcomes is a societal issue and one that education authorities and schools cannot tackle on their own. The challenge of tackling inequalities, be they educational, health or economic, is one that we all face and success will depend on all stakeholders working together in order to achieve greater equity in our society.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate. (AQW 37301/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) As part of the October monitoring round two inescapable bids were submitted by the Department as set out below:

Severance: £5.0m

Severance funding is required to fund school based teaching and non teaching redundancies and redundancies relating to staff within Arm's Length Bodies (ALBs).

Schools Maintenance: £10.8m

I am on record as wanting ELBs to make a significant impact on the backlog of maintenance in their areas. This bid relates to Boards' statutory and emergency response maintenance and their ability to comply with Health & Safety and other statutory requirements.

- (ii) There was no statutory obligation linked to the Severance bid. However, the bid was required to fund severance costs relating to school based teaching and non teaching redundancies and redundancies within ALBs across the education sector. These redundancies are required to ensure schools and ALBs reduce their long term costs base in order to live within their budgets.

The entire Schools Maintenance bid for £10.8m submitted as part of the October 2014 Monitoring Round is considered to be inescapable as it is linked to the Department's statutory obligations.

- (iii) While I provide details to the Assembly Education Committee relating to bids made by my Department in monitoring rounds, it is not normal practice to deposit Monitoring Round bid documents in the Assembly Library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education what support is available to pupils in primary and post-primary schools whose learning ability is affected by dyslexia. (AQW 37360/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that a range of special education support and provision is available to parents and schools for a child identified with dyslexia, including the following:

- dyslexia awareness training for schools (and parents) as requested by schools to enhance the capacity of teachers to identify and respond appropriately in addressing dyslexia;
- all Educational Psychologists (EPs) are trained and skilled in the assessment and identification of dyslexia. Following the identification of dyslexia EPs provide a comprehensive range of support including recommendations and resources to parents and schools to assist the pupil achieve his/her potential;
- a range of innovative strategies, resources and computer assisted programmes are available to pupils with dyslexia for whom more traditional methods are unsuccessful;
- when children who are thought to have dyslexia are put forward for assessment at Stage 3 of the Code of Practice (COP), they are either screened for additional Board support by psychology assistants or EPs. A range of cognitive and attainment tests are used in the identification of dyslexia with agreed five board criteria for additional Stage 3 and Stage 5 support applied in each case.
- some schools have achieved or are working towards achievement of Dyslexia Friendly status usually in association with the British Dyslexia Association (BDA). Schools are supported by the Board services in achieving this award;
- a range of measures to help those children and young people identified as having dyslexia under examination conditions.

In addition DE is funding the SEN Continuing Professional Development (CPD) Literacy Project which is delivered jointly by Stranmillis and St Mary's University Colleges. This project is being funded for 3 years and will be completed at the end of March 2015.

The project, which offers specialist training accredited by the British Dyslexia Association to all primary schools, enables teachers to identify children with literacy difficulties, including dyslexia, assess their individual needs and provide appropriate interventions.

ELBs will continue to review their services in order to provide improved assistance to those children and young people with dyslexia.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education how his Department regulates and oversees home schooling; and whether the Education and Training Inspectorate has an oversight role.
(AQW 37369/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The legislation which applies to the education of pupils of compulsory school age, including pupils who are receiving elective home education, confers specific powers on both the Education and Library Boards (the Boards) and on parents.

Article 44 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 requires that the Boards have regard to the general principle that, so far as is compatible with the provision of efficient instruction and training and the avoidance of unreasonable public expenditure, pupils shall be educated in accordance with the wishes of their parents.

Article 45 (1) of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 places a duty on parents of children of compulsory school age to ensure that the education provided to their child, whether by regular attendance at school or otherwise – which can include elective home education - is suited to the child's age, ability, aptitude and to any special educational needs the child may have.

Schedule 13 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 places a duty on the Boards to take action where it appears to a Board that a parent of a child of compulsory school age in its area is failing to perform the duty imposed by Article 45(1). In these circumstances the Board can serve on the parent a notice requiring him/her, within a set period, to satisfy the Board that the child is, by regular attendance at school or otherwise, receiving efficient and appropriate full-time education.

In cases where a parent fails to demonstrate that the education provided meets the child's specific needs the Board may, in accordance with Schedule 13 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986, serve a School Attendance Order (SAO) on the parent to require that the child becomes a registered pupil at the school named in the order. Where a parent applies for the order to be revoked the Board may do so if the parent has demonstrated that suitable arrangements have been made for the education of the child. If considered necessary, a Board may make application for an Education Supervision Order (ESO) to the Family Proceedings Court. Legal provisions for ESOs and Care Orders are contained in the Children (NI) Order 1995. The effect of an ESO is that the responsibility for securing the child's education is removed from the parents and transferred to the Board named in the order.

The Boards may also provide support to parents who chose to home educate including advice and guidance on suitable learning materials, on training or examination options. The level of training and advisory support will relate to the age and developmental profile of the child.

Whilst the Education and Training Inspectorate provides inspection services for a number of organisations it does not undertake inspections of home education provision or have an oversight role in this regard.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education how minor capital works applications are ranked in terms of ensuring equality of provision for pupils across all schools.

(AQW 37376/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: All Capital Minor Works applications are assessed in line with my agreed priorities which are published on my Department's website as follows:

- Minor works schemes that meet inescapable statutory requirements such as Health and Safety, Fire Protection and our statutory obligations under the Disability Discrimination Act;
- Essential minor works to ensure the integrity and suitability of the estate;
- Curriculum based minor works schemes that would meet currently unmet needs in schools; and
- Minor works schemes where application has been made for a contribution towards capital works.

Minor works are prioritised according to greatest need, for example health and safety, fire protection, disabled facilities and roofs over heads.

A Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) which sets out the approach upon which the Education and Library Boards (ELBS) and the Department will progress a programme of minor works for non controlled schools has been compiled and recently revised. The MOA will enable a larger programme of non controlled minor works projects to be taken forward by the ELBs, and draws on their expertise to help ensure equality of provision across the schools estate regardless of management type.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 35342/11-15, what discussions his Department had with the Central Applications Office on simplifying the application process for local students.

(AQW 36413/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): My Department has not had any discussions with the Central Applications Office (CAO) as this is an independent organisation providing subscribing higher education institutions in the Republic of Ireland with a student application service.

However, as part of the implementation plan for Graduating to Success, my Department is examining barriers to cross border undergraduate mobility. The Higher Education Authority (HEA) represents higher education interests of the Republic of Ireland on the project group and any discussions on application processes will be taken forward through HEA.

In addition, my Department's Careers Service provides support to students applying for higher education places through UCAS and CAO. The Careers Service attends an annual Higher Education Convention in Belfast organised by Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS). In March 2014, exhibitors included representatives from higher education providers throughout the island of Ireland, in addition to universities in England, Scotland and Wales. These included the National University of Ireland in Galway and Maynooth, Griffith College, Dundalk Institute of Technology, Dublin City University and Dublin Business School, with 8,653 students from 95 schools in Northern Ireland attending.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what measures his Department has in place to address employment levels of school leavers.

(AQW 36768/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department has a range of measures in place to support and enhance the employment levels of school leavers.

Careers advisers provide professional and impartial careers information, advice and guidance to young people throughout Northern Ireland, including school leavers, on the full range of career options available, including opportunities in employment. Careers advisers also actively case manage all young people aged 16 and 17 who do not have a positive destination and who are not in education, employment or training when they leave school or who drop out of provision early. The aim is to help them secure and sustain employment, education or training provision.

On 31st March, I announced details of the review of careers which my Department is conducting jointly with the Department of Education. Within the terms of reference is a commitment to improve the exposure young people have to the world of work and to improve the quality of careers information and advice available to young people, particularly around labour market trends, to improve their chances of securing and sustaining employment. The panel is due to provide its final report and recommendations at the end of October 2014.

In June 2014, my Department published Securing our Success: The Northern Ireland Strategy on Apprenticeships. This strategy will be central in transforming our skills landscape and in securing our economic success. In undertaking an apprenticeship, young people know that they will have the skills that are wanted by employers and are relevant to the local economy, and as such, they will have enhanced prospects of good earnings and sustained employment.

I have actively been encouraging and facilitating the development of higher level apprenticeships, enabling young people to benefit from working with important employers in Northern Ireland, as well as gaining a recognised qualification at level four or above.

My Department offers a guarantee of a training place through its Training for Success programme for all unemployed 16-17 year old school leavers with extended eligibility for those with a disability and from an in-care background. The programme is designed to enable participants to progress to higher level training, further education, or employment by providing training to address personal and social development needs, develop occupational skills and employability skills and, where necessary, Essential Skills in literacy, numeracy and ICT.

The Department is currently taking forward a review of youth training. The focus of this work is the development of a new youth training scheme at level 2 which is of sufficient breadth and depth to enable young people to progress to an apprenticeship programme at level 3, a level 3 further education programme, or into sustained employment. The scheme will be available to 16–17 year old school leavers who are not in employment, and 16–24 for those already in employment. The review's findings are due to be published later this year.

The Department's 'Pathways to Success' Strategy has a particular focus on helping those young people who face barriers to participation, while also dovetailing with complementary proposals to tackle the wider problem of youth unemployment in the current challenging economic context.

The Youth Employment Scheme was introduced in July 2012. This is a voluntary scheme designed to help young people aged between 18 and 24 years to develop the employability skills needed to get a job by active participation in a work setting with an employer or a voluntary organisation.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what consideration has been given to the clauses relevant to his Department in the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Bill currently progressing through Westminster.

(AQW 36825/11-15)

Dr Farry: My officials have reviewed the content of the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment (SBEE) Bill. A majority of its provisions deal with non-devolved matters and have UK wide application; my Department's interest is confined to those clauses in Part 11 of the SBEE Bill which deal with devolved policy areas (whistleblowing, employment tribunals and zero hours contracts), and therefore do not apply to Northern Ireland.

I have recently circulated an Executive paper on my Department's review of employment law which sets out some policy proposals in relation to whistleblowing and also gives a commitment to monitoring the effect of the additional proposals (clause 135) included in the SBEE Bill.

I do not intend to bring forward legislation to restrict the number of employment tribunal postponements (clause 137); effective case management within Northern Ireland's industrial tribunals and the Fair Employment Tribunal already addresses this issue. I do, however, intend that the proposal to introduce financial penalties for failure to pay tribunal awards (clause 136) will be included in the upcoming public consultation on employment tribunal rules and procedures.

My Department has very recently concluded a public consultation on the use of exclusivity clauses in zero hours contracts. If the feedback from the consultation supports the need to amend the existing legislation (whether comparable to clause 139 or otherwise), I will seek to include these provisions in the Employment Bill which I intend, with Executive agreement, to introduce in spring 2015.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he is aware of the situation whereby young people in Beechcroft Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service inpatient unit are being denied access to education if they are enrolled in further education; and if so, what steps are being taken to ensure that this situation is remedied.

(AQW 36891/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have been advised that when a young person is admitted to Beechcroft and they are enrolled on a further education course within a further education college, the health staff link with the relevant college and careers adviser to put in place a plan for stages of their admission.

The outcomes of this plan can depend on the geographical location of the college and the subject that is being undertaken – some practical subjects cannot be taken outside of the college.

However close links are maintained, to ensure the young person can get back into study as soon as possible with intensive support from Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service (CAMHS) and liaison with the further education college to support recovery.

I can advise that further education colleges have a range of support services, including learning support, financial support and counselling, available to students with underlying illnesses through colleges' pastoral care arrangements and the Department's Additional Support Fund.

Students, whose attendance at college is adversely affected as a result of illness, may be given access to course materials via the virtual learning environment to facilitate remote study. Students in this situation may also have their timetables adjusted to allow more flexible study modes and, where possible, could be permitted to re-sit modules or repeat years.

I can also confirm my Departments careers advisers have a partnership agreement in place with Beechcroft to ensure young people within the unit have access to appropriate careers guidance. This agreement allows Beechcroft, in consultation with the careers adviser, the opportunity to select from a suite of services appropriate to the needs of its young people.

Careers services are then delivered as complementary to the careers education programme and appropriate to the individual's career planning needs.

Working with multi-disciplinary teams including professionals from education and health e.g. teachers, psychiatrists, therapists and psychologists, the careers adviser contributes to the young person's career plans by providing impartial careers guidance on the range of educational, training and employment opportunities available to them.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the architectural value of the Orpheus building in Belfast, given the proposals by the University of Ulster to demolish the building as part of their development and the recommendation by the Department for the Environment that the building should be retained.

(AQW 36892/11-15)

Dr Farry: This is a matter for the Department of the Environment's Planning Service which has responsibility for delivery of planning functions and the development and delivery of planning policy and legislation. I understand that the Orpheus Building is not a listed building or within a Conservation Area.

However, I understand that the University followed due process in being awarded planning permission for the approved development scheme at the Belfast campus, which includes the demolition of the Orpheus Building.

Interested parties were able to make representations to the planning authorities as part of the planning process.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 36918/11-15)

Dr Farry: There are 4 Information Officers employed in press functions, 3 Information Officers employed in marketing functions and one Information Officer (part-time) employed in internal communications. There are 7 administrative staff employed in providing support for advertising, marketing, publications, event management, internet, social media, intranet, finance and web administration functions.

The annual cost of this service is £518,696.79.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by his Department which (i) he has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36949/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department at October 2014 has no budgetary pressures which are truly inescapable. The Department continues to manage within its allocated budget for 2014-15.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department is taking to address gender disparity in the Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services sector.

(AQW 37017/11-15)

Dr Farry: I recognise that gender imbalance is a key issue across many sectors, including Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services and as a result, there are a number of things my Department has been doing to address this.

Since November 2012, my Department has been funding the post of STEM Business Co-Ordinator to support the STEM Business Subgroup in their task of implementing the recommendations of the Success through STEM Strategy, one of which is to address the issue of gender bias.

To help with this and to promote STEM subjects and careers among females, a report was published in November 2013 entitled "Gender Imbalance – Reaping the Gender Dividend in STEM". The report contains good practice guidelines and a Northern Ireland STEM CEO Charter.

The Equality Commission and STEM Business Subgroup launched a STEM equality charter in June 2014. Companies are urged to sign up to this charter to demonstrate their commitment to improving gender imbalance in their business.

It should be noted that to date, 24 employers have signed up to the STEM Employers Equality Network run by the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland. This Network has been set up to support the charter and implement good practice and held its first meeting on 25 September 2014. A good practice manual has been agreed and published on the Equality Commission website.

Also in 2012, I established the Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services Working Group to consider how issues related to skills in this sector can be addressed. This Group, which I chair, brings together government, academia and local employers to identify specific skills needs and develop appropriate solutions through an agreed Action Plan.

I launched the Action Plan for this sector in April 2014 with actions designed to enhance the skills of the workforce, maximise employment opportunities and give the local industry a competitive edge in the global marketplace.

One of the areas identified for action was the low number of females working in the sector. My officials have worked closely with the STEM Business Co-Ordinator to develop and implement a number of activities to address the gender imbalance in the Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services industry. For example:

In September I launched the concept of industry-led STEM scholarships in the fields of Computing and Engineering to attract and retain top graduate talent. The Computing and Engineering Scholarship Programme is open to both genders and there will be up to a maximum of 40 students undertaking a STEM scholarship (20 in Computing and 20 in Engineering). Applications are particularly welcome from females.

A 'Leaders in Industry' programme for the sector is being developed with Queens University Belfast for possible inclusion on my Departments Management and Leadership Development suite of programmes. Applications from females will be particularly welcome.

A project titled 'Upskills to compete' has been funded by my Department to develop potential female workers to progress their careers from 20 SMEs and four larger companies starting in April 2014. This will involve the production of 24 employer STEM diversity plans, ten role models and ten case studies. It will promote STEM subjects to 1000 schoolgirls showcasing the existing opportunities in a career in the sector by 31 March 2015. The first cohort to undertake the Career Advance Progression four day programme is underway with the 2nd cohort due to commence later this month.

My Department's industry partners on the Working Group have completed a benchmarking survey to determine perceptions and awareness levels of career opportunities in the industry among teachers, parents and pupils. A bespoke and targeted sector attractiveness strategy which aims to inform young people and their key influencers about the wide range of quality career options that are available across the sector has been developed and a number of initiatives are underway such as building relationships between industry and local education providers.

In partnership with Bombardier and Belfast Metropolitan College, my Department funded an Aerospace Summer School to promote the STEM agenda within an area of strategic importance to the local economy. 30 young people, aged 16 to 24 participated in this programme which engaged students in hands-on activities which demonstrate the science, technology and engineering in the world of flight and is designed to match their needs and inspire participants to consider entry level jobs in Aero Technology in the sector. There was a very strong female participation.

My Department funded a visit of 23 of Northern Ireland's top STEM students and apprentices (which included a strong female representation) to attend 'Futures Day' at Farnborough International Airshow in July. This included the NI Rocket Challenge winners Rainey Endowed School (a co-ed grammar school) and the Group is working towards expanding this particular initiative to include more schools from seven in 2014 to fourteen in 2015.

The UK Aerospace Youth Rocketry Challenge will be expanded to include more schools and raise the profile of this initiative. There were seven schools involved in 2014 and it is hoped this will double to fourteen in 2015. This initiative will ensure that more female pupils become aware of various aspects of the sector and crucially gain practical experience which may influence their career choices.

There is a programme of STEM activities currently being delivered in primary schools by Sentinus via their contract with the Department of Education. As the largest STEM outreach provider in Northern Ireland for schools and young people, Sentinus aims to increase awareness and interest in engineering. The Department of Education is an active member of the Working Group.

To specifically raise the profile of the sector amongst pupils at Year 8 and beyond the Working Group aims to utilise existing Ambassador networks and intends that oversee 60 schools visited by Ambassadors from the sector by March 2016. Ambassadors are put forward by employers because of their ability to communicate with and "sell" the sector to young people.

In July 2014, my Department arranged for eight students from further education colleges in Northern Ireland to attend a two week STEM summer camp at Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Massachusetts in. Four of the eight students who attended the camp were female and studied the 'Women's Leadership Academy' strand of the FRONTIERS programme.

I believe this shows that my Department through the work of the Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services Working Group is actively addressing the issue of gender imbalance and I trust this reply reassures you that there is and will continue to be a strong focus on gender disparity in this sector.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what funding his Department provides to the Kilcooley Women's Education Centre in Bangor.

(AQW 37073/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department is not directly funding Kilcooley Women's Education Centre in Bangor.

However, under the Collaboration and Innovation Fund, aimed at addressing issues associated with young people not in education, employment or training, the Training for Women Network (TWN) secured funding of £770,067 for the 'Gateway to Progression' project to help 440 young women in this category; Kilcooley Women's Education Centre is one of eight community centres collaborating to deliver this project and received £30,643.38 from TWN to fund activities during the 2013/14 financial year.

TWN has also secured funding from the Northern Ireland European Social Fund Programme 2007-2013 for their 'Advancement of Women' project, which delivers training to women across Northern Ireland via 12 regional partner organisations; Kilcooley Women's Education Centre is one of the 12 participant organisations benefiting from the funding, which includes £711,847 (European Social Fund) and £444,905 contribution by my Department over the two year period 2013/14 – 2014/15. The Centre received £110,570.67 from TWN to fund 'Advancement of Women' activities during 2013/14 which included £27,642.67 from my Department and £44,228.27 from the European Social Fund.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the timescale for the development of the Belfast Metropolitan College campus at Girdwood.

(AQW 37119/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Girdwood Community Hub in North Belfast is a Belfast City Council project which is being supported with European PEACE III funding. Belfast Metropolitan College is not involved in the construction stage of the project but, on its completion, plans to lease part of the resource for the delivery of further education. I understand that construction of the Community Hub facility began in March of this year and it is anticipated this will be completed by July 2015, however the detailed timetable for the delivery of the facility is the responsibility of the Belfast City Council.

The Belfast Metropolitan College is currently negotiating the leasing arrangements for their engagement in the facility and hopes to begin the delivery of community education and training by September 2015.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 36050/11-15, how many people enrolled in the same or similar schemes in the Northern Regional College in each of the two preceding years.

(AQW 37138/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the full academic year 2011/12, there were 152 starts on Apprenticeships NI at Northern Regional College, and the equivalent figure for the full academic year 2012/13 is 197.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 35533/11-15, to detail (i) the amount invested in each fund; and (ii) the amount each fund is worth at present, or on the date the fund closed.

(AQW 36390/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): Invest NI has invested in eight investment funds since 2002. Details are as follows:

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there are any plans to introduce an electricity discount scheme, equivalent to that offered by the Warm Home Discount Scheme in England.

(AQW 36485/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have no plans to implement such a scheme.

The Warm Homes Discount Scheme is a four year scheme operating in Great Britain only and does not apply in Northern Ireland. It closes in March 2015 and I am not aware of any plans to extend or replace the scheme.

The introduction of such a scheme is akin to a social tariff, as energy companies in Northern Ireland would be entitled to pass its costs on to other customers (as they are in Great Britain). As such, the full implications of introducing such a scheme in Northern Ireland would need to be endorsed by the Northern Ireland Executive.

Consideration would have to be given to the proportion of customers to benefit from such a scheme and which customers would pay more as a result.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 35788/11-15, what the Tourist Board's three year marketing sponsorship agreement with Cyclone Promotions will involve; and how it will serve to promote Belfast and Northern Ireland.

(AQW 36539/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The role of the Northern Ireland Tourist Board is to promote Northern Ireland as a tourism destination in the domestic and Republic of Ireland marketplace. The world title fight between Carl Frampton and Kiko Martinez in the custom built venue on the Titanic slipways offered a unique opportunity to showcase one of the most iconic attractions, Titanic Belfast, just four months after the Giro D'Italia Grande Partenza, which also took place on the Titanic slipways, reflecting NITB's positioning of Northern Ireland, The Home of Great Events.

Northern Ireland is also due to host other major sporting events, including the Irish Open Golf Championship in 2015 and 2017 and The Open Championship. In order to leverage the maximum benefit from this series of sporting events, NITB's Sponsorship Agreement with Cyclone Promotions contains the following future benefits beyond the World Title fight event:

- An allocated number of days of both Barry McGuigan & Carl Frampton's time as NI ambassadors and for NITB to use for marketing and PR activity to promote Northern Ireland; and
- Sharing of NITB's social media & digital content through fan bases.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her Department's plans to introduce and facilitate an Innovation Council.

(AQW 36545/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive's Innovation Strategy emphasises that improving Northern Ireland's innovation performance will require long-term sustained leadership at the most senior levels in the private and public sectors. Building on best practice in other higher performing regions the Strategy commits to examine the feasibility of the establishment of a Northern Ireland Innovation Council chaired by the Minister for Enterprise Trade and Investment and including senior representatives of business, the public sector including local government, the third sector and academia.

As part of the implementation of the strategy my officials have commenced work on a detailed review scoping the role and operation of an Innovation Council. This work will include examining the roles of the Executive Sub-Committee on the Economy, the Economic Advisory Group (EAG) and MATRIX, in order to ensure an Innovation Council will complement existing structures and genuinely add value.

A key element of the review will be to ensure that the council does not add another level of bureaucracy and governance. The review should be complete early in 2015 and its findings brought to the Executive Sub-Committee on the Economy as soon as it is completed.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of jobs created by Invest NI assisted projects in each parliamentary constituency in (i) 2011-12; (ii) 2012-13; and (iii) 2013-14.

(AQW 36636/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The table below details the number of jobs created by Invest NI assisted projects in each parliamentary constituency in (i) 2011-12; (ii) 2012-13; and (iii) 2013-14.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) whether the petroleum exploration licence held by Infrastrata PLC in respect of County Antrim imposes any restraint on drilling within the catchment area of North Woodburn Reservoir; (ii) for her assessment of the imminent plan to drill a well within this catchment area; and (iii) what further consents are required to enable the planned drilling of a well at this location to proceed.

(AQW 36762/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) Petroleum licence PL1/10 does not contain a specific restraint on drilling within the catchment of the North Woodburn Reservoir. However, the Licence states that the Licensee "shall not carry out any work within or in close proximity to an Area of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI) without the prior written consent of the Department." North Woodburn Reservoir is an ASSI. In addition, any drilling on a Petroleum Licence requires consent from my Department.
- (ii) On 6 August 2014, DETI received a written request from InfraStrata plc for DETI "Consent to Drill". Departmental officials are continuing to assess this application.
- (iii) DOE Planning has confirmed that the proposed drilling operations fall under Permitted Development Rights.
- (iv) The Licensee is required to consult with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) and the Health & Safety Executive Northern Ireland regarding any potential additional consents required.
- (v) In addition, Northern Ireland Water (NIW), as the licensed public drinking provider, must provide NIEA Drinking Water Inspectorate with a summary drinking water safety plan report of its risk assessments for all water treatment works.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment who is the licensee in respect of petroleum exploration licence PL1/10; and what are the consequences for the licence if the named licensee company loses control through becoming the holder of a mere minority interest.

(AQW 36763/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Petroleum Licence PL1/10 is held by a consortium of companies. The current partner interests in PL1/10 are as follows:

- InfraStrata plc (operator) 45.00%
- Brigantes Energy Limited (40% owned by InfraStrata plc) 45.00%
- Terrain Energy Limited 10.00%

InfraStrata plc is the nominated operator of Licence PL1/10.

Each partner in the Licence bears full joint and several liability under the Licence.

Where a Licensee, or Licensee group, wishes to make an assignment of an interest, or part interest in a Petroleum Licence, they must obtain the written approval of my Department.

Before granting such approval, my Department will carry out checks on the financial viability and where relevant, the technical capacity, of any new partners to meet their liabilities and commitments under the Licence.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in her Department's Information Service.

(AQW 36867/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) There are seven members of staff employed in the Information Service in the Department. This includes three full-time and two part-time Information Officers, and two administrative staff.
- (ii) The annual cost of the staff employed in the 2013/14 financial year was £249,890.00.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by her Department which (i) she has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36881/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI has inescapable Resource pressures in 2014-15 and 2015-16 which are a consequence of the success of Invest NI in delivering jobs and investment projects, and the Tourist Board in delivering a step change in the events Northern Ireland is delivering.

The Department of Finance and Personnel is fully aware of the inescapable nature of these pressures.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why her Department's capital reduced requirements for 2014-15 have totalled £9.5 million.

(AQW 36951/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department's £9.5million capital reduction requirement relates to proposed grant support for development of new natural gas networks to towns in the West of Northern Ireland. In January 2013, the NI Executive agreed up to £32.5million of grant support towards the project.

The Utility Regulator launched a licence competition in February 2014 and on 12 August 2014 announced Mutual Energy and Scotia Gas Networks as the "preferred applicants" for licences to develop the new gas networks. A formal licence award is expected in December 2014 or early 2015.

It had been anticipated that the licence competition and award process would be completed earlier, which would have allowed grant payments to commence in 2014-15. However additional time was required to effect changes to the Gas (Applications for Licences and Extensions) Regulations, and for the Regulator to complete the administrative processes associated with the licence competition.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) what income was received from the sale of the former Seagate factory near Limavady; (ii) what provision was made in the event of the new owners ceasing to trade; and (iii) what is the current state of ownership of this asset.

(AQW 37018/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The site of the former Seagate factory site at Dowland Road in Limavady extends to some 16.8 acres and was sold by the Industrial Development Board to the company in 1997. The transaction, which totalled £5,000,000, was by way of a restrictive 999 year lease and restricts the usage of the factory to industrial and commercial endeavours.

Whilst Invest NI has not had any involvement in any onward transactions it understands that the facility is currently owned by a consortium of local businesspeople. The agency is, however, currently marketing the facility on behalf of the agent, Lambert Smith Hampton, through the NI Business Information website.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of new jobs promoted through inward investment projects supported by Invest NI during the 2013/14 financial year, broken down by council area; and what each figure represents as a percentage of the total number of new jobs promoted by inward investment projects during that period.

(AQW 37051/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The table below details the number of new jobs promoted through inward investment projects supported by Invest NI during the 2013/14 financial year, broken down by council area; and what each figure represents as a percentage of the total number of new jobs promoted by inward investment projects that have secured a location during that period.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many of the jobs promoted by Invest NI in each council area during the 2013/14 financial year offer a salary which is (i) less than 25 per cent above; and (ii) 25 per cent or more than the average private sector wage, expressed as a number and a percentage of all the new jobs promoted by inward investment projects during this period.

(AQW 37052/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Information is provided in the table below which provides the number of jobs promoted by Invest NI in 2013-14 which have salaries (i) less than 25 percent above; and (ii) 25 percent or more above the average private sector wage. The baseline is the Northern Ireland Private Sector Median (NI PSM). The information is presented by District Council Area, and is also expressed as a percentage of the total number of new jobs in projects that have secured a location during that period.

These do not include those jobs promoted by the Jobs Fund or the Regional Start Initiative, since these programmes do not have job quality targets. It should also be noted that as previously stated in AQW 32727/11-15 Invest NI does not have a Programme for Government target to promote jobs with average salaries 25% above the NI PSM. The target only relates to the number above the NI PSM.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what research was conducted to justify the cuts to major events such as the Belfast Culture Night and Belfast Mela.

(AQW 37175/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive has not yet determined Departmental budgets for 2015/16 but the overall financial position for the Northern Ireland Block is forecast to be very difficult. It is on this basis that applications are not being sought for the Events Fund for National Sponsorship Scheme and new International Events in 2015/16.

International events which have a current letter of offer from NITB which extends into 2015/16 will not be impacted by this decision.

Events remain a priority for NITB and we will endeavour to source budget for future years.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what communication her Department has had with other major manufacturers about creating employment for JTI Gallaher workers who will be made redundant.

(AQW 37198/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Following JTI's announcement to initiate a 90-day consultation on a proposal to close its manufacturing facility in Ballymena by May 2016, Minister Farry and I met with representatives from the Company to discuss how we might help those who will be affected by this decision. We are working across Government, Industry and Academia to ensure that all available means of support is made available to those employees who may lose their jobs in the event that the decision to close is taken by Japan Tobacco.

Over the past 6 months, I have announced almost 1,500 new jobs across a range of manufacturing and processing companies in different parts of Northern Ireland. Invest NI has been in contact with a number of these, and other major manufacturing companies, to alert them to this situation should they wish to avail of the transferable world class manufacturing skills of the Ballymena workforce at the appropriate time.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the total economic return from the events which receive funding from the Northern Ireland Tourist Board Events Fund; and for her assessment of the impact on the local economy in the wake of this funding being withdrawn.

(AQW 37409/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) assumed responsibility for the events function in 2010 there has not been a Budget exercise to allow for an appropriate dedicated budget to be established for events. As a result NITB has always relied on in year monitoring to meet its commitments for events funding.

The Executive has not yet determined Departmental budgets for 2015/16 but the overall financial position for the Northern Ireland Block is forecast to be very difficult. It is on this basis that applications are not being sought for the Events Fund for National Sponsorship Scheme and new International Events in 2015/16.

In the financial year 2014/15 NITB funded 63 National events under the Tourism Events Sponsorship Scheme and 13 International events under the International Tourism Events Fund with a total contribution from NITB of £2.8million.

Based on the information provided by event organisers in the application process, the 76 events are projected to:

- Generate a £12:£1 return for every £1 invested by NITB; and
- To attract 2.2million visitors.

NITB is in the process of completing independent economic evaluations for 10 of these events.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of David Cameron's statement regarding the devolution of further economic levers and the potential impact for economic growth.

(AQO 6827/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am pleased that the Prime Minister referenced Northern Ireland in his statement following the Scottish referendum.

For us, the focus remains on securing the lever with the greatest economic impact and where there is a clear rationale for devolution, which is of course Corporation Tax powers where decisions are due shortly.

We should be careful not to get distracted by powers in areas where we have no plans to exercise them in order to achieve a clear fiscal, economic or policy aim. We must also not lose sight of the need to develop those areas already within our control, such as skills and infrastructure, which are essential for supporting both local and foreign investment.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in light of the current import ban being imposed by Russia on European agricultural and food products, what action she is taking to open up new markets for dairy products to alleviate pressure on the local dairy industry.

(AQO 6828/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The local dairy industry is very important to the economy of Northern Ireland, and I am greatly concerned at the action of the Russian Government in banning European agricultural and food products.

In August I wrote to Elizabeth Truss MP, Secretary of State for DEFRA to express my concern and the impact it would have on our dairy sector in particular.

Russia is very much an emerging market for our food exporters and we would see much greater potential in other emerging territories such as UAE, and in building on our already strong performance in Europe.

I recently led a successful trade delegation to the Emirates and, as a result of which, local dairy companies have now received confirmed orders.

Last week Invest NI led a best practice visit for twenty four local dairy sector representatives to the US. One of the objectives of this visit was to identify new market opportunities that might be exploited.

Invest NI continues to invest in the dairy sector and in the last year, I announced two major expansion projects for Dale Farm and Ballyrashane Creamery in order to ensure they remain globally competitive and ready to avail of new market opportunities.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what progress has been made in ensuring that Northern Ireland has legacy events following the Giro d'Italia Big Start.

(AQO 6829/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The highly anticipated Grande Partenza of the Giro d'Italia was a tremendous success – showcasing our spectacular scenery to a potential seven hundred and seventy five million viewers in one hundred and sixty four countries across the world.

NITB and Tourism Ireland will continue to capitalise on the success of this event by highlighting Northern Ireland as a top cycling and outdoor activities destination in both their promotional activity and by Tourism Ireland at events linked to the Giro such as the Gran Fondo in Italy in 2014; and at other international cycling events and outdoor activity shows.

NITB is working closely with RCS, owners of the Giro, in terms of delivering a Giro Sportive currently known as Gran Fondo to Northern Ireland from 2015 onwards and it is hoped that I will be in a position to provide an update on this shortly.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact that lowering the VAT rate on accommodation and hospitality would have on tourism.

(AQO 6830/11-15)

Mrs Foster: VAT is not a devolved matter, and as such, it is for the Treasury to determine VAT rates.

I will continue to lobby the Exchequer to reduce VAT rates across the whole of the UK.

Any reduction in the VAT rate for the accommodation and hospitality sectors, if passed on to consumers by way of reduced costs, could result in increased demand for our tourism offerings.

A report of the impact of the VAT rate reduction for the tourism sector in the Republic of Ireland indicated that the introduction of the reduced VAT rate appears to have met its original aims of driving employment and stimulating activity in the sector and has achieved this without placing a significant burden on the Irish exchequer.

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her proposals to enhance business and industrial development in the border region.

(AQO 6831/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department and Invest NI provide a range of financial and advisory support to entrepreneurs, start-ups and existing businesses in the border regions and throughout Northern Ireland to help start and grow their businesses. Indeed, forty five percent of Invest NI's assistance offered between 1st April 2011 and 31st March 2014 was directed at businesses located within the border counties.

In addition to this, we work with a range of other partners to enhance the offering to local businesses. For example, working with councils through the Local Economic Development Measure, with DARD through its Rural Development Programme, encouraging the exploitation of appropriate European funds, and InterTradeIreland through its suite of programmes to broaden export and growth in SMEs and micro businesses. Twenty seven percent, of the businesses participating in InterTradeIreland programmes in the period 2011-2013 came from border counties.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the Northern Ireland Spin Out funds.

(AQO 6832/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Spin Out funds, NISPO, suite of funds completed its investment period in March 2014, investing eight point three million pounds in forty five equity deals. Two hundred and sixty Proof of Concept offers have also been made. The NISPO portfolio will continue to be managed until 2019.

In July 2014 I announced the launch of techstart NI, the follow on seed and early stage fund, and issued a press release on the 2nd October 2014 announcing that fund manager, Pentech Ventures LLP, has made its first two investments in local SMEs. The fund manager has also offered eleven Proof of Concept grants and held a number of Investment Awareness events.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the causes of the inescapable financial pressures currently facing her Department.

(AQO 6833/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI's inescapable pressures are a consequence of the success of Invest NI in delivering jobs and investment projects and the Tourist Board in delivering a step change in the events Northern Ireland is delivering.

Invest NI are experiencing pressures as a result of companies taking forward jobs and growth projects which had been on hold as a result of the downturn in the economy. In addition, Invest NI's performance in 2013-14 was outstanding, with its highest ever level of offers for jobs, capital investment and investment in R&D. The Invest NI projects should ultimately deliver four thousand one hundred jobs and forty six million pound investment in R&D. Invest NI has continued to deliver investment projects in 2014-15, and the current inescapable financial pressures reflect the multi-year nature of Invest NI's business.

The pressures in NITB are as a result of Northern Ireland attracting world class events such as the Open, the Irish Open, the Giro d'Italia, Tall Ships, the Milk Cup and the Northwest 200, which will support the delivery of Programme for Government targets for generating visitor numbers and spend.

At a time when we are facing pressures from positive developments in business investment and tourism, it is inexcusable that all Departments are also being impacted by the failure to implement Welfare Reform which is costing Northern Ireland £87million this year.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what support her Department has provided to promote the tourism potential in the Banbridge area.

(AQO 6834/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Banbridge District Council was successful in securing financial assistance of forty five thousand pounds for the relocation and fit-out of the Tourist Information Centre through the 2011 – 2013 Tourism Development Scheme. The project involved moving the Tourist Information Centre to the Old Town Hall, a more central location beside the bus station and car parks.

NITB has invested one hundred and twenty seven thousand, five hundred pounds in the three phases of the Mourne Public Art Programme. An element of each of these phases is located within the Banbridge District Council area.

NITB has been working with Banbridge District Council to develop and deliver the St. Patrick's/Christian Heritage Signature Project and The Mournes Signature Project.

More recently, Banbridge District Council has been working with Down and Newry & Mourne District Councils to develop a Tourism Destination Plan for the Mourne Mountains. The Plan is now in place and supported by a Tourism Forum comprising local public and private sector tourism bodies and businesses. NITB has facilitated, advised and supported the development and delivery of the Plan.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board in 2011/12; 2012/13 and 2013/14 received over two hundred and forty applications to the Tourism Events Funding Programme. During this period only one application was received from event organisers in the Banbridge District Council area.

This application was unsuccessful in securing funding through the events fund.

Department of the Environment

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether the process of completing a medical assessment of drivers who are seeking a return of their driving licence has been impacted by the removal of vehicle licensing from Coleraine.

(AQW 36150/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): The administration of driver licensing in Northern Ireland is a devolved matter which is the responsibility of my Department and is delivered by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) through its offices in Coleraine.

Only the vehicle registration and licensing function, which is a UK matter falling under the responsibility of the Department for Transport, was centralised in Swansea in July 2014 by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency.

There is no change to the process of completing a medical assessment in relation to an application for a driving licence.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to video footage taken by enforcement staff at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013, to clarify the job description of the person who requested and subsequently authorised it; and why it was deemed necessary.

(AQW 36336/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA) Directed Surveillance Application was submitted by a Senior Traffic Examiner to the Head of Enforcement for consideration. This was deemed necessary as there was potential that personal information could be collected during a planned assessment of taxi services operating at Ravenhill Rugby Ground.

The use of video equipment was approved by the Higher Professional and Technical Officer who was the officer in charge at the scene and was considered necessary to assist with the gathering and collation of information.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of Centralised Anaerobic Digester plants; and to detail any restrictions on where a plant can be located in relation to a residential area.

(AQW 36475/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I support the development of a diverse range of renewable technologies to ensure the most cost-effective and reliable mix of generation that maximises Northern Ireland's sustainable energy resources. I believe that Centralised Anaerobic Digestion (CAD) plants have a role to play in this energy mix, subject to meeting the necessary planning policy and environmental requirements.

Policy RE1 of Planning Policy Statement 18 'Renewable Energy' states that development which generates energy from renewable resources will be permitted provided the proposal, and any associated buildings and infrastructure, will not result in an unacceptable adverse impact on public safety, human health, or residential amenity; visual amenity and landscape character; biodiversity, nature conservation or built heritage interests; local natural resources, such as air quality or water quality and public access to the countryside.

Proposals for CAD plants will be expected to be located at, or as close as possible to, the source of the resource needed for that particular technology, unless, in the case of a combined heat and power scheme or a biomass heating scheme, it can be demonstrated that the benefits of the scheme outweigh the need for transportation and an end user is identified.

Depending upon the nature of a proposal it may also be considered a waste management/ waste collection and treatment facility in which the relevant policies of PPS 11 'Planning and Waste Management' may also apply.

In the case of a CAD plant it is also likely that a proposal would be required to comply with a number of other consents and authorisation regimes including DETI consent for electricity generation over 10MW; an abstraction licence; a waste management licence and an Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control permit.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how many times, since 2009, has an individual or non-governmental organisation exercised their third party rights of intervention under Article 22 of the Environmental Liability (Prevention and Remediation) Regulations (NI) 2009; and what recourse exists if an individual considers the Department's response to be inadequate.

(AQW 36580/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department received two notices from third parties exercising their rights of intervention under Article 12 of the European Directive 2004/35/EC – Environmental Liability (transposed into domestic law in by the Environmental Liability (Prevention and Remediation Regulations (NI) 2009) on 24 September 2014 and 3 October 2014.

Under the Regulations any person who is likely to be affected by environmental damage, or otherwise has a sufficient interest may notify the Department of any environmental damage which is likely to occur, is occurring or has already happened. The Department must consider the notification and decide what course of action should be undertaken and inform the person of that decision. If the notifier (who for the purposes of the legislation may be a member of an organisation, or the organisation itself) is dissatisfied with the Department's response they may seek a judicial review of the decision on what action, if any, the Department intends to take.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning enforcement cases have been issued in Fermanagh and South Tyrone in (i) each calendar year since 2011; and (ii) 2014; and of these cases, how many have been concluded, broken down by council area.

(AQW 36583/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department does not hold information relating to Enforcement cases in such a way that it can be reported at constituency level. Therefore, the information provided relates to the Local Government Districts of Fermanagh and Dungannon and South Tyrone.

Table 1 outlines the number of Enforcement notices that have been issued in Fermanagh District and Dungannon & South Tyrone District in each calendar year since 2011 (up to June 2014). Table 2 details the number of enforcement notices that have been closed in the same districts over the same time period.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment, following the transfer of Driver and Vehicle Agency functions to Swansea, which public sector body in Northern Ireland will take the lead in carrying out activities previously carried out by the Roadside Enforcement Initiative.

(AQW 36629/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle Licensing is an excepted matter, which is the responsibility of the Secretary for Transport. It was previously administered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA), however this agreement was terminated and the service transferred to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea on 21 July 2014. The DVLA has responsibility for all enforcement activity relating to vehicle licensing offences, however, the DVA provide staff to operate the roadside cameras and present prosecution cases in court on their behalf.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the enforcement measures for non-compliance contained within the Bus Compliance Audit Process.

(AQW 36632/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The enforcement measures used to address non-compliance within the Bus Compliance Audit process include the administering of advice and guidance, prohibition action, prosecution action and referral of cases to Driver & Vehicle Agency's Passenger Transport Licensing Division for consideration under its operator licensing suspension and revocation arrangements.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the revenue generated from MOT centres, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 36684/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The total revenue generated from MOT centres, for vehicle tests and practical driving tests, in each of the last two financial years is as follows:

- 2012/13 £31,865,000
- 2013/14 £32,459,000

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on wind farm applications in North Antrim, including how many have been (a) approved; and (b) refused in the last ten years; and how many are currently in the planning system.

(AQW 36704/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the last ten years, the Department has granted planning approval for 17 wind farms and refused planning permission for one wind farm in North Antrim. The Department currently has 5 planning applications for wind farms in North Antrim within the planning system namely Elginny Wind Farm (G/2011/0041/F), Whappstown Wind Farm (G/2011/0052/F), Castlegore Wind Farm (G/2011/0136/F), Rathsherry Wind Farm (G/2011/0162/F) and Carnalbanagh Wind Farm (G/2014/0182/F).

The processing of these five planning applications is ongoing. In the case of the proposed Elginny and Rathsherry Wind Farms, I have instructed my planning officials to undertake a review of these planning applications and keep me informed of their findings prior to making a final recommendation.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35226/11-15, whether he regards meetings of the Committee for the Environment as being in the public domain; and whether his concerns could be allayed by having the footage shown to the Committee in camera.

(AQW 36705/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Information gathered by my Department as part of an investigatory process is considered under relevant legislation to be protected from disclosure for as long as the information exists. This is in order to protect the integrity of the investigatory process and ensure fairness to all individuals involved in that process. It therefore follows that my concerns could not be allayed by having the footage shown to the Committee in camera.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of visitors to (i) Crawfordsburn Country Park; and (ii) The Fort in Helen's Bay; in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36710/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Visitor numbers at NIEA properties are recorded by calendar year as required by NITB. The numbers of visitors to Crawfordsburn Country Park in each of the last five years are as follows:

Table 1: Visitor numbers to Crawfordsburn Country Park

Year	Visitor numbers
2009	795,500
2010	750,000
2011	775,000
2012	800,000
2013	826,893

Visitor numbers to Grey Point Fort prior to 2013 were not separately recorded. Recording at this site commenced in 2013. Details of visitor numbers to the site in 2013 and 2014 (up to 30/9/14) are as follows:

Table 2: Visitor numbers to Grey Point Fort

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment, given that his Department had to remove Sinn Féin posters in Lagan Valley following the elections in May 2014, to detail the cost incurred by his Department and whether Sinn Féin has been invoiced for this cost.

(AQW 36739/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1992 allow election posters relating to pending Parliamentary, European Parliamentary, Northern Ireland Assembly or district council elections to be displayed

It is the Department of the Environment's planning practice to write to all political parties prior to elections, advising of the regulations for the display of election posters. It is a condition of the Regulations that all election posters are to be removed within 14 days after the close of the relevant poll to which they relate.

DoE Planning has not received any allegations of a breach of planning control relating to elections posters in the Lagan Valley constituency. As a consequence, posters were removed by DOE Planning and no costs have been incurred.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what percentage of his Department's resource budget is provided as grants to local councils.

(AQW 36757/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Grants to Local Councils represent 38.7% of my Department's opening non ring fenced net resource baseline budget for 2014-15.

The majority of the grants paid to Councils relate to the De-rating Grant and the Rates Support Grant which together represent 37.3% of my Department's opening non ring fenced net resource baseline budget for 2014-15.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the (i) general; (ii) resource; and (iii) other grants provided by his Department to local councils, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36764/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Annex A attached provides the information requested.

For information purposes, the General Grant to Local Councils consisted of the Resources and De-Rating Grants up to March 2012. Since April 2012, the General Grant is now referred to as two separate grants i.e. the De-Rating Grant and the Rates Support Grant (previously referred to as the Resources Grant). Both the De-Rating Grant and the Rates Support Grant details are included at Annex A.

Please note that a copy of this document will be placed in the Assembly Library.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 28954/11-15, whether the functions of each class of taxi are permitted as stated; and why private hire vehicles and public hire vehicles outside Belfast are breaking rules within Belfast City limits with impunity.

(AQW 36780/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There has been no change to the permitted usage of taxis since my response to AQW 28954/11-15.

The Department accepts that there are instances of licensed private hire taxis picking up passengers without a pre-booking within Belfast City limit. As such, DVA will continue to deploy a regular enforcement resource in Belfast to target the problem, which during the first six months of 2014 resulted in 81 drivers being issued with £30 Fixed Penalty Notices.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how many occasions Regulation 13(I) of the 1985 PSV Regulations has been endorsed/enforced on any licence since its introduction in 1985.

(AQW 36783/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has never endorsed or imposed such a condition on a PSV Vehicle Licence.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Call-In Procedure can be used in Shadow Councils.

(AQW 36803/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Section 41 of the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 (the 2014 Act), which makes provision for members to request the reconsideration (call-in) of a council decision in specified circumstances, was brought into operation by Commencement Order from 2 June 2014 and is therefore available to members of a new council during the shadow period.

Section 41 also requires a council to make provision in its standing orders to require the clerk to the council to obtain the opinion of a practicing barrister or solicitor where the call-in has been requested on the grounds that the decision would disproportionately affect adversely any section of the inhabitants of the district. Section 37 of the Act, which also came into operation on 2 June 2014, places a duty on a council to make standing orders for the regulation of the proceedings and business of the council. A council, during the shadow period, is therefore under a statutory duty to make provision for the call-in procedure. In addition, the Local Government (Transitional, Supplementary, Incidental Provisions and Modifications)

Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014 specify that a council's standing orders must include provision that a qualified majority is required in relation to a council's decision on a call-in made on the ground of disproportionate adverse impact.

Section 38 of the Act provides the Department with an enabling power to specify in Regulations those provisions that a council must incorporate in its standing orders i.e. mandatory standing orders. As I indicated during the Local Government Bill's passage in the Assembly, my Department intends that the call-in procedure will be specified, in Regulations made under section 38, as a mandatory aspect of a council's standing orders that this will ensure a consistent procedure across all the councils. Responses to a consultation on my Department's proposals for the draft Local Government (Standing Order) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014 and model standing orders are currently under consideration. It is my intention to lay the draft Regulations, which are subject to the draft affirmative procedure, in the Assembly at the earliest opportunity.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment how Shadow Councils can adopt the Call-In Procedure.
(AQW 36804/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the differences between Public Service Vehicles Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1985 and the new proposed taxi regulation.
(AQW 36860/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The differences are as follows:

- the Taxi Vehicle Licence Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014 (the regulations) will be made under the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 (the Act) rather than the Road Traffic Order (Northern Ireland) 1981 (the Order);
- Four new taxi classifications will replace the categories outlined in regulation 7(6) of the Public Service Vehicles Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1985 (the 1985 regulations). These are:
  - Class A - (non-wheelchair accessible taxis) – will be permitted to ply or carry passengers for hire or reward and stand at stands outside the Belfast Local Government District. Taxi plates must be displayed on the new specified roof signage;
    - Class B – wheelchair accessible taxis licensed used to ply for hire or reward, carry passengers for hire or reward, or stand at all taxi stands. Taxi plates must be displayed on the new specified roof signage including the international wheelchair symbol, and a wheelchair symbol must be displayed on the door intended for access by wheelchair users.
    - Class C - licensed taxi used to carry passengers for hire or reward but only when a booking is made in advance and a journey form is carried in the vehicle. These may include weddings, chauffeurs and funeral cars amongst others. It may not ply for hire or reward or stand at taxi stands. This taxi is not permitted to display roof signage but is required to display a plate on the bottom left (nearside) of the front windscreen; and
    - Class D - this class of taxi will replace the current taxibus category and will be permitted to carry passengers for hire or reward, but only when issued with a road service licence under the Transport Act (NI) 1967 or a permit under the Transport Act (NI) 2011. This taxi is not permitted to display roof signage but is required to display a plate on the bottom left (nearside) of the front windscreen.
    - the roof sign specifications will change as follows. They will be required:
      - to hold a taxi plate provided by the Department that is to be affixed to the nearside of the front and offside of the rear of the sign;
        - to be a minimum of 125mm tall;
        - not to project more than 250mm above the highest part of the car;
        - to be a minimum of 750mm wide;
        - not to overhang the roof;

- to display to the front on a yellow background in clear and legible black letters the name or trading name of the licensed operator or the word Taxi;
  - to display to the rear on a yellow background in clear and legible black letters a telephone number or the word Taxi;
  - to be illuminated internally during hours of darkness to show a steady yellow light to the front and rear; and
  - if the taxi is a Class B taxi, the roof sign shall include a wheelchair symbol.
- there will be an inspection of the hire and reward insurance certification of the taxi;
  - the City of Belfast will be defined as being Belfast Local Government District;
  - unless previously licensed as a PSV, all Class A, B and D taxis must be M1 type approved; and
  - the current regulations around the following items (the majority relating to buses) will not be carried forward into the new regulations:
    - conduct of drivers;
    - duties of drivers;
    - smoking; and
    - conduct of passengers.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 34144/11-15, how many Fixed Penalty Notices have been rescinded by departmental officials, detailing the reasons and by whom, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36861/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There have been no Fixed Penalty Notices rescinded by Departmental officials in the last twelve months.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement had any contact with the PSNI regarding ongoing taxi problems centred on illegal pick ups by private hire taxis in the area of the Kingspan Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue/Onslow, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36863/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the last twelve months enforcement staff from the Driver & Vehicle Agency have not had any contact with the PSNI regarding illegal pickups by private hire taxis in the area of Kingspan Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue/Onslow.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on wind farm applications in North Down, including the number of applications (a) approved; (b) refused; and (c) currently in the planning system.

(AQW 36875/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the last 10 years, there has been one application for a 3 turbine wind farm in North Down. This was received on 31 December 2010 and subsequently refused permission on 28 July 2011.

There are no other applications for wind farms pending determination in the North Down constituency.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, given his predecessor's commitment to architectural built heritage, why his Department did not follow the recommendation of the landscape architects branch who advised that any proposed development at the new University of Ulster site in Belfast should aim to integrate with the existing architectural language and streetscape in terms of scale, massing and detail and that the Department for the Environment should retain the Orpheus building as part of the University of Ulster development in Belfast.

(AQW 36893/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The new Belfast campus for the University of Ulster (UU) was granted planning permission by the Department on 16 May 2013 (planning permission Z/2012/0361/F, which was accompanied by an Environmental Statement).

In deciding to approve the new campus proposal, and therefore accepting the demolition of the Orpheus building, the Department fully assessed the development proposals, the environmental information contained in the Environmental Statement, the comments of consultees, third party representations and had regard to the relevant planning policy context, the statutory development plan and all other relevant material considerations.

Concerns about the proposed demolition of the Orpheus building were raised by third party representations in relation to this application (including the Ulster Architectural Heritage Society and the Belfast Civic Trust, seeking the retention of the building and internal features and its incorporation within the proposed campus development).

Landscape Architects Branch (LAB) was consulted on 17 April 2012 and responded on 11 May 2012. The role of LAB is not to make a recommendation on the planning application but rather to consider the proposed development and provide any relevant comments for DOE Planning to take into consideration when making its decision. In this case, LAB expressed concern about the potential detrimental impact that the scale and massing of the proposal would have on the existing streetscape character of the area and on the setting of listed buildings. The LAB comments did not state that the Department should retain the Orpheus building as part of the University of Ulster development in Belfast. Their comments were fully considered.

The Northern Ireland Environment Agency, Historic Buildings Unit (NIEA, HBU) was consulted as part of the consideration of the UU campus application. In its response dated 6 June 2012, NIEA confirmed that the building did not satisfy the listing criteria but added that despite this the building remains of architectural and historic interest. The Orpheus Building was considered for listing by NIEA as a result of a request from the public when the intention to relocate the UU was announced. Although it has an interesting ballroom with some good Art Deco ornament, when judged overall, the building did not have sufficient 'special' interest to justify listing.

The building also falls outside any Conservation Area or Area of Townscape Character and is therefore unprotected by any statutory listing / designation. On this basis, even though the building is of acknowledged architectural and historic interest, the Department cannot insist on the retention of the building. Furthermore, the UU design team concluded that the demolition of the Orpheus building to make way for a new build construction was considered to provide flexible, adaptable spaces in line with the University's aspirations. It would enable a variety of spaces to be accommodated within the building and would not limit large areas of floor plates to specific uses. The replacement of the Orpheus building was therefore taken forward as the preferred design option by the University and it was this proposal that my Department had to decide upon.

My Department took into account relevant architectural and built heritage issues and I am satisfied that the decision to approve was the correct decision and will secure a much needed investment of £250 million to this part of the city with enormous economic and social regeneration benefits to Belfast as a whole and the north part of the city in particular.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment how many farmers were detected spreading slurry during the closed period in the last twelve months.
(AQW 36902/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Nitrates Action Programme (Northern Ireland) Regulations 2010 (NAP Regulations) do not permit slurry to be spread from 15 October to 31 January of the following year – commonly referred to as the "closed period". These 15 weeks represent the period when plant growth is minimal and when risk of nutrient leaching is highest. During the 2013/14 closed period there was one confirmed case of spreading slurry.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment how policy making is managed in his Department and if there are any underlying assumptions when formulating policy, including whether a policy should be led by his Department or formulated by local councils; and if not, whether his Department adopts a reactive approach to policy making.
(AQW 36925/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department's remit is broad, including local government policy, a wide range of environmental policy (encompassing matters such as waste, water, air, natural and built heritage and climate change), planning policy, and road safety and vehicle regulation policy. The precise approach to policy making necessarily varies across the different activities. My Department however takes a proactive approach to policy making across the range of its responsibilities, seeking to tackle issues which research and analysis, or developments at a national or European level, show to be priorities for action. The necessary analysis is completed in a number of ways, for instance in the development of documents such as the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy to 2020; in the commissioning of external reviews such as the Mills Review on waste management; in the outworkings of the Review of Public Administration on local government reform; and through stakeholder engagement to inform reforms to the planning system.

In their work, my officials rely on the guidance contained in the Practical Guide to Policy Making in Northern Ireland and my Department's Stakeholder Engagement Strategy, and on close working with the Policy Champions Network. Officials across business areas in my Department come together in a Best Practice Working Group on policy development to ensure that learning is spread across the Department. Recent work of the Best Practice Working Group has included a pilot of e-consultation when consulting on the draft Strategic Planning Policy Statement earlier this year, and the collation of good practice examples in the making of primary and secondary legislation.

In terms of working towards the reform of local government on 1 April 2015, my Department has operated delivery structures and working groups to ensure that the views of both elected representatives and local government officers are taken into account when policies are being developed. This will be strengthened by the establishment of the Partnership Panel, which will provide a forum for policy issues to be considered by both Departments and local government. In certain specified circumstances, policy-making may be council-led and be given effect by my Department in pursuance of a request from a council, for example the making of bye-laws.

The evaluation of the impacts of a policy change is an important part of the policy life cycle, and is taken forward by my officials in line with NICS and OFMDFM guidance. The evaluation and monitoring can take a number of forms, but these will generally be centred on performance against key indicators which are agreed and for which measurement is set up during policy development. Examples include the key performance indicators for the Road Safety Strategy, which are published on an annual basis; and annual statistics based on quarterly returns from retailers which allow yearly measurement and monitoring of carrier bag usage in Northern Ireland. My Department also prepares and publishes annual reports that include key waste performance indicators on the Northern Ireland Landfill Allowance Scheme and the Northern Ireland Local Authority Collected Municipal Waste Statistics.

To assess the effectiveness of existing planning policies, my Department's measures include continuous and meaningful engagement with key stakeholders. My Department also publishes relevant planning statistics. Where appropriate, my Department will undertake formal reviews of the operational effectiveness of planning policy, such as the recent review into the operation of PPS21. Looking forward to the new two-tier planning system next April, my Department intends to work closely with councils in establishing a planning performance management framework to help drive continuous improvement through advice, guidance and support.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department measures and monitors the success of its policies. (AQW 36926/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35226/11-15, in relation to video footage gathered at Ravenhill Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue by the four enforcement officers on duty on 23 August 2013, whether there will be any prosecutions brought against any private hire taxi operator/licence holder for offences committed on this occasion. (AQW 36928/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer the Member to the response to AQW 36653/11-15.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of times that Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers visited Kingspan Stadium to monitor taxi operations, in the last twelve months. (AQW 36929/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Driver & Vehicle Agency enforcement officers have not visited the Kingspan Stadium to monitor taxi operations in the last 12 months.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will discuss with his counterpart responsible for the Driver and Vehicle Agency in Swansea how he intends to overcome problems encountered by motorists in Northern Ireland. (AQW 36931/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I wrote to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Robert Goodwill MP, on 13 August 2014, on behalf of Northern Ireland customers to express my disappointment that the level of service provided by DVLA was not of the high standard expected in Northern Ireland.

In response to my letter, Claire Perry MP, replied confirming that she was aware that there were issues with a small number of records resulting from the transfer of the service, reassuring me that these would be rectified as a matter of priority. DVLA have since stated, at official level, that the initial teething problems have been rectified.

However, since the transfer of the service to Swansea, DVA has no access to the DVLA system to monitor or resolve issues relating to Northern Ireland motorists. Therefore, should you need to highlight a particular issue on behalf of a constituent you can raise it directly with the DVLA at the address below:

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the current condition of beaches in 2014 compared to 2004.

(AQW 36932/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Water Quality

Since 2004, there has been an overall improvement in water quality at our bathing waters. Our bathing water quality data shows an overall increase in compliance with both the mandatory standards and the higher guideline standards for bathing water quality set in the EU Bathing Water Directive.

Since 2004, we have seen significant improvements at specific bathing waters which were historically poor performers, for example at Newcastle and Castlerock. In the last 5 years alone, my officials have worked closely with colleagues in Northern Ireland Water (NIW) and DRD to ensure that investment totalling over £34 million was appropriately targeted to bring about these improvements. This resulted in major sewerage upgrades at Newcastle, Benone, Millisle and Bangor. Further investment is planned under the next PC period (2015 to 2021) which will see further upgrades to the network and the installation of event monitors at all NIW assets within 2km of bathing waters.

In 2013 Northern Ireland had its best year for bathing water quality since testing began in 1994, with 100% of our bathing waters passing the mandatory standard in the Bathing Water Directive and 87% meeting the higher guideline standard. Although the results for 2014 were not quite as outstanding as 2013, with 96% passing the mandatory standard and 70% meeting the higher guideline standard, there is an overall improvement trend since 2004. The 2014 results were encouraging despite the extremely wet period in early August.

Beach cleanliness, facilities, management and signage

Unfortunately, there is no comprehensive data available upon which to base an assessment of beach cleanliness from 2004. However, since 2012 Keep Northern Ireland Beautiful has been collecting beach litter data on behalf of my Department using internationally recognised methods. The first report was published in 2013 and can be found on the Keep Northern Ireland Beautiful website. The 2014 report will be available soon.

Average number of pieces of litter observed per kilometre surveyed was 4033 during 2012-13 and 3498 during 2013-14. However, there is insufficient inter-annual data at this stage to make statements on trends with any statistical confidence.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment whether it is lawful and procedurally appropriate for the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to grant a waste management licence for a waste management operation if there is no planning permission in place.

(AQW 36934/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning permission is required as a prerequisite to the issuing of a waste management licence. This is stipulated within Article 8 of the Waste and Contaminated Land Order (NI) 1997.

However to help avoid any delay in the issue of a waste management licence, once a planning application is in place, NIEA will process a waste licence application in parallel with the planning process which will not be issued until planning permission is granted. NIEA are not aware of any incidents where a waste management licence has been granted before planning permission has been granted.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment whether there have been incidents recorded whereby the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has granted a waste management licence for a waste management operation, before planning permission has been granted.

(AQW 36936/11-15)

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment how community concerns are assessed and given due weight and consideration before a Northern Ireland Environment Agency waste licence is issued to a waste management operator.
(AQW 36938/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Community concerns are assessed within the planning process through the consultation phase. In addition, NIEA frequently liaises with communities in relation to concerns about waste facilities. NIEA will consider any representations about a proposal which is made to it as part of the waste licence application process. NIEA also works closely with planning officials to help ensure the concerns of local communities are taken into consideration and where possible addressed. A formal consultation phase exists when a waste facility applies for a waste permit authorisation however the permit authorisation would only apply to larger waste facilities.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment what measures are taken to ensure that waste management companies fully comply with the terms as set out in their operating licences; and what penalties are issued to operators who are found to be in breach of their obligations.
(AQW 36939/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE (NIEA) issue waste management licences which contain site specific conditions designed to protect the environment and human health. These conditions vary according to the nature and scale of the activity as well as taking into account sensitive receptors like nearby dwellings.

According to the risk rating of the facility NIEA will inspect the facility against the licence conditions of the waste management licence as well as the agreed Working Plan for the site. The frequency and extent of these inspections are dependent on the nature of the facility and its associated potential risks to the environment and human health.

The majority of planned site inspections are unannounced however NIEA also carry out pre announced site audits. The frequency of planned site inspections is calculated against the associated risk for the site, i.e. the greater the associated risk the more numerous the site inspections. NIEA will also inspect waste management facilities in response to complaints received or as part of advisory visits. It may also carry out joint agency inspections where there is an overlap in remits and where it is appropriate.

Should NIEA detect a breach of the conditions of their waste management licence it has a range of enforcement actions available and the action taken will vary according to the circumstances of the breach. Factors taken into consideration are documented within the NIEA Enforcement Policy and include, for example the environmental impacts of the breach, the attitude of the licence holder and any previous non compliances etc.

The level of enforcement tools available range on an upward scale from verbal and written advice to formal letters to corrective Notices to suspension or revocation Notices to passing an enforcement file to the Public Prosecution Service. DOE also has fixed penalty notices and formal warning letters available as mechanisms of enforcement. The Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997 also includes High Court injunctions as an enforcement mechanism however this is not commonly used. The maximum available fines available to the courts are an unlimited fine, and or, up to 5 years imprisonment.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment why his Department's capital reduced requirements for 2014-15 have totalled £2 million.
(AQW 36953/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As part of the 2014-15 Monitoring Round process Departments are required to surrender any reduced requirements for funding in excess of £1 million. The Department advised DFP during the 2014-15 June Monitoring round of a reduced requirement for capital investment of £2 million.

This reduced requirement was in relation to the Driver Licensing IT replacement system project. The Driver and Vehicle Agency has been engaged with DFP's Enterprise Shared Service Centre to determine the extent to which the NI Direct Portal can support some of the functionality of the new Driver Licensing IT system and this has contributed to a delay in the procurement phase of the project. The £2 million of capital funding for this project is not required in 2014-15 but will be required in future years.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether a small business impact test will be carried out prior to implementing Planning Policy Statement 22 or Affordable Housing Contributions.
(AQW 36959/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A partial Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) is set out within my Department's draft Planning Policy Statement 22: 'Affordable Housing' and also within the Department for Social Development's 'Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing'.

The partial RIA covers 'Costs for a Typical Business' and acknowledges difficulties in gathering sufficiently detailed information on the likely impact of the policy on the house building and development industry.

Officials in my Department as well as officials in DSD are currently analysing the consultation responses to both draft policy documents. These views will inform a Full Regulatory Impact Assessment, for a finalised Department for Social Development Housing Policy and Planning Policy on developer contributions. I can confirm that a Small Business Impact Test will be conducted to test the impact of the policy on small to medium enterprises before any policy is implemented.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment why a small business impact test was not completed prior to the consultation on the draft Planning Policy Statement 22.

(AQW 36960/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A partial Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) is set out within my Department's draft Planning Policy Statement 22: 'Affordable Housing' and also within the Department for Social Development's 'Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing'.

The partial RIA covers 'Costs for a Typical Business' and acknowledges difficulties in gathering sufficiently detailed information on the likely impact of the policy on the house building and development industry.

Officials in my Department as well as officials in DSD are currently analysing the consultation responses to both draft policy documents. These views will inform a Full Regulatory Impact Assessment, for a finalised Department for Social Development Housing Policy and Planning Policy on developer contributions. I can confirm that a Small Business Impact Test will be conducted to test the impact of the policy on small to medium enterprises before any policy is implemented.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the proposed timetable for implementing the proposed developer contribution scheme for new developments contained in draft Planning Policy Statement 22.

(AQW 36961/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The public consultation on draft PPS22 concluded on 23 September. My officials are currently analysing the 53 responses received and a high level summary of these responses will be made available to the Environment Committee in November.

The consultation took place at the same time as the Department for Social Development's (DSD) consultation on 'Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing' paper which sought views on housing policy in respect of developer contributions. DSD received 75 responses to their consultation paper. Officials are currently in the process of analysing the responses and are preparing to put their findings to the Social Development Committee in November.

My colleague, the Minister for Social Development and I will consider the most appropriate way forward on the proposals in due course, following analysis of consultation responses.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment why draft Planning Policy Statement 22 proposes a new affordable housing contribution for developments of at least five houses.

(AQW 36962/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The objectives of draft PPS22 are to support the provision of affordable housing through developer contributions to ensure that new housing contributes to meeting the identified housing need of the whole community; and to assist in the building of a strong and shared community.

The threshold of 5 housing units that was put forward for consultation took into account the approaches taken in the other jurisdictions in the UK and Ireland. It also reflects the profile of residential development applications in Northern Ireland.

I would also ask the Member to note that the draft policy carries no weight and the responses received through the public consultation in relation to this matter will be further considered before I determine how to take the policy forward.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment to outline any plans his Department has for legislation, subsequent to the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill, which will address the specific problem of driving under the influence of drugs.

(AQW 36973/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Under existing legislative provision, it is illegal to drive here whilst unfit through drugs (whether through illegal drugs or through legal prescription drugs). Penalties are just as severe as those for drink driving, in terms of fines, disqualifications and imprisonment. Securing a drug driving conviction under existing law can however be more difficult than securing one for drink driving, given the absence of statutory limits. With drink driving, the police simply have to prove that a driver is above a certain limit of alcohol in the blood, breath or urine. In order to secure a conviction for drug driving, the police must prove that the driver is impaired. This requires objective evidence that the drug/drugs were found to be present in a blood/urine test; and subjective evidence that the person appeared to be under the influence of drugs.

My aim is to bring forward legislation that will make it easier to detect and determine whether drivers are impaired through drugs. Britain is already moving in this direction. The Crime and Courts Act 2013 passed in Westminster introduced an offence of driving or being in charge of a motor vehicle with a specified controlled drug in the body, in excess of a specified limit. The objective is to reduce the wasted time, expense and effort involved for the police and the courts when prosecutions fail because of the difficulty in proving that a driver is impaired by a particular drug. Decisions on the types of drugs and specified limits to be covered by this new offence were informed by a panel of medical and scientific experts. The drugs and limits have now been specified in regulations and, subject to Parliamentary approval, the new arrangements will commence from 2 March 2015. There is some remaining work to complete with regard to the inclusion of amphetamines; this will be addressed in subsequent regulations.

Drug driving is a particularly complex issue and any policy decisions taken here will have to be informed by expert advice and public consultation. I will wish to determine arrangements that are most appropriate for Northern Ireland but, in moving forward, will want to review the work already undertaken in Britain and any developments in Ireland. I will want, for instance, to be clear that suitable equipment is available for testing; and that consideration of offenders by the courts proceeds as intended under the legislation.

In terms of timescale, and subject to Executive agreement, I would hope to issue a public consultation on proposals before the end of 2015. Given the amount and complexity of the work required, a Bill on this issue could not be taken forward before the next Assembly mandate.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what monitoring is in place to ensure that vehicles fitted with meters with public hire tariffs are not then changed to private hire tariffs by taxi operators.

(AQW 36987/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer the Member to the response to AQW 29800/11-15 which confirms that Belfast Public Hire taxis are permitted to have dual tariffs programmed into their meters.

The Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) is responsible for ensuring that all meters fitted to Belfast Public Hire taxis are only installed with the permitted tariff/s and conform to the prescribed fitment, calibration and sealing requirements.

DVA Enforcement Officers routinely conduct roadside spot checks on taxi meters installed in licensed Belfast Public Hire Taxis to ensure they satisfy fitment requirements, remain properly sealed and to validate the tariff being used. Where a taxi meter is inspected and found to be insecure, unsealed or inaccurate, enforcement action can be taken including the issue of a Defect Notice or a Prohibition Notice. Where prohibition action has been taken this would result in the suspension of the vehicle's PSV Vehicle Licence until remedial action has been taken and the taxi meter re-tested and sealed by the Agency.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what monitoring is in place to ensure that vehicles with public hire plates are not used by companies as private hire vehicles.

(AQW 36988/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Taxis with public hire plates are permitted to undertake both public and private hire work; therefore no monitoring of use is required.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether an additional minimum fare applies to wheelchair accessible private hire taxis compared to public hire taxis.

(AQW 36989/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is currently no regulation of private hire taxi fares in Northern Ireland.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether a taxi is permitted to have a second tariff on a regulated meter.

(AQW 36990/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I can confirm that Belfast Public Hire taxis are permitted to have dual tariffs programmed into their meters. The first tariff, the regulated fare, must be displayed when the driver is providing a public hire service. The secondary, lower, tariff can be used when the vehicle has been pre-booked and operating on a private hire basis.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how many Penalty Charge Notices issued to taxi operators or licence holders have been issued for picking up non-booked passengers within the Belfast city limits area, in the last eighteen months.

(AQW 37002/11-15)

Mr Durkan: From 1 April 2013 to 8 October 2014, the Driver & Vehicle Agency enforcement officers have issued 132 Fixed Penalty Notices to taxi operators or licence holders for picking up non-booked passengers within Belfast City limits.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether a taxi is permitted to have more than one checksum for a meter.

(AQW 37008/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Regulated taximeters are not permitted to have more than one unique identifying number (or checksum).

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment what the process will be in relation to ongoing planning applications when councils take over planning powers.

(AQW 37012/11-15)

Mr Durkan: At the point of transfer (1 April 2015) Councils will be responsible for taking decisions in respect of the vast majority of planning applications which fall within the local and major thresholds as defined by legislation.

Where an application is undecided at the point of transfer, the Council will then be responsible for any further processing of the application and the decision taken.

My Department will put in place transitional arrangements that will require Councils to process these current planning applications as if they had been submitted to them originally.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the landfilling at Camcosy Road, County Tyrone is granted as part of planning permission K/2013/0072/F; and if so, whether stamped approved drawings exist which show the extent of landfill, including details of the existing and proposed ground levels and cross-sections, normally required by his Department when developing a sloping site.

(AQW 37026/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE Strategic Planning Division has opened an investigation into the alleged breaches regarding infilling. The site has been inspected on 7 October in order to establish the nature of the alleged breach. Considerations are currently ongoing to establish if a breach exists. This has been opened as a high priority case.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35889/11-15, to clarify whether it was on 07 February 2014 or 04 April 2014 that "in order to allow considerations of the issues raised, I asked for applications relating to CTY10 to be held temporarily" refers.

(AQW 37039/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 4 April 2014, officials withdrew internal guidance which had previously issued on CTY 10 regarding applications where there were no buildings on a farm. At that stage, I asked for applications relating to CTY10 to be held temporarily in order to allow consideration of the issues raised. On 4 June, I agreed that applications could continue to be processed to decision.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on wind farm applications in Upper Bann, including the number of applications (i) approved; and (ii) refused; and (iii) currently in the planning system.

(AQW 37059/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the last 10 years, no planning applications for wind farms in Upper Bann have been approved or refused. There are no other applications for wind farms pending determination in the Upper Bann constituency.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35889/11-15, whether any precautionary advice was provided to Divisional Planning Offices from the date the Application for Judicial Review was presented to the courts on 5 July 2011 regarding the implications of the case; and if so, to detail the instruction provided.

(AQW 37080/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No official advice or guidance was provided to Divisional Planning Offices at the time application for this Judicial Review was presented to the courts. However on publication of the judgement in January 2014, Divisional Planning Managers were advised of the judgement at their management meeting on 7 February 2014. As a result of the judgement, internal guidance for planning staff which sought to clarify the policy was withdrawn on 4 April 2014.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to Ravenhill Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue, whether the Driver and Vehicle Agency's Chief Enforcement Officer (i) permitted the issue of a taxi operating licence; (ii) reported that such an operating centre existed at the premises; (iii) to outline the structure or building used for this purpose; and (iv) whether the officer booked a taxi from the operating centre.

(AQW 37097/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Passenger Transport Licensing Division within the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) is responsible for processing taxi operator licence applications, which includes the approval of operating centres. DVA Enforcement Officers have no role in the approval process.

In a personal capacity, a DVA Enforcement Officer attended Ravenhill Stadium in April 2013, booked a taxi when leaving the ground and communicated his observations to a licensing colleague.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of the Environment what actions his Department is taking to improve the audit trail for managing tyres from purchase to disposal.

(AQO 6835/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department does not have the powers to audit tyres when purchased for use on vehicles. Further, tyre retailers, distributors and wholesalers do not require a waste authorisation from the DOE (NIEA) for waste tyres that have been produced on their premises.

Once tyres become waste, the tyre retailer is required to comply with the Duty of Care Regulations and the statutory Code of Practice. The business must ensure that the collector of the waste tyres is registered with the DOE (NIEA) as a waste carrier and that a waste transfer note is completed and retained by both parties for at least 2 years. The waste carrier must also comply with Duty of Care and only deliver waste tyres to a suitably authorised waste recycling facility.

The Department has allocated staff to audit the completion and retention of waste transfer notes. The team will be concentrating on the audit of waste tyres from the retailer to the carrier and finally to disposal by the waste operator on a risk basis.

The Department working in partnership with the Chief Environmental Health Officers Group (CEHOG) has set up a tyre pilot study in four council areas; Cookstown, Ballymoney, Strabane and Antrim. Phase 1 of the study includes joint inspections by Environmental Health Officers and DOE staff to respectively audit part worn/waste tyres on tyre retailer premises.

DOE also has in place a Flytipping pilot project with most of the District Councils. This project provides an audit trail for waste tyres that have been flytipped on public land and removed by the authorised contractor.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether private hire tariff rates on meters are capped at a maximum of public hire tariff rates.

(AQW 37134/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Within the current taxi licensing regime private hire taxi fares are unregulated; therefore there is no requirement to adhere to a particular fare tariff or tariff structure.

The number of tariffs installed in taximeters in such taxis is therefore a matter for the taxi operator.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what arrangement operates between his Department and Value Cabs regarding (i) tariffs; (ii) checksums; (iii) calibration; and (iv) limitations on charges.

(AQW 37139/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is no such specific arrangement with Value Cabs. The requirements in place affect all operators, drivers and vehicles equally.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether some private hire taxi vehicles have permitted, or will permit, meters to be fitted with multiple tariffs; and if so, to detail why this has been allowed.

(AQW 37176/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Private Hire taxis are not regulated by the Department in terms of fares. This is due to change in September 2015 when I intend that taxis currently operating in a private hire capacity will be required to use a taximeter and a receipt printer, and that a maximum fare will be introduced. It is not intended that the forthcoming regulations will restrict their use to a single tariff.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, given Tamboran Resources confirmation that they will judicially review his decision to require an Environmental Impact Assessment for its proposal to carry out exploratory drilling at Belcoo in County Fermanagh, whether the local community will be afforded the opportunity to participate in any proceedings.

(AQW 37448/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE Planning received a pre-action letter from Tamboran on 10 October 2014 concerning the decision made in connection to the Permitted Development Notification and EIA Determination for an exploratory borehole at Cleggan Quarry, Belcoo.

At this stage, it is not possible to comment on any potential judicial review process. Officials are reviewing the pre-action letter and seeking legal advice prior to any formal action being taken.

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of the Environment how many groups in South Down has received monies through the Carrier Bag Levy fund.

(AQO 6839/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Eight different groups were funded to carry out projects within the South Down from the Carrier Bag Levy in 2014, through the NGO Challenge Fund. These groups successfully completed 13 different projects ranging from litter collection in the Mourne Mountains to improving public access to Drumnaph Community Nature Reserve.

The dedication and response of applicants to all challenges was inspiring. I thoroughly endorse the work done by the Challenge Fund last year, and commend the success of local community groups and all others involved.

I have allocated £1.3 million from the Carrier Bag Levy to the 2015 Challenge Fund and look forward to again seeing the positive environmental and community outcomes this support enables.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what impact the current budgetary pressures will have on the level of grants awarded to councils in 2015/16.

(AQO 6840/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As I plan for next year and given the indications of the totality of cuts to my Departmental budget, reductions of the magnitude currently being discussed will necessitate a comprehensive review of the range and scope of public service delivery by my Department.

This review may result in reductions being applied to grants awarded to councils.

The two main grants paid to councils are the Rates Support Grant and De-rating Grant. The Rates Support Grant could be reduced prior to district councils striking the rate position however once this position is settled, it cannot be reduced in-year because of statutory restrictions. The De-rating Grant cannot be reduced due to the current policy of DFP to compensate Councils for the effect of the statutory de-rating of certain premises. Councils also receive a number of other discretionary grants from my Department such as Local Air Quality, Listed Buildings and Natural Heritage which may also be subject to reduction.

However, the Executive has yet to agree a budget position for 2015-16 and therefore it is not possible at this time to determine the level of grants to be awarded to Councils in 2015-16.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of the Environment what plans he has in place to recover the charges imposed by commercial operators for end-of-life tyre recycling.

(AQO 6841/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Tyre Industry Council first introduced the voluntary used tyre levy scheme in Britain in 1999 to help those handling waste tyres. This levy or charge is a voluntary agreement between the tyre retailer and the customer. The Department has no statutory remit or powers with respect to the tyre recycling charge and therefore is unable to recover these costs.

The Environment Committee included the tyre recycling charge as a recommendation in its final report "The Disposal of Used Tyres". The Committee asked the Department to "investigate discrepancies between the levies charged by retailers under the Duty of Care system in Northern Ireland and those in the other regions of the UK and obtain the power to regulate the collection and utilisation of the levy".

The recycling charge imposed by tyre retailers is not made under the Duty of Care system and Article 5 of the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997 does not contain powers to introduce such a charge.

The Department approached the Department of Trade and Industry (DETI) to enquire whether they could progress this issue. They responded that this would be a matter for DETI to consider and take forward for all regions of the UK.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on any recent discussions he has had with the Minister for Social Development regarding the transfer of functions to local government authorities.

(AQO 6842/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have raised my concern at the continued delay in reaching Executive agreement for the introduction of the Regeneration and Housing Bill to the Assembly, with Ministerial colleagues, including Minister Storey, as this legislation is required to provide regeneration powers for local government.

Whilst a failure to provide councils with urban regeneration and community development powers will not prevent the rest of the reform programme from going ahead, it is, nonetheless, a very important element of the reform process.

The vision for local government that we agreed as an Executive include bringing decision making closer to communities, creating a stronger and more effective local democracy, and improving service delivery by facilitating greater integration. I believe that the re-coupling of regeneration with the planning functions transferring from my department is fundamental to the effectiveness of the new reformed councils in shaping their communities.

Extensive preparatory work has taken place in both my own department, that of other Ministers transferring powers or functions, and within local government with the aim of ensuring the transfer is as smooth and seamless as possible. Momentum will be lost if the provision of regeneration powers does not proceed. A delay in the provision of regeneration powers for local councils will also prolong the reform process for councils, as they will not be able to design the delivery of regeneration functions into their new organisational structures from the outset. We also need to consider the potential impact on the continued delivery of programmes and projects currently funded by DSD but which local organisations are expecting and planning to be the responsibility of councils from April 2015.

The failure to implement a key element of the reform programme due to the Executive's failure to reach agreement to introduce the Regeneration and Housing Bill would send a very negative message to local government and citizens about the Executive's commitment to deliver strong, effective local government, and I believe we will be serving citizens poorly if we do not deliver that commitment.

It has taken some time to get to this point, but we are now at the stage where every effort should be made to ensure that all of the necessary legislative provisions are in place. That is why I am pressing Ministerial colleagues for urgent agreement to introduce the DSD Bill at the earliest possible opportunity.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment whether monies not spent by Ards Borough Council in the current financial year, which are being made available as a one off capital grant towards Exploris, will be made available to its successor council in the 2015/16 financial year.

(AQO 6843/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The capital grant has been allocated by the Executive to the current financial year, so I am unable to guarantee that any unspent monies would be made available in the 2015/16 financial year. This can only be considered once my Department's budget for 2015/16 has been agreed with the DFP Minister and the Executive. I would encourage Ards Borough Council to make every effort to spend as much of the capital grant as possible by the end of March 2015.

For my part, I will do everything I can to ensure that the entire capital grant is made available to the Council.

I am pleased that both Ards Borough Council and the new North Down and Ards District Council have accepted the letter of offer issued by my Department. I look forward now to seeing the work start on Exploris.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of the Environment how the Road Traffic Amendment Bill will reduce fatalities and serious injuries. (AQO 6844/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The principal objective of the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill is to save lives and prevent serious injuries. It seeks to do this by addressing road safety concerns about drink driving, learner and new drivers, and the non-wearing of helmets by users of quad bikes on the public road.

In 2013, consumption of alcohol by a driver or rider was responsible for 8 fatalities. This causation factor accounted for 14% of all road fatalities and 6% of all road deaths and serious injuries.

The Bill as introduced to the Assembly will reduce the drink drive limit to 50 milligrammes of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood for most drivers, with a lower limit of 20 milligrammes for learner and new drivers and for professional drivers. The new 20mg limit will be a de facto zero limit directed towards those at most risk. A new graduated penalty regime will match the penalty to the level of alcohol consumed, with minimum disqualification periods ranging from 6 months to 2 years, and 3 years for repeat offenders. The police will have new, additional, powers to set up check points where they can require persons in charge of vehicles to take a breath test. There will also be greater use of courses for drink drivers, to continue to change attitudes towards drinking and driving.

These measures will ensure that the punishment fits the crime; that the risk of being stopped and tested will be higher and that training and education will be available to offenders.

The Bill as introduced will also introduce a new graduated driver licensing regime to address the over representation of young and novice drivers in fatal and serious collisions.

The stark fact is that, although young drivers comprise only 11% of full licence holders, between 2009 and 2013, 41% of fatal collisions on our roads for which drivers of cars, taxis and light goods vehicles were responsible were caused by drivers aged 17-24. I believe that the scale of the problem necessitates fundamental changes to how new drivers are trained, tested and gain experience once they have obtained their full licence, and this is what this Part of the Bill is about.

I believe that the changes in the Bill will reduce fatalities and serious injuries by:

- better preparing new drivers for the challenge of driving on their own;
- better protecting new drivers, and other road users, while they gain experience; and
- better promoting ways in which learner and new drivers can keep themselves and other save on our roads.

During the period 2006- 2013, 4 people were killed and 39 seriously injured in quad related collisions. The Bill takes the necessary regulatory powers to require riders and passengers using quads on public roads to wear protective headgear which is aimed at reducing those figures.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on his Department's support for Exploris. (AQO 6845/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department remains committed to supporting Exploris. It issued two letters of offer, one for an Executive approved capital grant of £914,000 towards upgrading the facilities at Exploris, and a separate revenue grant from my Department of up to £120,000 per annum towards meeting all of the reasonable costs associated with running the seal sanctuary.

I am pleased that both Ards Borough Council and the new North Down and Ards District Council have accepted those offers. My officials will liaise with Council officials as the capital investment programme is taken forward, and also on the arrangements for meeting the costs associated with the seal sanctuary.

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of the Environment what method is used to calculate the number of tyres that can be stored at agricultural premises for use on silage pits. (AQO 6846/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Traditionally farmers have used waste tyres as silage clamps. A farmer would obtain an appropriate number of waste tyres that he could reuse year on year. The quantity of used tyres required will vary depending on the tonnage of silage stored on a farm.

Efficient silage fermentation is an anaerobic process which takes place only once there is no air present. Plastic sheeting is used to prevent entry of oxygen and fully sealed with tyres. The whole surface of the silage pit has to be covered with sufficient tyres to prevent air pockets and ensure the sheet is in contact with the silage.

Every farm will have individual methods for storing silage either externally or internally in pits or simply in heaps. The farmer will also know from the crop produced how many tyres he will require each year. A quick rule of thumb would be that lorry tyres are about 1 metre diameter and will cover 1m<sup>2</sup> of pit. This figure will vary depending on whether larger agricultural tyres or smaller car tyres are reused.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the single Strategic Planning Policy Statement. (AQO 6847/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 4th February 2014, I issued for public consultation the draft Strategic Planning Policy Statement for Northern Ireland (SPPS). The SPPS sets out the Department's regional planning policies for securing the orderly and consistent development of land under a reformed two-tier local planning system. It is a proportionate and appropriate framework for delivery of the reformed planning system when the primary responsibility for planning functions transfers from the Department to councils on 1 April 2015.

The 12 week public consultation exercise on the draft SPPS was facilitated by means of online digital consultation with stakeholders invited to respond electronically. This is the first time the Department has incorporated digital engagement into the policy-making process. The consultation closed on 29 April 2014.

Over 700 responses were received from individuals and a wide range of stakeholders, such as Business and Industry interests (including CBI, NIIRTA, IOD, NIFHA); Environmental interests (including NIEL, RSPB); Community / Academic / NGO interests (including Royal Town Planning Institute, Belfast Civic Trust, Historic Monuments Council, various residents groups); and Local Government interests (including NILGA and a number of local councils).

The scale of the response and the diverse composition of respondents is considered to be encouraging as it indicates a healthy public interest in planning matters generally but particularly the future of planning under the new two tier system that will be brought into effect in April 2015.

Officials are currently in the process of finalising the detailed analysis of all responses received to the public consultation exercise. A full synopsis of consultation responses report is due to be presented to the Environment Committee later this month.

Subject to Executive Committee agreement, the Department remains on target for finalising the SPPS by the end of the year.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment what are the main sources of problems with air quality in rural areas. (AQO 6848/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Air quality is, in general, better in rural areas than in urban areas. This is because in rural areas there is a lower density of emissions sources such as road traffic or households, as well as a lower spatial density of buildings which would otherwise trap air pollutants at ground level.

Nevertheless, some rural areas can experience high levels of air pollution from residential solid fuel heating and road traffic congestion. In addition, ground-level ozone (produced from other air pollutants) can reach higher levels in rural than in urban areas, as is evidenced by monitored levels at the rural Lough Navar site.

High levels of polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons – carcinogenic pollutants associated with solid fuel, in particular, smoky coal burning - are routinely monitored at three urban sites in Northern Ireland (Ballymena, Derry and Lisburn). A 2012 report into polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs) was commissioned by my Department. The report showed, through modelling and analysis of monitored levels, that concentrations of PAHs in exceedence of either the EU Target Value or the UK Air Quality Strategy Objective, are likely to occur in small and large settlements right across Northern Ireland.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the impact of the removal of vehicle licensing functions to Swansea has had on Coleraine. (AQO 6849/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle Licensing was previously administered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA), however this agreement was terminated and the service transferred to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea with effect from 21 July 2014.

There are 210 DVA staff based in Coleraine, who previously carried out this work. Of that number 86 have been redeployed to alternative permanent posts, 107 have been allocated temporary work in the Coleraine area, with the remainder allocated temporary work elsewhere or on maternity/sickness absence. In addition I have transferred 70 existing posts from Belfast to Coleraine, 40 of which have been filled permanently by surplus DVA staff. My officials have also agreed a voluntary exit/redundancy scheme to offer all staff in the area at the affected grades an option to seek a voluntary exit, and thereby create additional permanent vacancies for remaining surplus DVA staff. DVLA has recently agreed a funding package for the scheme, which will launch in November 2014, with staff being released by end March 2015.

I commissioned independent economic advice to support my case to Ministers in the Department for Transport that the retention of vehicle licensing services provided by DVA in Coleraine was important to the health of the local economy. However, given the mitigating measures that I have taken to continue to provide work for the DVA staff in Coleraine, it is too early to be specific about the full extent and longer term impact of the removal of vehicle licensing services on the Coleraine area at this stage.

I have encouraged Executive colleagues to allocate further work to the area to support the local economy, and I welcome the support of the Minister for Social Development, whose department has already transferred temporary work to the County Hall site.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the Peace III spend, as opposed to the allocations, in each local council.

(AQW 35826/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB) has advised that local councils have benefitted from PEACE III funding under a number of programme Themes.

Local councils in Northern Ireland are involved in eight Peace and Reconciliation Partnerships, as detailed in the attached Table 1. The Lead Authority/Partner for each Partnership is highlighted in bold.

Table 1

Peace III Partnership	Council Membership
North East Peace Partnership	Coleraine, Ballymena, Ballymoney, Larne, Limavady, Moyle
South West Peace Partnership	Cookstown, Dungannon & South Tyrone, Magherafelt, Fermanagh
North West Peace Partnership	Strabane, Derry/Londonderry, Omagh

North Down and Ards Peace Partnership	North Down, Ards, Down
Lisburn & Castlereagh Peace Partnership	Lisburn and Castlereagh
Belfast Peace and Reconciliation Action Plan	Belfast City Council

PEACE spend is recorded against each Partnership and not against the local councils that make up that Partnership. Allocations and spending are provided in Table 2.

Lisburn & Castlereagh Peace Partnership	£4,019,773.82	£3,425,935.88

You will wish to note that letters of offer for the Peace Partnership projects in Table 2, required project activities to be completed by the end of September 2014 and that expenditure claims for these projects may be submitted until the end of December 2014. At that point, it is expected that full expenditure across all projects will be confirmed.

A number of projects funded under other Themes within the PEACE Programme have a local council as a Lead Partner. Allocations and spending are provided in Table 3.

Table 3

Local Council as Lead Partner	Project	PEACE III Allocation (£)	PEACE III Spend (£)
Omagh District Council	OASIS – Omagh Accessible Shared Inclusive Space	£4,345,000.00	£1,355,439.07

	Girdwood Community Hub	£9,597,249.00	Nil to date
	Growing a Shared City	£299,932.54	£299,932.54

Dungannon & South Tyrone Borough Council	EARLS - Peace & reconciliation through Education, Activity, Regional and Local Sharing	£7,165,893.00	Nil to date

The Letter of Offer end dates for projects in Table 3 have not yet occurred. It is anticipated that all projects, including those with nil expenditure to date, will utilise and vouch their full allocations by December 2015.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether Special Advisers, appointed under the Civil Service Commissioners (NI) Order 1999, are bound by the Civil Service Human Resources Handbook and the Northern Ireland Civil Service Code of Ethics; and if so, who determines whether, upon complaint, any alleged breaches have occurred and/or to act on any established breaches.

(AQW 36463/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Special Advisers are contractually required to abide by the conduct provisions of the NICS Human Resource Handbook, with the exception of the rules on political activity. The NICS Human Resource Handbook includes the NICS Code of Ethics.

Alleged breaches and the action following any established breaches are a matter for the Minister as the appointing authority.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the unemployment figures for (i) Ballymena; (ii) Ballymoney; and (iii) Moyle in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36680/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS). However, the LFS is a sample survey and the percentage of adults who are currently unemployed in the requested district council areas are not available from this source due to sample size constraints.

The attached table is sourced to the claimant count measure of unemployment. This shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits at August 2012, August 2013 and August 2014 and these figures as a percentage of the resident working age population.

Table 1 - Claimant Count by District Council Area

Moyle	627	5.9	598	5.6	510	4.8

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of economically inactive people in each council area, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36765/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Estimates of the numbers of economically inactive by Northern Ireland (NI) District Council Area (DCA) are sourced from the Labour Force Survey (LFS), with the most recent data available for April - June 2014. These estimates are based on the residency of an individual.

The requested breakdown of economic inactivity by DCA is shown in Table 1 overleaf.

Source: Labour Force Survey

* Estimate is suppressed as the sample size on which the estimate is based is small (3-9 persons).

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has any plans to bring forward legislation to support grandparents' access rights.

(AQW 36795/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department has just published a consultation paper which invites views on the law relating to contact with children. In particular, the paper asks whether grandparents should automatically be able to apply for a contact order.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 36411/11-15, to detail the annual rates that are outstanding in the 2,637 dwellings listed.

(AQW 36847/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Outstanding rates figures are available at end of year only. The number of vacant properties where the owner is unknown is constantly changing as properties move in and out of occupation and as new properties come onto the Valuation List. As at 31st March 2014 there were 2,828 vacant domestic properties with rating liability where ownership had not been established. There was an outstanding debt of £3,147,277 associated with these properties.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35633/11-15, of this estimate, how many are in the working age population.

(AQW 36848/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The latest estimate of the working age population (i.e. those aged 16 to 64 years) of the Belfast Travel to Work Area, relating to June 2013, was 578,900 persons.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of staff employed by the Northern Ireland Civil Service in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36870/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The information requested, at 1 January each year is set out in the table below.

Year	Headcount
2014	27,936
2013	27,976
2012	27,994
2011	27,018
2010	26,934

The vast majority of the increase in 2012 was due to uniformed prison officers being included in the Northern Ireland Civil Service staff headcount for the first time.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of people who are unemployed in (i) North Down; and (ii) Ards, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36874/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS). However, the LFS is a sample survey and the percentage of adults who are currently unemployed in the requested district council areas are not available from this source due to sample size constraints.

The attached table is sourced to the claimant count measure of unemployment. This shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits at August 2012, August 2013 and August 2014 and these figures as a percentage of the resident working age population.

Table 1 - Claimant Count by District Council Area

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the range of budgetary pressures in each of Executive Department which his officials have identified as truly inescapable.

(AQW 36878/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As part of the in-year monitoring or indeed Budget process, my officials assess and prioritise bids submitted by departments for additional funding. This process helps to inform my recommendations to the Executive on the allocation of resources. The pressures faced by departments are constantly changing and ultimately it is for the Executive to agree the pressures that must be funded.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of stillbirths and early neonatal deaths recorded; (ii) the number of post-mortems that took place on stillbirth and early neonatal deaths; and (iii) the post-mortem results for the cause of deaths, in each of the last nine years.

(AQW 36941/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There is no accepted standard definition of 'early neonatal'. In view of this, information is provided on infant deaths where the death occurred within the first seven days of life.

Table 1 details the number of stillbirths and neonatal deaths within the first seven days of life in Northern Ireland from 2005.

<sup>1</sup> Numbers of Stillbirths and Neonatal Deaths within the first seven days of life have been combined due to the small number of registrations in some years.

Post mortems are not routinely carried out on all stillbirths nor early neonatal deaths. Cause of death is determined by a certifying doctor or by a post mortem where the death has been referred to the Coroner. Table 3 presents the cause of death for all stillbirths and neonatal deaths within the first seven days of life over the nine year period 2005-2013P that involved a post mortem.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what discussions he has had with the Treasury regarding the consequences of the official notification that the Executive is on track to exceed its spending limits.

(AQO 6803/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: HM Treasury officials indicated to DFP that they should be kept informed of any developments in regards of a DEL breach. This breach would, as stated in the Statement of Funding Policy with the Devolved Administrations, be an act of "serious financial mismanagement".

You will be aware that the Head of the Civil Service has now written to his counterpart in HM Treasury setting out his concerns about the in-year position and the 2015-16 Budget challenges.

In addition I have now had discussions with the Chancellor about securing access to the UK Reserve in 2014-15. As a result of these negotiations I have secured access of up to £100 million, this will be repayable in 2015-16.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the paper that he submitted to the Executive to deal with the equal pay dispute.

(AQW 37187/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As I have previously stated, it has been clearly established that there is no valid equal pay claim upon which to base a settlement for this group. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before the summer recognises the moral argument put forward and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff. I now await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion since my recommendation and any expenditure will require their approval. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37239/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The SEUPB has a General Reserve of £102,000 and a Capital Grant Reserve of £457,000. This information was taken from the last audited accounts for the SEUPB.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35558/11-15, to explain the reasons for the payscale variations evidenced regionally in the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency Statistical Bulletin: Pay Statistics for the Northern Ireland Civil Service 2013 between the Northern Ireland Civil Service and GB Departments.

(AQW 37310/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The payscale variations are due to the fact that in 1996 delegated pay arrangements for the civil service were introduced both in Northern Ireland and in Great Britain. Since then the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) and GB departments have negotiated their own pay settlements.

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel when he plans to introduce a draft 2015/16 Budget to the Assembly.

(AQO 6801/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: An agreed Final Budget for 2015-16 would need to be in place by early January 2015. This would require the Executive to agree final proposals in December. Working backwards from this date would indicate that a draft Budget would need to be agreed in the coming weeks if there is to be the desired level of public consultation.

In addition, one of the conditions surrounding the £100 million access to the reserve, which has been negotiated with HM Treasury, is that the Executive agrees credible plan for a balanced 2015-16 budget before the end of October 2014. This aligns with the timescales I have already indicated.

My officials have briefed the Executive on the financial position in 2015-16 and I will shortly bring a draft Budget scenario to the Executive.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether his pursuit of reform is relevant in the current financial environment.

(AQO 6797/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In the current financial environment, reform is more important than ever. The purpose of reform is not only to save money, albeit that is important, but even more vital is the need to meet the increasing and changing needs of citizens.

Public sector reform is all about renewing, redesigning, rethinking, restructuring and reforming to enhance the citizen's experience of public services.

I set up the Public Sector Reform Division to act as an enabler for reform across the Executive and it has a range of methodologies at its disposal to assist and support public sector bodies in transforming.

Mr Attwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the total surrender for each Department entering into the October monitoring round.

(AQO 6798/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Executive agreed the October Monitoring Resource Allocations on 9 October. I updated the Assembly on the outcome of this in my statement yesterday.

The June Monitoring round agreed Resource DEL reductions of £77.9 million equating to 2.1%. An additional 2.3% reduction was required to meet the £87 million cost of not implementing Welfare reform. This has now been agreed.

Through negotiations with HM Treasury I have secured access to the Reserve in 2014-15 of up to £100 million. This has allowed the Executive to make allocations of £125 million to mitigate the worst impacts of these reductions.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, following the recent comments made by Joel Barnett, to outline his proposals to address the limitations of the Barnett formula.

(AQO 6799/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I read with interest Peter Stanford's interview with Lord Barnett, especially Lord Barnett's comments that he believed the formula gave devolved administrations a disproportionate share of funding compared to England.

The reality is that whilst the Barnett formula does have its limitations, for example it takes no account of relative need, it does provide advantages to Northern Ireland.

The Barnett formula provides a high degree of certainty in the total amount of public expenditure allocated to Northern Ireland as result of UK Budget outcomes.

In being simple and easy to administer it also removes the degree of subjectivity that is likely to surround a needs based assessment.

In addition, while it is considered that the Barnett formula will ultimately led to convergence, these properties only apply at times of rising expenditure. Therefore, with expenditure now falling it would not be a good time for us to raise the issue of changes to the Barnett formula.

However if, as a result of changes to Scottish fiscal powers, changes are proposed to it during the next revision to the Statement of Funding Policy, my Department will ensure that we negotiate the best possible outcome for Northern Ireland.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the proposed October monitoring round allocations to the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

(AQO 6800/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Executive agreed the October Monitoring Resource Allocations on 9 October. I updated the Assembly on the outcome of this in my statement yesterday.

The June Monitoring round agreed Resource DEL reductions of £77.9 million equating to 2.1%. An additional 2.3% reduction was required to meet the £87 million cost of not implementing Welfare reform. This has now been agreed.

Through negotiations with HM Treasury I have secured access to the Reserve in 2014-15 of up to £100 million. This has allowed the Executive to make allocations of £125 million to mitigate the worst impacts of these reductions. The allocations included £60 million for DHSSPS. This is on top of the £20 million agreed as part of June Monitoring.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline which tax-raising and welfare powers are proposed for devolution following David Cameron's statement that additional powers would be provided.

(AQO 6802/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Government has not yet set out any proposals for the devolution of further powers.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much progress his Department has made in making public services available online.

(AQO 6806/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Transformation Programme Milestones are to complete the delivery of 16 digital services by 2016 and increase digital transactions through NI Direct by a further 700,000 during the 2015/16 financial year. The Programme is on target to meet these Milestones with three digital services having gone live since the start of this financial year.

The uptake of these new digital services delivered through the Transformation Programme to date now totals over 1.2 million online transactions, the majority of which were made by citizens carrying out family history searches using the Genealogy NI service with over 970,000 free searches and 130,000 paid searches completed.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total cost of (i) hospitality; (ii) the acquisition of art works; and (iii) the furnishing of chief executive and senior management offices, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 35799/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Expenditure on, (i) hospitality; (ii) the acquisitions of art works; and (iii) the furnishing of chief executive and senior management offices, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years is set out in the table below.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action has been taken to address the fifteen week waiting time for a neurology consultation appointment.

(AQW 36245/11-15)

Mr Poots: As in other areas in the UK, HSCB confirm that a new delivery plan is required to modernise, develop and improve neurological services across Northern Ireland. HSCB has commenced a process of engagement with the clinical leads in neurology regarding reforming and modernising neurology services to better meet the needs of the NI population. A number of proposals outlining how the service needs to change have been developed and these will be subject to detailed consideration.

Key issues highlighted include how to better manage and contain neurology outpatient demand, how to maximise the effectiveness of the current neurological workforce, the review and develop models of clinical practice, and, how undergraduate and postgraduate neurology education must change.

HSCB plans to work with clinicians and Trusts to develop mechanisms to address each of the key issues with specific short, medium and long term service objectives. The HSCB expects to have completed an outline plan for the way forward by December 2014 but it must be emphasised that further investment in Neurological services will be required to support new services.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the expenses paid to senior management in the Health Service in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36534/11-15)

Mr Wells: A breakdown of expenses paid to senior management in Health and Social Care bodies (except the NI Medical and Dental Training Agency) in the 2013/14 financial year is set out in the Table below.

For the purposes of this question 'senior management' has been interpreted as staff at director level and above (including Chief Executives).

Travel	£106,466
Parking	£3,029
Subsistence	£3,580
Accommodation	£5,954
Total	£119,029

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the travel expenses and reimbursements paid by each Health and Social Care Trust to (i) patients; and (ii) staff in each month of the last three years.

(AQW 36552/11-15)

Mr Wells: Costs for travel expenses and reimbursements for patients and staff in the Belfast, Southern and Western Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts, paid each month over the last three years, have been provided in Table 1 attached at Annex A.

The Northern HSC Trust and the South Eastern HSC Trust have advised that staff costs broken down to this level are not readily available but they have provided annual expenditure figures. These are set out in separate tables (Tables 2 and 3 respectively) in Annex A.

Staff travel expenses are paid to all staff where cost is incurred when carrying out their daily duties e.g. community nursing, home visits, and attendance at training events. Patient costs are reimbursed where eligible patients meet the required criteria set out in the Hospital Travel Costs Scheme.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the throughput figures for Emergency Departments in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last seven years; and (ii) the number of breaches of twelve hour waiting periods in 2007/08 compared to 2013/14.

(AQW 36618/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is assumed that this question refers to the number of attendances (new and unplanned reviews) at emergency care departments in the Northern HSC Trust.

- (i) Information on the number of new and unplanned review attendances at emergency care departments in the Northern HSC Trust is detailed in Table 1 below for each of the last six years only, as this information was not collected prior to 1st April 2008.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department was made aware of the decision by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to abolish funding from March 2015 for independent advice services including those provided by the Citizens Advice Bureau.

(AQW 36634/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is not normal practice for the Trust to advise the Department on such matters and as such, this Department was not made aware of South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust's decision.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether a risk assessment for Cushendall Fire Station has been carried out; and if so, whether he will place a copy in the Assembly Library.

(AQW 36639/11-15)

Mr Wells: NIFRS has relevant health and safety policies underpinning the risk assessment process, and a suite of generic risk assessments that cite common hazards and suitable and sufficient risk control measures for all Stations. In addition to this, each Station is audited twice per year to identify any local deficiencies which require rectification to regain assurance of risk control. The latest such assessment for Cushendall was carried out in June 2014 and identified no high priority issues.

A copy of the latest assessment will be placed in the Assembly Library for members.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the answer provided to AQW 32355/11-15.

(AQW 36673/11-15)

Mr Wells: The review of the Multi-Agency Support Teams for Schools (MASTS) service is complete. The Health and Social Care Board provided an update on the work in respect of the review to the Education Committee on 7 May 2014. A further update, including discussion on specific matters relating to the service in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, was provided to the then Chair of Education Committee on 22 September 2014.

Work has continued with all the Multi-disciplinary Teams to move to an agreed principles-based model and premised upon the Allied Health Profession (AHP) 3 Tiered Model. All Trusts Multi-disciplinary Teams' Co-ordinators have continued to be involved in these discussions. A Regional Lead to facilitate this implementation was identified and took up post in September 2014.

While informal discussions around the proposed model have taken place with a range of stakeholders, a formal public consultation is required to be undertaken before the formal implementation of any model. This public consultation document is currently being developed with input from key partners including the Department of Education and parents.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36038/11-15, when the regional imaging review (i) commenced; and (ii) will be completed; and when the current Northern Ireland Picture Archiving and Communications System contract will be reviewed.

(AQW 36690/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department initiated a review of HSC imaging services in December of last year. It is anticipated that the review will be completed in the autumn of 2015. The current Northern Ireland Picture Archiving and Communications System contract ends in September 2018, although within the current contract there is an option to extend by up to 5 years.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the waiting times for orthopaedic procedures, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last three years; and how he will improve waiting times.

(AQW 36692/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of people waiting for inpatient admission in the Trauma and Orthopaedic (T&O) speciality within each HSC Trust at the 30th June 2014, and the position at the end of the same quarter in each of the two years previous, is detailed in the table below, please note the Northern HSC Trust do not have an orthopaedic service.

Over the last three years the demand for orthopaedic treatments in Northern Ireland has continued to increase. The changing demographic profile of the population, increasing demand for revision surgery and changing clinical practice continues to put increasing pressure on the service.

I have been advised by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) that it continues to work with orthopaedic providers to assess both the staffing and infrastructure requirements for this service. Recent initiatives to improve Orthopaedic capacity include:

- The appointment of three new Orthopaedic consultants in the Belfast Trust to help reduce the current capacity gap;
- The appointment of four new Orthopaedic consultants in the Southern Trust to help meet the needs of the Craigavon and Newry and Mourne populations;
- The appointment of a locum consultant post in the Western Trust;
- Increased investment in the Regional Orthopaedic Spinal Service.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the extent to which high level spinal injury standing training (C5/C6 and Higher) is available in rehabilitation settings and community settings.

(AQW 36699/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is attached at Annex A.

Annex A

AQW 36699/11-15 Responses from HSC Trusts

Belfast HSC Trust

All patients with Spinal Cord Injuries (SCI) are individually assessed for potential benefits of standing by specialised staff from the SCIU team.

Specific goals for standing are identified as per the individual with on-going assessment and evaluation.

Individuals are assessed for standing in the acute stage (when medically stable), in the rehabilitation setting and where practically possible in preparation for discharge and in the community.

Where an appropriate standing frame is available in the community, the carers and those working with the patient will be provided with the necessary training for managing the patient's needs.

Southern HSC Trust

This activity is a high risk one and in the main occurs in a regional hospital in the acute phase of injury/onset for patients who have been assessed as safe to stand. Standing of spinal injury patients is carried out by highly specialist physiotherapists and is only carried out following full and comprehensive assessment identifying risks to patient. Training is patient specific and is delivered by specialist physiotherapists to members of the multidisciplinary teams when the patient's condition is more stable. This is defined as therapeutic handling. The specialist physiotherapist may then train members of the patient's family, day care staff etc so that they can carry out their ongoing personal home exercise programme.

In summary, training is only provided after full assessment of need and risk and is patient specific and it is not provided routinely. The training, when appropriate, is delivered to partners in care in a range of settings in the person's own home and various community settings.

South Eastern HSC Trust

SEHSC does not provide high level spinal injury standing training.

However, such training could be provided on direction from the Spinal Injuries Unit at Musgrave Park Hospital.

Western HSC Trust

If a standing frame is recommended and funded by the Trust, the physiotherapist assigned to the client would provide training to family and carers, as he/she would be expected to be knowledgeable about the equipment they have recommended to their client, including its appropriate and safe use.

This could either be in a rehabilitative or community setting. It may however be difficult to train all carers providing input into a patient, due to staff availability.

If a source external to the Trust recommends a standing frame from a particular company and knowledge regarding its safe application and use is not within the scope of practice of the local physiotherapist, there is usually the opportunity to purchase a training package from the provider to facilitate training for family and carers in its safe and effective application.

Northern HSC Trust

There is no availability within rehabilitation settings or community settings for this specialist training.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many stroke survivors have experienced significant secondary complications following discharge from rehabilitation or acute centres of care.

(AQW 36700/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information is not available in the format requested and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average cost per mobilisation for an unwanted fire signal for the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service in (i) 2010/11; (ii) 2011/12; (iii) 2012/13; and (iv) 2013/14.

(AQW 36702/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) do not routinely calculate the costs of attending individual call types. To calculate an average cost for Unwanted Fire Signals would require a resource intensive exercise to analyse over 30,000 incidents over the last four years. NIFRS are not in a position to provide the information requested.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he will take to re-establish full time Emergency Department cover at Downe Hospital.

(AQW 36753/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to my answer to AQW 36422/11-15.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what measures his Department is taking to raise awareness of (a) Meningitis; and (b) Septicaemia.

(AQW 36778/11-15)

Mr Wells: Meningococcal meningitis and septicaemia are both part of the same disease process and therefore any action in raising awareness applies to both elements. Meningococcal disease, whilst it can occur at any age, is most common in babies and infants, the incidence then declining with a second smaller peak in the teenage years. For this reason information is particularly targeted at these age groups.

There is a section on meningitis in The Pregnancy Book, which all pregnant women receive at the start of their pregnancy. This is followed up by information provided by community midwives and health visitors. Detailed information on recognising meningococcal disease is included in the following publications produced by the Public Health Agency, which are sent to parents of all children of the relevant ages:

- a. the Birth to Five book;
- b. Immunisation for babies up to a year old;
- c. Immunisation for babies just after their first birthday, and
- d. Teenage immunisation for ages 14 to 18 years.

The above publications are supplemented by press releases from the PHA to raise general awareness, and this year information was sent to all students starting university in the autumn. Details of the symptoms of meningitis have also been included on the NI Direct website.

In addition DHSSPS has provided funding to the Meningitis Research Foundation (MRF), a national registered charity which, as well as funding research to prevent meningitis and septicaemia, promotes education and awareness, and provides support to people affected.

A key part of MRF's work focuses on ensuring the public are aware of the symptoms of meningitis and septicaemia, and that acting quickly can save lives. They run public awareness media campaigns and provide targeted information talks and literature for key local health professionals and "at risk" community groups.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the maximum number of available hours that MRI scanners could have been utilised in 2013; and how many, out of the available hours, was each scanner not in use.

(AQW 36800/11-15)

Mr Wells: The working hours of MRI and CT scanners varies across hospitals even within each HSC Trust. The core working hours for MRI scanners are mainly Monday to Friday between 8:00am and 5:00pm although some scanners may only carry out a few sessions per week dependent on the size of scanner and the nature of the commissioned service. Additional activity can be carried out in the evenings and at weekends to meet elective demand or to provide out of hours and emergency on-call services.

The information requested is attached in table format.

Trust	Operational (2013)	Downtime	% of Downtime	Notes

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has a policy for the discharge of day patients from outpatient care, in the same way that there is a policy on discharging inpatients.

(AQW 36811/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is assumed this question refers to patients being discharged following day surgery. The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has advised that discharge arrangements would vary by specialty and be fine tuned to the procedure. It would generally include ensuring completion of the planned procedure or performing another procedure justified by the clinical circumstances. The discharge arrangements would also include ensuring that the patient: has recovered from anaesthesia; is comfortable, alert and stable; has no active bleeding, nausea or vomiting; is mobile at or near their pre-procedure level; has someone to accompany them; and, has appropriate transport arrangements. In addition the discharge would ensure that adequate analgesia has been provided or arranged.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of how effective Transforming Your Care has been in (i) saving money; and (ii) providing better healthcare.

(AQW 36816/11-15)

Mr Wells: "Transforming Your Care" (TYC) is not about reducing the investment and spending in health and social care services: it is about working within our budget and making the best use of the resources available.

The transformation of the delivery of health and social care services outlined in TYC is a 3 to 5 year journey and we are still very much in the implementation phase of this considerable change programme. The HSCB is considering the detail of an assessment to measure the delivery of the 4 TYC Strategic Objectives

- Putting the individual at the centre of the service delivery model for health and social care services
- Enabling Patients, Clients and Users to live independently at home with greater choice and access
- Providing sustainable and resilient services and ensures the workforce is equipped to deliver care in the right setting
- Making best use of the resources available and has the right enablers in place to deliver

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many local patients have received shoulder surgery in hospitals in other regions of the UK or abroad, in each month of the last three years; and to detail the (i) hospitals that provided surgery; and (ii) travel and subsistence expenses incurred; and for his assessment of the post-surgical care provided to patients upon return to Northern Ireland.

(AQW 36829/11-15)

Mr Wells: There have been fewer than 5 patients per annum referred to England for shoulder treatment through the Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) process in each of the last three years.

- (i) The hospitals involved were:
- Guys and St Thomas
  - Wrightington Hospital
  - University College Hospital London
  - Dorset Orthopaedic Hospital
  - Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital
  - Leicester Glenfield Hospital

(ii) Travel and subsistence costs can be summarised as:

Same day return (for assessment or day case procedure) depending on whether the patient is accompanied by an escort	£240 - £480
Overnight stay depending on whether the patient is accompanied by an escort;	£350 - £500
5 day stay for surgical procedure assuming escort and inpatient episode.	£1,025 - £1,200

The local referring consultant is responsible for ongoing clinical oversight, local diagnostics and for the post-operative reintegration of the patient into local services should this prove necessary.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of local patients (i) who are taking part in existing clinical trials; and (ii) who have entered new clinical trials, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36830/11-15)

Mr Wells: The requested information is not currently available and could only be acquired at disproportionate cost.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36026/11-15, how the current prevalence rate of dementia of 6.67 per thousand compares to the current rates in (a) England; (b) Scotland; and (c) Wales.

(AQW 36845/11-15)

Mr Wells: The most recently published figures for the prevalence of dementia cover the period 2013-14 and show a prevalence rate of 0.8%, or 8 per thousand, for Scotland. Wales and England will publish their prevalence rates for 2013-14 later this month.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by his Department which (i) he has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36882/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is facing considerable financial challenges in 2014/15, with some £160 million of additional resources estimated to be required in order to balance the books. Some of these have been addressed through £80m of additional Executive funding, but some £70m remains to be managed.

The situation does not get better in 2015/16, with additional pressures within health and social care of over £300m on top of those pressures carried forward from 2014/15 which were dealt with through non-recurrent measures. The largest inescapable pressure within this is in relation to additional pension costs – estimated to be in the region of £90m. There are also substantial pressures in 2015/16 in relation to demographic changes, NICE drugs, elective care and Mental Health and Learning Disability resettlements.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the adolescent carriage study for the Meningococcal Group B vaccine, as recommended by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation in February 2014, will commence.

(AQW 36887/11-15)

Mr Wells: At the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation meeting held in June, the Committee was informed that the Department of Health, England would be putting out a tender for an intervention carriage study to take place during 2015/16.

I welcome this study and look forward to receiving a further recommendation from JCVI in due course.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to secure the services of an urology clinical nurse specialist in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 36913/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust have advised that three urology nurse specialists are in post and there are currently no vacancies within the team.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how hip problems are identified in newborns; and whether he will agree to introduce an increased number of check ups when newborns leave hospital to identify hip problems before surgery is required.

(AQW 36930/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have been advised that examination/assessment of hips is routinely offered to all infants, at each of the current four universal Health and Social Care contacts with infants up to 4 months of age i.e.

- at the neonatal examination, within 72 hours of birth.
- at the new baby review (between 10-14 days old).
- at six to eight weeks of age.
- at 14-16 weeks of age.

The Public Health Agency has advised that it is not aware of any evidence which supports the introduction of additional examinations or assessments of infants for hip conditions.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many paediatric pathologists are currently employed by his Department and its agencies.

(AQW 36942/11-15)

Mr Wells: The regional specialism of Paediatric Pathology is held within the Belfast Trust. At the date of writing there were 2 (2.0 whole-time equivalent) Paediatric Consultant Pathologists employed by the Trust. A newly commissioned post has been filled and a further Consultant is due to start work on the 13th October 2014, bringing the complement to 3 (3.0 whole-time equivalent).

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has published, or has considered publishing, a strategy to reduce the number of infant deaths.

(AQW 36943/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Strategy for Maternity Care in Northern Ireland 2012-18 is currently being implemented. This strategy aims to ensure the best possible start in life for infants and includes care from conception advice through pregnancy, birth and the postnatal period.

The Public Health Agency (PHA) is involved in a number of programmes and work streams for which child safety is the focus, including early intervention, family support programmes and service quality improvement in initiatives. The PHA also publishes two key books ('The Pregnancy Book' and 'Birth to Five') which highlight the risks associated with cot death and Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

The PHA has also been working closely with the Safeguarding Board NI to develop processes for interagency collaboration in the review of all child deaths in NI in line with Safeguarding Legislation (Child Death Overview Panel – CDOP). The time frame for the establishment of a CDOP in Northern Ireland is 2015/16.

Within this context, it is not considered that there is a need for a separate strategy to reduce the number of infant deaths.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the funding provided by his Department for research into stillbirths and early neonatal deaths, in each of the last nine years.

(AQW 36944/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSC R&D Division of the PHA allocates funding from the HSC R&D fund on behalf of my Department. Recipients include all HSC Trusts; both Northern Ireland Universities; and the third sector. Funding supports the development of research that benefits health and social care.

Table 1 details research projects relating to stillbirths and neonatal deaths and the funding allocated in the last nine years.

Table 2 shows projects funded previously during a period of commissioning activity focused on health inequalities, New Targeting Social Need, and also two funded under the Child Health & Welfare Recognised Research Group.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what engagement his Department have had with staff from the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, since 2009, as part of the Personal and Public Involvement Strategy. (AQW 36969/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Reform Act (NI) 2009 placed a statutory legislative requirement on HSC organisations to involve and consult the population on the planning, delivery and evaluation of the services they provide. In particular, they were required to prepare a consultation scheme setting out how they would do this and submit it to the Department for approval. The Department engaged with the Northern Trust in the development of its Personal and Public Involvement (PPI) Consultation scheme.

The Public Health Agency has responsibility for leading implementation of PPI policy across the HSC. This responsibility is taken forward through the Regional PPI Forum, which includes representation from all HSC organisations, the Department, as well as community and voluntary sector representatives, service users and carers.

The Northern HSC Trust and the Department engage on a regular basis at the Regional PPI Forum.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36181/11-15, to detail (i) whether any individual service user receives weekly respite; (ii) what specific criteria is used to assess need; and (iii) whether it is used to full capacity or if there are any staffing issues. (AQW 36970/11-15)

Mr Wells: No one receives respite care in Hollybank on a weekly basis.

Admittance to Hollybank is governed by the criteria for residential care under the care management guidance, combined with a carers assessment which indicates their need for short breaks, and the clinical or professional judgement of relevant practitioners. People should also have a diagnosed learning disability and be eighteen years of age and over.

There is an allocation panel that considers the individual and the other supports they may have. The panel also have to consider the combination of service users in the building to ensure that they are compatible.

The service is working to full capacity and there are no issues apart from usual absence and leave management matters, as with any other service. There are a number of vacancies which are in the process of being filled.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 35971/11-15, with staff cuts to Ballykelly Private Hospital threatening the effectiveness of health service provision, whether he has any plans to extend services elsewhere in East Londonderry, specifically at the Causeway Hospital. (AQW 36974/11-15)

Mr Wells: The North West Independent Hospital in Ballykelly is one of a number of independent sector healthcare providers with which some Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts have contracts for the provision of additional elective capacity through non-recurrent waiting list funding.

A decision was taken by the Health and Social Care Board in July 2014 to pause waiting list initiative arrangements pending clarification of the 2014/15 financial position. The Board wrote to independent sector providers on 1st October 2014 to say that pending further clarification of the 2014/15 financial position, no new patients would be transferred to the independent sector and patients who had not yet been given a date for their assessment should be returned to the referring HSC Trust.

I regret that the HSC Board has had to take this measure and I sympathise with the uncertainty it has caused for the management and staff of the North West Independent Hospital; however it is necessary to constrain spending in light of the significant financial pressures which my Department is facing. I met with management of the North West Independent Hospital on 10 October 2014 to discuss these issues at first hand.

I am advised that the HSC Board and its Local Commissioning Groups are continuing to work with the HSC Trusts to address shortfalls in elective capacity within the resources available. This may include increasing capacity at Causeway and other hospitals.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the timescale for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to demolish the residential care home in Kilcooley, Bangor.

(AQW 36986/11-15)

Mr Wells: The SEHSCCT has advised me that demolition of Ravara House, Kilcooley, Bangor is scheduled for completion by 24th November 2014.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many interpreters have been registered to speak (i) Portuguese; (ii) Hungarian; (iii) Russian; and (iv) Lithuanian in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36991/11-15)

Mr Wells: Face-to-face interpreting in the HSC is administered on a regional basis by the NI Health & Social Care Interpreting Service (NIHSCIS). The NIHSCIS has provided below the numbers of interpreters registered with NIHSCIS for each requested language and in each of the last five years.

Language	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014 (to 7th October)
Portuguese	22	22	22	25	25
Hungarian	8	10	11	15	15
Russian	21	23	21	23	22
Lithuanian	20	21	32	39	39

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has been claimed in mileage costs for each interpreter in the languages of (i) Portuguese; (ii) Hungarian; (iii) Russian; and (iv) Lithuanian in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36992/11-15)

Mr Wells: Mileage costs are not monitored centrally. HSC finance departments advise that the costs are not available in the format requested.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many times the Northern Ireland Audit Office has investigated the work of Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Interpreting Service in the last five years.

(AQW 36993/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is not aware of any investigations which the Northern Ireland Audit Office has carried out on the work of the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Interpreting Service.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what practical steps he intends to take to support the Quality Checklist campaign by Prostate Cancer UK.

(AQW 36995/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and the HSC to ensure that prostate cancer services are up to modern quality levels. The Prostate Cancer UK quality checklist is an excellent guide to the standard of care needed to treat prostate cancer.

Of the 15 standards detailed in the Prostate Cancer UK Quality Checklist, 13 are fully or substantially implemented in NI. With regard to the remaining two standards, the position is as follows:

Standard 7:- The HSC is working towards a position in which all patients who need to access a specialist nurse will be able to do so.

Standard 10:- Currently GPs receive a letter outlining patients' care and proposed plan and all patients are subsequently advised verbally of their care plan. The HSC is working towards a position in which all patients receive a written care plan.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the timescale for the plans to (i) introduce additional Rapid Response Vehicles to operate alongside emergency ambulances; (ii) to utilise additional deployment points and new Satellite Navigation systems; and (iii) to open a new Regional Emergency Medical Dispatch Centre.

(AQW 37021/11-15)

Mr Wells: These are matters for the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Trust. The Trust has advised that it operates Rapid Response Vehicles and A&E ambulances and is not currently planning to increase these. The Trust also operates satellite navigation software in ambulances and deployment points. A single Regional Emergency Ambulance Control Centre, responsible for prioritising and dispatching responses to emergency 999 calls, is based at ambulance headquarters in Knockbracken Healthcare Park, Belfast.

There are no further plans at present in respect of these areas

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Northern Health and Social Care Trust have a 'Complex Case Panel' in operation.

(AQW 37022/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust does have a complex case panel in operation. This is a multi-agency forum within which case workers consult with others on the management of complex child protection cases to explore options for intervention to achieve effective outcomes. Families are informed when such meetings are convened and may be invited to participate. These meetings are chaired by Head of Children's Services and the outcomes of the discussions are shared with the family, Senior Management and other professionals involved and may be used to inform Child Protection assessments and plans.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the recommendations from NHS England regarding the drug Translarna will be translated and implemented locally.

(AQW 37023/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) is responsible for the commissioning of all specialist drug treatments in Northern Ireland. The HSCB has advised that it is aware that NHS England is consulting on a draft policy statement regarding access to ataluren for the treatment of Duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD).

Although ataluren has received a licence from the European Commission, the manufacturer has not yet made it available for purchase in the UK. Once the drug is available for purchase in the UK, then requests for access will be considered through the Individual Funding Request process. The HSCB will continue to monitor progress with the formal national evaluation.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of crutches issued, including their value; and (b) the number of crutches returned in the last five years.

(AQW 37024/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) Procurement and Logistics Service within the Business Services Organisation issue crutches from the warehouse to HSC Trusts for use by patients. In addition, non-stock purchases of crutches can also be made, which are delivered directly to HSC Trusts by suppliers. The following table shows the number of crutches received by HSC Trusts including their value, in each of the last five years.

Year	Number of pairs of crutches issued from warehouse stock	Number of pairs of crutches from non-stock purchases	Total Value (£)
2009/10	15,003	1,106	129,927
2010/11	15,735	791	132,643
2011/12	16,161	801	139,962
2012/13	17,465	1,420	155,640
2013/14	19,024	1,162	195,312

Source: Business Services Organisation Procurement and Logistics Service

- (ii) Information on the number of crutches returned by patients to HSC Trusts is not recorded centrally and would involve an extensive manual exercise, which could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the total value of car parking charges collected in the last five years; and (ii) how the revenue generated was spent.

(AQW 37025/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) The total value of car parking charges collected in the last five years within the Health and Social Care Sector is £15.03 million.
- (ii) The revenue generated is used to cover the costs of the provision and maintenance of car parking including the associated security costs. In the event there is a surplus, it is reinvested in patient services. This is in accordance with the Department's policy on car parking provision.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) its arm's-length bodies are employed on zero hour contracts.

(AQW 37034/11-15)

Mr Wells: 'Zero-hour contracts' are mainly applicable in the private sector and are not used in employment contracts within my Department and its arm's-length bodies.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that Sciatica patients can experience pain particularly in early morning and that MRI appointments scheduled for 8.00am are not good practice, how his Department will rectify this.

(AQW 37048/11-15)

Mr Wells: The working hours of MRI and CT scanners vary across hospitals even within each HSC Trust. The core working hours for MRI scanners are mainly Monday to Friday between 8:00am and 5:00pm. I understand that HSC Trusts routinely ask patients in their appointment letters to confirm if the proposed date and time of the appointment is suitable. If a patient has any query regarding the time of appointments they should in the first instance take the matter up with the Trust concerned.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to domiciliary care packages, to detail the current number of people in each Health and Social Care Trust whose packages have been approved but are still waiting for the package to be implemented; and of these outstanding care packages, to detail how many hours of care to which this equates.

(AQW 37053/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses can be found in Tables 1-5 and the associated text overleaf.

Table 1. The number of people whose domiciliary care package has been approved but not yet implemented and the hours of care to which this equates by HSC Trust.

The Western HSC Trust was unable to provide waiting times for domiciliary care packages to be provided by the Trust and private providers separately, as the choice of provider is dependent on local provider availability at the time of implementation. However, the Trust provided an overall waiting times breakdown as follows:

Table 5. The number of domiciliary care packages approved by Western HSC Trust and due to be provided, by length of time waiting.

1. The Northern HSC Trust was unable to provide figures as their information on the brokerage of domiciliary care packages is currently undergoing validation.
2. The Southern HSC Trust indicated that their current allocation model means that all domiciliary care packages are offered to independent sector providers in the first instance. For this reason, figures provided by the Southern HSC Trust have been presented in the 2nd column of Table 2 and in Table 4.
3. The Western HSC Trust indicated that it is not possible for the Trust to pre-determine if a care package will be provided by the Trust or an independent sector organization, as the choice of provider is dependent on local provider availability at the time of implementation. See Table 5 for an overall breakdown of waiting times for domiciliary care packages in the Western HSC Trust.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to domiciliary care packages, of the total number of hours of care that are approved but not implemented, to detail how many of these hours are to be filled by (a) Health and Social Care Trusts; and (b) private care providers.

(AQW 37054/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses can be found in Tables 1-5 and the associated text overleaf.

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses can be found in Tables 1-5 and the associated text overleaf.

The Western HSC Trust was unable to provide waiting times for domiciliary care packages to be provided by the Trust and private providers separately, as the choice of provider is dependent on local provider availability at the time of implementation. However, the Trust provided an overall waiting times breakdown as follows:

Table 5. The number of domiciliary care packages approved by Western HSC Trust and due to be provided, by length of time waiting.

7. The Northern HSC Trust was unable to provide figures as their information on the brokerage of domiciliary care packages is currently undergoing validation.

8. The Southern HSC Trust indicated that their current allocation model means that all domiciliary care packages are offered to independent sector providers in the first instance. For this reason, figures provided by the Southern HSC Trust have been presented in the 2nd column of Table 2 and in Table 4.
9. The Western HSC Trust indicated that it is not possible for the Trust to pre-determine if a care package will be provided by the Trust or an independent sector organization, as the choice of provider is dependent on local provider availability at the time of implementation. See Table 5 for an overall breakdown of waiting times for domiciliary care packages in the Western HSC Trust.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to domiciliary care packages, of the packages that have been approved by Health and Social Care Trusts and are due to be implemented through private care providers, how many have been currently outstanding for (i) up to two weeks; (ii) up to four weeks; (iii) up to two months; (iv) more than two months since being approved.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 32999/11-15 and AQW 36524/11-15, will he now answer the original question that was asked in cases where the number of incidences was more than five.

(AQW 37062/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to previous answers given to AQW 32999/11-15 and AQW 36524/11-15. The HSCB/PHA does not collect information on SAIs on an individual hospital basis. This is only available on a Trust basis. The figures broken down on a Trust basis have been provided in response to your question raised as AQW 37062/11-15.

The HSCB/PHA publishes information on SAIs on a six monthly basis. The latest SAI report for the period October 2013 to March 2014 can be accessed at -

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36525/11-15, to detail the number of Serious Adverse Incidents, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 37063/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of Serious Adverse Incidents, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last ten years is outlined in the table below.

The SAI system was established in July 2004. The 2004 figures are for the period July 2004 to 31 December 2004.

The figures for July 2004 to 31 March 2009 include SAIs reported by legacy Trusts.

The HSC Board took over responsibility for the SAI system on 1 May 2010. The figures for 1 January – 30 April 2010 were provided by the Department and the figures from 1 May 2010 to 31 December 2010 were provided by the HSC Board.

Figures for 2013 are not completely comparable with previous years as the definition of an SAI and the associated guidance was changed in October 2013 to encompass a wider range of incidents.

The HSCB/PHA publishes information on SAIs on a six monthly basis. The latest SAI report for the period October 2013 to March 2014 can be accessed at -

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of live births at each main acute hospital in each of the last two years.

(AQW 37066/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of live births at each main acute hospital is published on an annual basis in the Northern Ireland Hospital Statistics: Inpatient and Day Case Activity publication (Table 4c) and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/hospital-stats/inpatients.htm

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in preparing a proposal document on the future of adult care and support, whether he will commit to protecting family farms from having to be sold to pay for care in residential care homes.

(AQW 37067/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Reform of Adult Care and Support is a three stage process which will establish the future direction and funding of adult care and support in Northern Ireland.

Having completed the first stage with a consultation on the discussion document "Who Cares? The Future of Adult Care and Support in Northern Ireland", I am aware of concerns around the current funding arrangements for residential and nursing home care, particularly in relation to the sale of property to pay for care.

These and other issues raised during the consultation will inform the development of proposals for change, which is the focus of the second stage of the reform project. However, as the project is currently in the early stages of developing such proposals it is not possible at this point to commit to specific reforms.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the timeframe for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to build supported living accommodation for the older people at the Ravara site in Kilcooley, Bangor.

(AQW 37075/11-15)

Mr Wells: Ark Housing Association has been appointed to work with the South Eastern Trust to develop a supported living scheme for older people in the North Down area.

The Trust's Executive Management Team endorsed the outline business case on 7 October 2014 and will submit this to DSD Supporting People for consideration.

It is expected that the land purchase will be completed by the end of December 2014, with planning approval expected within four to five months after application and a build time of approximately 18 months.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the substitute prescribing programme operated by the Health and Social Care Board.

(AQW 37084/11-15)

Mr Wells: During 2012/13, 755 individuals were in contact with Substitute Prescribing treatment services across Northern Ireland. These services are evidence based and operate in line with UK wide guidelines provided by NICE and four UK Health Departments.

Substitute Prescribing schemes have been shown to help engage and retain clients in treatment and, for some clients, can help to stabilise chaotic lives. Therefore the scheme in Northern Ireland supports individuals to remain healthy until – with appropriate treatment, help and support – they can recover from drug misuse.

It should be noted that the Health and Social Care Board and Public Health Agency are reviewing the wider capacity and structure of Tier 3 (community based) alcohol and drug services, including the substitute prescribing scheme – this work should be completed early 2015. The information within this review will take account of service pressures and capacity issues.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any concerns regarding the impact on service provision by hospitals such as the Causeway Hospital following the announcement by Ballykelly Private Hospital that they are facing staff cuts.

(AQW 37105/11-15)

Mr Wells: The North West Independent Hospital in Ballykelly is one of a number of independent sector healthcare providers with which some Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts have contracts for the provision of additional elective capacity through non-recurrent waiting list funding.

A decision was taken by the Health and Social Care Board in July 2014 to pause waiting list initiative arrangements pending clarification of the 2014/15 financial position. The Board wrote to independent sector providers on 1st October 2014 to say that pending further clarification of the 2014/15 financial position, no new patients would be transferred to the independent sector and patients who had not yet been given a date for their assessment should be returned to the referring HSC Trust.

I regret that the HSC Board has had to take this measure and I sympathise with the uncertainty it has caused for the management and staff of the North West Independent Hospital; however it is necessary to constrain spending in light of the significant financial pressures which my Department is facing. I met with management of the North West Independent Hospital on 10 October 2014 to discuss these issues at first hand.

I am advised that the HSC Board and its Local Commissioning Groups are continuing to work with the HSC Trusts to address shortfalls in elective capacity within the resources available. This may include increasing capacity at Causeway and other hospitals.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail any communication his Department have had with Ballykelly Private Hospital, with the knowledge that Health Service referrals to the hospital have increased over the last five years, when they are facing staff cuts.

(AQW 37106/11-15)

Mr Wells: The North West Independent Hospital in Ballykelly is one of a number of independent sector healthcare providers with which some Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts have contracts for the provision of additional elective capacity through non-recurrent waiting list funding.

A decision was taken by the Health and Social Care Board in July 2014 to pause waiting list initiative arrangements pending clarification of the 2014/15 financial position. Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many firefighters are stationed in Donaghadee.

(AQW 37141/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are currently 11 Firefighters stationed at Donaghadee Fire Station, as follows:

Retained Firefighters

■ Watch Commander	1
■ Crew Commander	2
■ Firefighters	8
■ Total	11

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessment has been made of the money saving potential of employing translators on fixed term contracts in Health and Social Care Trust areas which have a high demand for translation services.

(AQW 37146/11-15)

Mr Wells: The current arrangements for interpreting services allow for the flexible deployment of translators on an as-needs basis to meet demand. A significant number of interpreting staff would have to be directly employed to ensure appropriate coverage for the wide range of languages, the large number of appointments and the wide geographical spread of those appointments.

The Health and Social Care Board's 'Review of Future Arrangements for Language Interpreting and Translation Services' recommended a rebalancing of face to face and telephone interpreting to ensure a more cost effective and flexible service. The key recommendations of the Review are in the process of being implemented.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether local patients will be part of the care data information scheme, or a similar scheme; and what safeguards are in place to ensure that information is not misused and that patients are made aware of how to opt out from such a scheme.

(AQW 37151/11-15)

Mr Wells: Care.data is a data collection programme being run by the NHS in England. Northern Ireland is not part of this and there are currently no plans to introduce a similar initiative here.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the latest figures on missed hospital appointments and the associated costs.

(AQW 37152/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of consultant-led appointments missed by the patient (Did Not Attend) is published on an annual basis in the Northern Ireland Hospital Statistics: Outpatient Activity publication (Table 1a) and is available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/hospital-stats/outpatients.htm

The number of appointments missed by the patient (DNAs) during 2013/14 was 155,760.

The cost of a hospital appointment being missed is not available and can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, following his receipt of over 24,500 signatures in support of the Equal Access to Cancer Drugs campaign led by Cancer Focus NI, when local patients will receive access to cancer drugs on a par with patients in England and Scotland.

(AQW 37153/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has responsibility for commissioning specialist drugs, including cancer drugs in Northern Ireland.

Both the HSC in Northern Ireland and the NHS in England and Wales are guided by the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) in making the difficult decisions about which of the many new drugs should be made routinely available to patients. All NICE approved cancer drugs that are available in England are either recurrently funded or available via a cost per case mechanism in Northern Ireland.

The Individual Funding Request (IFR) process governs access to unapproved specialist drugs in Northern Ireland. My officials are currently carrying out an evaluation of the IFR process. The evaluation, which is underway, will take full account of the measures that other devolved administrations are considering in their approach towards access to specialist drugs and will be completed by the end of the year.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety Minister to detail the proportion of the population, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, who have had an amputation as a result of complications related to diabetes. (AQW 37211/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of people per 100,000 of the population by Health and Social Care Trust of residence who have been admitted to hospital for an amputation and who also have diabetes is detailed in the table below for each of the last three years.

HSC Trust	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

Notes

HSC Trust refers to the Trust of residence, i.e. Local Commissioning Group.

Diabetes has been identified using International Classification of Disease (revision 10) (ICD-10) codes E10 – E14, searched for in any of seventeen diagnosis fields.

Amputations are defined using the following ICD-10 codes searched for in any of twelve procedure fields.

X07 – Amputation of arm

X08 – Amputation of hand

X09 – Amputation of leg

X10 – Amputation of foot

X11 – Amputation of toe

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the proportion of the population, broken down by Health Care and Social Care Trust, that have been diagnosed with diabetes. (AQW 37212/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the Quality & Outcomes Framework (QOF) of the General Medical Services contract, the total number of GP-registered patients aged 17 and over diagnosed with diabetes mellitus is recorded. The number of patients on the QOF diabetes register in each Trust area is shown in table 1 below.

Please note that the figures are based on the GP practices located within each Trust area according to practice post code, and that patients may not reside in the same trust area.

Table 1: Patients on Diabetes Mellitus register in GP practices located in Trust area 2013/14

CNS – Central nervous system

Prevalence is similar to a population figure in that it is a snapshot of the total number of survivors in a particular year, and thus many of the people included in the 2010 figure are also in the 2011 and 2012 figures. Prevalence figures change over time due to the addition of new incidence cases, deaths among cancer patients, emigration, people no longer in the age group (e.g. aged 24 in 2011, but 25 in 2012 and thus no longer included), and exclusion of people diagnosed prior to the prevalence duration (in this case 18 years<sup>1</sup>). This differs from incidence which relates to the number of newly diagnosed cases.

The latest available figures relate to 2012. Incidence figures for 2013 are scheduled to be published by the NICR in March 2015.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why changes were made to the publication of hospital waiting times to only detail the number of people waiting longer than six months and why the lists do not provide a more detailed breakdown of the length of time people have been waiting.

(AQW 37237/11-15)

Mr Wells: For the purpose of this question, it is assumed that Mr. Flanagan is referring to the waiting times for inpatient treatment. The inpatient waiting times publication provides a breakdown of patients waiting for inpatient treatment using the following time bands: 0-6, >6-13, >13-21, >21-26 and >26 weeks. This information is split by HSC Trust and Speciality.

This publication allows the general public to assess the performance of the DHSSPS, the HSC Board and HSC Trusts in providing timely access to hospital services in Northern Ireland against the current Ministerial waiting time target. Thus time bands are selected to align with the current target, which for 2014/15 states that, from April 2014, at least 80% of inpatients and daycases should be treated within 13 weeks; and no patient waiting longer than 26 weeks for treatment.

The Ministerial waiting time target for 2013/14 stated that, from April 2013, at least 70% of inpatients and daycases are treated within 13 weeks, increasing to 80% by March 2014; and no patient waiting longer than 30 weeks for treatment, decreasing to 26 weeks by March 2014. Hence previous publications split the >26 week time band into >26-30 weeks and >30 weeks.

As inpatient waiting times are collected on a patient level basis, more detailed breakdowns are available on request.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what preparations are being made for a potential outbreak of the Ebola virus; and for his assessment of the ability of cope with an outbreak.

(AQW 37248/11-15)

Mr Wells: In order to deal with a potential importation of a case of Ebola Virus Disease in Northern Ireland my officials have been liaising frequently with their counterparts across the UK and in the Republic of Ireland.

The Public Health Agency has been coordinating regional planning in conjunction with the Department and Trusts. This planning has included the development of patient care pathways by all Trusts and comprises planning for the management and isolation of suspected cases, accumulation of appropriate Personal Protective Equipment and carrying out staff training.

In addition the Chief Medical Officer has sent four separate letters to Chief Executives of Health and Social Care organisations providing information for all frontline clinical staff who may be treating or admitting patients, all Infection Prevention and Control staff and all GPs and practice staff. The letters include flow charts for use by staff in Emergency Departments and by staff in Primary Care for dealing with patients who present with Ebola-like symptoms.

The Chief Medical Officer has also written to all schools, universities and further education establishments.

Advice for UK border staff has been circulated to all UK ports. In Northern Ireland the Public Health Agency, through its Health Protection Service, has communicated with colleagues covering all sea ports and airports in Northern Ireland informing them of the current situation in relation to the outbreak and directing them to sources of further information, including the actions to be taken should a sick traveller, potentially with an infectious disease, come to their attention.

In order to reduce the risk of international spread of the disease, and in line with World Health Organisation guidance, the affected countries have introduced exit screening at airports to ensure that individuals who are unwell do not board flights.

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to develop a new hospital in Newry.

(AQO 6812/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are no immediate plans to develop a new hospital in Newry. The first priority for the Southern Trust is the redevelopment of the Craigavon Area Hospital site. The department is in early discussions with the Trust about how this might be taken forward. A new hospital in Newry would come after that but realistically, given budget pressures, would be some time away.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he is encouraging and enhancing research and development in healthcare.

(AQO 6813/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is committed to the development of research into health in Northern Ireland.

Over the last 10 years, DHSSPS have invested approximately 120 million pounds into Research and Development in Northern Ireland. This funds high quality research in Health and Social Care which benefits the people of Northern Ireland not only in terms of health and wellbeing but also in terms of the economic prosperity that it brings.

On the 29th of September I published for consultation a new draft Strategy for Health and Social Care Research. This is an important piece of work, as a successful strategy will propel NI to the forefront of Research and Development in Health and Social Care settings throughout the world.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline any plans he has to renegotiate contracts for consultants.

(AQO 6814/11-15)

Mr Wells: Northern Ireland is a partner with England in negotiations with the British Medical Association to deliver joint proposals for a new consultant contract for England and Northern Ireland.

The intention, through the ongoing negotiations which commenced in October 2013, is to amend the current 2004 contract to facilitate the future provision of seven-day services for the benefit of patients. This will require removing the current contractual obstacles to the introduction of seven-day services, while at the same time providing sufficient safeguards for doctors to support safe working. Negotiations will also address the introduction of a revised pay structure, including matters such as pay progression and the recognition of excellence, as well as appropriate transitional protection arrangements. It is intended that these new arrangements will be delivered within the existing funding envelope.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the departmental funding given to community groups to raise awareness of drug abuse.
(AQO 6815/11-15)

Mr Wells: In 2014/15, the Public Health Agency invested just over £1.5 million in community and voluntary sector services focused on substance misuse awareness-raising with the public, local communities, and professionals and key workers.

It should be noted that this funding covers both alcohol and drug misuse and as such it is not possible to give a specific breakdown concerning solely drug misuse. Furthermore, other services such as treatment and support also include an element of drug awareness but this cannot be disaggregated and has not been included.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in light of the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority's ongoing report on Emergency Departments, to outline the impact a refusal of additional funding via the October monitoring round would have on local Emergency Departments.
(AQO 6816/11-15)

Mr Wells: Additional investment is required to reduce waiting times in emergency departments; introduce 7-day working and extended hours; develop new models of acute medicine; enhance emergency department capacity; manage increased demand during the winter months; and, address pressures within 24/7 acute, community and primary care working.

The unscheduled care Task Group chaired jointly by the Chief Medical Officer and Chief Nursing Officer to oversee and coordinate the implementation of the recommendations of the RQIA review has been given the clear aim of eliminating avoidable twelve-hour waiting time breaches from this winter onwards and, over the next eighteen months, of making significant progress towards achieving the four-hour waiting time standard.

Emergency departments are under pressure throughout the year but the pressure becomes more acute during the winter. Additional investment would enable the HSC to make progress on reducing waiting times and managing the increased demand on emergency departments over the winter months.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the action he is taking to improve the care for people with diabetes.
(AQO 6817/11-15)

Mr Wells: The increasing number of people diagnosed with diabetes presents a challenge to Health and Social Care to ensure that services are in place that support high quality treatment and care for those living with the condition, as well as promoting measures to help prevent people developing Type 2 diabetes.

In recognition of this, my Department has recently completed a review of the 2003 CREST/Diabetes UK Joint Framework report on Diabetes Care in Northern Ireland in the 21st Century.

The review which, was led by the Chief Medical Officer, published its report in June this year. Whilst it highlighted that there had been broad progress in the treatment and care of people living with diabetes, a key recommendation was that a Strategic Direction and associated Action Plan for diabetes should be developed which would encompass the findings and recommendations identified by the review team. A Steering Group has been established to take this forward.

Once developed, the draft Strategic Direction and Action Plan will be subject to public consultation and will provide the basis for how services for people with diabetes are commissioned and delivered to support quality outcomes.

Work to improve treatment and care for people with diabetes is also been taken forward by the 17 Integrated Care Partnerships working across Northern Ireland. ICPs have been reviewing diabetes care pathways in their respective areas and have identified opportunities to enhance service provision and improve outcomes for people with diabetes.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action is being taken to remedy the situation whereby young people in Beechcroft Child and Mental Health Services inpatient unit are being denied access to education within the unit if they are enrolled in further education.
(AQO 6818/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is not the case that young people admitted to Beechcroft are denied access to further education. The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has an agreement in place with the Department for Employment and Learning for a link worker to attend Beechcroft.

If a young person is admitted to Beechcroft and they have an education placement in a Further Education college, the health staff work in partnership with the college and the link worker to put an education plan in place for their admission. The plan will depend on the geographical location of the college and the subject that is being undertaken. Close links between health and education staff are maintained during the admission period.

Where the duration of the admission is lengthy due to a severe illness, then the education plan is reviewed as necessary, as the young person may not be well enough to undertake the level of education at that specific time.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assurance he can provide of the long-term retention of services at the Mater Hospital.

(AQO 6819/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Mater Hospital continues to provide a wide range of services to the people of North Belfast and beyond. Following the principles of Transforming your care, the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust's document New Directions has set out a model of home based and community based service delivery, supported by timely access to acute and specialist services where necessary.

Work on these plans is ongoing and many changes have already been successfully implemented to deliver the best possible care to patients. The Belfast Trust is now planning to embark on the development of New Directions 2. This will also have a bearing on the future configuration of services in Belfast.

However, I fully expect the Mater Hospital to continue its role in the provision of safe resilient and sustainable services in the future.

Department of Justice

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many (i) remand; and (ii) sentenced prisoners in each prison are the subject of a Non-Molestation Order.

(AQW 36646/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Information about prisoners subject to Non-Molestation Orders is not recorded by NIPS. Orders are made by the courts and enforced by the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) for a breakdown of costs of all court matters, including the trials which collapsed or where aborted, in the case of Darius Porcik as for the offences committed on 13 July 2011 and heard at Craigavon Crown Court, shown by (a) legal aid including law firm, junior and senior counsel; (b) prosecution; (c) interpreter services, and (d) any other relevant expenditure; or (ii) for an estimated total cost if final figures are not yet known.

(AQW 36683/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated costs to date for the case of Darius Porcik are given in the table below.

Cost Type	Estimated Cost
Legal Aid <sup>1</sup>	£56,698
Prosecution <sup>2</sup>	£34,304
Interpreter services <sup>3</sup>	£38,337
Other relevant expenditure <sup>4</sup>	£35,372
Total	£164,711

1 Fees in respect of the Magistrates' Court proceedings have been determined in accordance with the Magistrates' Court and County Court Appeals (Criminal Legal Aid) (Costs) Rules (Northern Ireland) 2009. The fees in respect of the Crown Court proceedings have been determined and/or estimated in accordance with the Legal Aid for Crown Court Proceedings (Costs) (Amendment) Rules (Northern Ireland) 2011.

2 In the absence of detailed records of time spent on individual cases it is not possible to produce precise costs for a particular case. Some costs are identifiable however, for example expenses paid and fees paid to prosecuting counsel.

3 PSNI interpreter and translation costs are not available.

4 Other relevant expenditure includes witness expenses, jury expenses and court costs

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the cost of (i) projects; (ii) members' allowances; and (iii) management of each Policing and Community Safety Partnership, for each year since their formation.

(AQW 36759/11-15)

Mr Ford: Policing and Community Safety Partnerships came into effect on 1 April 2012 and are co-funded by the Department of Justice and the Northern Ireland Policing Board. Local councils may also, at their own discretion, make a contribution towards PCSP costs.

Payments made jointly by the Department of Justice and the Northern Ireland Policing Board to each PCSP in respect of operational expenditure ("projects"), members' expenses ("allowances") and salaries and administration ("management") since their establishment are set out below.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he will broaden the variety of banned substances currently tested for within Prison Service facilities, particularly in relation to prescription drugs; and whether he will liaise with the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in relation to this issue.

(AQW 36770/11-15)

Mr Ford: A joint Northern Ireland Prison Service/South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust review of the drugs strategy is currently being carried out. The range of substances tested for will be considered as part of this review.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of legal aid personal injury claims which have been (i) submitted; (ii) approved; (iii) refused; (iv) appealed; (v) approved upon appeal; and (vi) refused at appeal, in each month of the last two years.

(AQW 36834/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am advised that the Legal Services Commission does not specifically record applications for personal injury claims. However, it records applications for Money Damages cases, the majority of which are personal injury claims.

The Commission is able to provide details on the following for the last two financial years 2012/2013 and 2013/2014 and this is detailed in Annex 1 to address (i), (ii) and (iii) in the question asked:

- Volumes of applications received by month in the year;
- Volumes of certificates granted* by month in the year; and
- Volumes of applications refused by month in the year.

*Certificates granted relate to applications approved.

The applications received in a month do not necessarily relate to the certificates granted or applications refused in the same month.

There may be minor variances between this information and that already provided. This reflects the assessment process and data refresh to provide this information by month.

I am advised that information on the number of applications which were refused, appealed and subsequently approved or refused is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Justice what progress they have made on the delivery of the Together Building a United Community Strategy headline actions of (i) a 10 year programme to reduce and remove all interface barriers by 2023; and (ii) an interface barrier support package, published in May 2013.

(AQW 36859/11-15)

Mr Ford: There has been continued progress in ensuring that there is an appropriate level of support and engagement within relevant government departments, within key statutory agencies, and in the police and other agencies responsible for safety and security. In addition engagement through partnership programmes, such as the International Fund for Ireland (IFI) and Belfast City Council peace walls programmes, has ensured that local approaches are being developed involving community representatives and local residents. The overall number of DOJ structures has been reduced from 59 to 53. Engagement has been initiated on 40 of the DOJ's 53 structures.

IFI has approved funding for 8 specific community engagement projects, covering a number of the structures. Specific action plans have been developed covering 24 structures. While committed to the Programme for Government commitment 68 the Department is working with OFMDFM on the wider proposals under the Together: Building a United Community Strategy, including seeking assurances on cross Executive commitment and on resources. The realisation of the benefits defined within the Interface Barrier Support Package will be dependent on securing the resources required to deliver the overall target.

The University of Ulster and DOJ commenced a 12 month knowledge exchange partnership in August to support and develop policy and practice enabling the removal of peace walls. The University team will act as a 'critical friend', as formative evaluators of the current policy implementation process, and as a provider of evidence-based research to my Department. Part of this work will see a rerun of the University of Ulster Attitudes to Peace Wall Research Report of June 2012, including two new areas outside Belfast - Portadown and Lurgan.

In terms of success over the period: a section of security fencing was removed from North City Business Park in New Lodge in April and from Moyard Crescent in May; and the upper vehicle and pedestrian gates at Springmartin Road were removed in August. A number of further interventions are planned, subject to the outcome of positive community consultation.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to provide copies of all correspondence between his Department and the Police Federation of Northern Ireland in relation to police pensions.

(AQW 36864/11-15)

Mr Ford: Copies of all correspondence between my Department and the Police Federation of Northern Ireland in relation to the new police pension scheme have been placed in the Assembly Library. Names of junior officials have been redacted under Section 38 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total number of deaths under Coroner's investigation in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36898/11-15)

Mr Ford: In the five year period to 30 September 2014, 1,043 deaths were reported to the Coroner where the death occurred within the area of the Northern Health and Social Care Trust. A breakdown is provided below:

Period	Number of Deaths Reported
1.10.09 - 30.09.10	184

Period	Number of Deaths Reported
1.10.10 - 30.09.11	152
1.10.11 - 30.09.12	211
1.10.12 - 30.09.13	248
1.10.13 - 30.09.14	248
Total deaths Reported	1,043

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice, of the deaths under Coroner's investigation within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust in the last five years, how many have been referred by the Office of the Attorney General for Northern Ireland.
(AQW 36900/11-15)

Mr Ford: In the five year period up to 30 September 2014, the Office of the Attorney General for Northern Ireland did not refer any cases to the Coroner relating to deaths occurring within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice how many people who were convicted of not owning a valid tv licence, in each of the last three years, have subsequently been convicted of the same offence.
(AQW 36914/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of individuals convicted of not owning a valid television licence, in the calendar years 2011 to 2013, who were subsequently reconvicted of the same offence, is outlined in the table below:

Convictions for not owning a television licence: 2011 - 2013

Year	Number of defendants convicted <sup>1</sup>	Number of individuals convicted <sup>1</sup>	Number of individuals subsequently reconvicted <sup>2</sup>
2011	3,322	3,261	610
2012	4,350	4,261	683
2013	3,545	3,474	339

Source: Integrated Court Operations System (ICOS)

- 1 Official statistics on convictions are reported on a defendant rather than individual basis. A defendant relates to a participant unique to a case i.e. if an individual is convicted in three separate cases, this is counted as three defendants convicted. For reconvictions, data are reported on the basis of the individual.
- 2 Relates to convictions up to 30/09/14. Caution should be exercised when comparing figures between years as the period from initial conviction to the end of the period analysed for subsequent reconvictions (30/09/14) differs for each year.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many Non-Molestation Orders have been served on remand and sentenced prisoners in each of the last three calendar years, broken down by prison.
(AQW 36919/11-15)

Mr Ford: Information about prisoners subject to Non-Molestation Orders is not recorded by NIPS. Orders are made by the courts and enforced by the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36198/11-15, whether he will (i) obtain this information directly from G4S; (ii) whether G4S are required by contract to report this information to Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service; (iii) how often the Northern Ireland Court Service carry out audits or monitoring; and (iv) what is the nature of the audit.
(AQW 36920/11-15)

Mr Ford: G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Limited has informed the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service that they received no reports in relation to faulty palm scanners. Seven reports were made directly to G4S between 22 January 2014 and 2 September 2014 about broadband connectivity issues and one system software failure. While G4S is not required by contract to report this level of detail to NICTS, there is a requirement to report issues affecting service delivery.

NICTS conducts annual security and health and safety audits and supplements these with incident reporting and investigations when required. NICTS has a independent Security Advisor and a Health and Safety Advisor.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Justice whether he, or his officials, have had any discussions on the appointment of an adviser on police pensions and the new public service pension regulations for police officers.

(AQW 36935/11-15)

Mr Ford: The appointment of an advisor on police pensions and the new public service pension regulations for police officers is a matter for the Northern Ireland Policing Board to consider as employer and scheme manager. In June 2012, the Board submitted a business case to my Department seeking permission to employ a pension consultant. On 14 August 2012, the Board wrote to my Department to advise that the business case for advice on police pensions would not be processed further.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Justice whether he, or his officials, have had any discussions with retired or retiring members or officials of the Police Federation on working for the Department on police pensions and the new public service pension regulations for police officers.

(AQW 36937/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department has not had any such discussions.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by his Department which (i) he has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36948/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department's October monitoring bid to the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) is broken down as follows:

- £19.7m for legal aid – i.e. the Department's June monitoring bid that was not funded;
- £10.5m to reduce the most severe impact of cuts on PSNI;
- £1.9m to reduce the most severe impact of cuts on the remainder of the Department; and
- given the potential for additional in-year cuts of 1.6%, equating to £17.4m, the Department also highlighted that if these cuts were made, it would bid for additional funding to offset the severe impact of the cuts.

The Department is not in a position to comment on the DFP's assessment of the bids.

As highlighted in the Finance Minister's Statement to the Assembly on 13 October 2014, the Department of Justice has been allocated an additional £29.0m for PSNI and legal aid pressures.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Justice why his Department's capital reduced requirements for 2014-15 have totalled £10 million.

(AQW 36954/11-15)

Mr Ford: During the 2012-13 January monitoring round, the Department of Justice received funding of £10m in relation to the NI Prison Service staff exit scheme. In return, given known easements at that time, the Department agreed to surrender capital in the 2014-15 June monitoring round.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to outline the operating rules and regulations that govern private car parking operators based in England clamping vehicles locally.

(AQW 36983/11-15)

Mr Ford: My responsibility for vehicle immobilisation is limited to ensuring those operators who carry out vehicle immobilisation on private land are properly licensed by the Security Industry Authority (SIA). All these vehicle immobilisation operators must abide by conditions set by the SIA. A copy of these conditions can be found at <http://www.sia.homeoffice.gov.uk/Pages/licensing-conditions.aspx>

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36337/11-15, to provide the name of the stated third party laboratory/company to whom the Scottish Prison Service sub-contracted drugs testing.

(AQW 37003/11-15)

Mr Ford: The contractor is Synergy Health Laboratory Services.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Justice whether he has any plans to extend the provision of the Police Widow's Pension Scheme to pre-1988 Royal Ulster Constabulary Pension Scheme.

(AQW 37110/11-15)

Mr Ford: I remain keen to give effect to Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, which applies to widows who remarried on or after 1 January 1989. My officials are working to urgently resolve some outstanding matters, including eligibility and affordability, and are considering if it is possible to extend Section 30 to those who remarried prior to 1 January 1989. I hope to address all outstanding matters as soon as possible.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice for an estimate of the total cost of implementing the proposals needed in the absence of the full implementation of the work of the National Crime Agency.

(AQW 37137/11-15)

Mr Ford: It would not be possible to provide an accurate estimate without a major exercise. The costs, however, would include the establishment of a civil recovery service for devolved cases. These would be significant. In addition there is already an impact on police resources in that the PSNI are undertaking work which NCA officers are not empowered to do.

Additional resources are simply not available.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36566/11-15, what was the total cost to the public purse for the payment and settlement of the claims listed in each year.

(AQW 37140/11-15)

Mr Ford: The total cost of the compensation claims paid to prisoners in each of the last three years is listed in the table below:

Financial Year	Total Compensation Paid
2012/2013	£36,215
2013/2014	£63,190.25
01/04/14 – 30/09/14	£25,750

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice how much has been spent on translators in each (i) police; and (ii) court district in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37143/11-15)

Mr Ford: The the cost of interpreter and document translation services for the last three years is provided in the tables below:

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice what assessment has been made of the money saving potential of employing translators on fixed term contracts in policing and court districts which have a high demand for translation services.
(AQW 37144/11-15)

Mr Ford: A Business Case was completed to appraise all the potential options for translation services. The option of bringing the services in-house was explored but was rejected as it was deemed too costly and logistically difficult to manage.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to provide the (i) cost to date; and (ii) estimated final cost in Legal Aid for the cases of (a) Andrew Richard Stewart; and (b) Jamie Downey broken down by (i) law firm; (ii) junior counsel; (iii) senior counsel; and (iv) any other related costs.
(AQW 37162/11-15)

Mr Ford: To date the cost to legal aid is £960 in respect of representation by Junior Counsel for Jamie Downey at the magistrates' court.

The estimated final cost of legal aid in respect of each defendant is as follows:

- Andrew Richard Stewart - £8330.40
- Jamie Downey - £8404.20

This is broken down as follows:

Andrew Richard Stewart

- Solicitor - £4274.40
- Junior Counsel - £4056.00

Jamie Downey

- Solicitor - £5209.80
- Junior Counsel - £3194.40

Senior counsel were not involved in this case and there are not any known additional costs at this stage.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice what plans he has to resolve the Injury on Duty dispute.
(AQW 37271/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Policing Board, which has statutory responsibility for administering the Injury on Duty (IOD) scheme, commissioned David Scoffield QC to carry out a review of the scheme. Mr Scoffield recently provided his report to the Board.

My Department is committed to working with the Board and the PSNI to address the issues raised in the Scoffield review and continues to support the Board in fulfilling its statutory duties in relation to the IOD scheme.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Justice what options are available to appeal the sentence awarded in the case against Gheorge Ionas.
(AQW 37332/11-15)

Mr Ford: Currently, referral of a sentence by the Director of Public Prosecutions to the Court of Appeal on the grounds of undue leniency is available for all offences triable only in the Crown Court and for a limited number of hybrid offences, specifically listed in statute, that are tried in the Crown Court.

Hybrid offences are offences that can be tried either in Magistrates Court or the Crown Court. The decision as to where a hybrid offence is prosecuted is for the Public Prosecution Service.

Offences under the Gangmasters (Licensing) Act 2004 are not currently included in the list of hybrid offences that can be referred to the Court of Appeal. As you may be aware, a review of the unduly lenient provisions is underway. Any proposals for change arising out of the review will be subject to public consultation, following Justice Committee consideration.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development what practical progress has been made in bringing assistance and resolution to home owners affected by unfinished roads and developments because the developer has gone bankrupt.

(AQW 35614/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): My Department has continued to be of assistance to home owners by maintaining progress on the completion and adoption of roads and sewers in new housing developments.

In the 2013/14 financial year, almost 63 kms of new housing development roads and associated sewers have been adopted into the public road network. This included the adoption of roads and sewers on 325 backlog developments where completion had been delayed.

When appropriate, enforcement action was taken and bond securities were called upon to allow my Department to appoint contractors to complete street works where developers had gone bankrupt.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the Departments he is cooperating with to assess the need for transport reform in rural areas and to ensure the implementation of proposed improvements to rural public transport facilities.

(AQW 35930/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently working with a number of organisations on a pilot project to trial the feasibility of improved integration of publicly funded passenger transport services in the Dungannon area. The organisations involved include the Department of Education, the Southern Education and Library Board, the Department of the Environment, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Health and Social Care Board, the Southern Health Trust, the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development, Translink, Community Transport and the Federation of Passenger Transport.

The main purpose of the pilot is to identify opportunities to improve public transport options for passengers, particularly in rural areas, through a more flexible approach to the use of all the resources that are available to the different transport providers. The pilot is due to be completed later this year and all of the Departments will be involved in the evaluation and in the appraisal of the options for wider implementation.

In respect of proposed improvements to rural public transport facilities, Translink has advised that plans are in place to provide new accessible platforms at the Bellarena Halt when the Coleraine to Londonderry Phase 2 upgrade works commence. In addition, a contract to improve passenger facilities at Ballymoney Rail Station has been approved and it is planned to commence the off-street bus station at Banbridge next year.

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Regional Development whether local councils will be given the opportunity to procure redundant reservoirs before being sold on the open market.

(AQW 36108/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water has made a commitment to offer redundant reservoirs to the public sector in the first instance in order to determine whether there is any interest from that sector, prior to advertising them for sale on the open market.

A public sector trawl has now been completed in accordance with the Department of Finance and Personnel's Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland guidance document. Several expressions of interest have been received from local councils as well as other government departments. NI Water will be meeting with interested parties over the next few months with a view to progressing the sale of these reservoirs.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many (i) churches; (ii) community organisations; and (iii) businesses in North Down have been affected by undercharging of water bills by NI Water.

(AQW 36425/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The number of accounts in North Down which have been impacted by the addition of retrospective charges to water and sewerage bills between 1 April 2012 and 31 March 2014 is (a) 0 churches; (b) 18 community organisations; and (c) 20 businesses. Inspections on the M1/A4

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for a breakdown, including dates, of all inspections and works carried out by (i) private contractors; and (ii) TransportNI staff on the section of the M1/A4 managed under the public private partnership scheme, since the road opened

(AQW 36516/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The M1 from Sprucefield to Dungannon and the A4 from Dungannon to Ballygawley are maintained on behalf of the Department by Amey Lagan Roads Limited and its Operator, Amey Government, under the DBFO Package 2 Contract, approved by my predecessor Conor Murphy MP.

Detailed records of inspections and of the works carried out on the network under the DBFO Contract are not held by the Department but are held by the Operator in a number of different formats including a web-based Routine Maintenance Management System database, spreadsheets and hardcopy sheets.

It would require a significant amount of work by the Operator to collate the information in the form you have requested. If you could advise of a specific aspect in which you have a particular interest, my officials will seek to obtain the information through the Operator.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Regional Development when the Northern Ireland Water investigation into the combined sewer on Dunadry Road and Dunadry Wastewater Pumping Station will be completed; and when its findings will be published. (AQW 36522/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that its investigation into the combined sewer on Dunadry Road and Dunadry Wastewater Pumping Station was due for completion in August 2014. Additional time has been required to properly review and reassess the medium and long term housing and population forecasts for the Dunadry area, in order to ensure that the optimum solutions are developed.

The draft appraisal study and project business case are expected to be completed before the end of October 2014. The completed appraisal study report is an internal document which will contain commercially sensitive information. I have asked NI Water to send you an executive summary of the report when it becomes available.

The emerging findings from the appraisal study indicate that additional wastewater storage volume is a key requirement at Dunadry Wastewater Pumping Station in order to reduce unsatisfactory intermittent discharges into the Six Mile River. This work will be considered by NIW during its PC15 (2015-2021) capital works prioritisation process.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what checks are carried out to establish that badges issued under the Blue Badge scheme are not being used when the owner is deceased. (AQW 36565/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Parking Enforcement Unit includes a two-person Blue Badge Enforcement team which carries out checks on Blue Badges displayed in Belfast and other main towns in Northern Ireland on a rotational basis. These checks concentrate on misuse of Blue Badges as opposed to contravention of parking restrictions which are dealt with by conventional Traffic Attendants.

The Blue Badge Enforcement team liaises closely with the Blue Badge Unit regarding all enforcement matters and, in 2013, the Blue Badge enforcement team carried out 841 enquiries which resulted in 87 Penalty Charge Notices being issued. The vast majority of these Penalty Charge Notices were as a result of car drivers using their live relatives' Blue Badges, but three related to use of Blue Badges issued to persons who had died during the validity period of a badge.

To date in 2014, the Blue Badge enforcement team has carried out 313 enquiries which have resulted in 40 Penalty Charge Notices being issued. Three of these related to use of badges issued to persons who had died during the validity period of a badge.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the future of the A5 road. (AQW 36584/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following on from the successful legal challenge in 2013 to the A5 Western Transport Corridor, four reports have been developed to assess any impacts on all designated environmentally sensitive sites (nine in total) in the vicinity of the scheme and, where appropriate, mitigation measures are proposed.

A public consultation exercise on three of these reports has now been completed, with a total of 13 responses received covering a range of issues. The fourth report, on the Tully Bog Special Area of Conservation, will be published for consultation during October 2014. Together these reports and all consultation responses received will be taken into account as the scheme progresses.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development what preparatory work for the A5 road is currently being carried out. (AQW 36586/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following on from the successful 2013 legal challenge to the A5 Western Transport Corridor, four reports have been developed to assess any impacts on the nine designated environmentally sensitive sites in the vicinity of the scheme and, where appropriate, mitigation measures are proposed.

A public consultation exercise on three of these reports has now been completed, with a total of thirteen responses received covering a range of issues. The fourth report, on the Tully Bog Special Area of Conservation is currently programmed to be published for consultation in the week commencing 13 October 2014. Together, these reports and all consultation responses received will be taken into account as the scheme progresses.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress is being made on the replacement of the existing rail station in Portrush.

(AQW 36674/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Portrush station is currently planned for implementation in Translink's longer term capital works programme.

Translink's capital plans clearly need to be considered in the context of the current and future budgetary position and competing priorities facing my Department.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the work undertaken to resolve the flooding problem on the Toome Road and Queen Street area of Ballymena.

(AQW 36681/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the flooding on 8 June 2014 in the Toome Road and Queen Street areas of Ballymena, NI Water undertook investigatory work on its own sewer network. This included desilting sections of the sewer serving the adjacent Wakehurst development and a section of the storm sewer has also been re-laid. NI Water has also undertaken a full inspection of the foul and storm systems in the Toome Road and Wakehurst areas to ensure that its systems are operating normally.

Previous drainage investigations carried out by NI Water also identified a number of structural sewer defects in the Toome Road and Queen Street areas. A scheme to rectify these issues including relining some sections of the sewer and replacement of a number of manholes to prevent ingress of water from a local watercourse into the sewer, commenced on 23 June 2014 and is nearing completion. NI Water has advised that this scheme, which is valued at £214,000, is being carried out to address the defects identified in the sewer system.

In addition NI Water, at the request of the interdepartmental Flood Investment and Planning Group, which is led by my Department, is preparing an investigatory report to look at the root causes of the flooding and to develop potential solutions. The report will investigate the operation of NI Water, TransportNI and Rivers Agency assets as well as assessing overland flows. The final report is due to be completed by the end of November 2014, although this date is dependent on flow measurement on the Toome Road site during rainfall events to allow verification of the hydraulic models.

Transport NI has also procured a container which is sited on the Wakehurst Road adjacent to the Toome Road and stocked it with 600 sandbags. The unit is parked securely on Ballymena Council property with Council, Transport NI and a local representative holding keys. Ballymena Council will manage the facility, in conjunction with elected representatives, and inform Transport NI when restocking is required.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department has spent on improving road infrastructure, including resurfacing, in the (i) Newry City; (ii) Derry City; and (iii) Belfast City council areas, since 2013.

(AQW 36750/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of my Department's expenditure on improving the road infrastructure in the areas requested, during the last financial year, are shown in the table below:

Council Area	Spend 2013/14 (£M)
Newry & Mourne District Council	7.8
Derry City Council	9.2
Belfast City Council	12.9

It should be noted that whilst the actual spend on a major works scheme may be within one council area, the benefits of such schemes are not confined to the district council area in which they are located.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to introduce residents' parking schemes in Holywood, particularly in the Strand area.

(AQW 36758/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan (BMTP) identifies a number of areas of parking restraint where residents' parking will be considered, including Bangor in the North Down area. Whilst Holywood is not specifically identified within the BMTP in this respect, I can confirm that a number of streets in Holywood have been added to a list of areas for future consideration, once all the areas identified within the BMTP have been addressed.

Legislation governing all Residents' Parking Schemes is currently being finalised with the Departmental Solicitor's Office (DSO) and I can confirm that publication of Notices for the first batch of residents' parking schemes, which are concentrated in Antrim, Londonderry and within Belfast, is currently scheduled for autumn 2014, with the formal consultation stage following as soon as possible thereafter. Subsequently, scheme implementation will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation process, particularly with regard to whether any objections are received.

These initial schemes, once implemented, are to be monitored for a period to gauge their success or otherwise. If these initial schemes prove to be successful, further consideration will be given to the development of schemes outside Belfast, including in Holywood.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Translink has spent on train maintenance in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36771/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The relevant costs are as outlined in the table below:

Financial Year	£
2013/14	9,857,018
2012/13	9,139,847
2011/12	7,510,260

The increase in costs since 2011/2012 reflects the introduction of 20 CAF 4000 train sets. Translink: Bus Maintenance

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Translink has spent on bus maintenance in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36772/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The relevant costs are as outlined in the table below:

Financial Year	£
2013/14	14,541,740
2012/13	13,354,520
2011/12	13,533,047

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail Translink's income from private bus hire in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36779/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The relevant income is as outlined in the table below:

Financial Year	£
2013/14	5,202,729
2012/13	5,898,850
2011/12	4,718,252

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36182/11-15, to detail the total number of surveys carried out; and the total number of meters installed by Enterprise Managed Services Ltd on behalf of NI Water during the 2008-09 contract period.

(AQW 36808/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: During the 2008/2009 contract period Enterprise Managed Services Ltd carried out 32,997 surveys and installed 12,438 meters on behalf of NI Water.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the sewage improvement works at Kinnegar, Holywood.
(AQW 36809/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Northern Ireland Water has informed me that the first phase of the construction contract for sewerage improvement works at Kinnegar has been awarded to Geda Construction Ltd. This project will divert the combined sewer overflow discharges away from the lagoons adjacent to the Kinnegar Wastewater Treatment Works. Construction is programmed to start in October 2014 and take approximately 15 months to complete.

The second phase of the project will focus on addressing problems at the lagoons. The next step will be to complete a study to determine the best remediation method followed by the implementation of appropriate remedial work. Modifications have already been carried out to the outlet of the lagoons that will assist the study. The nature and duration of that remedial work will be determined from the study results. It is presently anticipated that this work will start following completion of the first Phase of construction work.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update and timeframe for the new pumping station in Millisle.
(AQW 36810/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The site required for the new wastewater pumping station at Millisle is presently split between two owners - Ards Borough Council and the Crown Estate. Before NI Water could acquire the entire site, Ards Borough Council was required to acquire a strip of land from the Crown Estate. This has led to a delay in the project which has been outside NI Water's direct control.

I understand that an agreement has now been reached between the land owners. The project will be brought to construction as soon as possible following the completion of the necessary land acquisitions.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many Translink buses are currently in need repair.
(AQW 36840/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The number of buses in need of repair at any one time varies depending on whether it is a minor or a major repair. On average a bus develops a reportable minor repair about every 4 weeks, on any given day this would represent approximately 48 buses with the majority of these being repaired on the same day.

In relation to major repairs as of 10 October 2014, there were 9 buses in the central workshops, 5 for accident repair work and 4 for major mechanical repairs. 57 buses represents approximately 4% of the total fleet of 1,414 at 31 March 2014.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many Translink buses are currently in storage.
(AQW 36841/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No operational buses are in storage but Translink currently has 46 buses which have been removed from active service. These vehicles have an average age of 15.5 years and have in most cases been replaced by new fleet received in recent weeks.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many crimes have been reported on Translink buses, in each of the last two years.
(AQW 36843/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The number of crimes reported on Translink buses in each of the last two years are as follows:

2012/13	638
2013/14	615

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of times that Translink buses have been vandalised in each of the last three years.
(AQW 36844/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

2011-12	320
2012-13	395
2013-14	390

The number of times that Translink buses have been vandalised in each of the last three years is as follows:

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department intends to conduct an evaluation assessment on the work of Disability Action Transport Scheme since they assumed the contract of disability transport within the region.
(AQW 36850/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Disability Action receives grant support from my Department, to provide the Disability Action Transport Scheme in 29 urban areas across Northern Ireland for elderly and disabled people. Disability Action has operational responsibility for the scheme.

The Scheme was introduced on 01 April 2013 and continues to operate well. Disability Action seek the views of their members / users through the mechanism of user forums, the first round of which were located in Belfast, Coleraine, Armagh and Derry City in April and May of this year. Notes of the meetings were circulated to the attendees. The second round has just commenced, starting on 6 October 2014. Disability Action then reports on the views expressed to my officials and these also continue to be positive.

Officials are currently undertaking an evaluation of transport policies initiated by my Department to promote social inclusion. The outcome of the evaluation will help to inform future policy to meet the transport needs of elderly and disabled people across Northern Ireland in a cost effective and efficient way.

At this time it is planned to maintain the interim scheme with Disability Action.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any steps taken to develop a new bus station and interchange in Derry as proposed in the Integrated Transport Strategy included in the One Plan.

(AQW 36904/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As you are aware, my Department is a member of the One Plan Interdepartmental Coordinating Group and is committed to supporting implementation of the One Plan, particularly in matters relating to transport. This is reflected in the significant investment my Department has taken forward to deliver key transport projects in the North West.

While there are no plans to develop a new bus station in Londonderry, you will be aware that in March I announced a new project to develop plans for an integrated transport hub on the site of the Old Waterside Station in Londonderry, subject to securing the necessary funding. The aim of the project would be to enhance access and provide facilities for cyclists including parking, changing and maintenance within a refurbished rail station. This will include directly linking the Waterside Station to the Peace Bridge and existing greenways. In delivering the project, my Department and Translink will explore opportunities to promote integration of services and accessibility between the Waterside Station and the Foyle Street Bus Station.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is done with flag stones that are removed during footpath resurfacing.

(AQW 36910/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The majority of footpath resurfacing is carried out by external contractors. The contractors are paid for lifting and disposing of concrete flags at an appropriate location, unless my Department has further use for the flags. In such cases the contractor may be paid to take the flags to storage for future use by my Department's operatives.

My Department's Operations & Maintenance staff carry out only limited amounts of footway resurfacing, with the disposal of flags dealt with, where possible, through a formal contract with suppliers of recycled aggregates. These suppliers then recycle these products back into quality approved aggregates which are sold on the open market. Where this is not possible, the flags are taken to a licensed disposal facility under the terms of a formal waste disposal contract.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the maintenance planned for the Dufferin Avenue park and ride facility in Bangor over the next three years.

(AQW 36946/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: At present my Department maintains the Dufferin Avenue Park & Ride facility in Bangor, however, alternative options for future maintenance and operation of this facility are currently being considered.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department will commit to developing adequate sewage treatment for the hamlets of Eskra and Tattyreagh, County Tyrone.

(AQW 36976/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The provision of first time sewerage services for properties which do not have a connection to the public sewerage network may be requested under Article 154 of the Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006. This enables the owner or occupier of any domestic property where there are buildings to make a requisition notice requesting NI Water to provide a public sewer. In responding to a request, NI Water will provide a costing for the work. The requisitioner will be asked to make a contribution towards the cost of providing the requisitioned sewer. The costs of the work will include, among other things, the reasonable cost of design, labour, plant, materials, supervision and administration. In calculating the cost to be taken by the person making the requisition NI Water will contribute a reasonable cost allowance as set out in its' Scheme of Charges.

NI Water does not currently hold a request for a first time sewerage system in the Eskra area and has no plans to provide a sewer for this hamlet. NI Water is however in receipt of a requisition notice for a first time service facility in the Tattyreagh area and is presently carrying out a technical and economical appraisal study in order to assess the costs and viability of providing a sewerage system at this location.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development why his Department is not fixing street lights; and when this situation will be resolved.

(AQW 36977/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is facing a significant budget shortfall. Consequently, I have had to take the difficult decision to suspend the issue of works orders to external contractors for the repair of street lights that fail, unless they pose an electrical or structural hazard.

However, it is not the case that my Department is not fixing any street lights. Until further notice, my Department's Operations and Maintenance staff will strive to deal with as many street lighting defects as possible, but they will not be able to provide the level of service the public would expect in normal circumstances. Priority will be given to larger group outages, followed by smaller groups or individual street lights.

This situation is likely to continue until my Department receives additional funding to allow normal street lighting maintenance arrangements to be restored.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the residents of Garvellagh, County Tyrone have consistent access to a reliable water supply.

(AQW 36978/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The provision of water on the Garvellagh Road is supplied through a water booster pumping station. NI Water plans to review the efficiency of this pumping station. It has already checked the water network setup and is satisfied that the maximum flow available is being provided to the pumping station.

NI Water also intends to undertake a hydraulic model investigation, including flow/pressure measurement to identify potential options to improve the security of supply. Given the size of the area involved the options report should be available within three months.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development how many people use the bus service on a daily basis on the Mucklerammer Road/Ahoghill Road.

(AQW 37015/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The 122 Ulsterbus service from Ballymena to Randalstown operates along the Ahoghill Road between Whiteside's Corner and Randalstown, which would include the point where the Mucklerammer Road intersects with the Ahoghill Road. This service operates 5 return journeys Monday-Friday and 4 return journeys on Saturdays.

Patronage for the 122 Ulsterbus service is as follows:

Dates	Total Journeys for all services (254 operating days)	Average Daily Patronage
01/10/2012 - 30/09/2013	12,113	48
01/10/2013 - 30/09/2014	13,004	51

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any (i) proposed; and (ii) considered junction improvements for the Aughrim Road, Magherafelt.

(AQW 37031/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the draft Local Transport & Safety Measures programme for the period 2014-2016 were presented to Magherafelt District Council in autumn 2013. It currently includes a proposal to improve the junction of the Aughrim Road with Bellshill Road and Gracefield Road, a crossroads which has restricted visibility. Progression of this scheme will, however, be dependent upon securing the necessary land and the availability of funding.

Whilst there are other potential improvements that could be made to other junctions on Aughrim Road, no further schemes are being taken forward at this time as there are other schemes that are deemed to be a higher priority for the allocation of the available funding.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the change in the average numbers of passengers on the Coleraine to Belfast railway in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37068/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased to report that passenger growth on the Coleraine to Belfast rail corridor is very positive, with increases in passenger numbers of about a third between 2011/12 and 2013/14. This equates to an increase of over 400,000 passenger journeys in 3 years, taking passenger journeys from over 1.2 million in 2011/12 to over 1.6 million in 2013/14.

The introduction of a new rail timetable targeted at the Coleraine to Belfast service, introduction of new trains and continued investment in infrastructure has clearly helped to generate this growth.

It is important that we continue to invest in our rail infrastructure and ensure rail fares are competitive.

Passenger statistics on rail services between Coleraine and Belfast are as follows:

Financial Year	Passenger Numbers
2011/12	1,258,954
2012/13	1,271,481
2013/14	1,682,230

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 37070/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Five staff are currently employed in my Department's Information Office.

The Office provides a round-the-clock public relations and press service, with its wide-ranging areas of activity including media response and media monitoring services, event management, photography, social media and the management/ updating of websites.

In the 2013/14 financial year, the total cost of the staff in the Office amounted to £324,062.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 29985/11-15, when the residents' parking scheme in the Bogside area of Derry will be implemented.

(AQW 37272/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently finalising the draft legislation prior to progressing to the public consultation stage. The consultation period will commence in early December for a period of 21 days.

The timeline for the delivery of the scheme will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation and the nature of any objections. In the absence of significant objections, the scheme should be delivered in spring 2015.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether NI Water has a duty under EU Directive 2003/4/EC on public access to environmental information and the 2004 Environmental Information Regulations to disclose the (i) requests made; and (ii) consents given, to discharge into drains; and when the presumption in favour of disclosure of such information would not apply.

(AQW 37357/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water, as a 'public authority', is legally obliged to provide information about the environment through both an approved publication scheme and in response to requests through the disclosure provisions of the Environmental Information Regulations (EIR) 2004. Regulation 4(4) (a) of the EIR states that public authorities must organise and publish, as a minimum, any information they hold that is listed in Article 7(2) of EU Directive 2003/4/EC which relates to the dissemination of environmental information.

- (i) Requests (for consent to discharge) made to NI Water are considered exempt from wider disclosure given the expectation of privacy of correspondence from an applicant.
- (ii) NI Water maintains a Trade Effluent Register in line with Article 255 of the Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006. The Order specifies that NI Water will make available copies of consents given (to discharge):
  - a) to be viewed free of charge in person at the company's offices or
  - b) to be provided on receipt of a fee (which the company currently waives) per copy to the requestor. NI Water is not obliged to organise or make available:

information that would be excepted from disclosure under EIR Regulation 12 (after application of the public interest test); or third party personal data, the disclosure of which would breach the Data Protection Act 1998.

Department for Social Development

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Social Development how his Department can assist local communities in large housing developments, such as Coolnagard in Omagh, to secure appropriate funding and support to build a multi-purpose community centre.

(AQW 36385/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The provision of facilities such as a multi-purpose community centre would normally fall within the remit of the local Council. However, the Housing Executive may become involved in instances where the site for such a facility is in Housing Executive ownership and the Council makes an approach seeking to have the land transferred to it.

In relation to this particular area, the Housing Executive advise that this appears to be a private estate in which they do not own any land. They advise that the largest Housing Executive site in proximity to Coolnagard is at Dergmoney Heights and they will be happy to work with any organisation interested in developing it for community use.

Finally, you may be aware that the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action (NICVA) operate a 'grant tracker' which can be used to explore possible funding opportunities. The grant tracker can be accessed via the following link: <http://www.grant-tracker.org/>

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 34233/11-15, to detail the companies currently engaged in installing double glazing in Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties; and (i) the number and (ii) the value of the contracts which have been awarded, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 36445/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the contractors who are currently performing “full installation” of double glazing are:-

In relation to (i) and (ii) the information is detailed in the table attached.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27463/11-15, where it was explained that as a buffer and accountability mechanism the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE) Director of Transformation would report to the NIHE Chief Executive; and to whom the Director of Transformation now reports to within the NIHE.

(AQW 36679/11-15)

Mr Storey: When Ms Mags Lightbody was appointed as the Director of Transformation in November 2013 her line manager was the then Chief Executive, Dr John McPeake. Upon the retirement of Dr McPeake in March 2014, a selection process was undertaken from within the Housing Executive for an interim Chief Executive. Ms Lightbody was appointed to the role following that selection and now reports directly to the Chairman of the Housing Executive. As the Director of Transformation post is currently vacant Ms Lightbody, as interim Chief Executive, is responsible for leading the Housing Executive's transformation programme.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the number of properties which are still to benefit from the window replacement scheme in Holywood during the 2014/15 financial year.

(AQW 36743/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the remaining 13 single glazed properties in Holywood are included in the Bangor 2 double glazing mop-up scheme which is due to start in October 2014.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has undertaken a review of the voluntary housing sector; and if a review is necessary prior to registering housing associations as charities. (AQW 36791/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has not undertaken a review of the voluntary housing sector in the context of charity registration. The Commission does not consider that such a review is necessary. Charity registration applications from housing associations are assessed on a case by case basis and, at 30 September 2014, 3 registered housing associations have been registered as charities with the Commission.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the number of charities that the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has brought to court; (ii) the names of the charities; (iii) the cost in legal fees to the Commission, including the time of in-house solicitors; and (iv) the number of times the Attorney General has been called on for advice on such cases, in the last five years.

(AQW 36812/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the last five years:

- (i) The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has not brought any charities to court. However, the Commission did appeal a Charity Tribunal decision, in relation to Bangor Provident Trust Limited, to the High Court.
- (ii) Bangor Provident Trust Limited (appeal to High Court, as mentioned at (i)).
- (iii) The cost of the Commission's appeal to the High Court against the Charity Tribunal decision in the matter of the Bangor Provident Trust Limited is included with other court costs, including those in respect of Victoria Housing Estates Limited, as these cases were joined. The total cost to date is £50,981.85. The Commission does not use a time recording system therefore information in relation to the time of in-house solicitors is not held.
- (iv) The longstanding convention is that, save in exceptional circumstances, the Attorney General's advice is not disclosed, nor whether or not such advice has been sought.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the number of charities that have brought the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland to court; (ii) the names of the charities; (iii) the cost in legal fees to the Commission, including the time of in-house solicitors; and (iv) the number of times the Attorney General has been called on for advice on such cases, in the last five years.

(AQW 36813/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the last five years:

- (v) The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has been brought to court by four charities. The Commission has also been brought to court by nine individuals, in relation to ongoing statutory inquiries into Lough Neagh Rescue Ltd and the Disabled Police Officers Association of Northern Ireland.
- (vi) The four charities are: Bangor Provident Trust Limited, Victoria Housing Estates Limited, the Ulster Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Disabled Police Officers Association of Northern Ireland.
- (vii) The cost of external fees to the Commission for these cases are as follows:
  - Bangor Provident Trust Limited and Victoria Housing Estates Limited: £50,981.85. These cases were joined and the figure shown includes the costs incurred by the Commission's appeal to the High Court in relation to a Charity Tribunal decision in relation to Bangor Provident Trust Limited;
  - Ulster Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals: £5,610
  - Disabled Police Officers Association of Northern Ireland: this case is ongoing and costs have not yet been determined.

The Commission does not use a time recording system therefore information in relation to the time of in-house solicitors is not held.
- (viii) The longstanding convention is that, save in exceptional circumstances, the Attorney General's advice is not disclosed, nor whether or not such advice has been sought.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 36869/11-15)

Mr Storey: There are currently seven members of staff from the Executive Information Service employed by the Department for Social Development. An additional two members of NICS staff provide administrative support to the Press Office.

Based on September 2014 figures, the annual cost of these staff would be £329,989.

The Press Office provides a range of communication services for the core Department, the Social Security Agency and the Child Support Agency.

These services include:

- Organising and attending departmental announcements across the wide remit of DSD business areas,
- Providing communications advice to Ministers on departmental issues,

- Developing strategic communication for departmental issues,

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development when the 2010 Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE) review into the case of the West Belfast Manager who was moved from their post, was issued to the NIHE Board.

(AQW 36911/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the review into the case of the West Belfast Manager was presented to the NIHE Board on 27 October 2010.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on who will be responsible for the new development at the former Kilclief flats site in Kilcooley, Bangor.

(AQW 36984/11-15)

Mr Storey: Ark Housing Association have been appointed by the Housing Executive to take forward plans to deliver 16 new general needs social homes at Kilclief Gardens, Bangor.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the timescale for the new build at the Kilclief flats site in Kilcooley, Bangor.

(AQW 36985/11-15)

Mr Storey: A planning application has been submitted and work is expected to start on site in March 2015 for completion by June 2016.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the Supporting People Programme to date.

(AQW 37010/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has invested substantial funding in the supporting people Programme since its introduction in 2003. The Government target to support 17,000 vulnerable people to live independently in the community has been exceeded year on year through significant capital and revenue investment. Housing support services are being delivered by over 120 providers in over 800 accommodation based housing schemes and 17 floating support schemes in the wider community to over 23,000 people.

The Supporting People budget for 2014/2015 has been approved at £74m to maintain current levels of service provision.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the new build housing planned for North Antrim in the next three years.

(AQW 37046/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the North Antrim Parliamentary Constituency area there are nine schemes totalling 241 units planned for construction. These are:

Year of planned development: 2014/15

- St Mary's P.S. Larne Road, Ballymena (Trinity) – 74 family units

Mr Anderson asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the number of properties which are still to benefit from the window replacement scheme in Lurgan during the 2014/15 financial year.

(AQW 37058/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that there are currently 232 properties with single glazed windows in the Lurgan district that will benefit from a window replacement scheme during 2014/15.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the recent research that found that 36.5 per cent of betting shops are found in the 10 per cent most deprived council wards.

(AQW 37095/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is aware of this recently published research and will study its findings carefully. I welcome any robust evidence which may contribute to the current review of gambling and the development of a more effective regulatory framework.

The Member may be aware that before a court grants a new bookmaking office licence, it must be satisfied that the number of such premises in the locality is inadequate to meet current demand. Also, the gambling law does not permit the transfer of a bookmaking office licence from one location to another.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what percentage of applicants on the housing waiting list on 1 January 2014 were in housing stress.

(AQW 37145/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that 53% of applicants on the waiting list at the 1st January 2014 were in housing stress.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development how many licences for betting shops have been granted in each of the last five financial years, broken down by (a) constituency; and (b) council area, including new and former boundaries.

(AQW 37160/11-15)

Mr Storey: Licensing of bookmaking offices is the responsibility of the courts.

My Department does not hold information, in the format requested, regarding licences issued by courts. The member may find it helpful to refer to the answer provided to AQW 30097/11-15 in respect of the number of bookmaking office licences granted in 2008/09 and 2013/14.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are any plans to introduce a Smart Move scheme in North Down.

(AQW 37404/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive tendered for a Private Rented Sector Access Scheme in mid 2013 and the scheme has been operational from April 2014 with Smartmove Housing being appointed as the scheme provider. Initially access to the scheme was restricted to homeless applicants on the waiting list who wanted to be housed in one of twelve areas, identified as being locations of high housing need. North Down was not included in the initial list.

It is anticipated that the access criteria for the scheme will be extended to all areas of Northern Ireland following an upcoming evaluation of the scheme scheduled later this month.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Copeland asked the Assembly Commission to detail the range of budgetary pressures across the Assembly which it has identified as inescapable.

(AQW 36947/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission has continued to deliver a complete range of services to the Assembly and its Members despite a reduction in its budget of 8.9% (equating to £4.32m) over the Spending Review 2010 (SR 2010) period. This cut has presented major challenges but the Assembly Commission has managed to remain within its allocated budget limit while absorbing upward inflationary pressures. This has been possible through a range of measures including a comprehensive Business Efficiency Programme. This Programme examined each area across the Assembly Secretariat and identified a series of measures to help the Commission meet its budgetary obligations.

This financial year (2014/15) is the final year of the SR 2010 settlement. The Commission has undoubtedly curtailed its expenditure on various initiatives over the SR 2010 period and has managed its budget for this year to the extent that no budgetary pressures above its budget allocation have been identified.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Byrne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the projects that have benefited from the Social Investment Fund.

(AQO 6079/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): Details of all projects prioritised within the funding allocation for each of the nine social investment fund zones are available on the OFMDFM website at <http://www.ofmdfmi.gov.uk/index/delivering-social-change/social-investment-funds/sif-projects.htm>.

To date funding has been allocated to 23 of these projects, representing a commitment of £34.4 million. Officials are working closely with the lead partners of these projects to get them up and running. Indeed, a capital project in the Northern Zone, Causeway Rural and Urban Network, has contractors on site.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the current annual spend by the Strategic Investment Board on advisers/consultants.

(AQW 35937/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Strategic Investment Board expenditure on external advice/consultancy for the financial year 2013/14 was £426,571. This is broken down by project as follows:

Year	Project	Total
13.14	Asset Management Unit	55,729
	Household efficiency and thermal improvement project	13,930
	Sustainable use of poultry litter project	23,154
	Primary Health Care Programme	286,938
	PSNI Projects	8,142
	Regeneration: Sally Gardens	3,658
	Desertcreat Training College	17, 573
	External assurance of procurement review	2,000
	Titanic Quarter Signature Project	15,447
13.14 Total		426,571

It is currently projected that SIB will spend £562,000 on consultancy in 2014/15, although this is subject to change as SIB responds to the needs of organisations.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the total number of applications received by the Central Good Relations Funding Programme 2014/15; and how many were awarded funding.

(AQW 36260/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Two hundred and twelve applications were received for the Central Good Relations Fund 2014/15. Two hundred of these applications were for project funding and 12 were for small grants.

Five of the 12 small grants applications have been approved and 7 were unsuccessful. All small grant applicants have been advised of the decision relating to their application.

Of the 200 applications for project funding, 21 have been approved based on the current available budget. The remaining applications for project funding will be re-considered if further funding becomes available.

It should be noted that the Central Good Relations Fund is a small central scheme designed to distribute funding in year. We primarily fund good relations work through the Community Relations Council and all District Councils. The fund does not and will not replace mainstream core or project funding.

Mrs Overend asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the level of funding needed to progress a cross-departmental internet safety strategy.
(AQW 36407/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In June 2014, agreement in principle was obtained from the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI) to develop an e-safety and action plan.

In the near future, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety will submit a proposal, to commission the SBNI to take this work forward, to the Executive for approval.

This will include details of the level of funding required.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 34227/11-15, how many eligible applications across Schemes 1-6 held by the Victims and Survivors Service have not received letters of offer.
(AQW 36596/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: All applications received for schemes currently open under the Individual Needs Programme, for which eligibility has been confirmed, have been processed and award letters issued. As of the end of September, 307 applications were outstanding, pending confirmation of eligibility.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on progress in the regeneration of Ebrington.
(AQW 36715/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Ebrington Development Framework, completed in March 2014, outlines how the Ebrington site will integrate with the city, ultimately supporting an additional 1,800 jobs in the city and additional GVA of £42m. The framework will be submitted for outline planning permission in autumn 2014.

Ebrington Square is a key shared space in the city, with over 600,000 people attending events in the space, including Peace One Day concert, Clipper festival concerts, One Big Weekend and, most recently, MTV Crashes.

To date, Ilex has completed the development at Ebrington Square, the "Peace Bridge", and Building 79 for the City of Culture headquarters. Building 80/81 temporarily housed the Turner Prize 2013, and Ilex is now progressing with the fitting out of one floor for the Creative Industries Hub. A managing operator has been appointed for the Hub.

The following projects are being taken forward in 2014/15:

Project	Building	Timescale
DOE office accommodation	Building 71	October 2014
Underground car park/enabling platform		October 2014
Commercial activity	Building 70	December 2014/January 2015
Ilex office accommodation	Building 83	January/February 2015
Cafe/allied retail	Building 57/59	March/April 2015
Creative Hub	Building 80/81	Quarter 1 2015
Hotel development	TBC	Issue to market December 2014/January 2015

Ilex has received over 106 expressions of interest in the site, with 56 formal written submissions and has engaged commercial property consultants to advertise market opportunities.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the findings of Stage 2 of the Ebrington Development Framework Public Consultation will be published.
(AQW 36716/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A draft Ebrington Development Framework was published in January 2014 and the Stage 2 public consultation ran until March 2014. The Stage 2 consultation resulted in no substantive changes to the Framework. The ethos, mix, scale of development and the economic impacts and benefits remain as previously published. There are no plans to publish separately the findings of the Stage 2 consultation.

Subsequent to public consultation, Ilex undertook a final Pre-Application Discussion (PAD) process guided by DoE Planning Service. The PAD process concluded in September. Ilex now proposes to submit an outline planning application by the end of October 2014 which takes account of the outcomes of both statutory and non-statutory consultation and will include the findings of Stage 2 of the Ebrington Development Framework Public Consultation. This application will represent the final proposed framework for Ebrington.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail (i) when the car park development at Ebrington will be completed; and (ii) the total cost of the project.

(AQW 36717/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The car park development will be completed in October 2014. The contract cost is £4.96m.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the number of expressions of interest in Ebrington received from (i) private sector; and (ii) public sector investors.

(AQW 36719/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: By 31 August 2014, Ilex had received 106 enquiries. From this total of 106 enquiries, Ilex received 56 formal/written submissions. These are shown in the following table, broken down between private (including community and voluntary) sector and public sector.

	Enquiries	Formal/written submissions
Private	102	54
Public	4	2
	106	56

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the development of a maritime museum at Ebrington.

(AQW 36720/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A draft Economic Appraisal for a Maritime Museum at Ebrington has been prepared for Derry City Council and is awaiting final approval by the Project Board. Once approval is received, a full business case will be developed to bid for the necessary funding. The Museum is expected to open in spring 2019.

Mr B McCrea asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how much their Department has spent on funding voluntary projects operated by faith based organisations in the last three years.

(AQW 37087/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Within the last three years, the Department has provided funding to voluntary projects operated by faith based organisations, who have met programme specific criterion, as follows:

Funding Scheme	Organisation	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15
Central Good Relations Fund	Shankill Parish Caring Association		£4,000
North Belfast Strategic Good Relations Programme	Rathcoole Churches Community Group	£11,950.00	£10,905	£9,269.25
Minority Ethnic Development Fund	Belfast Islamic Centre		£14,975
	Embrace	£44,693	£44,386
	Dialogue for Diversity		£3,573

Belfast Islamic Centre is a charity that intends "to provide for the needs of Muslims in Northern Ireland". Embrace defines itself as "a voluntary group of Christians", whilst the Dialogue For Diversity was set up by Irish and British Jesuits and people from other churches.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the changes she has made to the quality of rural tourism on offer; and the number of rural tourists during this time.

(AQW 36912/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): My Department has no specific responsibility for improving tourism quality or numbers in the north of Ireland. However by way of strengthening the rural economy and improving the quality of life for rural dwellers my Department supports the development of the tourism offering in the north in line with the strategic aims of the NI Tourist Board.

As explained in my response to AQW 9548/11-15 my Department supports improved recreation and tourism facilities on Forest Service land through the development of partnership arrangements with local authorities and other tourism providers. This approach has led to the development of improved facilities in many areas including new mountain bike projects, play facilities and walking trails. Furthermore under Axis 3 of the rural Development programme 2007-2013, the Encouragement of tourism activities measure has committed £15.9m to 253 projects with over £12m having been paid to date. This includes for example projects such as the development of Grey Point Fort; Lissan House; Cushendun Camping Pods; and Davagh Forest Recreation Trails. Funded projects have to date resulted in additional tourist visits in excess of 530,000.

The Loughs Agency continues to play a major role in promoting and marketing Foyle and Carlingford Loughs. This has been done through the Foyle Maritime Festival 2014, the promotion of angling development, delivery of Interreg IVa programmes, provision of a portable event platform for Carlingford Lough and various Food Festivals and other tourism initiatives. This year also saw the return of the prestigious Round the World Clipper Event to the City. This event was an outstanding success.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development who is responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of the public car park in Tardree Forest, County Antrim.

(AQW 37013/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service is responsible for the management of Tardree forest and within this forest there is a gravel-surfaced informal parking area, known locally as Duncan's car park.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the timescale for the replacement of trees in Cairn Wood, County Down.

(AQW 37081/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The timescale for the replacement of trees at Cairn Wood will be in line with the most up to date scientific advice relating to the replanting of disease affected sites. Currently this would suggest that replanting operations would be anticipated to commence in the spring of 2016.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the cost of the (i) removal; and (ii) replacement of the trees in Cairn Wood, County Down.

(AQW 37083/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The felling and removal of trees at Cairn wood will be carried out by a privately owned licensed timber processor and any direct tree felling and extraction costs related to this operation will be under their management control.

It is anticipated that the future costs of re-establishing trees at Cairn Wood would amount to approximately £25,000.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures will be put in place to prevent a reoccurrence of the circumstances that led to the need to destroy trees at Cairn Wood, County Wood.

(AQW 37086/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As a result of the confirmation of Phytophthora ramorum infection in larch trees at Cairn Wood, a programme of felling affected trees is being undertaken. Felling of these trees will prevent any further sporulation of the disease from the tree foliage, providing the most effective means of reducing the risk and potential for spread to other tree species at Cairn Wood. Biosecurity protocols and public signage are also in place aimed at reducing the risk and potential for spread through other pathways.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the plan for the replacement of trees at Cairn Wood, County Down.

(AQW 37088/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The long term objective for Cairn Wood is the establishment of a more resilient mixed tree species woodland taking account of its wider social and environmental benefits. The plan for re-establishing trees at Cairn Wood will include the use of both broadleaved and conifer trees with broadleaved trees being re-established primarily through the use of natural seed sources.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether agency or other staff from outside the Northern Ireland Civil Service have worked on the Rural Development Programme over the last two years.

(AQW 37109/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A wide range of outside providers have been contracted to work on the Rural Development Programme over the past two years, including:-

- Countryside Services Ltd (elements of Axis 1)
- Ai Services (elements of Axis 1)

- FIT NI (delivery of ICT training to farm business)
- RMA Systems (development/design and maintenance of the System 2007 database)
- Joint Council Committees (The 'Quality of Life', Axis 3 measures) These were:
  - ARC North West, comprising: - Derry; Limavady; Omagh; and Strabane councils.
  - Down Rural Area Partnership, comprising: - Ards, Banbridge; Down; and North Down councils.
  - GROW, South Antrim, comprising: - Antrim; Carrickfergus; and Newtownabbey councils.
  - SOAR, comprising: - Armagh; Craigavon; and Newry and Mourne councils.
  - Lagan Rural Partnership, comprising: Belfast; Castlereagh; and Lisburn councils.
  - North East Region, comprising: - Ballymena; Ballymoney; Coleraine; Larne; and Moyle councils.
  - SWARD, comprising: - Cookstown; Dungannon and South Tyrone; Fermanagh; and Magherafelt councils.
- Rural Development Council (Rural Network facilitation).
- Premiere People Recruitment Agency (short-term administration support on Agri-environment schemes).
- Countryside Agri-rural Partnership (CARP) (delivery of Agri-Environment training to farmers).

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in her Department's Information Service.

(AQW 37156/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are 8 members of staff employed in DARD Media Services. This includes 4 information officers.

The total cost for these staff in 2013/14 was £255,206.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what impact the proposed reductions of the Single Farm Payment will have in Upper Bann.

(AQW 37191/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Single Farm Payments in Upper Bann will be reduced due to the impact of the currency exchange rate as well as the permanent scaleback of entitlements and imposition of financial discipline by the European Commission. These factors are outside the control of my Department and it is not possible, at this stage, to give detailed information on the value of the reduction in Upper Bann. It is envisaged that the reduction in Upper Bann will broadly reflect the overall estimated reduction across the north of Ireland of 9.5%.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an estimate of the costs associated with the replacement of the Animal and Public Health Information System.

(AQW 37210/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) is nearing the end of its life and plans are well advanced for its replacement.

The Notice of Intended Procurement published in the Official Journal of the European Union in July 2014 advised prospective suppliers that the estimated value of the contract ranged between £56,000,000 and £65,000,000 GBP (excluding VAT) for a period of up to 15 years.

The contract covers the development of the new system - including testing, support, migration of data from the existing systems, and managing the transition to the new system, as well as on-going maintenance and upgrades for up to 15 years.

The figures given in the Official Journal are taken from the Outline Business Case, which under HM Treasury guidelines must make allowance for "Optimism Bias", to accommodate and make allowance for the range of risks to which complex projects are exposed. This was calculated at 62% on top of the initial estimates of capital cost.

My officials have separately set out the NIFAIS Programme's resource and capital budget allocation in the briefing provided to the ARD Committee, in advance of the closed session on 7th October.

As my officials explained on that occasion, a number of interested companies are now being short-listed, prior to being invited to participate in Competitive Dialogue this November. You will therefore also be aware that commercial confidentiality is key to ensure not only the successful outcome of a good solution providing value for money, but also the maintenance of competitiveness, fairness and trust, as the procurement goes forward to award of contract, sometime late in 2015.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the level of reserves in each of her Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37218/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Reserves or Taxpayers' Equity held in each of the Department's arm's-length bodies is published in their Annual Report and Accounts and details of the Reserves held at the most recent year-end is provided in table 1.

Table 1: Reserves held in DARD's arm's-length bodies

Arm's-Length Body (Note 1) Reserves balance as at year ended:	AFBI 31/3/14 (draft)	LMC 31/3/14	NIFHA 31/3/14	FCILC 31/12/13

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the approximate number of staff that will move to her Department's new headquarters at Ballykelly; and whether economic benefits, through job creation in the local area, is a realistic outcome of this move.

(AQW 37295/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: On 26 June, the First Minister and deputy First Minister conveyed agreement to the relocation of my departmental headquarters to Ballykelly. The project is now proceeding and involves a new build, to accommodate 400 workstations to be completed by the end of 2017 and an extension to accommodate a further 200 workstations to be completed by end of 2020.

In order to ensure that there is a transfer of corporate knowledge to the new location my officials are preparing a detailed staff transition plan which will align with the 400 and 200 workstation arrangements.

The relocation of my department to Ballykelly will realistically help stimulate the local economy through increased local spending, provision of high quality and high value public sector jobs and potentially jobs associated with the construction and the ongoing servicing of the new accommodation. It will help to share wealth across the economy and contribute to better-balanced economic growth and help to address disparities in the distribution of public sector jobs in the north of Ireland.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what projects into mastitis in cows are funded, or intended to be funded, by her Department or its arm's-length bodies.

(AQW 37345/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Whilst my Department does not currently fund research specifically looking at mastitis in cows there are a number of on-going DARD directed AFBI research projects and Research Challenge Fund projects which are examining the effects of nutritional and management strategies on a range of milk production, health and fertility parameters, and mastitis is one of the issues that is covered in this analysis. This work will increase understanding on the effects of dairy cow nutrition and management on mastitis.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what funding the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute receive from her Department for the purposes of research.

(AQW 37346/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In 2014/15, AFBI is receiving almost £40m of funding from my Department. AFBI provides the Department with research, statutory and diagnostic services and an emergency response capability. The AFBI strategic cost model indicates that approximately £13m is allocated to the DARD directed research programme.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to departmental funding provided to the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) for research purposes, whether any opportunity is given to outside academics or groups to submit research proposals to AFBI that could be undertaken using this funding.

(AQW 37349/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) was created by DARD in 2006 as the Department's primary science provider. This means AFBI provides the Department with research, statutory and diagnostic services and emergency response capability. It should also be noted that the Department's investment in research at AFBI is complementary to AFBI's strategic capacity, enhancing and maintaining their core expertise for emergency response, statutory diagnostic and analytical testing, disease surveillance and specialist advice.

Under the DARD-Directed AFBI Research Programme there is scope for research projects to incorporate sub-contracted activities from other research institutes. Standard Government practices must be observed for all sub-contracted activities.

My Department is currently reviewing its Evidence and Innovation Strategy which provides a high level framework for DARD's evidence gathering and innovation support. As part of this, our current research commissioning arrangements will be reviewed in a process which will involve close liaison with stakeholders and other funders of research.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what funding or opportunities her Department offers for agricultural research projects, other than funding to the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute.

(AQW 37351/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In addition to the DARD-directed AFBI research programme, my Department provides funding for agricultural research projects through (1) Postgraduate Studentships and (2) the Research Challenge Fund (RCF).

Currently DARD is funding 26 Postgraduate Studentships, the majority of which are undertaken in conjunction with Queen's University Belfast or the University of Ulster. The research areas for these studentships (leading to PhDs) are directly related to DARD's priority evidence and innovation needs, to help drive innovation in the industry and provide high level training to underpin the science base in the north of Ireland.

The RCF is a key element of the DARD Evidence and Innovation Strategy. It gives small and medium sized businesses from the agri-food and other rural sectors an opportunity to get help with research and encourages collaboration between rural enterprises and the local, national and international research base. The main eligibility criteria for the Fund includes collaboration (must involve 2 or more industry and one public sector research partner) and the ability to show that projects will benefit the primary production sector in the north.

Finally, my Department is also providing funding for 3 years for a NI Contact Point, based at AFBI but with a remit across the north, to support, encourage and facilitate local businesses and researchers in applying for EU funding for agri-food related work and, thereby, increase drawdown of EU innovation funding.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many staff in (i) her Department; and (ii) its arm's-length bodies are employed on zero hour contracts.

(AQW 37035/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): I can advise that no staff in my Department, are employed on zero hour contracts, however, one of my Department's Arms Length Bodies, National Museums Northern Ireland (NMNI) does employ casual staff on permanent contracts of employment which do not guarantee any minimum level of hours, ie, zero hour contracts. The frequency of which staff work is based on their own availability as well as with the Museums operational need. Numbers of casual staff employed by site is provided in the table below:

Site	Casual Staff
Armagh County Museum	3
Ulster American Folk Park	37
Ulster Folk Transport Museum	57
Ulster Museum	60
Total	157

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) number; and (ii) grade of staff which Libraries NI envisage as a shortfall.

(AQW 37166/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that it is currently working through the process of determining its revised staffing requirements in order to achieve in-year savings of 4.4%. As a consequence, it is not yet possible to detail the overall staffing shortfall other than to note that 37 Full-Time Equivalent agency staff have recently been released. These staff were all at Library Assistant grade.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many agency staff have had their employment terminated by Libraries NI in the last six months; and at what grades they were employed.

(AQW 37167/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that, in order to achieve in-year savings of 4.4%, it has released 37 Full Time Equivalent agency staff. These staff are employed by an agency rather than Libraries NI. Any decision on whether or not they can be redeployed is a matter for the agency concerned. Those released are all at Library Assistant grade.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many unfilled and vacant posts have been identified by Libraries NI; and at what grade are these posts.
(AQW 37168/11-15)

These were all at Library Assistant grade.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what are the implications of the cuts to Libraries NI to the future of (i) public access terminals; (ii) story time; and (iii) computer learning.
(AQW 37169/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that public access terminals will be available to customers as usual throughout library opening hours. In temporarily reducing opening hours, Libraries NI aims to keep its libraries open at the busiest times and to provide the most popular core activities. Although the number of storytimes and computer learning sessions may decrease it is not yet possible to quantify these reductions.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) number; and (ii) grade of staff which Libraries NI envisage as a shortfall.
(AQW 37171/11-15)

As a consequence, it is not yet possible to detail any overall staffing shortfall other than to note that 37 Full-Time Equivalent agency staff have recently been released. These were all at Library Assistant grade.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how Libraries NI can mediate against closures because of forced staffing cuts.
(AQW 37202/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that the measures under consideration to deliver its in-year savings of £1.4m do not include the permanent closure of any library. However, in some cases there may be temporary ad hoc closures. Advance notice will be provided to the public wherever possible.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether all senior posts within Libraries NI are currently filled; and if not, whether any of these vacancies have been identified to be carried until the 2015/16 budget is confirmed.
(AQW 37204/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that all senior posts within the Authority are currently filled. Should any vacancy arise, the need to fill the post will be scrutinised rigorously before a decision is made to fill it.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) for a breakdown of her Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether she will deposit a copy of her Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37205/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Bids made for both capital and resource budget in the October monitoring round are described in the table below. Further information on each bid is also included. The Department will forward details of bids for deposit in the Assembly library.

2. This bid will cover inescapable pressures related to the North West Sporting Village and the North West Boxing programme.
3. Other elements within City of Culture Legacy are provided for in this bid.
4. DCAL supported the Carl Frampton event in the expectation the Executive would provide funding.
5. This bid relates specifically to a joint DCAL/DE programme designed to deliver positive educational outcomes as part of City of Culture Legacy.
6. This bid covers a shortfall in the depreciation budget. The pressure has arisen across a number of the Department's Arm's Length Bodies.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the level of importance attached to the delivery of customer service at each library; and how Libraries NI can mediate against the forced closure because of staffing cuts.
(AQW 37274/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Both Libraries NI and my Department attach great importance to customer service at all public libraries. Libraries NI will endeavour to provide the best customer service possible within the resources available to it.

Libraries NI has informed me that the measures under consideration to deliver its in-year savings of £1.4m do not include the permanent closure of any library. However, in some cases there may be temporary ad hoc closures. Advance notice of such closures will be provided to the public wherever possible.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether all senior posts in Libraries NI are filled; and if there are any vacancies arising that may not be filled until the 2015/16 budget is defined.
(AQW 37275/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that all senior posts within the Authority are currently filled. Should any vacancy arise, the need to fill the post will be scrutinised rigorously before a decision is made to fill it.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure advise what are the budgetary implications of cuts in the longer term in relation to issuing books, public access terminals use, story time and computer learning in Libraries NI.
(AQW 37276/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that book issues and accessibility to public access terminals will continue as usual during a library's opening hours.

By temporarily reducing opening hours Libraries NI aims to keep its libraries open at the busiest times, and also to continue providing the most popular core activities. Although the number of storytimes and computer learning sessions may decrease it is not yet possible to quantify these reductions.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether staff in Libraries NI can be redeployed to ensure service provision to the public is maintained.

(AQW 37277/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that where the flexibility exists to redeploy staff to other libraries, to ensure that its service provision to the public is maintained, it will give careful consideration to any such redeployment opportunities.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support her Department has provided to grass roots soccer programmes in East Londonderry since 2011.

(AQW 37293/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, has supported grassroots football in the constituency area since 2011 through the presence of a sports development officer who has offered a range of opportunities to clubs in the area. These include the hosting of a North West Coaching Forum for coaches and club volunteers in 2011 and 2013; ongoing guidance and support around the 'Clubmark' accreditation scheme; and offering bespoke coach development workshops in the region during 2011 and 2012. The officer has also attended local club presentation nights on behalf of Sport NI.

In the 2013/14 financial year, the Foyle Cup received funding of £30,000 as part of the 2013 City of Culture. In addition, throughout the City of Culture year, the Irish Football Association delivered a wide range of football training initiatives including soccer schools, street leagues and coaching courses as well as the UEFA Grassroots Day Festival of Football 2013.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she has plans in place to ensure that the legacy of the UK City of Culture filters down to smaller towns, such as Castlerock, Garvagh and Kilrea.

(AQW 37391/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: To tackle significant socio economic need and build on the success of City of Culture 2013 my Department has established a strategic focus on cultural development across the North West region, including the rural area beyond Derry City and the larger towns.

A DCAL North West Office has been established to maintain partnerships, momentum and to ensure the Department's activities in the North West achieve maximum impact.

My Department's on-going work across museums, libraries, arts, sports, languages and creative industries, and their support to education, the economy, social inclusion and health and wellbeing, forms the central pillar of City of Culture legacy actions.

This work is taking place throughout the entire North West. For example, NI Screen, through its Creative Learning Centre at the Nerve Centre, is undertaking work in the Castlerock, Garvagh and Kilrea areas and there are 50 FilmClub schools in the North West area, 15 of which are located in rural areas.

Libraries NI delivers a wide range of targeted services in the North West including activities in both Garvagh and Kilrea libraries.

Arts Council NI have also provided funding in Kilrea and Garvagh under their Musical Instruments for Bands programme.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the fish kill of salmon smolts and parr at the eel fishery in Portna Kilrea during the first two weeks of October; and what action has been taken by her Department to protect salmon smolts and parr at this facility as per EU obligations.

(AQW 37400/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department received a report of a fish kill in the vicinity of Portna on Thursday 9 October 2014 and immediately a Fisheries Protection Officer was tasked to collect any dead fish for analysis.

In response to the incident, my Department has commissioned AFBI scientists to assist with an investigation and this is currently on-going. This will report on the circumstances of the incident and inform any further action required to ensure the protection of salmon smolts and parr and other fish stocks.

I will advise you of the outcome of this investigation in due course.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether any museums funded by her Department have cash reserves; and if so to list the museums and their respective reserves.

(AQW 37496/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department's funding of the museums sector in the north of Ireland is primarily directed to National Museums NI and also the NI Museums Council. Neither of these bodies is permitted to hold cash reserves.

The NI Museums Council also runs a small grant programme to support museums within the local museums sector. None of the museums funded by the Council in 2014/15 hold cash reserves.

In support of the Decade of Centenaries programme my Department also provides some direct funding to the Somme Heritage Centre. The Centre does not hold cash reserves.

You may wish to note that a cash management policy exists to minimise cash balances held around the DCAL family. Each Arms Length Body is therefore provided with cash on the basis of monthly 'drawdowns'. These are normally calculated upon an organisation's needs for the succeeding month only.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the court case surrounding the redevelopment of Casement Park.
(AQW 37546/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: A Judicial Review Leave Application against the DOE's decision to grant planning approval for Casement Park was lodged in April 2014. Leave for Judicial Review was granted in June 2014.

The High Court Judicial Review case hearing finished on 13th October 2014 and judgement is currently reserved whilst the Judge considers all the arguments presented prior to delivering a decision, which is expected to take a number of weeks with the final decision anticipated in November 2014.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) what action she will take to preserve the name of the Ulster Orchestra; (ii) whether appropriate weighting has been given to its unique role and ambassadorial function in applying criteria for allocating funding to cultural events and organisations; (iii) whether the inclusive nature of the Orchestra's programme of performance, arts education and outreach was considered; (iv) whether there has been liaison between her Department and the Orchestra's other major sponsors, such as the BBC, to discuss alternative funding mechanisms; and (v) her assessment of the impact of the potential closure of the Orchestra on other growing creative industries, such as film and television production, given her personal commendation of its collaboration with NI Screen in March 2014.
(AQW 37562/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster Orchestra (UO) needs to develop a long-term, sustainable approach to address its current financial difficulties. Departmental officials together with the Arts Council have been liaising with the UO and its sponsors to discuss potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms.

I recently met with representatives of the Orchestra to explore the nature of the problems it faces and the work it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. Further work is being undertaken by the Orchestra, over the next few weeks to identify potential options for the future.

DCAL funding to the UO is mainly administered by the Arts Council, although my Department has also supported the organisation through the Creative Industries Fund. It is a matter for the Arts Council to apply its funding criteria fairly and equitably across all applicants. These criteria include: Quality of Artistic Activity; Public Benefit; and Governance and Financial Management. Within these, the Arts Council is of the view that the Orchestra's artistic vision, strategic partnerships and track record of high quality activity and engagement with audiences all illustrate its unique and ambassadorial role on the local, national and international concert platforms and in the community. When making its funding decisions the Arts Council also considers the Orchestra's programme, which engages annually with 100,000 people from all backgrounds and settings including schools, universities and community projects.

The UO is an important cultural partner, collaborating with educational institutions, other arts organisations (such as NI Opera and the Belfast Philharmonic Choir), local authorities, and broadcasting institutions. It provides unique opportunities for local composers and musicians to enhance their career development and these would be unavailable if the Orchestra were to close.

NI Screen also promotes the Orchestra to the film and television industry. The impact on the wider creative industries of the closure of the UO would be in the form of a lost opportunity to build on and realise the benefits of this fledgling collaboration, as well as existing ones.

Regarding any potential change of name, this would be a matter for the Orchestra itself. I would not, however, be opposed to a change of name, particularly if it offered the Orchestra an opportunity to promote and affirm a clear shift in strategic direction to a new business model based on principles of engagement, inclusivity and outreach work especially to the wider community.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what plans her Department has to prevent the Ulster Orchestra from entering administration by the end of 2014.
(AQW 37588/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster Orchestra (UO) needs to develop a long-term, sustainable approach to address its current financial difficulties. Departmental officials together with the Arts Council have been liaising with the Ulster Orchestra (UO) and its sponsors to identify future, potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms. I recently met with representatives of the Orchestra to explore the nature of the problems it faces and the work it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. Further work is being undertaken by the Orchestra, over the next few weeks to identify potential options for the future.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the programme of events which has been organised to mark the 50th anniversary of the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum.
(AQW 37612/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: National Museums has advised that the main event organised to mark the 50th anniversary of the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum (UFTM) was the Folk Life Festival held on Monday 5 May. The event included performances from some of the best known names in Irish traditional music as well as performances from a Royal Scottish Pipe Band, Lambeg drum demonstrations, poetry recitals and a range of foods 'straight from the open fire'. Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action she is taking to secure the future of the Ulster Orchestra.

(AQW 37623/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am aware of the financial difficulties currently being experienced by the Ulster Orchestra (UO) and of the need for it to develop a long-term, sustainable approach to address these issues. I recently met with representatives of the Orchestra to explore the nature of the problems it faces and the work it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. In addition, officials from my Department have, together with the Arts Council, been liaising with the UO and its sponsors to discuss potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms. Further work is being undertaken by the Orchestra, over the next few weeks to identify potential options for the future.

Department of Education

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the capacity of non-grammar schools to meet the challenges of maintaining and improving on the number of students achieving the expected levels of performance in English and maths.

(AQW 37292/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The status or name of a school is irrelevant to the quality of education the school provides. All schools deliver the same curriculum. International reports tell us that we need to have a socially balanced school system to enable all pupils to achieve their potential. However, the continued use of academic selection by some schools presents significant challenges for all schools.

International and local evidence highlights the link between deprivation and educational attainment and shows that schools with the highest concentrations of socially deprived pupils face the greatest challenges in supporting their pupils. In our post primary sector this concentration of deprivation is most evident in non-selective schools and I'm cognisant of the particular challenges these schools face.

It should also be noted however, that a number of non-selective schools have been successful in overcoming this challenge and in delivering improved outcomes for their pupils. Examples can be found in the case studies included in the Education and Training Inspectorate's (ETI) report entitled 'The Survey of Best Practice in English and Mathematics in Post-Primary Schools'.

<http://www.etini.gov.uk/index/surveys-evaluations/surveys-evaluations-post-primary/surveys-evaluations-post-primary-2013/best-practice-in-english-and-mathematics-in-post-primary-schools.pdf>

My aim is to improve equity in our system. I am supporting schools to achieve this through a set of evidence based policies that are designed to raise standards; by taking forward a range of additional interventions; and by working to raise parental and community aspirations.

I have redistributed school funding to target schools with high numbers of pupils from socially disadvantaged backgrounds and injected a further £10 million specifically targeting social deprivation into school budgets from April 2014.

Within schools, I am implementing a range of funded programmes to improve pupils' outcomes in literacy and numeracy. These include the Delivering Social Change programme to employ additional teachers, a literacy and numeracy CPD Key Stage 2/3 Project, the Strategic Development Fund to Area Learning Communities and the Greater West Belfast Primary Schools Project. In addition, the ETI is delivering a targeted support programme in a number of post primary schools which aims to bring about improvements in the teaching of GCSE English and maths.

The ETI has also worked with ESaGS.tv to identify good practice in the teaching of English and mathematics and working with effective practitioners, shared good practice with other schools. It is through such dissemination of good practice that schools can develop the capacity to raise standards achieved by their pupils.

Alleviating deprivation and its impact cannot be tackled by schools alone. I am also providing additional funding to support recently initiated programmes targeted at socially deprived communities. These include the Community Education Initiatives Programme and the Greater West Belfast Community Project. The Education Works advertising campaign is also aimed at delivering positive educational outcomes.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the schools in North Down that sought capital funding for new school buildings; (ii) what each school scored in each of the criteria against which the proposals were judged; (iii) the total score of each school; and (iv) the score of the lowest scoring school to receive capital funding, in each of the four capital funding announcements for major works projects, since 2007.

(AQW 37298/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The four capital funding Announcements were in 2010, 2012, 2013 and 2014. The protocols detailing the criteria and scoring mechanisms utilised for the Announcements in 2012, 2013 and 2014 are available on the Departments website and may be accessed at the following hyperlink; <http://www.deni.gov.uk/index/schools-and-infrastructure-2.htm>

2010 Announcement

The rationale for the 2010 Announcement may be found in my response to AQW 35433/11-15.

2012 Announcement

The following schools in North Down were considered as potential new build projects in North Down:-

Schools
Hollywood Schools* (Hollywood Nursery School, Hollywood Primary School and Priory College)
St Columbanus College

- * The South Eastern Education and Library Board submitted Holywood Nursery School, Holywood Primary School and Priory College as a combined project.

Each proposed project was taken through the 2012 Announcement protocol process. Under Stage 1 of the process any projects over which there was any degree of uncertainty or that needed to be considered in the context of an area solution were eliminated.

The Holywood Schools project did not progress to Stage 2 as Priory College did not meet the sustainability criteria. St Columbanus College did not progress as it was also below the sustainability criteria and clarity was required within the area planning context.

2013 Announcement

The following schools in North Down were considered as potential new build projects in North Down:-

Primary Schools	Post Primary Schools
Bangor Central Integrated Primary School	Priory College
Holywood Primary School	St Columbanus College

Each proposed project was taken through the 2013 Announcement protocol process and only schools that were deemed to be viable and in line with the needs of the area (as determined by the emerging area planning process) were eligible for assessment under stages 2 and 3 of the process.

Holywood Primary, Priory College and St Columbanus College did not progress to stage 2. The scores for the remaining school are set out below:-

Name of School	Rationalisation	Accommodation inadequacies	Reliance on Temp Accommodation	Total
Bangor Central PS	0	18.3	6.52	24.82

The score of the lowest scoring school to receive capital funding in the primary school sector was 32.58 and in the post primary sector was 32.28.

2014 Announcement

I refer to my response to AQW 34710/11-15 for the scoring etc for the North Down schools that sought funding in 2014.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of (i) the health and safety implications for pupils of shale hockey pitches at schools; and (ii) when these pitches will be replaced by more modern and safer playing surfaces.
(AQW 37377/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There is no evidence that the health and safety risk to pupils is significantly greater on a properly maintained shale pitch than on other playing surfaces. While playing on a shale pitch has the potential to cause minor injuries from grit induced skin abrasions, synthetic playing surfaces can result in heat abrasion burns which can be slower to heal than grit induced abrasions to the skin from a shale surface.

The move to synthetic playing surfaces in recent years is primarily reflective of the fact that these surfaces may be used throughout the year for a range of games and therefore offer greater availability and flexibility in delivery of the physical education curriculum.

There are no plans for a specific programme to replace shale hockey pitches at this time. However should a school have health and safety concerns about any type of playing pitch, it should contact the relevant managing authority in the first instance. If the school authority considers that a pitch needs to be improved then an application for minor capital works may be considered by either the Education and Library Board (ELB), for a controlled school, or the Department if it is a school in the non-controlled sector. Applications for minor capital works are assessed against criteria common to the five ELBs. Where possible, ELBs also seek to provide such sports facilities for schools in collaboration with district councils, sports clubs and organisations such as SportNI so that facilities can be provided for joint school and community use.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the current average waiting time for an Educational Psychologist across all Education and Library Boards; and (ii) the current waiting time for an Educational Psychologist in the Belfast Education and Library Board.

(AQW 37423/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards, including the Belfast Education and Library Board, have advised that the average waiting time between a pupil being referred to an educational psychologist and having their first appointment for the period 1 October 2013 – 30 September 2014 is as follows:

	Number of Days
BELB	29

	Number of Days
NEELB	81
SEELB	100
SELB	63
WELB	77

These figures refer to Stage 3 (non statutory) assessments as outlined in the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how many posts Gavin Boyd currently holds within education administration; and of these, how many are paid posts.

(AQW 37430/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Gavin Boyd is a senior official in the Department of Education. In addition to this role, he is Interim Chief Executive of the Southern Education and Library Board for which he receives no additional remuneration.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of the electrical maintenance and repair contracts for the Southern Education and Library Board, in each of the last five financial years.

(AQW 37435/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The following table details costs in relation to electrical maintenance and repair contracts for the Southern Education and Library Board in each of the last five financial years totalling over £7 million as follows:

2009/10 £000'S	2010/2011 £000'S	2011/2012 £000'S	2012/2013 £000'S	2013/2014 £000'S	Overall Total £000'S
850	922	855	1,654	2,805	7,086

* The above figures do not include individual small electrical maintenance and repairs funded from school budgets as LMS expenditure made directly by schools from their delegated budgets in relation to electrical maintenance is not available at that level of detail.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education whether he is satisfied that all schools have sufficient and credible documentation in place to defend cases brought against schools for failing to address the individual needs of pupils who leave education without basic skills in literacy and numeracy.

(AQW 37438/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education (School Development Plans) Regulations (NI) 2010 requires that schools maintain a summary and evaluation of their strategies in areas relating to the needs of pupils including:

- learning, teaching, assessment and the raising of standards of attainment among all pupils, in particular in Communication, Using mathematics and using ICT;
- providing for the special, additional or other individual educational needs of pupils; and
- promoting the health and well-being, child protection, attendance, good behaviour and discipline of pupils.

There are checks in place within the system to ensure schools are complying with the School Development Plans Regulations. These checks are undertaken by the Education and Library Boards. In addition, as part of the school inspection process, the Education and Training Inspectorate will report on the quality of the school development plan and whether it is compliant with the current regulations.

Schools are required to keep and update a formative record on the attendance and achievements of each pupil at the school. Schools are also required to provide an annual report to parents on the educational and other achievements of their child, including their achievement in statutory end of key stage assessments or public examinations.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 36476/11-15, why there is a planning application submitted for the extension of the current facilities.

(AQW 37483/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Tamnamore Learning Centre in Dungannon is part of the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) Education Otherwise Than At School (EOTAS) provision.

SELB has advised that, in accordance with Departmental guidelines, it aims to provide accommodation and general facilities for young people attending Tamnamore Learning Centre for EOTAS provision to the same standard as any school.

In this context, the Board has identified the need for upgrading of accommodation, car parking and play facilities at the Centre and has sought planning permission for these potential improvements.

I can confirm that any development work is subject to the financial resources available to SELB and that the Board is currently awaiting confirmation of construction estimates and bids for additional capital funding in order to finalise its programme of minor capital works for 2014/15. Any development at Tamnamore Learning Centre will be dependent on the outcome of this process.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of peripatetic teachers currently employed by the North Eastern Education and Library Board; and whether this will be impacted by the amalgamation of Education and Library Boards. (AQW 37506/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of peripatetic teachers currently employed by the North Eastern Education and Library Board is 87.

This will not be impacted by the amalgamation of the Education and Library Boards as TUPE and pension protection are included in the draft Education Bill.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education, in relation to review of Sure Start, to detail (i) when the review commenced; (ii) when the review will be concluded; and (iii) who conducted the review. (AQW 37527/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The independent Review of Sure Start commenced in June 2014 and is expected to conclude by end November 2014. The Review is being conducted by RSM McClure Watters (Consulting).

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) when Smile Sure Start was established; (ii) the area covered by Smile Sure Start when it was established; and (iii) any extensions to the original area and the dates when these extensions were made. (AQW 37529/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Smile Sure Start project was established by DHSSPS during 2003/2004 to provide services to the children under the age of 4 and their parents who live within the electoral ward areas of Duncairn, New Lodge, Waterworks and Castleview SOA 1 (Mount Vernon and Shore Crescent) in North Belfast. The catchment area of the project has not changed since its creation.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the schools that are currently classified as being in formal intervention. (AQW 37567/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The schools in formal intervention as at 17 October 2014 are listed below:

School
Dundonald High School
Dunluce School, Bushmills
Edenbrooke Primary School, Belfast
Euston Street Primary School, Belfast
Fleming Fulton School, Belfast
Laurelhill Community College, Lisburn
Monkstown Community School
Movilla High School, Newtownards
Springhill Primary School, Belfast
Tullygally Primary School, Lurgan
Wheatfield Primary School, Belfast

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many (i) controlled; and (ii) catholic maintained primary schools have transformed their management status to integrated since the option became available. (AQW 37605/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since the introduction of the statutory measures contained in the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989, which facilitate the transformation process, a total of 20 controlled primary schools have transformed to integrated status.

To date, no catholic maintained schools have transformed to integrated status.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how much St. Columbanus' College in Bangor has spent on heating in each of the last two years. (AQW 37658/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is only available for complete Financial Years. St Columbanus' College spent £32,036 on heating in the 2013/14 financial year and £36,863 on heating in the 2012/13 financial year.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many pupils currently attend St. Columbanus' College in Bangor.
(AQW 37659/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information provided relates to the 2013/14 school census, the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October this year, provisional figures will be available in December, finalised figures in February.

There were 601 pupils enrolled in St. Columbanus' College in Bangor in 2013/14.

Source: NI school census

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many teachers are currently employed by St. Columbanus' College in Bangor.
(AQW 37660/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In the 2013/14 academic year there were 39 teachers working at St Columbanus' College, with a full-time equivalent of 37.7 teachers.

Department for Employment and Learning

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how his Department is working with the higher and further education institutions and other stakeholders to implement an effective process for the Accreditation of Prior Experiential Learning.

(AQW 36821/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): My Department is committed to the principle that higher education, and Foundation Degrees in particular, are open to all those who have the ability to benefit from higher education. To help bring this about, we wish to encourage more people, who may have less in the way of formal qualifications, to consider applying for places in higher education on the basis of accredited prior experiential learning.

To this end, in 2010, my Department convened a working group with membership comprised of representatives from; the six further education colleges, Queen's University, University of Ulster, Open University, Foundation Degree Forward, the Alliance of Sector Skills Councils, and the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education.

In 2011, the group produced the University and College Accreditation of Prior Experiential Learning Guidelines that were endorsed by the whole sector and that draw upon good practice within the sector and across the UK. Implementation of the guidelines is being reviewed as part of Access to Success, my Department's widening participation strategy for higher education.

In addition, upskilling the existing workforce is a key element of the Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland. It is in this context that my Department commissioned independent research which examined the feasibility and desire to accredit the existing skills of experienced workers. At a macro level, the research found a range of issues likely to affect the demand for this programme and ultimately the desire from employers to accredit the existing skills of their workers. Following a value for money assessment, it was considered unfeasible to undertake a large scale national accreditation programme to recognise the prior learning of individuals.

At a sectoral level, my Department, in conjunction with the Construction Industry Training Board Northern Ireland, has undertaken a pilot project to examine the capacity to 'qualify the existing workforce' within the construction industry. The pilot exceeded its target, with 500 unqualified construction workers gaining an NVQ Level 2 qualification. My Department has committed to a second phase of the project which aims to qualify a further 1,000 workers to NVQ Level 2 over the next two years.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the affects on public health and welfare of the provision of recreational courses by Regional Colleges.
(AQW 36921/11-15)

Dr Farry: Under the current strategy for further education in Northern Ireland, Further Education Means Business, the primary purpose of further education colleges is to strengthen and support economic and workforce development and to advance individuals' skills and learning. Colleges are key deliverers of my Department's skills strategy and of the wider economic strategy for Northern Ireland. Colleges also have a role in enhancing social inclusion. While providing individuals with the skills to obtain a job or to progress within employment is one of the best ways to support social inclusion, traditionally colleges have also offered a range of recreational courses.

My Department's curriculum policy for further education has been developed to ensure that through their curriculum colleges achieve an appropriate balance between provision that strengthens economic and workforce development and enhances social cohesion. Around 97% of the Department's funding for colleges' provision at level 3 and below is in respect of courses that lead to professional and technical and academic qualifications on regulated qualifications frameworks. The balance of funding supports around 18,500 enrolments on courses that are recreational in nature, which is around 21% of all enrolments at level 3 and below.

While colleges offer recreational provision, public health and welfare is not the responsibility of my Department.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to list the key differences in employment legislation between Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom.

(AQW 37077/11-15)

Dr Farry: The key differences in employment legislation between Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom are listed in the table below.

Please note that the table does not deal with matters such as discrimination law and health and safety at work which, although conferring certain employment rights, are not within the remit of my Department.

My Department has been carrying out a review of the employment law framework, which has included consideration of some of the issues where there are currently differences between Northern Ireland and Great Britain. I plan to make an announcement on the outcome of the public consultation shortly.

My Department is also currently taking forward, by way of the Work and Families Bill, provisions to enhance pay and leave entitlements for working parents. The relevant rights will be available, as in Great Britain, from April 2015. The supplied table explains a minor timing issue in relation to these provisions.

Area of employment law where key difference exists	Great Britain Position (rest of the United Kingdom)	Northern Ireland Position
Pay and leave entitlement for working parents	The Children and Families Act 2014 set in place provision to allow for the introduction of shared parental leave and pay for parents of babies due from April 2015.  Regulations are now being prepared, with a view to catering for parents of babies due in April 2015. Some babies may be born as early as December 2014.	The Work and Families Bill, which contains corresponding provisions, recently completed its Committee Stage in the Northern Ireland Assembly.  It is anticipated that regulations will be in place before April 2015, though they will not be in place in time to cover the earliest premature births.
Right to accompany a parent to an antenatal appointment.  Right to attend a pre-adoption appointment.	The Children and Families Act 2014 facilitated the introduction, from October 2014, a new right for a partner to take unpaid time off work to accompany a woman to an antenatal appointment.  Also facilitated are a new right for primary adopters to take paid time off to attend pre-adoption appointments; and for their partners to take unpaid time off to do so.	The Work and Families Bill, which contains corresponding provisions, recently completed its Committee Stage in the Northern Ireland Assembly.  It is anticipated that corresponding rights will be available to working parents in Northern Ireland, at the latest, from April 2015.

ACAS has produced a statutory Code of Practice on settlement agreements which explains the term and provides guidance on the new law which concerns the confidentiality of settlement agreement negotiations.  Also introduced was a provision concerning confidentiality of negotiations before termination of employment which means that evidence of pre-termination negotiations will be inadmissible in subsequent proceedings	No comparable provision.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what package his Department will put in place to support workers from JTI Gallaher.

(AQW 37197/11-15)

Dr Farry: It is deeply regrettable that Japan Tobacco International (JTI) is proposing to close its production facility at Gallaher's, Lisnafillan by 2017/18, with the potential loss of 877 jobs. Your constituency of North Antrim will be one of several affected by the announcement.

As you are aware the Executive has appointed Minister Foster and me to lead on their response to this closure. To date my officials have been in contact with the local senior management of JTI Gallahers in Ballymena and have advised them of the services available through my Department for those who are working in the plant and may become redundant when it closes.

As you would expect in the immediate aftermath of the announcement the management's focus is on working with their staff and the Unions to plan the way ahead. I will ensure that over the coming months, my Department will work closely with the company to manage the closure process and ensure that the best advice, help and support are offered to all those affected employees at the appropriate time.

This can include access to my Department's Redundancy Advice Service where the Employment Service will work in partnership with the Social Security Agency, Further Education Colleges, HMRC and other agencies. This may centre on alternative job opportunities, mentoring, access to training courses, entrepreneurship, education opportunities and careers advice; as well as a range of other issues such as benefits and taxation for JTI Gallaher employees. This service is always delivered free of charge to the company and employees facing redundancy.

In direct response my staff in Ballymena Jobs and Benefits Office have already identified a dedicated team to provide immediate advice and support should any of the employees facing redundancy require immediate assistance. This could include guidance on initiatives and programmes, help with jobsearch, job clubs, writing CVs, job application forms, preparing for interviews, careers guidance or assistance with travel costs for interviews.

The further education sector has a key role in providing assistance to individual employees in particular the Northern Regional College (NRC), with support from the five other colleges. My officials and I will ensure that NRC maintains regular contact with JTI Gallaher's so that employees are made aware of the assistance that the colleges can provide.

As I am sure you are aware, NRC is a centre of excellence in engineering, and has worked with companies such as JTI Gallaher to provide a range of courses to their employees. The college's business support unit has also had experience in supporting previous redundancies in their area including FG Wilson.

I have also asked my officials to investigate the potential use of the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund through the Department for Work and Pensions (all requests for this Fund must be made by a member state government). This Fund can provide support to people losing their jobs as a result of major structural changes in world trade patterns due to globalisation.

In addition, I am the chair of the Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services Working Group, a group in which JTI Gallaher's has been represented since its inception. At a meeting of the group on Tuesday 14th October I addressed the Group specifically on the closure and job losses. I asked members to consider if any of their current or future vacancies will be suitable for any of the highly skilled JTI Gallaher staff.

I will also call upon the wider engineering sector to consider the JTI Gallaher workforce in any current or future job opportunities that they will have.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37221/11-15)

Dr Farry: The level of reserves in each of the Department of Employment and Learning's Arm's Length Bodies (ALBs) is detailed in the following table; ALBs did not have the information available as of 1 October so the closest date to this has been provided. A bracket denotes a deficit.

	Further Education Colleges 31/07/14 £'000	Stranmillis University College 30/09/14 £'000	Ulster Supported Employment Limited 01/10/14 £'000	CITB- Construction Skills Northern Ireland 31/08/14 £'000	Labour Relations Agency 31/03/14 £'000	Total £'000
Income and expenditure reserve	35,504	6,121	(484)	1,5071	314	44,262
Pension reserve	(55,669)	(4,081)	N/A	N/A	N/A	(61,050)
Revaluation reserve	267,707	N/A	24	83	43	267,857

There are specific accounting rules around the use of revaluation reserves, these are held after a revaluation of assets to fair value and therefore cannot be utilised for any other purpose. For all Further Education Colleges the pension deficit is higher than the income & expenditure reserves. With Stranmillis all reserves are fully committed to capital maintenance programmes.

CITB reserve includes pension reserves that cannot be separated out

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of graduates that have taken part in (i) the Youth Employment Scheme; and (ii) Steps to Work.

(AQW 37234/11-15)

Dr Farry: Youth Employment Scheme

As the Youth Employment Scheme is not specifically designed for young graduates my Department does not routinely gather data detailing the number of graduates that have participated. I am therefore unable to provide this information for the Youth Employment Scheme.

Steps to Work

Steps to Work (StW), has been my Departments main adult return to work programme since its introduction in September 2008. StW provides a flexible, individually tailored programme of support to help the unemployed and economically inactive to find employment irrespective of their level of educational attainment.

Detail on the qualifications held by those participating on StW is not systematically captured therefore; I am unable to advise you on the actual number of graduates who have taken part in the overall StW programme.

In January 2010, in response to an increase in graduate unemployed the StW programme was flexed and dedicated provision for graduates was introduced. This provision was known as the Graduate Acceleration Programme (GAP). Between January 2010 and June 2014 a total of 905 graduates availed of GAP through the StW programme.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37300/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department did not submit bids in the October 2014 monitoring round. The Department continues to manage within its allocated budget for 2014-15.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development has contacted him regarding a proposal for College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise staff to deliver the Level 2 Agricultural Qualification in Further Educational College buildings.

(AQW 37312/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development has not contacted me regarding any proposal for staff from the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) to deliver this qualification in further education college buildings.

Further education colleges are responsible for setting their own curriculum and deliver a range of courses including agriculture-related provision at level 2. I would suggest that CAFRE liaises directly with colleges regarding the use of their facilities to deliver the level 2 agricultural qualification.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he will consider the promotion of role model excellence as part of a drive to ensure that young people from working class areas are able to avail of further and higher education facilities in their own communities.

(AQW 37339/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department is committed to widening access and promoting educational opportunities for all individuals across Northern Ireland.

Further education (FE) colleges offer a variety of courses throughout their main campuses and in a significant number of community outreach centres. A range of initiatives already exist in colleges which use the concept of role models to encourage young people from all backgrounds and areas to avail of FE.

While my Department sets the strategic direction for the FE sector, individual colleges are responsible for marketing their own provision to potential students. Nonetheless my Department will continue to encourage colleges to employ a broad range of measures, including the use of role models, to promote participation in FE for all.

Supporting students from disadvantaged backgrounds into and through higher education is a key objective of my Department. In September 2012, I launched Access to Success, my Department's regional strategy to widen participation in higher education by students from disadvantaged backgrounds. The strategy has a strong focus on the creation of a more accessible sector in which the people who are most able, but least likely to participate are given every encouragement and support to apply to, and to benefit from, higher education.

The promotion of role model excellence plays a key part in the delivery of many elements of Access to Success. The strategy sets out a programme which includes Reach Higher, a single, centralised and co-ordinated higher education awareness and aspiration raising campaign which aims to better communicate the benefits of higher education to under-represented sections of the community, targeting those individuals who have experienced multiple disadvantages. The current campaign is making use of multiple media channels including television, social media and outdoor advertising and focuses on two "real life" student role models who have overcome significant barriers to their participation in higher education and who are progressing well in their chosen higher education courses. The first is a young disadvantaged male student from a foster care background. The other is an older female returner with children who left school with no qualifications and who, having returned to study, has obtained a university place. There are plans to incorporate additional role-model students in future advertisements.

My Department is simultaneously delivering a campaign to promote both the benefits of Foundation degrees and their availability to local communities across Northern Ireland through the six FE Regional Colleges. This campaign makes extensive use of role models in the form of student case studies. These case studies detail the barriers experienced by actual Foundation degree students and how the students overcame these hurdles to gain access to and achieve success in their chosen qualification.

In addition, role models in the form of student mentors make a significant contribution to "outreach" programmes such as the University of Ulster's Step-Up programme and the Discovering Queen's programme. These programmes are delivered by the universities in local schools and communities to raise aspirations and educational attainment among students from disadvantaged backgrounds to encourage and support their progression to higher education.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what support is available to university students diagnosed with dyslexia.

(AQW 37355/11-15)

Dr Farry: Supporting students with learning difficulties into and through higher education is a key objective of my Department. In September 2012 I launched Access to Success, my Department's regional strategy to widen participation in higher education by disadvantaged students, including those with learning difficulties. The strategy has a strong focus on the creation of a more accessible sector in which the people who are most able but least likely to participate are given every encouragement and support to apply to, and to benefit from, higher education.

When a student with a learning difficulty such as dyslexia applies for a Higher Education course they are encouraged to apply for Disabled Students Allowances (DSAs) to help cover the extra costs of any support they may require throughout their course as a direct result of their specific condition. DSAs can help with the cost of non-medical support providers, major items of specialist equipment, travel and other costs. A student can apply at any time before or during their course, and the amount of assistance does not depend on their income or their family income. This allowance does not have to be repaid.

Through DSAs my Department also provides funding to meet the administration costs of a Register of Support Providers in each of the two Northern Ireland universities. The Register of Support Providers is a unique service which provides one to one personal support to disabled students registered on recognised higher education courses at any of the colleges or universities in Northern Ireland. The Register maintains and develops a resource of freelance professional and non-professional support providers, who act in specialist roles to support disabled students. The student's support needs are assessed, and the student is "matched" with the appropriate support provider(s). Support providers include audio-typists, note-takers, dyslexia coaches, study skills mentors, sign language interpreters and campus assistants.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what contact they have had with the European Commission regarding the retraining of JTI Gallaher employees.
(AQW 37397/11-15)

Dr Farry: The job losses announced by JTI Gallaher are extremely regrettable, not just for those who have lost their jobs but for their families, the community and the economy as a whole. My Department will explore every opportunity to assist redundant workers. My officials have been in contact with the Commission Office in Belfast and the European Commission in Brussels to discuss the potential for a funding application under the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund (EGF) to support opportunities for any workers made redundant. This fund can be used to support workers made redundant as a result of major structural changes in world trade patterns due to globalisation and global financial and economic crises.

All applications must be agreed by the Member State Government; therefore my Department has also initiated discussions with relevant officials in the Department for Work and Pensions and the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills. It is important to note that the UK Government has not to date made any applications to the Fund.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, given the recent successes in East Londonderry, whether he will continue to fund the Youth Opportunities Scheme to maximise the skills development and experience of young people.
(AQW 37561/11-15)

Dr Farry: There is no Youth Opportunities Scheme. However, I introduced the Youth Employment Scheme in July 2012 as part of my Department's response to high levels of youth unemployment. Funding for the scheme is due to end on 31 March 2015. There has been no decision on delivery beyond this date.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the appropriateness of providing student support payments on a tri-annual basis; and whether he will change the frequency of when students receive support payments.
(AQW 37594/11-15)

Dr Farry: For higher education students the frequency of standard student support payments is designed to align with the beginning of each of the three terms of the academic year. I believe this payment model is appropriately flexible as it allows students to meet the up-front costs associated with each term and also to plan ahead accordingly. Smaller and more frequent payments could leave students struggling to meet certain up-front costs which they face at the beginning of term, for example for their accommodation and course books and equipment.

For further education students, the Further Education Awards are paid on the same tri-annual basis for the same reasons. The frequency of payments from the Hardship Funds, the other main source of support for further education students, varies based on individual circumstances of need as assessed by the colleges.

I do not intend to change the frequency of when students receive support payments.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she is taking to prevent the possibility of fracking occurring in North Antrim.
(AQW 36307/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): Rathlin Energy Limited's Work Programme as agreed with my Department under Petroleum Licence PL3/10 is based on exploration for conventional oil and gas targets, using industry standard techniques.

Neither Rathlin Energy Limited nor any other company have proposed using High Volume Hydraulic Fracturing (HVHF) in North Antrim.

I have already stated that I consider the potential use of HVHF in Northern Ireland to be novel and controversial and as such a matter for the Northern Ireland Executive to decide on.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the amount that Invest NI has invested in the Newry and Armagh constituency to support (i) tourism projects; (ii) capital investment schemes; and (iii) hotels and bed and breakfasts, in each year since 2002.

Examples of tourism and hotel businesses supported in the area include the Armagh City Hotel, Charlemont Arms Hotel, Formula Karting Ltd and the Kernan Equestrian Centre.

Examples of businesses undertaking capital investment projects in the area include Norbrook Labs, Independent News & Media, Glen Electric and JF McKenna Ltd.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what work her Department has undertaken to identify the obstacles to trade and investment in the Armagh city area; and to outline the findings of these research initiatives.

(AQW 36714/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department carries out research into ways to address obstacles to trade and investment for Northern Ireland as a whole, which includes the Armagh city area.

Research is currently being undertaken to provide an "Update of the Economic Impact of Corporation Tax". Should these powers be devolved to the NI Executive, a 12.5% rate of tax could provide a major stimulus to investment across all parts of Northern Ireland. This work will assess the impact that recent changes to the UK main tax rate and the latest cost estimates would have on the original 58,000 jobs estimate, and is expected to be completed in November 2014.

The results from the latest InterTradeIreland Business Monitor for Q2 2014 show that a similar proportion of businesses based in County Armagh are trading cross-border or exporting to GB compared with the Northern Ireland average. These Armagh businesses also face similar barriers to exporting such a lack of resources, either financial or time. DETI research into "Growing and Diversifying the Export Base" is looking at those markets that offer the greatest potential for local companies to secure significant growth in export sales and ways government can best support them in doing so. This work is expected to be completed in November 2014.

The InterTradeIreland Business Monitor also demonstrated that Armagh businesses cite costs as their largest issue in line with firms in Northern Ireland. Indeed, almost twice as many businesses in County Armagh (43%) cite energy costs as a 'large issue' compared to the average (24%). My Department's work into the "Cost of Doing Business in Northern Ireland" considers how the local cost base compares against elsewhere and identifies particular issues facing businesses. This research is expected to be completed in December 2014.

InvestNI support is also available for businesses throughout NI. For the Armagh District Council area throughout 2013-14 this has included financial assistance offers to 103 businesses accumulating to more than £2 million. Seven businesses from the area also participated in a total of 13 overseas trade missions and exhibitions in 2013-14.

Going forward, local councils will have more powers to boost trade and investment under the transfer of functions from 1 April 2015. Invest NI support being transferred under RPA includes:

- Enterprise awareness (Go for It campaign);
- Start a business activity;
- Social entrepreneurship, and
- Start-up activity for underrepresented groups.

The current budget for the Invest NI programmes in the transferring policy areas is £3.5million, which will move to councils along with funding for new planning and urban regeneration to the new councils. A comprehensive programme of engagement has taken place between my Department, Invest NI and the Councils to ensure the transfer of functions takes place smoothly and efficiently. After April 2015 it will be the responsibility of local councils to determine the schemes they will establish to deliver those functions which are transferring.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the efforts of InvestNI to secure inward investment in the Armagh area, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 36718/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI has an excellent track record of attracting high quality Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) to Northern Ireland, with 4,760 jobs promoted by externally-owned companies in 2013/14 alone. I am firmly of the opinion that these jobs benefit the whole of Northern Ireland, not just the location in which the companies are based.

In order to compete internationally, Invest NI promotes Northern Ireland as a whole. To promote parts of Northern Ireland individually would dilute the proposition in what is a very competitive market for FDI. Furthermore, any attempt to direct investors to specific locations that do not meet their needs would jeopardise the chances of winning the investment for Northern Ireland. This point was made quite clearly in the Independent Review of Economic Policy.

In deciding upon a location in which to invest, a company will typically look at areas with clusters of existing investors in the same business sector (Invest NI's key target sectors being ICT/software, professional services and financial services); universities and colleges that offer courses relating to that sector; suitable, available property; and the availability of suitable skilled potential workforce, typically around population centres.

Areas in which these desired features do not exist or are limited are unlikely to attract the attention of potential investors to visit or locate in the area. The responsibility for creating this favourable landscape falls across Executive departments and local councils.

Invest NI is committed to working with local councils on how to develop a sales proposition that shows the strength and opportunities within their area. The agency has also developed an "FDI app" and a "District Council App", which will help present a snapshot of the benefits of setting up in Northern Ireland to potential investors. Armagh District Council has indicated that it wishes to be involved and Invest NI is working with it to develop downloadable mobile applications which will form a promotional toolkit highlighting the Council's attractiveness as a potential investment location.

It should be noted that attracting FDI to Northern Ireland is not the only way that Invest NI is working to improve the employment prospects of local areas. Between 2008/09 and 2012/13, Invest NI made 722 offers of support to companies in the Armagh District Council Area, supporting investment commitments of over £45 million. This activity promoted almost 700 new jobs and more than 400 locally-owned business start ups.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the process whereby funding was obtained through the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and Tourism Ireland for the Frampton/Martinez fight, including details of how the approach for funding was made and by whom.

(AQW 36998/11-15)

Mrs Foster: OFMdFM was approached by Cyclone Promotions regarding proposals for the Titanic Showdown event. The Head of the Civil Service asked DETI to meet with the company and consider its proposals. DETI and Northern Ireland Tourist Board officials then met with Cyclone Promotions.

The Department then asked the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and Tourism Ireland to see what sponsorship opportunities there may be and to engage directly with Cyclone Promotions.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department, or any of its arm's-length bodies, have used 0800 telephone numbers; and to detail (i) how many calls have been made; and (ii) how much revenue was raised, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 37036/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) HSENI and InvestNI use 0800 to provide their customers with advice.

Financial Year	Number of Calls Made
2009/10	11,034
2010/11	8,634
2011/12	8,667
2012/13	12,921
2013/14	16,282

- (ii) The Department does not raise revenue from the use of a 0800 telephone number.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) what potential exists in the Mournes to harness geothermal energy; and (ii) what steps she intends to take to enable widespread uptake of geothermal energy.
(AQW 37040/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) Some of the granite rocks that form the Mourne Mountains contain relatively high concentrations of radiogenic elements and may be called High Heat Production (HHP) granites. At depths of about 4 kilometres these rocks may be hot enough to produce electricity via an Enhanced Geothermal System (EGS). However, EGS in granites is not yet commercially viable, with only a handful of demonstration projects worldwide. Research is continuing to establish whether the HHP granites extend to suitable depths below the Mournes and to evaluate their future potential for EGS.
- (ii) Geothermal energy is already incentivised under the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation for the generation of electricity. Northern Ireland is much more suited to harnessing shallow geothermal resources for heat which is incentivised through the Northern Ireland Renewable Heat Incentive.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the projects which benefited from the Tourism Events Fund in each of the last three years, including the amounts awarded to each project.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the proposed Multi-Function Centre for Kilcooley.

(AQW 37074/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Following our meeting with representatives of the Kilcooley Community Forum on 7th April, it was agreed that Invest NI should, as an immediate action, meet with the Department of Social Development (DSD) in order to better understand the DSD position in respect of the proposed Multi Function Centre. This meeting took place on 16th April when DSD advised that on completion of the project's economic appraisal, if a potential viable project emerged, DSD would work with the Forum to take the project forward to other potential funders.

Invest NI arranged a follow up meeting on 3rd June with the Forum representatives, DSD was also in attendance. The purpose of the meeting was for DSD to restate the position in respect of the Multi Function Centre, to gain an update on potential new developments from the Forum representatives, and for Invest NI to reflect on potential support around social enterprise and youth entrepreneurship. Interest in the latter was linked to the existing youth programme in the area. Follow up correspondence from Invest NI to the Partnership representatives restated the potential support from Invest NI.

DSD have advised that the economic appraisal, funded by DSD and North Down Borough Council, was completed recently and is currently being considered by DSD economists on a without prejudice basis. The appraisal identifies as its preferred option a facility comprising retail, leisure, commercial, health and community elements, to be taken forward on a phased basis at an initial estimated cost of £5.2million and an eventual overall cost of around £6.2million. Given the scale of the proposal it would require a cocktail of funding from a number of agencies which have yet to be identified.

In respect of wider engagement with groups in the Kilcooley area, it is encouraging that the Kilcooley Women's Centre is participating on Invest NI's Social Entrepreneurship Programme. It joined the programme in June and is investigating social enterprise ideas for the following areas:

- Childcare
- Retail / Post Office
- Catering
- Training Provision

The Centre's application reflected a demand for affordable childcare in the area, and also that they would be considering the other elements should the proposed Multi Function Centre materialise.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department has commenced a scoping paper on small and medium sized businesses.

(AQW 37079/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department and Invest Northern Ireland regularly undertake a wide range of measures which relate to our small and medium sized businesses. However at this time my Department has not commenced any scoping paper specifically relating to small and medium sized businesses.

However, some of the previous research that has been conducted by the Department does consider SMEs. For example, the recent publication 'Measuring Northern Ireland's High Growth Firms: 1998 – 2013' provides a breakdown on high growth firms by business size. In addition, the 'SFA Evaluation 2004-2011' publication provided findings by firm size.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps her Department will take to improve employment prospects for older people.

(AQW 37091/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Taking action to support economic growth and employment creation is the responsibility of the whole Executive. The Northern Ireland Economic Strategy contains a number of commitments, across all Departments, which aim to rebalance our economy and create jobs, wealth and prosperity for all.

The Economic Strategy recognises the importance of both increasing employment to ensure there are accessible employment opportunities and ensuring that people are equipped with the skills to be able to avail of these opportunities.

That is why one of the key themes of the Economic Strategy is to improve the skills and employability of the entire workforce.

In relation to older people specifically, I recognise that as people are living longer it is important that they have the opportunity to continue working, should they wish to do so.

For the May to July 2014 period, the unemployment rate for people aged 50 and over was 3.6%, well below the rate for all people aged 16+ (6.6%).

However, economic inactivity for those aged 50 and over is 60.9%, well above the level for all people aged 16 and over (39.4%).

Minister Farry and I are currently developing a Strategy to Tackle Economic Inactivity. The Strategic Framework to Tackle Economic Inactivity in Northern Ireland, published earlier this year, recognises that older people form one of the key inactive groups in Northern Ireland. However it also recognises that some forms of economic inactivity are not problematic. The inactivity levels for those aged 50 and over will include those people who avail of early retirement or who choose not to actively seek employment at the current time.

For those who do wish to work, we propose to put in place measures to highlight and reward positive practices in the workplace and address issues of labour market disadvantage that can often limit the engagement of older workers.

One of the proposals outlined in the Strategic Framework document is to introduce a public awareness campaign to stress the positive impact of employing older workers. It is hoped that this initiative could also help foster employer engagement in incentive schemes and encourage greater public support for flexible working programmes which may be required by some older workers.

It is also proposed to develop a 'Corporate Champions' age-positive campaign highlighting the benefits of employing older workers. Some common age-positive practices already used in recruitment include: the removal of date of birth information from application forms; reduced reliance on chronological education and work history; and the removal of upper age limited for some trainee schemes.

In addition, the Strategic Framework outlines that OFMDFM are currently developing an Active Ageing Strategy which will use the Delivering Social Change Framework to manage signature projects across departments, aimed at enabling older people to contribute to a society where they feel valued and financially secure. A key measure, in this respect, will be encouraging greater labour market participation for older workers.

The Department for Employment and Learning through the Executive funded Economy and Jobs Initiative also currently offers Step Ahead 50+, targeted at those aged 50 and over. Step Ahead 50+, introduced in January 2013, will provide a total of 1,100 fixed term jobs lasting 26 weeks within the Community and Voluntary sector by March 2015.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what assurances she can give that the Enterprise Zone in Coleraine will enable the area to become a long-term competitive business location, to retain companies who are incentivised to locate within the Zone, and to continue to attract more business in the future.

(AQW 37102/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The UK Government's Economic Pact, published on 14 June 2013, set out 3 commitments in relation to Enterprise Zones, focusing on Enhanced Capital Allowances (ECAs) which permit 100% first year allowances for qualifying plant and machinery expenditure. The pilot Enterprise Zone announced in the Budget statement on 19 March will only offer ECAs as an incentive.

The pilot project, which involves the establishment of a data centre by 5NINES in Coleraine, has the potential to promote economic development and further investment in the area. Designating this Enterprise Zone in Northern Ireland is another tool to lever economic growth. Data centres are a strategically important piece of telecommunications infrastructure. Such investments can be crucial in the development of the ICT sector as a whole and will enhance the proposition Northern Ireland can offer to inward investors who are increasingly globally connected.

Invest NI's overseas sales teams will promote the new data centre to relevant companies in international markets. This, along with the excellent telecoms and IT research base at UU Coleraine and the engineering talent available in the North West region, should help attract more FDI and local companies to explore the location as a suitable place to establish and grow their operations from.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the range of measures the Enterprise Zone in Coleraine plans to offer to incentivise firms to move into the area.

(AQW 37103/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Enterprise Zones in GB typically offer benefits through business rate discounts, simplified planning, access to superfast broadband and Enhanced Capital Allowances (ECAs) for a small number of Enterprise Zones within assisted areas. The majority of these incentives are, with the exception of ECAs, already devolved policy areas and the NI Executive is already taking steps to support businesses across Northern Ireland using these levers.

The UK Government's Economic Pact, published on 14 June 2013, set out 3 commitments in relation to Enterprise Zones, focusing on Enhanced Capital Allowances (ECAs) which permit 100% first year allowances for qualifying plant and machinery expenditure.

The pilot Enterprise Zone announced in the Budget statement on 19 March will only offer ECAs as an incentive, which permits 100% first year allowances for qualifying plant and machinery expenditure. Such incentives are typically more attractive to particularly capital intensive investments.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) what information and advice services her Department provides or funds to consumers, broken down by service provider; (ii) the funding provided to each organisation or service; and (iii) the number of staff funded in each provider.

(AQW 37114/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) Details of the information and advice services are as follows: (a) DETI's Trading Standards Service's Consumerline provides a range of free information and advice services to consumers on issues such as scam avoidance, complaint resolution and consumer law; (b) DETI has been providing funding, through commercial contracts, to organisations which offer debt advice services; and (c) Grant-in-aid provided by DETI, funds a small element of the Consumer Council for Northern Ireland advice role on a range of issues including transport, energy and general consumer matters.
- (ii) and (iii) details of the funding provided and the staff involved in each case are set out in the table below.

Financial Years	Consumerline		*Debt Advice Service Contracts		Consumer Council NI
	(ii) Funding Provided	(iii) Staffing	(ii) Funding Provided	(iii) Staffing	(ii) Funding Provided	(iii) Staffing
2011/12	£224K	8	£1.1m	34	£57.9k	1
2012/13	£239K	8	£1.0m	34	£55.9k	1
2013/14	£254K	8	£0.95m	29.5	£58.3k	1

* April 2011 – July 2012, figures relate to 3 separate debt contracts with AdviceNI, Citizens Advice and A4E. From August 2012, a new 3 year integrated contract (Debt Action NI/Advice NI) commenced.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many consumers have used each information and advice service that her Department provides or funds to consumers in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37115/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The number of consumers who have used each service is set out below.

Financial Years	Consumerline	Debt Advice Service Contracts	Consumer Council NI
	Number of consumers who have used each information and advice service that DETI provides or funds to consumers
2011/12	23,763	6,378	*1,240
2012/13	23,269	6,315	*1,239
2013/14	23,334	5,223	*1,346

* This only applies to information and advice service, core funded by DETI.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps her Department will take to support workers from JTI Gallaher Lisnafillan site who will be made redundant; and what talks she plans to have with the company owners.

(AQW 37120/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Following JTI's announcement to initiate a 90-day consultation on a proposal to close its manufacturing facility in Ballymena and move production to Poland or Romania, Minister Farry and I met with representatives from the company to discuss how we might help those who will be affected by this decision.

It has been agreed that Minister Farry and I will lead the Executive response to this devastating news, and we have requested an urgent meeting with the Senior Management in Ballymena.

The company has asked for some time to discuss the way forward during this consultation period before meeting with us. We have to respect that request and can assure the Assembly that we will meet at an appropriate time in the near future.

In the meantime, Invest NI continues to work closely with the company and with the Department for Employment and Learning to ensure that those employees impacted by the outcome of the consultation are offered appropriate help and support.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department arrived at the decision to cut the Northern Ireland Tourist Board events fund; and what other options were explored for potential savings.

(AQW 37184/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) assumed responsibility for the events function in 2010 there has not been a Budget exercise to allow for an appropriate dedicated budget to be established for events. As a result NITB has always relied on in year monitoring to meet its commitments for events funding.

The Executive has not yet determined Departmental budgets for 2015/16 but the overall financial position for the Northern Ireland Block is forecast to be very difficult. It is on this basis that applications are not being sought for the Events Fund for National Sponsorship Scheme and new International Events in 2015/16.

International events which have a current letter of offer from NITB which extends into 2015/16 will not be impacted by this decision.

Events remain a priority for NITB and we will endeavour to source budget for future years.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of recent Foreign Direct Investments and their impact on local businesses, particularly the head hunting practices and higher salaries that are making the landscape uncompetitive for local companies, especially in the technology start up sector.

(AQW 37185/11-15)

Mrs Foster: It is fully understood that the arrival of international companies may be regarded by some as a source of competition for skills and therefore greeted with a degree of apprehension.

The importance of Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) in growing our economy cannot be overlooked. FDI brings new skills, innovation, increased productivity and higher salaries for our people, all of which serve to reduce the productivity gap that currently exists with the rest of the UK. Invest NI has an excellent track record of attracting high quality inward investment, with recent announcements by major corporations such as Baker & McKenzie, Alexander Mann Solutions and EY. The impact of inward investment projects on local businesses is considered by Invest NI as part of the formal appraisal process.

ICT/software has been identified as a priority target sector for FDI due to Northern Ireland's competitive advantage in the field and the quality of the jobs the industry provides. The local ICT sector employs over 15,000 people in approximately 900 companies, including over 100 international investors.

One of Northern Ireland's key strengths in the ICT sector is the availability of a skilled workforce at a competitive cost base. Both DETI, through Invest NI, and the Department of Employment and Learning (DEL) provide extensive training and skills based schemes that will assist in ensuring that the necessary expertise is available in Northern Ireland to satisfy the increased demand developed through FDI projects and indigenous development projects.

I firmly believe that the development of the local ICT sector will serve not only to improve the prospects for our local people, many of whom would previously have had to leave Northern Ireland to seek opportunities, but will also increase the pool of available talent for the sector as a whole.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what package her Department will put in place to support workers from JTI Gallaher.

(AQW 37196/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Following JTI's announcement to initiate a 90-day consultation on a proposal to close its manufacturing facility in Ballymena and move production to Poland or Romania, I and my colleague Minister Farry have been asked to lead the Executive's response to ensure the best possible outcome for the employees.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what assessment has been made of the impact that the closure of the JTI Gallaher factory will have on sub contractors, suppliers and other jobs associated with the factory.

(AQW 37199/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive has agreed that my colleague Minister Farry and I should lead the response to the JTI Gallaher consultation. A meeting took place on Monday 20th October at which a full range of issues were discussed. This included the potential impact on the Northern Ireland subcontractors and suppliers.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what communication she has had, or plans to have, with trade union representatives about the future of the workforce at JTI Gallaher.

(AQW 37200/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the announcement of the proposal to close the Lisnafillan factory, I and my colleague Minister Farry met Union Representatives regarding the JTI Gallaher consultation announcement on Thursday 9th October. We have arranged to meet with Senior Officials of the Company on Monday 20th October. Invest NI will continue to liaise closely during the consultation process on the future of the Lisnafillan site.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) for a breakdown of her Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether she will deposit a copy of her Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37206/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department received a £13.8million Resource allocation in October Monitoring. The full allocation will fund inescapable pressures for contractual obligations in Invest NI and events in the Northern Ireland Tourist Board.

It is not the practice for departments to deposit a copy of in-year Monitoring bids in the Assembly library.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the level of reserves in each of her Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37222/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The General Reserve Balance of the Department's arm's length bodies at 1 October 2014 is detailed below –

GCCNI	£193,734
HSENI	£147,009
NITB	£7,758,815
Invest NI	£84,891,000*

* Invest NI accounting year end is 31 March. The reserves balances are calculated at that date and are not available at 1 October.

Invest NI's general reserve balance is mainly represented by its investments in development and loan funds and client companies in the form of loans, shares and investments. These investments have therefore arisen as a result of public funds being used for longer term investing activities rather than for funding annual expenditure and do not represent amounts available for immediate distribution. Any such distribution would require a withdrawal of support from client companies by calling in loans and liquidating investments in them.

NITB's general reserve balance reflects liabilities which have been recognised in its accounts but where the cash funding to meet the liability will not be required until a future date. In the main this relates to long-term pension liabilities.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the prior consultation that took place with the organisers of any of the events whose funding was affected by the announcement that the Tourism Events National Sponsorship Scheme will not go ahead in 2015/16.

(AQW 37244/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Youth Employment Scheme

As the Youth Employment Scheme is not specifically designed for young graduates my Department does not routinely gather data detailing the number of graduates that have participated. I am therefore unable to provide this information for the Youth Employment Scheme.

Steps to Work

Steps to Work (StW), has been my Departments main adult return to work programme since its introduction in September 2008. StW provides a flexible, individually tailored programme of support to help the unemployed and economically inactive to find employment irrespective of their level of educational attainment.

Detail on the qualifications held by those participating on StW is not systematically captured therefore; I am unable to advise you on the actual number of graduates who have taken part in the overall StW programme.

In January 2010, in response to an increase in graduate unemployed the StW programme was flexed and dedicated provision for graduates was introduced. This provision was known as the Graduate Acceleration Programme (GAP). Between January 2010 and June 2014 a total of 905 graduates availed of GAP through the StW programme.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the (i) date; and (ii) approximate time the decision was taken that the Tourism Events National Sponsorship Scheme will not go ahead in 2015/16.

(AQW 37245/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Following discussion in the context of October monitoring, the final decision was taken on Friday 3 October 2014.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether any alternative was considered to the announcement that the Tourism Events National Sponsorship Scheme would not go ahead in 2015/16, such as sharing the burden across the National and International funds.

(AQW 37246/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The commitments already made to the International Events under current Letters of Offer utilise all available baseline funding, and in the absence of additional funding, there were no other alternatives.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what assessment was made of the amount of consequential revenue which would be lost if the cut to the Tourism Events National Sponsorship Scheme is implemented.

(AQW 37247/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) is not in a position to assess the amount of consequential revenue which may, or may not, be lost due to funding not being available for the scheme next year.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) how many new jobs have been created by Invest NI in each constituency in each of the last five years; (ii) how many of the jobs created still exist; and (iii) how many potential foreign investors visited each constituency over the same period and what were the outcomes from the visits.

(AQW 37249/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) Invest NI only holds information on actual jobs created since the beginning of the current Programme for Government. Therefore, Table 1 below details the number of new jobs created by Invest NI assisted projects in each parliamentary constituency in each of the last 3 years.

- (ii) Invest NI applies the European Commission's Regional Aid rules to assist job creation, which state that large companies must maintain assisted employment for at least five years, or three years in the case of SMEs. Invest NI monitors this obligation through conditions in its letters of offer. Whilst this information is held within individual case files, it is not in a format that enables us to report this information by PCA.
- (iii) During the financial years 2009-10 and 2013-14, Invest NI hosted 976 credible inward-investment visits across all Parliamentary Constituency Areas (PCA)

Notes:

1. A credible visit is defined as one where Invest NI can claim to have promoted a DCA or PCA by bringing a potential inward investor, who has an identifiable project proposal, to that area.
2. In addition to the above listed visits, Invest NI has also facilitated a number of visits by other organisations e.g. influencers, overseas governments and trade bodies, which serve to strengthen FDI & Trade links in overseas markets.
3. 2013-14 figures include 25 visits associated with the investment conference.

It is difficult to quantify the specific outcomes of each and every visit by an inward investor. Some international companies will visit on the basis of 'fact finding' even though no potential investment is imminent. A high quality visit programme can help a specific area, and Northern Ireland as a whole, gain traction so that it remains in contention for when a potential investor chooses to proceed with their project.

Establishing a direct relationship between a specific visit and a subsequent investment is also difficult. This is because a company may make several visits before making a decision whether and where to invest. Securing an inward investment usually spans a considerable period (typically 18 to 24 months) and is often the result of many factors which may, or may not, include location visits.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, since coming to office, how many times has she met with the management of JTI Gallahers; and to detail the dates of each meeting.

(AQW 37250/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have had discussions with JTI Gallaher management on the following occasions:

- 3 December 2013
- 2 May 2014
- 8 October 2014
- 27 August 2014.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the answer provided to AQW 27103/11-15.

(AQW 37251/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 13354/11-15, to detail (i) the companies responsible for promoting 89 jobs in the Foyle constituency in 2011/12; (ii) the timescale for creating these jobs; (iii) the number of these jobs created to date; and (iv) when the remainder will be created.

(AQW 37288/11-15)

Mrs Foster: One Stop Data was responsible for promoting one job in the Foyle constituency in 2011/12. Information relating to job creation is commercially sensitive at business level while a project is still 'live'. Therefore, the information requested for One Stop Data will only be made publicly available once the project is complete and the control period has ended.

Information on the remainder of the promoted jobs is not yet in the public domain and, as such, I am not yet at liberty to disclose the names of the companies involved.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 24617/11-15, regarding the promotion of 200 jobs by Allstate NI in the Foyle constituency in 2012/13, to detail (i) the number of jobs created to date; and (ii) when the remainder will be created.

(AQW 37289/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Information relating to job creation is commercially sensitive at business level while a project is still 'live'. Therefore, such information on specific companies will only be made publicly available once a project is complete and the control period has ended.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 35360/11-15, regarding the promotion of 333 jobs by the Convergys Corporation in the Foyle constituency in 2013/14, to detail (i) the number of jobs created to date; and (ii) when the remainder will be created.

(AQW 37290/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Information relating to job creation is commercially sensitive at business level while a project is still 'live'. Therefore, such information on specific companies will only be made publicly available once a project is complete and the control period has ended.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 35360/11-15, regarding the promotion of 177 jobs by Fujitsu Services Limited in the Foyle constituency in 2013/14, to detail (i) the number of jobs created to date; and (ii) when the remainder will be created.

(AQW 37291/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Information relating to job creation is commercially sensitive at business level while a project is still 'live'. Therefore, such information on specific companies will only be made publicly available once a project is complete and the control period has ended.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what her Department is doing to increase awareness among consumers of their rights when signing up to schemes in which companies own the solar panels that are placed on the consumers' property.

(AQW 37441/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In April 2013, DETI's Trading Standards Service (TSS) issued a press release urging consumers to do their research before buying and installing renewable energy technologies in their homes. Consumers who believed they had been misled in any way were encouraged to contact the TSS Consumerline service. Subsequently, Consumerline received a number enquiries and complaints about solar panels, and where applicable, consumers were either advised of their rights under the Sale of Goods legislation or any alleged misleading claims reporting were taken forward by TSS officers for investigation.

Those contacting DETI'S Energy Division with queries regarding 'free' solar schemes are made aware of advice provided by the Energy Saving Trust on its website. Whilst the advice is targeted at consumers in Great Britain, it is equally applicable to Northern Ireland.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration was given to the impact on local government reform and the certainty and speed of planning decisions for prospective developers and investors, of her decision to judicially review the adoption of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan.

(AQW 37451/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Any uncertainty created in relation to the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan arises as a result of the decision by the Minister of the Environment to adopt the plan without the agreement of the Executive and contrary to the provisions of the Ministerial Code. I hope that even at this late stage the Minister will take the necessary steps to ensure that he complies with the Ministerial Code and recourse to the courts can be avoided.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the current number of social enterprises.

(AQW 37571/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Last year my Department, along with the Department for Social Development, released a 'Survey of Northern Ireland's Third sector' which provided a useful insight into not only the size and scale of the sector but it's potential to become more enterprise driven.

The research conducted by Price Waterhouse Coopers estimated there were approximately 473 social enterprises operating in Northern Ireland. The full report can be accessed at <http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-social-eco-index.htm>

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many people are employed by Social Enterprise NI.
(AQW 37572/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Social Enterprise NI was appointed by my Department in October 2012 to design and deliver a three year Social Economy Work Programme in direct response to feedback from the sector.

Social Enterprise NI is a consortium with a voluntary Board and with Business in the Community providing the lead partner role. At present there are two paid employees.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the revenue generated by Enterprise NI, in each of the last two financial years.

(AQW 37573/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Whilst my Department and Invest NI work closely with Enterprise NI both as a deliverer of programmes (under procured contracts) and a local stakeholder in the enterprise arena, that organisation is a commercial entity which has contracts with a number of government departments and other customers. My Department would therefore not have access to the information requested, and it would not be appropriate for me to comment further.

Department of the Environment

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment, following the delay of First Flight Wind's offshore wind farm plans in South Down, whether this is a matter for local government or if maritime planning is a departmental responsibility.
(AQW 36927/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): A marine licence from the Department of the Environment's Marine Division is required for the construction and operation of an offshore wind farm off the south east coast of Co. Down. This licence would cover the offshore work from Mean High Water Spring Tide out to 12 Nautical Miles.

In relation to terrestrial planning, from April 2015 the new councils will determine the vast majority of planning applications unless they are regionally significant. If the Department considers that the onshore development related to an offshore wind farm is regionally significant it will determine the application.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment whether prior to a waste management operator receiving a waste operating licence from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, an applicant is required to have planning permission in place for the proposed activity and use.
(AQW 36933/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning permission is required as a prerequisite to the issuing of a waste management licence. This is stipulated within Article 8 of the Waste and Contaminated Land Order (NI) 1997.

However to help avoid any delay in the issue of a waste management licence, once a planning application is in place, NIEA will process a waste licence application in parallel with the planning process which will not be issued until planning permission is granted. NIEA is not aware of any incidents where a waste management licence has been granted before planning permission has been granted.

Mr Agnew asked Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the costs associated with the disposal of all waste and leachate from City Waste at Mobuoy Road; (ii) the types of waste involved; (iii) the methods used to treat and dispose of waste and leachate; and (iv) the final destinations for the waste and leachate.
(AQW 37027/11-15)

Mr Durkan: To date 4191 tonnes of mixed household waste, 2458 tyres and 1,426,435 litres of leachate have been removed from the site at a cost to the Department of the Environment in the region of £800,000. As you will be aware, this information is already in the public domain.

The mixed waste was taken to Craigahulliar Landfill in Portrush, the leachate was taken to Culmore Waste Water Treatment Works for treatment by Northern Ireland Water and the tyres to a waste management licensed premises for recycling.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has held discussions regarding, or is aware of, plans to reopen the former City Waste site at Mobouy Road, Derry; and to detail the basis on which it can be reopened, given that (a) the uncertainty surrounding the serious environmental effects of the illegal activity that has taken place at the site; (b) planning applications A/2010/0126/F and A/2010/0596/F have recently been refused; and (c) there are valid planning enforcement notices on the site which have not been met.
(AQW 37028/11-15)

Mr Durkan: NIEA has recently been approached by a waste management company which has expressed an interest in applying for a licence for the site at Mobouy Road, Campsie, Derry. Initial discussions, which are the norm for waste licence applications, have taken place between NIEA and the company; however no application has as yet been received for the site.

The Department previously granted planning approval for a waste segregation and re-cycling centre at the City Industrial Waste site. In relation to the City Industrial Waste site, four planning applications were submitted following DOE Planning enforcement action in relation to unauthorised activities.

On 17 July 2014 the Department made a determination under Regulation 9 of the Planning (EIA) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1999 that the overall project was EIA development and an Environmental Statement was required.

It has been highlighted to the company that if such an application was to be received for this site, not only would it face the normal stringent process for consideration, it would also have to take account the requirement to remove the significant amount of wastes and polluting matters so that the highest levels of environmental protection are put in place to protect the Faughan River and its local tributaries. The Company has been informed from the outset there is no guarantee that any application will be successful.

The granting of any licence must be conditional to meeting all of the requirements detailed through pre-application discussions. Without this, no licence will be issued. It should be noted that any final decision will require rigorous testing through DSO before a licence is issued, if indeed this is decided, and confirmation that the required planning permissions are in place.

As the deadline of 14 August 2014 expired and no request for an extension of time was received the above applications were therefore deemed refused. I can confirm this site is currently the subject of live planning enforcement notices.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the full extent of the breaches of planning control which have taken place at the Cavanacaw gold mine; (ii) how these breaches were remedied; (iii) whether any unauthorised activities were incapable of being remedied; (iv) whether any unauthorised activities continued, or new breaches have taken place, since the Ombudsman's report criticising his Department for its failures to exercise proper planning control; and (v) why his Department has not provided the local community with full details of the unauthorised activity at the site as recommended by the Ombudsman's report.

(AQW 37029/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Breaches of planning control at the Cavanacaw Goldmine consist of development involving the storage of minerals, development involving building operations and breach of conditions. Formal enforcement action was commenced consisting of a Breach of Condition Notice and an Enforcement Notice.

The removal of rock from the site ceased upon service of the Enforcement Notice. Unauthorised buildings were remedied through the granting of retrospective planning applications. A condition in the Breach of Condition Notice was subsequently discharged.

Unauthorised activities are remedied in a number of ways; through cessation, through submission of a retrospective application and/or through reinstatement. Consideration can also be given to whether it is expedient to pursue a breach of planning control. Decisions are taken pursuant to Planning Policy Statement 9.

There are unauthorised activities that have not been remedied to date. There are activities that are considered in light of a pending application. For example the Department is aware that the stockpile storage is in excess of the approved heights but it also aware that determination of the pending application will see the levels reduced.

The Department previously advised the Northern Ireland Assembly Ombudsman that a report would be completed after the Department carried out additional survey work to establish the current position on site. Following consideration of the results of the survey, the Department intends to produce a summary report accordingly.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the breaches of planning control at the Cavanacaw gold mine represent an unauthorised Environmental Impact Assessment development; and whether planning application K/2012/0373/F, if approved, will regularise the breaches.

(AQW 37030/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An enforcement notice was served at the site was in connection with the removal of rock off site. An EIA determination was carried out at that time which determined that the unauthorised development was not EIA development.

Planning application ref.: K/2012/0373/F seeks the removal of controlled amounts of rock off site.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment how many groups have applied to the Challenge Fund in the current financial year, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 37045/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The number of groups who have applied to the 2014/15 Challenge Fund to conduct projects in each of the 18 Parliamentary constituencies is set out in Appendix 1.

We have experienced an unprecedented level of interest in the 2014/15 Challenge Fund, with over £9 million having been requested. I look forward to again seeing the positive environmental and community outcomes this support enables.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the operator that provides taxi services to his Department and the Driver and Vehicle Agency, including whether this is a contracted service; and if so, when this contract was last tendered.

(AQW 37092/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The operator that provides taxi services to my Department and the Driver and Vehicle Agency is Value Cabs.

The provision of taxi services is facilitated through a NICS wide contract with Value Cabs which was procured through the Central Procurement Directorate of the Department of Finance and Personnel in October 2010.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the landfilling taking place at Camcosy Road, County Tyrone, including the extent and composition of the infilling taking place, were considered as part of the Environmental Impact Assessment determination and Habitats Regulations Assessment when determining the likely effects on the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation; and to detail where the evidence of this exists.

(AQW 37112/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Habitat Regulations Assessment and EIA determination undertaken by the Department assessed the potential impacts of site preparation and construction phase operations.

The need for the importation of material for the construction of the site compound is described in the information supplied by the applicant. This is referred to in both the Environmental Impact Assessment determination and Habitats Regulations Assessment reports.

The impact of reduced water quality caused by site preparation works and construction phase were also assessed. A discharge consent at the site from NIEA requires that discharge from the site is below the limits specified in the consent. Adherence to the consent will prevent any impact from the works on the water quality of the Owenkillew SAC/ASSI.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificate granted to the Cavanacaw gold mine related to the unauthorised removal of rock from the site; and if so, why it was appropriate to grant a certificate relating to unauthorised development, and whether this information was provided to the Ombudsman when he was conducting his investigation.

(AQW 37113/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An application to join the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme (ALCS) by Omagh Minerals Ltd for their site at 56 Botera Upper Road, Omagh (also known as Cavanacaw gold mine) was refused on 13 January 2010. No ALCS certificate has been issued in respect of this site.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment what arrangements are in place to ensure that drivers receiving a MOT certificate in a Northern Ireland MOT centre will be registered in all databases in Great Britain to ensure that local drivers are not penalised; and what course of action can be taken to reverse an on-the-spot fine when received in Great Britain due to the police not having access to the test details.

(AQW 37121/11-15)

Mr Durkan: All MOT test results, with effect from 21 July 2014, are transferred electronically to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) database in Great Britain on a nightly basis.

Prior to this date, MOT test results were updated to the Northern Ireland vehicle record database. These records, which included the MOT test results, were migrated to the DVLA system in advance of 21 July 2014. DVLA has confirmed that all records which successfully migrated to DVLA's system would have been available to GB police forces.

Unfortunately, DVLA encountered some migration issues with a small number of records which the Secretary of State for Transport has advised would be rectified as a matter of priority.

If necessary, the Driver & Vehicle Agency can provide confirmation that a Northern Ireland registered vehicle has a valid MOT certificate to allow the vehicle keeper to challenge an on-the-spot fine.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the date the Chief Enforcement Officer reported to Driver and Vehicle Agency staff that a taxi operator centre existed at Ravenhill Stadium and by what means was this reported; (ii) whether the subsequent taxi operating licence was issued as a result of the report; (iii) when complaints were first raised as to the non-existence of the operator centre at the stadium; and (iv) when departmental or agency staff visited the stadium and discovered that no such structure or operating centre existed.

(AQW 37177/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer the Member to my response to AQW37097/11-15 in respect of part (i).

In response to parts (ii) to (iv), an operating centre at Ravenhill Stadium was added to the operator licence, at the request of the operator, on 19 June 2013.

Complaints were subsequently received, alleging that a physical operating centre had not been established at Ravenhill Rugby ground and this was confirmed following a visit by officials on 13 August 2013.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment, following his Department's submission to the Planning Appeals Commission against the application by Arc NI 1 Ltd to build sixteen wind turbines in Binevenagh Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, when they expect to receive a response.

(AQW 37182/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 11 July 2014, the Department was informed by the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) that the applicant had lodged an application for an Article 33 (non determination) appeal. At the request of the PAC, the Department submitted to them twelve draft reasons. The refusal reasons reflect the Department's concerns with regards the impact of the proposed development on the visual amenity and landscape character of the Binevenagh Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and the visual appeal and amenity value of local tourist assets, the impact on Magilligan Special Area of Conservation and flora and fauna, the impact on residential amenity and the impact on the public safety of roads users.

To date, the Department has not received further correspondence from the PAC. Jurisdiction has passed to the PAC who will determine the timetabling of this appeal. To date, the Department has not been informed of this timeframe.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37238/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has five arm's length bodies (ALB's) as follows:

- NI Local Government Officers' Superannuation Committee (NILGOSC)
- Local Government Staff Commission for NI (LGSC)
- Council for Nature Conservation and Countryside (CNCC)
- Historic Monuments Council (HMC)
- Historic Buildings Council (HBC)

As at 1 October 2014 none of the Department's ALBs held reserves.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has agreed via the Driver and Vehicle Agency or any other departmental agency, that the private taxi hire tariff should not exceed the public hire rate, in order to permit a second tariff on a regulated meter; and if so, to outline the rationale behind this decision.

(AQW 37254/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer the member to the answer I gave to AQW 29800/11-15. The rationale to adopt this approach was to ensure that at no time was the regulated public hire rate exceeded.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36423/11-15, whether he will provide a copy of the email and any associated responses, or place a copy in the Assembly Library.

(AQW 37257/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The email communicating the observations of enforcement officers at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013 was part of an investigatory process and as such it is necessary to limit the disclosure of this information to protect the integrity of this and other investigatory processes.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of the Environment, given the changes with regards to the displaying of tax discs on cars, whether there any proposals to implement the same changes with regard to the display of MOT discs.

(AQW 37265/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I intend to legislate to remove the requirement to display a vehicle test certificate from April 2015. This intention has been shared with the Assembly Environment Committee, and an SL1 has been agreed to achieve this. Legislative drafting has commenced.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Belfast public hire tariff information is published; and if so, why other tariffs are not published.

(AQW 37266/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Regulation 46(14) of the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Equipment, Fitness and Use) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 requires all Belfast Public Hire taxis to exhibit a fares board. My understanding is that the purpose of this regulation for the Belfast Public Hire fare to be displayed in all Belfast Public Hire taxis was to increase customer protection. All secondary tariffs used by Belfast Public Hire taxis are required to be lower and my Department is, therefore, satisfied that such protection is maintained without a requirement for the secondary tariff to be displayed on the fares board.

No element of a tariff entered into a public hire taxi meter may exceed that element of the relevant regulated fare. The regulated tariff and the secondary tariff are both checked by DVA during the taximeter test.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment who within his Department tested and authorised the checksums currently fitted to public and private hire taxis.

(AQW 37267/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The taximeter programme checksums fitted in Belfast Public Hire taxis are tested and approved by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA). DVA does not test or approve the taximeters fitted in Private Hire taxis as these taxis are not subject to regulated fares.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether secondary tariffs on private hire taxis are displayed in the vehicles on a tariff card in the same manner as the Belfast public hire tariff.

(AQW 37268/11-15)

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether it is permitted to have a checksum/tariff structure on a public hire taxi meter other than the regulated tariff as specific by his Department's regulations if the second tariff exceeds the regulated tariff on waiting time.

(AQW 37269/11-15)

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether the fitting and calibration of taxi meters will be carried out externally or 'in-house' by his Department.

(AQW 37270/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I refer the Member to my response to AQW 35774/11-15.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the rural proofing completed on the latest changes to taxi legislation.

(AQW 37303/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The most recent change to be implemented relating to taxi legislation is the introduction of the Taxis Drivers' Licences Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014. Rural proofing was part of the assessment process undertaken for these regulations and it was concluded that they would have no negative impact in rural areas.

Rural proofing will continue to be conducted as part of the development of all future taxi regulations.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment whether rural proofing will be conducted in relation to future taxi regulations.

(AQW 37304/11-15)

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment how many enforcement actions or prosecutions have taken place with regard to the operation of illegal taxis, broken down by district council area, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37305/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver & Vehicle Agency does not capture enforcement actions or prosecutions with regard to the operation of illegal taxis by district council area, therefore the information cannot be provided in the requested format.

I have included a table below (with figures derived from published statistics) of the number of taxi offences prosecuted at court and the number of Fixed Penalty Notices (FPNs) issued in Northern Ireland (with Belfast included) and Belfast only.

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
Taxi offences prosecuted at Court in Northern Ireland (Belfast included)	175	217	154	172
Of which: Taxi offences prosecuted at Court in Belfast only	8	139	64	67
Taxi offences – FPNs * issued in Northern Ireland	0	257	277	323
Of which: Taxi offences – FPNs * issued in Belfast only	0	96	80	197

*FPNs were only introduced in Northern Ireland in February 2011.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment what support will be given to the introduction of meters in taxis that do not currently have a meter.

(AQW 37307/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I anticipate that advice will be provided to all taxi drivers on what types of meter and printers are permitted for use and where such devices can be purchased.

The average taxi in Northern Ireland covers around 25,000 miles per year. Using these figures, and spreading the estimated maximum cost of the entire taxi reform programme (including roof signage and periodic training) over the first year, a fare increase of less than 1.5 pence per mile should recover the outlay. If the cost is spread over the first three years, the increase is reduced to 1 penny per mile. This increase would pass the cost of the improved service to the customer and require the taxi industry to reverse recent trends to reduce fares.

My Department has examined the rationale and options for financial support to the taxi industry to mitigate the impact of the reforms. I have deferred the implementation of a number of elements to spread the costs, and my predecessor reduced initial costs for taxi operator licences. As the costs of improving taxi services should be passed to those who benefit from the improved services, and given the very modest fare rises required to achieve that, I have concluded not to progress further specific financial support.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has introduced a policy or practice which leads to road safety issues being disregarded where an established access laneway exists to a proposed site for a single wind turbine.

(AQW 37308/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I can advise the Member that there has been no new policy or practice introduced which leads to road safety issues being disregarded where an established access laneway exists to a proposed site for a single wind turbine. A planning application for a single wind turbine will be considered with regard to Planning Policy Statement 18 'Renewable Energy' which was published in 2009. This policy requires that no part of a development will have an unacceptable impact on road safety.

More generally the Department's policy in respect of the access arrangements for development is set out in Planning Policy Statement 3 'Access Movement and Parking'. Policy AMP 2 'Access to Public Roads' states that planning permission will only be granted for a proposal involving direct access, or the intensification of the use of an existing access, onto a public road where the access will not prejudice road safety or significantly inconvenience the flow of traffic. Details of the current access standards are set out in Development Control Advice Note 15 'Vehicular Access Standards'.

Each planning application is assessed on a case by case basis, based on the site specific conditions. Transport NI will normally be consulted with respect to any proposals which include the creation of a new access or alteration and/or intensification of an existing access. In circumstances where an existing access is available to facilitate development proposals, the Department will generally expect this to be used, unless there is an opportunity to provide a more acceptable access arrangement, having regard to both road safety and local amenity considerations.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has made representations to the British Government and European Commission regarding plans to build a new nuclear power plant at Hinkley Point in Somerset which is 240km from the Irish coast.

(AQW 37309/11-15)

Mr Durkan: At present, nuclear energy and nuclear installations are excepted matters under the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and, as such, are not within my Department's remit. My Department only has responsibility for monitoring the environment in Northern Ireland to assess the impact of nuclear facilities and other potential sources of radioactive discharge.

However, I can confirm that my predecessor, Alex Attwood, did make representations to the Government in relation to proposed nuclear power stations. He wrote to Chris Huhne, the then Secretary of State for the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC), in January 2012 expressing his concern about the potential environment impact of the proposed new nuclear power plant at Hinkley Point C and in particular the possible effect on the population of Ireland, north and south given the proximity of the proposed facilities.

In October 2012 Minister Attwood wrote to the Chief Executive of the Planning Inspectorate, Sir Michael Pitt, and to the then Minister of State for DECC, John Hayes MP, reiterating his concerns about the potential environment impact of all new nuclear power stations in England and Wales.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment how plans to designate land in the Mourne as Areas of Special Scientific Interest have been appropriately subject to an Equality Impact Assessment, specifically the effect they would have on the local farming community.

(AQW 37327/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSIs) are declared under the Environment (Northern Ireland) Order 2002. In terms of Equality Impact Assessment, prior to its introduction this legislation was subject to a full screening exercise and it was found that there was no evidence that this legislation will have any impact on equality issues.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the specific scientific reasons why he is choosing to designate land in the Mourne as an Area of Special Scientific Interest.

(AQW 37329/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has declared three Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSIs) in the Mourne – Mourne Coast, White Water River and Western Mourne. These areas contain a variety of earth science, habitats and species interests. They have all been evaluated against standard scientific criteria such as size, diversity, naturalness and rarity and have been found to merit selection as ASSI, representing some of the best examples of their type in the North.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether secondary tariffs on public hire taxi meters are displayed in the vehicle on a tariff card in the same manner as the Belfast public hire tariff.

(AQW 37352/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Regulation 46(14) of the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Equipment, Fitness and Use) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 requires all Belfast Public Hire taxis to exhibit a fares board. My understanding is that the purpose of this regulation for the Belfast Public Hire fare to be displayed in all Belfast Public Hire taxis was to increase customer protection. All secondary tariffs used by Belfast Public Hire taxis are required to be lower and my Department is, therefore, satisfied that such protection is maintained without a requirement for the secondary tariff to be displayed on the fares board.

No element of a tariff entered into a public hire taxi meter may exceed that element of the relevant regulated fare. The regulated tariff and the secondary tariff are both checked by DVA during the taximeter test.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) how many fixed penalties under section 8 of the Noise Act 1996 have been served by council officers since it came into operation, broken down by council; and (ii) the level of fixed penalty awarded each time.

(AQW 37358/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

- (i) When the Noise Act 1996 came into operation, district councils had discretion as to whether they would adopt the provisions of the Act. Belfast City Council was the only council who adopted it. Chapter 2 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, which came into operation on 1 April 2012, amended the 1996 Act to remove the requirement for adoption thereby allowing councils the discretion to use the Noise Act powers as and when it was deemed appropriate. To date Belfast City Council is the only council which has issued fixed penalty notices under the provisions of the Noise Act 1996. Figures are only available from the 2003-04 year onwards when the Department started to gather information annually for its report on Noise Complaint Statistics for NI. The number of fixed penalty notices issued by Belfast City Council are as follow:

■	2003-04	11
■	2004-05	16
■	2005-06	9
■	2006-07	6
■	2007-08	6
■	2008-09	8
■	2009-10	7
■	2010-11	14
■	2011-12	6
■	2012-13	23

- (ii) The Department does not hold information about the level of fixed penalty awarded each time. This information may be available from Belfast City Council, Environmental Health Department, Cecil Ward Building, 4-10 Linenhall Street, Belfast, BT2 8BP.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate. (AQW 37363/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department put forward one resource funding bid at the October Monitoring round. This bid was for the reinstatement of part of the in-year reduction made during the June Monitoring round.

The outcome of the June Monitoring Round reduced my Department's baseline by 2.1% (£2.4 million). However, the baseline used by DFP to calculate the reduction included the De-rating Grant and Rates Support Grant both of which are paid over to Local Government. These grants totalling £44.1 million, represent 37.3% of my Department's non ring fenced resource budget for 2014-15.

I am however unable to apply the in-year reductions imposed on my Department to these Local Government Grants. The Rates Support Grant cannot be reduced in-year because of statutory restrictions on in-year reductions and the De-rating Grant cannot be reduced due to DFP's current policy of compensating councils for the effect of the statutory de-rating of certain premises.

Consequently as a result of these restrictions a proportionately higher reduction needs to be applied to other front line services delivered by my Department. A bid of £0.93 million was therefore put forward at the October Monitoring round to reinstate the amount of the reduction made during June Monitoring relating to the Local Government Grants baseline funding.

Whilst the bid cannot be regarded as inescapable or required to meet statutory obligations it was put forward under the heading of exceptional circumstances to ensure that a disproportionate reduction was not applied to other front line services delivered by my Department.

The bid form submitted to DFP as part of the October Monitoring process will be placed in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how many taxi operator licence holders have received a fine of £200 for breaches of taxi operator licensing by themselves or their affiliated drivers since May 2013. (AQW 37374/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Since May 2013, 63 taxi operator licence holders have received a £200 Fixed Penalty Notice for breaches of taxi operator licensing by themselves or their affiliated drivers.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment what level of fixed penalty under section 8A(2)(a) of the Noise Act 1996 has been set by each local council. (AQW 37382/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (NI) 2011 came into operation on 1 April 2012 and made amendments to the Noise Act 1996 which included section 8. This amendment enables district councils to determine the level of fixed penalty or, where a council does not use this power the level is prescribed at £100.

To date Belfast City Council is the only council which has issued fixed penalty notices. The Department does not hold information about the level of fixed penalty that has been set by Belfast City Council or any other district council. However, this information may be available from each individual council.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Driver and Vehicle Agency in Coleraine permitted private companies to access the personal details of local drivers. (AQW 37383/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle registration and licensing is an excepted matter which is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Transport. It was administered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) under a formal agreement between the Department of the Environment and the Department for Transport (DfT) until 21 July 2014 when the agreement was terminated by DfT and the services centralised in the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea.

In relation to the release of information, DVA was required to act in accordance with the policy as set by DfT. The relevant legislation permitting the release of information from the vehicles register is regulation 27 (1) (e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002 which states "(1) The Secretary of State may make any particulars contained in the register available for use - ... (e) by any person who can show to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that he has reasonable cause for wanting the particulars to be made available to him".

Under the guidance, some of the circumstances considered to be 'reasonable cause' include:

- matters of road safety ;
- events that occur as a result of vehicle use;
- the enforcement of road traffic legislation; and
- the collection of taxes.

Under the DfT policy on the release of data, DVA was required to release vehicle owner details to a range of bodies including car parking enforcement companies, solicitors, finance houses, property managers, insurance companies, mileage companies and garages. Each enquirer was required to give full details of why they wanted the information and how it would be used. These requests were evaluated in line with procedures and on a case by case basis, before deciding if the information would be disclosed.

An administration fee of £2.50 was charged to cover the cost of dealing with requests.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Driver and Vehicle Agency in Coleraine were permitted to sell the personal details of local drivers.

(AQW 37384/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether meters fitted to the vehicles of the two largest private hire taxi companies are regulated by his Department; and if so, whether all meters are checked during Public Service Vehicle (PSV) tests and the exact meters recorded, and is then cross-checked during any departmental regulation examinations.

(AQW 37434/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The taximeters fitted in taxis licensed for Belfast Public Hire are subject to a regulated fare and are tested by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) at the time of the vehicle's annual PSV inspection. Taximeters fitted voluntarily in taxis licensed for Private Hire and Public Hire outside Belfast are not subject to a regulated fare and are therefore not tested by DVA.

DVA maintains a list of approved taximeter models. Each taximeter, fitted in a Belfast Public Hire taxi, is checked for approval and is tested to ensure the accuracy of its fare charging programme. These taximeters are also sealed in the vehicle to prevent their removal and to prevent tampering. DVA does not keep a record of the taximeter that is fitted in each vehicle.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with (i) representatives of the local motor trade; and (ii) officials within the Driver and Vehicle Agency to establish whether all the initial problems associated with the transfer of services to Swansea have been resolved.

(AQW 37459/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle registration and licensing services were centralised within the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea on 21 July 2014. From that date, responsibility for the delivery of vehicle registration and licences in Northern Ireland transferred to DVLA.

Following the transfer, I was aware that the DVLA were experiencing a number of transitional issues which were affecting local customers. I wrote to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Robert Goodwill MP, on 13 August 2014, on behalf of Northern Ireland customers to express my disappointment that the level of service provided by DVLA was not of the high standard expected in Northern Ireland.

In response to my letter, Claire Perry MP, replied confirming that she was aware that there were issues with a small number of records, reassuring me that these would be rectified as a matter of priority. DVLA have since stated, at official level, that the initial teething problems have been rectified.

As part of the transition process, DVLA undertook to liaise directly with stakeholders and industry representatives and I understand that they held a number of meetings with local traders throughout the changeover and since the function transferred.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment, following the recent teenage road fatalities in Coleraine and Belfast, what assurances he can provide that his Department are doing all it can to work with other Departments and outside agencies to reduce the number of road deaths.

(AQW 37584/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am extremely concerned by the number of road deaths this year. My sincere sympathy is with all of the families and communities affected by those tragedies.

As Minister with lead responsibility for road safety, I remain totally committed to the partnership approach that has so greatly reduced road casualties over the last 40 years. The Road Safety Strategy to 2020 sets out four strategic targets and 224 action measures to reduce deaths and serious injuries on our roads. We take a shared approach to implementation, working alongside many parts of government, the Police Service and other bodies. Some 118 of the Strategy action measures have already been completed or embedded in ongoing business, and there have been positive reductions against the Strategy's four targets.

This progress reflects a great deal of ongoing cooperation between my Department and our road safety partners and stakeholders. I chair a Ministerial Road Safety Group, meeting regularly with the Ministers for Regional Development and Justice and representatives of the emergency services, to explore road safety issues and drive forward improvements. Officials also liaise regularly on both an informal and a more formal basis. This partnership working includes the Road Safety Strategy Delivery Board which reports to me and is responsible for monitoring implementation of the Strategy.

I also convene the Road Safety Forum, where representation is drawn from the relevant government departments, statutory agencies, the emergency services and a range of other road safety stakeholders. All of the Forum members have a clear commitment and resolve to tackle road safety issues; the meetings provide an opportunity to exchange views on the Strategy and the way in which it is being implemented.

I cannot emphasise enough, however, that the vast majority of casualties on our roads are caused by human error. My Department and our road safety partners can educate, engineer and enforce, but ultimately each of us as individuals has to take personal responsibility for our attitudes and behaviours as road users.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37097/11-15, whether fonaCAB signed a declaration stating they had an operating centre at Kingspan Stadium which was exempt from planning permission; and if so, to place a copy in the Assembly Library.

(AQW 37732/11-15)

Mr Durkan: If an operator wishes to add a new operating centre to their licence, they must provide evidence that the new premises has planning permission to be used as an operating centre or alternatively, sign a declaration that the premises is outside the scope of planning requirements.

In this instance, FonaCab provided a declaration confirming that the premises did not require planning permission.

It would not be appropriate to place a copy of the declaration in the Assembly Library.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of the Environment what progress has been made with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment in relation to levies imposed on the disposal of end-of-life tyres.

(AQW 37794/11-15)

Mr Durkan: You previously asked a similar question in relation to what plans this Department had in place to recover the charges imposed by commercial operators for end-of-life tyre recycling. Regrettably, there was a typing error in the response, that should have stated that this would be a matter for the Department for Trade and Industry in Whitehall (DTI not DETI) to consider and take forward. I apologise for this error.

The Department has previously liaised with the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) and the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) in relation to ways of controlling and tracking end-of-life tyres but neither was convinced that such a system would be beneficial, cost effective or practical. Therefore, there are no plans currently to introduce a formal levy scheme in the UK.

The tyre levy scheme that is operated both here and in the rest of the UK is a voluntary agreement between the tyre retailer and the customer. As it is a reserved matter, neither DETI nor this Department has the powers to collect a used tyre levy. DOE also believes it is not appropriate to interfere in the operation and/or utilisation of the voluntary levy scheme, as imposed by the industry itself. Consequently, no progress has been made in relation to levies on end-of-life tyres.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why priority AQW 28360/11-15 has not been answered; and whether, and when, he was supplied with a draft reply by officials.

(AQW 29576/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): This question has been answered.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why AQW 29159/11-15 has not been answered.

(AQW 33247/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This question has been answered.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why AQW 28359/11-15 and priority AQW 28360/11-15, tabled in November 2013, have not yet been answered, despite further Assembly Written Questions seeking an answer.

(AQW 34497/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: These questions have been answered.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what meetings he has had with the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety since his appointment.

(AQW 35454/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Since my appointment I have met with the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on several occasions to discuss his budget and public sector reform.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will consider offering incentives to residents who provide information on the ownership of vacant and derelict domestic properties, whose ownership has proven difficult to establish, in pursuit of outstanding rates payments.

(AQW 36209/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I do not intend to offer incentives to residents for information on property ownership.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what recommendation the Head of Corporate Human Resources made in consequence of his fact-finding investigation into Mr Stephen Brimstone's treatment of Councillor Jenny Palmer.

(AQW 36461/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This is not a matter for the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the (i) location; and (ii) number of vacant posts in the Northern Ireland Civil Service at (a) Administrative Assistant; (b) Administrative Officer; (c) Executive Officer II; (d) Executive Officer I; (e) Staff Officer; and (f) Deputy Principal grades, broken down by Department.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the impact a rise in interest rates will have on the local housing market.

(AQW 36788/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The housing market in Northern Ireland is now more normalised with a healthier relationship between average salary and house prices. Clearly a rise in interest rates will impact on the cost of borrowing and consequently housing demand. However, increases when they come, are expected to be gradual.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration has been given to the clauses relevant to his Department in the Business, Enterprise and Employment Bill currently passing through Westminster.

(AQW 36828/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Bill was introduced in the House of Commons on 25 June 2014.

Clauses 1 and 2 of the Bill (assignment of receivables) substantively deal with improving access to finance for businesses - particularly small businesses. In Northern Ireland, this policy area is within the purview of the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, although it has an incidental effect on the law of contract, which is within my remit. At the request of the Minister of Enterprise Trade and Investment, I have considered that incidental effect and, on the basis of the information currently available, I have said that I have no objection to what is proposed.

Clauses 140 – 142 (public sector exit payments) implement Treasury policy on the recovery of exit payments made to high earners who leave the public sector but are subsequently re-employed there within a short period of time. Public sector compensation and recovery arrangements are broadly devolved in Northern Ireland (specific exceptions or reservations may apply). The Coalition Government favours a uniform approach across the whole of the public service for the recovery of these exit payments. Consequently Treasury is proposing that this Bill be used to effect the necessary changes in the transferred field. I am currently considering this proposal.

The extension of all of these provisions to Northern Ireland will require Executive agreement and the passing of a legislative consent motion in the Assembly.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35728/11-15, to detail (i) the findings of the inquiry; and (ii) how is it not a matter for his Department considering he was asked by the Head of the Northern Ireland Civil Service to carry out the investigation.

(AQW 36956/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This is not a matter for the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35472/11-15, to detail (i) when he will provide an answer; and (ii) why the question has not been answered in the required timeframe.

(AQW 36994/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This question has been answered.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the annual (i) number of overnight trips; and (ii) total expenditure for tourists in each of the last three years, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 37101/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The number of overnight trips and total overnight tourism expenditure at Local Government District averaged over the calendar years 2011 and 2012 are shown in the attached table.

Figures relate to domestic and non-domestic tourism and are based on household and passenger surveys. Figures for constituencies are unavailable. Local area figures for 2013 will be published later this year.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail his Department's estimation of the total amount of inescapable bids which will be made by each Department in the 2014 October monitoring round.

(AQW 37214/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As part of the in-year monitoring process, my officials assess and prioritise bids submitted by departments for additional funding. This process helps to inform my recommendations to the Executive on the allocation of resources.

My Statement to the Assembly on 13th October detailed Resource expenditure allocations of £125 million in relation to bids that the Executive has deemed inescapable. The Executive has not yet considered the Capital expenditure position in the October Monitoring Round. Once agreed by the Executive, I will advise the Assembly on the outcome.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of (a) Protestants; and (b) Roman Catholics applying for, and obtaining, employment at Administrative Assistant and Administrative Officer level in the Northern Ireland Civil Service in 2013.

(AQW 37336/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The requested information is provided in the tables overleaf.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current levels of unemployment in North Down compared to the rest of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37445/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS). However, the LFS is a sample survey and the percentage of adults who are currently unemployed in the North Down District Council Area (DCA) is not available from this source due to sample size constraints.

The attached table is sourced to the claimant count measure of unemployment. This shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits at September 2014 and these figures as a percentage of the resident working age population.

Table 1 - Claimant Count at September 2014

Area	September 2014
	Number of Claimants	Rate (% of working age 16-64)
North Down DCA	1,581	3.2%
Northern Ireland	52,377	4.5%

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the equal pay settlement for civil servants who worked for the PSNI and the Northern Ireland Office.

(AQW 37447/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As I have previously stated, it has been clearly established that there is no valid equal pay claim upon which to base a settlement for this group. However, the paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before the summer recognises the moral argument put forward and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff. I now await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion since my recommendation and any expenditure will require their approval. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost of conferences, including room hire, hospitality, travel and associated fees, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 35800/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Information on conferences, including room hire, hospitality, travel and associated fees, is not available due to disproportionate cost.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many Health and Social Care Trusts are committed to implementing Prostate Cancer UK's Quality Checklist.

(AQW 36915/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and HSC Trusts to ensure that prostate cancer services are up to modern quality levels. The Prostate Cancer UK quality checklist is an excellent guide to the standard of care needed to treat prostate cancer.

Of the 15 standards detailed in the Prostate Cancer UK Quality Checklist, 13 are fully or substantially implemented right across the HSC in NI. With regard to the remaining two standards, the position is as follows:

- Standard 7:- The HSC is working towards a position in which all patients who need to access a specialist nurse will be able to do so.
- Standard 10:- Currently GPs receive a letter outlining patients' care and proposed plan and all patients are subsequently advised verbally of their care plan. The HSC is working towards a position in which all patients receive a written care plan.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he is supporting front line staff in Emergency Departments to cope with potential rising demand in the winter months.

(AQW 36980/11-15)

Mr Wells: I look to the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board to work with the HSC Trusts to ensure that effective plans are in place to respond to anticipated winter pressures on emergency departments. The causes of the pressure and the potential solutions require a whole system approach within the HSC. My Department's October Monitoring bid therefore included a bid for additional investment to further reduce waiting times in emergency departments; introduce 7-day working and extended hours; develop new models of acute medicine; enhance emergency department capacity; manage increased demand during the winter months; and, address pressures within 24/7 acute, community and primary care working. As I said in my statement to the Assembly on 14 October 2014 about the outcome of the October Monitoring round, I will endeavour to allocate the funding to those areas that will minimise the impact on front line patient care.

The unscheduled care Task Group chaired jointly by the Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Nursing Officer, has also been working with the HSC to oversee and co-ordinate the implementation of the recommendations of the RQIA's review of unscheduled care.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has spent on electricity in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36982/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust's spend on electricity in each of the last three years is set out in the table below:

2013/14 £	2012/13 £	2011/12 £
2,987,140	2,848,543	2,744,683

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps his Department is taking to assist the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service to meet their target of responding to an average of 72.5 per cent of 'Category A' calls.

(AQW 37019/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department's cumulative target is that by March 2015, 72.5% of Category A (life threatening) calls should be responded to within 8 minutes, with a minimum of 67.5% in each Local Commissioning Group area. I am looking to the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Trust (NIAS) to work to ensure that this target is achieved.

The HSCB has been working closely with NIAS to secure improvements in its Category A response times. I am advised that NIAS is recruiting additional personnel to fill existing vacancies to provide greater confidence of provision of ambulance cover and reduce reliance on overtime, which will enable NIAS to target available resources to improve performance. The HSCB has worked with NIAS in relation to emerging pressures as a consequence of emergency department changes, including the allocation of additional funding; the appointment of Hospital Ambulance Liaison Officers in four of the major emergency departments to work with the emergency department staff to expedite and improve ambulance turnaround times; and development of a NIAS Dashboard of indicators to manage the flow of ambulance-borne activity.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the travel expenses paid to senior management in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust in the last three financial years.

(AQW 37078/11-15)

Mr Wells: The table below sets out the travel expenses paid to senior management in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust in the last three financial years.

For the purposes of this question 'senior management' has been interpreted as staff at director level and above (including Chief Executives).

Financial year	Travel Expenses
2013/14	£17,173
2012/13	£12,357
2011/12	£12,293

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the process for social services referrals of vulnerable adults to faith based organisations; and (ii) the process for providing financial assistance to these organisations.

(AQW 37089/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am interpreting the term vulnerable adult in the broadest sense to mean a person who is in need of care and support.

- (i) Social Work and Social Care practitioners may refer vulnerable adults to a range of organisations, including faith-based organisations, who provide appropriate social care and/or community based support services that meet identified or assessed need of individuals. Referrals are made to those organisations or groups that are most likely to meet that need and achieve the best outcome for the vulnerable adults, either through a commissioned service or on a voluntary basis.
- (ii) When new services are being procured from outside the statutory sector, and as existing contracts or Service Level Agreements come to the end of their present contractual period, the agreed process is an open tender process. This is advertised through the media, inviting potential suppliers or providers to bid in response to the service specification that has been stipulated.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of community hospitals currently being used to capacity; and (ii) the number of Health Service beds in use in private nursing facilities, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37107/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the average number of occupied and available beds within community hospitals is published on an annual basis in the Northern Ireland Hospital Statistics:

- (i) Inpatient and Day Case Activity publication (Table 2a) and is available to view or download from:
http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/stats\_research/hospital-stats/inpatients.htm
- (ii) Information on the number of Health Service beds in use in private nursing facilities is not collected centrally and was requested from the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses are detailed in Table 1 below.

Table 1: Health Service Beds in Use in Private Nursing Facilities

HSC Trust	2013/14	2012/13	2011/12

Mr Anderson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many firefighters are stationed in Upper Bann. (AQW 37108/11-15)

Mr Wells: Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) station boundaries do not directly mirror constituency boundaries. There are NIFRS stations in Portadown, Banbridge, Lurgan and Dromore, with a total of 104 Firefighters stationed in the area.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what translation services are provided when a non-English speaking prisoner is taken to hospital. (AQW 37148/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern and Social Care Trust has responsibility for the delivery of healthcare within the four Northern Ireland Prisons.

Translation services utilised by the South Eastern and Social Care Trust are the same as those used within the wider Health and Social Care family. Where face to face interpreting services are required the Regional Interpreting Service is accessed and where telephone interpreting services are appropriate the 'Big Word' is used. The Big Word is a global technology enabled language solution provider.

When a prisoner is transferred to an external hospital, it is the responsibility of the hospital to arrange the provision of an interpreter. Prison healthcare staff are responsible for identifying any specific requirements such as an interpreter within the transfer documentation.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a breakdown of the delivery of the different types of advanced radiotherapy techniques, in each of the last three years. (AQW 37178/11-15)

Mr Wells: Advanced radiotherapy techniques available at the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre include intensity modulated radiotherapy (IMRT) and stereotactic ablative body radiotherapy (SABR). IMRT was introduced in 2008 and SABR for lung cancer in 2013/14. Activity for the last three years is set out below.

Year	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15 (Apr –Sept inc)
Inverse planned IMRT	107	825	927	291
Forward Planned IMRT	444	143	439	388
Total IMRT	551	968	1366	679
SABR Lung	0	0	10	14

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cancers that have been specifically targeted by advanced radiotherapy in the last three years. (AQW 37179/11-15)

Mr Wells: Advanced radiotherapy techniques including intensity modulated radiotherapy (IMRT) and stereotactic ablative body radiotherapy (SABR) are provided for the radical treatment of head and neck cancers, lung cancer, prostate cancer and all breast cancer. Other cancers (e.g. lower or upper GI, gynaecological cancers) can also be treated using IMRT where a clinical oncologist determines this would be more clinically beneficial than conventional treatment. IMRT was introduced in 2008 and SABR for lung cancer in 2013/14.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cancers that are not being treated with advanced radiotherapy techniques.

(AQW 37180/11-15)

Mr Wells: The decision whether to use advanced or more conventional conformal treatment is a clinical decision determined by the consultant oncologist on the basis of which treatment plan is most suitable for any individual patient in view of specific disease and anatomical factors.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients have been referred to other treatment centres to receive advanced radiotherapy treatment due to treatment not being provided in the hospital they have been attending.

(AQW 37181/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Belfast HSC Trust is the only Trust delivering advanced radiotherapy treatment in Northern Ireland. This treatment is delivered in the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre, although the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre also refers patients with a range of brain conditions to England for stereotactic radiotherapy in England via the Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) process.

The number of patients referred to the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre for radiotherapy treatment from other HSC Trusts is not available, as this would involve a trawl of individual patient records and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

In the past financial year (2013/14), 43 patients were sent to treatment centres outside Northern Ireland to receive advanced radiotherapy treatment.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37207/11-15)

Mr Wells: Current expenditure bids totalling £130m were submitted by my Department in the October monitoring round as follows:

Bid	Amount £m
Unscheduled Care/Patient Flow	35.0
Specialist Services	10.0
Elective Care/Diagnostics	27.0
TYC Implementation	2.6
Public Health Initiatives	3.5
Resettlements	1.9
Other Departmental Priorities	13.0
Pay Awards	15.0
Pharmacy	18.0
Departmental ALBs	4.0
	130.0

My Department is facing considerable financial challenges in 2014/15, with some £160 million of additional resources estimated to be required in order to balance the books. Some of these have been addressed through £80m of additional Executive funding, but some £70m remains to be managed. I am unclear which debate the member refers to, though placing a copy of bids in the Assembly Library would not be normal practice.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current number of specialist diabetic nurses in each Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 37209/11-15)

Mr Wells: The headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE) numbers of diabetes nurse specialists employed by each Health and Social Care Trust are shown in the table below.

HSC Trust	Headcount	Whole-Time Equivalent
Belfast	17	14.61
Northern	15	12.68
South Eastern	16	14.75
Southern	8	7.27
Western	15	12.88

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the cost of paramedic training conducted by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service in the last three years.

(AQW 37213/11-15)

Mr Wells: The two year Paramedic-in-Training Programme delivered by the Regional Ambulance Training Centre costs approximately £41k per trainee. NIAS has trained 54 Paramedics in three cohorts over the last three calendar years at a total cost of £2.214m. A further 17 trainees are currently progressing through the programme with an anticipated completion date of February 2015.

All 32 trainees in the first two cohorts have been successful in achieving employment of which 26 are currently on temporary contracts. A further 22 trainees in the third cohort have recently completed their training and registered to apply for posts.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people completed Northern Ireland Ambulance Service training and were successful in achieving employment as a paramedic, in the last three years.

(AQW 37223/11-15)

Mr Wells: The two year Paramedic-in-Training Programme delivered by the Regional Ambulance Training Centre costs approximately £41k per trainee. NIAS has trained 54 Paramedics in three cohorts over the last three calendar years at a total cost of £2.214m. A further 17 trainees are currently progressing through the programme with an anticipated completion date of February 2015.

All 32 trainees in the first two cohorts have been successful in achieving employment of which 26 are currently on temporary contracts. A further 22 trainees in the third cohort have recently completed their training and registered to apply for posts.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the levels of sick absence amongst paramedics employed by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service, in the last three years.

(AQW 37226/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am assured that the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) as employer, continues to engage with staff and Trade Union Side through agreed, established processes to address issues and concerns, highlight the positive aspects in the service and commend efforts, while acknowledging and addressing negative aspects to learn and improve.

The table below sets out the levels of sick absence amongst Paramedics (including Rapid Response Vehicle (RRV) Paramedics) employed by the NIAS, in the last three years.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to launch a new consultation on the fluoridation of the public water supply.

(AQW 37228/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is appropriate that I should give consideration to the fluoridation of the water supplies in Northern Ireland.

If a proposal to fluoridate the water supplies is made, the appropriate evidence from reputable scientific and medical sources will be considered, and we are required under, The Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006, to consult, and ascertain, public opinion. Should such a consultation proceed, we would welcome the views of all interested parties, at that time.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37240/11-15)

Mr Wells: The cash balances held within commercial bank accounts as at the commencement of business 1 Oct 2014 was as follows:

	Cash balances as at commencement of business 1 Oct 2014 £m
HSCB / PHA	1.08

All other balances relating to reserves are formally produced and audited at the end of each financial year (31 March).

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 30550/11-15, when a regional network of professionals with experience of working with Myalgic Encephalomyelitis and Chronic Fatigue Syndrome patients will be established.

(AQW 37259/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have been advised that a review of services established in Scotland and interim results of a pilot in the Northern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust have identified the need for Occupational Therapy, Physiotherapy, Psychology and Medical input at regional level to support GPs who will manage the great majority of care for sufferers of ME/CFS and provide specialist programmes where necessary.

The final evaluation report will be available by the end of November and a specification for the service will be prepared by the end of January, together with an assessment of resources already available within the HSC Trusts.

Further implementation will depend on the availability of resources and recruitment timescales for any additional staff required.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact that the introduction of a minimum unit price for alcohol would have on the health and wellbeing of the general public.

(AQW 37260/11-15)

Mr Wells: The price at which some supermarkets sell alcohol, sometimes cheaper than bottled water, is damaging to individuals, communities, and families. Therefore I am determined to take action to address alcohol's affordability, and I believe this is vital given that alcohol is 67% more affordable now than it was in 1980.

236 people died last year and 12,255 people were admitted to hospital from alcohol related disease. It is estimated that the full social cost to the Northern Ireland economy is up to £900m per year. I believe Minimum Unit Pricing offers a targeted and measured response to the growing concerns about the effects of alcohol harm on our society.

I have considered the research commissioned to examine the effects of MUP in Northern Ireland and I am currently discussing the way forward with the Minister for Social Development and hope to make an announcement soon. We will also continue to watch developments in Scotland, England and Europe very closely.

However, minimum unit pricing is only one part of our approach to this issue, and it is important we take a range of actions, including education and early intervention and providing services for those to need additional support, to address alcohol misuse across the population.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36802/11-15 and his statement that "It is important that solutions adopted at each site must fit the particular needs and circumstances of each individual location", for his assessment of whether a charge of £0.70 per hour for parking at the South West Acute Hospital is appropriate. (AQW 37302/11-15)

Mr Wells: The decision to charge £0.70 per hour for car parking at the South West Acute Hospital was set by the Western Health and Social Care Trust in September 2012 and is consistent with my Department's policy on car parking provision and management in the Health and Social Care (HSC) sector.

The revenue generated is used to cover the costs of the provision and maintenance of car parking including the associated security costs. In the event there is a surplus, it is reinvested in patient services. This is in accordance with the Department's policy on car parking provision.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) how many places are available on courses for nurses who wish to return to practice; (ii) where these courses are offered; and (iii) what is the ratio of applications to available places.

(AQW 37323/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Return to Practice Programme is delivered at the University of Ulster (UU). Currently the University has 32 student admissions per year.

Over the last four years, of the applicants that were eligible, approximately 40% were successful in gaining a place on the course following short listing and interview.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an overview of the current provision of out-of-hours GP services in Strabane.

(AQW 37325/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health & Social Care Board (HSCB) commissions GP Out of Hours (OOHs) services in the Western Trust area from Western Urgent Care (WUC) which operates 5 GP OOHs bases including Strabane.

When a patient in the Strabane area contacts GP OOHs services, the service is structured so that they will be seen in the local centre. However, should the situation arise that when a patient contacts the OOHs service and there is no GP available in that centre at that time, then the patient will be provided with an appointment, at a later time, to see a GP at the Strabane centre. WUC make the necessary arrangements to have a GP travel from either the Altnagelvin or Omagh base to see those patients. Should patients wish to be seen sooner they are offered an appointment at the GP OOHs centre in Altnagelvin.

An analysis of activity in the Strabane area shows that from March 2014 until September 2104 there have been 79 occasions where a GP was not in place for the whole of the evening in Strabane. As previously indicated on each of these evenings all patients were offered an appointment in the Strabane centre.

Patients who need to see a doctor or nurse continue to do so within the Northern Ireland Quality Standards depending on the urgency of the case. Furthermore, any patient in the area who requires a home visit will be offered one. It should be noted that access to the Strabane centre is by appointment only, and patients should always ring for advice before attending the centre.

Given the demand being placed on GP OOHs it is essential that patients understand that the OOHs service is designed to deal with urgent calls only and that patients with non-urgent needs are best dealt with during the day at their local GP surgery, via self-care or accessing their local community pharmacy.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has to regulate private ambulances which are hired to provide medical cover for sporting and public events.

(AQW 37333/11-15)

Mr Wells: There is no provision at present for the regulation of private ambulances in Northern Ireland. The introduction of regulation will require changes to legislation or new legislation, and the issue is being considered by my department.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the viability of an air ambulance service.

(AQW 37334/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is in receipt of a report from the Health and Social Care Board on the feasibility and appropriateness of establishing a dedicated Helicopter Emergency Medical Service in Northern Ireland. In addition, Departmental officials are participating in a working group led by the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland to make recommendations on how best to provide a dedicated Emergency Aeromedical Support service in the Republic, including recommendations in relation to the potential for expansion of the geographical reach of the service, including an all-island service. The group's report is not yet published. I will wish to consider the recommendations of both reports carefully before making a decision about the viability of an air ambulance service.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36062/11-15, what efforts are being made to reduce waiting times on arrival for pre-arranged antenatal appointments in Braid Valley Hospital.

(AQW 37354/11-15)

Mr Wells: Every effort is made to ensure that women attending antenatal appointments are seen on a timely basis.

Clinics are block booked as there are a number of midwives and doctors in attendance and who the woman sees is dependent on the care pathway she has chosen. Sometimes several women will need to see the consultant attending the clinic and this may result in a longer waiting time. Midwives are responsible for ensuring that each woman knows who or what she is waiting for and is made aware of any unexpected delays. The midwives are now proactively trying to ensure that the twice weekly clinics in Braid Valley are balanced in terms of numbers attending.

The Trust continually reviews how services are provided taking into account the principle of 'the right patient being seen by the right person at the right time in the right place' and build on other recommendations outlined in the regional Maternity Strategy.

There are a number of ongoing initiatives, aimed at improving the provision of antenatal care, particularly for those patients who are considered high risk which should alleviate the waiting times in other clinics.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the implementation of Phase One of Transforming Your Care in South Down and to detail (i) the lessons learnt from this process; and (ii) when the implementation of Phase Two will commence.

(AQW 37378/11-15)

Mr Wells: Implementation of Transforming Your Care is being taken forward on an ongoing rather than a phased basis. Within the South Down area implementation work is ongoing, for example, in respect of reform to reablement services, self directed support, new ambulance service protocols and resettlement of long stay mental health and learning disability patients into the community. A number of Integrated Care Partnerships are also being operated in the South Down area.

In respect of the phases for TYC, I believe that the Member for South Down may be referencing the implementation support which has been provided to TYC over recent months. Phase one of this implementation support involved challenge and further development of local reform plans – including those of the South Eastern and Southern Trusts. The HSCB has moved into a further phase of this implementation support; this phase will be taken forward as a series of discrete work packages.

A process is in place to ensure that lessons are identified and considered as part of the implementation support work. This learning will be applied as reform is taken forward across the health and social care system in Northern Ireland.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the reasons why the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust are frequently not meeting the thirteen week target for Psychological Assessment; (ii) what plan is in place to deal with the gap in services; and (iii) whether he will commit additional finance if necessary to tackle the problem.

(AQW 37379/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) The South Eastern Trust Clinical Psychology and Psychological Therapies Service achieves the thirteen week access target for Children's Services, Learning Disability Services and Neurodisability Services. Due to increasing demand and limited resources the Trust has been unable to meet the thirteen week access target for Mental Health, Older Adult and Health Psychology services.
- (ii) The Service has developed a Recovery Action Plan to address this ongoing breach. The Recovery Action Plan includes:
  - investment proposals seeking additional funding for posts;
  - measures to ensure productivity is at required level;
  - implementation of caseload management strategies and partial booking arrangements for new appointments; and
  - training and supporting staff in generic services to deliver low intensity psychological interventions which should reduce referral rates to specialist Psychological Therapy Services.
- (iii) A Strategy for the Development of Psychological Therapies Services was published by the Department in 2010 and was underpinned by an additional £4.4m per annum. A further £1m was invested last year by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) in primary mental health. This investment will train existing staff on "talking therapies" and provide greater access for GPs to psychological therapies. The HSCB is also establishing Primary Care Talking Therapy Hubs in each Trust. The current expenditure on psychological therapies is around £6.5m.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the prevalence and incidence of Chiari Malformation and Syringomyelia.

(AQW 37380/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the prevalence of Chiari Malformation and Syringomyelia is not available. Information on the number of admissions and the number of individuals admitted to HSC hospitals in Northern Ireland is detailed in the table below.

Year	Admissions	Individuals admitted
2011/12	35	28
2012/13	39	30
2013/14	31	29

Source: Hospital Inpatient System

Notes

1. Admissions are estimated using death and discharge episodes.
2. Individuals are approximated by matching records on Health and Care Number.
3. Chiari Malformation has been defined using International Classification of Disease (revision 10) (ICD-10) code Q07.0, searched for in the primary diagnosis field.
4. Syringomyelia has been defined using ICD-10 code G95.0, searched for in the primary diagnosis field.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department will be making a formal response the consultation by the Department of Justice on the liberalisation of Northern Ireland's abortion law.

(AQW 37385/11-15)

Mr Wells: Departments do not tend to formally respond to public consultations of other Departments. Health officials provided medical and policy advice to the Department of Justice as required during the development of their consultation document.

As this issue is cross cutting and controversial, I would expect a discussion to take place between Ministers at the Executive table, to allow consideration of all views.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he is satisfied as to the value for money and necessity for the layer of Assistant Directors across the Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 37386/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is the responsibility of Health and Social Care Trusts, as employers, to determine the support structure which is most appropriate to their organisation, based on service need and available resources. I expect all HSC employers to regularly review these structures to maximise their effectiveness.

The contribution of all staff in the Health and Social Care family is highly valued and whilst it is clinical front-line staff who may make the most visible difference, managers, including those at Assistant Director level, play a critical role in the effective running of our services. Effective leadership will be more important than ever as we move forward with the implementation of Transforming Your Care.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of managers in each Health and Social Care Trust who receive performance related (i) bonuses; and (ii) pay; and to detail the spend on bonuses and performance related pay in the last three years.

(AQW 37401/11-15)

Mr Wells: For the purposes of this question the term 'managers' has been interpreted as senior executive staff i.e. director level and above (including Chief Executives).

Under the Senior Executive Pay and Grading Scheme (the Scheme) senior executives receive neither performance related bonuses, nor performance related pay.

The Scheme is based on a system of overlapping pay ranges with a wide range between minima and maxima. On appointment senior executives are assigned to a pay range based on the evaluated level of the post, and progress through the pay range on the basis of delivering satisfactory performance.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of full time staff undertaking translation services and employed in each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37425/11-15)

Mr Wells: No full time staff are employed in Health and Social Care Trusts to undertake translation services. The Northern Ireland HSC Interpreting Service (NIHSCIS) provides interpreters across any HSC appointment – both in primary care and across integrated care services in the Health and Social Care Trusts. Interpreters are engaged on a self-employed sessional basis and are paid by assignment as opposed to being in permanent contracts.

Expenditure by each Health & Social Care Trust on translation and interpreting services in each of the last three years is set out in the table below:

	2013/14 £	2012/13 £	2011/12 £
Belfast Health & Social Care Trust	755,307	717,799	536,462
Northern Health & Social Care Trust	435,605	364,641	309,832
South Eastern Health & Social Care Trust	158,931	119,151	115,391
Southern Health & Social Care Trust	1,309,514	1,358,177	924,136
Western Health & Social Care Trust	246,952	216,809	220,052
NI Ambulance Service Health & Social Care Trust	658	995	1,268
	2,906,967	2,777,572	2,107,141

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration he has given to the introduction of Pulse oximetry for all newborns.

(AQW 37431/11-15)

Mr Wells: The UK National Screening Committee (NSC) has recommended piloting the use of pulse oximetry to screen newborn babies for congenital heart defects.

The NSC will use the pilot to better understand the implications of using the test in services for newborn babies. Following the evaluation of this pilot the NSC will make a policy recommendation for the UK and I will await this recommendation before making a policy decision on this for Northern Ireland.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of planned operations postponed at Antrim Area Hospital in the last month as a result of pressures arising from emergency admissions.

(AQW 37436/11-15)

Mr Wells: There were nine cancellations of planned operations in Antrim Area Hospital during September 2014 as a result of pressures arising from emergency admissions.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what are the current measures in place to effectively deal with the possibility of an outbreak of the Ebola virus.

(AQW 37442/11-15)

Mr Wells: In order to deal with a potential importation of a case of Ebola Virus Disease in Northern Ireland my officials have been liaising frequently with their counterparts across the UK and in the Republic of Ireland.

The Public Health Agency has been coordinating regional planning in conjunction with the Department and Trusts. This includes the development of patient care pathways by all Trusts and comprises planning for the management and isolation of suspected cases, accumulation of appropriate Personal Protective Equipment and delivering staff training.

In addition the Chief Medical Officer has sent five letters to the Chief Executives of Health and Social Care organisations providing information for all frontline clinical staff who may be treating or admitting patients, all Infection Prevention and Control staff and all GPs and practice staff. The letters include flow charts for use by staff in Emergency Departments and by staff in Primary Care for dealing with patients who require a risk assessment for the possibility of a viral haemorrhagic fever.

The Chief Medical Officer has also written to all schools, universities and further education establishments.

It is important to note that the UK has robust systems in place already for infectious disease control, including at airports and ports.

Advice for UK border staff has been circulated to all UK ports. In Northern Ireland the Public Health Agency, through its Health Protection Service, has communicated with colleagues covering all sea ports and airports in Northern Ireland informing them of the current situation in relation to the outbreak and directing them to sources of further information, including the actions to be taken should a sick traveller, potentially with an infectious disease, come to their attention. Posters have been sent to all airports and sea ports in Northern Ireland to advise arriving travellers about risk factors for Ebola, symptoms and signs and how to seek medical advice.

In order to reduce the risk of international spread of the disease, and in line with World Health Organization guidance, the affected countries have introduced exit screening at airports to ensure that individuals who are unwell do not board flights.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has communicated with Leo Varadkar regarding provisions for a possible outbreak of the Ebola virus.

(AQW 37443/11-15)

Mr Wells: Shortly after my appointment as Health Minister I wrote to Leo Varadkar highlighting the need to work together on issues of mutual concern, and I am scheduled to meet with him next month. This cooperation will cover a range of issues including the Ebola Virus Disease outbreak in west Africa and its implications for public health and for the healthcare systems in both jurisdictions.

Since the Ebola Virus Disease outbreak, my officials have been working closely with their counterparts in the Republic of Ireland, and on 13 October the Chief Medical Officer had a teleconference with his counterpart, Dr Tony Holohan, along with medical officers and officials in both health departments. Liaison with RoI at CMO and official level will continue.

The discussions between my officials and their Dublin counterparts have included access to isolation facilities across the island of Ireland, with a view to ensuring optimal preparedness in both jurisdictions.

The Health and Social Care Board wrote to all GPs and Out of Hours providers on 5th September, providing a flowchart for dealing with patients who require a risk assessment for the possibility of a viral haemorrhagic fever. The letter is available at: <http://primarycare.hscni.net/3298.htm>

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that there are over 7,000 people living with undiagnosed dementia, what steps his Department is taking to increase awareness of the need for early diagnosis.

(AQW 37462/11-15)

Mr Wells: The regional strategy "Improving Dementia Services in Northern Ireland" launched in November 2011 recognised the importance of early diagnosis. Recurrent investment over the past two years has led to the enhancement of memory services, and their development where none existed previously.

Criteria and protocols have been developed for referrals into memory services and work is ongoing to achieve timely assessment and diagnosis. Work is also in progress with GPs to enhance referrals to memory clinics.

All five Trusts are committed to providing timely diagnosis, and services are being developed to include pre and post diagnostic counselling, comprehensive assessment, support and education, which in turn will lead to improved diagnosis rates and uptake of early intervention supports.

Over the next 3 years, in addition to those plans already in place, the Dementia Strategy Implementation Group will focus on the key target areas of (i) awareness raising, information and support, (ii) training and (iii) short-breaks, respite and support to carers.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he will take to help reduce the burden of record keeping and documentation for Social Workers.

(AQW 37488/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department has produced "Improving and Safeguarding Social Wellbeing, a Strategy for Social Work in Northern Ireland" which is being implemented by the HSCB. One of the key themes of the Strategy is to 'reduce bureaucracy'. A number of initiatives are being supported through the Strategy aimed directly at reducing bureaucracy thereby creating increased capacity for social workers. Examples include the use of digital dictation and interactive referral processes.

The HSCB is also leading a number of other initiatives to increase the use of technology in supporting record keeping and documentation. These include a draft E-Strategy for Health & Social Care; electronic solutions to recording and sharing information; and streamlining to merge systems.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQT 1616/11-15, which included the 'hope' in relation to organ donation that there would be 'no need for any further legislation,' whether he is not minded to bring forward soft opt-out legislation irrespective of the outcome of the further survey of public opinion following the Public Health Agency's public awareness campaign announced by his predecessor on 11 February 2014.

(AQW 37489/11-15)

Mr Wells: The future of organ donation is not a decision to be taken lightly. I am not excluding any potential measure at this point but soft opt-out legislation is not the only option for increasing organ donation. My Department's policy on this important matter is to support the full implementation of the NHSBT UK strategy Taking Organ Transplantation to 2020, complemented by the Public Health Agency's (PHA) current awareness campaign, "Speak up and save a life".

I will make a decision on whether or not the current policy needs to be supplemented by statutory opt-out legislation after I have given full consideration to the PHA's next report on the effect of its campaign on the awareness, understanding and support for organ donation among the wider public. The report is due to be completed by February 2015.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety which Service Level Agreement (SLA) he referred to in his statement to the Assembly on the 14 October 2014 when he stated that the current arrangements under the SLAs will remain in place until December 2014.

(AQW 37515/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are four SLAs in place for the provision of PCCS services for children from Northern Ireland. My comment during my oral statement on 14 October 2014, in which I referred to a date of December 2014, related to the SLA between Belfast Health and Social Care Trust and Our Lady's Children's Hospital, Crumlin (OLCHC). This allows for the provision of supporting elective surgical services and interventional cardiology services in Belfast by Dublin-based surgeons. This SLA will currently run to the end of December 2014. Discussions are to take place regarding the extension of this arrangement to March 2015 to support the provision of Dublin-based surgeons providing surgical cover for interventional cardiology services in Belfast. There are no plans to extend the arrangements for the provision of elective surgical services in Belfast beyond December 2014. The SLA is kept under review and if there is a need to extend it further beyond March 2015, this will be considered.

Details of the other three SLAs are set out below:

- SLA between the Health and Social Care Board and OLCHC for emergency cases to be undertaken in Dublin. This SLA covers the period to the end of December 2014. This SLA will be renewed for 2015.
- SLA between the Health and Social Care Board and Evelina Children's Hospital London, for elective and relevant urgent cases. This SLA covers the period to the end of December 2014. Discussions have taken place regarding extending the current SLA to include relevant emergency cases. This SLA will be renewed for 2015.
- SLA between the Health and Social Care Board and Birmingham Children's Hospital, for elective and relevant urgent cases. This SLA covers the period to the end of March 2015. This SLA will be renewed for 2015/16.

I would refer the Member to my oral statement to the Assembly on 14 October 2014 that my final decision on the future service model proposed by the International Working Group is subject to the outcome of public consultation. The interim service arrangements provided by these SLAs should be viewed within the context of my statement on decisions to be taken in relation to the long-term configuration of this service.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current support offered to people with cerebral palsy and their carers.

(AQW 37521/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care Trusts provide a range of services to support individuals with cerebral palsy and their carers depending on their assessed need. Clients may self-refer or a referral may be made by a family member, a healthcare professional or an agency. A carer's assessment will also be provided with the agreement of the carer.

The types of service provision available include social work, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, speech and language, psychology, domiciliary care, day opportunities, short breaks for the carer, signposting and referral to voluntary and community organisations.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of births that have taken place in the South West Acute Hospital in each month since it opened.

(AQW 37535/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of births at each main acute hospital is published on an annual basis in the Northern Ireland Hospital Statistics: Inpatient and Day Case Activity publication (Table 4c) and is available to view or download from:

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36618/11-15, to detail the number of breaches in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust of twelve hour waiting periods in 2013/14, compared to such earlier years as figures are available for.

(AQW 37556/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on waiting times at emergency care departments is published on a quarterly basis, and available to view or download from: <http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/waitingtimes/waitingtimes-emergency.htm>

The number of new and unplanned review attendances waiting longer than 12 hours to be either treated and discharged home, or admitted to hospital from emergency care departments in the Northern HSC Trust, is detailed in the table below for each of the last six years (2008/09 – 2013/14).

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what actions his Department will take to provide modern IT systems to support frontline Social Workers.

(AQW 37570/11-15)

Mr Wells: This is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care Board. I have contacted the Board and received the information below:

The main system used by social workers in Northern Ireland is the SOS CARE system. This system records and communicates information on social care clients in both the Adult and Family Child Care elements of Social work. This system records the UNOCINI assessments for children and young people and provides a NI wide 'children at risk' register. SOS CARE records all vulnerable adult referrals and is the main source for social work and social care information returns. The SOS CARE system is being replaced by more modern integrated ICT systems to provide Social Workers and Community Care staff with appropriate access to both social work information and community care information.

A business case is under development to make the case for providing social workers (and other community staff) with 'mobile access' to their information systems and these actions are outlined the e-Health Strategy consultation document launched for consultation on 8th October 2014.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the support services currently available; and (ii) the service improvement plans, for prostate cancer patients in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 37574/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that support services currently available to prostate cancer patients include access to:

- continence services;
- a Macmillan Health and Well Being service;
- a Macmillan Benefits Advisory service;
- counselling and clinical psychology;
- a dedicated nurse-led erectile dysfunction clinic;
- a post-treatment holistic needs assessment with a urology nurse specialist; and
- 'Nurse Led Follow Up' which promotes health and well being.

The Trust will continue to work closely with both the statutory and voluntary sectors to ensure that regional and national recommendations for improving services for prostate cancer are supported.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he is encouraging departmental staff to cycle to work.

(AQW 37651/11-15)

Mr Wells: The NICS cycle to work scheme is promoted annually by the Department of Finance and Personnel. The scheme was relaunched in February 2014 and details communicated to all NICS staff via the HRConnect portal and e-mail.

Bicycle parking facilities are available for staff in my Department who cycle to work.

Department of Justice

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 36916/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Seven staff from the Executive Information Service are currently on loan to the Department of Justice, providing the range of information services common to all departments. The cost of these staff is estimated to be £326,362 in 2014/15.

Two general service staff within the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service perform press office duties within that agency, at a total estimated cost of £53,611 in 2014/15.

In addition, 11 administrative staff within the Department of Justice provide a media monitoring service to all of the Northern Ireland Executive departments, and to a number of the public bodies. This service is delivered through service level agreements, with income generated being used to offset the cost of their employment. The cost of these 11 staff is estimated to be £290,075 in 2014/15, and the income generated from the service is currently £168,000.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36138/11-15, (i) whether this accountability is practiced; and (ii) whether he has been furnished with evidence of PFNI consultation with all members and the required responses, in both the matter of pensions and any other relevant issues for which PFNI are representatively responsible.

(AQW 37098/11-15)

Mr Ford: This issue is outside of my remit. This is a matter for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland's (PFNI) Central Committee and its members.

I have not been furnished with evidence of the PFNI's consultation with its members and there is no requirement that I should be. Whilst I am aware that consultation is ongoing within the PFNI, I have no role in telling the Federation how to consult with members on the matter of pensions, or any other issues.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many people in each court division have been recalled to court under fine default reviews since the extent of unpaid fines was revealed, broken down by (i) Magistrates'; and (ii) Crown courts.

(AQW 37100/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below outlines the number of people issued with a notice to attend a Fine Default Hearing as of 7 October 2014.

County Court Division	Crown	Magistrates'	Total
Antrim	31	1350	1381
Ards	27	1178	1205
Armagh & South Down	18	389	407

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, given the recent conviction in Case Number 12/090031 for rape and assault at Dungannon Crown Court that an active previous assessment of dangerous as defined by the 2008 (NI) Act, and that the offences were committed whilst on day-release from a violence-related custodial sentence, (i) whether this case meets the criteria for a Serious Case Review; (ii) if so will he order a review; and (iii) if not, will he consider a review of this case and the monitoring of the offender.

(AQW 37161/11-15)

Mr Ford: The young person, who is now an adult, was on a rehabilitation programme in the last two weeks of his sentence before he was due to be released from a six month Juvenile Justice Centre Order, imposed for Assault and Disorderly behaviour. A Risk Assessment had been completed and a detailed plan of activities had been agreed by a number of agencies including PBNI, involving an overnight stay at home, and a visit to set up a training placement for the young person. Home leave, as part of a programme of rehabilitation, is normal during the last third of a young person's detention. The young person in question had fully co-operated with his re-integration plan throughout his sentence and had complied fully with the terms of earlier visits to home both escorted and unescorted. There is no record of this young person having committed offences of this nature before. All elements of the plan until this point had been kept including visits and meetings with a variety of agencies.

Juvenile Justice Centre Orders are not covered by the Serious Case Review process, but I have asked all Agencies involved to review the case and report back to me.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37208/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department's October monitoring bid to the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP), broken down as follows, was based on a range of considerations including statutory obligations and the impact on front line services and public safety:

- £19.7m for legal aid – i.e. the Department's June monitoring bid that was not funded;
- £10.5m to reduce the most severe impact of cuts on PSNI;
- £1.9m to reduce the most severe impact of cuts on the remainder of the Department; and
- given the potential for additional in-year cuts of 1.6%, equating to £17.4m, the Department also highlighted that if these cuts were made, it would bid for additional funding to offset the severe impact of the cuts.

As highlighted in the Finance Minister's Statement to the Assembly on 13 October 2014, the Department of Justice has been allocated an additional £29.0m for PSNI and legal aid pressures.

The Department's bid was forwarded to the Department of Finance and Personnel for inclusion in the October Monitoring round. The Department is not aware of any protocols requiring the Department to deposit a copy of its bid in the Assembly library.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37241/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice's arm's length bodies do not retain cash reserves.

They retain a minimum balance in bank accounts in order to meet day-to-day working capital requirements in line with Managing Public Money NI.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the procedure for a prisoner who has been returned to custody after breaching the terms of a licence release to serve the remainder as a sentenced prisoner, who is the subject of a bench warrant which has to be executed in a court setting; and (ii) the agency responsible for facilitating or requesting the prisoner being brought to court for the warrant to be executed.

(AQW 37255/11-15)

Mr Ford: The execution and proof of execution of an arrest warrant is a matter for the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI).

Section 16 of the Prison Act (Northern Ireland) 1953 provides for the removal of prisoners for judicial and other purposes. Where such removal is sought and directed, the prisoner is deemed to be in custody until returned to prison (s.16(3)). The Northern Ireland Prison Service will make appropriate arrangements for the removal and return of the prisoner to and from the relevant establishment.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36917/11-15, whether he will (i) undertake to provide a detailed update on this matter; (ii) seek an explanation as to why the requirement to file accounts was not complied with; and (iii) establish who was ultimately responsible.

(AQW 37258/11-15)

Mr Ford: As stated in my reply to AQW/36917/11-15, my officials have engaged with the Police Federation for Northern Ireland (PFNI) and I can confirm that all outstanding documents have now been submitted to my Department.

The PFNI Central Committee is responsible for the preparation, including filing, of the PFNI's accounts. It has advised that the delay was the result of an administrative oversight, for which it has apologised.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Justice how many people have been convicted of benefit fraud in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 37273/11-15)

Mr Ford: Details of the number of defendants that were (i) received in court and (ii) found guilty of at least one offence relating to benefit fraud, during the calendar years 2007 to 2013, are outlined in the table below:

Number of defendants (i) received in court and (ii) found guilty of at least one offence, relating to benefit fraud: 2007 to 2013

2013	610	461

Source: Integrated Court Operations System (ICOS)

The provision of data for the period prior to 2007 requires a manual trawl of court records and would therefore incur a disproportionate cost.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice whether he is aware of the number of enforcement actions or prosecutions that have taken place in regard to the operation of illegal taxis, broken down by district council area, in each of the last three years. (AQW 37306/11-15)

Mr Ford: Prior to the commencement of the relevant provisions of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008, Public Prosecution Service prosecutions for offences relating to the operation of illegal taxis and related offences including the offence of failing to produce a PSV licence were available under the following statutory provisions: Regulation 9(a) of the Motor Vehicle (Driving Licences) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1991, Articles 59 & 60 of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, Regulation 49 of the Public Service Vehicles Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1985 and Article 92 of the Road Traffic Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Section 48 of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 commenced on 12 September 2012. However, no prosecutions in relation to the operation of illegal taxis had been brought to court under this provision by the end of 2012, the most recent year for which prosecutions data are available.

The information provided is grouped by court division, as the administrative datasets from which this information is gathered do not hold information on the location of the alleged offences.

Note:

1. Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is prosecuted is included.
2. The figures provided relate to prosecutions for all classifications of the offences specified.
3. Prosecutions listed in the table relate only to those offences that were prosecuted by the Public Prosecution Service, whether they resulted in a conviction or not.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) how much was it ascertained that Gheorge Ionas gained by his criminal activity; (ii) whether these funds have been seized as the proceeds of crime; and (iii) whether these funds will be distributed as compensation amongst the victims in question.

(AQW 37316/11-15)

Mr Ford: The amount Gheorge Ionas gained by his criminal activity could not be ascertained. PSNI enquiries found that there were limited funds in his bank accounts and no cash was recovered from his rented accommodation. No funds or assets could therefore be seized or made available for distribution as compensation for victims.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether Legal Aid was granted in the case of Gheorge Ionas at Craigavon Magistrates Court; (ii) if so how much has been paid, shown by law firm and counsel; and (iii) if costs have not yet been claimed, what is the estimated total.

(AQW 37318/11-15)

Mr Ford: An application for legal aid was granted by the court for representation by solicitor and junior counsel. However, to date, no bills have been submitted by the legal representatives.

The estimated total cost is £761.74 (inclusive of VAT of £126.96), broken down as follows:

- Solicitor £330.00 (inclusive of VAT of £55.00)
- Junior Counsel £431.74 (inclusive of VAT of £71.96).

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36643/11-15, how much NI Prison Service has paid to the Scottish Prison Service, or its contracted service providers, to provide drugs testing services on the basis of payments made on the number of tests undertaken, in each financial year since the service commenced.

(AQW 37321/11-15)

Mr Ford: No payments have been made to the Scottish Prison Service for access to this contract. The details of how much has been paid to the contractor are commercially sensitive, with the contract being prepared for retender.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36691/11-15, whether the judges who preside in Belfast Youth and Family Court were personally consulted before the decision was taken and announced.

(AQW 37324/11-15)

Mr Ford: Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service officials consulted with the Presiding District Judge responsible for the Magistrates' family proceedings and youth courts before the decision to temporarily close the Old Townhall building was taken and announced.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether there are licensing qualifications or other prerequisites for operators of CCTV cameras at public buildings; and why operators of such cameras at the Sanger gate at Laganside court were relieved of their duties recently.

(AQW 37326/11-15)

Mr Ford: All G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Limited staff working on the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service security contract are required to have a current Security Industry Authority (SIA) public space surveillance licence. Two members of G4S who regularly work at the Sanger at Laganside Courts were temporarily relieved of their duties at the sanger pending receipt of their licence dispensation notices.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether Civilian Security Officers of the Northern Ireland Security Guard Service who are designated as Special Constables are subject to the supervision and oversight of the Northern Ireland Police Ombudsman.

(AQW 37328/11-15)

Mr Ford: Members of the Northern Ireland Security Guard Service are Ministry of Defence (MoD) employees, accountable to Commander 38 (Irish) Brigade, who provide security at and within MoD establishments in Northern Ireland. As their role is limited to guarding within the defence estate, they are not subject to the supervision or oversight of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. Their employment and accountability is a matter for the MoD. I do not have information on the numbers designated as special constables.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice how many Civilian Security Officers of the Northern Ireland Security Guard Service are designated as Special Constables.

(AQW 37330/11-15)

Mr Ford: Members of the Northern Ireland Security Guard Service are Ministry of Defence (MoD) employees, accountable to Commander 38 (Irish) Brigade, who provide security at and within MoD establishments in Northern Ireland. Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how much has been recovered in each court division to date in unpaid fines since action was taken to recoup defaulters broken down by (i) Magistrates'; and (ii) Crown courts.

(AQW 37356/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below outlines the value of unpaid fines recovered after the issue of a notice to attend a Fine Default Hearing as of 13 October 2014.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the concerns raised by G4S staff of faulty palm scanners in court houses, whether he will order an independent assessment and report of the (i) effectiveness of the palm scanners; and (ii) concerns raised by staff, and whether these concerns were appropriately addressed.

(AQW 37393/11-15)

Mr Ford: The palm scanners installed by G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Limited are to record timekeeping and attendance rather than to ensure the security of premises. Any concerns raised by G4S staff are a matter for G4S therefore I do not intend to order an independent assessment.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how much was paid in legal aid for the judicial review taken by a person in relation to Reference STE9365 delivered on 29 September 2014, broken down by (i) law firm; (ii) junior counsel; (iii) senior counsel; and (iv) other associated costs; or if a total has not been submitted, to provide an estimated final total.

(AQW 37394/11-15)

Mr Ford: Article 24 of the Legal Aid, Advice and Assistance (NI) Order 1981 precludes the release of information in relation to civil cases in which Legal Aid has been granted.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the case of Gheorge Ionas at Craigavon Magistrates Court, whether there are further charges pending in relation to forced labour and associated offences; and if not, will he undertake to ascertain why this is the case.

(AQW 37395/11-15)

Mr Ford: The issues raised are matters for the Public Prosecution Service (PPS). I am committed to respecting the independence of the PPS.

You may therefore wish to direct your question to the PPS.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to case number 13/121205 at Magherafelt Magistrates Court, how much has been paid, or is estimated to be paid, in legal aid, broken down by (i) law firm; (ii) counsel; and (iii) other associated costs, including the handwriting expert.

(AQW 37421/11-15)

Mr Ford: This case has not yet been completed and no bills have been received from the instructing solicitor. The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission has given authority to engage an expert, however the final fees payable will be known only when the case is concluded and it would not be prudent to try to estimate the costs at this time.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners have applied for judicial reviews in each of the last two years; and of these (i) how many were refused leave to proceed; (ii) granted leave to proceed; and (iii) how many were upheld.

(AQW 37422/11-15)

Mr Ford:

1 April 2013 – 31 March 2014:

51 prisoners applied for judicial review. Seven applications were refused leave to proceed; 43 were granted leave to proceed. 12 of these 43 were upheld. One application was withdrawn before it reached the leave stage.

1 April 2014 – 22 October 2014:

37 prisoners applied for judicial review. Nine applications were refused leave to proceed; 28 were granted leave to proceed. Five of these 28 were upheld. One prisoner made two applications and one application was withdrawn before it reached the leave stage.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of (i) inmates in Magilligan Prison; (ii) prison officers present during the day; and (iii) prison officers remaining in the prison overnight, broken down by grade.

(AQW 37439/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) The number of inmates in custody in Magilligan prison on 20 October 2014 was 547.
- (ii) & (iii) It is not possible to provide the number of staff in the prison each day/night as the number fluctuates due to certain factors, for example the regimes available on a particular day, the shift patterns of staff working, annual leave and staff sickness etc.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total cost of (i) food; (ii) laundry; (iii) education; (iv) health; and (v) other related costs of keeping inmates in Magilligan Prison, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37440/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below sets out the Magilligan Prison inmate costs requested in parts (i) to (v) above for the last three financial years.

	2011/12 £'s	2012/13 £'s	2013/14 £'s
Food	496,011	558,333	626,215
Laundry	596	82	6,358
Education	237,326	136,656	156,547
Health *	0	0	0
Other Related Costs	1,656,322	1,626,945	1,585,392

* NIPS do not incur Health Costs, as this service has been provided by the South Eastern Trust since 2009.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice how his Department is tackling crimes against older people.

(AQW 37466/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Programme for Government and the Community Safety Strategy 2012-2017 set out actions being taken by my Department to tackle crime and fear of crime amongst older people.

In terms of the Community Safety Strategy, there is a Fear of Crime Strategic Action Plan 2012-14 which sets out what my Department and our delivery partners are doing to tackle these crimes. This includes funding projects delivered by Age Sector Platform and Linking Generations Northern Ireland to, for example, raise awareness of existing crime prevention support and promote the benefits of intergenerational work.

Policing and Community Safety Partnerships also deliver a range of initiatives aimed at tackling crime against older people. These include home security and other crime prevention projects.

While sentencing is a matter for the judiciary, a deterrent to crime against an older person is that courts can treat the age and vulnerability of the victim as aggravating factors when assessing the appropriate sentence to be imposed.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether responses from residents outside Northern Ireland will be accepted to the consultation on abortion; and if not, what measures will be in place to restrict eligible responses accordingly and to validate the provenance of responses.

(AQW 37475/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department's Equality Scheme states that all consultations will seek the views of those directly affected by the matter or policy, as well as the Equality Commission, representative groups of Section 75 categories, other public authorities, voluntary and community groups and such other groups who have a legitimate interest in the matter.

Members of the public who live outside Northern Ireland are not directly affected by proposals to change the law on abortion in Northern Ireland and such responses will therefore not be considered as part of the consultation.

The Department will acknowledge all responses and make decisions on eligibility on an individual basis.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what inquiries he will establish into the handling of the Mairia Cahill cases.

(AQW 37481/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Director of Public Prosecutions and operational decisions of the Chief Constable are independent of my Department. I welcome the decision by the Director of Public Prosecutions to establish an independent review of the prosecutorial systems and processes in relation to three interlinked cases involving sex abuse and terrorist related charges following the police investigation into allegations made by Mairia Cahill. I also note that the Police Ombudsman is investigating a complaint into the police handling of this case. I will be keen to see the outcome of these investigations before considering whether any further inquiry is appropriate.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the cost, in terms of PSNI resources, to police nationalist and republican protests against parades in (i) 2012/13; and (ii) 2013/14.

(AQW 37526/11-15)

Mr Ford: The allocation of the police budget is an operational matter and therefore the responsibility of the Chief Constable who is accountable to the Policing Board. I must respect the operational autonomy and independence of the Chief Constable.

Financial information is reported to the Policing Board as a matter of routine.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Justice, further to his engagement with the Minister of Finance and Personnel, what progress has been made regarding the resolution of equal pay claims for PSNI and former Northern Ireland Office staff.

(AQW 37638/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am pleased that the Finance Minister has submitted a draft paper on this matter for consideration by the Executive and I continue to be supportive of a centrally funded and centrally driven resolution.

As this draft paper is currently with the Executive for consideration, I am unable to provide a timeline for the resolution of this issue.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Justice what discussions he has had with the PSNI on the reduction in its budget.

(AQO 6866/11-15)

Mr Ford: The PSNI need to make savings of £51.4m in year. I have discussed this with the Chief Constable on two separate occasions, in late September and at the beginning of October.

I also discussed this with the Policing Board, most recently at a meeting with the Chair, Vice Chair and independent members of the Policing Board in early October.

The allocation of the police budget is an operational matter and therefore the responsibility of the Chief Constable who is accountable to the Policing Board. It is not for me.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice to outline his plans to resolve the issues around police widows' pensions and ensure that all widows are treated equally.

(AQO 6873/11-15)

Mr Ford: I remain keen to give effect to the will of the Assembly that, under Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, police widows remarrying after 1 January 1989 should retain, or have reinstated, their pensions.

Members will recall that I raised some concerns during the Assembly debate regarding the potential for Section 30 to be deemed repercussive. I wrote to the Finance Minister to seek assurances regarding this and I have very recently received his response. My officials will work closely with the Policing Board and the PSNI to urgently resolve any outstanding matters, including eligibility and affordability, with a view to commencing payments at the earliest opportunity.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Justice to outline the extent of any proposed cuts to the Office of the Police Ombudsman.

(AQO 6874/11-15)

Mr Ford: Given the current financial position, all areas of the justice system have had to make cuts in-year. However, I have continued to protect the front line as far as possible.

At this stage, the Office of the Police Ombudsman has been asked to make cuts of 6.2% this year.

However, given the recent additional funding provided to my Department, I will be considering if I am in a position to help offset the impact of these cuts.

It is not clear what level of cuts may be required in 2015-16. At this stage, all arm's length bodies have been asked to assess the impact of cuts of 10% and 15% against opening 2014-15 baselines.

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Justice what has been the cost in terms of PSNI resources to police orange and loyalist marches in June, July and August 2014.

(AQO 6875/11-15)

Mr Ford: The allocation of the police budget is an operational matter and therefore the responsibility of the Chief Constable who is accountable to the Policing Board. I must respect the operational autonomy and independence of the Chief Constable.

Financial information is reported to the Policing Board as a matter of routine.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Justice to outline the impact that the National Crime Agency not being fully extended and operational in Northern Ireland has on tackling criminality.

(AQO 6876/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is a major gap in our ability to tackle serious and organised crime groups. It is not just me saying this – the Chief Constable of the PSNI is giving that message too. Indeed he has highlighted specific examples.

One of the most obvious gaps is the complete absence of civil recovery arrangements for cases involving devolved criminality.

There is also the inability to call on extra resources on the ground. No regional police force has the resources on standby to deal with sudden surges in demand or unexpected large operations. This is where a resource such as the NCA is invaluable – at present all United Kingdom forces can benefit from this support except the PSNI.

My proposal paper on accountability arrangements for the National Crime Agency, which is currently under consideration, is a comprehensive proposal which will create clear, transparent and significant local accountability arrangements. It is the result of extensive work between my Department, the NCA, the PSNI, the Home Office and the Northern Ireland Office and has the full commitment of all these bodies to make it work.

I will continue to engage with the main political parties on the paper, but resolution is required soon.

I would urge all members to work constructively to reach agreement on the current proposals so that our law enforcement agencies and our people can benefit from the skill, expertise and resources of the National Crime Agency.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the need for a fully integrated, electronic all-Ireland sex offenders register.

(AQO 6877/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am satisfied with the effectiveness of the arrangements for cross border co-operation on sharing information on sex offenders, currently in place. I am also satisfied that, under the terms of an inter-Governmental Agreement, information is shared effectively between all UK jurisdictions and Ireland.

I believe there would be significant difficulties, for both jurisdictions, in relation to legislative complexities, constitutional difficulties and financial costs associated with any form of cross-jurisdictional electronic database to share such information.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the stocktake of conditions in Roe and Bush Houses in Maghaberry Prison carried out by the independent assessors.

(AQO 6878/11-15)

Mr Ford: The August 2010 Agreement was reached by the joint facilitation group to end a protest by prisoners in Roe House. I established the Independent Assessment Team in September 2010 to ensure that the Agreement's principles and undertakings were being implemented. It is important to clarify that the Independent Assessors role does not extend to Bush House. In July this year, following a recommendation from the Prisoner Ombudsman, I asked the Assessors to undertake a stocktake of the implementation of the 2010 Agreement. In undertaking this stocktake I invited the Assessors to return to the agreed principles and undertakings of that agreement, and pass comment on the state of compliance.

The Assessors have recently completed their work and I have received their Report for consideration.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Justice what action his Department, in conjunction with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, has taken to curb the open sale of legal highs.

(AQO 6879/11-15)

Mr Ford: Legislation in this area remains a reserved matter for the Westminster Government.

Whilst this is the case, my Department, together with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety work together with other key stakeholders, to implement the outcomes defined in the Executive's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2011- 2016 (NSD).

The phrase Legal Highs is a misnomer – many already contain illegal substances and they are more appropriately termed as "New Psychoactive Substances". The NSD identifies New Psychoactive Substances as one of the key emerging issues.

The open sale of New Psychoactive Substances in head shops throughout Northern Ireland remains an issue of serious concern for my Department and many other stakeholders. The damage that can be caused to individuals, families and the community has been all too evident in recent times. These substances are uncontrolled and, tragically, their use can have fatal consequences.

In December 2013 the Minister of State for Crime Prevention announced that he was establishing an expert panel to undertake a review of the current United Kingdom response that would include an assessment of the impact of legislation introduced by other nations, including the Republic of Ireland, to deal with this issue.

I recently wrote to the Minister of State for Crime Prevention seeking an update on the findings and recommendations of the Review and he has advised me that it will be made available shortly, when the Government has had time to consider the Report.

In the meantime, my Department, together with DHSSPS, the Public Health Agency and the Police work together to operate DAMIS, the Drug and Alcohol Monitoring and Information System. This system seeks and receives information from the community and voluntary sector, together with the statutory sector regarding new substances in circulation. This information is shared with frontline workers across Northern Ireland and can also lead to the issuing of alert notices by the Chief Medical Officer.

In addition, the PSNI can use powers provided under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 to undertake seizures and make arrests.

Last year my officials engaged with Environmental Health Officers in one Council to ascertain whether they could utilise the General Product Safety Regulations 2005 to tackle the sale of these substances. This led to the Council and police working together and ultimately to a number of direct operations against the retail outlets. As a result, prosecutions are pending. Environmental Health Departments in other Council areas have been informed of these actions and I would encourage them to act, where retail outlets exist.

At a local level Policing and Community Safety Partnerships have been responding to the issue; currently a campaign entitled "We Don't take Drugs, Drugs Take Us" is being promoted in many areas across Northern Ireland. I hope that everyone, young and old will read and act on the messages in this awareness raising campaign.

Given the urgency of dealing with these dangerous substances, and pending the response from the Home Office led review, I, together with Executive colleagues, the PSNI and Local Councils, will continue to do all that we can to remove these harmful substances from our communities.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much money his Department has handed back to the Executive since May 2011.

(AQW 35749/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): My Department is reliant on the Executive's in year monitoring process to fund essential services and to seek the realignment of departmental budgets due to the limited budget flexibilities available to me.

The Resource DEL and Capital DEL cash funding transactions by my Department in each of the last three financial years are shown in the table below.

	2011-12 £'m	2012-13 £'m	2013-14 £'m
Resource DEL - received	15.1	19.7	43.6
Resource DEL - returned	(23.5)	(0.2)	(3.0)
Net Resource DEL	(8.4)	19.5	40.6
Capital DEL - received	11.0	61.4	80.4
Capital DEL - returned	(0.3)	(33.1)	(129.6)
Net Capital DEL	10.7	28.3	(49.2)

The majority of the Capital DEL funding returned was as a consequence of the legal challenge on the A5 and the subsequent ruling which has delayed the project. If there was greater flexibility for Ministers to manage Capital funding within their departments, I could have effectively used much of the Capital returned on other projects. However, the current Northern Ireland Public Expenditure guidelines place restrictions on how Ministers can use the funding allocated to them. As such in the case of the A5, and indeed other major projects, I am effectively required to re-profile funding between projects and financial years through the in year monitoring process.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the reasons for Translink operating at a financial loss. (AQW 36598/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There is an imbalance between Translink's income and expenditure partly caused by the inescapable pressures my Department and all other Departments are facing.

All public transport requires subsidy from government but the extent of this subsidy will depend upon funding available.

Nevertheless it is important that Translink meets its obligations to remain solvent and a going concern which means that its net assets and net current assets must be at appropriate levels.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the current turnaround time for grass cutting in Limavady. (AQW 36965/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It takes approximately 12 weeks for my Department's Operations and Maintenance staff to complete grass cutting in the rural areas of Limavady Borough Council.

Grass cutting within urban areas is undertaken by Limavady Borough Council which is reimbursed by my Department for the 5 cuts per year prescribed within current maintenance policies.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the projected timescale for the transfer of the Dufferin Avenue car park to Translink. (AQW 37090/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently considering options for the future maintenance and operation of the Dufferin Avenue Park & Ride facility in Bangor, including the possibility of transferring responsibility to Translink. The timetable for any potential transfer has not yet been established.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Regional Development why his Department's capital reduced requirements for 2014-15 have totalled £137.5 million. (AQW 37094/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Of the Capital DEL funding returned at June Monitoring £120 million was as a consequence of the legal challenge on the A5 and the subsequent ruling which has delayed the project. This included £115 million which was on notice as part of the Executive's review of 2014-15 Capital budgets which was completed in October 2013, with the funding reallocated by the Executive at that time to a range of projects across the public sector including a number of roads projects. A further £3 million of the funding returned was as a result of my Department's success in securing EU funding allowing this release of conventional Capital DEL back to the Executive for reallocation. The ongoing successful delivery of the A2 road scheme on the ground together with a forecast reduction in the scheme land values accounts for a further £8.5 million of the funding returned.

If there was greater flexibility for Ministers to manage Capital funding within their departments, I could have effectively used much of the Capital returned on other projects. However, the current Northern Ireland Public Expenditure guidelines place restrictions on how Ministers can use the funding allocated to them. As such in the case of the A5, and indeed other major projects, I am effectively required to re-profile funding between projects and financial years through the in year monitoring process.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) location of electric vehicle charging points in (a) North Down; and (b) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37129/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has to date installed (i) 6 electric vehicle charging points in (a) North Down and (b) 334 in Northern Ireland. The location of the electric charge points can be found in the tables below:

The 6 charge points in North Down consist of 3 double-headed charge posts i.e. 2 charge points on each charge post.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any planned new electric vehicle charging points in (i) North Down; and (ii) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37130/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has been awarded £600,000 funding from the Office for Low Emission Vehicles (OLEV) in the Department for Transport to install electric vehicle charge points across the public sector estate. This will include other Departments, Councils, hospitals, National Trust and other public sector property. My Department plans to install 5 electric vehicle charge points in North Down and approximately 100 in Northern Ireland before the end of the current financial year.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much of a dividend has NI Water given to his Department in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 37133/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Operations & Maintenance workforce has the resources to cover around 75% of routine maintenance activities and 25% of street lighting repairs. Whilst this does not completely fill the void left by external contractors, they will endeavour to keep the road network as safe as possible. I can confirm that operatives have the specialist skills and equipment necessary to carry out the additional maintenance work it has had to undertake. Where necessary, specialist equipment has been redeployed and training provided in-house to fully accredited standards. In exceptional circumstances, where Operations & Maintenance staff do not have the skills or equipment available, external contractors may be employed to deal with emergency situations, or where there is a risk to public safety

I can assure the Member that public safety concerns are not disregarded by my Department. In order to deal with the health and safety implications, I have established priorities which take account of the budgets I have available.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for a comparison of the efficiency of NI Water with its equivalent bodies in the rest of the UK.

(AQW 37135/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The NI Authority for Utility Regulation (NIAUR) is responsible for the regulation of NI Water. Its most recent Cost and performance report for 2013/14 published on 1 October 2014 states that the efficiency gap between NI Water and the most efficient companies in England and Wales has closed to 18%.

NIW has made significant improvements to its operating cost efficiency since its creation in 2007 when the efficiency gap to the average company in England and Wales was approximately 42.6% and the efficiency gap to the most efficient companies was approximately 48.7%.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the profit made by NI Water in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 37136/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: AQW 37136/11-15

The profit figures in the NI Water Annual Report and Accounts show accounting profits which provide no additional spending power either to NI Water or DRD.

As a result of differences in accounting treatments in the Statutory and Regulatory accounts, the results for the year in the respective accounts are noticeably different. Differences are specifically in relation to how developer contributions, infrastructure renewal depreciation and notional financing of PPP contracts are accounted for under IFRS (Statutory accounts) and UKGAAP (Regulatory accounts).

	Statutory Accounts			Regulatory Accounts
	2011/12 £k	2012/13 £k	2013/14 £k	2011/12 £k	2012/13 £k	2013/14 £k
Profit after tax and before dividend	114,604	110,232	153,341	40,377	40,788	71,027

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress is planned during 2015 on the dualling of the A26 road to Glarryford.

(AQW 37142/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The procurement process for the A26 Dualling scheme is currently at an advanced stage with award of contract expected within the next few weeks. It is anticipated that construction of the scheme will commence by the end of this year and run for 28 months.

It is envisaged that significant progress will be made on earthworks and the construction of the structures during 2015.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department has any plans to extend the parking facilities at Lurgan Railway Station.

(AQW 37189/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In addition to the overall Park and Ride programme itself, the Department has a further list of additional projects under consideration which includes proposals for a project at Lurgan railway station. Translink is currently developing options for the provision of additional Park & Ride spaces at this station. This will be subject to the necessary approvals and funding availability. Work has also been taken forward to increase capacity at a nearby car park.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update as to progress of the Inter-departmental Programme Board on the Strategic Drainage Infrastructure Plan; and a timescale for its completion.

(AQW 37194/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Strategic Drainage Infrastructure Programme Board is in the process of being established following Executive approval in July 2014. The relevant departmental Ministers have nominated their representatives to the Programme Board, which will involve senior officials from DOE, DARD, DFP and DRD, together with NI Water, Belfast City Council and SIB. The first meeting of the Programme Board has been scheduled for November and the initial focus of the project will be to develop a drainage infrastructure plan to enable a long-term work programme for South and East Belfast to be developed and costed. Subsequently, the Programme Board will develop similar plans for the rest of Belfast (Phase 2) and the remaining significant flood risk areas in NI (Phase 3).

Given that the programme of work is in the early development stage, a timescale for completion has not as yet been set.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development how the £750 million deemed necessary by the NI Water PC15 Business Plan for Belfast Drainage and Wastewater Treatment will be financed.

(AQW 37195/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Northern Ireland Executive has agreed that an interdepartmental group be established to develop a Strategic Infrastructure Plan to support economic growth, protect the environment and address flood risk within Northern Ireland. The Executive has noted the additional funding likely to be required to implement a future plan and a key objective of the group will be to develop a capital investment funding strategy. This will then provide a basis for funding to be sought through the normal public expenditure process.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on (i) the work of the Inter Agency Flood Investment and Planning Group; (ii) the Water Strategy; and (iii) the progress on PEDU 'Review of the Response to Flooding in June 2012' Report recommendations.

(AQW 37201/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) The Flood Investment and Planning Group provides a co-ordinated approach to the identification of flooding issues to be addressed on a multi-agency basis. The Group has been in existence for just over a year and provides an effective forum to focus on integrated solutions to flooding issues that are not entirely the responsibility of one organisation. The work of the Group is ongoing and includes the coordination of investigations and development of flooding solutions at a number of locations across Northern Ireland.
- (ii) On 20 June 2014, I launched a 16 week consultation on a Long-Term Water Strategy for Northern Ireland which ended on 10 October 2014. My Department is currently reviewing the Strategy in the light of comments received and will bring a draft consultation report to the Committee for Regional Development in December 2014. Subject to Executive approval, I aim to publish the final Strategy in March 2015.
- (iii) The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) is the lead Department for coordinating the response to the thirty-one recommendations contained in the PEDU Report. DARD has advised that twenty seven of the recommendations are now substantially complete. Work continues on four of the remaining recommendations, with good progress being made on the provision of flood warning and informing and the progression of the business case for Individual Property Protection. Work also continues on the development of improved electronic communication of the Flooding Incident Line.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for a breakdown of the money that his Department has received from sources other than the Executive, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 37230/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of my Department's accruing resources, including capital grant income, received in the 2012-13 and 2013-14 financial years can be found on page 83 of the Departmental Annual Report and Accounts which are available at the following link: <http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/publications/publications-details.htm?docid=10050>

The capital income for the two years is as follows:

	2012-13 £'000	2013-14 £'000
Proceeds of asset disposals	1,873	2,268

Income that can be utilised by my Department is restricted to the limits voted by the Assembly through the Budget Bills which reflect the Main and Supplementary Estimate position.

Although provided for in my Department's Main and Supplementary Estimates the dividend and loan interest from NI Water are, in line with public expenditure requirements, non budget items and do not provide any additional spending power for my Department.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much EU funding NI Water received in the last three financial years.
(AQW 37231/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water has received EU funding of £38,347 in the last three financial years.

The payment was received in 2012/13 from Queens University Belfast in relation to the ATWARM (Advanced Technologies for Water Resource Management) Marie Curie Initial Training Network which was funded by the EC FP7 (Seventh Framework Programme) People Programme. This payment supported the work of a researcher in NI Water.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any senior managers of NI Water are supplied with a company car.

(AQW 37232/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No senior managers within the NI Water are supplied with a company car.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much NI Water has spent on hospitality in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 37233/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The amount spent by Northern Ireland Water on hospitality in each of the last three financial years was as follows:-

- 2011/12      £19,155
- 2012/13      £14,526
- 2013/14      £17,725

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to introduce more Park and Ride facilities in North Down.

(AQW 37262/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following a Strategic Review of Park & Ride in 2011, my Department established a Park & Ride Programme Board which is responsible for co-ordinating and prioritising the implementation of 'Park & Ride' and 'Park & Share' projects, in line with the Department's strategy.

The Programme Board produced a 'Park & Ride Strategic Delivery Programme 2013-15', which is a prioritised schedule of new Park & Ride projects with clearly defined responsibilities for funding, implementation, maintenance and operation. This Programme plans to create at least an additional 1000 'Park & Ride' and 'Park & Share' spaces across Northern Ireland.

To date, the Programme has delivered over 600 additional Park & Ride spaces. Around 230 of these additional spaces have been provided in North Down, where the former pay and display car park in Dufferin Avenue, Bangor has been operating as a Park & Ride site since December 2013.

Options for the delivery of additional Park & Ride facilities at Holywood and Carnalea Train Halts are also currently being considered by Translink.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development how much was paid out in compensation claims to members of the public who had been involved in accidents on public footpaths in (i) 2012; and (ii) 2013.

(AQW 37285/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not hold the information in the format requested.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQO 6788/11-15, to detail (i) whether he is confident that internal contractors have the appropriate specialist skills and equipment to adequately fill the void left by external contractors; (ii) what efforts have been made to upskill internal contractors and acquire the additional equipment necessary to adequately address public safety concerns; (iii) the criteria that has to be met before external contractors are employed in the absence of appropriate specialist skills and equipment being available from internal resources; and (iv) to what extent it is appropriate for public safety concerns to be disregarded in the context of budgetary cuts.

(AQW 37311/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Operations & Maintenance workforce has the resources to cover around 75% of routine maintenance activities and 25% of street lighting repairs. Whilst this does not completely fill the void left by external contractors, they will endeavour to keep the road network as safe as possible. I can confirm that operatives have the specialist skills and equipment necessary to carry out the additional maintenance work it has had to undertake. Where necessary, specialist equipment has been redeployed and training provided in-house to fully accredited standards. In exceptional circumstances, where Operations & Maintenance staff do not have the skills or equipment available, external contractors may be employed to deal with emergency situations, or where there is a risk to public safety

I can assure the Member that public safety concerns are not disregarded by my Department. In order to deal with the health and safety implications, I have established priorities which take account of the budgets I have available.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36747/11-15, which district council does not currently have an arrangement to salt city and town centre footways during times of prolonged ice and snow.

(AQW 37337/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department currently has arrangements with 25 of the 26 District Councils to salt city and town centre footways during times of prolonged ice and snow. The agreements range from formal agreements to more informal arrangements, contained in an exchange of letters between the respective parties. These councils are being contacted to ensure continuity of service for the incoming winter season.

The remaining council, Antrim Borough Council, has also been contacted again in recent days by my officials to see if it would reconsider its position and enter into the proposed partnering arrangements. Whilst it has again declined our offer, my officials will continue to encourage Antrim Borough Council to come on board.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) number; (ii) cost; and (ii) location of trips abroad by departmental senior management in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37387/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The number, cost and location of trips abroad by departmental senior management in each of the last three years for the Department is as follows:

Financial Year	Number	Cost	Location
2011-12	5	£8,786	Brussels, Belgium Nantes, France Washington/ Boston, USA
2012-13	1	£422	Paris, France
2013-14	4	£11,034	Brussels, Belgium Geneva, Switzerland Washington/ New York/ Denver, USA

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many private companies have had their contracts with his Department cancelled due to the budget cut backs.

(AQW 37388/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No contracts with my Department have been cancelled due to budget cuts.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether a decision has been taken of the parking regime that will be applicable to the parking bays on Bangor High Street once the public realm works are complete.

(AQW 37389/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The parking regime on Bangor High Street will remain unchanged following completion of the ongoing public realm works.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether a decision has been taken on the charges applicable to the parking bays on Bangor High Street when the public realms work are complete.

(AQW 37390/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There will be no change to the current free parking arrangement for the on-street parking bays in High Street, Bangor upon completion of the ongoing public realm works at that location.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development what are the qualifying criteria for the payment of a telephone allowance to staff of NI Water.

(AQW 37396/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The criteria that determines eligibility for receipt of the telephone allowance is set out in the NI Water Employee Handbook, which states that 'Designated Officers with a salary not exceeding the maximum of the scale of Staff Officer (Level 5) who, by the nature of their work, must have a telephone installed in their homes'.

In the main, it is Designated Officers engaged in frontline operational service roles who receive this payment.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly Library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37403/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The tables below set out the bids which I put forward for consideration under the October Monitoring Round process.

Table 1 – Resource Bids

My Department and its arms length bodies have a range of statutory obligations including duties to maintain the road network, to provide wholesome water and maintain waste water services which comply with environmental standards, and to provide safe and accessible transport systems. In addition, my Department leads on and contributes to a number of Programme for Government commitments including sustainable transport and greenhouse gas commitments.

All of my Department's Resource and Capital bids were to meet inescapable requirements or to support the delivery of statutory obligations and Programme for Government commitments.

I will not deposit a copy of my Department's bids in the Assembly Library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate. The details of my Department's bids are provided above.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development which company has a contract with Translink for supplying fuel. (AQW 37412/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink currently sources its fuel from Lissan Coal Company.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development which company has a contract with NI Railways for supplying fuel. (AQW 37413/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Northern Ireland Railways currently sources its fuel from Lissan Coal Company.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the drying of cloths on site, to reduce weight for disposal, is common at waste water facilities; and whether NI Water has any plans to ban this practice given the resulting unpleasant odour. (AQW 37504/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that it is not its practice at any of its wastewater treatment facilities to dry out cloths in order to reduce the weight for disposal. At larger facilities a compaction chute is used to reduce the volume of screenings before they enter skips for disposal. Some drying may occur naturally during this stage however this is limited due to the turnaround times of skips.

Odour from the majority of wastewater treatment works is regulated by District Council Environmental Health Officers under the statutory nuisance provisions of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (Northern Ireland) 2011. Any complaint about odours at these sites should be directed towards local councils in the first instance for investigation.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the level of reserve funds held by his Department. (AQW 37534/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department holds no reserve funds.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development what measures his Department has in place to improve road markings in the coming months.

(AQW 37646/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As I explained in my letter of 11 September 2014 to you, my Department's Resource Budgets that are used for the day to day maintenance of the road network have been cut. As a result, I have had no option other than to stop issuing new work instructions to our external contractors, who currently undertake around one quarter of our routine maintenance work, which includes road marking renewal.

My Department will continue to inspect roads and footways in accordance with our established inspection regime and defects including faded road markings will be recorded as normal. My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff will endeavour to keep the road network in as safe a condition as possible, however, due to the current financial constraints and only having resources to complete around three quarters of the total workload, repairs are being prioritised on the basis of safety. Regrettably, the level of service provided is likely to fall below the standards the public would expect in normal circumstances.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development what effort has been made to rebalance his Department's spend in favour of public and active transport.

(AQO 6887/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The balance of previous investment in transport was heavily influenced by the direction set out in the Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland. While aiming to address the historic under-investment in our infrastructure, the strategy did have the effect of increasing the balance of investment in favour of roads.

I have previously set out my commitment to a more integrated approach to transport investment. That is a key focus of the Policy Prioritisation Framework I established to prioritise transportation spending on major capital projects in preparation for the next Budget round. Significant progress has been made and I am currently considering a suite of transport investment options for the Budget period, which aim to align with Executive priorities while providing a more balanced approach to transport investment.

Progress of my ambitions will depend on the amount of funding that can be made available from the Executive's budget and, where possible, from European grant programmes. However, I am determined to deliver and build on the progress we are already seeing. In particular I am committed to ensuring that walking and cycling is placed at the centre of local transport arrangements. I was greatly encouraged by the high level of interest and participation in my Changing Gear Seminar. Around 180 people attended the event to hear from international speakers, speakers who will continue to work with us in delivering my ambitions for cycling.

As a result of investment my Department has made in our public transport infrastructure we are already experiencing the highest levels of passenger numbers on rail since 1967. Delivery of my proposals for railway investment will build on this, allowing for a significant enhancement of existing rail capacity, preparation for the future electrification of the network and the first major extensions to the railway since the closing of lines following the Benson Report in 1963.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress has been made with local councils to ensure that footpaths and car parks are gritted.

(AQO 6888/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department currently has arrangements with 25 of the 26 District Councils to salt city and town centre footways during times of prolonged ice and snow and these councils are being contacted to ensure continuity of service for the incoming winter season.

The remaining council, Antrim Borough Council, has also been contacted again in recent days by my officials to see if it would reconsider its position and come on board with the proposed partnering arrangements, however, it has again declined our offer. Officials will, however, continue their efforts to bring Antrim Borough Council on board.

The agreements with councils do not include the salting of car parks nor are car parks usually included as part of the primary salted network. That said, salting of car parks may be carried out as part of a secondary salting schedule but is subject to the availability of resources. Secondary salting will only usually be undertaken during particularly severe, prolonged and hazardous weather conditions.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the criteria used to prioritise the urgency of capital projects, such as the A6.

(AQO 6889/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In preparation for the next Budget round, the New Approach to Regional Transportation document mandates the development of a Policy Prioritisation Framework to use as a tool to assess and prioritise the need and urgency of transportation spending on major capital projects.

The Framework identifies and prioritises strategic transport interventions that most closely align with the Executive's priorities, in terms of the economy, the environment and social cohesion.

Using the building blocks identified in the current Programme for Government objectives, capital projects such as the A6 are carefully considered against a large number of desirable outcomes, and transport projects are then ranked in order of ability to deliver future prosperity through successful outcomes.

Drawing on this, I am currently considering a suite of transport investment options for the Budget period from 2016 to 2019.

While not pre-empting my final decision, I am determined to improve the connectivity between Belfast and Londonderry. In line with that, my Department has taken forward work to develop two schemes to dual the A6 from Randalstown to Castledawson and from Londonderry to Dungiven. Both are well advanced. You will be aware that in particular I have made funding available to advance the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson section to be shovel ready by 2015. While this will allow construction to commence at short notice, progress is very much dependent on my ability to secure the necessary resources and commitment from my Executive colleagues.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the transfer of car parks to local councils will be 'cost neutral' to the councils.

(AQO 6892/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The transfer of the car parks and associated equipment will be rates neutral at the point of transfer to the new councils, with the Department of Finance and Personnel being responsible for the necessary financial arrangements and implications.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development to set out his Department's planned capital investments in Fermanagh between now and the end of the current mandate.

(AQO 6893/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's proposed expenditure in relation to planned capital investment in Fermanagh for the current financial year is set out below.

	2014-15 £'million
Department	3.5
NI Water	12.9
Translink	Nil
Total	16.4

The extent of capital investment in 2015-16 in Fermanagh, and across the province, will be dependent on the level of funding available to me. As the Executive has yet to agree a Budget for 2015-16 it is not possible to be definitive about planned capital investment in the final year of the current mandate.

Department for Social Development

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development for a breakdown of the expenses paid to senior management in the Housing Executive in the last twelve months.

(AQW 36537/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive has defined senior management as its Chief Executive and five Directors and advise that expenses paid to those staff for the year ending 31 August 2014 were:-

- Business mileage - £2,433
- General expenses - £167
- Accommodation & other travel - £11,397

The accommodation and other travel costs relate to the Director of Transformation (currently interim Chief Executive) post as the package offered to the successful candidate included reimbursement of annual travel and local accommodation costs up to £15,000 per annum.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the criteria whereby individuals are banned from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive housing list; and how many people have been banned in each month of the last three years, broken down by district area.

(AQW 36923/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has provided the criteria relating to the disqualification of former tenants at Annex 1 attached.

The Housing Executive has also provided details of the number of former tenants who have been disqualified in each Housing Executive local office for each month in the last three years at Annex 2 attached.

Please note that for data protection purposes, the Housing Executive has advised that where a number is less than five, the exact figure is not provided.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are any plans to close the Limavady Northern Ireland Housing Executive Direct Labour facility and relocate current staff to the Pennyburn facility in Londonderry. (AQW 36964/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that they initiated a review of the Grounds Maintenance Depot in Limavady and they are actively considering the closure of the facility with the option to relocate staff to the Pennyburn facility in Londonderry. Presently the Housing Executive management is in discussions with the staff concerned and their union representatives.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development what impact relocation of the Limavady Northern Ireland Housing Executive Direct Labour staff to Londonderry will have on the current outstanding service provided throughout the Limavady Borough.

(AQW 36966/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that they initiated a review of the Grounds Maintenance Depot in Limavady and they are actively considering the closure of the facility with the option to relocate staff to the Pennyburn facility in Londonderry. Presently the Housing Executive management is in discussions with the staff concerned and their union representatives.

The Housing Executive expect to see no detrimental impact on service delivery and indeed anticipate that a better service could be provided from the larger depots, primarily Pennyburn; they advise this is currently the case for neighbouring areas including Strathfoyle, Eglinton and Claudy, with some rural areas of Limavady to be covered from Ballymoney.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the money provided by (i) his Department; (ii) the Northern Ireland Housing Executive; and (iii) housing associations to private landlords in each of the last three years; and to detail the purpose of the funding.

(AQW 36975/11-15)

Mr Storey: In relation to (i) and (iii), neither my Department nor Registered Housing Associations have paid money to private landlords in any of the last three years.

In relation to (ii), the Housing Executive's Private Sector Improvement Services has provided assistance to Landlords through the following funding streams: -

- Home Improvement Grants – for the repair, improvement and adaptation of private rented properties
- Warm Homes Grant – expenditure on energy efficiency measures to private rented properties
- Group Repair – Area based improvement works to the envelope of private rented terraced properties.

The tables below show the amount spent on landlord grants over the three previous financial years: -

Home Improvement Grants

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the process involved in the Special Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings (SPED) scheme; and what procedures are in place to compensate people affected who have been forced to incur debt as a result of having to leave their home through no fault of their own and solely due to security issues where the SPED purchase price falls below the equity of property involved.

(AQW 37004/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the Scheme for the Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings (SPED) is a statutory scheme under Article 29 of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1983.

The following conditions must be satisfied before an application will be eligible for acceptance under SPED:

- i. The house must be owner-occupied and must be the applicant's only or principal home.
- ii. There must be evidence (substantiated by the PSNI) that it is unsafe for the applicant or member of his/her household residing with him/her to continue to live in the house, because that person has been directly or specifically attacked or intimidated and as a result is at risk of serious injury or death. A certificate stating this clearly, signed by the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland, or authorised signatory, must be provided to the Housing Executive.

Acquisition values are based on current property market value by Land and Property Services. A final valuation review may be requested by the Housing Executive if there is lack of agreement of acquisition value. The completion date of acquisition is within 10 weeks of signing of the contract by the purchaser or such earlier date as may be mutually agreed between both parties.

There is no provision under the Scheme for assistance with negative equity or payment of the applicant's legal costs. However, an Emergency Payment of £754 is payable to those who fulfil all of the following criteria:

- i. The applicant is eligible to have their house purchased by the NIHE under SPED; and
- ii. The applicant provides satisfactory evidence that he/she has been permanently re-housed following the intimidation or attack as either:
  - a. An owner occupier, (evidenced by for example by a copy deed, copy memorandum of sale, letter from a solicitor), or
  - b. A tenant in accommodation that the Housing Executive is satisfied will remain available to the applicant for a period of at least six months following the move, (evidenced by a copy tenancy agreement, letter from a Housing Association, confirmation from a Housing Executive Area Office).

Mr Anderson asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the number of properties which are still to benefit from the window replacement scheme in Portadown during the 2014/15 financial year.

(AQW 37044/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that their records indicate that only four properties remain in Ulsterville Grove, Portadown that need to be double glazed. A scheme, including these properties, has been briefed to the Housing Executive's Measured Term double glazing contractor and is currently programmed to commence on site in February 2015.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the welfare benefits paid, broken down by (a) constituency; and (b) benefit, in 2013/14, or the most up-to-date information that is available.

(AQW 37071/11-15)

Mr Storey: The amount of welfare benefit expenditure paid by the Department for Social Development for the 2013-14 financial year is disclosed in the table below. The information is presented per benefit category.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many applicants were on the Housing Executive waiting list for (a) Coleraine; and (b) Limavady Borough Council areas on 1 January 2014; and what percentage of people were in housing stress. (AQW 37111/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information is not available in the format requested because the Housing Executive collates waiting list figures on a quarterly basis. Therefore the Housing Executive has provided the waiting list figures and the percentage in housing stress as at 31st December 2013 as shown in the table below:

Waiting List (December 2013)

Borough Council	Total Applicants	Number in Housing Stress	Percentage in Housing Stress
Coleraine	1260	634	50%
Limavady	475	177	37%

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the reasons why some locations or housing schemes may be outside the normal housing selection scheme or be assessed or allocated differently. (AQW 37122/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that as a general rule the Housing Selection Scheme applies to all applications to the Landlord for accommodation on a permanent basis. However, there is a small number of exceptions relating to applicants with complex needs; accommodation which has been designated as suitable for mature/elderly applicants, and accommodation which has been designated as difficult to let.

The Housing Selection Scheme does not apply to applicants with complex needs who require housing with care. Complex Needs applicants who require supported housing will be considered without reference to points and apart from the general needs waiting list. Examples of applicants with Complex Needs who require the supported housing option may include persons with major learning difficulties, frail elderly persons and persons with chronic debilitating mental conditions etc. Applicants will be housed in accordance with their individual needs subject to suitable supported accommodation being available.

Once a vacancy arises in one of the identified schemes the relevant Housing Association and its joint management partner will determine if that vacancy is suitable for the applicant at that time. They will consider whether the applicant's needs are unchanged since the last assessment took place and if these would be met by offering the applicant the vacant accommodation.

Under Rule 70A of the Housing Selection Scheme, a Landlord has the discretion to decide that accommodation which is within a block which has shared access to residents should not be allocated to a person under the age of 35 years of age. This lettings policy ensures that accommodation predominantly occupied by mature/elderly applicants is not subject to anti-social behaviour.

The Housing Executive is currently operating a pilot in up to 12 locations to test a new approach to allocating difficult to let stock in designated low demand areas on a Choice Based Lettings basis. The locations have been designated by managers as low demand/ difficult to let as defined under Rules 68 to 70 of the Housing Selection Scheme.

Choice Based Lettings is an approach to the allocation of social housing which allows people applying for a home to bid for properties which become available. The shortlist of bidders is then ranked and an offer is made to the applicant with the highest points under the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development whether a person can receive additional points for housing if they request to be allocated near to family members for support reasons.

(AQW 37123/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that all applicants for social housing are assessed and awarded points according to housing need under the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme. Points are awarded under four categories:

- Intimidation;
- Insecurity of Tenure;
- Housing Conditions; and
- Health and Social Well-Being.

Under the Health and Social Well Being category (Rule 44), 10 'Other Social Needs Points' may be awarded where the applicant can demonstrate that there is a need for him/her to move to another area in order to provide support to, or receive support from, another person; for example when the applicant wishes to move close to a frail or elderly person to provide support or when the applicant needs re-housing to be near to family for the provision of childcare to assist employment.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the level of detected fraudulent welfare claims in each of the last ten years.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of staff that investigate suspected fraudulent welfare claims.

(AQW 37149/11-15)

Mr Storey: The number of staff investigating suspected fraudulent welfare claims, as at 30 September 2014, was 86 Officers, with a whole time equivalent of 82.26 officers.

Note: Whole time equivalent is a measurement of the staff resource available, taking into account full and part-time staff working hours.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development in how many cases his Department has sought to implement fines or prosecute through the courts for fraudulent welfare claims.

(AQW 37150/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table below shows how many cases the Department has sought to implement fines or prosecute through the courts for fraudulent welfare claims in the last financial year.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the planned departmental investment of £250,000 to the 3G sports pitch in Kilcooley, Bangor.

(AQW 37216/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Kilcooley 3G pitch project is currently being considered by the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister for funding through the Social Investment Fund.

The Kilcooley Neighbourhood Renewal Partnership Board has included in its Action Plan a commitment of £250,000 as a part contribution towards the overall costs of the proposal. Should the Social Investment Fund application be successful my Department would be minded to support this commitment, through the Neighbourhood Renewal Investment Fund, subject to the completion of an economic appraisal, the availability of finance and the time frame for transferring its regeneration powers and budgets to the new Ards/ North Down Borough Council in April 2015 under the Reform of Local Government.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's arm's-length bodies as of 1 October 2014.

(AQW 37242/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information provided below is for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive as at 31 March 2014. The Department is unable to provide adequate assurances on any balances as at 1st October 2014 reported by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The figures as at 31 March 2014 have been audited and as such we are content that they materially reflect the balances held at that date.

The NIHE accounts include a Statement of Comprehensive Net Expenditure Reserve and a Revaluation Reserve.

The amounts in each of these reserves at 31 March 2014 are as follows:

	£'000
Statement of Comprehensive Net Expenditure Reserve	1,060,366
Revaluation Reserve	503,265

An analysis of the Statement of Comprehensive Net Expenditure reserve at 31 March 2014 is set out below:

	£'000
General reserve	360,500
Realisation of the revaluation of assets on disposal	307,069
Actuarial gains/(losses) on defined benefit pension scheme	(60,856)
Movement in reserves due to change in accounting treatment	453,653
	1,060,366

The above balances are made up largely of notional amounts and generally do not represent cash balances. At 31 March 2014, the general reserve included a small cash reserve. The amount of the cash reserve included is required to cover the pay out of amounts provided for in the 2013-14 accounts. It does not represent surplus funds.

The revaluation reserve balance relates entirely to notional increases in asset value. This balance will be reduced if the asset suffers a permanent diminution in value, or as assets are disposed of.

Charity Commission for Northern Ireland (CCNI) does not have any reserves.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36137/11-15, to provide the total number of Disability Living Allowance applications for the corresponding years, showing how many were (i) refused; and (ii) approved.

(AQW 37256/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table below shows the total number of Disability Living Allowance applications determined in the previous 3 years and the number that were refused and awarded. The variations in numbers will be due to the nature and type of Disability Living Allowance applications received in any particular year.

Year	Total Number of DLA Applications Determined	Total Number of DLA Applications Refused	Total Number of DLA Applications Awarded
2011/12	21547	9111	12436
2012/13	21636	8625	13011
2013/14	21468	8689	12779

The information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36469/11-15, given that work in 4,500 of the 7,360 dwellings referred to has not yet commenced, whether the work due to be undertaken by contractors in the remaining months of the financial year will entail the recruitment of additional staff to meet Programme for Government 2011/15 targets.

(AQW 37286/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that it has sufficient staff in place to deliver the Programme for Government target in relation to double glazing and does not envisage any recruitment in this regard. The Housing Executive has further advised that the contractors have indicated that they aim to deliver the target and there is no indication they will require additional staff.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the funding his Department provides for neighbourhood renewal projects in Kilcooley Estate, Bangor, in the current financial year.

(AQW 37314/11-15)

Mr Storey: Funding of £288,877 has been allocated to Neighbourhood Renewal projects in the Kilcooley Estate, Bangor in the current financial year.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the funding his Department provides for the Areas at Risk programme in Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee, in the current financial year.

(AQW 37315/11-15)

Mr Storey: Funding of £10,830 from the Areas at Risk Programme has been allocated to the Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee in the current financial year.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the funding his Department provides for the Small Pockets of Deprivation programme in Rathgill Estate, Bangor, in the current financial year.

(AQW 37317/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the financial year 2014/15, my department has granted funding of £69,818.05 from the Small Pockets of Deprivation programme to Rathgill Estate, Bangor.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the funding that will be transferred to the new North Down and Ards Council for Neighbourhood Renewal projects.

(AQW 37319/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Urban Regeneration and Community Development funds due to transfer from my Department to Local Councils is currently in the region of £66 million which is the overall envelope of funding, of which Neighbourhood Renewal is one element. The indicative share for the new North Down and Ards Council is £5 million. Whilst final amounts to transfer remain to be determined, they will ultimately be informed by the outcome of the Executive's 2015/16 budget process. The final allocations are expected to be notified to Councils in the coming weeks.

The Financial Allocation Model developed by my Department is based on a collaboration of socio-economic need and population estimates. It will be for Councils and their locally elected representatives to decide how best to address the needs of their areas through their respective Community Plans. Whilst Councils will be required to have regard for the Urban Regeneration and Community Development Framework which has been shared with them, there is no obligation on Councils to deliver programmes or support any groups in the same way that my Department currently does.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the funding that will be transferred to the new North Down and Ards Council for the Small Pockets of Deprivation programme.

(AQW 37320/11-15)

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the review of the Housing Selection Scheme. (AQW 37364/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department recently published a summary of responses to the independent research it had commissioned to help inform the review of social housing allocations. This is available on the Department's website at: www.dsdni.gov.uk/index/hdiv-housing/allocations-research.htm.

I will now give further consideration to the recommendations in the independent research, and the views expressed by respondents.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development, of the number of public responses expressing views on three research reports commissioned by his Department into the allocation of social housing, how many of these were from individuals who are currently living in social housing.

(AQW 37371/11-15)

Mr Storey: Respondents to the reports were not asked about their current living arrangements, so this information is not available.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what progress has been made regarding the introduction of a developers contribution to social and affordable housing.

(AQW 37405/11-15)

Mr Storey: On 3 June 2014, my Department launched a joint consultation with the Department of the Environment on proposals to introduce a system of developer contributions in Northern Ireland. The consultation period ended on 23 September 2014.

Officials from both Departments are currently in the process of analysing the responses to the consultation and will be presenting their findings to the Social Development Committee and the Environment Committee in November 2014.

My colleague, the Minister for the Environment, and I will consider the most appropriate way forward on the proposals once the Committees have been updated.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly Library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37407/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information requested is set out in the table below. Figures reflect the breakdown of this Departments bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round.

	Classification	£
Northern Ireland Co-ownership Housing Association (NICHA)	Capital	£10.0m
Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme (VER)	Resource	£2.2m

The funding for these bids is not inescapable or required to meet the Departments statutory obligations.

The details of the bids have been provided to DFP and the Social Development Committee (25 September) and therefore we are not proposing to deposit a further copy of the Departments bids, in the Assembly Library.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development why a barascope inspection has not been included in the Stock Condition Survey to be carried out on 20,000 Housing Executive properties.

(AQW 37420/11-15)

Mr Storey: It is not normal practice to include Borescope inspections as standard within large scale Stock Condition Surveys, however on this occasion an option within the tender documentation allows Borescope investigations to be included if required. The extent to which this option will be utilised will be established in due course.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development when the proposed new legislation on gambling will be introduced.
(AQW 37433/11-15)

Mr Storey: It is my intention to introduce a Gambling Bill to the Assembly before the summer 2015 recess.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development when he will launch the Holywood Masterplan.
(AQW 37449/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department in partnership with North Down Borough Council are currently making arrangements to launch the Holywood Masterplan in November 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development how his Department has increased provision for Community, Economic, Social and Physical renewal through the Neighbourhood Renewal Programme in Limavady in the last three years.
(AQW 37461/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has increased provision in Community, Social and Physical renewal through funding the following new projects in the last three years:

- D.R.I.V.E. (Developing Relationships in Vulnerable Environments) Project. This project focuses on Community and Social Renewal and is a structured programme of diversionary activities for 5-13 year olds living in the Limavady Neighbourhood Renewal Area;
- Physical Renewal at Benevenagh Drive, Dunmore Place and Grange Park, Limavady; and
- Physical Renewal of Scroggy Road Playing Fields, Limavady.

Overall, my Department has provided financial assistance of £1.2 million in the period 1 April 2012 to 31 March 2015 for the Limavady Neighbourhood Renewal Area.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development what powers his Department or local councils have to prevent betting shops from clustering in socially deprived areas.
(AQW 37477/11-15)

Mr Storey: Licensing of bookmaking offices in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of the courts. Neither my Department nor district councils have statutory powers in this regard; however, any person may object to the grant of a bookmaking office licence under Article 12 of the Betting, Gaming, Lotteries and Amusements (Northern Ireland) Order 1985.

As indicated in the answer provided to AQW 37095/11-15, a court must be satisfied that the number of bookmaking offices in a locality is inadequate to meet the current demand, before granting a new licence.

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the timescale for the introduction of a bill on housing regeneration.
(AQO 6898/11-15)

Mr Storey: With the Speaker's permission, I will answer questions 5 & 14 together as they are both referring to the Regeneration and Housing Bill, which is part of the Reform of Local Government.

I am working closely with Executive colleagues to secure their agreement to the introduction of the Bill in the Assembly. I have had a number of discussions with Sinn Fein and have suggested some changes to the Bill to help address their concerns. In particular, I have proposed to remove the transfer of any housing functions from the Bill at this stage.

It is my intention to introduce the Bill at the earliest opportunity, but this is subject to getting Executive approval to do so. I intend seeking that agreement at the Executive meeting on 23 October. It is crucial however that my Department and the new Councils have clarity on this matter as soon as possible so a decision has to be made quickly.

In the event of the Bill not progressing, the powers and functions will not transfer to the Councils, nor will any associated assets or budgets.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development when the last external cyclical maintenance scheme was carried out by the Housing Executive in North Down.
(AQO 6899/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the last External Cyclical Maintenance Scheme in North Down was carried out in Bloomfield estate in 2010. These properties had previously had External Cyclical Maintenance works carried out in 2001/02 - a gap of approximately nine years.

There were 157 dwellings included in the scheme and the cost was £447,000. The scheme was confined to external elements of the properties and included:-

- Repairs to roofs and rainwater goods
- Repainting
- Repairs to fencing

- Window replacement where necessary
- Servicing/repairs to windows as required
- External doors replaced where necessary.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister for Social Development to detail how much has been paid to Capita since November 2012 following the commencement of the Northern Ireland Personal Independence Payment contract.

(AQO 6900/11-15)

Mr Storey: Contractual payments for services provided by Capita Business Services Ltd will only be made when the service commences and are informed by an exclusively output based financial model.

However, a payment of £1.1m was made to Capita on the 1 August 2014 as compensation for additional costs which they incurred in putting in place the necessary staffing and service delivery infrastructure to ensure the Personal Independence Payment assessment service would be ready for when the legislation was originally planned to come into effect. A continuing delay in the Welfare Reform Bill (NI) 2012 being progressed through the Assembly could mean further compensation payments being necessary although any such payments would be subject to extensive scrutiny before authorisation for any payment would be made.

The potential costs should it become necessary for the contract to be terminated would also be subject to extensive legal and commercial consideration

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the current need for social housing in the Rushpark area of North Belfast.

(AQO 6901/11-15)

Mr Storey: There are currently 153 applicants for social housing whose first preference was Rushpark, of which 89 applicants are deemed to be in housing stress.

In the 12 months to March 2014, there were 25 social housing allocations. In addition Apex Housing Association has completed a scheme which delivered 17 new social housing units.

Unfortunately, land suitable for development within Rushpark is very limited. However, the Housing Executive has a number of existing sites within the adjacent Rathcoole Estate and they are currently examining the potential of these sites in addressing the waiting list demand in Rushpark.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister for Social Development what are the budgetary implications for the provision of advice services in the next financial year.

(AQO 6902/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department currently provides funding for frontline advice services, approximately £1.6 million per annum, through its Community Support Programme with local councils providing additional funding, £1.9 million for 2014/15. Each council then commissions advice services for their local area.

My Department also provides funding of approximately £1.2 million per annum to the Northern Ireland Advice Service Consortium (Advice NI, CAB Regional Office and Law Centre NI) to support the voluntary advice network in areas such as IT support and training. This funding is provided through DSD's Regional Infrastructure Support Programme.

The Community Support Programme budget is due to transfer from my Department to local councils under Reform of Local Government in April 2015 when councils will determine arrangements for advice services taking account of their individual Community Plans.

Future funding across all DSD programmes, including the Regional Infrastructure Support Programme, has not yet been determined.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on town regeneration schemes since 2011.

(AQO 6903/11-15)

Mr Storey: The total amount spent on town regeneration schemes throughout Northern Ireland from 2011 totals £55,462,403. This significant investment reflects my Department's commitment to making our town centres an attractive place to invest, live, visit and socialise.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Social Development what action his Department has taken to address the problem of work carried out by utility companies, statutory bodies and departments causing damage to areas of urban regeneration.

(AQO 6904/11-15)

Mr Storey: DSD officials work in close cooperation with utility companies, statutory bodies and other departments, providing advance notification of planned programmes of public realm schemes, and engaging at an early stage to ensure coordination of works and future proofing of infrastructure. In this regard, the Northern Ireland Road Authorities and Utilities Committee, currently chaired by the Department for Regional Development provides a forum to promote regional liaison and best practice, leading to improved co-operation between parties and for discussion of issues of mutual interest. My Department also provides reinstatement guidance to utility companies.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the elements of Welfare Reform that have been introduced by the Assembly since 2007.

(AQO 6905/11-15)

Mr Storey: Since 2007 there have been two welfare reform acts passed by the Assembly. The first in 2007 and the second in 2010.

The Welfare Reform Act (Northern Ireland) 2007:

- made provision for the introduction of employment and support allowance which replaced incapacity benefit and income support on grounds of incapacity. The replacement benefit had a new benefit structure, incorporating both a contributory allowance and an income-related allowance.
- made provision for the introduction of a local housing allowance across the private rented sector and changes to the design and administration of housing benefit
- made provision for the sharing of social security information and functions, for example, to support joint working arrangements. It also included provision in relation to overpayment recovery and benefit fraud and provided for a number of miscellaneous matters relating to benefits.

Key elements of the Welfare Reform Act (Northern Ireland) 2010:

- Work for your benefit - 'Work for your benefit schemes' were piloted in Great Britain for long-term jobseekers who received increasingly intensive support from Jobcentre Plus and specialist back-to-work providers. They gave jobseekers the opportunity to develop their work skills through undertaking full time work-experience.
- Supporting parents with younger children into employment through 'Progression to work' - The Act made provision that, in the long-term, parents with younger children should generally be part of a 'Progression to Work' group, for whom an immediate return to work is not appropriate, but is a genuine possibility with time, encouragement and support. The intention was to establish a personalised conditionality regime tailored to the individual's circumstances, so that preparation for work becomes a natural progression rather than a sudden step up. The Bill included provision ensuring that lone parents and partners of benefit recipients in the "Progression to Work" group were required to undertake action planning and work-related activities. These actions and activities are broadly defined to ensure they are appropriate to the needs and circumstances of each individual.
- Work-related activity for claimants of Employment and Support Allowance - The Act included provision to direct an employment and support allowance claimant to undertake a specific work-related activity in certain circumstances. Earlier legislation required certain employment and support allowance claimants to undertake a work-related activity of their choice.
- Contribution-based Jobseeker's Allowance and contributory Employment and Support Allowance - The Act amended the contribution conditions for both contributory jobseeker's allowance and employment and support allowance.
- Community Care Grants - Earlier law entitled successful applicants for community care grants to be provided with cash to obtain goods or services that the award covers. The Act provided that, at the discretion of the appropriate officer, a payment may instead be made to a third party to provide goods or services.
- Benefit fraud - The Act provided for the loss of benefit following one or more convictions, penalty or caution for benefit fraud.
- Sanctions - The Act made provision for benefit sanctions for jobseeker's allowance claimants who, without good cause, fail to attend mandatory appointments in connection with their claim and for jobseeker's allowance claimants who commit acts of violence or threatening behaviour against staff.
- Miscellaneous provisions - The Act includes provision to remove an adult dependency increase from maternity allowance and from carer's allowance. A further provision extends the mobility component of disability living allowance to certain people with severe visual impairments.

Since 2007 there have been ongoing changes to social security benefits through numerous sets of amending regulations, including:

- Requiring lone parents to move from Income Support to Jobseeker's Allowance or Employment and Support Allowance Revising when their youngest child is aged 7
- Support for Mortgage Interest - limits the support available for those on Jobseeker's Allowance to 2 years and introduced temporary measures to provide Support for Mortgage Interest from the 13th week of entitlement (rather than 39th week). This measure has been extended to 31 March 2016.
- The introduction of the 30th percentile for Local Housing Allowance (Local Housing Allowance), the cap on Housing Benefit and the removal of the facility to keep up to £15 excess between actual rent and the Local Housing Allowance.
- Sure Start Maternity Grant - that the payment would be made in relation to the first child only
- Easement in Jobseeker's Allowance conditionality for those claimants affected by domestic violence
- Introduction of legislation to enable Jobseeker's Allowance claimants to participate in DEL's Steps 2 Success employment programme
- Changes to Habitual residence and definition of person from abroad to discourage benefit tourism

- Increase in waiting days at the start of Jobseeker's Allowance and Employment and Support Allowance claims

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the potential impact of not progressing the bill on housing regeneration.

(AQO 6907/11-15)

Mr Storey: With the Speaker's permission, I will answer questions 5 & 14 together as they are both referring to the Regeneration and Housing Bill, which is part of the Reform of Local Government.

I am working closely with Executive colleagues to secure their agreement to the introduction of the Bill in the Assembly. Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Cookstown Town Centre Masterplan.

(AQO 6908/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Cookstown Masterplan was launched in May 2012. This document sets out a vision for the future development of the town centre in the short, medium and long term. The plan sets out regeneration objectives and actions, their priority and the potential delivery partners for each action. My Department in conjunction with Cookstown District Council has been focussing resources on the development and delivery of a number of short term (0 – 5 years) high priority actions, these include:

- a number of revitalisation actions including shop front improvements, promotion and marketing; and
- the Cookstown Public Realm scheme which is currently at the detailed design stage with planning permission imminent.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Allister asked the Assembly Commission what requests have been (i) made, and by whom; and (ii) granted, and to whom, in respect of the use of rooms in Parliament Buildings in connection with the upcoming political talks.

(AQW 37399/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): "To ask the Assembly Commission what requests have been (i) made, and by whom; and (ii) granted, and to whom, in respect of the use of rooms in Parliament Buildings in connection with the upcoming political talks."

AQW 37399/11-15

I can confirm that an initial request was made by the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) to explore the possibility of using Parliament Buildings as the venue for cross-party talks to be convened by the Secretary of State.

Consideration was given to the request but the NIO subsequently decided not to proceed with Parliament Buildings as the venue for the talks.

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to detail the cost of calls to directory enquiries from land line telephones, in each of the last five financial years.

(AQW 37454/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission utilises the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) telephone system and consequently the information that you require is not currently held by us.

The Department Of Finance and Personnel will be responding to the question for all sites covered by the IT Assist telephone system and I have asked them to ensure that their response includes the costs relating to Parliament Buildings.

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission to detail the cost of calls to the Speaking Clock from land line telephones, in each of the last five financial years.

(AQW 37456/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission utilises the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) telephone system and consequently the information that you require is not currently held by us.

The Department Of Finance and Personnel will be responding to the question for all sites covered by the IT Assist telephone system and I have asked them to ensure that their response includes the costs relating to Parliament Buildings.

Mr Allister asked the Assembly Commission to detail (i) what categories of permanent pass exist in respect of access to Parliament Buildings, including the criteria applicable to each; and (ii) whether any lobbyists have been issued with passes; and if so, to identify them.

(AQW 37557/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): "To ask the Assembly Commission to detail (i) what categories of permanent pass exist in respect of access to Parliament Buildings, including the criteria applicable to each; and (ii) whether any lobbyists have been issued with passes; and if so, to identify them."

Permanent passes are presently issued to the following categories of building users:

- Members - one Member pass (with escort rights); one Researcher pass (with escort rights); and one partner pass (without escort rights). These passes are allocated to whomever the Member nominates.
- Secretariat Staff & Agency staff –issued on receipt of Access NI clearance and following approval from Head of HR (with escort rights).

Revised Written Answers

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

In Bound Volume 97, page WA 533 please replace AQW 35965/11-15 with:

Waterways Ireland

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the Department's total expenditure to Waterways Ireland in (i) 2012; (ii) 2013; and (iii) 2014 to date.

(AQW 35965/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): As part of the funding arrangements for Waterways Ireland as a North South Implementation Body, my Department has provided the following funding:

Year	Amount
2012	£3,442,099
2013	£3,212,535
2014	£1,416,558

Department of Education

In this Bound Volume, page WA 29 please replace AQW 36056/11-15 with:

Capital Repair Works and New School Buildings

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education how many (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools in East Londonderry currently require (a) major capital repair works; and (ii) completely new school buildings.

(AQW 36056/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Prior to my major capital investment announcement of 24 June 2014, my Department considered proposals submitted by Education & Library Boards and other school authorities on potential new build projects for schools in their areas that required major capital works. A total of nine schools in the East Derry constituency were submitted for consideration by the Western Education & Library Board (WELB) and the North Eastern Education and Library Board. The breakdown across each Board area by Primary and post Primary school is as follows:

Western Education and Library Board (WELB)

- (i) Primary Schools (PS)
- Ballykelly PS
  - Roe Valley Integrated PS, Limavady
  - Listress PS, Derry
- (ii) WELB did not submit any Post Primary schools in the East Derry constituency.

North Eastern Education & Library Board (NEELB)

- (i) Primary Schools (PS)
- Millstrand Integrated PS, Portrush
- (ii) Post Primary Schools
- St Paul's College, Coleraine
  - North Coast Integrated College, Coleraine
  - Coleraine Academical Institution

- Loreto College, Coleraine
- Dominican College, Portstewart

When the approved protocol for selection of 2014 new builds was applied in June, Roe Valley IPS was announced to be advanced in planning for a new school build.

The remaining schools put forward were not included in my announcement at that time due to area planning/sustainability issues and/or budget constraints.

Subsequent to my June announcement, on 18 August 2014 I approved the amalgamation of Listress PS, Craigback PS and Mullaghbuoy PS and a new build will proceed in due course.

Regarding other major works I can confirm that Coleraine Academical Institution has been approved under the School Enhancement Programme for partial refurbishment consisting of rewiring, refurbishment of heating distribution, Mechanical and Electrical Services and a building fabric upgrade. Planning for an extensive programme of minor works is also underway at Coleraine Academical Institution.

The selection of new major works has, in the main, been on the basis of effecting rationalisation; supporting unmet need; addressing serious accommodation inadequacies and schools operating on split sites, substandard conditions or overcrowding; or addressing undue reliance on temporary accommodation.

The reality is that the budget settlement for Education means the need for investment far exceeds the funds available to me and many schools in need of investment are competing for limited capital funding.

Department for Social Development

In this Bound Volume, page WA 376 please replace AQW 36869/11-15 with:

Department's Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 36869/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): There are currently seven members of staff from the Executive Information Service employed by the Department for Social Development. An additional two members of NICS staff provide administrative support to the Press Office.

Based on September 2014 figures, the annual cost of these staff would be £329,989.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment how many groups have applied to the Challenge Fund in the current financial year, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 37045/11-15)

We have experienced an unprecedented level of interest in the 2014/15 Challenge Fund, with over £9 million having been requested. I look forward to again seeing the positive environmental and community outcomes this support enables.

Youth Hostels

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many visitors have stayed in youth hostels in each of the last three years, broken down by visitors from within and from outside of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 34610/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): NISRA does not hold any data on the number of visitors from outside Northern Ireland who stayed in youth hostels in Northern Ireland. However, the estimated number of overnight trips taken by Northern Ireland residents in hostels is available from the Continuous Household Survey. Due to small sample sizes, figures in the attached table are subject to large confidence intervals.

The estimated number of overnight trips taken by Northern Ireland (NI) residents within NI in hostels over the last three years is detailed in the attached table.

Overnight trips by Residents in NI Hostels (2011-2013)

(NIA 26/11-15) – Amendment 46

Proposed:

New Clause

After clause 12 insert – ‘Child trafficking guardian

12A.—(1)The Regional Health and Social Care Board must, in accordance with this section, make arrangements to enable a person (a “child trafficking guardian”) to be appointed to assist, represent and support a child to whom this section applies.

(2)This section applies to a child if—

(a) a reference relating to that child has been, or is about to be, made to a competent authority for a determination for the purposes of Article 10 of the Trafficking Convention as to whether there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is a victim of trafficking in human beings; and

(b) there has not been a conclusive determination that the child is not such a victim; and for the purposes of this subsection a determination which has been challenged by way of proceedings for judicial review shall not be treated as conclusive until those proceedings are finally determined.

(3)Arrangements under this section must—

(a) be made with a registered charity (within the meaning of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland)

2008);

(b) provide for the appointment of a person as the child trafficking guardian for a child to whom this section applies to be made by that charity;

(c) ensure that a person is not so appointed by that charity unless that person—

(i) is an employee of the charity; and

(ii) is eligible to be so appointed in accordance with regulations under subsection (4);

(d) provide for the appointment of a child trafficking guardian only where the person with parental responsibility for the child—

(i) is not in regular contact with the child or is outside the United Kingdom;

(ii) is suspected of having committed an offence under section 1B in relation to the child; or

(iii) for other reasons has interests which conflict with those of the child;

(e) include provision for the termination of the appointment of a child trafficking guardian, including in particular provision for such termination—

(i) if the child ceases to be a child to whom this section applies;

(ii) on the child attaining the age of 18 (unless subsection (9) applies);

(iii) on paragraph (d) ceasing to apply in relation to the child;

(iv) where, after consulting the child trafficking guardian, the Regional Health and Social Care

Board is of the opinion that it is no longer necessary to continue the appointment because long-term arrangements have been made in relation to the child.

(4)The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety shall by regulations make provision for—

- (a) the training and qualifications required for a person to be eligible for appointment as a child trafficking guardian;
- (b) the support to be provided for, and the supervision of, a child trafficking guardian.

(5) A child trafficking guardian appointed in relation to a child must at all times act in the best interests of the child.

(6)The functions of a child trafficking guardian include (where appropriate)—

- (a) ascertaining the views of the child in relation to matters affecting the child;
- (b) making representations to, and liaising with, bodies or persons responsible for—
  - (i) providing care, accommodation, health services, education or translation and interpretation services to or in respect of the child; or
  - (ii) otherwise taking decisions in relation to the child;
- (c) assisting the child to obtain legal or other advice, assistance and representation, including (where necessary) the appointment and instructing of legal representatives to act on behalf of the child;
- (d) consulting regularly with the child and keeping the child informed of legal and other proceedings affecting the child and any other matters affecting the child;
- (e) contributing to a plan to safeguard and promote the future welfare of the child based on an individual assessment of that child's best interests;
- (f) providing a link between the child and any body or person who may provide services to the child;
- (g) assisting in establishing contact with members of the child's family, where the child so wishes and it is in the child's best interests;
- (h) accompanying the child to meetings or on other occasions.

(7)Any person or body providing services or taking administrative decisions in relation to a child for whom a child trafficking guardian has been appointed under this section must recognise, and pay due regard to, the functions of the child trafficking guardian and must (to the extent otherwise permitted by law) provide the child trafficking guardian with access to such information relating to the child as will enable the child trafficking guardian to carry out his or her functions effectively.

(8)The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety may by regulations confer additional functions on child trafficking guardians.

(9)The arrangements under this section may provide for a child trafficking guardian appointed in relation to a person under the age of 18 to continue (with the consent of that person) to act in relation to that person after that person attains the age of 18 but is under the age of 21.

(10)In this section—

“administrative decision” does not include a decision taken by a court or tribunal;

“parental responsibility” has the meaning given by Article 6 of the Children (Northern Ireland)

Order 1995, except that it does not include parental responsibility conferred by a care order (within the meaning of Article 49(1) of that Order).’

(5) In determining whether to make a slavery and trafficking reparation order against the person the court must have regard to the person’s means.

(6) If the court considers that —

- (a) it would be appropriate both to impose a fine and to make a slavery and trafficking reparation order, but the court must give preference to compensation (although it may impose a fine as well).

(7) In any case in which the court has power to make a slavery and trafficking reparation order it must —

(5) In determining the amount to be paid by the person under a slavery and trafficking reparation order the court must have regard to the person's means.

Article XIV.

(5) Any order made by the county court on an appeal under sub-paragraph (1)(c) or (2) is for the purposes of paragraph 6(8) or 7(6) (respectively) to be treated as if it were an order of the court from which the appeal was brought.

(6) Sub-paragraph (5) does not apply to an order directing that an application be reheard by a court of summary jurisdiction.
