A joined-up approach between the Department of the Environment, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure and the Department of Justice is long overdue so that a clear message can be sent to the culprits of environmental crime that they will be subject to the full rigor of the law. I hope that the recent incident on the Sixmilewater is fully investigated, the source identified and prosecution sought. Environmental crime is a growing problem that cannot be overlooked or underestimated. It is a problem that affects each and every one of us, although, at times, it is often taken lightly. The long-term ramifications cannot be disregarded, and we must do all within our control to discourage and deter those who think that it is acceptable to pollute, contaminate and poison our environment.

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. My Department was first alerted to the fish kill on the Sixmilewater at Ballyclare on the morning of Wednesday 29 October 2014 when a report was received, via the Northern Ireland Environment Agency's water pollution hotline, of a number of dead fish at Ballyclare. Mr Girvan said that it was with great sadness that people learned of the incident, and that is certainly and sadly true.

NIEA staff were immediately tasked with investigating the report. During the subsequent NIEA investigation, statutory samples were collected from two different premises, and NIEA's investigation of events at those premises remains ongoing. A number of other potential sources of pollution in the catchment were also visited and investigated by my NIEA staff to rule them out of the inquiry.

The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure is the lead Department for fisheries protection, and its inland fisheries group was also informed of the fish kill by NIEA.

Mr Clarke: I appreciate the Minister giving way. I know that you are moving on to DCAL, but in your Department, we are some weeks past, and you said that you have ruled some out. Is the Minister prepared to say on the record today who has not been ruled out, whether the wastewater treatment works has not been entirely ruled out and where NIEA is at with those samples? The Member opposite has stated the number of years it has taken to get an outcome on these.

Mr Durkan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank Mr Clarke for his intervention. As only two have not been ruled out, I am not really at liberty to identify who they are at this stage. However, as I said, investigations are ongoing. We want to be sure that we get these investigations right and that we ensure that not only does the polluter pay but that the polluter prevents any incidents of pollution from happening again.

The subsequent DCAL investigation confirmed that a total of 964 fish of all sizes had been killed. Mr Ó hOisín gave a breakdown of the sizes of the fish and, given his expressed interest in angling, I was waiting to hear about the one that was this size.

As part of the investigation, NIEA also collected a number of investigatory water samples and carried out a detailed biological survey of the river and its tributaries. Analysis of the findings from those samples and surveys is continuing. I am very conscious that there have, unfortunately, been two previous serious fish kills on the Sixmilewater in recent years, one in 2008 and one in 2011, and other Members referred to that. It is, therefore, particularly disappointing that a further serious fish kill has now occurred, especially given all the hard work by local angling clubs and by my Department in the aftermath of those previous incidents. Following the two previous serious fish kills, NIEA devoted a lot of time and effort to minimising pollution risk throughout the Sixmilewater catchment, including, for example, detailed inspections of all industrial premises in the Ballyclare and Mallusk areas. Those inspections identified a number of pollution risks, all of which were addressed, greatly reducing the overall pollution risk in the catchment.

7.30 pm

NIEA has worked closely with a wide range of stakeholders, such as anglers and a number of other agencies, to protect and improve the Sixmilewater. Mr Girvan expressed frustration that interaction and collaboration with river users is not what it should be, but it certainly cannot be accused of being non-existent. A good example of that practical cooperative effort is that, about six years ago, NIEA established a number of catchment stakeholder groups to allow the public to have a direct input into protecting their local rivers. As part of that initiative, a dedicated Lower Bann stakeholder group was established, whose area of responsibility includes the Sixmilewater and its tributaries. Those stakeholder groups each meet twice a year and allow local anglers and local people to work directly with a wide range of Departments and agencies to help protect and improve their local rivers.

I understand that anglers on and around the Sixmilewater have been particularly enthusiastic participants in the stakeholder groups and that their practical input has been and is of great value. For example, anglers on the Sixmilewater have taken part in environmental monitoring programmes, which feed into and complement government-led monitoring programmes. Officials have also been closely involved in providing advice and support to the Six Mile Water Trust, which I am aware plays an important role in the protection and enhancement of the river. I therefore understand and share the frustration of local people and anglers that, following all that enthusiastic hard work, a further serious fish kill has occurred.

Mr Clarke and others spoke of the paltry nature of the fines, and, yes, there is indeed some strong evidence that average fines for water pollution offences are higher in, for example, England and Wales than here in the North. However, as quite rightly identified by Mrs Cameron, the levels of fine imposed are entirely in the power of the courts and are well beyond the remit of my Department. I can, however, assure you that I and my Department are committed to thoroughly investigating the cause of the latest fish kill and to continuing to work — and improving that work — with other Departments, local anglers and local people to protect the Sixmilewater and other rivers and watercourses.

Mr I McCrea: I thank the Minister for giving way. It is not in my constituency, but the Minister and others referred to the fines and sentencing. Has the Minister had any discussions with his colleague the Justice Minister to consider whether there is room in the Justice Bill to look at changes to sentencing or at working with that agency to look at a potential change to fines?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for the intervention.

In conclusion, I hope very shortly to outline how I intend and am determined to work with other Ministers on this topical and very important subject. Indeed, it is very important that we get this right. I am firm believer that, in any case, the polluter should pay, and I am keen to work with others to identify how we manage our systems better. If that involves utilising volunteers, which it clearly does, I am happy to do that as well. What I am getting loud and clear here today is that partnership working has to be improved, and while I will work with partners and other Departments, let me assure the House that I will not be complicit in or tolerate any whiff of the cover-up that was implied by some Members.

The Northern Ireland Environment Agency does not just go after the wee man. The agency pursues other and all polluters. As an outcome of today —

Mr Girvan: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Durkan: Yes.

Mr Girvan: I did not wish it to be implied; I wanted it to be totally overt. It definitely has gone on and is going on. It is alive and well in the Civil Service.

Mr Durkan: I give the Member an undertaking and a commitment to investigate his allegation — it is not an insinuation any more — robustly.

As an outcome from today, to give the anglers in the Gallery, those anglers in the Chamber and the thousands of anglers outside some sort of comfort and something other than the tea and sympathy that they might expect from here, I am happy to give a commitment to the House that I will undertake to review how the system works and how my Department works with others, including DCAL, DARD, DRD and, importantly, the Department of Justice. I will be happy to get on to that as soon as possible.

Mr Kinahan: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Durkan: I am interested in Mr Ó hOisín's proposal of an all-party group. I wonder why that has not got off the ground to date. I will give way.

Mr Kinahan: Minister, you said that sectoral groups were meeting, but I am being informed that those meetings have stopped. Whether it is departmental meetings or other meetings, will you please make sure that those are restored so that the partnerships work?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Minister's time is almost up, but you are at a very important point in your response, so we have a little bit of laxity for you.

Mr Durkan: I am finished the most important parts, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle, but, in response to Mr Kinahan's question, I will ensure that existing groups are meeting. Perhaps there is a need for more groups. A group that exists and does not meet might as well not exist, so it is important that we ensure that everything that had previously been put in place and yielded some successful outcomes continues to operate and function.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I thank all Members for their contributions and the Minister for his attendance and response.

Northern Ireland Assembly

The Assembly met at 12.00 noon (Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Beggs] in the Chair).

Members observed two minutes' silence.

Assembly Business

Speaker's Ruling: Standards of Debate

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Before we commence today's business, Members should be aware that they are expected to treat each other with courtesy, good temper and moderation when in the Assembly. The standards of debate are there to try to protect the dignity of the Chamber.

I advise Members that Deputy Speaker Dallat has written to the Member who raised a point of order after the Health Minister's statement last week and we consider the matter closed. However, we are increasingly concerned about the number of remarks being made and conversations taking place from a sedentary position. This is a debating Chamber, and Members are not expected to be heard in complete silence. However, a number of Members are constantly barracking and conducting private conversations, making it difficult for the Chair, and indeed anyone else, to hear the Member who has the Floor.

We will, therefore, be keeping an eye on Members who continually talk disruptively while other Members have the Floor. They may well find that they will not be called to make their own contribution to a particular debate. I ask Members to bear that in mind and ensure that they treat this Chamber and other Members with courtesy and good temper in what they say.

Mr Allister: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. Would it be in order to ask whether the Speaker's Office will be initiating or seeking any investigation into the revelation that Sinn Féin MLAs have been laundering expenses through bogus front organisations?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): As the Member will know, that is not an issue for the Speaker's Office. An independent body is charged with looking after the financial considerations of Members. It will be its duty to further investigate. I believe that that body is consulting, and if it deems it necessary to alter the rules and regulations at some point in the future, that is an entirely independent issue for that body. Members do, of course, have a right to debate any issue, but, ultimately, the decision on such matters has been formally granted to the independent body that governs Assembly Members' expenses.

Public Petition: Putting Patients First

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Ms Maeve McLaughlin has sought leave to present a public petition in accordance with Standing Order 22. The Member will have up to three minutes in which to speak.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I am very pleased to have the opportunity to present this public petition to the Assembly. The petition 'Putting Patients First' is not only a principled approach to how we should and could deliver health care, it also gives voice to thousands of people across the North in their support for their general practices. Over 16,000 people across the North have signed the petition. In order to shift left, from acute to community or primary care and early intervention, it is important that we acknowledge the increasing pressures on GPs and that we equally support the infrastructure to deliver the very services that we all envisage under Transforming Your Care.

GPs will be a necessary part of the shift from hospitals to care in the community. The petition calls for general practice to receive 11% of the health-care budget. That shift would enable general practice to deliver shorter waiting times for appointments and more flexible opening hours, longer appointments and consultations, better continuity of care and positive benefits for health services as a whole, and reducing pressures, very clearly, in our hospitals and emergency departments.

Funding for general practice in the North fell by £21.2 million between 2008-09 and 2012-13, which is a decrease of 8.2%. That is alongside a 7% increase in activity at general practices last year alone. GP out-of-hours activity has increased by 18% over the last five years. Therefore, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker — Mr Deputy Speaker, gabh mo leithscéal — to deliver care to an ageing population, Transforming Your Care needs to deliver more GPs, practice nurses, district nurses and health visitors, backed up by pharmacy colleagues and members of the allied health professionals in the community.

GPs are indeed encouraged by recent investment in premises and they encourage more investment in the hub-and-spoke model. I am particularly pleased that the city side in Derry has been identified as a priority project. However, GPs feel that they are not engaged with the Transforming Your Care process and they most certainly feel that work on the process to shift the base has not followed.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: I am pleased to present this petition and I look forward to a positive response.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin moved forward and laid the petition on the Table.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I will forward the petition to the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and send a copy of it to the Health Committee.

Ministerial Statements

North/South Ministerial Council: Transport — Roads and Transport

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): Mr Deputy Speaker, in compliance with section 52 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, I wish to make the following statement on the meeting of the North/South Ministerial Council (NSMC) in the transport sector held in Armagh, on Wednesday 5 November 2014. The meeting was chaired by Minister Donohoe and was attended by me and Minister Durkan. My statement will address the agenda items which relate to my Department.

The Council discussed the UK road user levy for HGVs. We agreed to continue to liaise on the issue and its potential impacts. The Council welcomed the continued cooperation between the Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport and the Department for Regional Development on strategic transport priorities throughout the island, including the ongoing engagement on key areas, such as development of the strategic road network, enhancing east-west connections, driving a shift to public and more sustainable modes of transport and exploring the potential for shared cross-border public transport in border areas.

The Council acknowledged the ongoing positive cooperation between relevant Departments on EU-related transport issues and the opportunities that are being explored to pursue EU funding in a mutually beneficial manner, including maximising cross-border Connecting Europe Facility (CEF) transport funding opportunities; utilising INTERREG programmes for a joined-up cross-border transport and tourism infrastructure; and pursuing Horizon 2020 smart, green and integrated transport cooperation opportunities.

We noted the current position on key EU dossiers of mutual interest, including the Europe 2020 mid-term review and the outcome of the informal ministerial meeting; port services; the cross-border exchange of information on road traffic offences; the fourth railway package; and the Single European Sky ATM Research (SESAR).

The Council welcomed an update of the progress of the INTERREG IVA-funded refurbishment works on the Dublin-Belfast Enterprise rail service and the Drogheda railway viaduct.

The Council welcomed the continued investment by the Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport and the Department for Regional Development in the promotion and development of sustainable transport options, including cycling.

It also welcomed the strategic joint decision by my Department and the Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport to support the identification and development of possible INTERREG V funding for cross-border greenways. The Council welcomed my Department's work on establishing a greenways working group, initially consisting of key stakeholders from Northern Ireland, to scope a plan for the development of greenways. It noted that the Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport would welcome any invitation to be included in full or in part on that working group.

On major road projects, the Council noted the ongoing public consultation on the final report informing the appropriate assessment process for the A5, and it was also noted that, when published, the new environmental statement will be subject to a public consultation and may lead to a further public inquiry. We also noted that both Governments remain committed to the A5 scheme. The Council welcomed that the A8 project is progressing well and that the road is expected to open by spring 2015.

The Council agreed to hold its next NSMC transport meeting in April 2015.

Mr Clarke (The Chairperson of the Committee for Regional Development): I thank the Minister for such a brief statement. I note that his statement says that the Council raised the matter of the HGV levies and the perceived impact that they may have on hauliers from the Republic coming to Northern Ireland. However, did the Minister raise the not perceived but very real fact that there are tolls in the Republic of Ireland and that they have an impact on Northern Ireland hauliers travelling down there?

Can the Minister provide the House with details of the greenways working group that he appears to have established but that some of us are maybe not familiar with as yet?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question and, indeed, for his compliment that my statement was brief.

The Minister of the Environment will largely deal with HGV levies, and he will do so in some detail — he will thank me for that — in his statement. However, it is fair to say that the issue that the Member raised about the differences that exist because of the tolls that apply in the Republic of Ireland is worthy of consideration and should therefore not be ignored in the context of that discussion.

I think that there are potential opportunities to get assisted European funding for the cross-border greenways initiative, and the Member will be aware that, in Newry and Mourne and in the Cooley areas of County Louth in the Republic of Ireland in particular, there are greenway projects for the advancement of cycling and walking. Those are the matters that we would pursue on that.

Obviously, the NSMC does not have any role in considering greenway projects, such as the Comber greenway, in Northern Ireland.

Mr McAleer: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I welcome the statement that the Government remain committed to the A5 scheme.

Following on from Mr Clarke, I will pick up on the greenways working group. I welcome the fact that it has been established. I note that the consultation on the draft bicycle strategy concluded on Friday. Will information from the greenways working group feed into the bicycle strategy's delivery plan?

I will draw on the experience that the Committee gained from going to County Mayo, where we learned about the Great Western Railway, which has been transformed, with part of it being used as a greenway with great success in the local area. Is the Minister minded to look at the possibility that sections of the Great Northern Railway in Ulster be part of a similar type of greenway project?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. Indeed, he will know that my Department's cycling unit has begun work on scoping out a greenway plan for Northern Ireland, although it does not envisage being involved in the delivery or construction of the greenways, because my Department's statutory responsibilities relate to public roads. The majority of the greenways will be located off-road.

Our aim is to bring together the relevant organisations and to support and facilitate greenway projects being developed by local authorities in a coherent way. The Member will also note the clear distinction about work that is being looked at or brought forward by the North/South Ministerial Council, which is what we are discussing today. There may be schemes or projects that we would be interested in looking at on a cross-border basis. Obviously, greenways in Northern Ireland remain the preserve of local Ministers.

Mr Dallat: I desperately want to bring a bit of good news to the Chamber this afternoon. I inform the Minister that I was on the Belfast to Derry train on Saturday, and it was packed to capacity in both directions. Many of the passengers whom I spoke to were from the Republic. Will the Minister assure the House that, in cooperation with the Republic's Government, everything is being done to source European funding to help to rebuild the infrastructure of the permanent way and the railway stations, particularly the station in Derry?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his good news. It is good news that there are ever-increasing numbers using not only trains in Northern Ireland but the cross-border Enterprise service. We can happily agree that that is indeed good news.

The Member will also be aware of the very good news that, under the INTERREG IVa project, through the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB), we are getting additional finance to refurbish the Enterprise service extensively, which will be good news. I also travelled on the Enterprise service recently. Whilst it was a very good experience, I think that there are grounds for further improvements.

The Member will also know that the Department is pursuing opportunities for further European funding projects, including for the old Waterside station. I know that he and the Committee for Regional Development will support that as we seek to move it forward.

Mr Hussey: I thank the Minister for his statement. I also welcome his comments on the old railway station in the Waterside in Londonderry. Will he detail the work that is being carried out by his Department under Horizon 2020?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his positive comments and, indeed, his contribution to the Committee for Regional Development and his commitment to projects in the north-west.

Horizon 2020 is the EU's biggest research and innovation programme, with nearly €80 billion of funding available between 2014 and 2020. The transport objective under the Horizon 2020 programme is entitled 'Smart, Green and Integrated Transport' and has been allocated a budget of €6.4 million. It aims to support:

"better mobility, less congestion, more safety and security with a substantial reduction of traffic congestion; with a substantial improvement in the mobility of people and freight ... and by reducing accident rates, fatalities and casualties and improving security."

There could be significant opportunities for DRD, other Departments and our counterparts in the Republic of Ireland to work in partnership in the identification of projects and the preparation of applications that seek Horizon 2020 funding. With the aim of maximising those opportunities, I recently led a delegation to Brussels to meet the CEO of the Innovation and Networks Executive Agency, which operates Horizon 2020. My Department is open to working together with those of Minister Donohoe and Minister Durkan through the NSMC forum to ensure that those opportunities are realised.

Mr Lyttle: I welcome the identification of sustainable transport, including cycling, as a strategic priority for the North/South Ministerial Council. How are the Minister and the Minister of the Environment working to ensure that the introduction of a single-tier taxi scheme does not overload bus lanes or limit his attempts to improve bus and cycle provision in Belfast and Northern Ireland?

Mr Kennedy: I am very grateful to the Member for the very clever way in which he introduced business that is not the business of the North/South Ministerial Council or the report of the meeting into his question. Clearly, he has learned a political skill. The Member will know that there are ongoing discussions between me and Minister Durkan as to how that issue can be properly resolved to the satisfaction of everyone concerned.

Mr Easton: I thank the Minister for his statement. On strategic transport priorities, you talked about enhancing east-west connections. What are you are talking about in terms of enhancing those? Will you expand?

Mr Kennedy: I thank the Member for his question. Clearly, whilst NSMC will deal with cross-border issues, we will always seek to maximise opportunities through the British-Irish Council (BIC), which is not part of the statement. We clearly reference that work as being important; it is not just North/South but east-west. We look positively at opportunities that there may well be for us in that respect.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an ráiteas seo. I thank the Minister for his statement. Under strategic transport priorities, Minister, you talked about:

“exploring the potential for shared cross-border public transport in border areas.”

Will you elaborate and expand on that?

Mr Kennedy: Could the Member repeat the latter part of the question? I beg your pardon.

Mr Lynch: You talked about:

I would like you to expand on that, Minister. Thank you.

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. Principally, it is the work around the Enterprise, which is important work, and the rail services. Of course, there are also the Translink and bus services on a cross-border basis that occur. It is to look to see how we can best improve timings, ultimately, of the Enterprise service, hopefully, to put it into more frequent service given its popularity and to ensure that the cross-border bus services are fully efficient and effective.

Mr Spratt: I thank the Minister for his statement. In relation to strategic transport priorities and the east-west connections that you mentioned, have you had any continued discussions with the Scottish Government on the A75, given the effect that freight transport has travelling on the A75 from the ports of Larne and Belfast? That is something that was being looked at under European funding possibilities as well.

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his interest in and question on the matter. The A75 link route into Scotland and the rest of the United Kingdom has to remain an important focus of our cooperation on an ongoing basis. We continue to look at ways of improving it through lobbying the Scottish Government and perhaps bringing forward innovative ideas that would garner support not only in the Executive but, potentially, with the Scottish Government and which would also have EU involvement. Some of that work is still at a relatively early stage, but I am happy to confirm that we are pursuing it.

Mr Ó hOisín: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ucht an ráitis sin. I thank the Minister for his statement. Minister, given that some EU funding has been used in the provision of transport and tourism infrastructure, namely the Magilligan to Greencastle ferry, were there any discussions on extending that to make sure of a year-round service of that ferry?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. As he and other Members, particularly Mr Dallat who has raised this issue on an ongoing basis, will know, my Department has had no previous involvement with the funding of that project, and there are no plans to change that at this point. I am aware of the interest of Members, particular Members from that constituency, and of the councils involved. However, primarily, that would be a project for the councils involved to carry forward.

Mr Byrne: I thank the Minister for his statement and welcome his mention of the A5 road. In relation to the A5 road, would the Minister support the call locally for the new bridge that would be required across the Finn between Lifford and Strabane to be started as a very positive signal showing a serious commitment to the building of this project?

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for his question. Of course, the Member has a longstanding interest in seeing the development of the A5. As I have outlined here, and, indeed, at the NSMC, the current situation is that we continue to work through the various reports to inform the appropriate assessments. I am not at liberty to go further than that through the statement or at this time.

Mr McElduff: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I welcome the Minister's mention of the A5 and confirmation that it remains an Executive and a North/South Ministerial Council priority. Can I ask the Minister to outline the timetable for progressing the A5 project in the remaining weeks of 2014 and in 2015? What level of funding commitment is there from his Department and from the Government in Dublin?

Mr Kennedy: I thank the Member for his question. The Member will know about the appropriate assessments: the three assessments that have been carried out and the one on Tully Bog, consultation on which is due to end later this week on 28 November. We will need to take those into consideration. The next step in progressing the scheme will be the publication of the new environmental statement, draft vesting orders and draft direction orders. Development work on those is at an advanced stage, but a firm date for publication cannot be given until after consideration of any submissions to the ongoing public consultation exercise on impacts on Tully Bog.

Publication of the new environmental statement and draft orders will be followed by a further consultation lasting a minimum of six weeks, when formal representations and/or objections to the scheme can be made. The Member will know that this consultation is likely to lead to the need for a further public inquiry, but a decision on this can be made only following careful consideration of the representations and the level of objection received in response to the consultation exercise. That may lead to a new public inquiry, which would be likely to be held in 2015.

12.30 pm

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): That concludes questions on the Minister's statement.

North/South Ministerial Council: Transport — Road Safety

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): In compliance with section 52 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, I wish to make the following statement on the seventeenth meeting of the North/South Ministerial Council (NSMC) in the transport sector, which was held in Armagh on Wednesday 5 November 2014. The meeting was attended by me, the Regional Development Minister, Danny Kennedy, and Minister Paschal Donohoe TD, Minister for Transport, Tourism and Sport. Minister Donohoe chaired the meeting.

I will address those agenda items for which my Department has responsibility: mutual recognition of penalty points; and road user and vehicle safety.

During our opening remarks, we discussed the UK road user levy for HGVs. We agreed to continue to liaise on the issue and its potential impacts.

The Council discussed mutual recognition of penalty points. We noted that a draft EU directive facilitating the cross-border exchange of information on road safety-related traffic is due to come into force in 2017. This will cover the offences being considered by the mutual recognition of penalty points — or MRPP — project. The MRPP steering group will continue to examine the directive and the outcome of a European Commission review of the need to strengthen enforcement with regard to traffic offences, and the implications of these for the MRPP project. The MRPP working group will meet to explore issues relating to the counting down of penalty points in both jurisdictions, and both jurisdictions will continue to carry forward work regarding the prosecution of offences with a view to providing an update on those issues at a future NSMC meeting.

The Council welcomed the continued sharing of knowledge and experience between officials from both jurisdictions on the delivery of road safety measures. We noted the progress and enactment of legislation in both jurisdictions designed to improve road safety, including measures and proposals to address drug- and drink-driving and reform of the learner driver regime.

We welcomed the continuing proactive cooperation to target a wide range of illegal activity in the goods haulage and passenger transport industries, including continuing liaison on successful cross-border enforcement operations in 2014 in both jurisdictions.

The Council noted the recent meeting of a tripartite enforcement planning forum to maximise the benefits of enforcement efforts and to identify synergies from a coordinated enforcement approach, and it welcomed the continued training exchange for enforcement officers.

Ms Lo (The Chairperson of the Committee for the Environment): That was short, Minister.

Mr Durkan: I just went faster than usual.

Ms Lo: Obviously, road safety is a big issue for the Committee, and it is always very concerned about fatalities and injuries. There have been joint advertising campaigns between the two jurisdictions and sharing of production costs. Given the financial restraints, North and South, was coordination and sharing in these expensive advertising campaigns discussed?

Mr Durkan: I thank Ms Lo for her question. It is not often that I get accused of being short in any respect.

Road safety advertising is an emotive issue and, as Ms Lo points out, it is expensive. It has also been extremely effective. Ms Lo quite rightly suggests making it more efficient, if possible, through cross-border collaboration.

She quite rightly said that there has been collaboration on several public information campaigns. Between 2000 and 2007, DOE and the Road Safety Authority shared the production costs for campaigns where there were similar road safety issues to be addressed. For example, there were joint campaigns on issues such as drink-driving, seat-belt wearing, pedestrian safety and speeding.

There has also been the purchase of ads from us by the Republic of Ireland Government and vice versa. Given the financial constraints that both Governments are having to operate within, it is certainly worth exploring where further collaboration can be achieved. We have a tremendous opportunity, through the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill, to harmonise the drink-driving limit on both sides of the border. That might provide an opportunity for a new shared campaign.

Mrs Cameron: I thank the Minister for his brief statement to the House this morning. In relation to road safety, Minister, what actions will you be taking in light of the very tragic death of eight-year-old Adam Gilmore recently? Will you be working with the Education Minister towards ensuring that we have the best road safety measures for our schoolchildren?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for her question. Obviously, the tragedy that occurred recently will have — and certainly should have — focused all our minds on how we can work to maximise road safety and minimise the potential for such a tragedy to occur to anyone on our roads. The fact that something like that could happen to children or a family on their way to school beggars belief, particularly in light of concerns that were raised with the local education and library board on the very real dangers — I was going to say “potential dangers” — being faced by children day and daily on their way to get buses in rural areas or, as is the case in many areas, walking the whole way to school on roads with no footpaths because they do not have buses to get. That is a very important issue.

There is a ministerial working group on road safety that generally comprises me, the Minister for Regional Development and the Justice Minister, but I am keen for an invitation to the next meeting to be extended to the Education Minister to see what work can be done with education boards on the matter.

As a Department, we work very closely with schools. We have outreach programmes that are run very successfully with the schools: the schools enjoy participating in them and find them extremely useful. It is important that we build on the work that has been done and do everything we can to ensure that the likes of this tragedy does not occur again.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Cuirim fáilte roimh ráiteas an Aire. I welcome the Minister's statement. In light of the increase in road fatalities — across the island, there have been nearly 250 road deaths this year — will he consider using media outlets like they do in the South — for example, some of the radio stations in the South notify the number of deaths — to try to get the message out again. I do not believe, Minister, that the message that we have is working, given that there have been 20 more deaths this year than there were at this time last year. Will he consider using other media outlets to get the message out? Go raibh míle maith agat.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for his question. I have said in the House before, and I am happy to say again, that I will consider any option to reduce the number of deaths on our roads. To say that what we are doing is not working may be a wee bit unfair given the drastic reductions that we have seen in the number of fatalities on our roads over a number of years. In 2013, there was an increase on the number in 2012, but 2012 had the lowest number of fatalities on our roads on record, with just 52. That is not to say that we should be resting on our laurels and saying that we cannot do better. For me, one death on our roads is one too many, and I aspire to a time when we have zero road deaths. That may seem beyond our ability, but it certainly should not be beyond our ambition.

The Member's suggestion that we keep the public informed about how many fatalities there have been on the roads is worth looking at again. Last week was Road Safety Week, and I attended a couple of events across the North. I know that Members possibly attended — they certainly would have been invited to — events in their own constituency. I remind all Members of their responsibility to use any opportunity that they have to reinforce road safety messages to their constituents.

Mr Eastwood: I thank the Minister for his statement and his answers thus far. Why has it taken so long to get to the point of mutual recognition of penalty points?

Mr Durkan: I thank Mr Eastwood for the question. Progress has been made on advancing that work, and some key policy and operational issues have been agreed to date. The mutual recognition of penalty points working group is continuing to explore the issues relating to the counting down of penalty points in both jurisdictions, with a view to providing an update on those issues at the next NSMC meeting in the transport sector.

The issues arise from a number of technical differences between the two penalty-point systems. For instance, on disqualification, all points on a Northern Ireland licence are wiped, whereas those on a licence in Ireland are suspended. Therefore, a driver disqualified for drink-driving who already has three points for a speeding offence on his or her licence will have those points wiped if it is a Northern Ireland licence, but the points will be on his or her new licence if the driver requalifies after the period of disqualification in the South.

Those differences could in certain circumstances lead to issues of double jeopardy. Given that lawyers are constantly searching for grounds on which to challenge driver disqualification, I am sure that Members will recognise the need to ensure legal certainty on these complicated but important issues. Both jurisdictions will continue to carry forward the work on the prosecution of offences, with a view to providing a report to the next NSMC meeting. The issues include courts' treatment of summonses served outside the jurisdiction, on which Departments are working with their respective courts services to clarify an appropriate, robust way forward.

Mr Weir: I thank the Minister for the brevity of the report, if nothing else. Mutual recognition is a major benefit, but there is some concern that it seems to have taken a long time. The report obviously makes reference to 2017 as the date of the EU directive coming into force. Following on from the previous Member, are there any plans to bring in legislation to pre-empt that so that we can be moving rather than waiting? Has there also been any discussion about mutual recognition with the authorities across the water so that we can have a system that applies across the entire British Isles?

Mr Durkan: I thank Mr Weir for his question. The timetable for the implementation of mutual recognition of penalty points will be dependent on the progress made in assessing how parity in the counting down of penalty points across both jurisdictions can be achieved and on the continuing work on the prosecution of offences. I remain extremely keen to implement mutual recognition as soon as possible, but I recognise that we need to do so confident that there is unlikely to be a successful legal challenge to what is groundbreaking work. The issue of mutual recognition between us, the Republic of Ireland, and England, Scotland and Wales, for example, is one that has been raised with me recently and one that I will raise at the next NSMC meeting.

Mr McElduff: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. The Minister will be aware of my party's total opposition to the introduction of the levy for HGVs travelling into the North. Is he aware of serious disquiet among hauliers in the South and among businesses in all parts of the island regarding this levy? In his discussions with the Irish Government, has he encountered any appetite on their part for introducing a reciprocal levy, which would be a disaster?

Mr Durkan: I thank Mr McElduff for that question. I am well aware of his party's position on the matter, and I am sure that he is well aware of mine and the fight that I fought to resist having to enforce legislation here that was implemented from elsewhere. I am aware of disquiet among hauliers and other businesses in the Republic around this legislation, and that is more around the legislation than the fact that the DOE will be enforcing it as opposed to the DVLA. In fact, over the weekend, I was, I suppose, approached by a couple of different businesses in the Republic and had similar discussions with them.

I do detect from the Minister in the Republic of Ireland Government an appetite to help me to gain the evidence that will be required to show that the levy is detrimental to the economy in Donegal and in other border areas on both sides of the border. The damage to trade could well take place on both sides of the border. There is a review ongoing by the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment of the cost of the haulage industry and the cost of doing business in the haulage industry. I very much hope to tie into that and to figure into that hard evidence from hauliers and from other businesses on how this levy is affecting them. It was the sheer lack of this type of evidence that was used as an excuse, if you like, by Robert Goodwill MP not to grant exemptions here.

Mr I McCrea: I agree with the Minister's comments. As I have said before, one road death is too many. I certainly do not think that it is beyond our ambition to try to achieve zero road deaths. The Minister referred to drug- and drink-driving. He will be aware that detecting people who are drug-driving is very difficult. Was there any discussion about or is the Minister aware of any possible technologies that could be used to try to detect drug-driving? It is probably more overlooked because of the lack of technology.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for his very pertinent question. Often, it appears that our focus is on drink-driving, and, while drink-driving remains painfully high, when we look at the causation factors for fatal collisions, drug-driving is well up there as well. It is currently an offence here in the North to drive when under the influence of drink or drugs. The prosecution of this offence requires evidence of impairment at the time of driving, and, all too often and all too sadly, we do not have that evidence until after the event. Again, all too often, it is obtained through a post mortem.

While we have significantly more deaths and serious injuries on our roads through drink-driving, as I said, drugs still figure extremely highly. Last year, six people were killed due to driving while impaired by drugs, whether illegal drugs or, indeed, legal prescription drugs. That is a growing concern. I plan to address this issue with the creation of a similar offence to that recently introduced in Britain that will help to better detect and collect evidence from drivers who are suspected of being impaired through drugs. In effect, this move will bring drug-driving detection into line with drink-driving detection. Proposals for change here will be informed by the work ongoing in Britain and Ireland, but, given the complexity of the issues involved, it is unlikely that the Bill could be taken forward before the next Assembly mandate. In the meantime, I welcome the progress in developing a Road Traffic Bill in Ireland, which will include a range of measures, including the roadside testing of drivers for the presence of drugs. I look forward to the harmonisation with that up here. It would pretty ridiculous if someone could be caught for drug-driving in Donegal and be able to avoid detection just a minute or two down the road.

Mr A Maginness: I thank the Minister for his statement and look forward to even greater cooperation between North and South on road safety. Minister, your Department will endure very considerable cuts. Will those impact on road safety, North and South?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for his question. Since a Budget for 2015-16 has not yet been agreed, I cannot provide a full assessment of how resource pressures will impact on any area of my Department or on our road safety partners. I can assure you that I remain fully committed to continuing to work with stakeholders to improve road safety and reduce casualties. However, reductions in funding will make a number of activities a lot more challenging, including, as Ms Lo referred to earlier, the creation and airing of road safety advertising. There will also be an impact on road safety grants that are made to community groups and on our road safety education programme that we carry out in conjunction with schools.

I am very conscious that it is not just cuts to my Department's budget that will impact on road safety. Cuts to the Regional Development budget will obviously have an impact on roads maintenance, and where you have street lights that are out and potholes and gullies that cannot be cleaned as regularly as they should be, there will be a detrimental impact on road safety. That is without doubt. Furthermore, one would imagine that the cuts to the police as a result of cuts to the Department of Justice's budget will lead to fewer police on the road to carry out traffic activities.

There is no doubt that the financial situation will require us to continue — in fact, to start — to work in a more joined-up way across government to do things that make all of us, as road users, improve our behaviour and reduce the likelihood of fatalities and casualties on our roads.

Mr Spratt: I want to go back to the themes of justice and policing that the Minister has just mentioned. The police reduced its road traffic branch long before there were any cuts, and it is now merely a service that deals with motorway policing. Given the detrimental effect that that has on fatal road accidents, has he had any discussions with the police to fully re-establish that branch and make it effective to deal with road safety issues?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for his question. My officials are in constant contact with their counterparts in the PSNI and, indeed, the PSNI is an integral member of our road safety working group. I have had discussions with a succession of acting chief constables on that and on road safety issues.

Last Wednesday night, I was out on the ground, or in a car rather, with PSNI traffic officers in Derry and had a look at the type of work that they do. It is extremely important work, but, while they were not crying about it, it is painfully evident that there is not enough of them to do that work and that they are being spread very thin. We went to a speeding checkpoint, stayed there for 15 minutes and then had to go somewhere else.

One thing that very much impressed me that evening was that we went to Bridgend on the Derry-Donnegal border and met some guards. There is ongoing collaborative cross-border drink-driving project, and that was very good to see. I am aware of the pressures facing the police budget. I have concerns about the impact of budget cuts on how many officers they have to carry out this job, but I have also raised with the PSNI how they spend the reducing budget that they have.

Mr Dallat: The Minister has just alluded to the question I was going to ask. He represents a border area where there have been appalling abuses of the road traffic laws by a small number of people on both sides of the border. Is the Minister satisfied that the level of cooperation between an Garda Síochána and the PSNI is sufficient to identify the people who have contributed so much to the heartache of families who, at times, have had multiple members wiped out by, largely, speeding offences, but by other traffic offences as well?

Mr Durkan: I thank Mr Dallat for that question. He is correct. There have been awful abuses of laws, and there have been even more awful losses of lives in that border area, and in others across the North and South. I am sure that collaboration between police services in both jurisdictions is good, but I will never be content that it cannot be better. I will continue to, and constantly, push for increased and improved collaboration on this and many other issues.

Mr Allister: The Minister has often spoken of the connection between speeding and fatalities on our roads. He will be aware of the recent publicity about the shocking scale of the number of drivers from the Irish Republic who are detected speeding in Northern Ireland but not pursued in respect of penalty and penalties outstanding. Did he raise that issue with his Southern counterparts or has he taken any steps with other Ministers to seek to better that situation and to act upon it?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for his question, and I thank him for highlighting a most unsatisfactory situation, which, no, I regret that I did not raise with the Minister from the Republic of Ireland at the meeting. I think that the publicity surrounding that issue emerged, possibly, the day following our meeting, but it is a matter that gives me great concern and it is one that I will raise at a future North/South Ministerial Council meeting.

In answering an earlier question, I alluded to the technical difficulties that have been presented in our attempt to achieve the mutual recognition of penalty points. It is my understanding that some of the difficulties around courts and summonses would be applicable in this case. However, I do not believe that they are in any way insurmountable. If people are speeding on a road in the North of Ireland, it is extremely likely that they are going to continue speeding when they hit the border, and beyond. A dangerous driver in the North is a dangerous driver in the South, and vice versa. There has to be collaboration; we have to work together to eradicate those dangers from our roads.

Mrs Overend: Thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker. I apologise to the Minister for missing the start of his statement, although I was here for the large part of it. I note that illegal fuel laundering was not discussed at the meeting. It is a longstanding problem here in Northern Ireland and is worth £80 million in lost tax revenue. Is it an issue that the Minister will raise at a future meeting?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for her question. I assure her that, in missing the start of my statement, she did not miss much, but she might have missed me saying that this statement is on the transport sector as opposed to the environment sector, where the issue of fuel laundering has been discussed at every North/South Ministerial Council meeting that I have attended. Your party colleague Minister Kennedy is often keen to raise it. The cost of fuel laundering to our economy is huge. In that respect, it is, I suppose, relevant, in a way, to this meeting, given the impact that fuel laundering has on the costs of doing business for legitimate businesses in the haulage industry.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): That concludes questions on the Minister's statement.

Work and Families Bill: Further Consideration Stage

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I call the Minister for Employment and Learning, Mr Stephen Farry, to move the Bill.

Moved. — [Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning).]

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): As no amendments have been tabled, there is no opportunity to discuss the Work and Families Bill today. Members will, of course, be able to have a full debate at Final Stage. Further Consideration Stage is, therefore, concluded. The Bill stands referred to the Speaker.

Child Support Fees Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): I beg to move

That the Child Support Fees Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014 be approved.

The regulations, which came into operation in June 2014, enable my Department to charge collection and enforcement fees for using the statutory child maintenance scheme introduced in 2012 under powers contained in the Child Maintenance Act (Northern Ireland) 2008. The 2012 scheme is delivered by the Child Maintenance Service.

The regulations form part of the wider reforms to rebalance child maintenance policy. The aims of the reforms are to support parents to collaborate and work together; and to create a more efficient and fairer child maintenance system that delivers more money to children and a better value-for-money service to taxpayers.

Before addressing the detail of the regulations, I should perhaps state that the programme of reform began in 2006 when Sir David Henshaw delivered an independent report on the future of child maintenance. His report recommended that the Child Support Agency no longer be the default option for parents. The introduction of fees was also recommended in order to provide both parents with an incentive to collaborate.

Since then, as part of the reform programme, parents on benefits are no longer compelled to apply to the Department to pursue maintenance payments. It is also worth noting that, since 2010, child maintenance has been fully disregarded for the purposes of assessing benefit entitlement. The 2008 Child Maintenance Act provided the powers to introduce the 2012 child maintenance scheme.

The reforms are designed to incentivise parents to take financial responsibility for their children and to encourage them to collaborate in the best interests of their children. Evidence suggests that children do better when their parents work together. A dual approach is being followed to increase the number of parents who work together to agree child maintenance rather than relying on intervention by the Department.

First, parents are supported to work together, not only on child maintenance but through the whole range of issues faced following a separation. Secondly, fees will act as an incentive for parents to consider whether they could set up a more collaborative family-based child arrangement without automatically turning to the statutory scheme. The new 2012 statutory scheme was introduced using a phased approach from December 2012. Following assurances that the processes, procedures and client interfaces were working well, the scheme was opened to all applicants in November 2013. The 2012 scheme operates alongside the two earlier child maintenance schemes, which have been in place since 1993 and 2003.

Initial reports are that the 2012 scheme is a great improvement on previous schemes. Customer satisfaction is at 73% compared with 55% on the older schemes. Anyone making an application to the 2012 statutory scheme must go through the child maintenance choices service. This provides free, impartial information and support on the various ways to set up maintenance arrangements, and it gives parents the information that they need to consider what arrangements are best for them.

The regulations introduce collection fees for any parents using the statutory collect and pay service. Sir David Henshaw's report recommended fees as a balanced incentive to encourage parents to consider whether the statutory service is necessary for them.

The collection fee payable by non-resident parents is 20% of the daily amount of child support maintenance that they are liable to pay. The fee payable by a person with care is 4% of the maintenance collected by the Department. It is only fair that both parents should make a financial contribution towards the cost of the service that both are using.

I must emphasise that fees are charged only on money actually collected by the Department. Non-resident parents face by far the highest charges, reflecting the fact that they have greater control over whether they use the collection service. There is no collection fee for parents who make their own family-based arrangement or who use the direct pay service provided by the child maintenance service. The decision not to introduce application fees in Northern Ireland has ensured that the statutory scheme remains open and accessible to those who cannot make their own family-based arrangements. That is a difference between the scheme that currently operates in the rest of the United Kingdom and here in Northern Ireland.

Direct pay is when the Child Maintenance Service calculates the amount of maintenance payable, and the non-resident parent then makes payments directly to the parent with care. That provides a way for parents to access the statutory service in a way that can help to rebuild trust between them.

Before fees were introduced, 24% of cases on the 2012 scheme used direct pay. Since the introduction of fees, the percentage of cases using direct pay has more than doubled to almost 60%. That shows that collection fees are having the desired effect in encouraging more parents to work together. Staff in the Child Maintenance Service have been working hard to ensure that parents are aware of the introduction of fees as well as how to avoid them.

The regulations also include a safeguard to prevent non-resident parents being forced onto the chargeable collect and pay service by the parent with care and also allows the Department to deduct fees from benefits in the same way that it can deduct maintenance owed. In addition, the regulations make provision for the payment of an enforcement charge by a non-resident parent when the Department makes a deduction from earnings order, a regular deduction order, a lump sum deduction order or an application for a liability order. Before the regulations came into operation, there was no financial incentive for non-resident parents to pay maintenance in full and on time. The introduction of enforcement fees is intended to act as a deterrent to encourage non-resident parents to comply with their commitments, and I think that it will also help to offset the cost of administrative action to enforce compliance.

The enforcement fees are as follows: deduction from earnings order, £50; regular deduction order, £50; lump sum deduction order, £200; and liability order, £300. It is estimated that the collection and enforcement fees will generate a revenue of about £1 million a year. That will provide a financial contribution towards the cost of the Child Maintenance Service, which will continue to remain heavily subsidised by the taxpayer.

Although the introduction of fees for child maintenance is a significant change, the aim of these reforms is to promote collaboration between separated parents to ensure that their children achieve the best outcomes in life.

Mr Brady (The Deputy Chairperson of the Committee for Social Development): Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. The Committee for Social Development considered the Department's proposal to make the Child Support Fees Regulations at its meeting on 5 June 2014 and considered the resulting statutory rule at its meeting on 3 July 2014. The Committee was supportive of the regulations.

The Committee took note that, although the primary power for child support fees is set out in the Child Maintenance Act 2008, this subordinate legislation is required to enable the full introduction of fees. The Committee noted that, among other measures, the regulations will introduce fees for collect and pay services in the 2012 statutory child maintenance scheme as an incentive for parents to work together to reach their own family-based arrangement or to pay each other directly via direct pay within the statutory scheme if they cannot reach their own family-based arrangement.

Under the equivalent regulations in Britain, there is a £20 applications fee to access the 2012 child maintenance scheme. The Committee is pleased at the previous Minister's decision that residents in the North will not be charged such a fee. Of course, it may sound like a small saving, but £20 is by no means an insignificant sum, and the removal of any financial burden to claimants of child support fees is very welcome, as it is in any circumstance.

In conclusion, the Committee for Social Development is supportive of the regulations and recommends that the statutory rule be confirmed by the Assembly.

Mr Wilson: I echo what the Deputy Chairman of the Committee said. The Committee did indeed consider —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Could you use the microphone? It helps Hansard staff.

Mr Wilson: Yes, sorry.

The Committee considered the regulations. Anyone who has dealt with people who have had to go through the Child Support Agency or the Child Maintenance Service will know that it was far from satisfactory and was one of the arms of government that had a very poor record, first of all, in collecting money where it was difficult to collect and, secondly, in dealing with changes in circumstances and queries. Sometimes, it was the parent with care who was adversely affected, and it was sometimes the parent who was having to make the payment.

The Committee had two concerns about the scheme. The first is that, where there cannot be cooperation between parents — according to what the Minister said, that is still the case with 40% of people who are receiving child maintenance — the fees, in effect, mean that a quarter of the payment that is received is lost in administration charges imposed by the Child Maintenance Service.

The second is — I hope that the Minister will keep a very close eye on this — that, given the chaotic way in which the Child Support Agency or Child Maintenance Service sometimes administered dealings with parents, I hope that, now that a 24% charge is being imposed, we will see greater diligence so that we see fewer of the kind of mistakes that were made in the past or, indeed, what could sometimes be regarded as lack of forcefulness in pursuing situations where payments were not being kept up to date. The Minister pointed out that that will still not cover the full costs of the service. Nevertheless, now that charges of that level are being levied, there should be an improvement in the service for those who find that, where there is non-cooperation, the agency is not pursuing the matter as quickly as it should.

Those are the only two caveats that I would attach to this. A large number of people will still have to go through the child maintenance arrangements, and they will now be paying in administrative charges a substantial part of the money that would normally have gone to the child. If that is the case, there should be a proper, effective service for the parents who, because they cannot reach agreement, find themselves in the scheme.

1.15 pm

Mr Storey: I thank the Deputy Chair of the Committee for Social Development, Mr Brady, for his comments and for the work of the Committee in relation to the issue. Turning to the comments of my colleague Mr Wilson, I think that we all need to set it in the context of the concern that we have all had, as public representatives who, in time past, have had to deal with the child maintenance service. In the past we clearly saw a system that was not fit for purpose for either component part of what is always a very difficult situation. It is not a process that is devoid of dealing with realities; we are dealing with families, children and very challenging circumstances.

I am conscious, and have been since taking office, that there was a good-news story about the progress that has been made in the child maintenance service. Look at the satisfaction rate that I referred to earlier. I suppose that you have to take any survey with a degree of caution, but moving from 55% to 73% shows that it is working in the right way. Given what is happening across the water, clearly the introduction of the application fee, which we decided here in Northern Ireland not to do, has encouraged those who, for a variety of reasons, some very complex, have not felt it necessary to become involved in the scheme. I think that we have demonstrated that what is being delivered here in Northern Ireland is immensely better than what is in the rest of the United Kingdom.

There is a lesson for us to learn. I have had this discussion with my officials. It goes right across every part of the Administration and Executive. You can have a policy intent, but if the implementation of that policy intent is haphazard or far from fit for purpose, you lose the focus of the policy intent. I do not think that anybody disagrees that the reasons set in the new scheme need to be achieved and are the right parameters to operate in, but it is how it is implemented and operated. That is why, with the way that the scheme is operating, progress is being made. I hope that, as it rolls out, it will continue to be a success.

In conclusion, just last week a senior official in my Department received national recognition for the work that was carried out in the reorganisation in the Child Maintenance Service. I am very proud that that official from Northern Ireland was given recognition for the work being done in that organisation.

In conclusion, I am certain that we all want to ensure that all steps possible are taken to assist parents to work together in the best interests of their children. Obviously, the circumstances that face some families are difficult. I know too well just how difficult that can be and the pressures that it can bring to bear on families. I trust that this process will be an advantage to the Child Maintenance Service. I therefore commend the motion to the House.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That the Child Support Fees Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014 be approved.

Child Support (Ending Liability in Existing Cases and Transition to New Calculation Rules) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): I beg to move

That the Child Support (Ending Liability in Existing Cases and Transition to New Calculation Rules) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014 be approved.

These recommendations, which came into operation on 30 June 2014, allow my Department to close down the 1993 and the 2003 child maintenance schemes. Any parents who choose to use statutory schemes can apply to the Child Maintenance Service's 2012 scheme. The 2012 scheme provides a more efficient and fairer child maintenance system, delivering more money to children, as I said, and a better value-for-money service to the taxpayer.

Currently, there are three statutory child maintenance schemes providing for the collection and payment of child maintenance under differing rules: the 1993 scheme, which was established under the Child Support (Northern Ireland) Order 1991; the 2003 scheme, which was set up for all applications received after March 2003, following amendment of that order by the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act (Northern Ireland) 2000; and the 2012 scheme, which was established under the Child Maintenance Act (Northern Ireland) 2008.

The 2012 scheme was introduced on a phased basis in December 2012, and later opened to all new applicants from November 2013. The scheme introduced a new way of calculating child support maintenance based on historical income and a number of other important changes in relation to child maintenance. The transition period over which liability in existing cases under the 1993 and 2003 schemes will be brought to an end is expected to run until the end of 2017 and early 2018. Any parents using those schemes will have their case closed. During the case closure process, the Child Maintenance Choices service will provide help and support to separated parents. Parents will be encouraged to consider family-based arrangements, but, where that is not possible, can make an application to the 2012 scheme.

The closure of the 1993 and 2003 schemes will not remove non-resident parents' responsibilities to pay any child maintenance arrears that have accrued, unless those arrears meet the limited criteria for write-off; for example, where the parent with care no longer wants the arrears collected. The Child Maintenance Service will continue to ensure that parents meet their financial responsibilities for their children.

The regulations specify that the power to close cases will be exercised in stages known as segments. The order in which cases will be closed will be carefully controlled. The first cases on the 1993 and 2003 schemes to be selected for closure are those where the Child Maintenance Service has assessed that the non-resident parent does not have to pay any maintenance. The Child Maintenance Service has started the process of closing 1,129 of those segment 1 cases. Those will be followed by cases where there is a liability but no payment is being made. In both scenarios, there will be no payments to disrupt when the case is closed. The order of case closure has been determined so as to minimise payment disruption as far as possible.

Accordingly, the last cases to enter the process will be those where compliance is hard won. The ending liability scheme, which is published on the departmental website, provides more detail for parents on how and when cases on the 1993 and 2003 schemes will be closed.

Having all child maintenance cases together under the 2012 scheme will simplify the process, not only for staff in the Child Maintenance Service but, more importantly, for parents.

Mr Brady (The Deputy Chairperson of the Committee for Social Development): Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. The Committee for Social Development considered the Department's proposal to make these regulations at its meeting on 5 June 2014 and the resulting statutory rule at its meeting on 3 July 2014. The Committee was supportive of the regulations.

The Committee noted that the regulations will enable the 2012 child maintenance scheme to gradually replace the 1993 and 2003 schemes and ensure a smooth transition to the new scheme. The Committee notes that the regulations will make provision to end liability in cases on the 1993 and 2003 child maintenance schemes. They also ensure that people who wish to remain on the statutory scheme can exercise that choice and are handled by the new 2012 child maintenance scheme. The Department has advised the Committee that the powers will be exercised in such a way to ensure that payment to existing cases on the 1993 and 2003 schemes is minimised as far as possible.

The regulations specify the powers for cases to be closed. However, it should be noted that arrears will remain due and parents will not be relieved of their liability to pay unless those arrears meet the limited criteria for write-off. That could be, for example, where the parent with care no longer wants the arrears collected. Importantly, the continuity of maintenance payments to the parent with care will be protected.

I am sure that I speak for all members of the Committee when I say that any changes to child support must keep the welfare of the child as a key focus and priority. The regulations are designed to reduce any disruption in maintenance flowing to children and, in that sense, can be seen as a positive and protective measure.

In conclusion, the Committee for Social Development recommends that the statutory rule be confirmed by the Assembly.

Mr Storey: I thank Mr Brady, the Deputy Chair of the Committee, for his comments. I also thank the Committee for its work on this. I concur with Mr Brady's comment, which really follows on from what I said previously, that at the focus and centre of this is the continued welfare of children.

Given the difficulties and challenges that there were in the two previous schemes, I can well imagine the concerns and nervousness that there are in relation to that. That is always the case in any of these processes, when you move, in this case, from two schemes to one. However, I think that progress to date indicates that the central focus of what we are about is to ensure that the welfare of children is paramount. As well as that, the comment that I made earlier in relation to the segments and the way in which this process will be handled will ensure that it is carefully controlled. I will ensure that that is the case within the Child Maintenance Service.

The Child Maintenance Service is the one place that I have not had the opportunity to visit to date. However, plans are afoot for me to do so before Christmas. As Minister, I want to satisfy myself about this. It is very easy to come to the Chamber, read the prepared script and do what you have to do, but another part of our responsibility and duty is to ensure that we see at first hand the work that is being done, take on board the concerns that are expressed and continue to make progress on the issue.

We need to underline and emphasise that the statutory scheme should only be used where family-based arrangements are not possible. For that reason, it is important that all cases are managed on the 2012 scheme which, as we have said, is better for children and parents. Bringing all these cases under the one set of rules will, I trust, simplify the process for all concerned. Therefore I commend the motion to the House.

Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle.

Members, the details of the motion give some indication of the wide range of work undertaken by the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) in its work of contributing to a better and more efficient delivery of public services. PAC reports have dealt with a number of important issues covering areas such as: contract management, procurement practices, the need for greater focus on efficiency savings, performance management, strengthening fraud investigative skills, valuing whistle-blowers and improving service delivery in the interests of our citizens, including our children.

Although there is not time for me to go into all the items listed in the motion, I will take a minute to remind you of the role of the Public Accounts Committee and the scope of the Committee's work.

1.30 pm

The Committee is a Standing Committee of the Assembly and was set up under the NI Act 1998 to:

The accounts of all Departments and, indeed, of most public sector bodies are prepared and laid by the Comptroller and Auditor General (C&AG), who is the head of the Audit Office here. The Comptroller and Auditor General may also make value-for-money reports and reports on efficiency and effectiveness.

The Audit Office's role is to examine closely public expenditure from a position of independence from government. I commend it for the excellent support that it provides to the Committee.

I have in the past described the Audit Office as a natural scrutiny partner to the Assembly, complementing the system of checks and balances that are fundamental to a healthy democracy. That scrutiny role will be all the more significant in today's economic climate, as value for money in the public sector becomes even more important in these times of austerity.

The current budgetary pressures facing the Executive make the PAC's role even more critical, as every pound of public expenditure needs to extract maximum value. The PAC plays a key role in maximising value for money in public expenditure. By honing in on instances of public funds being spent unwisely, the PAC can then make recommendations for improvements, which, if implemented, can ensure that better value for money is achieved.

The PAC plays a constructive role in pointing out the lessons that need to be learned to improve performance. Whilst our inquiries tend to be specific to a particular Department or body and the issues pertaining to it, there are lessons to be learned throughout government. PAC reports this year highlighted a number of lessons that can be applied right across the public sector.

I wish to emphasise that the PAC's key role is to apply the lessons that have been learnt from our inquiries. It aims to be constructive in its recommendations and to offer guidance about what needs to change to avoid a repeat of those events.

In my time as Chair of the PAC, I have seen similar issues come up time and time again. That was the case with the report on improving pupil attendance, which highlighted the fact that very little progress had been made since an Audit Office report back in 2004 recommended an attendance strategy. In 2014, its follow-up report highlighted the fact that an attendance strategy was still outstanding. The PAC decided that that was worthy of further investigation, and we have made recommendations. My Committee colleague Mr McQuillan will talk about it in more detail later.

Public financial government is at its most effective when all the participants are thinking about and striving for excellence. That means not just the Committee but the auditors, the accounting officers and the civil servants. There is a shared interest between the PAC and DFP in working in partnership on the stewardship of public money. I see that as an important principle that should underscore the relationship that exists between the two to ensure value for money in the delivery of our public services.

I welcome the recent work undertaken on drafting a protocol on the memoranda of reply (MORs) between the Committee and DFP. The PAC regards MORs as being an integral part of the public accountability cycle and monitors the Department's progress on the implementation of its recommendations. I therefore acknowledge the important role that DFP plays in working with Departments on the production of MORs to ensure that Departments respond to each PAC recommendation as fully and as positively as possible.

I have heard it said that the PAC has created a risk-chill effect in Departments. Some critics would say that that has resulted in Departments avoiding taking risks because of the fear of being called before the Committee, thus dampening innovation.

It is the Committee's job to hold Departments and accounting officers to account for their spending decisions, judging whether they have spent wisely and well. When the C&AG's value-for-money reports are selected by the Committee, the relevant accounting officer will be asked to attend to give evidence in open session on how and why decisions were made. Admittedly, this is an exposed position for a senior official to be in and therefore should be regarded as an incentive to Departments to prevent this arising.

However, it is not to create a risk-chill factor and it is not the PAC's primary focus to increase the capacity of bodies to innovate. The PAC primarily looks at expenditure that has been incurred and tries to ensure that where mistakes have been made, lessons have been learned. It will make recommendations which would support greater joined-up working.

I now wish to address the report that was published this year by the Committee in respect of the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI). AFBI is the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development's largest arm's-length body. AFBI carries out scientific testing for DARD and other public and commercial bodies to satisfy statutory requirements mainly around animal and plant health. The institute also carries out research and development for DARD and other clients. Between 2006-07 and 2011-12, DARD provided AFBI with £253 million in grant aid.

The Committee examined AFBI's performance since its establishment in the key areas of financial management; scientific testing undertaken for DARD; the programme of R&D work delivered for the Department; governance of AFBI; and oversight of the institute by DARD. Overall, the Committee was disappointed at the extent of shortcomings in AFBI and at the unacceptable delay in introducing improvements. The Committee formed the view that, until recently, DARD had abdicated its responsibility, as parent Department, for proper oversight of the institute.

The Committee found that proper costing systems were not introduced in AFBI until seven years after its establishment, meaning that the institute did not have the proper tools to measure its operational efficiency. Despite this, DARD continued to fund the institute to the tune of £40 million annually, with little assurance that it was receiving good value for money.

AFBI's corporate costs have been alarmingly high. Between 2006-07 and 2010-11, these amounted to almost £100 million, £51 million of which related to the institute's estate. The Committee was very concerned at the lack of action to reduce the high state costs in the 10 years since a project board had been set up to prepare for AFBI's establishment.

The Committee also identified poor management with regard to fees charged by AFBI for commercial work. Until 2011, AFBI calculated fees using a historical overhead rate, which dated back to at least 2003, with the result that at least £3.5 million income was lost. The Committee made recommendations which aim to ensure that AFBI's fees are set on the principle of recovering the full costs incurred in delivering commercial work.

Scientific testing for DARD is AFBI's most significant operational activity in both volume and cost terms. The Committee was therefore disappointed that very few unit costs had been calculated for this work. In the absence of costs, the Committee could not understand how DARD had any notion of whether it was receiving value for money for its significant investment in this area.

The management of the research and development programme delivered by AFBI for DARD can only be described as unacceptably poor. The Committee identified some alarming weaknesses in that area. The forecasting of the costs of individual projects at the outset was so inaccurate that 39 were not subjected to the required full economic appraisal. Projects examined by the Committee had overspent by almost £13 million. For many years, ongoing costs were not monitored, which left AFBI and DARD unaware of significant cost escalations for numerous individual projects. When DARD finally undertook a meaningful review in 2012, it immediately terminated 52 projects, which had cumulative costs to that date of over £18 million.

A range of enhanced governance measures have been introduced in AFBI, and DARD has strengthened its oversight of the institute. The Committee views the acceptance of its recommendations by DARD and AFBI as evidence that they recognise the need for improvement. However, the Committee considers that it took far too long to put such improvements in place. Indeed, the extent of shortcomings identified led the Committee to conclude that best value for money had not been achieved in the delivery of AFBI's operations. The Committee was particularly disappointed that many weaknesses replicated those identified by a 1995 Westminster PAC review of science service, which was AFBI's predecessor, and that the recommendations from that report were not implemented in the institute. Consequently, we intend to follow up on that area to gain assurance that improvements are being implemented and sustained in practice.

Go raibh míle maith agat. I commend the motion to the House.

Mr Girvan: I appreciate that the Public Accounts Committee has sometimes come in for a certain amount of flak in relation to the reports that we have produced. One that I want to speak on is to do with a whistle-blower's report associated with the Department for Regional Development and the appointment of a contractor to provide signage.

Mr Wilson: I thank the Member for giving way. Does he accept that some of the flak is justifiable? First of all, picking over the bones of some of the projects with hindsight can sometimes reveal things that were not apparent at the start. Secondly, the detail and the intricacies of some of the recommendations creates extra work for Departments. Thirdly, the sometimes unfair way in which the scrutiny is done introduces a chill factor, and that risks are not taken by Departments where sometimes they should be taken.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute, as well as having seven minutes to make his presentation.

Mr Girvan: Normally, most reports are brought about by whistle-blowers. Sometimes, that can lead to extra work for Departments. I appreciate there are occasions when you have to take risks to move forward and that risk-taking, sometimes, is removed.

The report that I am dealing with today involved a very clear whistle-blower. Some people might have perceived him to be a disgruntled contractor who basically did not get the crack of the work that he had won. It was identified that there were difficulties, but the Department's internal audit identified that no problem whatsoever was associated with the matter. As a consequence, the whistle-blower's concerns were not taken seriously by the Department. Between 2005 and 2010, the contractor was contacted by telephone on only one occasion and was interviewed once.

The Department's internal audit showed up nothing amiss. When a full investigation was conducted, however, it was identified that this contractor had lost out significantly as a result of what had gone on in the Department. The business went bankrupt and is no longer trading, whether as a consequence of what was going on or not. I appreciate that there was a contractor who received numerous orders prior to his contract finishing, which would have covered this gentleman's work over a period of time. That was demonstrated quite clearly in our evidence sessions.

1.45 pm

A recommendation was made to the Department of Finance and Personnel, and, to give it credit, it has already put in place a centralised service to provide expertise. Through the Northern Ireland Civil Service's centralised fraud investigation service, a mechanism has been put in place to ensure that what was identified at that stage will be flagged up early and that information will also be shared among Departments. Unfortunately, the report identified that not all Departments have the internal expertise to investigate potential fraud to the level that would be required by the PSNI to scrutinise investigations and present cases to be brought forward for prosecution, which possibly should have happened on many occasions.

The report also highlighted the difficulties for members of staff in those government bodies. They get used to using a certain contractor and are maybe not totally aware that they are no longer using the services of that contractor. That management issue needs to be identified. It needs to be ensured that, when tenders are won, certain people who used to get orders for that service are taken off the list and that a new contractor gets the orders. That needs to happen and to be disseminated to staff. The whole information-sharing aspect needs to be dealt with.

There was also a report on Northern Ireland Water, which brought out major problems. We will maybe not go into the details of what happened in many other areas, but this was to do with Northern Ireland Water's awarding of contracts for the supply of water meters and how that had been mismanaged. The report identified all sorts of problems whereby the people who were supplying the water meters were told to submit invoices for £20,000 or below.

If it is discovered that invoice slicing is or has been going on without a reasonable explanation, that is identified as being a potential or major fraud investigation. Somebody could be saying, "I need cash flow to keep my business going". That might well be the case, but there were major areas in which Northern Ireland Water was falling down in passing information through to the contractor who was supplying and fitting water meters. They were making numerous calls to areas. The information on when they could go to those locations to fit meters was available, but, unfortunately, that was not making its way back to the supplier of the meters. Sometimes, they were being paid umpteen times for visiting the same location.

The policing of that mechanism was not very good. Problems were identified, and invoice slicing was a big issue. Many recommendations were made. There was a clear weakness in the planned scope and methodology of the investigation. Despite references being made to the Department —

Mr Wilson: Will the Member give way on that point?

Mr Girvan: I will indeed.

Mr Wilson: I do not know the details of the case, but does the Member accept that, very often, the people who criticise Departments for invoice slicing, as he calls it, or cutting down the size of contracts are the very people in the Assembly who call, time and time again, for more work to be given to small local businesses? The way to do that, of course, is to break contracts down in the way that is suggested.

Mr Girvan: That is why I made the point about people getting payments as opposed to waiting on a very long contract and ending up with millions. The overall cost of the contract is what really matters. I do believe that —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Girvan: — proper invoicing should be dealt with. I apologise, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, for running over. I did not really get into detail on the second part. Thank you.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Thank your colleague.

Mr Hussey: May I remain seated, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Yes.

Mr Hussey: I begin by paying tribute to the Clerk and Committee support staff for their assistance throughout the past year. My party colleague Michael Copeland, an active member of the Committee, is absent due to ill health. I am sure you will join me in wishing him a speedy return to good health and thank him for his participation in the Committee in recent years.

I wish to address the report published this year by the Committee on DCAL's management of major capital projects.

In the period 2008-2011, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure had an unprecedented target to deliver £229 million capital investment in the Northern Ireland culture, arts and leisure infrastructure. This resulted in the delivery of a number of capital projects, including the Grand Opera House, the Ulster Museum, the Crescent Arts Centre, the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland, Tollymore National Outdoor Centre, the MAC and the Lyric Theatre.

The projects have undoubtedly enhanced culture and arts provision in the local economy. However, this has come at a significant cost to the public purse. The projects cumulatively ended up costing £103.4 million, 32% more than the original estimate of £78.5 million. The projects also encountered significant delays.

The Committee was concerned that despite the availability of extensive guidance, public bodies continue to make the same mistakes around planning, governance, project management and procurement that the Committee has observed and reported on over many years.

Approvals for projects were based upon business cases that were not robust and were overly optimistic about what could be delivered. That resulted in projects being re-scoped, which contributed to the significant cost increases and time delays. There is a clear lesson here that public bodies must ensure that robust project management arrangements are put in place so that projects can be delivered on time and within budget.

In total, £87.4 million — 84% of the £103.4 million investment — was provided by the public purse. Despite having a lack of experience and expertise in delivering capital projects of this scale, DCAL failed to seek technical advice at the appropriate time and provided grant recipients with too much autonomy in making key decisions. This is clearly unacceptable: public bodies must seek technical advice and use it to inform key decisions. All key decisions on projects of this scale should be authorised by the public body in consultation with technical advisers.

There was something of a furore when the Committee's report was published. Many took exception to the Committee's conclusions. It may be helpful if I emphasise a number of completely unacceptable departures from long-established principles of good practice that were made in awarding the Lyric Theatre rebuild contract.

A number of unexplained adjustments were made to the tender submissions. Despite £413,000 being stripped out from one of the tenders, that cost was later paid in full. The tendering documentation to support the tender decision was destroyed promptly after the tender evaluation meeting. The sponsoring bodies — DCAL and the Arts Council — or their technical advisers — the CPD — had no oversight of the tender evaluation process and were unable to assure the Committee that it had been completed in accordance with good practice. Finally, we discovered that the preferred bidder provided a donation of £150,000 to the Lyric Theatre. In light of this sequence of events, the Committee stated that it was left with a strong impression that the outcome of the tender process had been manipulated, and it remains of that view.

DCAL accepted all the PAC's recommendations and has taken a number of actions. It now requires all capital projects to follow best practice project delivery arrangements as set out in 'Achieving Excellence in Construction'. It has revised and updated a service level agreement with the Central Procurement Directorate of the Department of Finance and Personnel, formally documenting roles and responsibilities. DCAL also intends to develop procedures to ensure that local operating agreements are put in place with the Central Procurement Directorate for all major capital projects and programmes.

In response to this report, the Department of Finance and Personnel committed to updating its guidance on the use of grant in procurement to ensure that all records of procurement associated with grant awards are retained in line with public procurement policy. Also, Departments and arm's-length bodies will be required to obtain written confirmation from a centre of procurement expertise that procurement guidelines have been met and that a contract represents value for money before a grant recipient is permitted to award that contract.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: As Question Time begins at 2.00 pm, I suggest that the House take its ease until then. The debate will continue after Question Time, when the next Member to speak will be Anna Lo.

Oral Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Questions 1, 5, 7 and 13 have been withdrawn.

Commissioner for Victims and Survivors: Appointment

2. Mr Ramsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the appointment of a Commissioner for Victims and Survivors. (AQO 7101/11-15)

Mr P Robinson (The First Minister): The deputy First Minister and I remain committed to providing the best services possible for victims and survivors. This includes ensuring that they have proper representation and a collective voice through their own commissioner. Unfortunately, the current process has not produced a sizeable pool of appointable candidates. We are looking at options on how to widen the pool of appointable candidates, and we will release further details of this very shortly. However, as this is still a live competition, it would not be appropriate to comment further.

Mr Ramsey: I thank the First Minister for his response. Clearly, there will be victims and survivors across Northern Ireland who are disappointed that we are not progressing this matter. First Minister, we do not want a rerun of the previous appointment that caused a lot of distress and discomfort to the victims. Can you outline to the House any time frame on going forward, taking the point that there have been delays? Is there any time frame in which you can assure the House that that will happen?

Mr P Robinson: I do not think that I can agree with him about there being any concern about the previous commissioner. Kathryn Stone was a first-class commissioner. I think that, perhaps, he may be referring to the appointment of four commissioners on a previous occasion. Some of them were slightly dodgy, I think, as the House will know. [Interruption.]

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order, please.

Mr P Robinson: I think there are lessons to be learned from all that —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order, please.

Mr P Robinson: Sorry.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Sorry, I have to ask you to resume your seat. I will not accept any remarks from a sedentary position.

Mr P Robinson: I think that the point that he makes, nonetheless, is important. It is essential that we get this right. There are people relying on the commissioner to speak for them, and it has to be a commissioner they can identify with. That is what the deputy First Minister and I are working on. I think that the timescale is as soon as possible. We have to resolve the issue of whether we widen the pool and, if so, how we do it.

Mr Spratt: What progress has been made on severely disabled pensions, and will it seek to redefine “victim”?

Mr P Robinson: I think that many people have recognised that, when the initial assessments were made for victims at the time of the incident that affected their lives, in some cases, if not most, there was not the expectation that some of these victims would still have been alive today. That is the blunt truth. Therefore, I think that the assessments were less than were necessary for them to have a full life for a prolonged period. In that context, my colleagues and I have been consulting on a Bill that would come before the Assembly that would provide a pension for people who are severely disabled. I think that is important legislation, and I hope that it receives the support of the House. It would augment whatever previous settlement that there had been with them.

Nothing can compensate for the injury that has been caused to them, but we cannot leave people who have gone through that severe pain, anguish and a prolonged period of living with a disability without giving them the assistance that we can because they were not able to be employed and were not able to build up National Insurance and are, therefore, at a disadvantage from the rest of the community. It is an important piece of legislation for the House, and I hope that it will consider it sympathetically and support it.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for his answers thus far. Will he outline which recommendations of the independent assessment of the Victims and Survivors Service (VSS) have been implemented and which remain outstanding?

Mr P Robinson: There was a whole series of recommendations. My recollection is that we have implemented about two thirds of them. If the Committee for the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister wants us to give the Member further details on that, I am quite happy to do that. However, very considerable progress has been made on the implementation of the recommendations.

Mr Nesbitt: I want to acknowledge the First Minister's admission that his party was complicit in appointing what he had described as a dodgy character as a commissioner. I am sure that government is not easy for the First Minister. Is the process that is being run giving a list of deemed appointable candidates? If so, how many people have been deemed to be appointable?

Mr P Robinson: I do not want to go into the details of an open competition, but I can assure the Member that the process is being monitored by the Commissioner for Public Appointments and is being held in accordance with its rules, regulations and guidelines. It will bring to us a list of those who are appointable.

There have been occasions — I will leave this issue to the side so that I can speak more frankly on it — when we have been left with very little choice. On one occasion, I recall being offered only one person to choose from. If the deputy First Minister and I are being asked to make choices, we would like a wide field that we can look at and perhaps agree on an outcome.

Corporation Tax

3. Miss M McIlveen asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on discussions on the devolution of corporation tax powers. (AQO 7102/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: Securing powers to lower corporation tax is a key priority for the Executive to promote the growth of our local economy. As part of our economic pact that was signed last year with the Prime Minister, the United Kingdom Government indicated their intention to make a decision on the devolution of corporation tax powers at the time of the autumn statement, which is on 3 December. That has involved discussions with the Secretary of State, and we also wrote to the Prime Minister to press him to come to a decision quickly and ensure the swift devolution of corporation tax powers.

The reply from the Prime Minister confirmed that the timescale remains the same. Officials have been told that, if a positive decision is made, a Bill could be introduced in the House of Commons very shortly afterwards, but before the election. The Executive's agreement will also be required to approve the devolution of corporation-tax-rate-setting powers and to lay a legislative consent motion before the Assembly. Officials are working to make the necessary arrangements in that respect.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I call Mr Daithí McKay. My apologies, Michelle. Your supplementary question.

Miss M McIlveen: Thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker. I would like to thank the First Minister for his response. Further to that, what does he say to those who oppose corporation tax, on the basis that it breaks up the fiscal union, and do not believe that the Executive has the competence to deal with those increased powers?

Mr P Robinson: Since devolution began in Scotland, we have seen the fiscal responsibilities being divided up between the Treasury and the devolved regions. The Government in Scotland, for instance, has had the power to reduce or increase income tax within certain limits, there are already proposals for various duties such as stamp duty and landfill tax to be devolved to Scotland and Wales, and we ourselves have the power over air passenger duty. That kind of tight fiscal union has already been made more flexible, and I do not think that that argument pertains.

We have very separate and unique circumstances in Northern Ireland. We have a land frontier with a country that has a considerably more attractive — ie, lower — level of corporation tax. We have also come through decades of conflict, and our economy has suffered as a result. Therefore, there is a strong argument that to rebalance the economy in Northern Ireland, which is lagging behind because of our history, we need something that grows the private sector and encourages growth in the economy.

No one has made a better suggestion than that of corporation tax, from which, it is viewed, something like 50,000 additional jobs would come over a period.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I now call Mr McKay.

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Along the same lines, First Minister, can you outline what you believe the priorities should be with fiscal levers other than corporation tax? What conversations has your office had with the business community to ensure that it is part of the conversation, too?

Mr P Robinson: I will take those questions in reverse.

One thing that you can say about the business community in Northern Ireland is that it is always ready and willing to give advice on those and other matters, and it has been doing so consistently. The overwhelming view of the business community is that devolving corporation tax will be good for business and that it will encourage growth, not just of foreign direct investment but of our indigenous companies, giving them a confidence for the future.

The Member asked about other financial levers. I think that I said at a previous Question Time that the Department of Finance and Personnel had looked at a range of fiscal powers to see which ones might be applicable to Northern Ireland, which ones might give us some ability to direct our social and economic policy, which ones we could afford to do and which ones the economy of scale would make it impossible for us to do. At the end of that exercise, we looked at the stamp duty and landfill tax powers that were being offered to Scotland and Wales. I might even add aggregates tax and corporation tax to that, as well as air passenger duty. Those seem to be the parameters within which we will probably have to work. Any of the others are of such complexity that a small area with a population of 1.8 million would find it very difficult to pay the cost of operating the additional taxes without having to increase the burden on its local community to pay for the cost of their operation.

Mr Kinahan: Does the Minister regret wasting time discussing the cost of devolving corporation tax with Her Majesty's Treasury, when the decision was always going to be a political one that would be made in Number 10?

Mr P Robinson: The Member has an imperfect knowledge of the issues that relate to corporation tax. Very significant discussions — indeed, the bulk of discussions with Treasury — have been undertaken on the basis of what the modus operandi of corporation tax would be. We discussed what arrangements would be made if any secondary benefits were to come back to Northern Ireland. We also discussed how we would deal with multinational companies with a base in Northern Ireland and their headquarters in GB and what would happen if they were to transfer their headquarters and attempt to get a larger profit base into Northern Ireland. A range of issues had to be resolved before the political decision could be taken, not least because it relates to how much of a reduction to the block grant there would be as a result of our getting the lever to set our own level of corporation tax.

Mr Agnew: Given the furore that his party has made about the £87 million that we have had to cut to fund welfare, how does the First Minister propose that we pay for a potential cut of £400 million a year if corporation tax is reduced to the level that he has proposed?

Mr P Robinson: He refers to a furore. I object to throwing money away. I like to invest money, and that is a distinction to be made between the two scenarios that he points out. Investing money in your economy to build and grow it seems an imminently sensible position to adopt. Of course, the distinction in all of this is that everybody recognises that, given Northern Ireland's very high dependency on the public sector, we need to rebalance our economy. Everybody has been bandying those words about for years. It has been the mantra of almost every political party. I wonder whether they recognised what it actually means. If you are going to rebalance your economy, you streamline the public sector and grow the private sector. The kind of thing that we are going to be forced to do, because of what has been described as austerity, is offer a voluntary exit scheme to reduce our dependency on 212,000 people employed by the public sector for a population of 1.8 million. I think you can recognise that if you can reduce that level of dependency and, at the same time, grow your private sector, it is a better use of the funds that are available. I do not think that it will be as high as the Member is outlining, but even if it were, the amount of money that you would take out of the public sector for a very limited number of people that would be coming out, compared with the 50,000 that would be coming in over the years, on the balance books, shows that it would be good value for money.

2.15 pm

Mr Allister: Last week, one of the First Minister's party colleagues described devolving corporation tax as a gamble. On the same theme as that of Mr Agnew, how then does the First Minister reach the conclusion that it is safe to gamble with such a substantial, adverse impact on the block grant, particularly as we are now most likely facing further austerity and cuts in a new spending round review?

Mr P Robinson: The Member is not much younger than me, so he has been around in politics for a long time, and he knows that there are very few certainties in politics. To that extent, all that you can ever do is make your best assessment of what the outcomes might be. The fact that every significant commentator, economist and politician who has financial experience has indicated that the provision of corporation tax powers to the Northern Ireland Assembly and the consequent lowering of the level of corporation tax will bring tens of thousands of jobs to Northern Ireland seems to me to be a fairly firm basis for us to move forward. I have not heard any intelligent commentator indicate that it would not add to the number of people in employment in Northern Ireland. Our own Invest Northern Ireland very strongly supports it. It contains the people who are out on the ground right across the world and, particularly, in Northern Ireland. Therefore, they know best what the business community is looking for in order to increase investment or to bring investment to Northern Ireland. All that we ever do in all these circumstances is take the best advice we can from the experiences of others and the knowledge that we have, and we act upon it.

Gender Equality

4. Mrs Cameron asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the actions taken to promote gender equality. (AQO 7103/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: With your permission, Mr Deputy Speaker, I will ask junior Minister Jonathan Bell to answer this question.

Mr Bell (Junior Minister, Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister): The gender equality strategy 2006-2016 sets out an overarching framework for Departments, their agencies and other relevant statutory authorities to promote gender equality. The strategy provides a framework of objectives to direct action by decision-makers and policymakers in government to increase their awareness and understanding; to tackle specific gender inequalities, including the structural inequalities that can perpetuate them; and to ensure the promotion of gender equality across their policy areas.

The strategy and its supporting action plans bring together what government is doing here to promote gender equality and to enable government to demonstrate how it is meeting international commitments under the Beijing Platform for Action and, importantly, the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. A review of the strategy was undertaken during 2013, and, in January 2014, Ministers approved the development of the new strategy. Since that date, meetings have taken place with a range of key stakeholders and the gender advisory panel to update them on the progress that has been made and, importantly, to include them in the development of the new strategy. The current strategy will remain in place until the new strategy is developed and operational. The new strategy will require full public consultation and Executive approval.

Mrs Cameron: I thank the junior Minister for his answer. Has he confidence in junior Minister McCann providing support for the domestic violence strategy, given the Máiría Cahill revelations?

Mr Bell: I think that Máiría Cahill was a particularly brave individual to come forward and tell a story of horrific rape that should never have happened and for which she can never be blamed. Child abuse can never, under any rational explanation, be blamed on the child. The House considered the motion, and I came to the correct decision and voted on it. My record is clear on that.

As somebody who has some experience of dealing with child abuse — I spent over two decades of my life in professional practice — I know that a paedophile will rarely, if ever, abuse only one child. I can give you a legion of research to confirm that. The important thing is that when anybody is aware of child abuse, they must immediately bring that to the attention of the police and social services. They do not have the option not to bring that to the attention of police and social services. It is not something that you should do; it is something that you must do. The reason why the criminal law is very clear in that you must bring that forward is because it allows the police and social services, under the joint protocol procedures, to act in a way that can take the criminal route and also the child protection route to protect any child. Whatever the abuse or the domestic violence, whether it is that of an adult or a minor, it is imperative that that abuse is reported immediately. Failure to do so is simply not an option.

Dr McDonnell: Although I warmly welcome the First Minister and the junior Minister's commitment to equality, how can the First Minister possibly reconcile the Executive's commitment to equality with the disgraceful, hurtful and insulting comments of his colleague Gregory Campbell at the DUP conference regarding the Irish language, and is he not aware that the —

Dr McDonnell: — Irish language community is much wider and deeper than the membership —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Can we have a question?

Dr McDonnell: — of any one or even two political parties?

Mr P Robinson: I am waiting for a ruling as to whether this is a question on gender equality or not.

Mr Campbell: It did not sound like it.

Mr Bell: My understanding —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Sorry; I seem to be being questioned. I hope not. The Minister knows fine well that he has the ability to answer the question or not.

Mr P Robinson: So, it does not matter whether the supplementary question is related to —

Mr Bell: I think the understanding was that the supplementary question would be based on the original question, and I think that most Members of the House are aware of that. Therefore, I will answer the original question, which was on the gender equality strategy, on which I do not think Mr Campbell said anything at that particular time.

We have a strong track record in the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister and a strong action plan on the actions that we have taken to promote gender equality. We have sought to find a gender balance on all Government-appointed committees, boards and all other relevant official bodies. The Commissioner for Public Appointments recognised that women, along with some other sections of the population, were under-represented, and it is working closely with Departments to identify and develop measures to address the under-representation among those holding public appointments in Northern Ireland. That is one thing that we have done.

With regard to Northern Ireland Civil Service actions, we are committed to achieving greater diversity in public appointments, and we have been consistent with the overall principle of selection by merit as a means of ensuring effective public bodies. We recognise that some sections of our society are under-represented and we are working to encourage greater participation. We have put measures in place to raise the awareness of public appointments and made it possible for people, and encouraged them, to apply for those posts. We have taken a number of steps, including an interdepartmental public appointments forum, to share best practice and increase diversity.

We have used the independent advice that will be provided to the public appointments forum by a senior academic with considerable experience in equality and diversity issues. Time does not allow me to go on, but those are the key, concrete actions that OFMDFM has taken on gender equality, which we are proud to stand over.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Before calling Mr Kieran McCarthy, I remind Members that we have dealt with only three questions. Can we have brevity from Members and Ministers?

Mr McCarthy: Does the junior Minister agree that it would be better for Northern Ireland if we had a single equality Act as soon as possible rather than trying to address equality issues piecemeal, bearing in mind that it is almost five years since GB introduced its Equality Act?

Mr Bell: I am not sure that whatever body we have would change the legislation. We have very robust legislation in Northern Ireland, which we are using to drive forward change and to increase gender equality. We are doing that in a range of ways, including by using best practice, advertisement, encouragement and setting an example in the Northern Ireland Civil Service. All those measures are using best practice to address gender equality. I am more interested in the outcome than the process. We have the process and the legislation. Whatever body we have will not change the legislation. The important thing for people who are living with inequality is that we address that gender imbalance, and we are using best practice to do so.

Together: Building a United Community

6. Mr Cree asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the progress of Together: Building a United Community. (AQO 7105/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: Work is progressing on all seven headline actions that were announced alongside the publication of 'Together: Building a United Community' (T:BUC). On 2 July, the Minister of Education announced the first three successful projects to be taken forward under the shared campuses programme. A second call for projects has now opened.

We have successfully completed the first pilot of the United Youth programme, and a concept design call has attracted a high level of interest. A design team has been established to take forward development of the next stage of the programme. Stakeholder engagement is ongoing, with a view to commencing a further pilot phase in January 2015.

A significant number of summer schools and camps took place during summer 2014, and further schemes were delivered during the Halloween midterm break.

Stakeholder engagement is ongoing regarding the development of the first two locations for urban villages: the Lower Newtownards Road and Colin. Detailed project plans, complete with anticipated budgets, have also been developed for shared neighbourhoods, interface removal and cross-community sports programme headline actions. Work is continuing with the Departments to take forward work on the wide range of other actions and commitments arising from the strategy.

Mr Cree: I thank the First Minister for his response. First Minister, will you detail the actual spend in the current financial year and the projected spend for 2015-16 by Departments on T:BUC?

Mr P Robinson: The Member touches on an important point that is being raised in OFMDFM. These were new projects that were not baselined, and we have had to bid for funds. We have been able to get sufficient funds to carry out the pilots and the preparatory work that was necessary for the schemes. However, we need to identify where the funds will come from to deal with the 2015-16 financial year. We have not identified those funds yet. We will have further conversations with the Minister of Finance and Personnel — I put him on notice — to identify funds for those projects. I think that they are hugely important. We carried out a pilot on the United Youth project and put young NEET people into that project. We found that 84% of those who went through the project ended up in work, in training or giving support in some form of community or charitable organisation. That is a massive change. If one were to hear some of the transformational stories of the young people who were part of that project, I think they would convince the House, and I hope they will convince the Minister of Finance, that it is a project that is worth funding.

2.30 pm

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Unfortunately, that ends the period for listed questions. We will now move on to 15 minutes of topical questions.

Gregory Campbell: Threats

T1. Mr Hussey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they agree that the threats made against Mr Gregory Campbell MP MLA and those who are responsible for such irresponsible actions should be condemned. (AQT 1781/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: I do, of course. We have been consistent on the issue, because there are Members from all sides of the House who have been threatened in one way or another. When there is a threat against anyone who represents the local community as a democratically elected representative, it is an attack on democracy itself. I trust that the early knowledge that the police have of the issue will help them to prevent anything arising from it, but I certainly condemn it completely. I thank the Member for his question, and I know that the Member for East Londonderry will not be deterred from doing the good job that he does for his constituents in East Londonderry, both here and in Parliament.

Mr Hussey: Does the First Minister agree that the history of the Irish language is associated very closely with the Presbyterian Church? In fact, the Presbyterian ministers kept that language alive. Does he agree with me that such an attack on Mr Campbell would make the support for the Irish language within the unionist community step back because of what they see as terrorism being associated with the Irish language?

Mr P Robinson: It certainly would be counterproductive. I have to say that I do not point the finger at those who have a real and genuine interest in the Irish language. I suspect that the culprit is someone who perhaps could not care less about the Irish language except for using it for political purposes. Yes, the Irish language does have a history that has roots in Presbyterianism in Ireland, as it then was. It is a perfectly honourable entitlement for anyone to advance the Irish language and speak it. Of course, we respect those who do. We really need to separate and recognise the difference between support for the Irish language and those who want to use the Irish language for political purposes.

Senior Civil Service: Gender Equality and Balance

T2. Mr McGimpsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, bearing in mind that although 53% of the make-up of the Civil Service is female, 100% of the permanent secretaries are male, even though 70% of Senior Civil Service staff at grade 3 are female, when there will be progress in finding equality and balance. (AQT 1782/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: I very much encourage those within the Civil Service who are female and have the ability to apply for all the jobs that come up at the higher levels of the Civil Service. At the same time, we must always make sure that job appointments are made on the basis of merit. Of course, we have had females in very high positions, including that of permanent secretary, within the Civil Service. I hope that we can get back to that. My experience of the female participation in the higher echelons of the Civil Service has been a positive one. I hope that the Member is not indicating — and I certainly hope that it is not the case — that there is any glass ceiling within the Civil Service. It must be open to all on the basis of their ability to do the job.

Mr McGimpsey: I thank the First Minister for that answer, and I find it encouraging, but of course the proof of the pudding is always in the eating. It is a situation that we have been looking at for a number of years, and we appear to be unable to make progress. Therefore, will he, through his position, take a personal interest in this, given that, across 11 Departments, every permanent secretary is male, and the situation is almost as bad at grades 3 and 5, which is wholly unacceptable? All of us should endeavour to ensure that when he says that there is no glass ceiling we can demonstrate and prove that.

Mr P Robinson: I take on board what the Member says. I entirely endorse the thrust of his remarks, but it will be a lot more difficult to end up with the outcomes that he refers to in circumstances where we are downsizing the public sector or, indeed, reducing the number of Departments, which would take out positions at each level in the Civil Service. However, I have no doubt that, as far as OFMDFM is concerned — I am pretty sure that I speak for the deputy First Minister when I say this — we repudiate anything standing in the way of full gender equality in positions at any level in the public service. We are happy to champion that cause, and there will certainly be no distinction on our part on the basis of gender. We look at who is the best person to do a job. I hope that that is a position that the various panels will exercise. We should also remember that these appointments are governed by guidelines and rules that forbid any form of discrimination.

Gregory Campbell: Insulting Remarks

T3. Ms McCorley asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the First Minister would consider asking Gregory Campbell to withdraw the remarks he made at the DUP party conference when he once again insulted the Irish language and Irish speakers, including thousands of children in Irish-medium education. (AQT 1783/11-15)

Ms McCorley: Ag comhdháil do pháirtí thug Gregory Campbell masla don Ghaeilge agus do Ghaeilgeoirí, ina measc, na mílte páiste atá ag gabháil fríd Ghaeloideas. Ar mhaith leat iarriadh ar Gregory Campbell a chuid focal a tharraingt siar?

Mr P Robinson: I think that we really do need to distinguish between lampooning those involved in a political campaign related to the Irish language and those who genuinely speak the Irish language. I have known Gregory Campbell for decades, and I know his dry sense of humour as well. I am pretty sure that he was pointing the finger at those who, in my view, politically abuse the Irish language. Frankly, they set back the prospect of acceptance of the Irish language among many other sections of the community.

I am fully supportive of those who enjoy speaking the Irish language, its richness and the culture surrounding it. They must be protected. However, when it starts to get drawn into the political realm, we start to undermine and dilute the importance of the language. As a matter of interest for those who are speakers, the more we can do to depoliticise the Irish language, the greater acceptance there will be of that language in the community.

Ms McCorley: Go raibh maith agat. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister for his answers thus far. How can you claim to respect other cultures and identities when you defend and echo the comments made at your party conference?

Mr P Robinson: We see evidence here of a supplementary question that was prepared before I gave an answer. I made it clear during my remarks at the party conference that this community will go forward only when there is a higher level of respect, understanding and tolerance. That has to be the way forward, but it has to be the way forward not just for the Irish language but for the unionist and Orange traditions as well. It will become anybody's to, on the one hand, feel offence when it is something that relates to the Irish language but, on the other, close their eyes and ignore the fact that there are people on the Benches opposite who have made comments about the royal family, the Orange institutions, parades in Northern Ireland and many other parts of the culture and tradition of the unionist community.

As I said at the party conference, it is essential that this is not a one-way street and that everybody recognises the importance of respecting, understanding and tolerating the other's tradition.

Gregory Campbell: Insulting Remarks

T4. Mr Dickson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the First Minister, who described Mr Campbell's remarks on Saturday as "a bit of comedy", can tell the House who is laughing. (AQT 1784/11-15)

Mr Dickson: I join with others to clearly condemn the threats made against Mr Campbell today.

Mr P Robinson: When he first made the remarks in the Chamber, a lot of people opposite were laughing.

Mr Dickson: Does describing another party's proposals as toilet paper mean that the DUP has written off any chance of agreement in the current talks?

Mr P Robinson: I think that Mr Campbell was careful to use the term "wish list", as opposed to the serious agenda items that we are discussing in the talks process. I and the party are fully committed to reaching agreement on the wide range of issues that is being discussed as part of the agenda in the talks process. If we collectively fail in reaching agreement, it says little for the future of the Assembly and Executive, so it is very important that we reach agreement. That is why there has always been reluctance, on our part and, as I understood it, on the part of Mr Dickson's party, to stretch the agenda and deal with the wish list issues or the hobby horses, because all our political parties have them and we know that. There are key central issues that need to be resolved in the process, and that is where our focus and attention have to be.

Barnett Formula: Replacement

T5. Mr Gardiner asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the First Minister has had any discussions with the UK Government on the replacement of the Barnett formula. (AQT 1785/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: It has come up in a number of conversations. There is not a lot of enthusiasm in Northern Ireland for the replacement of the Barnett formula. If the Barnett formula is removed, I suspect that there would be massive political pressure from the north of England and from Wales for a recalculation, which would be to the detriment of Northern Ireland. If we have to cut up the cake differently, it will lead to us getting a smaller portion. That being the case, while it has been discussed, I was pleased that, as an outcome of the Scottish referendum, the Prime Minister indicated that he had no intention of replacing the Barnett formula.

Mr Gardiner: I thank the First Minister thus far. Will he outline the main arguments that he will use to keep Northern Ireland's block grant at the current level in the event of a redistribution of finance following the Scottish referendum?

Mr P Robinson: That comes close to the issues that we were arguing for in relation to corporation tax. We have come from a position where there has been massive division in our community. Our economy needs as much support as possible to be able to stand on its own two feet. For those reasons, the need factor is high in Northern Ireland.

I could easily make an argument for a higher proportion of that formula than we get at present, in terms of the distribution of whatever funds are available, but I can certainly make an argument as to why the amount that we are receiving in the block grant should be increased. In real terms, over the last four or five years, we have lost the equivalent of £1.5 billion of spending. All the difficulties that we are facing, in relation to the cuts that Ministers are having to contemplate, come as a result of the reduction in our block grant. Whatever the calculation and the formula may be, the overall pot needs to be considered, and there are issues that we have to deal with in Northern Ireland that are unique within the United Kingdom. Therefore, whatever the Barnett formula might be, I think that there is a very good argument for us to have Barnett plus.

Equality Commission: Ashers Bakery

T6. Ms McGahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given the First Minister's recent comments about the Equality Commission and its role in the Ashers Bakery case, whether the First Minister can confirm that OFMDFM is fully committed to the work of the Equality Commission in identifying and challenging all forms of discrimination. (AQT 1786/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: OFMDFM has statutory ownership of the Equality Commission but does not have any operational responsibility for it. The Equality Commission itself has a duty and remit that requires it to uphold equality for everyone. That has to include those who are Christian as well as those who are not.

2.45 pm

Agriculture and Rural Development

1. Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans her Department has to open up the Chinese market for dairy-related products from Northern Ireland. (AQO 7115/11-15)

Ms O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I am pleased to advise not only that the Chinese market is already open for dairy products from the North but that it is thriving. In 2013, 3,613 tons of dairy products such as butter, cheese and milk powder were exported from the North to China. In 2014, 3,918 tons have already been exported, and I am very pleased to see that upward trend. Overall, dairy exports have increased by 30% this year, and my officials continue to work closely with our industry to facilitate this growing trade.

In addition, significant quantities of raw milk are used in the production of dairy products in the South that may then be exported to China. My officials have established an international trade dairy group with their counterparts in the South to ensure that trade in those types of products is facilitated. At the most recent meeting, officials agreed new processes that ensure that the support that we give to the industry across the island of Ireland is a lot more joined up.

Mr Ramsey: I thank the Minister for her detailed response, which is most welcome.

Is the Minister aware that the Irish Government's Minister for Agriculture, Simon Coveney, visited China recently, bringing great hope to many food producers in the South? There is a hope and desire that our own Minister will also take the opportunity to visit China to promote the same concept and to increase the quantity and quality of produce that is going to China.

Mrs O'Neill: Yes, I am aware of the recent visit of Simon Coveney and the delegation. The Member will be aware that I have actually been to China twice to explore the market and to make links with the Chinese Government and trade bodies. I intend to make another trip to China, hopefully very early in the new year, not just for the dairy industry, although that is obviously vital, but to look at some of the challenges that we are having in getting export certificates signed off with Chinese officials. I wrote to our friends in China recently and asked for some movement on that, particularly because the pork industry has been very disappointed by the continual cancellation of inspection visits by the Chinese vets. We are hopeful that we will get that progressed as quickly as possible. As I say, some work is being done to see whether there is scope in my going out in early January to pursue the market further.

Mr McAleer: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Can the Minister tell us whether any new dairy export markets are being considered?

Mrs O'Neill: I am pleased to note that a significant number of dairy export markets are already open for products from the North and, indeed, from across the island. That includes access to the new emerging economies of India and China. There is also a planned inspection in December by the Brazilians, who will visit interested dairy exporters in England, Scotland and Wales. Whilst our industry has indicated that it is not planning to export to Brazil, the inspection will hopefully provide a new, lucrative market for the industry in the future.

Mr Irwin: Given the current depressed markets for dairy produce across Europe, and given the importance of the dairy sector to the Northern Ireland economy, has the Minister met our three MEPs to look at a possible way forward?

Mrs O'Neill: I have not met with the three MEPs to talk about the dairy sector specifically, but my door is always open and I am very keen to engage with them, particularly given the discussions that happen in Europe. I am very aware that one of the MEPs is involved in the new dairy report, and at an official level we have already been inputting to that.

You are absolutely right that the crisis in the dairy sector is very real, as are the issues concerning price, managing cash flow and all the other issues that exist for the sector. My Department is certainly up for playing its role in whatever shape or fashion that may take to support the sector to grow. You will be aware that, under the Going for Growth strategy, there are a number of initiatives that will support the industry in going forward. It is so important that we tackle the underlying issues of profitability and look towards production efficiency. As I said, we in the Department are certainly up for playing our role to take that forward. We have done a lot of work around knowledge transfer, education and training. We will continue to do that over the next wee while.

Incidentally, I am meeting the Ulster Farmers' Union (UFU) tomorrow to discuss issues that are pertinent to the dairy sector. I look forward to that discussion. I also hope to have a conversation over the next couple of days with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Elizabeth Truss, particularly on the dairy industry. We are coming at trying to support the industry from a number of fronts in what is obviously a very difficult time, given that there was a 30% difference in prices this October from those from last year.

Mrs Dobson: Unfortunately, the Republic has been allowed to get ahead in building routes into the Chinese market. As Agriculture Minister in this Executive, can she give a commitment that, for the Chinese market, she sees the Republic of Ireland as nothing other than a major competitor? Ideology must not get in the way of standing up for our farmers and agriculture sector.

Mrs O'Neill: Those are typical nonsense-politics arguments. The reality is that what we need to do is work together across the island to get into these markets. That is the reality of the situation. The industry wants to see that. There is very strong growth right across the island. As I said in my initial answer, quite a significant amount of trade happens across the island, and that is why my Department works with our counterparts in the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine (DAFM) to assist the industry, North and South, to grow. Given the quota situation post-2015, there are absolutely opportunities for us to explore. I am certainly up for working with the industry. What we need to see is a dairy-led strategy. As part of that, we will be working right across the island.

I do not think that the Member should get hung up too much on ideological positions. This is, in fact, a trade issue on which we can work together quite successfully across the island.

DARD HQ: Ballykelly

2. Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what private sector industries in, or related to, agriculture or rural development are being sought to complement the move of her departmental headquarters to Ballykelly. (AQO 7116/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I can advise the Member that, as a result of the soft market testing exercise on the Shackleton site by the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister earlier this year, over 40 expressions of interest were received, principally from the private sector, although there was also some partnership and public sector interest. OFMDFM is giving consideration to uses for the wider Shackleton site as part of the plans to develop it.

Mr Campbell: I know that the Minister was initially somewhat lukewarm about the move to the site, but it is always a welcome development when a politician does the right thing. In doing the right thing, you should always keep doing the right thing, whether there are threats, online abuse or anything else. Keep doing the right thing. That is what I intend to do.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Can we have a question, please?

Mr Campbell: On the contribution that has had to be made from the public purse to the development of the Ballykelly site, will she now ensure, along with OFMDFM, that swift progress is made to try to utilise best the rest of the site?

Mrs O'Neill: The Member is aware that I am very much committed to the project moving forward and have made headquarters relocation one of my principal priorities, which is why I made it a Programme for Government commitment. Since taking up office, I, like my predecessor Michelle Gildernew, have always been of the view that we need to move our headquarters to a rural location to bring us closer to our service users and to achieve all the knock-on benefits that we have always talked about. This is about a fairer distribution of public sector jobs and giving opportunities to those in the public sector to have promotion opportunities. The benefits speak for themselves. I have always been committed to the project. I have set out my stall to take it forward, and I will do so in the time ahead.

OFMDFM is the principal Department in developing the entire site. It is obvious from the expressions of interest that the move by DARD to the Ballykelly site will attract other people there. I am quite sure that that will happen over the next number of years. It will be a long-awaited investment in the north-west, which people there are entitled to, having been robbed of it for years.

Mr Byrne: Can the Minister tell us when the outline business case will be completed and the cost-benefit analysis conducted?

Mrs O'Neill: The outline business case has been cleared by DARD's internal assurance processes. Executive approval to proceed was given on 26 June 2014 by the First Minister and the deputy First Minister. The business case outlines the options for relocating the headquarters to Ballykelly and was informed by a report by Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) on the accommodation options available on the Shackleton Barracks site, an assessment of equality impacts of relocation and the modelling of the required staff transition to the new headquarters, while incorporating opportunities provided by modern ICT as appropriate.

The preferred option points to a phased approach to construction, with 400 workstations being completed in 2017 and a further phase of around 200 workstations being completed in 2020. The total cost of the phased option is £30.8 million capital and £14.3 million resource. The funding gap is £29.7 million capital and £11.3 million resource.

The current programme for the work at Ballykelly indicates that the tender award for construction will happen at the end of 2015. Prior to that, my officials will develop the outline business case into the full business case.

Mr Lyttle: Given the extreme pressure on public finances, not least on our hospitals and schools, will the Minister outline the total estimated cost of the project? Does she accept that it is not appropriate in such austere times?

Mrs O'Neill: No, I do not accept that. The principal point is about a fair distribution of public-sector jobs. It is about better promotional opportunities for the public service. It is about ensuring that there are opportunities right across the North and that we have a better distribution of public-sector jobs. That is key; it is the principle that should guide us when moving forward. I have set out our stall in relation to Ballykelly for the headquarters, fisheries going to south Down, Rivers Agency going to Loughry in Cookstown, and Forest Service going to Fermanagh. I am absolutely committed to taking those projects forward. I have set that out in budget plans.

We absolutely are in austere times; it is a difficult economic climate. You always have to put it in context of what we are dealing with, which is the onslaught on the Budget from the Tory Government. There are difficult decisions to be taken. I am absolutely up for taking the fairest and most balanced approach I can. I assure the Member that I am committed to those relocation projects.

Mrs Hale: Will the Minister tell the House whether the redeployment has taken into consideration the surplus staffing positions in the Department and the impending voluntary exit schemes?

Mrs O'Neill: Absolutely. As part of the plan and in moving forward, we have been working very closely with the trade union side to make sure that staff are fully up to speed with all the moves that are happening and the implications for them. We are working with our staff. We have surveyed staff in headquarters and right across all elements of the Department. There has also been a wider public service survey. That has all fed in. We are very committed to taking forward the phased approach, which allows for any staff changes that may happen.

We still do not have all the details of the voluntary redundancy scheme, but that will become clearer from DFP over the next number of weeks. I am quite sure that a number of people, right across my Department and others, will want to take up that opportunity. We have to work our way through all that with DFP over the next number of months. It will be towards the middle of next year before we will know the numbers of staff from each Department who will go under the voluntary scheme.

DARD Budget: Savings

3. Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she intends to deliver savings in her Department's budget in 2015-16. (AQO 7117/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My officials will be discussing all of my Department's Budget 2015-16 proposals, including savings, at the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee tomorrow. We aim to publish DARD's draft budget consultation document on our website on Wednesday. Full details can be viewed then.

Delivering savings of almost £30 million will be challenging for my Department. However, I have been engaging with officials regularly over the last number of months to develop the most balanced approach to implementing any savings that have to be found. The approach focuses on the operating costs of the Department, including general running costs and staffing levels in all areas, as well as programme expenditure. I have also set targets to raise additional income to ensure the future sustainability of the key services delivered by my Department.

Mr Nesbitt: I thank the Minister for her answer. She will be aware that there was a commitment from her Department in the previous Programme for Government to cut 15% from administration. Her predecessor managed less than a third of that. How does she justify a further £2.4 million being spent on administration from 2011 to the current year?

Mrs O'Neill: Obviously, every Department needs an element of administration, not least my Department, given that we administer almost £300 million of single farm payments to farmers. We need to make sure that we have the staff and expertise to be able to deliver that. I am absolutely committed to making sure that we protect the revenue that we receive — not just the £300 million but the rural development programme — for the farming and rural communities. We are looking across the Department at savings that may be found. I am working to try to protect front-line services as best we can to make sure that we look at how we deliver services and at whether we can improve things. That is constantly under review, as is the constant look at where we are duplicating services, where we can find efficiency and where we can do things better.

Mr Poots: When the Minister reviews all these matters, will she consider taking away from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) the authority for cross-compliance checking? It is carrying out its duties in such a way that it is damaging farmers' health and mental health, and it is driving farmers to attempt suicide. The anger in the farming community towards NIEA is palpable.

Mrs O'Neill: The Member will be aware that the NIEA comes under the remit of the Department of the Environment, but, as I said in my earlier answer, if there are new ways of doing things, if there are ways to double up on inspections, if there are ways to improve efficiency, then I am absolutely up for that and open to it as part of the discussions that we are going to have, particularly in terms of the 2015-16 Budget, in the time ahead. Everything is there, and, as I said, I am very prepared to listen to views on how we can do things more efficiently.

I am also aware of the pressure that the farming community is under, particularly the dairy sector and the prices it is now receiving for its produce, which are 30% down on this time last year. That is very significant for farm income. There are severe cash flow and management issues for farmers, so, absolutely, all those things are putting people under pressure.

I would like to think that it is nobody's intention in any Department to go out and make things difficult for any individual or farmer. So, as I said in answer to your original question, if there are opportunities for us to be leaner and more efficient, and cause the least disruption for farmers, then I am absolutely up for that.

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Will the Minister's programme for tackling rural poverty and social isolation be affected by next year's Budget?

Mrs O'Neill: It is one of my policy priorities. I have said that I am absolutely committed to the Programme for Government commitments that we have made. But, tackling rural poverty and social isolation, is a key policy priority for me. We have to be real. This is the only Department that is serious about tackling isolation and poverty in rural communities. The pot of money that we have dedicated to tackling poverty and social isolation has levered in so much additional funding for rural communities. For me, this is a priority moving forward, and I intend to roll out the programme over the next year and, indeed, in planning for Budget post 2015-16.

Rural Crime

4. Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the work her Department is doing to increase awareness of rural crime. (AQO 7118/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The responsibility for combating rural crime falls primarily to the Department of Justice and the PSNI. However, I am personally very aware of the concern that farm-related crime causes among the farming community.

The Department works on a number of joint initiatives that aim to raise awareness of actions that farmers can take to reduce incidences of rural crime. DARD works closely with the DOJ, the PSNI and farming organisations on initiatives such as the Farm Watch, the freeze-branding initiative and the Crimestoppers campaign.

In addition, the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) students who are on CAFRE programmes learn about appropriate responses to rural crime through input from visiting speakers, information leaflets and participation of the college farms in PSNI-led programmes such as Farm Watch. In addition, CAFRE has facilities available, which can be used by the PSNI for workshops, seminars and meetings aimed at raising awareness of crime prevention measures among the farming community.

I have also ensured that all of the DARD Direct offices currently stock rural crime leaflets at the front desk where members of the public can access necessary information in relation to this issue.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister for her answer. Will she outline what provision has been made in the white paper for rural communities to be part of the roll-out, the discussion and the consultation, particularly in relation to community safety?

Mrs O'Neill: The rural White Paper action plan contains a commitment by the Department of Justice to develop a new community safety strategy that will ensure that the needs of rural communities are taken into account. The Department of Justice has confirmed that the community safety strategy has been published, and action plans for each of the eight strands of activity detailed in the strategy have been developed and agreed by the Justice Committee. One of the eight strands is about reducing the opportunities for crime and includes outcomes on supporting safer rural communities and working in partnership with rural groups to prevent and reduce crime.

I hope to publish the second annual progress report on the rural White Paper action plan next month, which will provide an update on progress by all Departments in implementing their commitments in the action plan.

Mr Irwin: My constituency is in the greater Armagh area, which has the highest rural crime in Northern Ireland. Given the new rural development programme coming out next year, does the Minister intend to bring forward any grant aid to help make farms safer?

Mrs O'Neill: I totally understand the Member, in terms of the district he lives in. I think that E district and F district, which hold probably about 59% of all farms across the North, have the highest levels of rural crime. So, there is a particular focus on those districts, and rightly so.

I think that we should be creative about how we look at grant aid and certain items of assistance for farmers. Some of our initiatives for stamping items will make them safer and more traceable if they happen to be stolen. So we are exploring opportunities. I am keen to do that in the roll-out of the new grant programme.

Mr A Maginness: I thank the Minister for her answers. It is quite clear that effort has been put into trying to tackle rural crime. There is a perception out there that rural crime has, in fact, increased. Will the Minister confirm that that is so and why it might be so?

Mrs O'Neill: I do not have the stats on rural crime, given that that is a responsibility of the Department of Justice. Suffice to say that my Department, particularly through our enforcement and veterinary side, works with other agencies in trying to tackle rural crime. However, we have seen a rise in the crime stats over the last number of years. As I said in a previous answer, we have seen particular rises in the Clogher area, areas of Fermanagh and south Tyrone, and in E district and F district, so there are concerns. My Department will play its role in working with other agencies, but primary responsibility for tackling rural crime rests with the Department of Justice.

Devolved Administrations: Economies of Scale

5. Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, within the UK budgetary framework, to outline the economies of scale she has achieved with other devolved administrations in the UK. (AQO 7119/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are a number of examples in my Department of sharing the costs of research and, therefore, deriving economies of scale. The Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) collaborates with a number of research organisations to maximise the value of several publicly funded research projects such as a recent project on greenhouse gas emissions that was funded by DEFRA and the devolved Administrations.

Another good example of sharing the costs of research with DEFRA and the other devolved Administrations is the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute economic research project undertaken by AFBI. This project has been very important in providing an evidence base to support the negotiations and decision-making on CAP reform, in particular since 2003. Were it not for this sharing of costs, the Department would probably be unable to carry the full cost of this valuable analytical tool. In addition, AFBI is part of the Farming Futures strategic alliance with several research organisations in Britain, which has the aim of combining their respective resources to maximise value for money for additional research funding applications.

A further example of the Department achieving economies of scale is through its participation in a large multi-provider framework agreement that went live in October. This agreement will facilitate and deliver the provision of services of a veterinary nature to government across England, Scotland and Wales as well as here over the next four years.

The Department's Rivers Agency also has strong links with the devolved Administrations in relation to flood risk management, where economies of scale can be realised in the field of scientific research. The agency, for example, is a funding partner on the coastal monitoring and forecasting service. That allows the agency to avail itself of research on coastal flood warning.

Mr Gardiner: I thank the Minister very much for her information thus far. Has she considered outsourcing special functions involving the administration of EU funding, for example, to units that could serve Scotland and Wales as well as provide money for three other places?

Mrs O'Neill: As the Member can see from the previous answer, we have worked collectively across the board on quite a range of issues. I am very open to working across the board in delivering services when that is achievable. We are looking at everything in the round. Given the difficult economic climate that we are in, we are looking at how we do it. We already work collaboratively as a paying agency that distributes EU funding. If the Member wants to write to me with any specific proposals of how we can take this forward, I am very open to receiving that.

Mr McGlone: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Mo bhuíochas leis an Aire as na freagraí sin. Go nuige, chuir sí béim ar chúrsaí bia. I listened to the Minister as she talked about the emphasis being placed on agrifood research and the likes. Last week, I was in Brussels, where we heard of various sources of funding and particularly about where collaborative work can be done between various institutes, AFBI being one. Will the Minister give us some indication of the work that is being done with other regions in Britain, and, given the nature of some funds, it also has to be cross-border or between nation states? What work has been done in her Department to help to draw down those funds, particularly with the development of such projects in the agrifood sector?

Mrs O'Neill: I have tasked AFBI with ensuring that we increase our drawdown. One of the Executive's Programme for Government commitments is about drawing down additional money, particularly from Horizon 2020.

We have in the region of 30 applications with Europe for consideration, quite a number of them in collaboration with other agencies. AFBI came out to Brussels to get to know the people they need to be talking to out there. We have explored with them how they can be creative about how applications are put forward in working with their partners.

I am happy to provide the Member with the detail of all those collaboration projects. There are too many for me to detail here today. The work that has been done has been fantastic, but there is scope for additional money to be drawn down. That is why I tasked AFBI to increase our EU research funding drawdown.

DARD HQ: Ballykelly

6. Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the current condition of the proposed site of her new departmental headquarters in Ballykelly. (AQO 7120/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The proposed site for the DARD HQ building is approximately 14 acres of the upper part of the Shackleton site. Since being vacated by the British military in 2008, the site has become overgrown with undergrowth and larger vegetation. The site identified for my new headquarters has 17 old military buildings and stores, which are in varying states of disrepair. Each of those buildings has been subject to an asbestos survey, and preparations are in place to ensure their safe and efficient demolition early next year. Although the site has remained secure, a section of the perimeter fence needs maintenance, and arrangements are in place to carry out that work.

Mrs Overend: I thank the Minister for her answer so far. During this process, though, the Minister has thrown out the rule book on proper process. She has shown contempt for ensuring public value for money and over-ruled concerns of accounting officials not only in her Department but in OFMDFM.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Do we have a question?

Mrs Overend: Can the Minister tell us, as we stand today, exactly how much the clean-up of the site, as well as preventing future flooding, will cost?

Mrs O'Neill: I suggest that the Member has got the wrong Department. She should put her question to OFMDFM, given that it is the owner of the site. I will make it very clear: I am committed to taking this project forward. So people can protest all they like. There is an Executive agreement to the project going forward. The Executive have signed off, as the authority of this Assembly, on the project going forward. I have put considerable work, as have officials, into making sure that we put the case together, work with staff and plan it in a phased approach to allow for the transition.

I am surprised at the Member, who is not supportive of taking public sector jobs into rural areas, given the constituency that she represents.

Mr G Robinson: Could the Minister give a rough estimate of how many much-needed jobs will be created when Shackleton Barracks is fully open for business?

Mrs O'Neill: I can give job figures for only my Department. We are talking about 400 in the first phase and up to 600 in the secondary phase. The scope and potential there for public and private sector jobs is absolutely enormous, given the size of the site. The fact that we have had such a significant number of companies enquiring as to the future of the site and registering their interest as a business that may want to come there is fantastic to see. I look forward to that coming to fruition.

It is up to us to lead the way in making sure that DARD headquarters are secure on the site and that that work starts. I think that will then open the floodgates for the other businesses that will come after it. The benefits of that for the north-west are absolutely tremendous in job creation, construction works and ongoing associated benefits.

Mr McCarthy: I hear the Minister's response in relation to this. I hear it in her voice that she is determined to see this through and she has almost reached the stage of arrogance. In view of the horrendous fiscal situation every Department is in, and how they have all had to cut back, why and how is she so determined that this will go ahead, mindful that others have had to cancel or postpone projects?

Mrs O'Neill: I am sure that the Member, knowing me personally, will know that arrogance is not in my nature, but I am committed to this project. I am committed to taking it forward. This has been worked on for a significant period. This is about the bigger picture. People need to see the bigger picture. For too long, public sector jobs have been centred in the greater Belfast area. That is not a position that we in the Assembly should continue to see.

For me, this is about the fair distribution of jobs. It is about the knock-on economic benefit that there will be for all those who live in the north-west in this case and from all the other relocation projects that I am taking forward. The money has been set aside in the Budget. It has all be budgeted for and taken forward through business case and all the different procedures. We have Executive sign-off on this project, which is why I am being firm in my position. This is about wider benefits, and people need to look at it in that way. It is not my intention to be arrogant; it is my intention to be forthright, because this is a policy priority for me.

3.15 pm

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order. That ends the period for listed questions. We move on to topical questions. Question 2 has been withdrawn.

Fishing Quotas: Ardglass and Kilkeel

T1. Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what fishing quotas are likely to be issued for the south Down ports of Ardglass and Kilkeel. (AQT 1791/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Member will be aware that the three main fishing ports are very dependent on the quotas that are decided upon in December. I will be going to Brussels in December to argue the case once again for the fishing community. As part of the lead-up to that, I will engage with the fishermen from the three ports. We had a large stakeholder event over the past month, and I intend to meet fishermen over the next number of weeks to discuss our priorities going into the December negotiations on our quotas for next year.

Mrs McKeivitt: I thank the Minister for her answer. At the meeting in the next couple of weeks, will the Minister be bringing forward any additions to the quota allocation that will help to develop the fishing industry in the North?

Mrs O'Neill: The Member will be aware that decisions on quotas are very much based on a scientific analysis of the state of the stock. We will go to Brussels to argue the case for an increased quota, as we always do. We have to develop our position with the industry, and I will do that based on the science that we have. Obviously, nephrops — the prawn stock — are the mainstay of the fishing industry here and will continue to be our priority as part of the negotiation. I assure the Member that my approach to the negotiations is very much agreed on and discussed with the fishing industry and its stakeholders.

Avian Flu

T3. Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures she has taken to counteract avian flu. (AQT 1793/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: We are taking immediate and robust action in response to a confirmed case of H5N8 avian flu on a duck-breeding farm in eastern Yorkshire. A detailed investigation is ongoing into the possible sources of the outbreak. The infection has been recovered from one wild duck in Germany. Wild birds are suspected as the source, so it is imperative that the industry and all wild-bird keepers maintain a high level of biosecurity to prevent encouraging the spread of the disease from the wild to the domestic population.

My officials have asked specialist organisations to report and submit unusual occurrences of wild-fowl deaths. As a precautionary measure — and it is precautionary — DARD has, since Monday 17 November, imposed additional controls on the movement of live birds, poultry products and poultry meat coming here from parts of Britain. DARD has also introduced a ban on the movement of live birds coming to the North for bird sales and pigeon races. I have asked poultry keepers to be vigilant for signs of the disease and to report their suspicions early. I have also asked that bird keepers, as a precaution, revisit their contingency arrangements for housing birds, should that be required. We are keeping the situation and the veterinary risk assessment under review.

We in the North have well-tested contingency plans for dealing with avian flu outbreaks, which have kicked in over the past couple of weeks, once the case in eastern Yorkshire was confirmed.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for a very detailed response. Will she outline what communication has taken place with the local industry on contingency plans?

Mrs O'Neill: Given the significance of the poultry industry locally, we have had ongoing discussions with the industry. My officials are making sure that they are kept up to date. We also have a Q&A section on the website, which I encourage people to look at if they have any doubts.

I will be meeting industry individuals over the next couple of days to discuss the situation, because obviously there is a trade implication for them, given the restrictions that we have introduced as a precautionary measure. My officials are also working with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) and the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine (DAFM) in the South, because the fortress Ireland approach will be key in maintaining our status of being free from the disease.

Single Farm Payments: Remote Sensing Inspections

T4. Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development which four areas she has selected for remote sensing inspections and whether the farmers in those areas have been informed. (AQT 1794/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As I told the House last year on the back of the review that looked at the areas that were chosen, all the farmers who have been chosen for remote sensing will be informed in as speedily a manner as possible. I believe that has happened over the past number of weeks and that those people have been informed that they have been subject to inspection, not to remote inspection. I have set very clear targets for the Department, and we are striving to make sure that we will deliver on them. My objective is to have over 500 people, who have been subject to inspection this year, paid in December. That is a significant improvement on last year's situation. The ultimate aim is to have the majority of people paid by the end of the year, and I believe that we will reach our target.

Mrs Hale: I thank the Minister for her answer. Given that you are saying that the farmers have been informed, what are you doing to support the four areas so that the scenario of last year does not happen again, considering that you have recognised the increasing pressure that farmers are under?

Mrs O'Neill: I absolutely recognise the increasing pressure that farmers are under. As I said, the numbers of people who will remain unpaid at the end of the year will be low. However, if you are in that small category of people, you will be under pressure. So, we are working with the Department to make sure that we get these payments. The most significant thing that I can do to support this industry is make sure that all those payments are made ASAP. So my intention is to be as close to 100% as we can get by the end of the year. Remaining cases will be dealt with over January and February, but I believe — and I know — that we will be in a far better position than we were in last year. There will not be any comparison.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Mr John McCallister is not in his place.

Rivers Agency: Relocation

T6. Mr Milne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what benefits there are for the local community from the Rivers Agency's relocation to the Loughry campus. (AQT 1796/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The issue has been well rehearsed in Question Time today. I am absolutely committed to taking that forward. Moving jobs to any location will bring inevitable benefits to the local community, including through construction and bringing a public service into the heart of rural communities. I am absolutely committed to taking forward the project. The planning application has been submitted for Rivers Agency. In the region of 80 posts will relocate to the Loughry area, so that will bring significant economic benefits to the Cookstown area through, as I said, construction, servicing of a building and the increased footfall that will lead to increased spending in the community. It is something that I know that the Cookstown community in particular is very keen to see, given the stop-start nature of the Desertcreat project. Whilst I am certainly committed to seeing that through, for me, Rivers Agency is a project that is certainly on the move. It is on target for delivery.

Mr Milne: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a freagraí go dtí seo. I thank the Minister for her answer. What is the exact time frame for this relocation?

Mrs O'Neill: As I said, the planning application is in, and work is ongoing on the site. We expect that the move will be completed by March 2016.

Rivers Agency: Flooding Resources

T7. Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, given that she will be aware of the recent flooding incidents in different areas of the Province, whether she believes that Rivers Agency is adequately resourced to deal with the problem. (AQT 1797/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Yes, I think that you have to look at every flooding incident on its merits, considering where the floods are and the contributing factors. In Rivers Agency, after an incident, one of the positive things that we do is take a look at the contributory factors and what can be improved. That happens on an ongoing basis, and we learn lessons and improve things or change practices if that is what is needed.

Mr Clarke: I thank the Minister for the answer. Does the Minister accept — I am sure that she does not — that, sometimes, it seems that Rivers Agency is more reactive than proactive? We are coming into the time of the year when there is a higher likelihood of flooding. Are you minded, Minister, to make it more proactive than reactive?

Mrs O'Neill: There is always room for improvement across every area of service. I absolutely accept that. I think that the Member will be surprised to know the detailed number of inspections, grid inspections, clearing of drains and all the things that the Rivers Agency does. It is very proactive in nature. As I said, there are, of course, always ways to improve things, and I am always open to that. Maybe it would be useful if I sent the Member a bit of background information on the type of work that it does all year round on planning for times when we have prolonged weather situations, such as that which we have seen over the last couple of weeks.

DARD: 2015-16 Budget Priorities

T8. Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she has acted to protect her budget priorities for 2015-16. (AQT 1798/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As I said earlier, the draft Budget position is going to the Committee, which will fully discuss it tomorrow. We have entered a period of consultation, and I look forward to engaging with all stakeholders on their responses to my proposals.

I have clearly set out my policy priorities, particularly on tackling poverty and isolation and supporting those farmers who farm hard-to-farm land, particularly in LFAs and ANCs. I also want to make sure that we have rural development programme spend on the ground next year as soon as it is signed off by Europe and that we move forward with all the Programme for Government commitments. I will make sure that I come at any approach to the budget from a very fair and balanced position and will try, as far as possible, not to impact front-line services. That is what I resolve to do to deliver DARD's budget in the time ahead.

We are absolutely entering into a period of consultation with stakeholders. I look forward to the discussions with them. It is a difficult economic climate, not least because of the extent of the Tory cuts to our overall block grant.

Ms McGahan: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for her response. Minister, what further revenue-raising opportunities are available for consideration by your Department?

Mrs O'Neill: It is important that all Departments look at how they can raise funds, as opposed to just looking for savings. You have to have a combination of both. From my Department's point of view, we are looking at how we can increase our EU drawdown on research funding, and we have tasked AFBI to do that. We are also looking at the Forest Service and how we can increase our timber sales receipts. There are opportunities in the Department to realise additional funding. We will also look at whether there is any potential for wind farm development on Forest Service land and at how we can maximise income for communities and the Department.

We are exploring quite a range of things as part of revenue-raising proposals. I am keen to continue to explore those, as I think it is incumbent on Ministers to look at not just savings but revenue-raising opportunities if we have them.

DARD HQ: Ballykelly

T9. Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she agrees that some Members of the House are frustrated with the Ballykelly proposal simply because, for once, the Northern Ireland Executive are making a significant investment outside greater Belfast. (AQT 1799/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is certainly a lot of resistance to the move. However, as I said earlier, I am absolutely committed to taking it forward, and I see the bigger picture in the wider benefits and the fairer distribution of public-sector jobs.

Ms Sugden: Will the Minister reiterate the long-term benefits for the local economy that the Ballykelly proposal will have for the north-west and Northern Ireland?

Mrs O'Neill: Given the size of the site, there is potential not just for my Department to move to Ballykelly but from the private sector investment that will come to the north-west as a result of one Department taking the initiative to move lock, stock and barrel to the Ballykelly site. The benefits of the DARD move are in the fairer distribution of public-sector jobs, the construction jobs that will be created, the footfall in the area and increased spending. So, in the DARD move alone, there are significant benefits, but those benefits are obviously relevant to all the other investment that will come from the private sector on the back of the move. I look forward to being able to take that forward. As I said, I am absolutely committed to taking it forward and have budgeted for it in budget discussions and plans.

EU Commissioner Hogan: Meeting

T10. Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when she proposes to visit Brussels to meet the new Commissioner for Agriculture and Rural Development, Mr Hogan. (AQT 1800/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I believe that Mr Hogan will be here during the next number of months, and I will engage with him then. I have written to him on a few occasions and will work with him in his new position as Commissioner. We obviously have some issues that we want to pursue with him, and I wrote to him recently about greening because the Commission is dragging its feet in giving some clarification that our industry deserves and is seeking.

Mr A Maginness: I am glad that the Minister will meet Mr Hogan very soon. I know that she has written to him to congratulate him on his new position and was very helpful to him in the nomination process. Given the serious problems with the dairy industry, would it not be appropriate to meet him as soon as possible to try to iron out some of the difficulties with that industry?

3.30 pm

Mrs O'Neill: I can assure the Member that I am mature enough to do that. I may have my political views on individuals, but, in my role as Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, I will work with whomever I need to work with to secure the best outcome and to secure discussions on numerous issues across my Department's area of responsibility. That is a given. I will certainly be working with Commissioner Hogan and others in Europe who are relevant to the challenges that we are presented with. I will do that with our MEPs, the European Parliament, the Commission, Commissioner Hogan and his officials.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Time for questions is up.

Mr McCallister: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. I apologise to you, the House and the Minister for missing my topical question.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Your apology is noted. Members will take their ease for a moment.

Report on Improving Pupil Attendance: Follow-Up Report — [Ms Boyle (The Chairperson of the Public Accounts Committee).]

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I apologise, Members. I was slightly delayed.

Ms Lo: I thank the Public Accounts Committee for bringing forward the many important issues that were examined by the Committee, the reports of which are before us today. Given the time constraints, I will not be commenting on all the reports. However, if there is one lesson to be learned from them, it is the need for greater openness and transparency. It is imperative for us to ensure that information is released to the public on where money is spent and on how well public services are performing. Not only does it let people hold government to account but it can help to improve efficiency, give people choice in using public services and contribute to economic growth.

I welcome the recommendations in the report on the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS). Linda Ford's suspension after she alleged financial wrongdoing in the organisation was reprehensible. I agree with the Committee's desire to see the Department, the NIFRS board and senior management work together to move the service to a position in which its main focus can be on improving performance rather than on dealing with the legacy of past mismanagement.

We have talked a lot in the House about the importance of Departments not working in silos but working together to solve problems and share best practice. It is clear that those external to central government must also be included, where appropriate.

The 'Report on NI Water's Response to a Suspected Fraud & DRD: Review of an Investigation of a Whistleblower Complaint' only adds to my initial point. The Committee is to be commended for the reports, which bring further transparency, but it would be much better if transparency had always been there in the first place.

As not only the Alliance Party's spokesperson on culture, arts and leisure but also a passionate supporter of the arts, I was interested to read the 'Report on DCAL: Management of Major Capital Projects'. As the report clearly states, if delivered well, arts and leisure infrastructure can enhance the lives of and services for the public as well as improving productivity for the region. If delivered poorly, potential benefits are not fully realised and the taxpayer has to meet significant additional costs.

In the period 2008-2011, DCAL had an enviable budget to deliver over £200 million capital investment in the Northern Ireland culture, arts and leisure infrastructure. We saw the wonderful renovations of the Grand Opera House, the Ulster Museum and the Crescent Arts Centre and the new buildings for the Public Record Office, Tollymore National Outdoor Centre, the Lyric and the MAC. I am a frequent visitor of all those enhanced or new venues, except PRONI, and I appreciate how the facilities have greatly improved the arts and leisure provision in Northern Ireland. However, the PAC was quite right to criticise the overall project cost overshooting 32% of its original estimated cost of £78.5 million, ending up costing £103.4 million.

The projects also encountered significant delays, one of which was a delay of 31 months in the delivery of the Crescent Arts Centre in my constituency of South Belfast. The building badly needed upgrading for many years, and I am sure that the long delay in getting the work done contributed to its deterioration and the eventual additional costs for renovation. That said, the Crescent is now a very popular venue for performing arts, exhibitions, classes and workshops.

The Committee was also critical of the unrealistic cost estimates in business cases for projects and the Department's failure to seek timely technical advice and giving grant recipients too much autonomy in making major decisions.

A damning criticism of the Department was on the awarding of the Lyric rebuild contract. The Committee found a number of discrepancies regarding adjustments and payments. The report also referred to a substantial donation to the Lyric by the preferred bidder, which gave the Committee the impression that the outcome of the tender process was both "rigged and manipulated". However, the Lyric refutes the claims of the PAC's report, stating that the project was delivered on time, within budget and to specification. It is worth noting that the Lyric has the smallest proportion of public funding amongst all the other arts projects but has produced a world-class, award-winning building, having been named building of the year by the Royal Society of Ulster Architects.

The follow-up report on improving pupil attendance recommends that the Department of Education develop and implement an attendance strategy and encourage all schools to actively engage with parents and the community. As a governor of Cranmore Integrated Primary School, I am aware of the good work of the school in keeping parents on board using conventional and digital media — texting parents all the time, and I think that parents do not mind that — so that there is instant and effective communication between the school and the home.

It is important that the Public Accounts Committee does not let these reports gather dust but sees that the recommendations are implemented. I believe that there should be follow-up debates to monitor progress on the recommendations in the reports to see whether lessons have been learned to improve practices.

Mr Easton: The Committee examined the cost and extent of the use of temporary agency staff in the PSNI; something upon which the PSNI has spent £106 million since 2004. It was established that nearly 40% of those employed through an employment agency had previously left the PSNI with a severance package. The examination included whether there was a planned approach to controlling and managing the supply and demand of those staff.

The implementation of the Patten report, including the reduction of the overall size of the Police Service by around 8,000 officers, represented an enormous challenge for the PSNI. Like many organisations, it uses temporary staff to cover short-term vacancies and to meet skills and knowledge gaps. The use of temporary staff, if properly managed and controlled, can provide value for money; however, in this case, the PSNI did not appear to have tight enough control or monitoring on the use of agency staff and the numbers of temporary staff engaged at times appeared to be excessive.

At the peak in 2007, 800 temporary staff were engaged. Even the Chief Constable acknowledged that corporate justification for the numbers was not there. A much firmer grip was needed and, in light of that, the Committee could only conclude that the PSNI spent considerably more on temporary staff than it needed to. The Committee emphasised the need to ensure that there are sound operational reasons for the use of temporary staff and clarity on the skills sets needed, and noted that it is hard to justify temporary staff remaining in post for several years without any review or challenge.

The award and governance of the contract to provide temporary staff was also an area where the Committee raised concerns, with the current supplier being in place since 2002 and competitive tendering being undertaken only once for those services, in 2008. For much of the period, the PSNI had no assurance that the contract was providing value for money, and it needed much better quality management information to monitor and manage the contract effectively. The Committee found that the PSNI's explanation for why a competitive tendering exercise was not carried out was astonishing. The Committee disagreed with the PSNI's contention that procurement guidance in the area was not explicit. The Chief Constable has since given an assurance that future contracts will be assessed differently to include full salary costs and will thus be subject to a competitive tendering process.

The Committee also found that a very significant extension to the PSNI's agency staff contract was signed by a member of staff for an amount far in excess of their delegated authority. The contract extension led to an increase in spending of £44 million over four years; however, the member of staff who signed off on the contract extension in 2004 had a delegated authority of only £100,000. In the Committee's view, that highlighted the lack of control operating at that time and a lack of knowledge of roles and responsibilities by certain staff. The Committee noted, however, that appropriate training has been introduced across the PSNI to ensure that similar mistakes are not repeated.

The Committee found that, even when a competitive process for the award of the agency staff contract was introduced in 2008, there were major failings in the procurement process. The PSNI was found to have not completed a business case for the tender exercise until the process was at an advanced stage. The business case did not include salary costs, despite the fact that those amounted to over 90% of the contract value and that their inclusion was a clear requirement of the Public Contracts Regulations 2006. That means that the full cost of the tender, which was more than £60 million of public money over four years, was never properly assessed. The Committee considered that to be unacceptable.

The Committee found a significant gap in the business case and concluded that the strength of the PSNI's procurement arrangements at that time was questionable. Before spending public resources, a clear business need must be established, options for meeting that need must be considered properly, and the total amount that the contracting authority expects to pay under the contract must be quantified.

3.45 pm

Mr Beggs: I wish to concentrate on the report published by the Committee on Account NI and, if time permits, also touch on the report on increasing pupil attendance.

Account NI provides a financial processing shared service for Northern Ireland Departments and 18 public bodies. It processes some one million transactions a year, which are worth over £10 billion. This was quite a high-cost project that cost some £213 million. One of the selling points of the shared services project was big efficiency savings. That has not worked out in practice with Account NI, and it is important that the Committee investigates projects such as this to identify lessons for the future.

The Committee recognised that Account NI has made some worthwhile contributions and achievements in improving the accounting process, such as through ensuring that companies providing goods and services to Departments are paid within seven days on average against a 10-day target. That is quite a remarkable target and quite a remarkable performance, but at what cost? Is it justifiable? Normal businesses operate on a 30-day cycle. So, what are we paying for that improved performance? We heard recently of supermarkets going the other way. I am not advocating that, but they are abusing their suppliers by stretching well beyond 30 days. The Committee also recognised that the introduction of a common accounting system across all Departments was a significant advance on the previous outdated system, but there has been a lack of focus on delivering efficiency savings, which was the fundamental purpose of the process.

There is an absence of key performance data, even five years after Account NI was set up. That is unacceptable. I notice that, in the memorandum of understanding, the Department is in the process of establishing proposals on benchmarking categories. Many years later, it is just identifying categories. There is a lack of urgency. In the absence of benchmarking, the Audit Office collated some preliminary benchmarking figures. Some might argue that they are not exact, but, in the absence of any being provided by the Department, it is good to have an estimate, especially as the Department never attempted to benchmark. It cost £9.73 to process an invoice, and it is estimated that £2.73 was paid to the IT company per transaction. That is a way of printing money.

Shared services centres were developed as a result of the 2004 Gershon review into public administration to achieve those efficiencies, but today some 45 public bodies could have chosen to join and perhaps create even more efficiencies but have not done so. Perhaps they are unconvinced of the savings and benefits, and there has certainly not been any evidence provided to the Committee and none shown in the report to demonstrate that savings are achievable and that there are significant benefits that would warrant buying into it.

As I said, the Committee considered that elements were extraordinarily high, and there really must be a detailed review of Account NI costs to identify potential savings. The total cost of the project will be some £213 million, and, given that huge investment of public funds, one would have expected to have seen clear evidence of the project delivering value for money. Again, that was not the case.

The Department has retained some staff to process payments, when all of the work should have been passed to Account NI. Account NI's staffing levels are higher than planned, though it has to be acknowledged that it has taken on some additional work. The Committee wants DFP to review staffing levels in Account NI and to work with other Departments to reassess their needs for processing staff to eliminate the duplication of work and unnecessary checking.

The Committee found little evidence to support the Department's claims to have achieved improved decision-making, which was among the wider benefits that had been indicated. It is clear that, in future projects, the Department must limit its non-financial objectives to a few key targets that are capable of being measured. Some 21 had been indicated but had not really been measurable, and it had not been demonstrated that they had been clearly achieved.

The Committee was concerned that, in 2012, only 55% of Account NI customers thought that it was a good or very good service. Departmental financial directors wanted better management information. That is after investing hundreds of millions of pounds. Clearly, that is not good enough, and improvement is needed.

The Department has accepted the Committee's recommendations, and the Department's memorandum of response details how these are to be implemented.

I will briefly touch on the report on improving pupil attendance at school. First, I welcome the fact that the report has been published and has highlighted the issue to the Department of Education, but it is astonishing that the Public Accounts Committee and the Northern Ireland Audit Office have had to deal with the subject. I declare an interest as a governor of Glynn Primary School and Horizon Sure Start. One would have thought, given the hundreds of people employed — senior officials within the Department of Education — that greater priority would be given to attendance at school. I have been asking questions on attendance in school since 2007-08. There are some worrying figures in my constituency, and some wards with 25% of pupils with less than 85% attendance at school, which limits their ability to achieve their full potential and contribute to society in the future. I welcome the report that has been published and the drive to improve school attendance and increase the opportunities that will be available to our young people.

Mr McQuillan: I would like to address the report published this year by the Committee on pupil attendance, but, first of all, I place on record my thanks to the Clerk and the staff for all the help and support they have given us during these reports.

When the Committee looks at value for money in the public sector, it does so in a rounded way and does not just focus on the pounds, shillings and pence spent. On the contrary, we also look at the service delivery and the extent to which our citizens get best value from the public services available to them. One of the most interesting evidence sessions last year examined the issue of pupil attendance in our school system. Pupil attendance and educational achievement are inextricably linked, and it is therefore vital that the education system does all that it can to ensure that children attend school regularly to make the most of their time in compulsory education. Children who do not attend school regularly are effectively forfeiting the value of their education. As a Committee, we therefore found it extremely concerning that unauthorised absence in Northern Ireland schools has increased from 27% in 2007-08 to 33% in 2011-12 and is double that reported in England.

The annual cost lost in education is estimated to be in the region of £22 million. The Committee was particularly concerned that the absence levels reported for some of the most vulnerable groups of young people, including pupils from socially deprived backgrounds, Traveller children and looked-after children, are much higher than the average. The Committee was not convinced that the Department had got to grips with the most deep-rooted issues, such as social disadvantage and unauthorised absence. We noted that, while the Department has taken steps to improve pupil attendance over the last 10 years, it was disappointing that it had not made more progress in implementing the recommendations in the Audit Office's 2004 report. In particular, the Department has still not developed or implemented an overall attendance strategy. We therefore considered the development of a coherent strategy to be the necessary starting point and recommended that that should be in progress urgently.

Mr Beggs: Will the Member give way?

Mr McQuillan: Yes.

Mr Beggs: Does the Member agree that it is astonishing that, in 2014, education welfare officers do not have full access to pupil attendance at school in their own office? We are only now carrying out pilots with a couple of officers to see whether that could be widened. Does he agree that that significantly inhibits their ability to do their work? Given the high levels of absenteeism in certain areas, does he agree that there is a lack of concentration from the Department and perhaps other contributing Departments on addressing the high levels of absenteeism in specific areas — generally socially disadvantaged areas — where action is needed?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr McQuillan: Certainly I agree with the Member. Those are some of the points that I will touch on later.

It is pleasing to note that the Department, in its memorandum of reply, has agreed that an attendance strategy is required and has undertaken to develop that over the next 12 months. The strategy will also address specified groups of children and young people who require additional support. The Committee is aware that there is already a plethora of good practice in our schools and that some schools have managed to overcome the problems associated with non-attendance, despite challenging circumstances. Indeed, we visited Millburn Primary School in Coleraine, in my constituency, and found that it has a very proactive approach to non-attendance. We find it very disappointing, however, that such examples are very much driven by individual schools, so we ask that the Department translate the dissemination of good practice into a coherent plan so that all schools can share expertise in a structured way.

The Department has recognised the need for a structured approach and accepted the importance of the Education and Training Inspectorate's role, with the result that the ETI is to undertake a good practice survey. The Education Welfare Service (EWS) is a specialist education support service that seeks to help young people of compulsory school age and their families to get the best out of the education system. The Committee was not convinced that the EWS was on top of the problem of non-attendance, and, as an organisation, it appeared to be more reactive. It lacks the basic management and information necessary to monitor attendance on a real-time basis and take pre-emptive action with vulnerable children. The fact that 16,000 pupils a year miss almost six weeks of school yet are not known to the EWS is extremely concerning. The Committee emphasised that that must be a priority for action and is reassured that the Department has agreed to commission a fundamental review of the EWS.

It is clear that tackling the problem of non-attendance, particularly persistent non-attendance, is highly complex, and, in certain cases, it may be necessary to involve a wide range of stakeholders. We recommend, therefore, that the Department's attendance strategy address non-attendance at primary and post-primary school in a holistic and joined-up manner. The Committee expects to see a collaborative strategy that includes other relevant Departments and agencies, particularly in areas such as social services, social development and youth justice. The Department has accepted that recommendation, acknowledging that, alone, it cannot address the underlying issues of non-attendance. I support the motion.

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel):

I welcome this, my second Public Accounts Committee debate as Finance Minister. Before moving to the main business of the debate, I note the work of the Public Accounts Committee and the Northern Ireland Audit Office since last year's debate. Both have been churning out reports at a prodigious rate, which provides plenty of material for us to discuss today.

I would like to start on a positive note and, in doing so, create a context for the debate. I will quote from the Comptroller and Auditor General's (C&AG) most recent annual report, 'Financial Auditing and Reporting'. It deals with the accounts of Departments and their arm's-length bodies. In it, the Comptroller and Auditor General states:

"The prime function of financial audit is to provide independent assurance, information and advice to the Northern Ireland Assembly on the proper accounting for and use of public funds."

He goes on to comment that the standards of financial reporting across central government remain high. The C&AG has made such a statement for at least the last six years, and we should all be proud of the high standards achieved by the vast majority of our central government public bodies, not just during this year but for many years. In the main, public money is being accounted for properly and to a high standard; that is something that we need to remember. It is important that we do not lose sight of that fact, because it is all too easy to note a critical media headline associated with an Audit Office or PAC report and assume that it is representative of what is happening across our public services: it is not.

During the past year, the Audit Office and the Public Accounts Committee have looked at and reported on poor practices and things that have gone wrong in specific areas of the public sector and rightly so. That is an important part of the accountability process and a way of effecting change and improvement for the future. However, many of the issues raised are organisation- or project-specific. They are not representative of the high standards that pertain in the wider public sector, and that is something that, I consider, we all have a duty to promote.

4.00 pm

On the issue of promoting our public services, I continue to have a difficulty with the fact that, on occasion, the publicity surrounding PAC reports is unbalanced and appears to seek to sensationalise certain aspects of the reports for maximum media effect. The Committee's reports on Account NI and DCAL's management of major capital projects are two examples. In relation to Account NI, the Committee sought headlines that focused on excessive costs for transaction processing based on a comparison with other public bodies. However, the comparisons were drawn from what proved to be a flawed Audit Office cost comparison, as they were not on a like-for-like basis, and, as the Committee is aware, I issued a press release to ensure that the correct figures were placed in the public domain.

On DCAL's management of major capital projects, there was intense media coverage following the PAC's report with regard to the tendering process for the Lyric Theatre and the PAC's conclusion that it was:

"left with a very strong impression that the outcome ... was both rigged and manipulated."

However, both DCAL and the Lyric have provided assurances that there is no evidence to support that and asked the Committee for its evidence to support the allegation. None has been forthcoming. Let us be clear: the PAC suggests that there was fraud and makes these allegations publicly. It slurs organisations and, indeed, individuals, but, when asked to produce that evidence, none is forthcoming. In my view, the press releases that accompanied those particular reports were undoubtedly sensationalist in nature, were not evidence-based and sought to attract media attention to specific issues, rather than provide a fair and balanced view of the Committee's deliberations. The Committee should not seek such headlines or, indeed, allege fraud where there is no evidence for it to do so. If the PAC has evidence of fraud, the organisation it should speak to is the PSNI, not the BBC. I hope that the Committee notes my view on that issue and that it is not something that we will have to return to next year.

A number of issues and concerns that the Committee raised in its reports over the past year have been highlighted by Members today, and I will address them or at least some of them shortly. Again, I need to stress that they must be considered in context, which, at times, I think is an alien concept to some. When you have a public sector that spends in excess of £10 billion annually, it is unfortunately inevitable that things will go wrong, correct processes will not always be followed and things may not always be done as quickly as we would wish. The benefit of hindsight is, indeed, a wonderful thing. However, it is vital to consider the issues within the context of the bigger picture, and I consider the C&AG's comment on the high standards of financial reporting in the public sector to be that bigger picture in the context of this important debate. Maybe that is something that Members would wish to ponder.

Members who were present during last year's debate may recall that I purposely went out of my way to challenge the status quo and provoke what I considered to be a genuine debate about how things are done and why. The theme of my speech was reform and how we needed to do things differently. Shortly after the debate, I met the PAC's Chair and Deputy Chair, and I believe that we had a frank and constructive discussion. Since then, my officials have been working closely with the Public Accounts Committee, its staff and the Audit Office to agree protocols that will improve and streamline the processes that we use. They relate to the clearance of Audit Office reports and the production and consideration of the various memoranda of reply that we are debating. That work has been progressing well, and I want to comment on each of the issues.

In relation to the Committee's consideration of memoranda of reply, I acknowledge the constructive steps that it has taken to improve and streamline the process and commend it for that. The clearance of Audit Office reports is a challenging issue. The bottom line is that we all recognise the importance of a timely, accurate and agreed Audit Office report as the basis of the Committee's evidence sessions. Departments should work constructively with the Audit Office to ensure that such reports are not unreasonably delayed by a protracted clearance process. My officials hope to have guidance on that issue agreed with the Audit Office in the very near future. However, there is one issue within the clearance process that creates real problems for accounting officers, and that is when the Audit Office seeks to force the hand of an accounting officer into agreeing one of its reports on the basis of meeting a printing deadline which, in turn, it appears, is driven by the need to fulfil a date in the Committee's evidence session programme. It seems perverse that the Audit Office can work on a study for a year with the aim of producing a factual, evidence-based report to be agreed with Departments and debated by the Committee but the process then culminates in accounting officers being railroaded into signing off on a report with which they do not fully agree.

I think that everybody would agree that that cannot be right.

Mr Beggs: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Hamilton: I will.

Mr Beggs: Will the Minister acknowledge that, on occasions, publication of reports has been excessively delayed as a result of what he is saying, that it appears that there is little probability of agreeing, and that there is still a need to bring such matters into the public domain to have them addressed and openly discussed?

Mr Hamilton: Just before I move on, I will say that I do not think that anybody wants to see excessive delay, and if there is blame at departmental level for that, it needs to be addressed. That is in part why my officials and officials from the PAC and, indeed, the Audit Office are working on a set of protocols to better address the issue. I think that we all agree with and welcome that.

I am raising a concern, which I think it is right to do, about the fact that, in the sort of circumstances that the Member outlined, accounting officers should not feel that they are being forced to sign off on a report that they do not entirely agree with to meet what is, in effect, an artificial deadline. That is not a carte blanche to accounting officers to sit on matters and to delay them unnecessarily, but if the Department and the PAC/Audit Office are seeking to hollow out issues on which there is no agreement, I think that it is only right and proper that, in the spirit of getting an agreed report and of trying to get the fullness of the situation outlined in the report, time is taken to do that and that accounting officers do not feel that they are forced to agree to, and sign off on, something that they do not entirely agree with.

I fully appreciate the need for reports to be completed on a timely basis, but as I said, that cannot be at the expense of an agreed report that is the cornerstone of each of the Committee's evidence sessions. Recently my officials have been approached by accounting officers about that, and therefore I have asked the Treasury Officer of Accounts to raise the issue with the C&AG as part of his wider work on agreeing more efficient clearance procedures for Audit Office reports. Maybe the Committee will also wish to consider that.

I will now turn to a few areas that illustrate where we can and do cooperate effectively in the wider interests of the public sector. The first and most important area is fraud. As we all know, fraud robs the public sector of very scarce and valuable resources, so it is important that we all work together to combat it. One of our key tools in the fight against fraud is the National Fraud Initiative (NFI). Northern Ireland Departments, agencies and other sponsored bodies are now in their fourth NFI cycle, with the Audit Office reporting in June 2014 that the first three cycles had cumulatively identified outcomes of almost £30 million in fraud and error. NFI has become a key tool in Departments' anti-fraud armoury, and we must all continue to work to identify further ways in which it can be utilised to protect the public purse. Public bodies are in continuing discussions with the Audit Office to explore how NFI can be further utilised to detect and prevent fraud and error, and a number of pilot exercises are being considered as part of the fourth National Fraud Initiative cycle.

In that context, I will also take this opportunity to advise Members of progress in establishing a group internal audit and fraud investigation service for Northern Ireland Departments. That was a commitment that was given to the Public Accounts Committee in response to its document, 'Report on NI Water's Response to a Suspected Fraud & DRD: Review of an Investigation of a Whistleblower Complaint'. We have now established a project board to oversee the implementation of the group service model. My officials are developing the governance and reporting arrangements for the new model and working with Departments to assess their level of fraud investigation capacity requirements. It is anticipated that the group service structure will become operational from April 2015 and that it will help to improve consistency and professionalism in internal audit and fraud investigations across the Northern Ireland Civil Service. Again, I think that that is something we all can welcome.

Whistle-blowing has come to the fore in a number of the Committee's reports in recent years. The Committee will be aware that we have previously given an undertaking to provide additional guidance on handling concerns raised by whistle-blowers. The UK audit authorities have produced a good practice whistle-blowing guide for employers and employees, which the Northern Ireland Audit Office will launch tomorrow. Having seen and had an opportunity to comment on the draft document, we believe that it is a very useful piece of work. As a result, we intend to issue the guide to Departments and to highlight any further important issues and lessons learned from PAC hearings and reports.

Another example of good working practices that again takes the Committee's work forward is in relation to reducing bureaucracy in the voluntary and community sector. My Department, the Audit Office and DSD are working closely together on this important DSD-led project. That work has led to the development of a draft code of practice for reducing bureaucracy in the grant-funding process, and it is currently out for consultation. When finalised, it will help address many of the issues raised by the Committee in its report on the subject.

The issues that I have outlined are examples of our working together for the betterment of all citizens. The work should lead to more resources being available to spend on health and education as a result of reduced fraud; whistle-blowers believing that they can come forward in the knowledge that they will be listened to and their concerns taken seriously; and those who work in the third sector being able to focus on the valuable work that they do without engaging in unnecessary bureaucracy. I believe that there is so much more than we can achieve together, and I look forward to doing so in a spirit of cooperation.

Before I address the specific issues that Members raised, I would like to bring you up to date with progress on the reform agenda, which was the main topic of last year's speech.

Over the past year, my officials and I have met and engaged with a number of practitioners in the areas of business improvement and policy development. Over the period, many steps, both large and small, have been taken to progress the vision of reforming the public sector and embedding the reform agenda in our business activities. Reforms have brought positive change in a range of areas, particularly in e-government, asset management, shared services and procurement. I believe that building on our existing achievements in e-government is a key aspect of the public sector reform agenda because it ticks both boxes — saving money and improving services.

I will now turn to some issues that Members raised during the debate. I will begin with those of the Chair, Michaela Boyle. Among many things that she referred to — I hope that I have addressed some of them — was the Committee's report on AFBI. I note that the Committee acknowledged the recent work undertaken to further enhance corporate governance in AFBI and oversight of the institute by DARD. I have been informed that arrangements are underpinned by proactive scrutiny by DARD, and a report to the Committee is expected by May 2015. On financial management, I understand that AFBI is now using its strategic costing model to establish the full cost of its operations and set revised efficiency targets. AFBI is also reviewing its fee-setting procedures to ensure that those comply with relevant DFP guidance. The AFBI accounting officer will provide his assurance on fee-setting to the AFBI board and DARD annually. In addition, I can inform you that DARD has identified the test categories for which it requires unit costs. AFBI has been asked to provide that information, including benchmarking, by March 2015.

Mr Girvan referred to the Committee's report on DRD's review of an investigation into a whistle-blower complaint. DRD has provided an assurance that it has learnt valuable lessons in the case, referred to under the Northern Ireland Water suspected fraud case. It has introduced new policies and procedures for whistle-blowing, wrongdoing and fraud. DRD has further implemented comprehensive arrangements for registering and monitoring the progression of wrongdoing and whistle-blowing cases, and it has developed and introduced an investigation checklist for initial inquiry and fact-finding through the formal investigation. In addition, new guidance has been issued to staff on handling complaints. The Department has also made significant improvements in its procurement and contract-management arrangements.

As I mentioned earlier, my officials will draw to the attention of Departments the Audit Office guide on whistle-blowing once it is published. Although it is written in the context of employees raising concerns, DFP will reinforce the point that the same general principles in handling cases should be applied, regardless of who has raised the concern.

I have also already talked about the new Civil Service group internal audit and fraud investigation service and can confirm that work that it will take forward on reviewing existing guidance will incorporate the key lessons that have been learnt from the cases in DRD and NI Water. My Department has asked departmental accounting officers to ensure that the Committee's concerns about codes of conduct and contractual breaches be adequately addressed in their existing guidance.

I now turn to the case that both Mr Hussey and Ms Lo raised when they referred to the Committee's report on DCAL's management of major capital projects. I welcome the contribution made by Ms Lo in particular. She acknowledged that, although there were issues around the procurement, the infrastructure that was referred to and dealt with in the report is excellent new infrastructure, much of it in her constituency, as she pointed out. It has transformed the tourism offering. In many respects, it has provided fantastic regeneration of parts of the city and, indeed, other parts of Northern Ireland.

DCAL has acknowledged that there were weaknesses in its appraisal and procurement processes in the context of a very ambitious capital programme, which, again, is something that Ms Lo acknowledged. DCAL has confirmed that it has implemented all the recommendations that were made in the Audit Office and PAC reports and is in the process of considering how best to engage relevant professional teams earlier in the process so that cost and time estimates are more robust. DCAL has further drafted its own capital projects guidance, which addresses the issues raised by the Committee. It is being reviewed by my officials and is also being circulated to DCAL's arm's-length bodies. My Department will provide revised guidance by next month that will address all the Committee's concerns on procurement in relation to grant recipients.

4.15 pm

On a wider note, as chair of the procurement board, in November last year, I established a subgroup to examine all stages of the commissioning and delivery of infrastructure projects. The subgroup has prepared an action plan designed to correct the number of significant issues, such as over-design and underestimating cost, that are reducing the likelihood of the successful delivery of infrastructure projects. While several Ministers have supported the plan, I am disappointed that some have reserved their position. I will continue to work with ministerial colleagues to convince them that that is a proper course of action. In the meantime, my Department is implementing the actions in the plan assigned to it.

Mr Easton referred to the Committee's report on the PSNI's use of agency staff. Although the Committee found that excessive numbers of agency staff had been employed for lengthy periods of time, it acknowledged that the introduction of a radical new structure for policing over the last 10 years represented an enormous challenge. The current procurement process for a new contract for temporary workers is on hold as a result of the current budgetary position and will not be progressed at this time. The existing contracts will lapse at the end of this calendar year, and the PSNI has confirmed that it will cease all current temporary worker assignments on or before that date. The Department of Justice has provided the assurance that any future contracts for temporary workers will take the Committee's recommendations into consideration and will be managed rigorously.

Mr Beggs referred to the Committee's report on Account NI. Account NI is a cross-departmental shared service facility that is the envy of many other Governments. We should all be extremely proud of it. I have noticed that it currently pays over 90% of invoices within the allotted targets. It is — I have encountered this on my travels as Minister — the envy of many European states, including Estonia, which have very advanced digital delivery of public services and want to learn from what we have done in shared services. The Government of the Republic of Ireland have visited at ministerial level our shared services to inform their delivery of shared services. From listening to some of Mr Beggs's comments, it is clear that only in Northern Ireland would we be talking down something that is the envy of others.

The Committee praised Account NI in relation to its considerable achievement in paying invoices so promptly. It acknowledged that it is:

"a significant advance on the fragmented and outdated financial systems previously in place."

The fact that it was able to accommodate relatively large organisations with complex requirements was recognised as a "significant achievement".

I will end by thanking all those who contributed to what has been a very lively and, hopefully, thought-provoking debate. I apologise to any Members whose issues I did not address. I hope that, above all else, unlike last year, I have not left Mr Dallat too shell-shocked to wind up the debate on behalf of the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr Dallat (The Deputy Chairperson of the Public Accounts Committee): I assure the Minister that he has not left me shell-shocked, but he has come pretty close to it. I will deal with some of the issues that he raised. I was pleased that he started on a positive note by paying tribute to the Audit Office and the Public Accounts Committee. I believe that the Assembly as a whole and all parties involved can be proud that they have a Public Accounts Committee and an independent Audit Office that can rise above party politics and all the quagmires that we have to deal with. I say that on a personal basis; I have no authority from anyone else. I include all the members of the Committee in that. We have done our best to ensure that the public get value for money. The Finance Minister will know this better than anyone: never has there been a more serious time for ensuring that every penny of public money is accounted for, both in where it goes and the value for money got from it.

The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service was mentioned on a number of occasions, particularly by Anna Lo, who is not a member of the Committee but, obviously, is well-informed. That report touched the hearts of all members, particularly in relation to the disgraceful way in which Linda Ford was treated as a whistle-blower. It aggrieves me that the chairman of the Northern Ireland fire authority who presided over most of that is still in place.

The Committee discovered that the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's accounting officer and the chair of the Fire Service were aware that a whistle-blower had been suspended and that they should have been alert to possible victimisation. Instead, both wrongly decided not to intervene. The Committee recommended that when a Department asks one of its arms-length bodies to investigate a whistle-blower's concerns, the Department has to ensure that there is a proper investigation. Where the whistle-blowing allegations relate to senior members of staff in the body concerned, the Department must retain ownership of the investigation. DFP has accepted the Committee's recommendations in this area, and we expect to see improvements in the handling of whistle-blowing right across the public sector. I was pleased that the Minister referred to that.

The Department's oversight of the Fire Service was poor. It failed to intervene to address either the extremely high turnover at senior management level or lengthy absences of key members of staff. The Committee found that proper succession planning had been ignored for too long. We were pleased to note that the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety accepted our recommendation that it, the board and senior management work together to identify barriers to recruitment and to ensure that the organisation is well placed to attract quality internal and external candidates for future senior management vacancies.

The Committee found that the board in place at the time that these events occurred was extremely weak and had failed to challenge senior management. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety accepted the Committee's recommendations to strengthen the board; address areas of weakness; and improve its oversight by ensuring that its own team has the necessary skills and seniority to properly challenge senior management in the Fire Service. I hope that that comes as comfort to our very courageous and brave firefighters who, for many years, have been at the forefront during our difficulties.

The Committee considered a number of cases in which very senior officers in the Fire Service failed to recognise and properly handle significant conflicts of interest in procurement and recruitment. One case that particularly concerned the Committee was the acceptance by a senior officer of a sponsored Land Rover. I hope that I am not advertising one particular company, although I accept that they are very nice vehicles. That certainly did not do anything for the image of the Northern Ireland Fire Service. We accept that there was no evidence of personal gain, but the Committee found it worrying that this individual, who went on to become Chief Fire Officer before his retirement, maintained that accepting the vehicle was the right thing to do. The one thing that surely should be there is the ability to accept when something is wrong.

It was clear to others, including the Chief Fire Officer at the time, that this sponsorship deal would create a perception of wrongdoing that was likely to be extremely damaging to the Fire Service. The Committee considers that the actions of this officer demonstrated a lack of understanding of the responsibilities of an accounting officer and the standard of conduct expected of someone in that role. DFP has not accepted the Committee's recommendation in this area, distinguishing instead between potential and ongoing commercial relationships. The Committee is clear that any recurrence of conflicts of interest of this nature in the Fire Service or elsewhere in the public sector will not be acceptable.

In 2001 — this is important for other Members — the Public Accounts Committee reported on the Fire Service's predecessor body, the Fire Authority for Northern Ireland.

This was an extremely critical and hard-hitting report, and it is shocking that many of the recommendations arose again in our most recent investigation of the new body. I doubt that any Member, including Mr Wilson, would be brave enough to defend a situation in which an organisation was reported on and then, several years later, it was found that those recommendations were ignored and that the work of that organisation had been set back.

The Committee was appalled to hear evidence of the toxic working environment in the Fire Service's headquarters. When our report was issued in October 2013, there were 22 outstanding grievance cases, mainly in headquarters. Surely, that should have set the alarm bells ringing all over the place but it did not. It was clear to us that that situation could not continue. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and the Department of Finance and Personnel graciously accepted nine of the 11 recommendations — not bad for a Committee that gets so many brickbats.

The Committee wants to see the Department, the board and senior management work together to move the Fire Service to a position where its main focus can be on improving performance rather than dealing with the legacy of mismanagement.

I thank all Members who contributed to what has been an interesting and informative discussion. I hope that we have given the Assembly, and the wider public, a good snapshot of the work of the Public Accounts Committee. This has been another productive year for the Committee, with eight reports published. These included large and complex investigations, which took time to complete, such as the inquiry into the PSNI's use of agency staff, which three of my fellow Committee members spoke on.

Completing these complex inquiries requires a great deal of commitment and cooperation on the part of the members of the Committee. I commend my colleagues on their work this year. Any inquiry into the Police Service could have created problems. Members rose above party positions and, I think, produced a commendable report.

The PAC's key role is to ensure that public money is used efficiently and effectively and that maximum value is extracted from each pound. This role is of even greater importance in the current economic climate given the significant budgetary pressures facing the Executive.

The PAC focuses on high-value cases where significant savings to the public purse can be made. The Committee always seeks to be constructive in its reports — I hope you are listening, Minister. Rather than merely pointing the finger and saying that we do not want to see x, y or z happening again, we make recommendations that offer guidance about what changes need to be made to avoid mistakes being repeated a number of years down the line. Evidence of the success of the Committee's work can be seen in the high levels of acceptance of its recommendations. During the year, 85% of recommendations were accepted, and although slightly down on last year's 87%, is still extremely high.

As Deputy Chair, I was pleased to see greater partnerships developing between Departments and the PAC during the year, in particular between the Committee and the Department of Finance and Personnel. The Minister made reference to that crucial meeting between the Chairman, me and his Department. I can assure the House that while there is a better understanding, there was no compromise.

The work of the PAC is supported greatly by the Northern Ireland Audit Office and I cannot thank enough the people who work there for their help throughout the year. It is interesting that people come from all over the world to the Northern Ireland Audit Office to get advice and training in how to put financial affairs in place. Many travel from parts of the world that had no accountability in the past.

Our Chairperson, Michaela Boyle, began the debate by talking about the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute, the largest arm's-length body of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development. She highlighted the fact that there was poor oversight by the Department and that alarmingly high estate costs had not been tackled. She also spoke of poor management of the charging fees, with £3.5 million in income being lost, which is a tidy little sum if you were looking for it. The report highlights the fact that Departments need to maintain strong oversight of their arm's-length bodies to ensure that value for money is obtained in all cases.

4.30 pm

Mr Wilson, who is not here now, talked about invoice slicing. I want to make it perfectly clear that invoice slicing is not acceptable in any case. He seems to think that we could promote invoice slicing as it helps small and medium-sized enterprises. Invoice slicing can be an indicator of fraud, and I suspect that in many cases it is. So I make no apology for saying that the PAC takes a zero-tolerance policy towards fraud and cannot condone practices that are conducive to fraud. Invoice slicing is also totally at odds with public procurement, and there are strict rules on public procurement that we cannot ignore at national or European Union levels.

Many other people spoke in the debate, and I am sorry that I do not have the same amount of time as the Minister to respond. The Lyric Theatre got a hearing. It is a wonderful building and is an excellent part of the infrastructure of Belfast, and PAC members acknowledge that. However, the highest tender in the process became the successful tender, and accounts could not be produced. Indeed, when the PAC began to ask questions about that, we had extreme difficulty in finding witnesses, and it took months to get them before the PAC, which was not particularly satisfactory.

I will finish by mentioning attendance at schools. The Public Accounts Committee went out to schools that were good examples. We were all proud to go to schools in socially deprived areas, where the odds were stacked against them. Those schools found ways to improve school attendance and to give children who were from, let us say, difficult backgrounds a chance. Surely that is bound to make some contribution to reducing the 20% rates of illiteracy and innumeracy that we are struggling with.

I am extremely proud to stand here and commend the report, and I rebut any of the criticism that was made of the Public Accounts Committee or the Audit Office. The Assembly should be extremely proud of those from all political parties who are part of the PAC.

Private Members' Business

Paul Quinn: Anniversary of his Murder

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes in which to propose and 10 minutes to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who wish to speak will have five minutes.

Mr D Bradley: I beg to move

That this Assembly acknowledges the seventh anniversary of the murder of Paul Quinn; notes that the Independent Monitoring Commission states that current and former members of the Provisional IRA were responsible for the murder; demands that the leadership of the Provisional movement discloses all information regarding the murder of Paul Quinn to the PSNI and an Garda Síochána; condemns the Sinn Féin leadership for its false accusations against Paul Quinn; and further demands that Sinn Féin apologises to his family for making such accusations.

Go raibh míle maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Iarraím cead an rún seo a mholadh. Tá an ceart agat. Tá sé seacht mbliana ó dúnmharaíodh Paul Quinn I gContae Mhuinicheáin.

It is seven years since Paul Quinn was murdered just inside County Monaghan. Those who murdered him, according to the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC):

"included people who are members or former members, or have associations with members or former members, of the Provisional IRA."

The whole organisation of Paul Quinn's murder smacked of paramilitary planning and forethought to the extent that the scene was forensically cleansed afterwards, similar to what happened after Robert McCartney's murder, only probably better organised. The purpose of that was to ensure that any DNA evidence was destroyed and that detection would be made extremely difficult. Mar is eol dúinn, ní thig a bheith cinnte céad faoin gcéad I gcásanna mar seo. As we are aware, there is no certainty in these matters, and, as science develops, evidence that once yielded no information can tell the tale and lead to prosecutions and convictions. That may yet prove to be the outcome of this case. I hope that it will be and that those responsible will be brought to justice.

Paul was brutally murdered on Saturday 20 October 2007, as I said, in a shed just inside County Monaghan. I pass that spot several times a year on my way to football matches in Clones. Invariably, my passengers say to me as we pass it, "That's where young Quinn was murdered". I think of the scene that day; a gang of up to ten men dressed in boiler suits, armed with iron bars and nail-studded clubs, beating 21-year-old Paul until his life ebbed away. His mother, Briege, frequently says to me, "Dominic, they broke every bone in his body." The question is this: why? Why would anyone want to do that to a young man of 21? The reason is that those people wanted to show who was boss in the area. They wanted to show who had control of the area. Remember, Paul's death happened nine years after the signing of the Good Friday Agreement.

The dirty war was over, but it seemed that a dirty peace was beginning.

I remember going to the hospital in Drogheda that night and meeting his mother, Briege, and his father, Stephen, who were distraught with grief and, with other members of the family, were gathered around his body. All attempts at resuscitation had failed. His family were adamant that the IRA was responsible. They had known that Paul had fallen foul of some them locally. This was the revenge.

As I said, the aim of Paul's murder was to teach others not to cross them, to show that they still controlled the community and to silence him. Although they beat him to death that night, ironically, his voice is still heard. His parents, Briege and Stephen, have continued to speak for him and to fight for justice for him. They are here today in the Public Gallery. I welcome them. They have refused to be cowed. They have refused to be silenced. They have continued to demand justice. They will not go away until they get justice.

It is to help them in their quest that I have tabled the motion before the House today. I spoke to them after the seventh anniversary mass in Cullyhanna chapel some weeks ago, and, afterwards, I gave them an undertaking that I would continue to support their campaign. I have tabled motions and spoken on previous motions about murders that were committed by the IRA and by state forces in collusion with loyalist paramilitaries in south Armagh. That is all part of the history of the area.

Those who murdered Paul Quinn most likely still live in the local area and go about their daily lives there; the Quinn family believes that they are closely connected to Sinn Féin. After Paul's murder, Conor Murphy was quick to conclude that the IRA was not involved and said that it was the result of a row or fallout between criminal gangs. Previously, he had berated Seamus Mallon for suggesting that there was a criminal gang in south Armagh. However, when it suited him, there was not only one criminal gang but two; not only that, they were capable of murder.

Miss Fearon believes that RTÉ is responsible for sullyng the reputation of south Armagh. The reputation of south Armagh has been sullied down through the years, but not by RTÉ. It has been sullied by those who engaged in murder, whether they were members of state forces, state forces colluding with loyalist paramilitaries, or republican paramilitaries.

I have lived in south Armagh all my life, and I am very proud of the local people; most of them did their best to lead normal lives in the midst of the mayhem around them. south Armagh was not run, as some would say, from a republican kitchen somewhere. It was run from every normal home in which parents attempted to feed their families and send them to school every day, and go to work themselves to earn a living. It was run by those genuine sporting and cultural organisations that attempted to give young people some form of recreation and some alternative to violence.

The accusation that Paul Quinn was a criminal, unsubstantiated as it was, added salt to an already deep wound that had been inflicted on the Quinn family. It was repeated by other leadership figures in Sinn Féin, including Gerry Adams, and was part of the usual whispering campaign that the IRA engaged in to smear their victims and justify their deeds.

The Quinn family has constantly demanded that Sinn Féin withdraw the accusation. However, not only did Mr Murphy fail to withdraw it, he compounded it on the record here in the debate in 2008. The Irish Foreign Minister, the Taoiseach, the British Secretary of State and the Chief Constable of the PSNI all set the record straight, and that has been of some consolation to the family.

Members of Sinn Féin who speak in the debate have the opportunity to withdraw that vile accusation, and I hope that they will do so. It would help the family if Sinn Féin withdrew the criminal slur on Paul's name, and I firmly believe that Sinn Féin can do more than that again: its members need to come forward and tell the PSNI and an Garda Síochána all that they know about Paul Quinn's murder. There must be no hiding place for murderers, and certainly not in the ranks of a political party. The denial of truth must not prevail.

At the end of the week, a report on the talks will go to David Cameron and Enda Kenny. The message in that report should be that those who seek to protect the state or paramilitary interests should not prevail. Nochtfar an fhírinne, luath nó mall. The truth shall out, sooner or later.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Mr Irwin: The murder of Paul Quinn ranks among the most brutal executions that were carried out by the IRA. Despite the passage of some seven years since the public learned of this cruel act of barbarity, revisiting some of the published facts of the case makes for horrific reading.

We must not forget that there is a grieving family mourning the loss of Paul Quinn. Their pain has certainly not abated with the passage of time as they still firmly pursue justice for those who murdered him.

4.45 pm

The brutality of his death in the way he was lured to the farmyard by his friends, who had been taken hostage by the murder gang, and the manner in which he was beaten with pickaxe handles and iron bars, draws horrific comparisons with what is happening now in Syria and Iraq. When we look at our TV screens daily, we see the horrific brutality carried out by Islamic State fighters. I often wonder and find it impossible to comprehend how men can be so inhumane to their fellow man. We feel a certain sense of relief that such regular brutality does not happen in the Western World. However, the shocking murder of Paul Quinn, when studied in the cold light of day, is exactly the same brutal activity as many terrorists in the Middle East engage in as a matter of routine.

There is no difference in my mind between some fanatical jihadist who will beat a woman to death or chop off a man's arm for stealing a sweet and the ruthless group who lured this young man to the farmyard to exact some twisted form of retribution. There can be no justification in any sense of the word for what happened to Paul Quinn on that fateful day. Furthermore, the attempts by Sinn Féin to in some way blacken the name of the victim by referring to him as a criminal only adds to the smokescreen that was created by republicans in the area to try to deflect attention from this barbaric act.

The wall of silence that has fallen on this case in the community around Cullyhanna is also of huge concern. There is an immense burden of responsibility on those who know what happened on that day and know who was involved in the crime to come forward and make the information known to the police.

The history of the republican movement, especially in the Newry and Armagh constituency, which I represent, is a sickening catalogue of pain and suffering visited on Northern Ireland. The late Paul Quinn is another name added to the list of callous murders carried out, as confirmed by the Independent Monitoring Commission, by current and former members of the Provisional IRA. The issue of republicans who know who carried out the murder coming forward with information is a key point in the debate. It is only by someone coming forward with the vital information that police on either side of the border can have any hope of bringing a successful prosecution. There may well be people on the Benches opposite who could have a snippet of information that may be useful to the police. I urge them to contact the PSNI or the gardaí without delay. That goes also for those in the community in the area who may have a snippet of information that would provide a vital link in the investigation in this case. I say again that that information must be given to the authorities.

This issue amongst other issues, such as the abuse of Máiría Cahill, the plight of the families of the disappeared and the campaigns under way by the innocent victims of the IRA's terrorist campaign, will remain an issue of great importance in the wider community. It is well beyond time that Sinn Féin and the republican movement revealed the truth and accepted the hurt and pain that their inextricable link has produced. I support the motion.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Ba mhaith liom cúpla focal a rá. I would like to say a few words on the motion. First, through you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, I place on record my condolences and extend my sympathy to the family and friends of Paul Quinn. I can only imagine the pain and suffering that they have gone through over the last seven years since the tragic death of their son, brother and friend. I condemn the manner in which that young man lost his life. There is no justification and there never can be for taking a life, certainly not in that manner. I sincerely hope that the family finds the justice that they deserve. To that end, I add my voice to those of my colleagues before me who have called on anyone with information on the murder of Paul Quinn to present that information to the PSNI and an Garda Síochána.

Sinn Féin has always been clear on that point, but unfortunately we have seen a sustained effort to politicise the issue as far as possible. In some quarters, it has been done not in any authentic way to try to assist the family in bringing those responsible to justice but as a means to try to make political capital out of this tragic event for political ends. The motion has been constructed, again, by the SDLP, in a manner that purposely sets out to be as divisive and inflammatory as possible. There is little disguising the fact that the motion has less to do with helping the Quinn family uncover the truth about what happened to their son than with trying to fashion some sort of political point. The pain of the Quinn family deserves better than the current approach being pursued by the motion. What has been diminished here has been an opportunity for everyone to call on those with any information to come forward to the authorities and an opportunity for us all to show sympathy and solidarity with the Quinn family.

Mr Allister: Will the Member give way?

Mr Boylan: No, I will not give way. You will have plenty of time to speak. I am sure that you have got your name down.

Unfortunately, the people who are responsible for the construction of the motion seemingly prefer to see argument and division in this matter rather than —

Mr D Bradley: Will the Member give way to me?

Mr Boylan: No, I will not give way to anybody. You had 10 minutes to speak.

They prefer to see argument and division in this matter rather than progress and assistance. In spite of such blatant efforts by political opponents of Sinn Féin to draw the party into dispute over the matter and cheaply to pitch the party at odds with the interests of the Quinn family, I think that most people will see those attempts for what they are. As a party, Sinn Féin holds nothing but sympathy and support for the Quinn family. Nothing should be allowed to distract attention from their fight for justice at this time.

Mr Kennedy: It is hard to think that seven years have now passed since the brutal murder of Paul Quinn, yet his family has yet to see any justice. Like many other families who have suffered at the hands of paramilitaries over the decades, they feel no closer to that justice. I truly admire the courage and determination of the friends and family of Paul, who have campaigned and continue to campaign for justice. For some — and some who sit in the Chamber — it is an uncomfortable truth that organised violence, serious crime and murder has occurred since the Belfast Agreement and other agreements.

Make no mistake about it: this was a murder ordered and directed from Northern Ireland and carried out in the Republic of Ireland. Paul was a young man who was lured across the border to his death by the offer of a few hours' work. The grief of those close to Paul was compounded by a very nasty campaign of misinformation by Sinn Féin and some politicians in the Republic. They did not want to focus on the IRA and Sinn Féin so soon after they had publicly accepted policing and justice in Northern Ireland.

When we look back at the comments by the then Secretary of State, Shaun Woodward, in response to a question in 2008 from Alistair Carmichael MP in the House of Commons, knowing what we know now about the OTR scheme, amongst other things, the words take on a different meaning. Shaun Woodward said:

"The choice for politicians in Northern Ireland is this: do we allow those who would be involved in crime or the sort of activity that led to the murder of Paul Quinn to determine the future of everyone in Northern Ireland? I do not think that we should."

Although Shaun Woodward went on to say that they should be dealt with by the law, it seems, in one sense, to appeal for people not to make much public comment on the issue and asks them not to rock the boat.

That is exactly what Sinn Féin wanted — limited public comment and no rocking of the boat. My view is clear, and contrary to that approach. I believe that no victim or victim's family should be denied justice for political expediency or to sidestep such an uncomfortable truth. The murder bore all the hallmarks of sophistication and premeditation. It bore all the hallmarks of the Provisional IRA. I, for one, do not believe that its involvement should, in any way, be a barrier to justice for Paul Quinn and his family. All local representatives should make the same acknowledgement and provide the same commitment to fight for justice for Paul.

We were told in recent days that the IRA has provided details to the gardai of sex offenders that it relocated over a number of years. When it suits it, or when public pressure is so great, the Provisional IRA suddenly reappears and is able to assist with information. It is time that the same happened with the murder of Paul Quinn. It is time that the IRA acknowledged that its people were involved, in the same way that they were involved in abusing children. It is time that it acknowledged that it has information to provide on its own members, and it is time that it did so, because the murder of Paul Quinn is no less of a crime than the sexual abuse of children, and those responsible are no more entitled to their liberty.

Mr Dickson: From the outset, I wish to express my sympathy and that of the Alliance Party to the family and friends of Paul Quinn and our admiration for the bravery and courage that they have shown in the face of the despicable murder of a son and loved one and everything that has followed. I commend them for calling on anyone with information to give it to the police so that due process may be followed and justice done. Justice is what this family, like many other families in Northern Ireland, seek, and justice is what they deserve.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Beggs] in the Chair)

However, sadly, a question hangs over one party's commitment to pursuing justice in this case. Calls to go to the police with information seem petty, hollow and meaningless when the majority of people think that someone in Sinn Féin must know who is responsible. Interestingly, the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC) report in May 2008, right before discussing the Paul Quinn murder stated:

"PIRA's commitment to following the political path has been further reinforced in the period under review with a number of people making the transition to positions in Sinn Féin and thereby engagement in democratic politics. Since the time of its announcement nearly three years ago PIRA's strategy has included the movement of members into political life and we view these changes as important further evidence of the move to a peaceful and democratic role."

When the same IMC report stated that Provisional IRA members were involved in the murder, it seems absurd for Sinn Féin seriously to contend that no one in its organisation knows who is responsible. To make things worse for the family, Sinn Féin representatives, as we know in this debate, have branded Paul Quinn a criminal. Only a court can make such a judgement about a person, not murderers and not thugs, so it would be better for Sinn Féin to channel its energy into ensuring that all its members who have information give that information to the police.

I must say that it appears that Sinn Féin has a track record for trying to blacken the name of anyone who may cause its organisation embarrassment or raise difficult questions in or about that organisation.

As for many families in Northern Ireland, justice is long overdue. In 2007, 'The Guardian' said this of Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness's call for the public to cooperate with the police on the matter:

"The unprecedented call marked another shift in the party's support for policing."

That was in 2007, yet, just last month, Paul Quinn's father Stephen said that Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness:

"could come to south Armagh and secure justice for us within an hour because it's prominent members of the provisional movement who murdered our son."

5.00 pm

There is clearly a strong feeling in the community that members of Sinn Féin have not disclosed everything that they know about the murder of Paul Quinn. In the interests of justice, that needs to change.

Further lines of enquiry have been opened up by someone coming forward with information in the last month. I hope that more people do the same and that the police services on both sides of the border have success in getting justice for Paul and his family. No mother or father should have to go to hospital and see their son die in horrific and sadistic circumstances. If those who know have an ounce of human compassion or decency, today is the day to come forward. My heart goes out to Paul's mother and father. I met them briefly before this debate. His family circle, his friends, and his mum and dad deserve justice and deserve it soon.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Tá mé ag éirí chun labhairt in aghaidh an rúin seo. I rise to speak against the motion. I am conscious that Paul Quinn's family are in the Public Gallery, and I do not wish to say anything that may increase their sense of hurt or grief. So, from the outset, let me say that I completely condemn the murder of Paul Quinn. Those responsible should be brought before the courts and held accountable for their actions. Anyone who has information about that terrible deed should bring it to the relevant authorities, either an Garda Síochána or the PSNI. If either of those police forces has sufficient evidence, the culprits should be brought to trial. In any democratic society, that is how affairs of the criminal justice system ought to be conducted.

The Assembly is not a court of law, but, of course, it is right that we, as politicians, should give political leadership, standing together in the Assembly and condemning that brutal murder. It is also right that we should ask those with information to come forward and give it to the proper authorities, but what is not right is political parties using the privilege of the Assembly to try to carry out a witch-hunt against Sinn Féin.

What is happening today is the very antithesis of democracy. It is about some parties capitalising on the brutal death of a young man and using untruths and innuendo to try to score cheap, political points. If the proposer of the motion and those who have jumped on the bandwagon really cared about the victim in this tragedy, they would have brought forward a motion that would have commanded unanimous support. That is the best way to send a clear message to those who think that violence should have any part in a democratic society. But that is not what this debate is about. It is not about the victim. It is about trying to get some sort of political advantage from the terrible murder of Paul Quinn. The contributions thus far have been long on rhetoric and short on fact. So, let me state this fact: Sinn Féin has no information about the murder of Paul Quinn. If it had, we would bring it to the authorities. If anyone else in the Chamber has information, let them do likewise.

Mr Attwood: First of all, I apologise on behalf of Dolores Kelly, who is meant to be speaking now. She is unwell. Even though she is not here, I have some sense of what she might have said. The first thing is to again acknowledge the strength, dignity and resilience of victims and survivors, who regularly speak forth of their search for truth, justice and accountability.

In my view, it is the victims and survivors who, unlike some in the Chamber, are again demonstrating the best standards for people on this island. My colleague said earlier that Paul Quinn, whilst he went to his death that night, has not been silent since. The voices that have been speaking up, in particular those of his mother and his father, are in stark contrast to the voices that we heard from my right earlier today.

Mr Sheehan said that he would not want to do anything to deepen the "sense of hurt" of the family of Paul Quinn, yet his entire speech was littered with further attempts to hurt victims and survivors by portraying what they and those who stand in solidarity with them are doing as other than an effort to get to the truth and have accountability. Mr Sheehan said:

"Sinn Féin has no information about the murder of Paul Quinn."

If Sinn Féin has no information about the murder of Paul Quinn, why did his colleague come into the Chamber and, on the record in Hansard, say that the murder of Paul Quinn was the result of a dispute between criminal gangs? Can Mr Sheehan explain why, if Sinn Féin now claims that it has no information about the murder, Conor Murphy made that comment? Can you explain it to me, to the people in the Public Gallery or to anybody in any county on the island of Ireland? Can you explain that?

If you are not willing now to stand on your feet and explain that comment, will you now stand on your feet and answer the question put to you and your colleagues by Mr Bradley? During this debate in this Chamber, will you correct the public record and the Assembly record and withdraw the allegation about the character of Paul Quinn and the good name of the Quinn family? Are you prepared to stand on your feet, three minutes into my speech, at 5.10 pm, and say that to everybody who is in the Chamber at this time? Otherwise, what you and Mr Boylan have been doing in your speeches is what you did in the Chamber when faced with another victim and survivor who sat up in that Public Gallery: you again denied the truth. You resist justice, fight against accountability and face down the people whom the debate is about — the victims and survivors, wherever they might be in this society.

If I were Gary Hart, the British Government, the Irish Government, or some of the parties in the talks at the moment — I say "some of the parties" because recent words by some of them give me no confidence about where we are going — I would have little confidence, as we go into this pivotal week in the talks process, in what is said in a document that Sinn Féin put into the talks process. It states:

"combatant organisations should tell the truth"

just as the political parties, MI5, the army, the police and anybody else with information should tell the truth. However, when it comes to those words in the talks process —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Attwood: When it comes to the truth of those words, nobody is convinced.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Dúnmharaíodh Paul Quinn seacht mbliana ó shin, agus go dtí an lá seo ní raibh éinne os comhair na cúirte mar gheall ar an dúnmharú sin. Ba mhaith liom ár gcomhbhrón a dhéanamh le tuismitheoirí Paul Quinn agus lena gclann; tá siad inár smaointe fríd díospóireacht an lae inniu.

Paul Quinn was murdered on 20 October 2007, just over seven years ago. To this day, no one has been held responsible for his murder. I am very conscious of the grief and pain that his family endures. As we speak in the debate, I am conscious that they are in the Public Gallery. We have to be mindful that their journey for truth and justice will continue beyond the debate. From the outset, let me say again on behalf of Sinn Féin, echoing the comments made by Pat Sheehan and Cathal Boylan, that anyone with any information on any matter relating to the murder of Paul Quinn should immediately bring it to the proper authorities, be that an Garda Síochána or the PSNI. We will assist the Quinn family in any way we can as they continue in their search for justice.

Mr D Bradley: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCartney: I am not giving way on this sensitive issue for very obvious reasons.

That has been and remains our position: anyone with any information should bring it forward.

I turn now to the motion tabled by the SDLP. The murder of and search for justice for Paul Quinn has been debated in the Assembly before. Indeed, Alex Attwood referred to a contribution from Conor Murphy that day but was inaccurate. If he goes back and reads Hansard, he will find that out. At that time, we stated that the motion was selective and divisive: so is this motion. It is selective and is designed to create division on what should be a motion that commands total and absolute support in the Assembly; that is, a universal declaration that anyone with information should bring it forward and those responsible for Paul Quinn's murder should face due judicial process. I ask this: why is that not the objective of the motion? Indeed, to seek anything less, in my opinion, leaves it open to question.

The motion is premised on an assumption that has no basis in fact. It is obvious from the contribution of the proposer of the motion that he cannot offer any substance to the claims made in his motion. That is because neither he nor anyone else can offer a single shred of evidence that somehow, as the motion tries to suggest by coverall but meaningless titles, members of Sinn Féin have evidence in relation to the case that they are deliberately withholding. That is simply not true and is designed to create division. If Dominic Bradley or anyone else has any information that any member of Sinn Féin is withholding information in relation to the case, they should by now have passed it on to the PSNI and an Garda Síochána.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member make his remarks through the Chair?

Mr McCartney: For people to come here and put forward the position outlined by the IMC, rather than that of the PSNI and an Garda Síochána, is also questionable. The IMC had no role or remit as an investigative body. Indeed, it permitted itself, time and again, to be guided by untested and unknown intelligence sources.

Conor Murphy, as MP for Newry and Armagh, is on the record from 20 October 2007 as saying that Paul Quinn was murdered and that anyone with any information should bring it forward. He has offered to meet the Quinn family to assist them in any way that he or Sinn Féin can to ensure that those responsible face the full rigours of the judicial process. This remains his position and that of our party. In the same debate in February 2008, Conor pointed out that there were those using this death for their own narrow interests, be it those who are opposed to the Sinn Féin political strategy or those who are trying to use it for political or electoral advantage. He pointed out that the campaign for justice for Paul Quinn was used by some —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr McCartney: — to mount attacks, both physical and verbal, on other innocent people and on homes and properties. He cautioned against that, saying that it did not serve the interests of those seeking justice and, indeed, stood in the way of it.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Mr McCartney: The interest of justice is not served by half-truths and innuendo.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Mr McCartney: Indeed, they serve only to undermine it. Evidence is not the baseless allegations of untested intelligence sources.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up. I call Tom Elliott.

5.15 pm

Mr Elliott: Thank you very much, Mr Deputy Speaker, for permitting me to take part in the debate. I congratulate and thank Mr Bradley for tabling the motion.

I remember 20 October 2007 quite clearly, but it must surely live in the memories of Briege and Stephen Quinn, their entire family circle and, indeed, their friends and colleagues. It is hugely frustrating to be back here, six and a half years after the last debate, with little progress in the case. The brutality of Paul Quinn's beating and murder is a continuing and chilling reminder of the sickening mindset of those who carried out that murder and assisted in it. This was not a spur of the moment attack but a pre-planned, orchestrated attack and murder, carried out by bloodthirsty people.

Somebody talked about a witch-hunt against a political party: I have no vested interest in this, apart from seeing justice for the late Paul Quinn and his family. That is my only vested interest. I have no witch-hunt to pursue against anybody. What about the witch-hunt against Paul Quinn on that fateful day? This debate is about the victim, Paul Quinn, and his family. It is about attempts to get justice for the family; it is not about any political party, whether it is the SDLP, who tabled the motion, the Ulster Unionists, the DUP, the Alliance Party or, indeed, Sinn Féin. This is about doing what is right, something that a lot of people have failed to do.

Some of the calls here today from Sinn Féin for people to bring forward evidence and information ring hollow in my ears. They would do much better to withdraw the remarks that they have made previously, but we still fail to hear that, even though there is a plea — it is not even a call any longer, it is a plea — to do justice to the memory of Paul Quinn. No, they cannot even bring themselves to do that.

For almost 40 years, the borders between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland have suffered death, harassment, intimidation and fear. That was directed equally at the Protestant and Roman Catholic communities, unionists and nationalists — it did not matter. If the IRA wanted to murder you, it murdered you. If it wanted to wreak fear and havoc in those communities, it did so, because that was its mentality and psyche. Unfortunately, it is doing it through a different means now by not providing information.

I hope that people will recognise that those calls ring hollow. I do not know where we can go or whether we will be back here in another six and a half years. I certainly hope and pray that we are not, for the sake of the family of the late Paul Quinn and for the good of society in Northern Ireland and in the Republic of Ireland. I hope that people are brought to justice, and there are people who can assist with that. Given the numbers that were involved in that brutal murder, surely there are people who have much more information than they are telling us.

I go back to a point that I made in the last debate. A former Member of the House at one stage claimed about the IRA that:

"They haven't gone away, you know".

Unfortunately, Members, that is still right; they have not gone away. Not only did they bring death and destruction to Paul Quinn and his family, but they continue to wreak that havoc now by not giving the information —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Elliott: — and by not withdrawing the terrible remarks that they made some time ago and that they have the opportunity to withdraw today.

Mr Allister: The murder by the IRA of Paul Quinn was truly horrific, and it instantly gave rise to totally brazen and disingenuous spinning by Sinn Féin. At the time that that horrific murder occurred, it was, as it still is, politically inconvenient. It is politically inconvenient not only, of course, for Sinn Féin but for the DUP in this House. Immediately it happened, Mr Conor Murphy, who was, if you please, then a Minister, declared that it had nothing to do with republicans and that republicans were not involved in it. He gave that assurance because he said that he had been to see the IRA leadership in south Armagh, which had given him "solid assurances" that republicans were not involved.

I remind the House that Gerry Adams once told us that he was given solid assurances that the IRA was not involved in the murder of Frank Kerr at Newry post office and that he was given solid assurances that the IRA was not involved in the murder of Detective Garda Jerry McCabe. That is mere whitewash and cover-up as far as Sinn Féin is concerned. A Minister of this House proclaimed that he had been to see the IRA leadership. I do not know whether he went in his chauffeur-driven ministerial car. A Minister of this House having the audacity to state that has been excelled today only by Sinn Féin's audacity to talk about the motion as the "antithesis of democracy".

I will tell you what the antithesis of democracy is. It is a gang of those with death and murder in their hearts and minds luring a 21-year-old to a lonely location and beating him cruelly and relentlessly to death. That is what is the antithesis of democracy. Those who sit on the Sinn Féin Benches are those who seek to whitewash with all their weasel words today.

This murder is also politically inconvenient for the DUP, which today could muster not a single Front Bench spokesman but only four minutes of contribution about a murder that, as I will remind them, Jeffrey Donaldson was clear about back in 2007. He said that if it was the IRA, the DUP would not sweep it under the carpet. If the IRA was involved in the murder in those circumstances, the DUP would act and would not run away from it. He went on:

"If the IRA is involved — whether it's individuals or — and there was a gang involved here — if there were a number of IRA members involved in this murder then that's the actions of the IRA. We are not here to dance around this issue".

That party knows that the IRA was involved. What did it do about it? Nothing. That is because this murder was equally politically inconvenient for those who sustained and who still sustain Sinn Féin in government. This debate is politically inconvenient, hence the dearth of contribution from the DUP on this pivotal matter. That is because it goes to the heart of the con that was wrought on the people of Northern Ireland that meant that, suddenly, the IRA and Sinn Féin had signed up to supporting the rule of law, when here we had, within months of the Executive taking office, the IRA still being in the business of murder. Of course it has been swept under the carpet.

It is quite clear to me that Paul Quinn was sacrificed on the altar of proving that the IRA had supremacy and control in south Armagh. I fear that it is also sadly true that the police investigation and justice —

Mr Allister: — have been sacrificed on the altar of the peace process. That is what adds another chilling dimension to this chilling case.

Mr A Maginness: I thank everybody who contributed to the debate. I just want to add a comment to what Tom Elliott said when he talked about the horrific and bloodthirsty nature of that murder. I emphasise to the House that the reason why it was so brutal and bloodthirsty was to send a very strong message; that is why the brutality was such. The message was: "We are in control. We are in charge. You will not defy our authority — the authority of the Provisional IRA." That was the message that was being put across.

It is disingenuous for anybody in this House to say that, in fact, this murder was not a paramilitary murder; it had all the hallmarks of a paramilitary murder. It was carried out by 10 men in boiler suits who forensically cleansed the scene of the murder. In many ways, it is similar to Robert McCartney's murder in Belfast, when there was a cleansing of the scene of the murder. It is different from the murder in Belfast because this murder was coldly calculated, whereas the McCartney murder was not. This one was preconceived, meticulously carried out and, as I say, forensically cleaned up afterwards. Can you imagine a criminal gang going to those lengths? I cannot. Why would a criminal gang take a young man and beat him mercilessly? Why would they do that?

We still have answers to receive from Sinn Féin. It has been said here by members of that party that, "We are really the victims here because you are all ganging up on us and there is a witch-hunt against us." It is similar to the Máiría Cahill case when, again, we were all ganging up on Sinn Féin: they are the victims, not the family of Paul Quinn. Those members disingenuously say that they would give information to the gardaí or the PSNI if they had any. Well, they have had plenty of opportunity to do so and they have not; they have signally failed to do so. What has Conor Murphy done with his information that this was, in fact, the result of rivalry between criminal gangs? Has he given that information to the gardaí? Has he given the details of that? If he does not have that information or if it were merely an assumption, why then did he comment? He did not just comment initially, but in this House in 2008. Why has he consistently said that this was the result of some sort of criminal gang fallout?

It is not acceptable in this House, or indeed outside it, for Sinn Féin to pretend that they are victims and also to pretend that they do not have information. If they do not have information, how do they know that it was not the IRA? How have they come to that conclusion? We have heard that Conor Murphy went to the leadership of the IRA. Could he give the gardaí or the PSNI information on the people whom he spoke to so that they could interview them? What would be wrong with that? Why has no one else in Sinn Féin questioned Conor Murphy and said to him that, "If you have this information, why not go to the police?" instead of standing up in this House and disingenuously saying, "Well, you know, people should go to the gardaí and the police." There is obviously information in the Sinn Féin organisation, and that information should be given to the police or the gardaí. There is no other way to behave in a decent fashion.

5.30 pm

This is all about preserving the integrity of Sinn Féin and preserving its political support. It is not about advancing justice here in Northern Ireland. It is about maintaining support and maintaining the lie that the Provisional IRA were decent people. We have heard that recently from none other than the president of Sinn Féin. Do decent people batter to death a young man in pursuit of maintaining their sovereignty in an area of south Armagh? Is that really what this is all about?

We have been told that we, in the SDLP, are wrong in bringing forward the motion today. It was brought forward with the support of Paul Quinn's family, so, if you are criticising the SDLP for bringing forward the motion, you are implicitly and, indeed, explicitly criticising the Quinn family. They want to find justice, and they believe that this is an appropriate forum in which we can put pressure on Sinn Féin, the republican movement and those who have knowledge so that the assailants of Paul Quinn can be brought to justice. That is the right and proper thing for us, as legislators and public representatives, to do. Indeed, it is the duty of Dominic Bradley to come to the House and place the motion on the record of the House because only in that way can people be influenced outside the House who may have information in relation to that horrendous murder. Thus, it is important for us to have brought forward the motion today and to debate it. There is no witch-hunt here. There is a hunt, but it is a quite proper hunt for justice. It is demanded by the Quinn family and by every civilised standard that should permeate the workings of the House and all political parties in the House.

I support those who have spoken today in favour of the motion. Not once did those in Sinn Féin give an apology for blackening the reputation of Paul Quinn. Not once have they expressed any sorrow whatsoever in relation to defaming the good name of Paul Quinn. Not once has any Member of Sinn Féin said, "Paul Quinn was not a criminal. He was blamed in the wrong by Conor Murphy". Not once have they shown any contrition in relation to the campaign of denigration against Paul Quinn. Of course, that was similar to the campaign that was carried out in relation to Robert McCartney in the aftermath of his murder. It is similar to the campaign carried out against Máiría Cahill in relation to her allegations against Sinn Féin.

We see a repetition of the approach that Sinn Féin has taken in relation to a series of criminal actions; two murders and other criminal actions. That is not good enough. It is right for the House to demand that Sinn Féin comes clean, that they apologise, that they cooperate with the police and the gardaí, and that justice for Paul Quinn is finally achieved.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Before I put the question to Members, I wish to address the issue of extending the sitting this evening. The business in the Order Paper is not expected to be disposed of by 6.00 pm, so in accordance with Standing Order 10(3) I wish to allow the business to continue until 7.00 pm or until the business is completed.

Post Office Network

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have up to 10 minutes to propose and 10 minutes to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who wish to speak will have five minutes.

Mr Lyttle: I beg to move

That this Assembly notes the important contribution made by the post office network to communities and the local economy; recognises the need for increased support from the Executive to ensure the viability of the network in the future; urges the Executive to take action to help sustain these vital services with the availability of more public services through the post office network and establish a post office diversification fund, similar to those which have existed in other regions; and supports the Keep Me Posted campaign, which champions the principle that consumers and businesses have a right to choose how they receive bills and statements without being penalised for requesting such information in paper format.

I propose the motion as a member and former chair of the all-party group on postal issues. I think the group has made a positive contribution to this issue and is now under the chair of Pam Cameron MLA. It has given MLAs the opportunity to listen to Post Office representatives and sub-postmasters and increase our awareness of their excellent work and the vital services that they provide in our community.

I pay tribute to post office workers in Northern Ireland and the support that they give to citizens and businesses across our community.

With approximately 480 branches, the post office network is the largest retail chain in Northern Ireland and offers unrivalled access to a vast range of services, including mail services, pensions and benefits, government services and bill payments. An important aspect of the network's role is the support that post offices offer our rural communities, with 68% of branches in rural areas. The local post office is often the only link to important services for many rural communities and areas of deprivation and for older people and people with a disability, and it is vital that we work to sustain that access.

The post office network is also vital to our local economy and to businesses. Federation of Small Businesses (FSB) studies show that 88% of SMEs in the UK use a post office for mail services: 47% more than once a week and 20% every day. As we experience another round of bank closures, it is clear that the post office is increasingly bridging the gap for local, face-to-face access to banking services for people in our community.

The most recent survey of the satisfaction of Post Office customers in Northern Ireland, which was carried out in 2010, found that 93% thought that it provided a good or very good service and that 78% felt that it played an important part in the local community. That demonstrates just how important the post office network is to Northern Ireland and how seriously the Executive should take the need to help to sustain it. I hope that the all-party motion sends a clear message to the Executive that the Assembly demands support for our post offices, our sub-postmasters and the communities and businesses that they serve.

A 2012 report by the Consumer Focus Post titled, 'A "Front Office" for Government Services', recommended that the Northern Ireland Executive take a lead role in encouraging public sector organisations to deliver services through the Post Office and work with the UK Government to establish a clear role for them to play with the post office network in Northern Ireland. I have submitted questions to all Departments on what services they make available through the post office network, and the responses were underwhelming. Indeed, some of the services listed are delivered by other providers. That indicates that the Executive are failing to deliver on the recommendations made in the report, which is very concerning.

The Executive have also failed to establish a post office development fund, which has been introduced in other regions in the UK and appears to be improving the sustainability of post offices. In Scotland, the post office diversification fund, a £1 million investment overseen by the Enterprise Minister in 2010-11 and 2011-12, has helped post offices to diversify into new business activities and improved their sustainability. In 2009, a diversification fund was established in Wales to help local post offices to expand their business and provide new services for the community. With grants totalling around £6.6 million, the fund has helped around 442 Welsh post offices to strengthen their role in the community. An independent evaluation of the fund found that it had improved the sustainability and commercial viability of post offices and positively impacted on local economies and communities by improving job opportunities and increasing consumer spend. In 2013, a new scheme for post offices was launched by the Department for Communities and Local Government in England, with additional funding from the Cabinet Office and Post Office Ltd. The community enterprise fund gave grants of up to £10,000 to 25 post offices for innovative schemes to allow them to provide additional support to communities and other small businesses.

Having highlighted the positive impact of government investment in post offices in other regions and the cross-party support for the motion, I find it disappointing that no Executive Ministers are stepping forward to respond to these matters. In March of this year, I raised the issue with the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment in the Assembly and was informed that OFMDFM was taking the lead on cross-cutting issues for the Executive. Despite cross-party support for the motion, we seem no closer to the relevant Executive Ministers standing up for our post offices and post office staff in Northern Ireland. Therefore, I call on the Executive to take a leaf out of the Post Office's book and start delivering on the issue. I hope that they will give serious consideration to a diversification fund to help post offices in Northern Ireland.

I also call on the Executive to address the other key recommendations of the "A Front Office for Government Services" report by actively encouraging our public sector to identify opportunities to deliver services through the Post Office in Northern Ireland and to work more closely with Westminster to support our post office network. This should include working to ensure the future of the Post Office card account further to March 2015. It is a service that is used by 10% of households in Northern Ireland, the highest of any UK region and one of the important income generators for our post offices.

The motion also calls on the Executive to support the Keep Me Posted campaign. The campaign is a partnership of post offices, charities and businesses working together to ensure every consumer's right to choose, without disadvantage, how they are contacted by banks, financial service companies, utility companies, media companies and other service providers. Independent research has demonstrated that 81% of adults want to choose how they receive important information such as bills and statements. It also reveals that the people who often have the greatest need are the older generation, the disabled and those lacking internet access and digital skills. It is our duty to safeguard the interests of such groups and to ensure that all citizens have the right to choose how they receive bills or statements without being penalised for requesting this in paper format.

The Keep Me Posted campaign calls on the UK Government and regulators to promote consumer choice through clearer regulation. It has a six-point pledge that can be accessed via its website and which I urge all Members to sign if they have not already done so. I also ask that the Executive write to the UK Government to express their support for the Keep Me Posted campaign.

In 2007, the Assembly was required to establish an Ad Hoc Committee on local postal services further to the closure of a number of post offices. This was a reactive response to a serious public concern for our post office network, and there is now, I believe, an urgent need for the Executive to get proactive in their support for our post offices if we are to help to sustain their future viability.

Mrs Cameron: I rise as chair of the all-party group on postal issues to support the motion. I welcome the fact that it has gained cross-party support in recognising the significant role that the post office network plays in Northern Ireland.

In the UK, 93% of adults live within a one-mile radius of a branch, with 92% having visited the branch in the last year. A staggering 20 million people — half of the UK adult population — have visited their local post office in the last week to avail themselves of diverse and wide-ranging services such as passport application checks, vehicle tax services, rates payments and collection of benefits and pensions through the Post Office card account. The post office is so often at the heart of communities and provides an intrinsic social service that the vast majority of us will use in one way or another in the course of our daily life. In order that we retain and build on the postal service that we all rely on, it is vital that we view the services that it provides in a strategic and long-term manner.

The introduction of the post office diversification funds in Scotland and Wales has enabled post offices to establish new business activities and become more sustainable, providing long-term economic return and perpetuating their strong social purpose. Post office diversification funds are designed to ensure that post offices remain a hub of services in communities, with priority given to offices serving deprived or isolated areas. Following a two-year roll-out in Wales, where 318 grants of between £5,000 and £20,000 were awarded, 65% of businesses reported an increase in non-post office turnover, with 60% reporting an increase in profits. That is a huge 83% of grantees that reported that their business had increased in commercial viability. The Scottish scheme provided similar successes, and the potential for increased economic activity alongside greater post office use cannot be underestimated.

It is worth noting that some Departments — OFMDFM, Regional Development, Employment and Learning, Health, Social Services and Public Safety, Education, Culture, Arts and Leisure, and Justice — do not use the post office network in any way. The remaining Departments that use the network do so in a very limited way, with Social Development the only Department to use services in any real way to administer benefits and pensions.

6.00 pm

Mr G Robinson: Will the Member give way?

Mrs Cameron: Yes. No problem.

Mr G Robinson: Does the Member agree that local government should make more use of the post office network?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mrs Cameron: Thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker. I wholeheartedly agree that it is vital that local government uses the post office network in any way it can to support and continue the success of the network and ensure that we have it into the future.

I urge that consideration be given to the introduction of a post office diversification fund for Northern Ireland to grow the post office network and increase its long-term viability as a core part of our community.

As consumers, we are changing the way in which we shop, bank and manage our finances. It is vital that the post office network adapts to those changes to remain relevant. One example of how the system has reflected a change is seen through the ability of post office counters to maintain banking services for customers whose bank branch has closed. In the last few days, another example of that was seen as the Ulster Bank announced the closure of branches across Northern Ireland, including the branch in Randalstown in my constituency. That is just one small way in which the Post Office has reacted to changes in the community to sustain a service for its customers. Other examples such as handling housing benefit claims, reporting a change of circumstances for benefits and paying fixed penalty notices have all been identified as ways in which the Post Office can provide greater cooperation with local authorities and offer community-based facilities.

Whilst it may be the case that we are largely moving towards greater technological integration, it is important to remember that 5.2 million households in the UK do not have Internet access. The post office is often described as a digital bridge for the elderly and vulnerable, and we must ensure that those people do not lose their access to postal counter services or their right to receive bills and communications from companies through the postal service. The Keep Me Posted campaign seeks to ensure that customers continue to be offered the choice of how to receive their bills, that there are no charges or penalties for receiving paper bills and that paper bills are taken away only with customer consent. With 40% of adults in the UK stating that not receiving a paper bill would seriously affect their ability to manage their finances, it is vital that we continue to press companies on that issue to ensure that that is carried forward.

I put on record my praise for the Northern Ireland postal network and am very much looking forward to visiting delivery offices in my constituency as normal over the coming weeks in the run-up to Christmas. The service that we receive is often taken for granted, yet we would sorely miss it if we did not have it. I am pleased to support the motion.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Ba mhaith liom labhairt i bhfabhar an rúin seo. I will speak in favour of the motion.

I commend the work of the all-party group on postal issues and wish the chair success in her new role. I speak from the point of view of working in the delivery side of the postal service for a number of years. It is a very important service, especially in rural areas, and, but for the likes of post offices, those areas would not be serviced at all. In moving the motion, the former chair said that 68% of post offices were in rural areas; I certainly experienced that when I was on delivery.

People tend to forget the number of services that are available in post offices and that can be delivered through them. Most post offices are a hive of activity, from the construction worker who comes in in the morning to get a cup of tea or a paper before he goes to work to a little old lady who goes in to get her pension. Post offices deal with pensions, tax credits and loads of other services. We should support the motion.

I express my thanks to all the postmasters who are doing a terrific job in supporting local communities.

I want to pick up on the points in the motion. Like the proposer of the motion, I was a wee bit disappointed with the response that he got back from some of the Departments. More could be done in relation to working with Departments to deliver services through the postal network. I thank the research team for its paper. Having looked through the paper, I saw the number of Departments that responded and their one-line responses. That does not encourage you.

Pam Cameron took an intervention on councils from her colleague. I looked through the services that the councils could support and deliver by supporting post offices. They could certainly do a lot more. I see Belfast and, thankfully, Armagh City and District Council, which is in my area, and Limavady Borough Council. However, I think other council areas could do more. There are a number of services, and I think we should be working and supporting and encouraging Departments and local authorities to use the postal network to deliver those services.

The motion also urges the Executive to establish a diversification fund. I see that Wales and Scotland can certainly make big changes and gains in capital, revenue and resource, for a small amount of money. So, I certainly support the motion's proposal to ask the Executive for a diversification fund. The paper clearly shows the results, how some businesses have grown and how well some have done with support. That is to be supported.

Obviously, I have signed the Keep Me Posted campaign. I know that it will sustain jobs. Having been in the delivery of the postal service, I know that it will certainly sustain jobs. People should have the right to receive paper bills if they so wish. I am certainly in favour of that, but there is one thing that people do not recognise. Once again, I will champion the rural cause here. A big percentage of people cannot access online services. It is as simple as that. There is no broadband coverage. Surprisingly, there are still areas in the rural North that have dial-up connection. I know that there is funding to try to address that issue. In the absence of all that, I certainly support the Keep Me Posted campaign.

I put on record my thanks to the all-party group, the postmasters and all who are trying to provide services and do their best to support communities, particularly the rural communities. I support the motion.

Mr Dallat: Once again, I am delighted to take the opportunity to speak in support of our post office network. In the past, I stood in the Chamber and spoke of my admiration for postal services and its storied history of penny black stamps, dangerous highwaymen and rumbling carriages roaring through the countryside to deliver. I spoke of how crucial it is for the Assembly to recognise our continuing need for a universal postal service, and I called on the Executive to ensure the viability of our local network by protecting it from Tory interference. Today, I reiterate that call.

Mr Deputy Speaker, I will not draw your attention to the fact that we are not quorate at the moment, but I say this to all 108 Assembly Members: anything that we get in Northern Ireland, we have to fight for. It is a feature of modern democracy that people make their voices heard.

I am not foolish enough to suggest that the Post Office of today is as vital for communication as it was in the 1840s. It would be even more foolish for us not to recognise the importance of its continued contribution to local communities, local business and the local economy.

Mr McGlone: I thank the Member for giving way. In accepting the vital role that post offices have to play, particularly in many of our rural communities, I am glad that the Member touched on communication, because it is vital. The Post Office has a huge range of services, but it does itself a tremendous injustice by underselling the range of products and services that it has. Does the Member accept that?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Order. It has been drawn to my attention that we are not quorate. Therefore, according to Standing Order 9, I ask that the Division Bells be rung.

Notice taken that 10 Members were not present.

House counted, and, there being fewer than 10 Members present, the Deputy Speaker ordered the Division Bells to be rung.

Upon 10 Members being present —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member now continue?

Mr Dallat: That is what I get for drawing the Deputy Speaker's attention to the fact that we are not quorate, but, to be honest, I am not sorry for doing it.

Other Members referred to the number of banks queuing up to close their branches. The most recent was the Ulster Bank, which closed the last bank in Portstewart, which is one of our premier seaside resorts. A lot of elderly people purposely retired there, and they will now have to bus it to Coleraine, where, I know, the bank will end up as nothing more than a showroom.

We are very lucky in this part of the country. I will give credit to the Assembly because, in the past, we stood up for the post office. In fact, one of the first pluses for this Assembly was to set up a pilot scheme promoting a one-stop shop. That was tested out in Coleraine many years ago. The post office that we have today would not exist had it not been for local people getting the message out loud and clear that we are not going to go down the road of 60% of medium-sized towns and villages in England where there is no post office and no bank. Northern Ireland cannot afford that.

The people of Northern Ireland have been loyal to the post office and have continued to support it; 70% of our population will visit a post office at least once a week. Post offices are a lifeline for many of our communities, and they have adapted: you find them now in pharmacies, supermarkets and other places that remain open at night. I pay tribute to those in charge of the post office network. They have endeavoured to be flexible and innovative to ensure that the service is not eventually flogged off to rich Tories who want to control transport and public utilities, which should remain in public service.

The post office, to me, is the last of the utilities that we can save. I picked up on an intervention from George Robinson that the new local authority should support the post office, but let us start at home. The Assembly has not been particularly good at supporting the post office and has not availed itself of it as a means of distributing its information, leaflets and all the things that the public need to find out about. I appeal to the 11 or 12 Departments today to get serious about this, put your money where your mouth is and start helping to save the post office from annihilation. Please do not allow the post office to go down the same route as the bank without intervention.

We are largely a rural community, and many of our urban communities are in socially deprived areas where there is a sub-branch of the post office where people can do their business, avail themselves of its benefits and whatever. Can you imagine if there was a further culling of post offices and the cost that there would be to ordinary working-class people to have to go into town centres to do their business? I hope that all Members, including those not in the Chamber this evening — I accept that they probably have very good reasons for not being here — feel that the debate this afternoon stimulates an urgency because we cannot sit on our hands, we cannot daydream, and we cannot sleep if we are going to ignore this issue.

We should learn from experience that we should make our voice known.

6.15 pm

I will finish with this. Recently, I was in Hungary and saw 40,000 people marching, and it scared the wits out of me. What were they marching for? They were campaigning against tax on the Internet: a simple, everyday issue. They appeared on the second day with 50,000 people, and by the next day —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Dallat: — the Government acted. The Government gave in. I hope that we do not have to take to the streets to ensure that the post office remains.

I know that I am pushed for time, but since there was not an awful lot —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Mr Dallat: — of demand, I have abused my privilege.

Mr Kinahan: I am very pleased to speak on the motion, although, having listened to the Member who spoke previously, at one stage, I thought that we were going to get a rendition of Adam Ant's 'Stand and Deliver'. Then we got the bells — the bells from Quasimodo. To be serious, I am very pleased to be here to support the motion. I congratulate Mr Lyttle for pushing it through.

I remember speaking — I think it was six years ago — on another motion, which was six steps to saving our post office. After that, I then concentrated on asking questions, as Mr Lyttle has, and getting many answers. When I went back with the answers to the organisation that had been pushing us, I found that that campaign had waned and gone. What I am really leading up to saying today is that the onus is on all of us here and our colleagues in our parties to make sure that the same does not happen this time.

I wholeheartedly support the motion and, like others, want to acknowledge the tremendous contribution made by the post office network. If you think about it, you realise it is very much behind our health and our happiness as a nation, both in the past and in the future. If any community knew that their post office was under threat, you would find all of them crowding and supporting it in the future. So, let us make sure that we wind this up nicely so that everybody is supportive and works hard to keep the post offices.

I am the fifth Member to speak, so you have heard most of the arguments and the points that have been made. However, I will say that the post office network has faced significant challenges in recent years, including the decline of the high street and the advent of the Internet. We can all tell our own stories of post offices closing in our constituencies over the past decade, both in rural areas and in towns. Whether planned or simply because retiring sub-postmasters have not been replaced, the story, at one level, seems to be one of terminal decline. However, it does not necessarily have to be so. Let us all here ensure that that does not happen.

I want to highlight a recent report commissioned by the Post Office and produced by the Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce (RSA). In 2013-14, the RSA ran a project on post offices as community enterprise hubs. The resulting report, 'Making the Connection', asked how post offices could provide services that support their local communities while also contributing to the bottom line. The report concluded that post offices have great potential to act as community enterprise hubs and that huge opportunities exist for post offices to offer support with everything from universal credit to business advice. The Scottish and Welsh have recognised it, and we should be following their examples.

When looking through the research and on the Web, I was intrigued to see that the United States was also meeting the same difficulties, and I am sure that it is happening worldwide as the Internet and everything changes matters.

The network's future could be transformed by supporting branches to become more entrepreneurial and for branches to experiment with new business models. Let us see that diversification fund there helping them.

In the context of a new trend in the UK towards the local, characterised by growing a microbusiness community and the development of community-based approaches to public service reform, it could be argued that post offices are ideally placed to become community enterprise hubs, which, for instance, could provide business support to make communities and also meet the needs of the UK's ageing population and address the isolation felt by older people. When we look at the wider picture and the challenges faced by our town centres and rural villages, which has already been touched on by many, we see that there have been bank closures, threats to libraries, public houses and Citizens Advice, and police station closures or reductions in opening hours. Therefore, it is now time to take a more strategic view on all of those under-threat services. I feel that the Executive, all Departments and, as the Chair suggested, all councils should work together, not just on post offices but on town and village centres. The post office is just one of the keys.

In the various briefs that we all received for today's debate, numerous Departments responded that they have passed nothing to post offices. Let us keep the pressure on them all. Let us make it work, and let us see them do it. We can all do it through our Committees. Whether it is DVA-related, passports, banking, dog licences, tickets, housing benefits or many of the matters that we have raised already, the post offices could do it if we had a joined-up initiative from the Executive that worked downwards, with someone appointed to drive it from there. Then we probably need someone in every super-council area to do the same.

We could plan the future of our towns around those features. Think about what features will definitely survive. We know that we will always need the key shops such as the grocer's, the butcher's and the newsagent, and we know that we need the schools. We have the pubs and the coffee shops. You have Internet cafes, probably temporarily as fashions change. You have the transport hub in a town or village where the buses stop. If we sit down and look at each town and think how we can work that town better, we can place the post office better into the middle of it and maybe share its workload and, if you use the diversification fund, help it benefit the town or village.

I, too, will talk about Randalstown, where the bank closed last week. I make it clear beforehand that I do not believe that the post office is under threat.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Kinahan: The library has had to be cut back. There is the ideal place to work with: get the post office working with the library. All of us in here should be looking at each town and village, finding the focus and helping it work.

Mr Agnew: The post office has already done a great service today in bringing our politicians together, but, more importantly, on a regular basis, it brings our communities together. Post offices act as community hubs and, historically, have been a key part of our communities. Indeed, they continue to be so.

A number of Members have spoken about bank closures. Recently, Ulster Bank announced that it will close its branch in Donaghadee, leaving my constituents in that town with no local shopfront banking service within six miles. That is regrettable, but at least we have the post office, which will continue to provide banking services. Whilst banks and other profit-making organisations will make such decisions based on numbers, a post office is a public service, and public services should not be based on numbers coming through the door but on the need of those who come through those doors.

It is important that we sustain the post offices. As Danny Kinahan said, many of our post offices are not under threat — many are thriving — but those that are and that provide those important services, often in rural areas and areas that have no walk-in banking services, provide a vital resource to the community.

In my previous role working with the homeless, I witnessed the importance of the Post Office accounts. Many of the residents in the hostel where I worked could not get a bank account. The identification threshold to open a bank account was too high and the security checks were too high, and they could not get a bank account in which to, in many cases, have their benefits lodged. The post office again provided that service, which may not have been commercial. The banks did not see those people as important enough in terms of their number, but a vulnerable group in society was serviced by the post office, and it played a vital role in those people's life.

The report 'A "front office" for government services' has been mentioned, and I will echo some of what has been said. We need to use what is there. We were responding to budget difficulties by cutting staff, but how can we potentially make genuine efficiency savings? One of the ways in which we can do that is to use the services that are there, use the post office and work with it to help it deliver new public services, whether those be advice services, benefits or housing services. Can we, through DSD, get our social security offices working with our post offices to see how they can bring services together, and likewise with other Departments and their provisions?

Finally, the diversification fund of £1 million in Scotland was referred to. Earlier today, I questioned the First Minister on the proposals to cut the rate of corporation tax, which would take approximately £400 million out of public funds. I was told that that was an investment in companies. Today we call on the Executive to make an investment in our communities, whether that be £1 million or £500,000. That investment in our post offices would be an investment in our people. I commend Mr Lyttle for tabling the Adjournment topic and thank Members for uniting around the issue. I call on the Executive to take notice of the Assembly today and act on the issue.

Mr Lyttle: I thank every Member who has contributed to this important debate. We have had a unanimous call for support for our post office network in Northern Ireland and our post office sub-postmasters. That is an important call to be sent to the Executive today. I welcome the contributions that have been made. Pam Cameron, as chair of the all-party group on postal issues, made a vital contribution, making us aware that 20 million people will have used the post office in the past week. She set out the important services that are available from our post office and gave her support to a diversification fund.

With a helpful intervention from George Robinson, she reminded us of the importance of encouraging local government to participate in the process as well and, although recognising that post offices need to adapt, set out just how many households — 5.2 million — have no Internet access. She said how important our post office is as a digital bridge for those people. She helpfully reminded us to support our post offices at the busy Christmas period, and I am sure that MLAs will be making Christmas visits to send our support to the workers at this time.

Cathal Boylan stressed the importance of post offices to rural areas, acknowledged the work of sub-postmasters and gave his support to a diversification fund and the Keep Me Posted campaign. John Dallat expressed his admiration for postal services here in Northern Ireland and his support for the universal postal service. He also highlighted the fact that 70% of the population will visit a post office at least once a week. He emphasised the importance of post offices as a lifeline to our communities and acknowledged that many of them have adapted to changes in communication requirements at this time. He also urged, as many other MLAs did, that we understand the urgency of the issue.

Danny Kinahan referenced the six steps to saving our post office network. That is an important campaign that makes a vital contribution to the work that we need to do as an Assembly and Executive. He also recognised the contribution of the post office network to the social fabric and the health and well-being of our community. He put out the call that states clearly, "Let's not wait until we're facing any further closures". Although many post offices are thriving, we know that there are many sub-postmasters who are under significant pressure.

In a positive vein, he said that we should recognise the centrality of post offices in our community and use that to build and create community enterprise hubs, where not only benefit assistance but business advice and other services could be delivered to our communities.

6.30 pm

Steven Agnew emphasised that, whilst banks are profit-making services and have made decisions in that regard in recent weeks, we must continue to support post offices as a public service that addresses need and must be protected. Indeed, he emphasised the importance of the Post Office card account to the vulnerable in our community. He also referenced the report, 'A "front office" for government services', and called on the Executive and the wider public to make sure that we use the services that are available through our post office. He emphasised that a diversification fund, such as that in Scotland, which is in the region of £1 million, would be an investment in our communities, which every MLA today has supported.

In closing, I welcome the clear cross-party support that we have achieved today for our post office network. A very clear message will go to the Executive on some key points. There is support for a diversification fund. We have seen the Enterprise Minister in Scotland deliver that, as well as the Local Government Department in England. We have seen a £6.6 million investment of that nature in Wales. Another clear message is that we want to see government services provided through our post offices, at regional and local level, and clear support for the Keep Me Posted campaign.

As I mentioned, the task is to gain Executive commitment, and we need Ministers to step forward and act on the call that they have received today. We need them to take responsibility on the issue and not pass it from Department to Department but act in a joined-up manner, for once, and stand up for post offices and postal workers in Northern Ireland. As vice-chair of the all-party group on postal issues, I will continue to work with the chairperson, Pam Cameron MLA, and other MLAs to ensure that we keep the issue on the agenda. I hope that we see substantive, tangible action from Ministers to ensure that we are proactive on the issue.

Resolved:

That this Assembly notes the important contribution made by the post office network to communities and the local economy; recognises the need for increased support from the Executive to ensure the viability of the network in the future; urges the Executive to take action to help sustain these vital services with the availability of more public services through the post office network and establish a post office diversification fund, similar to those which have existed in other regions; and supports the Keep Me Posted campaign, which champions the principle that consumers and businesses have a right to choose how they receive bills and statements without being penalised for requesting such information in paper format.

The Assembly met at 10.30 am (Mr Principal Deputy Speaker [Mr Mitchel McLaughlin] in the Chair).

Assembly Business

Mr Campbell: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. Can you inform the House whether, to your knowledge, the deputy First Minister and leader of Sinn Féin in this place has given any indication to your office that he will come before the Assembly to explain, clarify or apologise — or all three — for the remarks made by the overall leader of Sinn Féin and former Member of this House, Gerry Adams, last night in Enniskillen, when he talked about breaking people in my community?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I did allow you to elaborate. Quite clearly, it is not a point of order. We will proceed.

Mr Allister: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. Is there any indication of a statement from OFMDFM as to the integrity of its equality policy, given that, for one part of that Department, it is a Trojan Horse?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member knows very well that that is not a point of order. He is particularly well equipped to know the difference. It is not a point of order. I do wish that he would desist from abusing the procedures of the House. I am paying careful attention to that abuse. It has been going on for too long and should stop.

Executive Committee Business

Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 (Amendment of section 46(1)) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I beg to move

*That the draft Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002
2014 be approved.*

This draft order seeks to amend section 46(1) of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 in respect of the list of organisations that the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice in Northern Ireland has the power to inspect. This follows a review of the organisations that are currently listed. Since section 46(1) was last revised in 2010, the criminal justice system has evolved, resulting in some changes affecting relevant organisations that require the current legislation to be updated. As a result, this draft order seeks to amend section 46(1) to ensure that the legislation remains relevant and meaningful.

The role of chief inspector of criminal justice is to ensure the inspection of all aspects of the criminal justice system in Northern Ireland, with a view to promoting effectiveness, efficiency and even-handedness. Following an inspection, the chief inspector will prepare a report for me, as Justice Minister, which I will arrange to be laid before the Assembly.

Since the introduction of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002, section 46(1) has been amended on a number of occasions to reflect the evolving operating environment of the criminal justice system and, in particular, the various changes that have impacted on the organisations working in it. The changes relate to organisations that have been added to section 46(1) due to the type of work carried out, organisations that have been omitted and organisations requiring their titles to be amended.

The draft order has been produced following a review of section 46(1) carried out by my Department. The key factors behind initiating the review were the closure of the Compensation Agency, which brought its work within the core Department of Justice, and a proposed private Member's Bill from Robin Swann, which sought to add DARD's central investigation service (CIS) to section 46(1). Following a consultation with Mr Swann and the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, that measure has been included in the order.

As part of the review, ministerial colleagues were asked for their views on section 46(1) in relation to their Departments and arm's-length bodies. Consequently, a few further amendments to section 46(1) were identified as being necessary. Therefore, the draft order proposes the following changes to section 46(1). The Compensation Agency will be removed as it ceased to exist as an agency of the Department of Justice on 1 April last year, and its work has been brought within the core Department. The central investigation service in DARD is to be added to section 46(1) due to the type of work undertaken. CIS investigates allegations of fraud, breaches of scheme conditions and non-compliance with legislation referred by other business areas in DARD. CIS also plays a vital role in the prevention and deterrence of fraud by performing a range of counter-fraud functions, including training in fraud awareness, investigation procedures and court skills. The Veterinary Service enforcement branch, which is also in DARD, is to be added to section 46(1) due to the nature of the work it undertakes, which includes enforcing compliance with legislation relating to animal health and welfare and public health. The description of the health and social services boards and health and social services trusts will be amended to the Health and Social Care Board and health and social care trusts to reflect a change in the description of those organisations. Finally, the description of the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency will be amended to the child maintenance and enforcement division to reflect a name change.

The Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice has been consulted on the proposed amendments to section 46(1), and he is content. Should the Assembly approve the draft order, the updated remit of the Chief Inspector will come into effect from tomorrow. I thank ministerial colleagues and, as usual, the Justice Committee for their consideration of the proposals. It is with their support that I bring the order before the House today. I also acknowledge and thank Robin Swann for his contribution towards bringing forward the order.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Mr Ford: Well, not that much.

The draft order will help to ensure that the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice in Northern Ireland has the appropriate remit to inspect the various organisations working in the criminal justice system and to identify areas in which there is potential for improvement. I commend the draft order to the House.

Mr Givan (The Chairperson of the Committee for Justice): I am pleased to speak very briefly on the motion today on behalf of the Committee for Justice. The Committee considered the proposal for the statutory rule in June this year and the statutory rule itself more recently at the meeting on 22 October 2014. As outlined by the Minister, the rule provides for a refresh of the list of organisations at section 46(1) of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 that the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland (CJINI) has the power to inspect.

The Committee noted that the list of organisations at section 46(1) had become outdated and therefore required amending by the Department of Justice to reflect the title changes of some organisations, remove organisations that no longer exist and, perhaps most importantly, add those organisations carrying out work related to the criminal justice system that are not listed in the legislation. The Committee was also aware that Mr Robin Swann intended to pursue a private Member's Bill, with the purpose of adding the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development's central investigation service to the list of organisations that must be inspected by CJINI. The Department of Justice advised the Committee that the statutory rule could be used to make the change, which was supported by the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. The Committee was content with that approach, which avoided the need for primary legislation. I outlined that the Committee agreed that it was content with the revised list of organisations and the statutory rule, so the Committee gives its support to it.

Let me briefly, too, commend Robin Swann for his initiative in pursuing this item with the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. We have been able to expedite it in a fashion that achieved what he wanted. So I commend the Member for those efforts.

CJINI is an organisation that many of us have a lot of respect for because of the way in which it goes about its work in carrying out inspections. It is important that there is public confidence that all these organisations are doing the job appropriately, and CJINI can provide that assurance to us as elected representatives on behalf of the people of Northern Ireland. I think that it is right that we update the list today and support the statutory rule before us.

Mr Swann: After endorsements from both the Minister and the Chair, it would be remiss of me if I did not inform the House and put on record why I brought a private Member's Bill to include the Central Investigation Service in the list that can be inspected by Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland.

The first question that the Minister raised was why CIS was not on the list, and I found that quite strange when I started to investigate. The reason that DARD gave was that CIS was not on the list in section 46 of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act because it did not exist in 2002. Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, that is correct. CIS did not exist in 2002; it was called the Fraud Investigation Unit. Its name was changed in 2002, so it fell outside the Act. That was one of the concerns that started to alert me to why this unit needed to be included under Criminal Justice Inspection.

Also, when you look at the efficiency and proficiency of the organisation in investigating fraud, there was something that raised concerns. Over a five-year period between 2009 and 2014, CIS investigated 1,286,000 cases of potential fraud; over that five-year period they brought in the region of 66,000 successful prosecutions. That is a success rate of 5.15% on the cases that they looked into. The cost of the unit over that time was £733,000, so it did not look to be an efficient unit when running at its best.

The Minister referred to the fact that part of its remit is in fraud training, and CIS says that that is one of its main concerns. Something that concerned me was that we have a unit in the Department of Agriculture providing fraud awareness training to DCAL, DARD and OFMDFM, yet the approved DFP provider for fraud awareness training in Northern Ireland Civil Service Departments is the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy. It is not actually CIS, although it claims that that is its core reason for existing.

Here we have a unit in the Department of Agriculture that is training other Departments in how they should investigate fraud, but in DARD's 2010-11 Resource Accounts for the year ended 31 March 2011, the Comptroller and Auditor General stated at paragraph 22:

"I am concerned that most of the suspected fraud cases referred to CIS during 2010-2011 had not been reported to me as required by Managing Public Money Northern Ireland."

So here we have a unit in DARD providing training to other Departments on how to investigate and manage fraud not following the procedures that it was training other Departments to use.

In the round, and the Minister indicated this in his explanation, CIS is a fraud investigation unit in the Department of Agriculture. That is correct; that is where the unit sits. However, it has investigated fraud in the Department of Agriculture, in the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure and in the Department of Health; it was the organisation that undertook the inquiry into the whole-time recruitment, overtime and expense claims of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service. It investigated fraud in OFMDFM and is reportedly the unit that found that a fraud investigation should be carried out on Families Acting for Innocent Relatives (FAIR). It did not actually undertake the investigation, but it was responsible for it.

As a unit sitting within our Agriculture Department, it also had the responsibility to investigate fraud within the SEUPB. So, it gave it a remit to investigate fraud cases in the Republic of Ireland and Scotland. However, the main issue was that, when I met departmental officials in regard to that, they were unaware that the service level agreement for one of their units actually allowed it to act outside Northern Ireland.

10.45 am

The main reason why I became interested in this unit was not because of what I have outlined; it was because of a Deloitte report that came about because of the operations of the unit. Out of five investigators who were employed at that time, three used whistle-blowing protocols so that they could highlight their concerns. I will raise some of those. They are from Project Rainbow. At 4.16 of the report, it states:

"In summary, Mr Murphy had claimed for £51,000 of funding for the construction of a farm building under FNMS. However, Grants and Subsidies Inspection Branch had identified that the building that Mr Murphy was claiming for was not at the required stage of completion by the date of the scheme's deadline. Nevertheless, DARD made an advance payment to Mr Murphy of circa £25,000."

The report goes on to state:

"However, prior to conducting an interview, the Head of CIS decided to close the case."

And:

"An additional issue for the whistleblowers with regard to this case was that Mr Murphy had political connections and had been lobbying the Minister for DARD. The whistleblowers were therefore concerned that the case may have been dropped due to political pressures."

Deloitte could not find any written evidence of that, so it was included in the recommendations that that protocol should be strengthened.

Paragraph 4.25 of the Deloitte Rainbow report refers to a McDaid case. It states:

"This relates to allegations made by the whistleblowers that the Head of CIS acted unlawfully by not following the law on disclosure and investigation procedure in the following ways:

- allowing a defence solicitor unaccompanied access to the McDaid investigation file; and
- fabricating investigation notes."

The report goes on to state:

"It was evident from our review that the particular diary entry of 14 April 2005 had been made retrospectively by the Head of CIS as it made reference to McDaid, although he had not been identified as a potential suspect at the time. This raises concerns that the notebook entries may have been completed retrospectively rather than contemporaneously. This could have had a detrimental impact on the case for the prosecution had it gone to court."

Those are two cases that were raised by the whistleblowers that were investigated by Deloitte and put forward in Project Rainbow back in 2010. There was no move made by any other body or group to investigate these cases to find out what had been going on.

When I pushed DARD on whether it followed the 10 recommendations from Project Rainbow, it said that it had implemented most of them. The one that it did not implement was the final one, which is at paragraph 4.36:

"Once all the above issues have been suitably addressed, consideration could also be given as to whether CIS should be subject to an independent review by an appropriate external party to ensure that the arrangements in place within the branch are 'fit for purpose' and aligned to good investigatory practice."

Unquestionably, the Agriculture Department, the Department of Justice and both Ministers indicated that they were willing to engage with each other, but they never seemed to actually get over the line. That was the reason why I brought my private Member's Bill.

I thank the Minister for engaging so quickly in bringing CIS under the remit of the Criminal Justice Inspection. Following the introduction of this statutory rule and CIS being brought under CJI, and on the back of Project Rainbow and the concerns that were raised, did he contact CJI and ask it to move to an investigation of CIS?

Mr Ford: I repeat my thanks to the Committee Chair for the work that the Committee did in considering this rule. One of the key points that was made was when he referred to the respect with which CJINI is held among those of us who work across the justice system. There is absolutely no doubt that, sometimes, the reports produced by the Chief Inspector make uncomfortable reading. That is why they are so valuable. We know that we will get an accurate picture from the work that CJINI does and that we will not get anything that has any suggestion of a cover-up. We will always see the full warts-and-all picture. That is why it is important that we ensure that the list in section 46(1) is up to date. Mr Swann eloquently explained the concerns that he had about CIS within DARD and why it needed to be included. The point the Chair made about the confidence and respect that we have for CJINI is the answer to those concerns and will ensure that things are done.

I do, however, have to be cautious of his final request that I should ask CJINI to move. He referred to allegations of political pressure and, as ever as Minister, I need to be careful that I am not pressuring the normal procedure, which is that suggestions come from CJINI for a work programme that I approve.

I will be in communication with the Chief Inspector after this debate on the presumption that the House is about to pass the measure. I believe that the measure will, as was outlined by Mr Givan, Mr Swann and myself, facilitate the Chief Inspector in properly considering an appropriate list of organisations as it stands. Section 46(1) will be the appropriate and up-to-date list that will enable the Chief Inspector to consider his work programme. On that basis, I ask Members to support the motion.

That the draft Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 (Amendment of section 46(1)) Order (Northern Ireland) 2014 be approved.

Dalriada Hospital MS Respite Centre: Closure

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes to propose and 10 minutes to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who wish to speak will have five minutes.

Mr Swann: I beg to move

That this Assembly notes the decision to close the regional multiple sclerosis respite centre at Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle until March 2015 and transfer the service to the independent sector; further notes the importance of appropriate respite provision for patients and their families; believes the decision to be entirely wrong and one which makes no financial sense; fears the decision will result in the permanent closure of the centre; and calls on the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to reverse the decision and immediately reinstate the service at Dalriada Hospital.

Thank you very much, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I suppose it is with disappointment that I have to move this motion. The content of the motion, as read by the Clerk and drafted by us, is nothing that I have not heard from the community, elected reps and pressure groups in regard to Dalriada.

It was Nye Bevan — I suppose, the father of the NHS — who said no society could legitimately call itself civilised if a sick person was denied medical aid because of a lack of means. I want to follow on from that with a quotation from one of the users of the respite centre at our first meeting at Bushmills, and Mervyn Storey was there that night. Robert Weiner, when he heard of the closure of the respite centre, said: "I thought of death, I thought of self-harm and I thought my life was ended". That was one of the most moving contributions to this whole campaign I have heard since it started.

It has been an incredible campaign, from the public meetings at Bushmills, Cushendall and Ballycastle, to a petition that I am sure now has over 20,000 signatures, to a tractor run, white-line protests, public protests, a religious service of hope last night in Sheskburn, and a campaign to Stormont last week.

The motion is a cross-party one, and there is nothing in its sentiments that the political representatives have not expressed at some stage during this campaign, which finished, of course, with the Minister's visit on Friday. I personally thank the Minister for taking the time to visit the unit so that he could see at first hand exactly what an excellent facility it is, and the services there. One of the benefits of devolution is that we have Ministers who can make these decisions and go and see at first hand what is happening.

I said at the last public meeting at Ballycastle that I knew the Minister was hearing the message but I was hoping that he was starting to listen to what it meant. I get the feeling from him that he understands from the people of Ballycastle the importance of the unit and what it has been delivering. Minister, I hope that you are listening to the people and not just to the information that has been provided by the trust, because, on the numbers presented about the costs, counterarguments have been made.

The Minister has said in the past that the decisions coming forward are the least-worst options and certainly not the best ones. I could not agree more, Minister: it is definitely not the best option to close any part of Dalriada.

I will set out my understanding of the process, and the Minister can correct me or update us later. The trust made recommendations to the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) on how to save the money. The Health and Social Care Board then made those recommendations to the Department, and the Department made those recommendations to the Minister. In the words of the trust, some were accepted and some were not. Those that were accepted were passed back to the trust to implement.

The Minister has asked us to give alternatives, but perhaps he can explain to the House what the alternatives to the closure of Dalriada were. Is the closure of Dalriada acceptable compared with the alternatives? The words "temporary closure" have been used — a temporary closure until the end of March. However, the Minister has warned that "temporary" may mean "permanent" in some cases. That is where we are at.

Mr Wilson: I thank the Member for giving way. He is making a very compelling case for Dalriada. However, does he accept that it is not simply a case of batting this back to the Minister, because any alternative is likely to affect those of us who represent constituencies in the Northern Trust area? It is therefore important that, if there is to be an alternative to Dalriada, there be some input from local representatives. That is why the Minister is quite right to say, "Let's hear what you want instead of the closure of Dalriada".

Mr Swann: I thank the Member for his contribution, but that is the point that I made earlier. There was no engagement with us, as public representatives, prior to the closure of Dalriada, so we did not have an alternative. As I said, the trust made recommendations to the Health and Social Care Board, which then made those recommendations to the Department. The Department then made those recommendations to the Minister, and some were accepted and some were not. I say to Sammy Wilson —

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Will the Member give way?

Mr Swann: I will give way.

Mr Wells: In case this runs as an argument, that was not the case. There was no second division. We asked the trust to come up with a series of savings, and it came back with a list to meet the target. No alternatives were given, and there was no decision by me that favoured one over another. The list that I have is the entire list, and the Member has it. There are no other options on the table.

Mr Swann: You need to question the chief executive of the Northern Trust, then, because that is what he told me and a number of my party colleagues yesterday in front of witnesses. He said that there were alternatives put, of which some were accepted and some were not. As I said earlier, if the Minister is taking the word solely of the trust in this argument, that is a fine example of the trust telling you one story and telling other people something else.

This is not about point-scoring, Minister. I know that you have a tough job to do. You have asked us to provide alternatives, but we were told yesterday that you had been provided with alternatives to the closure of Dalriada. If that is not the case, it is something that you have to take up —

Mr Weir: Will the Member give way?

Mr Swann: I have given way already, Peter. I do not want to use up too much of my time by taking interventions. You will have time to speak later.

Minister, you have talked about the use of consultation and about wanting to consult, which is what Sammy Wilson referred to. We were led to believe yesterday that, after the closure of Dalriada on 30 November, the trust intends to go out to consultation on the temporary closure. Following that, it could go out to consultation on the permanent closure. If that is the consultation that the Minister is talking about when he says that he wants to consult, that concerns us, the public, the people of Ballycastle and everybody who has been involved in the campaign. We are looking at a decision that has been made and approved, and we are going out to consultation for the sake of it.

Some people have talked about us closing the stable door after the horse has bolted. I do not want it to be the case that we close the door of Dalriada after the service has been removed.

Mr McKinney: Will the Member give way?

Mr Swann: Briefly.

11.00 am

Mr McKinney: Thank you for your indulgence: I know that you are under pressure of time. A lot of these considerations are around finance. Does the Member agree that there is a risk that there could be further, raised costs because, according to the MS Society, inadequate respite provision can lead to declining health?

Mr Swann: Having met the MS Society, I know that that has raised great concerns; the support should be there as well.

Alternatives were proposed regarding two care homes. The Minister said, and much was made of the fact, that those homes were visited by two of the users and a member of the MS Society. Minister, you are relying on the fact that those people visited those homes, but what has been made very clear to me, and very clear to us yesterday, is the fact that those people went in good faith to see the facilities. They were not there to endorse them or give any sort of recommendation that they were better than Dalriada; they went in good faith to see what could be offered. I hope that the Minister does not take that to be an accepted alternative by the users of the respite centre at Dalriada Hospital.

I find it hard that, when we talk about the health service and Bevan's ideal, it all comes down to numbers. Minister, you answered a question that I asked a couple of weeks ago. You said that, out of 4,000 MS sufferers across Northern Ireland, only 69 had used the centre. Minister, there are trusts that do not use Dalriada because they have halted their contracts with the Northern Health Trust. That is why there is nobody going there from other trusts. They are given a budget to manage MS respite centres; how are the other trusts using that money? Are they using it well or efficiently? Dalriada provides a regional service. If those trusts have removed that service, surely it is up to the Minister to provide a regional service and coordinate the trusts?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, I have been generous with my time, and there is a lot more that I could have said and wanted to say. Minister, I do not believe that this has been an honest fight.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up, I am afraid.

Mr Swann: The trust has been standing on Dalriada's neck whilst it claimed to be holding its hand.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up. You were very generous with your time, and you handled interventions with some skill and forbearance, but this is obviously a topic about which people are very engaged and anxious, so I suggest that remarks are addressed through the Chair. You handled it particularly well, but, for the general management of the Assembly and discussion, all remarks should be made through the Chair, please.

Mr Storey: It is sad that we stand in the shadow of comments made that somehow bring into question our own personal legitimacy, but no comment can be made to deny that there is a legitimate concern about the future of the provision in Dalriada.

I have lived in the constituency all my life. The hospital was opened in 1963 by Terence O'Neill. There is no doubt that the campaign that has been mounted over the last number of weeks is a credit to that community. Yes, it is disappointing that comments have been made as an attempt to politicise the issue, but they were not made by those who organised the protests and the campaign and who have been very focused on one thing: ensuring that they reflect the concerns in the community of Ballycastle and the wider area. I commend the Member for bringing the motion to the House.

I think that it would do us all well to consider a couple of things. First, we need to have a clear understanding of the services that are provided at Dalriada. It is not only a criticism of the trusts today but also a criticism of the trusts in the past that a hospital that was built to the highest spec in 1963 and was one of the most modern hospitals to be built in Northern Ireland was not allowed to be fully developed over the years. The Member wants me to give way.

Mr Swann: I will pick up the Member's point. MS respite services were put there specifically for that reason after Peter Stott Martin House in Cullybackey was closed.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Storey: Thank you. I am going way back before that. Let us remember that Dalriada is the only hospital provision in the North Antrim constituency. Coleraine, where the Causeway Hospital is, is in East Londonderry, and Antrim Area Hospital is in South Antrim. So, I believe that, in the past, there was, unfortunately, a failure to address the needs of our community in terms of hospital provision.

Mr McKinney: Thank you very much indeed for giving way. Will the Member accept that, despite that, there has now gathered an accumulated excellence around the care of MS sufferers and that to dissipate that will have wider financial and health implications?

Mr Storey: That is the point that I want to come to. As I have said, we now need to have an understanding of the services we provide and that are provided in that hospital. It is not just about the step-up provision, and that is a very important role. It is about the MS provision. I pay tribute to the MS Society and to Patricia and those who are in the Public Gallery today, including Pat Crossley, who is a long-standing friend and colleague. I am delighted that they are here, but coming to the Assembly today and hearing from me what it is that they have all done will not be enough to ensure that the community is convinced that there is not a plan that, ultimately, is about the removal of that service.

This morning, we are going to hear from all Members about alternatives. The Minister —

Mr Wilson: Will the Member give way?

Mr Storey: Yes, Sammy.

Mr Wilson: Will the Member share my concerns that, for some time, there has been, across a number of trusts, a desire to remove and close down certain facilities and that the current financial situation is being used as a cover to do something that may well have been, as he is describing, a long-term plan anyway?

Mr Storey: That is the point that I was going to come to. Let us look at MS provision. Those who represent the MS Society will know that this is the case. For a long, long time, since I became an elected Member in North Antrim, this has been a concern. Clearly, there was a devised mechanism that was about ensuring that people were not being referred to the facility, and I think that the Member has made reference to that. That has been part of the reason that has created one of the difficulties.

However, there is another alternative, and I want to make this point. This is not a cheap political point but a call to every Member in this House of every party. All of the political parties in north Antrim have coalesced around the Save the Dal campaign, but we all know when we come through those Doors on occasions in this House, we are asked to support and endorse the spending of money on projects that bring little financial or economic benefit to the people we claim to serve. I say to Members that this is the challenge for us all if health is a priority. Yes, the Health Minister has got additional money, and, yes, the matter of how you feed that large machine is difficult.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Storey: Here is the challenge to us. Can we ensure that, as a priority, health is put at the top of that list and we then collectively ensure that the Health Minister is given the resources that he needs so that we are not put in this position on a repeated and recurrent basis?

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I support the motion. The front page of today's 'County Antrim Post' sums it up quite well. It says: "D-Day for Dalriada", and that is the view of the community in Ballycastle and the north coast. It is that today is the decision day, and they expect a decision and a firm opinion on the future of Dalriada from the Minister today.

The past few weeks have been fantastic in terms of the campaign that has been mounted by the Save the Dal group. It is quite clear that the MS unit has been run down. It has been run down deliberately.

Social workers have been told not to make referrals to the Dal. Of course, the MS unit is not just for the people of the north coast or Ballycastle. It is for people with multiple sclerosis across the North.

The civil servants and the Northern Trust need to be challenged, and the Minister does not need to be let off the hook altogether. At the end of the day, he has to be accountable for the actions of all those in his Department.

There has clearly been an agenda to run down the MS unit and the Dalriada, and a lot of that has to do with those at senior levels in the trust. The treatment of staff, patients and the entire community by the Northern Trust over the past two weeks has been absolutely shameful. I spoke to staff last week, and they were informed that they would start to be moved out of the Dalriada yesterday — Monday. I contacted senior officials in the Northern Trust, who told me that staff would absolutely not be moved on Monday and that that was false information. I went back to the staff, who told me that they had not been told otherwise, and I then went back to the senior officials, who told me that they had got it wrong.

Something is going on, and I think that there is and has been an effort by Northern Trust officials to try to pull the wool over the eyes of elected officials of the community on different issues over the years. The Minister needs to get to grips with that issue and with the board of the Northern Trust. Indeed, when it comes to savings, the board and the Northern Trust never look at themselves or at the amount of money that is spent on their wages, yet they are quite happy to turn to front-line services.

Mr Wells: Will the Member give way?

Mr McMullan: Will the Member give way?

Mr McKay: Yes.

Mr Wells: I think that I was first. Even if I accept the Member's premise, and we did lay off management — 90% of our management costs are on staff — we would not receive any savings for three years. So that suggestion would not get me out of the intense difficulty that I am in. I have to find £70 million by the end of March 2015.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr McKay: Thank you. Part of the problem is that those things have not been done. They were not done two, three or four years ago to ensure that we have the savings now for front-line services in the Dalriada.

Every time that savings have to be made, they seem to come from front-line services. They especially seem to be made from services in rural areas, and this decision was not rural proofed. The Dalriada was seen as a soft touch by the Northern Trust and an easy option that would not get any resistance from the community. What we have learned and what we already knew is that the Dalriada is a gold standard hospital that is absolutely at the heart of the local community.

I received correspondence from one constituent, who outlined his experience. Of course, the Minister will have got a number of similar pieces of correspondence in recent times. I want to read from that letter:

"My father lost a leg in 2003. His operation took place in Musgrave. He thought he was finished. The longer he stayed in Musgrave, the lower he got. This was the first time that I ever saw my father cry when we were leaving him after visiting time. Then a bed became available in the Dalriada. From the day he arrived in the Dalriada and started receiving visits from the locals, his whole life began to improve. He improved to the extent that he eventually got home. He then got his artificial leg and learned to walk again. He started driving and taking an interest in the livestock again. This would never have happened if he had had to stay in hospitals in Belfast. He was a countryman.

Shortly after this, my mother developed Alzheimer's. She was able to manage at home with my sisters looking after her and my father keeping an eye on her when they were not about. When the bed was needed in the Causeway Hospital, when she was admitted to the Causeway Hospital, she was moved back down to Dalriada. My father was able to visit her twice a day. He was able to talk to her and keep her company. She was in pain. She needed nursing care. She could not come home. With Alzheimer's, she did not know why she was sore. The nurses were the only ones that could move her. With no beds in the Causeway, where would she have gone if the Dalriada had not been there?"

I know that I am short of time, but he went on to conclude:

"We are a rural community, and we need our rural hospital."

The fact of the matter is that the economics and the financial case do not stack up. We know that the beds in the Causeway Hospital are starting to fill up at over £2,000 a time. The Dalriada beds are still there. They are being blocked; no admissions are being made; and they cost some £800 a time. It is a false economy. The facts are there, but they are not being presented by the Northern Trust. The Minister needs to challenge his officials —

11.15 am

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr McKay: He needs to challenge the trust, and he needs to robustly challenge the agenda —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I call Mr Fearghal McKinney.

Mr McKay: — that is being put forward by the Northern Trust.

Mr McKinney: I welcome the opportunity to join those supporting the Dal campaign and welcome them to the Public Gallery. I support the motion calling on the Health Minister to reverse the Northern Trust's decision.

I was delighted to see the strength of support here at Stormont last week. I think that all parties joined those who campaigned and brought those 20,000 signatures to Stormont. I also attended the Bushmills rally last Tuesday; it was packed to the gills. It is clear that the facility is prized and valued by those who use it and the local community, and it has political backing. It provides high-level care for people with MS. We must recognise the extent to which that illness puts severe pressure and demands on the individual and their family. Respite provision there is all the more important, as is a respite centre of excellence.

It is important to look at the context of what has happened. We all know that the health service is under severe pressure and that there are financial pressures; we have to be mature about those things. However, it is how cuts are being administered that is a real concern. The House will be aware, and I have reminded it many times, of the plan at the heart of the health service — Transforming Your Care (TYC). Given the context of TYC, which is putting care into the community, you might think that facilities like this would be the last to be cut and that people would start to think in the long term.

I have listened to the new head of the Health and Social Care Board. While these have been described as temporary cuts, nothing that was said in a recent interview with her convinced me that some of these will not end up being longer-term cuts. The picture presented in Ballycastle is being replicated in Bangor, Armagh and Down. Services that have the potential to take the weight off the more expensive side are being cut, as I said, in a short-term context. We are also concerned that they are being cut against the backdrop of trusts' bottom lines.

Mr Dallat: Will the Member give way?

Mr McKinney: I will.

Mr Dallat: Does the Member agree that Members cannot possibly sit on their hands and allow the most vulnerable people in society to have their rights taken away from them? Given that this is a week in which the Assembly has got bad publicity, is there a golden opportunity, this morning, to send out a positive message to wider society? I am sorry that the Minister is grinning, because I am not grinning. I have been at the public meetings —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Through the Chair.

Mr Dallat: — and I know the feeling in north Antrim. Does the Member agree that there is an opportunity, this morning, to send out a message from the Assembly that we really care for those who need our help?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute. I remind the House that all remarks should be made through the Chair. I will insist on that.

Mr McKinney: I thank the Member for his very helpful intervention. Mr Dallat's pedigree in promoting rights is well established. We understand that in the terms of rights and in the terms of caring. We need to ask questions about TYC. Are any of these plans consistent with TYC? What longer-term impact will they have on TYC ambitions? Where is the consistency in trusts' decision-making?

I have a paper on how the Department understands it will take on unscheduled care. It is based on the views of the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA). What does the RQIA say about the need for trusts' decision-making processes to be improved?

The paper talks of the need for better regional coordination, better information-sharing between trusts, better planning across and between trusts, and a clear strategic vision set by the Minister. Coordination, better sharing, better planning and a vision — can the Minister please tell the House where those ambitions are in terms of these cuts? It looks as if we will have one plan that aims to streamline things and which has a forward-looking and long-term ambition at its core, and another short-term plan that will undermine that.

There is another plan, and, once again, it is a contradiction. Apparently, according to the Minister last week, in a specific answer to our leader Dr Alasdair McDonnell, there was little danger that any of the trust's decision-making was going to impact on the centre, but they found £5 million. The Minister said:

"I hope that the extra £5 million that has been allocated will assure the Member that that will not happen." —
[Official Report (Hansard), Bound Volume 99, p237, col 1].

The question had been about whether one trust decision would impact on others. So, they found extra money. Could they not take some of that extra money and give it to the trusts and allow the longer-term plan to continue?

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: I thank the Member for giving way. Does the Member agree that the Minister should instruct and stand over the trust to conduct full impact assessments on these very basic front-line services?

Mr McKinney: I thank the Member for the intervention. I do not know whether we will have time for that. I think that the Minister needs to make an announcement today that he will stop the cuts. The individuals who find themselves vulnerable, with their back against the sea in Ballycastle, have thrown themselves in the courts of public opinion and political opinion, and they have substantial support in both. Minister, please stop these cuts.

Mr McCarthy: I fully support the comments made by Fearghal McKinney. On behalf of the Alliance Party, I support the motion. Any proposed reduction in health service provision for our community causes real concern. It is right and proper that the community and elected representatives speak up loud and clear in the hope that officials in the Department get the message.

The closure or, indeed, temporary closure, as we have been told, of the excellent facility is, on the surface, a reflection of the in-year financial pressures that continue to be experienced by the Department of Health, notwithstanding the generous reallocation of budgets to the Department through the June and October monitoring rounds. The fact that the situation has arisen raises questions regarding the financial management or mismanagement and planning over the last few years and begs questions over the future sustainability of the health budget in coming years.

As has already been said, over 4,000 people across Northern Ireland suffer from multiple sclerosis. Respite to give some essential support to carers is absolutely vital. I note that this is a regional facility offering a service to all the people of Northern Ireland. We hope that the Northern Trust can find the shortfall to keep Dalriada open, given that we are only talking about £600,000. However, it appears that the trust has very little room for manoeuvre.

If any immediate salvation is to come, it is more likely that the resources can be found from the Department. I acknowledge the situation that the Department finds itself in, but if there was an epidemic, God forbid, in the morning, I can assure you that the Department would find whatever money it would take to get on top of that. We acknowledge that it will not be easy given the pressures that the Department is under, but we must make an effort.

Many questions have been asked about what will happen from April 2015 onwards. Surely, there is greater scope to restore funding in that context. That, in turn, begs the question: what wider reforms or savings can be undertaken to ensure provision of resources for Dalriada Hospital's regional multiple sclerosis respite centre? Reaction against the closure has been strong, and rightly so. I believe that it is a combination of the loss of the facility and a scepticism over the reliability of the alternative provision offered. That is an ever-increasing concern with respect to Transforming Your Care.

The Transforming Your Care document is the journey that we are all on. We have supported it up until now. It is a fundamentally sound policy intention, but it has been undermined in the absence of a significant and transparent transfer of resources into community provision and primary care.

Mr McCallister: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCarthy: I will at the end, John, if I have time. I believe that there is a requirement for the new Minister to give a clear sense of direction as to how he intends to strategically plan and manage the future provision of health and social care as we move forward.

We know that the available resources are not going to keep pace with the growing levels of demand. Therefore, some tough and radical decisions will have to be taken in relation to ensuring that there are efficiencies and less waste throughout the entire health service. That will entail a stronger focus on public health and primary care and on ensuring that resources are invested in the community and in a consolidated acute service provision. That should free up resources to ensure the long-term sustainability of the MS respite centre at Dalriada, which should continue to provide that service, for which demand will only increase.

Every Member will be aware of how crucial respite care and respite breaks are for MS patients and, indeed, their carers. It is simply a lifeline that contributes to the well-being of all concerned. Without respite provision, MS patients can experience declining health, which inevitably leads to costly hospital admissions. That is exactly the opposite of what Transforming Your Care advocates. Surely the officers at the Northern Trust and, indeed, the Minister, who is with us today, must appreciate that cutting this respite facility will lead to much more being spent, because MS patients will be admitted to hospital. Let us retain Dalriada. It simply makes sense.

Mr Frew: I support the motion and, indeed, the wider campaign. It has been an absolutely tremendous campaign that has not been fought by one union against another or managed by one union but managed by the people. It has been managed by the people of Ballycastle, the northern glens area, Rathlin Island and everywhere in between, coming right down into the very heart of Ballymoney, Limavady, Coleraine and much further afield.

When you look at the tremendous campaign on Facebook and Twitter, you will see that this issue has gone global. It has gone to the very western shore of the United States and even to the Middle East and further afield. That is because people genuinely support Dalriada Hospital. The people of Ballycastle and the other areas know exactly what Dalriada means to them and to their community. Make sure, Minister, that, when these decisions are made and the trusts put forward propositions like this, there is not simply a closure and that is the end of it. I am still hearing on the doorsteps of Ballymena that we lost provision in that town to Antrim. I still get that at the doors in my constituency. It will hurt for generations if this hospital is to disappear.

There are challenges in the health service. There is no denying that. Those challenges have not been helped — let us face it; my colleague Mervyn Storey raised it — by people in the Chamber campaigning for Tory cuts or by Members of parties in the Chamber campaigning on, holding back or delaying agreement on in-year monitoring and Budgets. But we are where we are. Let me say that the campaign has been fought with the parties all fighting and singing from the same hymn sheet. Can I just —

Mr McNarry: I thank the Member for giving way. Let me tell him that, in Strangford, we too very much support the Dalriada campaign. My question to him is this: does he agree with me that what is happening in Dalriada is causing great worry and concern to carers throughout every constituency in Northern Ireland because of the respite problem? Does he also agree that if Dalriada can be fixed, there will be great relief to carers throughout the country?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Frew: Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, and I thank the Member for his intervention. It is a valid point that I will come to very shortly.

The parties have worked well together — some more than others. Nonetheless, every party has done its own thing and has played its part in this campaign. At every public meeting, rally and protest, we have been united because we know how important this facility is for MS respite to our people and to wider Northern Ireland. It is clear that, throughout many years, the trust not only failed to promote the unit but actively engaged in demotion. That is the problem that we face: the actions and agendas of the Northern Trust. That is the case in not only this sphere of health but all spheres.

There is no doubt in my mind that social workers have been told not to mention Dalriada and not to refer patients to Dalriada. I have no doubt that doctors, GPs, surgeons and other specialists have been told, "Do not mention Dalriada. Do not write letters of support. Do not mention Dalriada at public meetings. Do not mention it at all". They have been gagged by the Northern Trust, Minister.

11.30 am

In my opinion, the actions of the Northern Trust have been anti-health, and that is no reflection on the specialists in our hospitals at the side of patients' beds. They do tremendous work under great pressure, but their organisation fails them day in, day out. It is failing the patients in those beds. When will the trust stop talking about the empty beds and start caring about the people in the beds, who need tremendous care and support? Is it right to send people aged between 30 and 40 with MS to residential homes to be in the company of people in their 70s, 80s and 90s? I say no. This is exactly what we want: we want specialisms in one place to care for the people who suffer —

Mr McKinney: Will the Member give way?

Mr Frew: Yes, I will.

Mr McKinney: Can the Member point to any effective costings that have been put forward for the alternative provision?

Mr Frew: That is a very valid point. The trust's figures do not even add up. Even when we look at the figures

— let us keep this very basic — the cost of a bed in the Causeway is £2,000, as my colleague across the way Daithí McKay mentioned, while in Dalriada it is £800. That economy has to be looked at and scrutinised, and the trust has to be scrutinised for its figures —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Frew: — and how it uses its money. Thank you for my time, Mr Deputy Principal Speaker. I support Dalriada Hospital 100%.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: I preface my remarks by saying that health was protected. In fact, we were quite central to its protection. Do we need more? Of course we need more, but we should reflect on the fact that £200 million was allocated to health, and it was the only Department that was protected. Hard decisions have to be taken, and we need to know whether the budget goes in the right direction. There are many, many questions around the current spend in health. I welcome the opportunity to support the motion, because the decision to close the facility is, at the very best, short-sighted and, at the very worst, counterproductive.

Mr Wilson: I thank the Member for giving way. I am glad that she has recognised that priority was given by the Executive and the Assembly to the health budget. She said that the important thing is whether the money is going in the right direction. That is a question that we need to ask. Does she have any suggestions to make about the incorrect way in which money has been allocated and where the Minister ought to look for the savings that would enable the issue to be dealt with?

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: I thank the Member for his intervention. Quite simply, the answer is yes. When Members and those in the wider world look at scenarios in which £34 million goes to senior consultants as bonuses, when they reflect on the fact that between £55 million and £65 million goes to the independent sector every year and when they consider the fraud and waste that the former Health Minister by his own admission acknowledged, they will see that spend is clearly going in the wrong direction.

I return to the point that this decision is counterproductive. It is counterproductive because it is contrary to the very vision and implementation of the Transforming Your Care agenda. The Health Minister stated in the Chamber:

"The decisions that I have to take are not long term and strategic". — [Official Report (Hansard), Bound Volume 99, p34, col 1].

How can decisions that are not strategic provide better health outcomes for patients and families across the North?

The Northern Trust has indicated that it will save £600,000 from the closure of beds in Dalriada. That is a mere drop in the ocean when we look at the current spend on health. As has been stated by a number of Members, the MS regional unit at the Dalriada Hospital is the only dedicated respite unit across the North, and, as Members have said, it provides much-needed support and specialist care — that has been acknowledged — that enables people suffering from MS to have an enjoyable and, importantly, a safe, short break. It is important to reflect on the fact that 75% of people with MS in the North of Ireland receive unpaid care. That is an important commentary. The cost of carers to the economy in the North of Ireland is £4.4 billion. The respite unit is an essential service, as has been well documented, and it allows MS sufferers and carers to receive that specialist care, which, in turn, importantly, enables them to continue to live independently. Again, that is a key component of the Transforming Your Care agenda.

Last week, we debated a motion to ensure that full equality impact assessments are carried out. I accept that the motion today calls for the reversal of this decision. That is right and proper, but the Minister also has a duty to ensure that local trusts are following his direction in terms of the protection of front-line services. That motion was not passed in the House. How then can the Department advocate the protection of front-line services when trusts are cutting the very services that are needed to protect and deliver those functions? Last week, the Minister announced, in response to a question from me, that £18 million will be allocated through the monitoring round to deal with trust pressures. I suggest that there is an alternative: use that money to ensure that the Dalriada facility remains open and that the important respite care for patients and families continues. Go raibh maith agat.

Mr D McIlveen: The problem with speaking late in a debate is that most of what can be said has been said. There is little that I can add. I support entirely the comments that have been made by Members who spoke previously in support of the very important facility in Dalriada.

In the strongest possible terms, I echo some of the words condemning the actions of the trust in this regard. I believe sincerely that the Northern Trust has been found wanting in the way in which this whole sorry scenario has been handled. I say that for three reasons. First, the Minister's point is well made, and I accept entirely that, when there is a reduction in middle management in any trust, it will take at least three years to absorb any savings that come from that. However, five months into the existing Conservative/ Liberal Democrat coalition, George Osborne was very clear that there would be cuts across all the devolved regions of the United Kingdom. Therefore, in my view, the Northern Trust has had four years to put its house in order but has failed to do so. It is entirely unfair that the pressure that is now being placed on our community is being done at this late stage, when there was plenty of advance notice for the trust to deal with that and to put its house in order.

Mr Cree: I thank the Member for giving way. He makes a valid point. In the case of Bangor and the South Eastern Trust, we were told that four months was not enough to plan a strategic action. In fact, it was admitted to be non-strategic. We now know that the budget figures were known in summer 2013 and that nothing was done until summer 2014. Perhaps the Minister could comment on that.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr D McIlveen: I thank the Member for his intervention, and I am sure that the Minister will respond to that.

The second reason why I am extremely critical of the trust is its handling of the release of this information. I received a press release, along with all Members I am sure, on 30 October this year. I do not want it to appear in any way that this side of the House is backing its Minister and the other side of the House can take a pop at him. That is not what it is about. This transcends politics, and we have to stand shoulder-to-shoulder with the people we represent and their needs. There is absolutely no ambiguity in the press release about who was proposing the change of services in Dalriada.

The trust chief executive, Dr Tony Stevens, said:

"We have delivered substantial year on year savings ... We remain focused on minimising the impact on frontline services ... In order to achieve this, temporary service changes will be put in place in non-acute hospitals that will allow staff to be redeployed to the acute hospitals sites."

There is absolutely no ambiguity around where the proposals came from. They came from the trust and the chief executive. Indeed, it is on the written record that that is the case.

Mr Dickson: Will the Member give way?

Mr D McIlveen: I am sorry; I will try to do so at the end, Stewart, if there is time.

The third reason that I am critical of the trust is that it sought to overrule a previous ministerial decision. I have a letter dated 18 April 2014 that was sent to me about a constituent I was working with in relation to respite services in the Dal. The letter told me that all purchased bed days and respite bookings have been honoured and will continue to be honoured in the facility — not in the Northern Trust but in the facility, meaning Dalriada, which the original letter related to. However, we were told later on, in the press release of 30 October, that the multiple sclerosis respite centre would also temporarily close from 30 November 2014.

It is my understanding that there are purchased beds in place until the middle of February at least for MS respite care, so the view of Dr Tony Stevens in that press release entirely contradicts what the Minister told me in April this year.

Mr Allister: Will the Member give way?

Mr D McIlveen: Jim, I will try to give time at the end if I can.

I have to say that there is little trust in the north Antrim area towards the Northern Trust at this moment in time. Therefore, I propose and would like to see a root-and-branch review of Dalriada Hospital that is independent of the Northern Trust and is based on figures from before 30 October this year.

There is a sign as you drive down the main A26 that states, in very simple terms, "Don't let the Dal die". From the day and minute that the press release was issued, that is what the Northern Trust started to do, in my view. It started to let the Dal die. It failed to allow any new admissions, and therefore, on that basis, there is very little trust in what the Northern Trust is telling us.

I will conclude very quickly. The point was made about how good it is to have a devolved Minister. I ask the Minister to comment on how many people have made use of our devolved Minister since the press release. How many people have actually spoken to him about it?

Mr McMullan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. For over 20 years I represented the glens area on Moyle Council, and in that time I have seen at least three attempts to close the MS centre at the Dalriada. This is nothing new. This is a sustained attack on the unit. When the latest one came about, it was no surprise to me, but I have to give credit to the campaign that is being waged by the people of Ballycastle, the glens, the whole countryside and those who are in the Public Gallery today.

What we are seeing today is a campaign driven by the trust on budget. It is not patient-driven at all. The question I have to ask today is this: who exactly is running the trust? Is it you, Minister, or is the trust dictating to you the terms of what it does? I had a meeting with Tony Stevens here yesterday afternoon.

I asked him to put an end to the campaign to stop the closure of the Dalriada, and he told me that he took the advice of his management. Management told him that, in a strategic plan, somewhere had to close to balance the books, and its advice was to close the Dalriada. This is budget-driven not patient-driven. Out of your budget of millions, you cannot find £500,000. As my party colleague the Chair of the Health Committee, Maeve McLaughlin, said, of the £18 million that has been given to you, £500,000 could be found to keep the Dalriada going.

11.45 am

Mr Dickson: I really appreciate the Member giving way. Mr McMullan referred to the statements made by the trust about the issue and the relatively small sum required to continue to deliver the service. The words "temporary closure" were used in the press statement. "Temporary" is Civil Service-speak for final closure; let us get that on the record as well. These people will not just be making this a temporary break. They intend to close the facility.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr McMullan: I totally agree with the Member. He is quite right, and I was coming to that point. When the closure was made, it was made on a temporary basis. Why? It was so that there would be no consultation on it, because it is temporary. When I asked the chief executive yesterday to carry out a full equality impact assessment and consultation on the provision, the answer was a stark no. However, when the Dalriada is closed, the trust will then embark on a consultation on the provision of health care in the Northern Trust. He wants to split the trust into four hubs of excellence, after closing a unit of excellence.

Shame on you, Minister, and shame on the trust. Your whole thing is to care for the patient, not to be driven by a budget; £500,000 could be found in your budget. Why are you doing this? Why is the chief executive taking the word of his management without a plan having been drawn up? Where is the consultation? The Member for North Antrim Mr Storey quite rightly said that we come to the Chamber to make very hard decisions on budgets — quite rightly. However, at least all the decisions that we make on cuts and budgets go through a consultation period. In this decision, we are not allowed that. We are given the temporary closure and told that a consultation will then be embarked on. How is that fair?

Members of the MS Society have bared their soul and told us about some of the most difficult parts of their life to fight for this unit. Last week, when the deputy First Minister received a deputation from the MS Society, Mrs Philomena McKay, from Cushendun in my constituency, said to Mr McGuinness, with tears in her eyes, that her husband is more like a carer to her than a husband because of what is happening today. Is that where we are going? Health is being driven by a budget. When we put out Transforming

Your Care, health was to be the priority, yet you do the very opposite. Minister, I put this to you: do you control the trust? In answer to Mr Swann at the start of the debate, you said that you did not know, but the trust is saying something different.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Thank you. The Member's time is up.

Mr McMullan: Somebody is telling lies.

Dr McDonnell: I am delighted to be able to take a few moments to discuss the temporary closure of the Dalriada Hospital. I must say that this is a habit that has happened repeatedly. We have temporary closures, without consultation, that become permanent; that trick has been used right across the health service.

I do not condemn or attack the Minister or his predecessor. We have to be very clear about this; we must be united. I reflect on the very wise and sensible speech that our colleague seated across the Chamber, Paul Frew, made on the issue. The Assembly needs to be united in resisting the closure and the plans of the Northern Trust.

Dalriada Hospital has served the Ballycastle and district community very well in many shapes and forms over 50 years. I remember it opening with great aplomb when I was a child. It did an excellent job as a community hospital. In recent years, influenced by changing trends and demands, it became a vital resource, both as a respite space for MS patients from a wide area and as a step-down or intermediate-care facility — a halfway house, if you like — for those who did not need to be in a high-cost acute hospital bed but who still needed some degree of low-intensity hospital care. Much of that was appropriate for people recovering from orthopaedic surgery.

It was always, and still is, a great example of how Transforming Your Care could work and should have been allowed to work; it was a great pilot project launched with great gusto as a flagship for Transforming Your Care and its ethos. Yet, all my information is that the Northern Trust strangled and smothered it; the trust did not want to sell it or promote the project. Social workers, medical and paramedical people who could have encouraged and promoted the facility were told to keep quiet and turn a blind eye.

For many with whom I talked last week the question is: where will the patients go for respite? MS patients have a difficult enough struggle and life without making it any more difficult. Where will patients who require intermediate-care beds go? Will they remain in high-cost beds in the Causeway Hospital or wherever else? This is a flawed, knee-jerk decision by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust that will have a massive impact on patient care.

Mr Dallat: Will the Member give way?

Dr McDonnell: Yes.

Mr Dallat: The Member has appealed for unity across the Floor, and I totally agree with him. Does he agree that, if the Minister were to reverse this decision, he would unite the Assembly in a way that it probably has not been united in recent times? I put that question to Dr McDonnell as a medical doctor and also as a person who was reared in the glens of Antrim and who knows the immense feeling of the people in that area.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Dr McDonnell: Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I thank the Member for his intervention. As someone who grew up not very far away and who is familiar with the Dalriada Hospital, I certainly agree with him. The passion, emotion and commitment that I felt from the deputation that was here last week was palpable. It knew neither political nor religious boundaries, nor any others. People were united, and I feel that the community campaign has made it very clear how detrimental this cut will be, not just to Ballycastle but to a much wider area in terms of MS respite. They must all bear the brunt of the situation that the closure of the Dalriada Hospital would bring about.

As far as I am concerned, it is a cut too far, and I appeal to the Minister, as my colleague suggested, to find some other option on this occasion and reverse the decision of the Northern Trust. He would unite the community.

I commend my colleague, the chairman of Moyle District Council, Donal Cunningham, and others around him, for the tremendous campaign that he has led and orchestrated along with the broader community. They have my full and unequivocal support, and indeed the support of much of north Antrim.

I am gravely concerned that we will have other occasions like this. The draft Budget has a very detrimental effect on front-line services. I think that we will have to move and take every effort to protect front-line health-care services. While savings and efficiencies are necessary, patient care needs to be protected as well.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member must bring his remarks to a close.

Dr McDonnell: Benefits could be gained from many other options. I talked about all-island options for saving money. We are aware that the cost of health-care provision has risen.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Dr McDonnell: I appeal to the Minister to recognise the reduced cost of Dalriada and how it would help to save money.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up. I want to call the next Member.

Mr McGimpsey: I appreciate that I have limited space to speak. First of all, of course, I support the motion. MS is a cruel and merciless condition. We need to do whatever we can to alleviate the situation for patients and sufferers. A reasonable service for this condition at Dalriada was one of the remedies that we had.

I have to say, however, that this situation was predictable. The result of a Budget that was voted through this House three and a half years ago by many of the people who have been on their feet speaking today is that not enough money has been put into the health and social care budget to run the service. That was clearly demonstrated. The Budget was actually a real-terms cut of 2.4%. This is just part of a general malaise in the health service. We have seen that year after year, whether it be the pressures in A&Es, pressures on waits or closures at Bangor, Whiteabbey and Armagh.

We can all talk about these difficulties that we are having. This House has to be prepared to fund the health and social care Department and fund properly the Northern Trust. I do not blame the Northern Trust or any of the trusts for the steps that they are taking. They do not have enough money to run the services that they have now. We can all point at efficiencies. We can all say, "Save money here, save money there", but the Northern Trust does not have an adequate budget to adequately provide services so that —

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Thank you. I must call the Minister now. The time has been set by the Business Committee.

Mr Wells: Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. First of all, I want to say that I may not be as liberal with taking interventions as I might normally be, because I have an important point to make at the end of this particular contribution.

I thank the community and the Save the Dal campaign on the north coast for the understanding and respect that they have shown for me. I have absolutely no argument whatsoever with the way in which I have been treated. I appreciate that, in a situation where of course they feel exceptionally strongly about the issue.

I have listened carefully to Members' contributions throughout the debate. I want to say to Mr Dallat that I apologise if I did smile during the middle of a contribution. I take this issue terribly seriously. I dare not tell him how many sleepless hours I have had over this particular decision; this decision has been exceptionally problematic for me.

I much regret that the Northern Trust has had to consider this action as a consequence of budget pressures. No one in this entire debate has told me that we do not need an extra £70 million to balance the books or that we do not have to save that money. The difficulty is that I am not getting any options on the £70 million or the decision on the Dalriada.

The pressures facing health and social care were substantial in 2013-14 and included a wide range of services, such as domiciliary care, acute services, safety and quality, emergency department unscheduled care and children's services. Since summer 2013, the Department has explored and implemented opportunities to curtail and control this expenditure.

As I have said before, my priorities are to ensure that the services provided by health and social care trusts are safe and effective and that my Department achieves financial balance, as is required of all Ministers. To achieve these aims, health and social care trusts have provided a range of contingency plans to secure financial break-even, which is an obligation that is required of all Ministers. I have to be absolutely clear here: I asked the trust to come up with a series of savings, and it gave me a list. I did not make a choice on those savings. I was given a list that it believed was necessary.

12.00 noon

Mr Swann: I appreciate the Minister giving way. I know that he said that he is generous with his time. Will he clarify with the chief executive of the Northern Trust the process that he outlined to me and members of the Ulster Unionist Party yesterday? He said that he made recommendations to the trust, which gave them to the Department, which gave them to the Minister, and they then came back down the chain again.

Mr Wells: I assure you that I did not have other options to consider. It was not a question of me picking out Dalriada in preference to taking some other difficult decision. I was given enough money to make the savings, and that was that.

The temporary closure of the respite beds and intermediate care beds in Dalriada Hospital will result in a significant saving of £0.6 million. Should the measure be proposed to be made permanent, I have been explicit that a full consultation exercise will be carried out.

The Northern Trust has affirmed that it will endeavour to minimise the impact on front-line patient care. It is important to note that everyone who wishes to receive respite care will continue to do so. The trust is committed to continuing to meet people's assessed need appropriately. However, it believes that it can be more cost-effectively provided elsewhere. Alternatives being discussed include direct payments, local independent sector provision for individuals or local bed-based group provision to facilitate groups of friends. In the case of individuals assessed as requiring respite care in a hospital setting, arrangements are being made to assess the Robinson Hospital in Ballymoney. In-reach services provided to service users while they receive respite at Dalriada, such as podiatry, dentistry and physiotherapy, will continue to be provided in the alternative setting decided on.

The trust provided an assurance that there will be no change to the booking of anyone who had been booked into respite care in November. That commitment will be honoured. I acknowledge and appreciate the commendable service that the MS respite centre provides for service users and their families.

Mr Allister: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: I certainly will.

Mr Allister: Is the Minister saying to the House that the trust, of which he has oversight, proposed the closure — I think that we all know that it is closure, not a temporary discontinuation — of the Dalriada without knowing or, it seems, caring where the services then provided there would thereafter be provided and is only now scrambling around to look for alternatives? Does that not say to the Minister that he should reach the point now — today — of overriding the decision to close the Dalriada?

Mr Wells: It is worth mentioning that the demand for respite care in the winter period is extremely low. At the time of the decision, only one person was booked in for the second part of November. The next peak of demand was not until February. The trust officials were content that there was easily capacity in the north Antrim area to meet that demand. It is not a matter of scuttling around trying to find alternative provision. As it turned out, there was time and there was capacity.

Mr McMullan: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: For the final time.

Mr McMullan: Will you now state that the trust came to you with the strategic view of closing either the Dalriada or the Robinson, and that the trust opted to close the former in favour of the latter, which is not what was said to me yesterday in a meeting between Sinn Féin and the trust's new chief executive, Dr Tony Stevens?

Mr Wells: I have no doubt that, when the board was discussing the issue, other options were considered, maybe even the Robinson, but by the time that the decision got to me, there were not options. I was given a list of what the trust, in its professional judgement, considered to be the best option for saving the money. I have no doubt that the Member could well be right, but the list that I have does not include an either/or. It simply states, "Dalriada".

Most of those — 80% — who access MS respite services at Dalriada come from the Northern Trust, with the remainder predominantly coming from the Western Trust. There are also two users from Belfast. The other trusts have already made alternative arrangements. In 2013-14 — I mentioned this when answering a question from Mr Swann during a Question Time — the number of bed days available was 4,380. Of those, 1,402 were used. That equates to a 32% occupancy rate. That is worrying, because it indicates that, whilst the standard of care is very high, the demand is not as pervasive as Members suggest.

Mr McCarthy: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: I will try at the end, but I really have to get to the end of the speech. Members will understand when I do so.

Demand in the unit tends to peak at certain times, such as in February and during the summer months. That means that, at other times, the unit has a very low occupancy rate. Members have to accept that. I am advised that, today, there will be two patients remaining in the MS unit in Dalriada Hospital and seven receiving intermediate care. I make it absolutely clear that none of those patients will be required to leave unless it is clinically appropriate to do so. There is no cut-off date on 30 November. If someone requires clinical or respite care at that date, they will continue in the Dalriada.

It is anticipated that half of the employees associated with the Dalriada site may be affected. Permanent staff will be redeployed to support acute community and emergency services. No staff — and I emphasise this — will lose their jobs, and the hours they work will remain as per their contract. There are a number of jobs in the Causeway locality and the personnel, staff and services managers are currently on the ground, working with staff to match their skills to vacancies available and to ensure that, as far as possible, individual circumstances are taken into account.

Following the announcement, the Northern Trust contacted MS service users and families from the northern area and advised them of the decision. Relevant key workers are currently meeting patients to discuss options for their future respite care. The trust also linked with the Western and Belfast Trusts regarding this change. Trust senior management attended Dalriada Hospital on Thursday 30 October and spoke with patients and staff.

Personnel staff continue to work on the ground to help and advise those staff affected. The trust will continue to meet and discuss redeployment options with those staff. The trust communicated with trade unions on 30 October and formally met with them on Friday 31 October. The trust also continued to communicate with all political representatives in the area and met Moyle council representatives on 3 November and attended a public meeting that same evening.

Ongoing communication is taking place between the trust and the MS Society and, of course, the media. The trust will continue to do all it can to communicate with all stakeholders to ensure that everyone understands the decision and the options now available to them. I have met the MS Society, elected representatives, health professionals and members of the Ballycastle community. I visited Dalriada Hospital on Friday. I met Tony Stevens of the Northern Trust to discuss this issue on 13 November.

Mr Speaker, I have listened to the widespread concerns expressed by patients and families about the potential adverse impact of the temporary closure of services at Dalriada. I am very aware of the public's dissatisfaction that patients and clients have not had an opportunity to participate in a formal consultation process on these proposals. I cannot stress enough that we also need to ensure patient safety.

However, we have four months before the end of March next year, and in view of the widespread concern, my Department will be instructing the Northern Trust to immediately begin an eight-week public consultation, as Mr McMullan requested, on this temporary closure to see whether there are alternative viable proposals that could be put in place to allow the services to reopen before the end of March.

Mr D McIlveen: I thank the Minister for giving way, and I certainly welcome what he has just said. In the knowledge that there is a severe breach of confidence between the public in the Ballycastle and wider north Antrim area and the Northern Trust, could the Minister give some assurances that there will be an element of independence to this consultation to ensure that there is a fair outcome rather than one predetermined by the trust?

Mr Wells: Mr McIlveen raises an important point, and I would be happy to look into that issue and address the points he has raised.

Mr Weir: Will the Minister further give way?

Mr Wells: Yes.

Mr Weir: A lot of us have grave concerns over the priorities that have been given by different trusts, and in my case, particularly the South Eastern Trust as regards Bangor. If there are alternative proposals — certainly in our case, some of us are working to save the money in-year — and these can be accepted by the trust, will the Minister indicate that there will be no obstacle put by himself or the Department in the way of those alternative proposals that allow places to stay open or reopen in various areas?

Mr Wells: I would be absolutely delighted if Members or the community or those who are experts in this field provide viable alternatives. But I have to make a very important point. They must release an equivalent amount of saving to what is being achieved by the decisions —

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: OK.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for, maybe reluctantly, giving way. Can the Minister clarify that during the eight-week public consultation, which some might say is a bit late, admissions will continue?

Mr Wells: I need to make the point that there will be no fresh admissions but that those who are already in the hospital will continue to receive the care that they require until they are clinically assessed and allowed to leave — in other words, as if this decision had never been made. Any alternative, viable proposals —

Mr Allister: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: Oh dear.

Mr Allister: Does the Minister not agree that, if this is to be a fair and transparently fair consultation, the status quo should prevail rather than the pre-emptive decision to close, which suggests that the consultation will only be a farce? If this consultation is to be genuine, does he not need to restore the Dalriada to its position as an active, operative hospital?

Mr Wells: The only proposal that I am making is that there will be no new admissions — no new admissions. Those who are there already will continue to be cared for up until the point at which they would have been moved on as if this decision had never occurred — in other words, in line with medical assessment.

Any alternative proposals that are suggested in the responses to the consultation must release broadly equivalent resource savings that, in the view of clinicians, would provide services safely in terms of the impact of the proposal on the quality, sustainability and accessibility of services, and provide assurance about adherence to established standards of service.

Mr Dickson: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: No, I simply have to finish this. I am sorry, Mr Dickson.

The door is now open for the public to have their say — albeit within a tight timescale, as I believe that the deadline will probably be around 31 January — with a clear prospect that the envisaged four-month temporary closure of these services could potentially come to an end sooner. My Department will monitor the situation closely over the coming weeks to ensure that the service provided to MS sufferers in Northern Ireland continues to meet the needs of the local population.

I can now give way to Mr Dickson.

Mr Dickson: Thank you, Minister. I am concerned about any consultation process. You made an announcement that you are prepared to extend an open consultation process for eight weeks. Is that not window dressing to cover up the embarrassment of the trust and the Minister?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Minister's time is almost up.

Mr Wells: Can I make it absolutely certain that we are taking this consultation extremely seriously? The community now has time to put forward its views on what it feels are the defects of this decision and to provide suggestions for an alternative. This will be taken seriously; the Member has my commitment on that.

Mr McKay: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: I just have time for Mr McKay.

Mr McKay: What will happen to the staff for those eight weeks?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: I am sorry; you actually do not have time. The Minister's time is up.

Mrs Dobson: I welcome the opportunity to make a winding-up speech on such an important debate. I was delighted to hear all the support from fellow MLAs. Minister, our motion calls for you to reinstate the service at the Dalriada immediately. I will start with a plea: do it, Minister, and do it now. This is an issue that, as we know, has caused so much public anger, emotion, concern and protest. Much of that has been reflected in an emotionally charged debate in the Chamber today. As John Dallat put it, this has the ability to unite us across the Floor.

I will refer to Members' comments, but, first, I will make a few comments of my own. Minister, I appreciate that difficult decisions need to be made. Frustratingly, however, whilst the funding crisis in our health service may not have been unexpected, as my colleague Mr McGimpsey said, it was avoidable. I will reiterate a point that I have been making over the last number of weeks and months. The funding void will have been known about long before it struck. It could have been avoided, but it was not, and trusts have now been forced to slash services. Members, this is where we are today.

While suggestions for cuts may indeed come from the trusts, be in no doubt that the Minister is required to give his personal approval of them. There is no question that the Minister was asked for his opinion on the Dalriada, and there is no question that he approved the closure of the respite centre. Some in the Chamber may find that hard to accept, but I ask them to speak to the Minister directly or to the trust privately. It saddens me to say that I suspect that not all the reductions that we have been told about are just as new or as recent as we are led to believe.

As we heard from Members, there have been long-standing concerns about Dalriada's future. The people for whom it provides respite and intermediate care, as well as its loyal team of staff, will have seen its value in the eyes of the trust diminish. Even its physical appearance has gone downhill.

While it is easy to comment on bricks and mortar, the real cost of the closure will be the human impact on the people who use the service, not only the 69 with MS indicated by the Minister but many hundreds more family members and carers who benefit from the relief that Dalriada provides. The many benefits of respite care, be they medical, financial or otherwise, ripple outwards from the patients to their family circle and friends. Minister, that must never be forgotten or underestimated.

Speaking to people with MS, and their carers, I am in no doubt of the importance of effective respite. It gives family members the opportunity to travel in the knowledge that their loved ones are safe and secure. The debilitating fact about MS is that symptoms come and go, robbing people of their independence to do even the most basic tasks, and leaving them to suffer the most spine-chilling level of pain.

Having a centre with the staff and skills required is a huge benefit and grants carers the precious period of respite that they so richly deserve. I know so many people coping with this condition, whom I have supported. I would be here all day if I listed their names, people who have touched my life. They would dearly love to receive respite in my constituency, but it is not available to them. I am not alone in the Chamber in representing constituents who are denied this service. Their passion is to raise public awareness of MS, to fundraise and to support fellow sufferers. They view this so-called temporary closure as a bitter blow to every MS sufferer in Northern Ireland — that is 4,200 sufferers and their families.

Yet we are being asked to believe that the service at Dalriada is no longer required and can be met through private providers who, as we stand here today, have not signed a contract. Even if a commitment is signed today, this week or next week, what guarantees are there that this respite service —

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: I thank the Member for giving way. Would she now agree that what the Minister said about no new admissions is, in effect, closure in another form?

Mrs Dobson: I thank the Chair of the Health Committee for her intervention. I totally agree. Yes, it is, in effect, closure.

What guarantees will be available in years to come, Minister? None. There is no long-term strategy for people living and struggling daily with a long-term debilitating condition. The reason, I suspect, it is being re-provided to the private sector is not to save money but to make sure that the service is easier to adjust and tinker with in the years to come.

Whilst Dalriada is located in the Northern Trust, it was, in theory, to be used by all. In theory. Of course, 30% bed occupancy is not good enough, but if patients were not being allowed to enter the centre in the first place or not even being told about it, it is little wonder that so few were receiving care. The fact is that the trust sought for some time to strangle the existence out of the centre.

I will turn to comments made by Members. Mervyn Storey reminded us that Terence O'Neill opened the hospital in 1963. He praised those defending the hospital as a credit to their community, and I totally agree with him. He spoke about the long-term failure to address the medical needs of the community of north Antrim.

Daithí McKay supported the motion, saying that this was decision day for the Minister. He also praised the campaign of the Save the Dal group.

Mr Swann: Will the Member give way?

Mrs Dobson: Yes.

Mr Swann: In reflection on that, and I listened to every Back-Bencher who spoke in support of the motion, I point out to the Minister the last section of the motion, which:

“calls on the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to reverse the decision and immediately reinstate the service at Dalriada Hospital”.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Mr Swann: Minister, that is the final sentence in the motion. What you have offered is an eight-week consultation on a temporary closure. You have said that the eight-week consultation will close on 31 January 2015, but, with the temporary closure forecast to last until the end of March 2015, there is potential for a gap of 59 days. Knowing the decision-making speed of the trust, the Department and the Health and Social Care Board, by the time they even get round to opening the consultation on the temporary closure, the decision will have been made and you will have closed Dalriada.

Mrs Dobson: I thank the Member for the intervention. The point was very, very well made, and I totally agree with him.

Mr McKay: I thank the Member for giving way. She made reference to the Save the Dal campaign, which, no doubt, will continue to challenge the trust, especially in the absence of the Minister challenging the trust. The good thing about the debate today is that we have had clarification that the Minister is working with the trust to close down the hospital.

Mrs Dobson: Yes, working with the trust's spokesman. I thank the Member for his intervention.

Fearghal McKinney praised the campaigners who were at Stormont last week, where he joined his colleagues from north Antrim. He said the real concern was over how the cuts are being administered. He also said that the decision to close the hospital is contrary to TYC, which I totally agree with.

Kieran McCarthy said that it was right to speak up loud and clear on this issue. He cited the Budget as the underlying cause of the decision and raised concern for the future. He also referred to TYC.

Paul Frew supported the motion and the campaign, which he described as being managed by the people. We have joined those people and given them a voice today. He also said that if the hospital was to disappear it would hurt for a generation. I hope his Minister, who has ultimate responsibility for the trust he lambasted here today, will listen to us and to Mr Frew.

Maeve McLaughlin referred to the closure as being short-sighted and spoke of Transforming Your Care.

In conclusion, we need to hear from the Minister what the plans are for future respite services for all 4,200 MS sufferers and their families across Northern Ireland. That is something on which I am looking for answers from the trust, the board and the Minister directly. Minister, you can make the intervention. You have the ability, you have the authority and you know in your heart that this is the right thing to do for MS sufferers in Northern Ireland. I support the motion and thank Members for their contributions.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That this Assembly notes the decision to close the regional multiple sclerosis respite centre at Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle until March 2015 and transfer the service to the independent sector; further notes the importance of appropriate respite provision for patients and their families; believes the decision to be entirely wrong and one which makes no financial sense; fears the decision will result in the permanent closure of the centre; and calls on the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to reverse the decision and immediately reinstate the service at Dalriada Hospital.

Prison Service: Staff Safety

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has allowed up to one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes in which to propose and 10 minutes to wind up. One amendment has been selected and is published on the Marshalled List. The proposer of the amendment will have 10 minutes in which to propose and five minutes to wind up. All other Members who are called to speak will have five minutes.

Mr Givan: I beg to move

That this Assembly condemns the targeting of Northern Ireland Prison Service employees by dissident republicans; calls upon the Minister of Justice to reject any proposal that compromises the security of HMP Maghaberry, the safety of prison staff or concedes to the demands of republican prisoners in Roe House; and further calls for a review by the Northern Ireland Prison Service, working with the Prison Officers' Association and the Prison Governors Association, to address concerns about staffing levels across all grades in each prison establishment in Northern Ireland.

This motion brings back the reality of what happened during the terrorist campaign in the conflict, when a number of prison officers were murdered by terrorists in pursuit of the Provisional IRA's objective to take over the Maze prison. Indeed, it succeeded in taking over the Maze prison. Countless officers were injured during the conflict, and it is right to put on record our appreciation of the sacrifice that they and their families made to protect our community.

Since the agreement was signed in 1998 and since the St Andrews Agreement and subsequent agreements were signed, prison officers have continued to be targeted. Their families have continued to be targeted. Prison officers have continued to be injured, and, of course, we know of the tragic and brutal murder of David Black in 2012. There has not been a peace dividend for prison officers and their families. It is appropriate that we remember that reality. Through the Prison Service protection scheme, hundreds of staff have had security installations put into their properties — not 10 years ago or 20 years ago but in the past number of years. Officers have had to relocate through the special purchase of evacuated dwellings (SPED) scheme because of the very specific threats made against them.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair)

When the Maze prison closed, we were told that there would be no more separation and no more political status for those who committed crimes in the name of a flag or a cause. Maghaberry prison then housed those criminals who still tried to pursue their political aims through violence. They were integrated into the wider prison population in Maghaberry, but then the first concession was commenced. Paul Murphy, the Secretary of State in 2003, instituted the Steele review. That report made the recommendation that a separated regime should be established at Maghaberry prison. That is what happened. Roe House and Bush House then came into being. Was that the end of the protests? Was it the end of the demands made by prisoners in Maghaberry when they got their separated regime? No, it was not. What was their tactic? To continue to ask for more. How did they do that? By continuing to target prison officers and intimidate staff and to abuse them inside and outside the prison. What was the response to that ongoing intimidation and to the protests that were taking place in the prison? Under direct rule, Paul Murphy granted a separated regime.

Now that devolution has taken place, we have David Ford as the Minister of Justice. What is his response to the dirty protests and the intimidation? To sign an agreement in 2010. To carry out an appeasement process with the republicans who are intimidating and targeting prison officers and other staff. What is the policy for dealing with those who want to take control of Roe House in Maghaberry? To appease them and accommodate them. He struck a deal in 2010 that was another concession, building on the work of Paul Murphy. It was a capitulation to the demands made by those republican prisoners.

What were the next steps in that agreement? Did the protests stop? Did the intimidation stop? Did the targeting stop? No, they did not. They repeat the tactic that they have repeated for decades: they continue to target prison officers. They have a dirty protest. I was in Roe House when it was going on: the human excrement, the stench of urine, prison officers coming home saturated in urine that had been thrown over them by prisoners in Roe House. However, the 2010 agreement states that, in order to facilitate the agreement, the next steps were to be an end to the protest. The threats were to end. None of that happened. What is David Ford's response? Is it to go back to a pre-2010 agreement? No, it is not. He stands over the agreement that he negotiated with those terrorists.

For the record, in 2010, 53 prison officers required security installations in their property. In 2011, 43 prison officers required security installations. In 2012, David Black was gunned down as he travelled to work along the motorway by terrorists campaigning to take over Maghaberry prison. That tactic was used before by the Provisional IRA. In the 1970s, a family member of mine was shot at 13 times as he travelled to work in the Maze prison. He was hit twice by the Provisional IRA as they pulled up alongside his vehicle on the M1. Thankfully, by the grace of God, he survived and continued to do his job for the people of Northern Ireland. It is a tactic that has been tried and tested before by republicans as they try to take over the prison.

12.30 pm

David Ford stands over the agreement. When the prison was wrecked and there was the huge cost of dealing with that dirty protest, the protest ended after David Black was murdered. What did David Ford do? In response to a question that I submitted at that time, he said that the prison arrangement at Roe House would go back to a pre-protest position. In other words, he stood by the 2010 agreement despite David Black being murdered and those prison officers being targeted. Now, the republicans' tried-and-tested tactic is to say, "We are now all working together in Roe House after the factional feuds that were there. We are now all going to have peace, and we will share facilities". The olive branch gets offered. They say, "We are not going to intimidate staff". I was in Maghaberry a number of weeks ago while the stocktake was going on. Republicans were keen to tell me, "Look! There is no intimidation here of staff". Yet, within a week of that visit,

I was speaking to staff who had received direct death threats from those republican prisoners.

What does David Ford do? Independent assessors come in and make recommendations suggesting that there need to be more concessions and that we need to get back to the 2010 agreement. Who is to blame? "All sides are to blame. The Prison Service has not fully implemented this agreement. It is part of the problem and needs to be part of the solution". Not the republicans, no: everybody. This collective guilt that republicans are tried and tested —

Mr Ramsey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Givan: I am not going to. I need to finish.

Yet, while the stocktake was going on when I was in Maghaberry, the grille separating the upper and lower landings in Roe House was open. The staff made it clear to me that that was a cause of concern for them, and concessions were being made while the stocktake was going on. That grille is now closed. Thankfully, it is closed, and, hopefully, I helped to get it closed. Yet, the assessors' attitude when they came to the Committee was "Let us take away the oxygen from the republican campaign. Don't allow them to become martyrs. We have now got them on the back foot, so we will use the approach that was tried in 2010" — and failed miserably — "Let us go back to that". What does David Ford do? He stands over those independent assessors, two of whom were responsible for 2010 and are still on the panel today. They are trying the same appeasement policy as has failed in the past.

What has happened? Threats continue. Republicans and those acting on behalf of those prisoners are naming officers on their websites. Targeting continues. When I speak to the Prison Service officials at the Committee, I am told that one threat would be one too many and that, therefore, the deal would be off. However, what did the Prison Service do? As a gesture of goodwill, it will implement part of the agreement. Yet, what was the next step even in the stocktake that was held recently? Protests need to end, and intimidation needs to end. What is the Prison Service director general's response? "As a gesture of goodwill and demonstration of our commitment, we will give in and make a concession".

Members, it is clear to me and to the prison officers I speak to that we have a weak and capitulating Minister of Justice and a weak and capitulating director general of the Prison Service. We have the repetition by dissident republicans of the tactics that were implemented by the Provisional IRA, and they are being conceded to. When will people realise that you do not deal with republicans by giving concessions to them? Who runs the prison? Is it the republican prisoners, or will it be the Prison Service, the director general and the Minister of Justice? Sadly, I have no confidence in this Minister and the director general being able to stand over a proper regime in Maghaberry that puts the safety and security of prison officers first and foremost.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order. The Business Committee has arranged to meet immediately after the lunchtime suspension today. I propose, therefore, by leave of the Assembly to suspend the sitting until 2.00 pm. The first item of business when we return will be Question Time.

Oral Answers to Questions

Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I have to tell Members that questions 3, 8 and 10 have been withdrawn. We will start with listed questions.

Irish Language Broadcast Fund/Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund

1. Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the viewing figures for broadcast programmes funded by the Irish Language Broadcast Fund and the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund. (AQO 7130/11-15)

Mr Lunn: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Ceist uimhir a haon. Question 1. [Interruption.]

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Chomhalta as an cheist. Thank you very much to the Member.

In 2013-14, the target was to deliver 60 hours of Irish-language content to a weekly audience of 25,000. The Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund aimed to deliver 12 hours of Ulster-Scots programming to reach an audience target of 40,000 people per programme in the North.

In the latest figures in Ofcom's communications market report, during 2013-14, programming supported by the Irish Language Broadcast Fund and the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund and broadcast by the BBC reached an audience of 660,000, which is just under 40% of the total population of the North. I believe that that demonstrates a continued demand for programming from both funds.

Mr Lunn: I thank the Minister for her answer. Does she agree that those figures will help the case for her negotiations with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) when it comes to discussing the re-funding of those programmes?

Ms Ní Chuilín: Absolutely. I fully agree with the Member, and I am delighted that those figures have been independently supported by Ofcom. They support the experience thus far from both broadcast funds, NI Screen and people in the creative industries sector, who have said to us that there is an increasing demand for work within both broadcast funds. That is a good thing, and it will certainly help my case — probably not this year — when I go to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. I hope to have a further meeting at the end of this year, but, if that is not possible, a meeting with all the spokespersons will be realised at the beginning of next year and before the next Westminster election. It is important that we get cross-party support for it.

Mr McCausland: The Minister put the figures together for the programmes that are made by both broadcast funds. Will she give us separate viewing figures per programme for each fund? If not, will she send that on to me?

Will she also ensure that, when she is negotiating with the Treasury or DCMS in London, the funding for both broadcast funds is equalised? That will mean that we will have real equality and not the Trojan Horse of equality that was mentioned by her party leader last night in his efforts to break unionism, which, of course, he will fail to do.

Ms Ní Chuilín: At least my party leader knows when to apologise, but —

A Member: He has plenty to apologise for.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order. Minister, will you resume your seat, please? At this stage, Members should know that I will not accept anyone making remarks of any kind from a sedentary position. I am disappointed that that has happened again today, especially so soon into Question Time.

Ms Ní Chuilín: Thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker. I will certainly ensure that I will lobby to have the funds realised and will do so on the basis of need. If the Member is telling me that there is equality of demand and equality of evidence between the Irish language and Ulster Scots, I have yet to see it.

I will match funding to need. That has been my commitment, and I have done that thus far. I do not cherry-pick or pick pet projects but do it on the basis of need. I will happily negotiate for additional secured funding and an uplift on the current funding on that basis.

I will also happily furnish the Member with viewing figures for each of the programmes. Not only can both broadcast agencies stand over those figures but they have been independently supported by Ofcom. I am happy to share them with him and other members of the Committee.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Members, before I call the next Member to speak, I have to tell you that question 9, not 10, was withdrawn. I apologise for that.

Hockey: Lurgan and Portadown

2. Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how she is promoting hockey in Lurgan and Portadown. (AQO 7131/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for her question. As the Member knows, responsibility for promoting hockey in the North of Ireland, including Lurgan and Portadown, rests with the governing body of the sport, Ulster Hockey. Since 2011, Sport NI has provided Ulster Hockey with funding of almost £914,000 for the promotion and development of hockey across the North. A further £551,000 has been invested in hockey clubs and schools to deliver the sport in communities. In that investment, a number of primary schools in the Lurgan and Portadown areas have received funding of almost £3,400 to deliver a range of sports and to provide coaching for children, across sports, particularly hockey.

Sport NI is assessing applications received under its Active Awards for Sport programme. It is the second round of the lottery-funded small grants programme, which is primarily aimed at grassroots community-based sports. Six hockey organisations, including two hockey clubs based in the Craigavon Borough Council area, submitted applications. Sport NI will notify the applicants of the outcome in December 2014.

Mrs Dobson: I thank the Minister for her answer. She will be aware that, last month, I, alongside Sport NI and DCAL officials, met Lurgan Ladies' hockey club and Killicomaine Junior High School. We are delighted that Killicomaine Junior High School has since had its new pitch confirmed by the board. What more can the Minister do to ensure more effective partnership working that will deliver further good-news stories for clubs and players in Portadown and Lurgan?

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Member has highlighted the fact that partnership is key, certainly around future provision. That is particularly the case when looking at the capital needs of clubs and, in this case, schools and councils. The people involved in the case of the Member's constituency and the area that she highlighted came together naturally because they have a good working relationship. They also see that bringing clubs together and bringing clubs and schools together realises facilities; that is what we are encouraging people to do. Obviously, there is a big difficulty around future funding. However, if clubs, partnerships and schools provide evidence of need and of a good, effective partnership, with the support of a governing body, it will stand them in good stead. That is how we would like to see provision rolled out in future.

Mr Humphrey: Does the Minister agree that it is important for young hockey players from Portadown and Lurgan and, indeed, from across Northern Ireland's clubs, to be able to participate in the Commonwealth Games? Will the Minister encourage Ulster Hockey to relax the regulations to allow a Northern Ireland team to participate in future Commonwealth Games, commencing in Gold Coast in 2018?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have written to the governing body on that matter. I have received correspondence, but I have not yet had an opportunity to read or disseminate it. That issue was raised with me in relation to hockey and rugby sevens at the previous Question Time, and I gave a guarantee then. Upon receipt of that correspondence, I will happily share it with the Member.

Mr Brady: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for her answers so far. Will the Minister provide an update on Sport NI's new capital funding programme?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. Further to my response to the initial question, Sport NI is developing a capital programme that aims to invest £17.5 million of lottery funding to sports facilities over the next five years, which, I am sure the Member and other Members will agree, is substantial funding. The programme will seek to integrate the facility needs of community participants and the performance of athletes in the same multi-sports environment.

Sport NI has consulted sports governing bodies to identify priorities for high-performing athletes. It has also spoken, and started working in good partnerships, with councils to deliver sports facility strategies; it is also working with local clubs and communities. It is envisaged that that investment will be brought forward in the new year. At this stage, however, it is important to finish the consultation so that we get a robust level of service needs in the communities. The small grants award will be made known soon, and we will move on to the bigger capital programmes in the new year.

Mrs McKevitt: What inter-sport exchanges does the Minister's Department encourage to allow young people to have the opportunity to learn more about sports that are not traditionally known in their communities, such as hockey and camogie?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I know that the Member is aware of what is known now as the game of three halves. That goes across soccer, Gaelic games, rugby and, sometimes, hockey and other sports in between. I think that it is a good initiative. It exposes young people in particular to games that, traditionally, they normally would not find themselves attracted to. It also brings forward an awareness not just of the games but of the culture behind some of those games. It is really important. Sports governing bodies and individuals in clubs and schools have been very proactive in trying to make sure that children get every opportunity to avail themselves of those games.

I believe that, particularly in relation to soccer, Gaelic games and rugby, the three governing bodies, through additional funding that they have received from DCAL, have done a lot of work around that, not just to help people to improve their physical and mental health but with the cultural awareness and inclusion that those programmes bring. I am sure that the Member will agree that it is very important.

CAL: Senior Staff Costs

4. Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the annual cost of staff at grade 5 and above in her Department. (AQO 7133/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. The cost of staff at grade 5 and above in my Department at the end of the financial year on 31 March 2014 was £818,428. This figure includes the cost of temporary staff involved in special projects or dedicated projects. When those posts are excluded, the cost was £690,000. At 31 March 2014, permanent staff at grade 5 and above comprised five at grade 5, including one at grade 3 and one permanent secretary.

Mr McNarry: I thank the Minister for her answer. I have just a couple of points. I would be indebted to the Minister if she could relate more to the cost of £128,000 for temporary staff and what they were doing. I think that the figure is high. Has the Minister considered sharing some specialist functions in her Department, such as finance, with other Departments to save public money?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I will happily relay that figure back and try to get the Member the detail tonight to him personally. I brought additional staff in to look at the stadia development programmes. Skilled expertise was needed in order to bring those programmes forward. In addition to that, I work with the Strategic Investment Board to try to ensure that there is better provision and that I do not have to buy in or contract additional work when that service is already available. The Member will also be aware that you pay for that, but it is an expertise that, so far, I have found very valuable.

The Member will also be aware that DCAL and its arm's-length bodies have a particular financial need in my Department to ensure that the money and the governance and audit trails around it flow freely. I am reluctant to point out one area in the working remit of DCAL that I would be happy to look at. At the minute, I am looking at everything.

Mr McGlone: Mo bhuíochas leis an Aire as a freagraí go n-uige seo. What uptake of voluntary redundancy does she anticipate in her Department and how might that be funded?

Ms Ní Chuilín: Gabhaim buíochas leis an Chomhalta as an cheist sin a chur orm. I have no idea at this stage about any figures in relation to voluntary redundancy. As the Member will be aware, my high-level financial budget plans, albeit provisional, were put on the website last week. It is something that the officials, with our staff side representatives, are working through. It is early days yet, but I anticipate that, by the close of play of the consultation on the draft Budget, we might have more definitive figures back. If and when those figures are brought forward, I will be happy to share them with him and with other members of the Culture, Arts and Leisure Committee.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Mr Michael McGimpsey is not in his place.

Ulster Orchestra

6. Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what progress has been made in securing the future of the Ulster Orchestra. (AQO 7135/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I thank the Member for his question. I have met representatives of the orchestra to explore the nature of the problems that it faces and the work that it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. Officials from my Department, together with the Arts Council, continue to engage with the orchestra and its sponsors to develop and refine potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms that would enable it to safeguard its future. If a new, sustainable operating model emerges, I will give it serious consideration, and, subject to receiving assurances that it can be delivered, only then will I engage with Executive colleagues to assess how we as an Executive might support it.

Mr Dunne: I thank the Minister for her answer. I welcome her recognition of the Ulster Orchestra's significance in Northern Ireland's cultural life. Will she give us an assurance that she will continue to drum up support for the Ulster Orchestra, subject to the production of a new operating model?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am sure that we will hear some more about the Ulster Orchestra, not only today but over the next couple of days. As I said in my primary answer, I am expecting a revised business model to come back from the Ulster Orchestra, on the basis that it can stand up to scrutiny. I am sure that the Member and others have concerns about that, but it will mean that we are not facing this problem year on year and that the orchestra will withstand next year's Budget, the Budget the year after that and Budget the year after that. It is only if the new revised model is brought forward and that it has full support that I can bring forward any proposals to my Executive colleagues for support. I value the Ulster Orchestra's work, and I am on record as saying that. However, it is unsustainable in its current configuration.

Mr B McCrea: Minister, are you expecting that revised plan today? If so, when will you be in a position to evaluate it and decide whether you can help?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am expecting a revised plan by no later than Friday of this week, which is 28 November. If you are under the impression that I am expecting it today, you know more than my private office, but, sure, that would not be a first, Basil, would it?

I am certainly expecting the revised plan by the end of this week, and, soon after, I will be working on seeing whether we can realise it. I will meet the orchestra and, indeed, the Arts Council, Belfast City Council and the orchestra's other sponsors to see whether we can get a model that suits everyone's needs.

Mr McCausland: I welcome the fact that Belfast City Council has made the commitment of £100,000 towards the Ulster Orchestra. I understand that Sir George Bain made some comments on the radio today about the provision of the business model for the Ulster Orchestra, which, given what has been said even here, will hopefully be forthcoming very soon. Will the Minister give the clear undertaking that, in the event that it arrives in the next few days, she will very soon be in a position with the Arts Council to ensure that the funding to make up the shortfall on top of the £100,000 is met?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I did not hear any of the comments on the radio about the orchestra, but my understanding was that that £100,000 came from Belfast City Council on the condition that DCAL's funding came forward. My conditions are that, if the revised model is robust and helps to meet the needs of the Arts Council, DCAL, Belfast City Council and the other sponsors, and we attract the rest of the Executive's support, that is a way to go forward. My clear intention is that we do not meet a shortfall only to be in the same place next year. I do not think that that is fair on the orchestra, the Arts Council, Belfast City Council or the other sponsors. I also do not think that it is fair to the public, who have a lot of loyalty to the orchestra and want to see it surviving, working and thriving. It is my job to make sure that the model can stand up to scrutiny and has the economic sustainability that no one paid attention to in previous years.

Mr Lyttle: I add my voice to the Save the Ulster Orchestra campaign and welcome Belfast City Council's investment. I seek the Minister's assurances that she will do all that she can to ensure that, as part of any funding model that she may be able to award, the orchestra will not be reduced in size to that of a chamber orchestra?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I cannot give guarantees about what size the orchestra will be or what it may or may not be reduced to. I understand that the Ulster Orchestra's programme management board will be bringing a few suggestions and proposals to the model, and it would be foolhardy for me to say that I would support a, b, c or d without even having seen them first. I am sure that the Member appreciates that. We need to ensure that we make every effort and put our best foot forward to do everything that we can to try to make sure that the Ulster Orchestra is sustainable. Therefore, it is on the basis of what we have, what we expect to be brought forward and what support we can get to sustain it in future years.

Mr A Maginness: The Ulster Orchestra is highly respected throughout the world and is a leader in many respects. Will the Minister reassure the House that, in the event of there being an ultimate crisis that might see the orchestra go out of business, she will provide the necessary funding, given the fact that every substantial orchestra throughout the world is supported by public funds?

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Member is asking me to give guarantees that I am not in a position to give. The orchestra costs a lot of money from the public purse and will cost money in the future from the public purse, and I am not saying that it should not. Even the orchestra itself said that it is currently unsustainable. We need to get an orchestra that is fit for purpose and will have better economic security in the years ahead. That will mean that we will have an orchestra that we are all very loyal to and proud of. It will also mean that it will provide inspiration and aspiration for young musicians coming forward, and there will be employment. However, at this stage, it would be foolish to give guarantees that I cannot give just to be politically popular.

Mr Cree: I also heard that the new operating model had been prepared. In your budget, Minister, you obviously have a certain amount set aside to use at your own discretion and for prioritisation. Can you indicate whether there is any money in that that might give the orchestra a bit of hope at this stage? I know that we cannot tie you down, but is there hope from DCAL?

Ms Ní Chuilín: Any discretionary money that I have is very, very small. It would not even be seen in the Ulster Orchestra. I made a decision to invest that small discretionary money into disability, particularly arts performance for children who are severely disabled, and I make no apology for that. You are talking about £25,000 here, £10,000 there and nothing over £50,000 at one time, particularly in relation to plays for children and young people who were so far removed from services that I do not think that anybody — I am not even suggesting the Member — would argue that that was not the thing to do. The Ulster Orchestra needs hundreds of thousands of pounds of public money, and I do not have that amount of money lying surplus in my Department.

As I said, and I am sure that the Member was here when I said it, I am waiting for the sustainable model to be brought forward by the end of this week. When I read it and have discussions with my colleagues in the Arts Council and Belfast City Council, the sponsors and my Executive colleagues first and foremost, only then will I make a decision or a recommendation to them if I am satisfied that the model that they are bringing forward is what we need for the future.

Arts Sector: Budget Cuts

7. Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what impact the current financial situation will have on the arts sector. (AQO 7136/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The impact of the draft Budget for 2015-16 will not be unique to the arts sector. All service areas across my Department and its arm's-length bodies have been affected by the recently announced budget reductions. Decisions on how budget reductions are managed are a matter, in the first instance, for the board and the senior management. I have asked that the Arts Council does all it can to minimise the impact of the reductions on jobs and front-line services. Work on developing savings plans is continuing, and my Department intends to publish a more detailed assessment of the likely impacts by the close of the draft Budget at the end of November this year.

Mr Spratt: I thank the Minister for her answer. Is there any likelihood that some of the budgets for this financial year could be reduced, given that they are normally paid out quarterly? Is there any likelihood that some of those budgets could have percentage reductions?

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Member may be aware that, initially, most Departments were looking at 15%; it then went down to 12·8% for DCAL, and then it went down to 10%. I made a decision to try to protect libraries as much as possible, with a cut of between 7·5% and 8%. That had a knock-on effect on the other ALBs, and their cut sits at 11·2%. I appreciate that that is a substantial amount to remove from the sector, but that is the decision that I made. Obviously, I will lobby and fight for more money, particularly for areas of the arts that have a far reach in communities that have never experienced the arts before. That is the priority that I will set. There is no point in saying anything different because I am at the podium. You can perhaps get away with saying things at Question Time that you will not stand over outside the House, but I am saying here what I have said before and will say afterwards.

Mr McKinney: Can I extend that point? In recognition of the deeper impact that particular types of arts activity can have on community health and well-being, what assessment is being done of those extra benefits with a view to arguing against and mitigating the cuts?

Ms Ní Chuilín: As the Member will be aware, DCAL produced a revised business plan and set out a list of key priorities in conjunction with the priorities that we, as an Executive, set out in the Programme for Government. I also asked all the arm's-length bodies, particularly arts organisations, libraries, museums and sports, to try to make sure that, through the budgets that they have and the additional moneys that some received at monitoring rounds, they meet those objectives and priorities as well as possible. That is to make sure that people who were never in the funding cycle, who were never in the annual supported programmes, who have never had an opportunity, who do good work out there and who have never been supported by the Arts Council get support. I want to make sure that that happens, and I make absolutely no apologies for that.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a freagra. Why is there a need for a new arts strategy, particularly in light of recent budget constraints?

Ms Ní Chuilín: First, there is no overarching arts strategy in the way that we have the Sport Matters strategy. It overarches all Departments, and all Departments have taken part in it. There is a budget aligned to Sport Matters, and that is the direction of travel that I want to take with the arts. I believe that the fact that there has not been an overarching strategy has not given value to the arts. I also appreciate that the strategy, which is largely delivered, particularly the improved arts infrastructure that has been invested in, needs also to include the diversity that we have here, particularly in accessibility and education. So, it is and has been my ambition and strategic direction that we need to have a fuller, more robust strategy for the arts to ensure that it enjoys the full support of the Executive and the full support of the community, and we will go out to consultation very soon on that.

Ms Lo: Northern Ireland already gets much less public arts funding per head compared with the rest of the UK. There is clear evidence of the economic benefit of investing in the arts sector. Has the Minister done any assessment of what negative impact any further cuts in the arts sector may have on our population?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I agree with the Member that we need to try to increase the amount spent here per week per capita in comparison with other institutions. I feel that, for years, the money set aside for the arts has not been enough. Since coming into office, I have pleaded with people in the arts sector, who sometimes have not understood what I have been trying to say. I knew that this day was going to come. I pleaded with people in the arts sector to show the value of their work: how it regenerates the economy; and how we cannot have a life without arts, cultural activity and creativity. The arts need more money, and I will continue to stand up for the arts and increased investment. I made a decision based on the monitoring round and the draft Budget to ensure that, as well as possible, libraries were protected from permanent closure, but that is not to say that I will not argue for additional money for the arts. I will continue to do that.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): That ends the period for listed questions. We will move on to topical questions. Before I call Mr Sammy Douglas, I remind Members that Deputy Speaker Roy Beggs made a plea this morning for no private conversations, particularly when Ministers are answering questions.

2.30 pm

Windsor Park: Redevelopment

T1. Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the redevelopment of Windsor Park. (AQT 1801/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Like the Member, I have driven down Boucher Road, and I am delighted to see O'Hare and McGovern's hoarding around the ground. I am also delighted to see the dirt tracks on Boucher Road, which show that there is a lot of construction activity taking place. Windsor Park is on target. All the construction elements have been met as per target, even with some setbacks, particularly around asbestos. Everything is on target.

I am delighted to say that working with the IFA on that capital build programme has been as it should be. I am sure that the Member and other Members will be aware that there were not just pre-construction social clauses, and that we are now working on social clauses post-construction. So, it is on target, and actually slightly in advance.

Mr Douglas: I thank the Minister for her answer. She will be aware of some recent difficulties with car parking at Ravenhill, or Kingspan. Is she in a position to outline plans for parking in the vicinity of Windsor Park, not just for spectators but for local residents?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I know that parking was a big element when the planning permissions were awarded. Notwithstanding that, the stadia have to be good neighbours with the people who have lived there a lot longer than the stadia programmes have been in existence. It is important that we use things like public transport. Park-and-ride facilities are now being developed in partnership with Translink to ensure that local residents are not put off or inconvenienced any more than they need to be.

There is more parking space available at Windsor Park than at Ravenhill, so that is an added bonus. It is a built-up community that needs to be respected. The Irish Football Association needs to work very closely with its friends and neighbours to ensure that inconvenience is reduced as much as possible when the stadium is finished and is opened up to the public.

Financial Transactions Capital: CAL

T2. Mr Cree asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she is aware of the important part that financial transactions capital plays, albeit some £35 million remains unallocated this year, and whether her Department has been able to use any of that source of revenue. (AQT 1802/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials have been working very closely with the Department of Finance and Personnel. We would not make a bid for any capital projects that we have unless they are shovel-ready. I am doing an assessment, as part of the draft Budget discussions, of what capital projects would be ready to try to spend some money on, albeit small amounts of money, before the end of the financial year. At this stage we are still in discussions on capital projects with the Department of Finance and Personnel and with Sport NI and the Arts Council. The Member will know, through the Committee, which capital projects were brought forward in monitoring rounds. There is no point in bidding for money if you have to hand it back again.

Mr Cree: I thank the Minister for that response. I know that most Departments are a little bit cautious about working with the private sector, which you have to do to lever in money. Following on from her response, has she charged anyone in her Department to liaise with the private sector to see whether there could be common ground and to utilise that asset?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am working with the Strategic Investment Board (SIB), which has links with the private sector, and, indeed, the voluntary and community sector, around potential investment and future programmes. I am working with the SIB, the state aid programme, and the Together: Building a United Community (T:BUC) programme, but I will happily look out for other opportunities.

We have had discussions, with the councils in particular, around different aspects of investment that we can do in partnership. Some of that may mean spending money up front in order to lever in other moneys. I am totally open to that, but I want to do it on a basis that has been properly assessed and evaluated. Only then will I make a bid for something that will not be handed back in other monitoring rounds.

Stadia Design: Health and Safety

T3. Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether any of the relevant authorities have any outstanding issues with regard to health and safety matters in the design of the new stadia at Windsor Park, Casement Park and Ravenhill. (AQT 1803/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I cannot comment on Casement Park because it is subject to legal proceedings. A judicial review has been heard and we are waiting on the judgement.

I have not heard any health and safety issues in relation to Windsor Park or Ravenhill Kingspan. Had there been health and safety issues, they would have been brought forward to me. I have a very good and open working relationship with both sporting bodies. Any issues would have been brought to me well before now.

Mr Nesbitt: I thank the Minister. What are the evacuation times for the three stadia and how do they compare to safe standards?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I will happily write to the Member on the evacuation procedures and standards. However, he should be aware that planning permission would not have been given to any of them unless the access and egress arrangements not only met the standards but went further than that. That is the criterion. It is not something that you might want to do or might think about doing; it is something that has to happen. If there is any issue that the Member has in relation to the other two stadia, I expect him to bring that to my attention and to the attention of the governing body. If not, he should certainly bring it to Belfast City Council, which has responsibility for the health and safety certificates that each of the sports grounds has received.

Libraries: Permanent Closure

T4. Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how she intends to protect libraries from permanent closure during this Budget period. (AQT 1804/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Gabhaim buíochas leis an Chomhalta as an cheist sin a chur orm. As I outlined in my answer to Jimmy Spratt's question, I made a decision to protect libraries as much as possible from permanent closure in the draft-Budget period. That is something I have decided to do. We have invested quite heavily in libraries. I personally lobbied other ministerial colleagues for service level agreements to provide sustainability, particularly for people who live in rural communities. Libraries are a vital source of infrastructural investment for those communities, and it is important that we keep them open. That is why I want to make sure that there are no permanent closures in this Budget period.

Mr Ó hOisín: Go raibh maith agat. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister very much for her answer. I am sure that many libraries will be glad to hear her reply that there will be no permanent closures. In saying that, how will she, working with Libraries NI, ensure minimisation of the impact of shorter opening hours, particularly in rural areas?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have met Libraries NI and will be meeting them over the next period. The Member will not be surprised to know that our officials have been working very closely with all the arm's-length bodies (ALBs), and particularly with the chief executive of Libraries NI. We have received word that some potentially face a reduction in opening hours, but we are trying as much as possible to minimise those reductions. The important thing is to make sure that there are no permanent closures. We have achieved that for this Budget period, but it is still very much a work in progress in relation to the reduction in opening hours.

Gerry Adams: Trojan Horse Statement

T5. Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she will take the opportunity today to distance herself from and repudiate the foul-mouthed statement by Gerry Adams that equality is simply a tactical Trojan Horse to break and undermine the unionist community in Northern Ireland, given that equality is one of the core principles espoused by the Minister in her Department. (AQT 1805/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: First, I think that you have a brass neck to slap my wrist, or anybody else's, over equality. You and your colleagues have a very —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Minister, could you make your remarks through the Chair, please?

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sorry. You have a very short memory, but I do not. My party colleague and president has apologised, unlike your colleague Gregory Campbell, who has never apologised for the offence he caused around the Irish language. Equality is for everyone. It is for all the children of this nation, not just Catholic or Protestant, unionist or republican; it is for us all. That is something that I do and will continue to do, and I make no apologies for it.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Before I call for a supplementary question, I remind everyone that remarks must be made through the Chair and that it is not customary to be reading questions.

Mr McCausland: I say to the Minister, then, that on this occasion, perhaps it is rather the case that Mr Adams was being truthful and speaking from the heart, and it is simply the fact that his mask slipped on this occasion. Does the Minister not accept that that is really the case? He simply was caught on, was found out and had to own up.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I assume from the Member's question that he has not accepted Gerry Adams's apology for the language that he used. I have yet to hear an apology from Gregory Campbell. In fact, I have yet to hear an apology from anybody on the Benches opposite for the disgraceful remarks that he made about the Irish language and the offence that he caused. It is not slapdash comedy to be Islamophobic, homophobic or against the Irish language. I have yet to hear an apology. What I have heard from your Benches are excuses, and that falls far short of the standards that we are all expected to adhere to in the Assembly. People in glass houses should not throw stones. Sin é.

Mr McCausland: There is plenty of stone throwing sometimes in Ardoyne.

Ms Ní Chuilín: Aye.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I remind Members that I do not need any help from the Benches to chair this meeting. I said before that remarks made from a sedentary position will not be tolerated by any Deputy Speaker.

Arts Sector: Budget Cuts

T6. Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she agrees that community arts are vital to creativity, jobs, community cohesion, civic participation and economic growth in Northern Ireland, despite Northern Ireland having the lowest spend on arts across the UK and Ireland, and, if so, does she further agree that the uniform budgetary reductions being applied to the arts sector could have a devastatingly disproportionate impact for years to come. (AQT 1806/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Member was in the House when he heard other Members ask me questions in relation to the budgets of the DCAL family, and particularly of the arts. I am very supportive of the arts, but it is hugely unfair that, year on year, we are given a reduced Budget from the British Government by a cabinet of millionaires who are Tories and do not value the services here in the North of Ireland. They do not value the services not only in this part of the island, but across the island. It is going to have an impact. I want to ensure that the most adverse aspects of that impact are felt least by the services that deliver within the community and for the community and create employment. I can do nothing else other than that.

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Minister for her response and I note that she has made reference to the UK Government. Can she give us a bit more detail about what she is doing within the Northern Ireland Executive to stand up for community arts? Will she join me in congratulating the success of the C S Lewis community festival that took place in east Belfast this weekend? Can she advise the House as to how she can support that festival?

Ms Ní Chuilín: I certainly congratulate the C S Lewis Festival. I must say that Eastside Arts is a pleasure to work with. I am happy to do that. However, I find it a bit rich that the Member's sister party in England is part of a Tory-led Government that are making cuts all over the place. Is it OK to do it in London, but not here? The Alliance Party needs to make its mind up. I know that it is about revenue raising which, for me, is shorthand for water charges, prescription charges and raising student fees. Is that OK so long as the arts sector gets it? Which is it? You cannot have it all. What we are trying to do, and we are on the record, is protect those who are most affected and most vulnerable. Those are communities that are extremely deprived. We continue to do that and make absolutely no apology for it.

City of Culture: Legacy Funding

T7. Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a detailed breakdown of how the money she received in the October monitoring round for the City of Culture legacy fund will be spent. (AQT 1807/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am happy to write to the Member on that, as I have done before. I have corresponded with the Member on various questions. I have worked through some of that with the partnership around the City of Culture legacy funding. I am happy to write to the Member with details.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Time is up.

2.45 pm

Education

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Questions 8 and 11 have been withdrawn.

ERASMUS+

1. Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education what practical assistance his Department is providing to schools that want to become involved in the ERASMUS+ programme. (AQO 7145/11-15)

programme, offers a wide range of opportunities for pupils, students and teachers to participate in partnership and exchange activities across Europe. The EU programme aims to boost skills and employability while modernising education, training and youth work.

The British Council is, with Ecorys, the national agency for the delivery of the ERASMUS+ programme on behalf of the European Union. The national agency is responsible for keeping schools informed about the programme and supporting them in the application process. They hosted workshops across the North during October and November, and further events are scheduled for December and January. My Department continues to work with the national agency to ensure that schools are encouraged to take up the opportunities that the programme offers and are supported in making successful bids.

In addition, my Department notified schools in January 2014 of the EU's new ERASMUS+ programme. That was followed up by a press release in October to highlight the publication of the deadlines for the 2015 round. My press release encouraged schools and youth organisations to apply for funding and highlighted the benefits of participating in the programme.

Fifteen schools here have already been successful in applications to ERASMUS+. My Department will continue to work with the British Council to promote the programme to ensure that the participation of schools and youth organisations is maximised.

Mr Eastwood: I thank the Minister for his answer. What level of funding is available for schools that want to become involved in the programme?

Mr O'Dowd: The level of funding can be up to 70% of the initial bid. I will give the Member an idea, based on the schools that have already been successful. Of the 107 applications that have been received from organisations in the North, which is equivalent to 6·8% of the total from here and Britain, 50% have been successful. In total, €5,673,463 has been awarded to organisations here. Quite a significant level of funding is therefore available to successful applications, and that is why the Department has been encouraging schools to apply, why we are working with the British Council on the matter and why we are encouraging participation in the programme.

Education: Cultural Rights

2. Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the current education system in meeting the cultural rights of children as set out in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC). (AQO 7146/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I recognise the importance of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and appreciate its value in setting out how children and young people should be brought up in the:

“spirit of peace, dignity, tolerance, freedom, equality and solidarity.”

Many of my Department's policies ensure that children and young people have access to educational opportunities and materials that are in keeping with their cultural identity and that of others. In particular, the curriculum supports the principles of the UNCRC, specifically those that relate to identity and culture.

Mr McCausland: In a response to a question for written answer that I received the other day from the Minister, he mentioned the Ulster-Scots education project, which is producing materials on culture, history and language. Am I right in assuming that his Department has not contributed one penny to that and that it is being funded entirely by the Ulster-Scots Agency? Will he contrast that with the fact that he recently gave £140,000 to Irish-medium youth work? There seems to be something of a disparity between £140,000 and nothing.

Mr O'Dowd: My Department is working with the Ulster-Scots Agency on the production of materials. It is also working with the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA). I understand that the Ulster-Scots Agency is funded to provide materials to the Ulster-Scots community. I think that it is a particularly good idea that my Department work with the Ulster-Scots Agency to promote materials for Ulster-Scots cultural expression. I thought that you would have thought that it was a great idea rather than a bad idea. Perhaps your problem is this: you do not want any money going to the Irish-language sector. If that is the problem, I cannot help you with it. If you want me to support the Ulster-Scots Agency and Ulster-Scots culture further, I am more than happy to sit down and talk to you about it and see how we do that.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I remind the Minister and others that they must address their remarks through the Chair and that the dreaded word “you” should not be used.

Ms McCorley: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Buíochas leis an Aire as a fheagraí go dtí seo. An dtig liom iarraidh ar an Aire caidé mar atá cearta cultúrtha páistí á gcosaint i nGaeiloideachas sa chóras reatha? How are children's cultural rights in the Irish-medium sector met under the current system?

Mr O'Dowd: Gabhaim buíochas leis an Chomhalta as an cheist. I thank the Member for her question. As she will be aware, the Irish-medium sector is protected under the Good Friday Agreement and the subsequent legislation, which sees the Department facilitating and supporting the growth of the Irish-medium sector. Over 3,000 children now attend naiscoileanna, bunscoileanna and meánscoil across the North. It is a growing sector. My Department will continue to invest appropriately in it. We will also continue to invest in youth work in relation to the Irish-medium sector.

Irish-medium Development Proposals

3. Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Education to outline the nature of the recent development proposals relating to the Irish-medium sector. (AQO 7147/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: During 2014, my Department received three development proposals relating to the Irish-medium sector. One of them sought the opening of a full-time nursery unit at Gaelscoil Eoghain in Cookstown. Although I did not approve full-time provision, I approved the establishment of a new part-time nursery unit at the school. There was also a development proposal (DP) for the expansion of Gaelscoil Uí Dhochartaigh in Strabane through the establishment of an off-site unit. I had concerns about the impact that the off-site unit could have had on the host school and did not approve the DP. However, I recognised that there was a demand for Irish-medium education in the area, and I asked Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta, the Western Education and Library Board and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) to further explore options in the area. The third development proposal was for the establishment of an Irish-medium post-primary school in Dungiven. I advise the Member that my officials are collating all the pertinent information to enable me to make a decision on that proposal.

Mr Ó hOisín: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. Bhí mé ag smaoineamh an mbeidh ceann ar bith de na scéimeanna seo ag teacht go luath? Will any of the schemes be announced any time soon? When can we look forward to them? The Minister is obviously aware of my interest in a number of the schemes.

Mr O'Dowd: Gabhaim buíochas leis an Chomhalta as an cheist. In relation to the Dungiven development proposal, my officials are still working on the evidence collated during the eight-week consultation period. Once the documentation comes to me, I will make a decision as quickly as possible in relation to that matter. It is quite a complex development proposal, but I am aware of the urgency felt in the area for that development proposal to be decided on one way or the other. I will work at it as quickly as I possibly can.

Mr Kinahan: I thank the Minister for his answers so far. While we are talking about the Irish-medium sector, can I just say that I am appalled and embarrassed by what is going on over the Irish language.

On this subject, we have development plans that seem to be splitting off the Irish-medium sector from groupings with other sectors. What effect will that have on other voluntary schools? We need to make sure that we have a level playing field for everybody.

Mr O'Dowd: Each development proposal will be judged on its own merits. Account will be taken of the impact of a positive or negative response to that development proposal on other schools in the area. Irish medium is a growth area in our education system. There is a growing demand among parents for it, but, in the three development proposals I referred to in answer to Mr Ó hOisín, I turned down one, I made a stipulation on another that it would be part time rather than full time, and I have yet to make a decision on a third. They are being put through rigorous tests against the principles of the sustainable schools policy and against the principle of my Department's legal obligation to facilitate the Irish-medium sector. There are no guarantees either way. When a development proposal comes forward, I assure the Member that all aspects are taken into account.

Ms Sugden: Other than the Irish-medium sector, what plans does the Minister have to bring forward governance and funding policy proposals for sectors not under the remit of the new Education Authority?

Mr O'Dowd: I have no plans to bring forward any further funding other than that set out as part of the discussions around the Education Authority for the controlled sector. We are about to enter one of the most difficult phases for education, in budget terms, for many years. I am looking to see where we can save money in education rather than opening up new funding streams.

Mr McGlone: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Mo bhuíochas leis an Aire as a fhreagraí go n-uige seo ar na cúrsaí faoi láthair. I thank the Minister for his answers to this point. An féidir leis an Aire a chur in iúl dúinn caidé an meastachán atá déanta ag an Roinn s'aige féin ar na háiseanna agus ar chúrsaí straitéise lastoigh den Roinn i dtaobh an chórais Gaeloideachais. Will the Minister provide us with details of any assessment carried out by his Department of the facilities provided for and the strategic direction of Gaeloideachais, Irish language education?

Mr O'Dowd: Gabhaim buíochas leis an Chomhalta as a cheist. I thank the Member for his question. The Member will be aware of the Irish-medium review that was published during my predecessor's time and is still a significant reference policy document in my Department for the expansion of the Irish-medium sector.

We have seen growth in the Irish-medium sector. Only two or three weeks ago, I announced in the House the publication of the Irish-medium post-primary review, which sets out a pathway for the development of further post-primary provision in the Irish-medium sector. As I said in response to Mr Cathal Ó hOisín, there is a development proposal for the development of stand-alone post-primary provision in the Dungiven area that will have to go through the normal processes.

We have taken proactive steps to develop the Irish-medium sector. We have firm policies in place; we have funding streams in place; and we are responding to the demand of parents and communities in relation to the Irish-medium sector. However, as I said to Mr Kinahan, I will only approve development proposals that adhere to my Department's policies and are educationally robust and sustainable.

Education: Low Attainment

4. Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to outline the new strategies being pursued to assist sections of our community that currently have low levels of academic attainment. (AQO 7148/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have continued to implement policies and provide funding for additional interventions to raise standards and increase equity. Strategies include the revision of the school funding formula, which directs additional money at schools serving a high proportion of pupils with free school meals. I also support a number of programmes to improve pupil outcomes in literacy and numeracy particularly targeted at pupils at risk of low attainment. I am seeking full implementation of the entitlement framework. Young people who see their time in education as relevant to their future and have access to courses that interest them are more likely to achieve their full potential.

My proposals for the revised special educational needs (SEN) and inclusion policy aim to provide a framework to promote early identification, assessment and provision for SEN children so that they can achieve their full potential. I hope to bring a special educational needs draft Bill to the Executive shortly.

Outside school, I have provided funding to support the development of better links between schools, parents and communities.

From September 2014, through the extension of the free school meal entitlement, an additional 12,000 pupils were eligible for this benefit and the school uniform grant.

Sure Start is being expanded to cover the top 25% most disadvantaged wards by April 2015.

The development of a pupil attendance strategy will focus on improving the attendance of children and young people who have low academic achievement. However, the continued use of academic selection by some schools is a barrier to addressing underachievement, particularly in disadvantaged communities. I strongly encourage those schools to move away from academic selection so that we can eradicate this social division.

Mr Weir: I thank the Minister for his response. It is a little disappointing that he keeps on dragging in the chestnut of academic selection as the answer to everything that relates to this.

There are obviously concerns about the low attainment, in particular, of males from a unionist background and on free school meals. The Minister outlined initiatives that principally focus on the schools, but I wonder whether he could give a bit more information on the support or opportunities for support for a number of community-based organisations that are seeking to tackle educational underachievement.

3.00 pm

Mr O'Dowd: The Member may be disappointed by what he described as me dragging in academic selection. I am not dragging it in; international evidence is dragging it in. Your party chooses to ignore that evidence because it does not suit your current agenda, but you cannot stand up and express concern about educational underachievement in Protestant working-class communities while ignoring academic selection. You simply cannot do it.

I underlined in my answer to you several policies that are directly targeted at ensuring that young people who are in danger of educational under-attainment are assisted through those programmes. You asked me about community-based programmes. You are right in the sense that I believe that, in general terms, our educational policies in the classrooms are correct. When I came into office, I said that we needed to drive them with more rigour and vigour, and we have been doing that ever since. However, the community has a crucial role in raising educational aspirations. In last year's budget, I set aside £2 million for community interventions, which is a new departure for the Department of Education. In the past, we largely focused solely on what happened within the school gates. We are now focusing on what happens outside the schools gates to see if we can support communities and families.

The Member will be aware of my advertising campaign that runs across the media calling on and supporting families to become involved in their children's education. We have also invested heavily in youth work, particularly in disadvantaged communities, to inspire young people to become engaged in formal and informal education. Many initiatives are going on, but you simply cannot ignore academic selection.

Mr Beggs: The Northern Ireland Audit Office follow-on report from February drew particular attention to the close linkage between absenteeism, truancy and poor educational attainment. That is a fundamental issue: if you are not at school, you will not reach your full potential. Will the Minister advise on what action he has taken with other Ministers to ensure that parents and local communities are empowered? What action is he taking in his Department to empower schools and educational welfare officers so that they can help parents and young people to reach their full potential?

Mr O'Dowd: I thank the Member for his question. He is absolutely correct: if children are not in school, they will not benefit from the educational experience of school. However, there are many different reasons why children become habitual absentee statistics. We have to work with schools and families. As I said in response to the previous questioner, we have to work with communities to raise awareness and aspirations in education and the importance of education and attending school. My Department is drawing up a response as a result of the Audit Office report and the work of the Public Accounts Committee. We are engaged in detailed work on how we can improve our work and our interventions supporting the boards and, in future, the Education Authority. We will publish a strategy in due course.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for his answers thus far. Will the Minister outline what he is doing to ensure early intervention in areas of low academic targets?

Mr O'Dowd: The Executive have invested significantly in early interventions across several Departments to encourage and upskill families to ensure that they have the ability and knowledge to assist their young people from a very early age in their educational and learning pathways. We are now making a preschool place available to every child whose parent wishes them to have one. In the SEN legislation that I hope to bring to the Executive in the very near future, we are also targeting early intervention through the identification at an early stage of any SEN requirement that a child has and following that up with support. My Department is involved in a number of areas that we wish to develop in the near future.

Home-to-school Transport

5. Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Education when he plans to publish the findings of the independent review of home-to-school transport. (AQO 7149/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The independent panel conducting the review of school transport presented its report to me at the end of August. I am now taking time to consider the report and its recommendations before deciding on the way forward. The report will be published in due course.

Mr Buchanan: The issue of home-to-school transport has been lobbied on in the Chamber for some time. Does the Minister agree that his delay in issuing the report is of grave concern to parents and is curtailing education and library boards in providing transport in extremely dangerous rural areas? Does he agree that some flexibility needs to be instilled in the old scheme until he sees fit to bring forward the programme?

Mr O'Dowd: Measures are in place for any board to provide transport to children who, it believes, are travelling a dangerous road. The review is extensive. It examines transport from many angles. It has spoken to many stakeholders, in particular pupils who use our transport system. However, the magic answer that will please everybody is not in that report, because everybody has a different view on transport.

It is probably the most hotly contested issue in education in terms of provision by the boards. Maybe SEN, then transport, but in some areas it will be transport, particularly in rural communities.

I will publish the report in due course, but I emphasise to the Member that the report presents challenges to everyone. It will test the will of everyone in where they want to see transport provision and where the priorities are for transport provision into the future. It will also test us in this context, as I responded to a previous questioner: we are entering the most difficult education budget that this Assembly has ever seen.

We spend £70 million on transport. Approximately £30 million of that is on special educational needs; the rest is for a variety of reasons. It is highly unlikely that we will be able to continue to spend that amount on transport.

Mr Ramsey: I thank the Minister. Following on from Tom Buchanan's question, have any lessons been learned or are there measures that the Minister could bring in in light of the most recent and awful tragedy on our roads that saw death coming to a family's door? There has to be, Minister, better ways of doing this.

Mr O'Dowd: I have asked the relevant board, the North Eastern Education and Library Board, to deliver me a report into the circumstances that it is responsible for with regard to the Gilmore family and the events that led to the tragic death of young Adam. I am also conscious that there is a PSNI investigation going on into that matter, and the PSNI will take primacy in any investigation.

When we talk about boards and transport provision, we must bear in mind that transport officers, board members, officers and staff are themselves parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles, brothers and sisters. They are only too aware of the tragedy that befell the Gilmore family.

Could things have been done differently? Let us wait to see what the report tells us, but I can assure you that the anguish of the Gilmore family is felt by the North Eastern Education and Library Board staff. They want to ensure that if things could have been done differently, they are done differently in future.

I am not suggesting this of the Member, but I caution against apportioning blame in relation to this tragedy to a board because a board is made up of people.

Mr Allister: I discern from what the Minister says that two weeks on he has still not received a report from the North Eastern Education and Library Board on how it handled the circumstances giving rise to the tragic death of young Adam Gilmore.

Would he agree with me that it is equally unsatisfactory that, two weeks on, the same education and library board is yet unable to say to the Gilmore family whether, even now, it will provide transport to them on this provenly dangerous road?

Mr O'Dowd: For the record, the North Eastern Education and Library Board has provided me with a draft report, and I had several questions about a number of areas in it where I wished for clarity. The board is now preparing a final report for me.

I know that the board is engaging with you and with the Gilmore family about the events that led up to that tragedy, but not the criminal investigation being carried out by the PSNI, and are liaising with you and others as to how they provide transport for the Gilmore family in the future.

This tragedy, foremost and without doubt, has been for the Gilmore family to carry. Their loss is unbearable, and, as a father myself of children around that age, I can only imagine the grief that they are going through. However, I caution Members about pointing the finger of blame or accusation at any organisation at this stage because the organisations are made up of people, and those people not only have rights and entitlements, but they, too, have feelings. They too are conscious of the fact that the decisions that they now make could end up with a tragedy, such as the one that we have witnessed with the Gilmore family, despite their having no intentions for that to be the case. We expect our public servants to deliver a public service, and 99 times out of 100 they do so above and beyond the call of duty. When something goes wrong, we have to ensure that all the facts are to the fore and are investigated before we start blaming anyone. I think —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): The Minister's two minutes are up.

Anti-bullying Forum

6. Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the work of the anti-bullying forum. (AQO 7150/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Over the last year, the anti-bullying forum has worked with 7,000 pupils in 37 schools and over 1,000 young people in 26 non-school settings to raise awareness and provide anti-bullying training. Ten seminars, aimed at enhancing anti-bullying policies and practices in schools, were held and attracted 283 school leaders from across all the education and library boards (ELBs) and all school types.

This year, Anti-bullying Week, with the theme Together We Will Make a Difference, ran from 17 to 21 November. I attended the launch event on 18 November, where I presented prizes to the winners of the art and creative writing competition, which received over 4,000 entries. That was more than double the number received last year, which shows the increasing awareness of the issue within schools.

In late 2013, at my request, the forum undertook a review of anti-bullying practices and presented a report which made a number of recommendations. That has led to an agreed joint working programme for 2014-15 and beyond.

One of the key recommendations was the strengthening of legislation to ensure greater consistency across all schools in tackling this problem, and on 23 June I announced my commitment to introducing anti-bullying legislation in the current Assembly mandate. Work on that is progressing, and it is my intention to begin a public consultation early in the new year, ahead of the introduction of a Bill to the Assembly in May.

Ms McGahan: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for his response. What guidance does the Department provide to schools on the issue of bullying?

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has regularly updated its guidance to schools in relation to bullying. All schools, by law, have to have an anti-bullying policy. That policy should be developed in conjunction with staff, pupils and parents in consultation. The exact detail of the anti-bullying policy is not set out in law, which is a matter that I want to return to in the consultation on the legislation that I hope to bring before the Assembly in May, because a strong argument has been made to strengthen our anti-bullying legislation.

The way to eradicate and challenge bullying is to get adults and children to change their attitudes and treat each other with respect, to support the victims of bullying and, as strange as this may sound, to support the perpetrators of bullying. When a young child is carrying out acts of bullying, you will often find that there are other problems are at play in the child's personal life or family life or that there are other factors bearing down on that child. We have to investigate those to ensure that that child receives assistance as well.

Legislation is certainly one way forward, but the eradication of bullying in our schools and workplaces requires a change of attitudes by all involved.

Mrs McKevitt: How does the Minister's Department determine evidence of cyberbullying, particularly in the growing world of social media?

Mr O'Dowd: That is an issue that is developing all the time, and we have offered further support to schools, but the situations can change so quickly that it is difficult sometimes for guidance to keep up with those who are involved in cyberbullying. A number of Departments are examining that matter. The recently published child sexual exploitation (CSE) report, which has been taken under the guidance of the Health Minister, has some bearing on that as well. We are trying a number of elements to support schools and support individuals across the Executive and within my Department.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Time is up. We now move on to topical questions.

Primary Schools: Enrolment Levels

T1. Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education how many primary schools in the state-controlled and CCMS sectors fall below the minimum Bain enrolment levels for rural and urban schools. (AQT 1811/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I thank the Member for his question. I appreciate that these are topical questions, but I cannot have all that information with me on days like this.

I am more than happy to present the Member with the information, but I emphasise again what I have said many times in the House, which is that this is not a numbers game. Although lists of schools can be produced in which enrolment falls under 105 and 145 respectively, I will not be held to the idea that x number of schools are in danger and y number of schools are not in danger. The sustainable schools policy sets out the viability criteria of schools. It is not simply a numbers game.

Mr Gardiner: I note the Minister's comments and accept that he will write to me to put me in the picture. Thank you.

3.15 pm

Development Proposals: School Considerations

T2. Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education, in the light of a recent development proposal that was made public to expand the integrated post-primary-school sector in his area, to give further details of the considerations he undertakes when determining whether expansion should occur, particularly in advance of the area-planning process. (AQT 1812/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Without being specific about that particular development proposal, I will give the Member a broad outline of the issues that we consider. We will obviously refer to the sustainable schools policy and assure ourselves that the development proposal is in line with it. We will assess the impact on other schools in the area, and we will also have to take into account any integrated or Irish-medium proposal or statutory duty for both sectors.

Mr Beggs: The expansion proposal that was included in discussions of the area-planning process could benefit all young people and schools in the area. However, should expansion occur in advance of the process, the local grammar and integrated schools will be oversubscribed, and, as a result, the pupils will come from the controlled secondary sector. Does the Minister recognise that Protestant boys in particular are already underachieving and that it will be they who are adversely affected? Will he ensure that an appropriate equality impact assessment will be undertaken so that we do not further disadvantage members of our community because of any change that may occur in advance of the area-planning process?

Mr O'Dowd: I hope that the Member appreciates that I cannot discuss a specific development proposal, as I am the decision-maker in that process.

The area-planning process for post-primary education has been published for a number of years. It is an evolving process. Any decision that I make on a development proposal will have to have regard to the area-planning process. It will have to be proved to me that the area-planning proposals for the area have been taken into account.

As to the Member's request for an equality impact assessment, I welcome the fact that he now recognises that selective schools in his area may be having a detrimental impact on sections of, in this case, Protestant working-class boys.

Education Authority: Progress

T3. Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Education what has been done to date in preparation for the implementation of the Education Authority in April 2015. (AQT 1813/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In fairness, the Bill was passed only a week ago. I am now in the process of writing to the various bodies and political parties that have nominating rights to the authority. We have advertised for a chair, and I am looking into how we will proceed with the appointment of senior officers to the body, taking into account the stipulations in the legislation. The Department is working on a change management body, so there is a wide range of work going on in preparation for the implementation of the Education Authority.

Ms P Bradley: I thank the Minister for his answer and understand that it has been only a short period since the Bill was passed. However, is he aware yet of any estimated saving that it will produce?

Mr O'Dowd: The estimated saving at this stage appears to equate to what would have been achievable under the Education and Skills Authority, which is £180 million over a 10-year period. We are going in the right direction to reduce our administration and bureaucracy around education and to target funds towards the front line. That is quite timely, given the considerations that we have to take into account around our Budget in the next year.

Education: Segregated System

T4. Mr Brady asked the Minister of Education for his response to the recent comments that our education system is segregated. (AQT 1814/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I, personally, do not like the term "segregated" because it implies that, whatever sector parents or pupils choose, they are "segregationists". That implies the southern states of America. I find it offensive when supporters of one sector then lambaste me across social media with photographs of divisions in southern state schools during the 1950s and 1960 and accuse me, because I have taken the right decision on not agreeing to a development proposal for an integrated school, of somehow being a "segregationist". Segregation is based on being forced into one sector or another. Parents here have choices, and I continue to support choice.

Mr Brady: I thank the Minister for his answer. Can he outline how our system enables young people to come together in their learning process? Go raibh maith agat.

Mr O'Dowd: Yes. This is one of the areas where politicians have caught up with education and caught up with many parents and schools. Shared education may be a new concept to many politicians, but it certainly is not a new concept to many of our schools that have been involved in shared education over many, many years and built up working relationships and personal relationships across sectors. We now have caught up with them. We now are in a position to invest quite significantly in shared education in the future, where young people will be learning about each other from each other. Difference is not the problem in our society; how we treat difference is the problem. If we learn to respect difference, we will go a long way to resolving many of the issues in our divided society.

St John's PS, Moy/Moy Regional PS: Shared Campus

T5. Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the capital build project for the shared education campus for St John's Primary School, Moy and Moy Regional Primary School. (AQT 1815/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Moy project is one of three schemes that I announced in July to be supported under the shared education campuses programme. It is in the very early stages of development. A project board has been established, and a site search for a new campus is under way. The Southern Education and Library Board will carry out the technical feasibility study and economic appraisal for the project in conjunction with CCMS.

Ms McGahan: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for his response. Will he detail the wider benefits of the capital build project, through social clauses, to the local construction industry and the community?

Mr O'Dowd: Since 2009, the Department of Education has had social clauses attached to its capital build programme for schools. It is about hiring the long-term unemployed, ensuring that apprentices are taken on and ensuring that young people are given an opportunity to gain their first meaningful employment. Obviously, these have a wider ripple effect in our society when you give people, particularly young people, meaningful employment.

As I have stated before, my main objective has to be to provide new schools. However, the spending of public funds in this manner also ensures that there is investment in the construction industry. It is worked out that, for every £1 invested by my Department in the construction of a new school, £2.84 is created in the broader economy. So, it is quite a significant economic driver. As we move through the discussions on the draft Budget, I will, as I have said before, be engaging with the Finance Minister around the proposed capital budget for education because I am concerned that it will not be sufficient to bring forward the developments that we have in the pipeline.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Mr Raymond McCartney is not in his place.

AQE/GL Selection Tests

T7. Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Education to confirm or give an estimate of the number of primary-school pupils who are currently sitting the AQE and GL selection tests. (AQT 1817/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I cannot confirm that, because they have absolutely nothing to do with my Department. I read speculation in the newspapers and the media about the numbers sitting them. As far as I am concerned, one pupil sitting them is far too many.

Mr McCarthy: Given that some schools have prepared and are openly preparing children for the selection tests and that, equally, other schools are refusing to do so, is there anything that the Minister can do or intends to do to regularise what is happening and simply provide a level playing field for all our schoolchildren?

Mr O'Dowd: I have proposed a level playing field for all our schoolchildren. They should be able to transfer to their nearest good school. Primary schools should not be preparing any child or disrupting the curriculum, in any way, to the advantage of an outside body. That is what is happening: it is not for the advantage of the children; it is for the advantage of an outside body.

A number that will not be reported in the weeks and months ahead will be how many children these bodies have decided are failures. They will not publish those figures, and you will not see them emblazoned across the front pages of newspapers or on social media. You will not see how many people the AQE or GL tests have rejected. However, those children will be rejected in a few months' time. I advise parents not to buy into that marketing ploy. I say firmly that any primary school that prepares children for unregulated tests in curriculum time and uses school resources to do so will be challenged by my Department.

Teacher Training: Future

T8. Mr Attwood asked the Minister of Education to detail, in light of the Minister for Employment and Learning's review of teacher-training provision, what conversations

he has had with that Minister about the future of teacher training and, in particular, the future of St Mary's University College. (AQT 1818/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I can detail those conversations very easily. I have not had any because it is not my responsibility. It would be like the Minister for Employment and Learning asking me about development proposals a, b and c. That is none of his business. I have a copy of the report and have read it, but the decisions made on the back of that report are solely a matter for the Minister for Employment and Learning.

Mr Attwood: The Minister knows what I will say next, and it is that I am surprised by that reply. I am surprised because you cannot divorce the world of education from the world of further education, and you cannot divorce teacher-training provision in our secondary and primary schools from teacher-training provision in our third-level institutions. It is one of the most self-evident examples of the requirement for joined-up thinking —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Sorry, can we have a question?

Mr Attwood: Given that Mr Farry has, I suggest, a very clear, if not dogmatic, agenda for teacher training, is this not a place where you, as a Minister, with your responsibilities, should show better authority?

Mr O'Dowd: I am not sure which part of that speech to respond to. I will try to pull a question from it somewhere. Mr Attwood is acutely aware of the situation, and I know exactly what he is asking and why he is asking it. As I said to him before, he is preparing a press release to run out to the west Belfast papers, point fingers and make all sorts of accusations.

The reality is that my role in teacher training is to indicate to the Minister for Employment and Learning how many teachers I believe need to be trained in the coming years. It is then his responsibility to provide the training places, if he agrees with me. It is also up to him to decide where those training institutions will be. I may have views about where they should be and where high-quality teacher training should be provided — we are fortunate that we have a significant number of colleges providing that — but that is not my role. It is the role of the Minister for Employment and Learning.

Malvern Primary School: Future

T9. Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Education whether the Belfast Education and Library Board's consultation on the future of Malvern Primary School has been completed and, if so, what the next steps are for the future of the school. (AQT 1819/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware of the consultation on a development proposal for Malvern Primary School. I understand that the pre-consultation process has been completed and that a report will be brought to the Belfast Education and Library Board in the next number of weeks. It will then decide what, if any, steps it will take next.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order. Time is up.

Private Members' Business

Prison Service: Staff Safety

Debate resumed on motion:

That this Assembly condemns the targeting of Northern Ireland Prison Service employees by dissident republicans; calls upon the Minister of Justice to reject any proposal that compromises the security of HMP Maghaberry, the safety of prison staff or concedes to the demands of republican prisoners in Roe House; and further calls for a review by the Northern Ireland Prison Service, working with the Prison Officers' Association and the Prison Governors Association, to address concerns about staffing levels across all grades in each prison establishment in Northern Ireland.

Mr A Maginness: I beg to move the following amendment:

Leave out from the first "calls" to "further" and insert

"notes the stocktake document, published on 12 November 2014 by the independent assessment team, on the separated prison regime in Maghaberry prison; and".

From the outset, I want to make it clear that the amendment that the SDLP tabled was included to ensure that the stocktake report that was compiled by the independent assessors on the situation in Roe House is part of the motion and the debate.

The report was released on 12 November. It is a very important milestone in addressing the situation in Roe House, and it is important that the House discusses it.

3.30 pm

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Beggs] in the Chair)

I understand — indeed, I have sympathy with — the points that Mr Givan made in his opening address to the House on the DUP motion. He spoke with considerable passion, deep interest and knowledge, and great concern. I share those concerns. I want to make it very plain that the SDLP acknowledges the good work that prison staff have done. They deserve our support, and they deserve to work in an environment that is free from intimidation or threat, as do their families.

The 2010 agreement, which Mr Givan referred to — he did so in critical terms — was posited on a number of principles, one of which was to create a situation in which staff and prisoners, particularly staff, would be free from any threat or intimidation, or anything of that nature. When the authors of the stocktake report appeared before the Justice Committee, they emphasised the importance of the process being two-way. It was not simply a matter of prisoners making certain demands and certain things being given to prisoners. The original agreement and the report to which I am referring emphasised the importance of prison staff being protected from intimidation and threat.

Mr Bunting, who led the assessment team, is a leading trade unionist and is secretary of the Irish Congress of Trade Unions (ICTU). As a trade unionist, he put tremendous emphasis on the protection of fellow workers in the Prison Service. I want to make that point strongly to the House. His colleagues, Rev Dr Lesley Carroll, Mr Chris Maccabe CB and Mr Conal McFeely, are serious-minded people. They have dedicated their lives to public work and to helping society at large. It is very important to note their contribution to this issue, which was voluntary, unpaid and disinterested, in the sense that all they wanted to do was to find a solution to the continuing problems in Roe House. Their report should be seen in that context.

The SDLP amendment does not ask anyone in the House to support the report; it asks the House to note the report. Hopefully, we will learn from the report, and I hope that it will effect some substantive change in the coming months, particularly in the next six months. It is important to note that, in the conclusion of the report, the compilers state:

"While many of the [2010] Agreement's aims and objectives have been achieved a number of issues are still outstanding and tensions remain."

The compilers were not oblivious to the fact that there was still tension and still work to be done. They stated that there was a unique opportunity, given the prison reform programme that is due to be completed next year, to create a prison system that is compliant with the highest human rights standards and that the stocktake report should be read in that context. They further stated that they did not:

"underestimate the difficulties that arise from having 'separated' areas for paramilitary prisoners in Maghaberry Prison. However, we are convinced that the opportunity exists to ensure the outstanding issues can be resolved if all involved parties maintain full compliance with all the principles and undertakings that underpin the August 2010 Agreement."

They went on to state that communication was essential in the process. They put tremendous emphasis on the creation or the maintenance of a prisoners' forum and said that forum could be chaired by an independent chair, such as an official from the International Committee of the Red Cross. That is an important contribution in understanding and trying to improve the situation that exists in Roe House.

I want to emphasise that they also went on to state that they believed that there should be:

"an agreed timeline of six months for resolving any outstanding issues and over this period Roe House, by example and deed, should be a conflict-free environment and all threats to staff internally and externally should cease."

Finally, they stated:

"we would suggest that if the outstanding issues are to be resolved, all parties must commit to a new regime that is secure, safe and humane and freed from the prison experience of the past."

I think that that is a very important contribution to the debate today. We have to see the report in the context of trying to free us from some of the ghosts of the past that continue to haunt our present.

It is very important that all of us in the House take that report seriously and, at least, give it a chance so that it can create a new dispensation that is positive for everyone in the context of Roe House — staff and prisoners — and, in addition to that, wider society, because, if the situation in Roe House deteriorates, there are bound to be political consequences outside and a ripple effect throughout society. We know that from experience, and we cannot ignore it.

We should move on from the report and try to build on the good work that has been done by those people. Indeed, the response from the Northern Ireland Prison Service has been very positive in relation to the report and in its attempt to create a situation in which the 2010 agreement can be fully implemented.

I also note the points that have been made in relation to staffing levels in the Prison Service. I think that it is important that we look at them. It is important that staff feel safe and secure, and that prisoners feel safe and secure and that they have access to educational services, to work, where they can, and to proper recreational and leisure activities. It is important that we focus on those things, but I believe that the Department of Justice and the Northern Ireland Prison Service are intent on reviewing all those matters.

I know that some concerns have been expressed about the level of manpower in the Prison Service, but, at this point in time, it is not critical. I hope that the Prison Service will be —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr A Maginness: — saved from the worst excesses of cuts, and I hope and pray that the current positive situation that has been achieved in Roe House will be built upon and that we can do a lot better in the next six months.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I support the amendment and endorse the outcome of the independent assessors' stocktake of the August 2010 Maghaberry prison agreement.

Back in 2010, the agreement that was reached came about because of a protest by the republican prisoners in Roe House. At that time, I was not elected; however, since 2011 a number of colleagues and I have, as the Justice Committee, been in the prison on numerous occasions. Each time, we met senior management and some of the republican groupings in Roe House. It was obvious from speaking to both sides that trust had totally broken down and that relationships between the prisoners and the Prison Service were at an all-time low.

From discussions that we had over that period, we found that both sides wanted to end the impasse, and it is in that context that I welcome the report that the independent assessment team has prepared. I take this opportunity to commend the team's work, time and effort, and the report that it has produced in such a short time regarding the segregated prison regime in Maghaberry. We can all argue and debate and apportion blame as to where the fault lies for the failure of the 2010 agreement, but that will get us nowhere. It is most important that lessons are learned by all and that the report is grasped both by the prisoners and the Prison Service in an effort to bring about the change that everybody said they desired.

The stocktake allows for an opportunity to move forward and create a pathway towards a conflict-free environment for prisoners and staff. The assessment team's recommendation of an agreed timeline of six months for resolving any outstanding issues is to be welcomed. I believe that that period will focus minds towards a positive outcome.

Another aspect of the report that I want to touch on is the prisoners' forum. We learned from our visits — and this was experienced by the assessors themselves — that the prisoners were frustrated that the forum did not function properly and that issues that they presented seemed to get lost and were never followed up.

The Prison Service also had difficulties with the forum. I welcome the assessors' recommendation that the Prison Service should continue to ensure that meetings of the prisoners' forum are properly planned. For trust to be re-established and outstanding issues to be resolved, a proper functioning forum is key. As the Member who spoke previously said, an independent body chairing forum meetings for at least six months should also be seriously considered.

A channel of communications is also key if trust is to be built. Peter Bunting touched on a very important point at last week's Committee meeting when he said that, on behalf of society, there needs to be a solution and that that is the right thing to do.

From my experience of Roe House, I know that there needs to be greater freedom of movement. That would not compromise security in any way. Basically, Roe House is a prison within a prison. I agree that family visits must be facilitated in a manner that is more family-friendly. We all know how important family contact is for prisoners and their families. The family should not be punished as a result of the circumstances that they find themselves in.

There should be a review of education provision, and that is to be welcomed. Every prisoner should have the opportunity to benefit from education and to enhance their capacity for the future.

To conclude, as with any agreement, the success or failure of this depends on all sides adhering to its terms and principles. It is not, as some Members have said, an appeasement of prisoners in Roe House; rather, it is a suggestion that both prisoners and the prison officers exist in an environment that is free from conflict. Let us not repeat the mistakes of the past. I ask that the Minister endorse the stocktaking document.

Mr Elliott: I welcome the opportunity to speak on the motion. I apologise to the Member who moved the motion for missing the first few minutes of his speech. Clearly, this is an important and very topical issue, and I have been very wary of any agreement between prisoners and management. Let us not forget that these are republican prisoners. I think that they are there for a punishment.

I do not see why they should be forcing the hand of management in this process.

3.45 pm

The review team was before the Committee recently. Mr Bunting and his team have already been mentioned by Mr Maginness. I thought that Mr Bunting was quite forthright. While I may not get his exact comments right, in general terms he said, "I am sick of the whole lot of you. I am sick of having to go in and out of prisons to negotiate with prisoners. I am sick of trying to negotiate with prison management". I think that he almost went so far as to say, "I am almost sick of coming in front of the Committee", without saying it. Clearly, he was frustrated by the entire process, and that was what he was trying to indicate to us.

One other group of people is very frustrated and — a matter that I raised in Committee — has not had proper consultation: the direct front-line prison officers. They were not directly consulted in the process. They were expected to implement something that management and the prisoners seemed to negotiate and agree. During all this was the callous murder of prison officer David Black by republican terrorists, and Mr Bunting referred to that. This is something that we should keep at the front of our mind throughout the debate. This is the type of action that the comrades of these people are carrying out, along with the intimidation of prison officers and their families. Let us not forget that.

I heard Mr Givan say that, instead of all agreements being null and void if the prisoners did not conduct themselves in a proper way, the prison management went ahead and implemented some of the agreement without the prisoners living up to their responsibility at that stage. To me, the proposal and the agreement should have been null and void at that time if the prisoners were not willing to live up to the agreement.

The agreement, which I was not content with in the first place, went beyond what the prison management had approved. Let us hear some of the areas of progress. Prisoners have freedom of association to use shared space locations — recreation room, exercise yard and a new AstroTurf pitch. Some of our young people would just love to have an AstroTurf pitch in their area so that they could go out and enjoy that in the evening on their way home from school. Prisoners have access to the library and to computers. Some kids in our community would just love that opportunity on their way home from school, but libraries are being closed and their hours reduced. However, prisoners — dangerous criminals — can have immediate access to that facility. A prisoners' forum is to be established. What can we expect from that? The key is how much right these people have to a prisoners' forum. They have access to a separate gym area. Those are all areas of agreement.

Mr A Maginness: Will the Member give way?

Mr Elliott: Yes.

Mr A Maginness: One of the points made by Mr Bunting and his colleagues was the importance of the prisoners' forum for communication, in order to get the agreement fully implemented. Does the Member agree that that is a good aim and should be achievable?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Elliott: Thank you, Deputy Speaker.

I thank the Member for that intervention. If it were as simple as that, then, yes. However, let us just wait and see whether it is that simple. You know what these people are like: when they get an inch, they look for a mile. They will be looking for more and more. Never think that the concessions will end here. They will keep going, and they will look for more concessions from management. Again, who will be at the front line? It will be the prison officers and the prison staff, and we have heard about how they are under strength as it is. They do not have the numbers. The exit scheme has left them short on numbers and resources, and so they will clearly struggle. They will have to implement this, and I feel that, at times, they are being made fools of by their management and the prisoners.

Mr Dickson: I would like to start by paying tribute to the men and women of our Prison Service, who show incredible courage daily to deliver a safer Northern Ireland. I also believe that it is right, as others have said, that we should today think of the family of David Black, who was brutally murdered on his way to work and made the ultimate sacrifice to keep people safe.

The stocktake report on the Maghaberry prison arrangements agreement refers to the ongoing intimidation of staff. Some staff have received specific threats and have had to move home. That despicable activity has no place in Northern Ireland in 2014. It is not justified and never has been. The report acknowledges that, in the face of such challenges and difficulties, significant progress has nevertheless been made, and staff are to be commended for that, not chided. The challenge is how we make further progress on the basis of the principles agreed between staff and prisoners. Any agreement on a way forward needs to be based on those principles, including that prisoner and staff safety must not be put at risk; that staff should be able to carry out their work professionally and free from harm, intimidation or threat; and that the security of the establishment should in no way be diluted. Those are the principles that have been agreed by staff and prisoners and that need to be at the core of any future agreement.

From reading the Prison Service's response to the stocktake, I see that the Northern Ireland Prison Service has agreed to eight of the nine recommendations relating to them and that there is, indeed, partial agreement on another recommendation regarding visitation arrangements. It was encouraging to read that response, which was clearly formulated after careful consideration of the report. It is also clear that, on the basis of the agreed principles, no changes should or will be made that compromise the security of the prison, its staff and the prisoners. Mr Givan suggested that the recommendations will do the opposite, but he is wrong. David Ford, as Minister, has made it absolutely clear that he has not and will not compromise on security, and his record on that issue stands. None of the recommendations risks a return to the conditions that once existed in the Maze prison, and, if they did, David Ford would reject them outright. The Maze conditions were ridiculous and so is the claim that David Ford would allow them to be reinstated in Maghaberry.

I have been to the prison. While I can understand the comments made by Tom Elliott, I have seen that AstroTurf pitch. It is behind extremely high walls. I have seen the library with its used and used and used again books and the computers that are so restricted, and rightly so. No child in Northern Ireland outside those walls would want access to any of those facilities.

On staffing, the Prison Service is, like others, operating in a very difficult financial circumstance. In those circumstances, it is important not just that we have the necessary staff but that our prisons are managed in such a way as staffing resources can be maximised and used most effectively. I know that the Northern Ireland Prison Service continues to keep staffing levels under review and is looking across the whole of the Prison Service. That is to be welcomed.

I pay tribute to the work and professionalism of Sue McAllister and will not run her down. She is an excellent director general of the Northern Ireland Prison Service and has some 25 years of service, working in some of the most difficult prisons in the United Kingdom.

As we seek to continue to reform and improve our prison system, we recognise that our prisons must be places where relationships are built between prisoners and staff based on mutual respect, and where the security of our facilities and those within them are treated as paramount.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Dickson: I support the motion and oppose the amendment.

Mr Frew: I support the motion, which is under my name and those of my colleagues. The SDLP amendment is disappointing, to say the least, because what they have basically tried to wipe out is the call to reject any proposal that compromises the security of Her Majesty's Prison Maghaberry and the safety of prison staff, or concedes the demands of Republican prisoners in Roe House. The SDLP wishes to wipe out that aspect of the motion.

I do not know why they are not comfortable with trying to uphold the security of Maghaberry Prison and the safety of the prison staff, or why they are not comfortable with regard to the demands that Republican prisoners in Roe House make. It is a shame that they have tried to amend the motion, because it was complete. Everything we wished to say in the message going out of the House was complete.

In all of this, I have no doubt that there have been honourable people trying to do their honourable best in the way that they see fit. There is no doubt that people have tried to make accommodation and come to some arrangement that, ultimately, could and should have saved the lives of prison officers and their families, but, unfortunately and regrettably, that activity has failed, because we stand here today to debate the motion knowing full well of the death of David Black and the details surrounding that.

Mr A Maginness: Will the Member give way?

Mr Frew: Yes, I will.

Mr A Maginness: The Member raises a point in relation to the SDLP amendment, but if the stocktake report, and everything arising out of it, were fully implemented, my party and I believe that that would provide enormous security to prison staff and prisoners. There would be no compromise in relation to the safety of any staff or the security of the prison. Our amendment is in that context.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Frew: I thank the Member for his contribution, but there is one big lie, if you like, in all of this. There is one big fundamental problem, in that the stocktake report is what it is — it is a snapshot. Who is to say what could happen in the future? Who is to say what demands the terrorist organisations will come up with next? Even if something were to happen and some of the conditions in the report were reduced, the threat level on the prison officers would be exactly the same, and might even be worse, in order to prove a point or teach a lesson to someone and to the establishment itself. Therein lies the danger in what has been tried and sought out. You can only reason with reasonable people. That has been proven time and again in countless stages and in countless countries around the world, and even in this Province. You can only reason with reasonable people.

What are those people demanding? They are demanding free access all around the place. I have their demands, their wish lists, here. They include that the policy of controlled movement should end; that movement should not be stopped at any point due to an incident outside their community; and that daytime and night-time lock-ups should end. They even go as far as wanting park swings, slides and face paints. I am sorry, but I fight tooth and nail every day for my community, for parks, swings or slides, and I cannot get them for my community. What does the community say to me? Do they say to me, "We are going to beat you up; we are going to put you under threat; we are going to threaten your family, or you will have to check under your car every day in life?" No, they do not. They just keep campaigning and keep going on until they get what they want to achieve.

If people in my community want an AstroTurf pitch, they fight for it. They do not pick up a gun for it. There is a big difference. I heard it muttered that those things are for the children of the prisoners, but what about the prisoners who thought nothing of leaving children fatherless? What about those children in my community? These are not reasonable people. They are terrorists, and they need to be treated like terrorists. Whilst they are in a prison, they should be treated like prisoners.

4.00 pm

Nobody should be threatened outside or inside a prison, because that is morally evil and wrong. It has to stop. How will giving concession after concession —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Frew: — achieve that? I say that it will not. I say that it will make the situation even worse and put more prison officers and their families at risk and under threat.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I will speak in favour of the amendment and in opposition to the motion. However, given the way that the motion is framed, I have no disagreement on the need to remove the threat against prison staff, and, if there are issues about staffing levels, perhaps there should be an ongoing review.

The reason why my party is opposed to the motion and favours the amendment is due to the supposition outlined by Mr Givan and Paul Frew that the independent assessment and stocktake is somehow wrong and should not be supported. We welcome the initiative and the work of all concerned — the assessors, Anne Owers's team in the past, the Prison Service and senior management in Maghaberry — to bring about a conflict-free situation in Maghaberry and a place where everyone can be treated with dignity and respect, and that means everybody.

Thankfully, in the 21st century, we have reached a place where the concept of prison as "lock them up and throw away the key" has long since been confined to where it should be: the dustbin of history. I have visited Maghaberry on countless occasions. Go to Maghaberry, Hydebank and Magilligan, and you will see a regime in which people are not needlessly locked up and are involved in purposeful activity, and, when it comes to outcomes for society, that is more productive than any outdated concept of locking people up and throwing away the key. Punishment should end with the loss of liberty. We should have a process that gives people the opportunity to be more constructive while they are in prison.

It remains our view that the agreement reached in 2010 and the principles that underpin it, which are repeated in the stocktake — I agree with Alban Maginness about the part of the motion that the amendment would remove — make very clear what conflict-free means. People should be able to live their life without being under the threat of intimidation or violence. We support that. We could spend all day, every day looking back to 2010 and asking who was responsible, who let what slip and what went wrong. However, the opportunity for all of us to create a conflict-free atmosphere and a place where no one lives under threat was lost. We now have an opportunity to re-establish that. In my opinion —

Mr Frew: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCartney: I will, surely.

Mr Frew: The Member keeps repeating the line, "where no one is under threat". However, the only threat coming from anywhere is that coming from republican prisoners. Is he for one moment suggesting that the prison staff are causing a threat? That is not how I see it. There is only one threat going in one direction. How can he keep saying, "where no one is under threat"?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mr McCartney: I thought that I was being very clear when I said that no one is under threat. The document is clear that, whoever is posing a threat and in whatever circumstances, it will not be tolerated because it is in breach of the principles. That is the point that I am making.

The document and the stocktake outline the way forward. When the independent assessment team was before the Committee last week, I thought that they gave a very robust outline of their thinking in response to questions. They were asked whether this was compromised. I think that that zero-sum approach does not serve us well. The thrust of some of the questions was about what would happen if the prisoners were in breach of the agreement. The independent assessment team was clear that, having supported the agreement in 2010 and this latest stocktake, the prisoners would put themselves in a position where they would be seen to be clearly in breach of the agreements. I do not want this to become a poring-over of what happened in the past; but there is no doubt that the opportunity that was created was missed and lost, and we should have that in mind as we take this forward.

I agree with the Prison Service in its support for the recommendations, except for the one that is obviously outside its remit. However, as we go forward, we should all bear in mind that this is an opportunity.

When Stewart Dickson was speaking, I was not confused, but, given the tone of his presentation and acceptance of the stocktake, I thought that he would have been more comfortable with the amendment, particularly as Alban Maginness addressed the points that Paul Frew made.

When you note the document, you find that the beef of the middle part of the motion, in terms of compromising security, threats, removing conflict from the prison, is addressed in the stocktake document. My fear —

Mr Dickson: I thank the Member for giving way. I accept that those issues are addressed in the report.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Dickson: Which one of us?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Your time is up.

Mr Douglas: I am pleased to speak in this important debate, and I support the motion.

I grew up in Belfast during the Troubles when many of my friends, neighbours and, indeed, family members ended up behind bars. I visited every prison in Northern Ireland and, certainly in those days, conditions were indeed grim, particularly for elderly parents or the mothers of young children who were visiting prisoners. During what we call the Troubles, prison staff showed tremendous courage, fortitude and bravery during some of the most difficult days of our lives.

One of the prisons that I visited was Crumlin Road Gaol, which is now to become a visitors' centre and whiskey distillery. In fact, I met some of the investors at Stormont today.

I paint a bleak picture of what prison was like for prisoners and their families; conditions, particularly in the early days, were absolutely horrendous. However, if we fast-forward to 2014, we see that prisons have changed beyond recognition. As the report says, since 2010 the changes include increased freedom of association, including the use of a new AstroTurf pitch, access to a library and computers, prisoners preparing their own food, communal dining and access to a gym. So, undoubtedly conditions have improved dramatically. I am sure that many of those tens of thousands of prisoners during the Troubles would have loved to have had some of those changes come about.

However, one thing has not changed as we fast-forward to 2014: the threats, intimidation and indeed murder of prison staff. Our thoughts and prayers are with David Black's family today. Undoubtedly, they will be listening in to this debate. Certainly, our prayers are with that family.

Mr Givan, in his presentation, was passionate, and rightly so, because he and his family have been subjected to threats and indeed a murder attempt on his uncle in the past. If anything, our motion is about the safety of prison staff and, indeed, the protection of their families. I want the Minister to confirm to us and assure us that this will be the case and that prison officers and their families will be protected.

Mr Dickson: Will the Member give way?

Mr Douglas: I will. Go ahead.

Mr Dickson: I really appreciate you doing that, because that is the very point which I wish to agree with you on, by way of answer to Mr McCartney: the stocktake document, just noted on its own, stops with that point. That is why the Alliance Party is supporting the motion. We are supporting this because it is imperative that the Minister has the support of the House to continue to encourage the absolute security of that prison and the protection of its staff. That is what he is here to do and that is what he is determined to do. That is why we support the motion.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Douglas: I thank the Member for his contribution. Certainly, I would like to leave here today having been assured by the Minister and having that confidence when I walk out the door.

There is one issue that I think that we will certainly agree on 100% in relation to this report by the independent assessment team. The 'News Letter' says:

"The report concedes that 'outstanding issues' of threats and parcel bombs sent to prison staff remain unresolved, despite a list of prisoners' demands being met."

For me, as a democrat, democracy should not reward threats, parcel bombs and, indeed, murder. I know that our friend Tom Elliott, again, mentioned the horrendous murder of David Black.

There is one thing that we have learned from the past, and it is this: that the tens of thousands of young men, and indeed women, who pass through our prisons end up behind bars. Lives change for ever. Families change for ever. The question for us all has come up before: what did it achieve? What will these prisoners achieve in terms of their political ideals? Previous experience is that, in the past, prisoners' demands become unceasing. You just cannot feed this big monster.

I look forward to the Minister assuring us that prison security will not be compromised. I support the motion.

Mr Hazzard: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I rise as a new member of the Committee, so most of my knowledge on this subject is from second-hand reading of reports and the views of the assessors who have been to the Committee. I have not been to Maghaberry yet to look at the situation first-hand. I will be somewhat briefer, perhaps, than other Members have been today.

It is important that we welcome the review of progress since the 2010 report. It provides a good snapshot of where we are and perhaps a road map for the way forward on a lot of these issues. It is good that it identifies areas for further improvement while flagging up what progress has been made. It is incumbent upon us to grasp this opportunity to move forward in the best interests of staff, prisoners and, indeed, wider society. That is what we must not forget: having the best working conditions in the prison and the best conditions for prisoners are in the interests of wider society. We should remember that. A solution is in everybody's interest going forward.

I think that the difficulties around the prisoners' forum need to be addressed. Again, communication issues will be vital in moving forward. Even Mr Douglas talked about the importance of having a conflict-free environment. Improved communication will be central to that. Dealing with a lot of the difficulties around the forum can only be a good thing. If we are to continue to improve our prison system, we need to grasp the opportunities in the review, such as issues around family visits.

I will touch a little bit on Tom Elliott's comments about his problems with education, recreation, library and computer facilities. Sometimes, some in the House seem to forget that prisoners retain rights. They are still human beings with rights. They have every right to education and to recreation facilities. It is important that we look after those rights. Mr Frew said that we need to make sure that they are treated like prisoners, but prisoners have educational and recreational rights.

Mr Frew: Thank you very much for giving way. That is not the issue, because everyone has rights. Their victims have the right to life. The point is that the prisoners try to achieve things through threats: threats to life and the threat of punishment, beatings and everything else. That is totally unacceptable. The prisoners should be starved of that oxygen. Of course they have rights, but they use threats to try to get concessions and to get things in the prison.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Hazzard: I thank the Member for his comments. It sounds as though we are trying to trade rights. We cannot do that.

I think that we all agree that a conflict-free environment is vital. The stocktake provides a road map to a better place. It is incumbent on us all to embrace the direction of travel, not just for the staff and the prisoners but for wider society. I support the amendment, but I oppose the original motion.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I call Pat Ramsey, who will have the last five minutes available for debate before the winding-up speeches.

Mr Ramsey: I support the SDLP amendment. I have reflected on some of the comments made by my colleagues across the way. I understand where they are coming from. I understand the anger and frustration. If David Black's family are listening today, the SDLP is saying to them that what happened to their husband and father was entirely unjustified. The continued use of threats, abuse, violence and intimidation against Northern Ireland Prison Service staff or any of the health-care staff working in our prisons is unjustifiable.

I note the Prison Service response to the agreement. It states that it should reaffirm everyone's:

"support for the fundamental principles and undertakings"

in the stocktake report.

I think about what Stewart Dickson said. Anyone who has been to Roe House since 2010 will know that it has a few dozen books that are as old as the hills. It has computers that, in any other environment, would have been condemned and dumped years ago, and it is only in recent times that prisoners have had access to them. The so-called 3G pitch would not inspire anyone to do training or anything else. However, things are progressing in the prison — even in Roe House.

It would be unfair not to acknowledge the contribution of the Prison Service, prison officers and the independent assessors — Alban named them, so I will not name them again — and their tireless work to try to do what you, Paul Frew, talked about: to ease the pressures on everyone, but particularly the prison staff, so that they can go to work without having to look under their car and are not looking to get on to the special purchase of evacuated dwellings (SPED) scheme to get their house sold in order to move. That is the basis of the agreement.

Mr Frew: Will the Member give way?

Mr Ramsey: Yes.

Mr Frew: I understand the Member's sentiment. I understand the genuine belief that those people were going in to do a good job. I do not question their commitment, but the threats are still happening to this day. People are still living in fear of intimidation and are still checking under their car, so, ultimately, it has failed.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member will not have an extra minute on this occasion.

Mr Ramsey: If I had known that, I might not have let him in. [Laughter.] I thank the Member for his comments. I think he makes a good point. Raymond McCartney talked about an opportunity. There is a window of opportunity here, and the challenges will be up to those republican elements in the prison now to come up to the mark. My understanding, and the understanding of independent assessors, is that they are behind the principles of the fine points that the independent assessors have made. That is ensuring that the prison is freer: free from violence, free from fear and free from intimidation. So time will tell how honourable the prisoners are.

There are some fundamentals here that are important to reference as well, which the stocktake has highlighted. They include free space on the landings. We have a large volume of prisoners, close to 100 prisoners, with two being allowed out at any given time. This report is suggesting that that number should be increased, and if it does increase, and if there are difficulties, then the challenge to the prisoners is this: if you do not step up to the mark, they will be reduced again.

I appeal to the Members across the House. There are absolutely no circumstances where the SDLP or any Member of this Assembly want in any way — I say this directly to Paul Frew — to compromise the security or integrity of the Prison Service.

I have visited Roe House on many an occasion. I saw them when they were on dirty protest, and it is not a nice environment to be in for anybody. Now we are not only easing the pressure in the prison, there is a window of opportunity to ease the pressure outside the prison as well. Sammy Douglas talked about a life changing forever —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Would the Member draw his speech to a close?

Mr Ramsey: — it changes the lives of families who are visiting prisoners as well. I think there is an opportunity to make a difference, to enable prisons, particularly Roe House, to ease the pressures, allow management to do their job but allow the prisoners to be in a good environment.

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): This is an important motion before us this afternoon, which covers some very important and serious issues. I welcome the opportunity to discuss the issues that have been raised by Members and will try to treat them with the seriousness they deserve.

Let me start by paying tribute to the work of those who staff our Prison Service. They face a degree of risk that most of society does not face. They sometimes have difficult working conditions, as well as concerns at home. Let us remember that they should be foremost in our thoughts as we seek to ensure safety and security in our prisons.

No one should underestimate the difficulties that arise from having separated conditions in Maghaberry Prison. That decision was taken by the Northern Ireland Office, as was said, which was inherited by this Assembly on devolution, although decisions on admission to separation are still decisions for the Secretary of State.

The Prison Service, which is responsible to this Assembly through the Department of Justice, has a crucial operational responsibility to deliver a safer Northern Ireland for all of us against the backdrop of the threat that it faces from dissidents. Those are very real challenges that operational staff in the Prison Service face daily. I repeat: I record my appreciation to them for their dedication and professionalism and my condemnation of any targeting of prison officers or others who work in the justice system.

I have met some of the staff who work in Roe House, specifically to deal with the problems that they face over and above those faced by other prison officers. They, and all those who work in our prisons, are working on behalf of this whole community. They must be able to perform their duties safely and threats must end.

In August 2010, as has been said a number of times during the debate, the agreement was reached by the joint facilitation group that brought about an end to a protest by prisoners in Roe House. The following month, I established the independent assessment team to ensure that the agreement's principles and undertakings were being implemented.

I want to take this opportunity to place my thanks on record to the four members of the team for the time, the patience and the commitment they have brought to their role and for the very fair and balanced approach that they have taken in their reports to me, both written and verbal.

The principles underpinning that agreement include the following: arrangements should be predicated on mutual respect; prisoner and staff safety must not be put at risk; arrangements and procedures should be achievable and sustainable; and the security of the establishment should not be diluted.

In July this year, following a recommendation from the Prisoner Ombudsman, I asked the assessors to undertake a stocktake of the implementation of the agreement of August 2010. I invited them to return to the agreed principles and undertakings of that agreement and pass comment on the state of compliance. The assessors have examined a range of evidence. They have undertaken consultations with the Prison Service, the republican prisoners in Roe House and a range of other interested parties. I am clear that the stocktake provides an opportunity to look at where progress has been made but also to identify any outstanding issues that can be pragmatically addressed.

The Prison Service will not relinquish control of any part of any prison to those held in custody. It has not happened, it is not being recommended by the assessors and it will not happen. Any allegation to the contrary is simply wrong.

Maintaining the security of the prison is a key underpinning principle of the 2010 agreement, and I assure the Assembly that I will not accept any proposal that would compromise the security of Maghaberry prison or the safety of staff, visitors or other prisoners. Indeed, I will not support the amendment because it specifically deletes the call on me to reject any such proposal, although there are many merits in highlighting the work of the stocktake.

I was grateful for the thoroughness and balance of the stocktake report, which has now been considered in detail by the Prison Service, shared with the prisoners affected and published. The stocktake underlined the principles of the 2010 agreement, but, undoubtedly, it was correct for the stocktake to reflect on issues since then, including the dreadful murder of David Black.

Mr McCartney: Is there not a danger that somehow the message will be that, by supporting the motion, you are not supporting the stocktake exercise?

Mr Ford: I make it clear that I will support the principle of the references to the stocktake, but I am not prepared to support the deletion of the references to the concern about maintaining security in the prisons, because that is the most important issue.

As I was saying, the murder of David Black was probably the most egregious example of a breach of the agreement. However, the report also relates ongoing concerns, including intimidation and threats, sometimes to specifically named members of staff, that have resulted in some individuals having to move home and other major problems. However, the report also acknowledges progress in the context of the challenging environment for staff and clearly describes how further progress can be made.

The report identifies a number of developments taken forward by the Prison Service since August 2010. The assessors make 10 specific comments. One recommendation, as has been said, on the criteria for entry into separation is an issue for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to consider and not the Department of Justice. The Prison Service has considered the report and welcomes its fair assessment of the current state of compliance with the 2010 agreement. Of the nine recommendations that fall to NIPS, eight have been fully accepted and one partially accepted.

On a number of occasions, Members referred specifically to the prisoners' forum, and there is a wish to implement that policy across the prison generally. However, there is undoubtedly a need to provide a forum in which individuals can discuss the day-to-day management issues as they relate to Roe House. The Prison Service is seeking to follow up on the recommendation for an independent chair to be appointed, although I suspect that seeking somebody from the International Committee of the Red Cross may not be an appropriate way of doing that. The partially accepted recommendation relates to the proposals for an upgrade to visiting facilities for prisoners. While it has not yet been possible to agree how to resolve this issue, it continues to be discussed.

Two other specific issues seem to have caused a degree of concern inside the House and outside. The first is the incremental increases in controlled movement. The independent assessors recommended incremental increases in the number of prisoners on a landing from three up to a maximum of six. Their report makes it absolutely clear that any change to the present restrictions is dependent on the prisoners acting in good faith and ceasing all actions that might prevent staff carrying out their work professionally and free from harm, intimidation or threat. This is about normalising the regime that can be offered without compromising security. The Prison Service has taken a first step, allowing four prisoners on to the landing.

The second issue is full-body searching. As members will be well aware, the Prison Service has been examining and will continue to examine any advances in technology or policy that will reduce or remove the need for full-body searching. It has not yet been possible to identify an appropriate technological alternative. As Members will know, I have answered many an Assembly question on that. There has been a change in the approach to full-body searching, with a focus on intelligence and risk rather than on the less effective approach that applied in a blanket way. Prisoners are now no longer subjected to a routine body search when leaving the prison on final discharge, including home leave. Where risk remains, full-body searching is still essential to maintain the security of the establishment, the safety of all and the protection of the public. It will continue on that risk-based assessment.

4.30 pm

In respect of these two issues, neither the independent assessors' recommendation nor what I described as the response is a move to relinquish security. They are clear signals that the Prison Service is prepared to normalise the regime offered to prisoners as and when it is appropriate to do so. Members should remember that that is in line with recommendations that were made by CJINI in 2006, 2009 and 2013 and, indeed, referred to in the Owers report, but it will only be in an environment where the security of the establishment and the safety of staff, visitors, prisoners and everyone else in Northern Ireland remains the priority.

The report recommends:

“there should be an agreed timeline of six months for resolving any outstanding issues and over this period Roe House, by example and deed, should be a conflict-free environment and all threats to staff internally and externally should cease.”

I am content with this timeline and the overarching principle about the threat-free environment that will facilitate progress. On that point, I am absolutely unequivocal. People have talked about a return to the Maze. That has not happened. That is not happening and that will certainly not happen while I am Minister.

I am not discussing today the wish list that was published on behalf of prisoners; I am discussing a serious report from the assessors, in line with other serious recommendations from CJINI, to move towards normalisation in an appropriate way.

Mr Douglas: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Ford: I will.

Mr Douglas: Minister, do you agree that, when people end up in prison, when they are incarcerated, that is a punishment for them? They lose their freedom. It is about rehabilitation rather than punishment while they are in jail, but can you give the wider public confidence that these prisoners' demands, threats and intimidation are not about rewarding that bad behaviour?

Mr Ford: I hope in what I am saying that it is about following through on recommendations from serious people about normalisation where possible in the absence of threat. It is certainly not about conceding the wish list that was published recently by prisoners. It is about following through on what are reasonable measures as we maintain the security of prisons. Change will be possible only on the basis of ensuring safety and security for officers, other staff, other prisoners and the wider public. It is not normalisation concession after concession; it is normalisation because that is the right and appropriate way to treat prisoners. The Prison Service will continue to ensure that Roe House, just like the rest of our prison estate, is run by the staff and management of the Prison Service, not by any group of prisoners.

The motion refers to staffing levels in prisons, although there was little talk in the debate about that. Perhaps, Deputy Speaker, I should touch on that. I believe that the Prison Service benefits from being led by an extremely experienced and well-qualified team under the director general, Sue McAllister. There may be a perception that prisons have become less safe in recent years, but that is simply not the case. It is too simplistic to say that running safe and effective prisons is only about staffing levels; it is about having the right people in the right place at the time. That is all in the context of the difficulties that the Prison Service faces, as does the rest of the public sector, in this challenging financial climate. In that climate, it has to make informed decisions on how it can most effectively use the staff available to fulfil its obligations to provide safe, decent custodial services whilst delivering significant and necessary savings.

It is essential to manage the prison population effectively to ensure that crowding is kept to the minimum. The information available makes it clear that the major issue is the impact that crowding has on prisoner safety. It is therefore encouraging that, against those financial constraints, improvements in conditions are being made at Maghaberry, with over 350 prisoners recently moved out of crowded accommodation. This is being managed at a time when the prison population has increased significantly since devolution in 2010, from just under 1,500 to almost 1,800 today. That is a very significant increase, and yet moves have been made that have led to reduced threats of general violence because of a reduction in crowding.

Those staffing levels continue to be kept under review, and NIPS recently commenced a re-profiling exercise to look comprehensively at the way operational staffing levels operate in every part of the prison estate. That exercise, of course, includes consultation with the Prison Officers' Association. Those re-profiling exercises and updates to shift patterns are a necessary and normal part of prison operations that reflect the changing needs and requirements for regime delivery. The Prison Service will continue to take those steps to improve safety and manage the population.

In summary, I support the motion. Whilst I welcome the comments made by Alban Maginness and others on the issues in the stocktake report — I have spent some time dwelling on it — I cannot accept an amendment that inserts references to the stocktake report by deleting references to the security and safety of the prison and staff. That would be an entirely wrong position for me, as Minister, to take. I hope that I have made it clear in my comments that I welcome the stocktake report and believe that it shows the way forward, but I suspect that lessons would be drawn inaccurately were I to suggest that I was prepared to delete references to keeping prisons safe and secure.

I utterly condemn the continued targeting of Prison Service employees by dissident republicans. There is no doubt that there is work to be done there, and there are issues that need to be addressed on how the August agreement is carried through. While I accept the report that has been produced by the assessors, I repeat that they are not suggesting any compromise in security. I will not accept any compromise in security and nor will the Prison Service management team. The attacks made on the director general today were entirely inappropriate. Let us support the motion in agreement and without acrimony.

Mr McGlone: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. We heard comments from my colleague, who reiterated that prison staff and their families needed to be free from threat and intimidation and spoke about the prison reform programme. Mr Lynch endorsed the independent assessment of the stocktake report, and we heard from Mr Elliott and Mr Stewart Dickson. Mr Frew spoke emotionally about the need for prison officers and their families to live free from any threat or intimidation. Mr Douglas referred to his experience of prisons and his visits to them.

I want to say something in case there is any doubt about the validity of our motivation. I do not like using situations to make political statements, but I attended the home of David Black and I attended his funeral. Despite the utter heartbreak in that family, my colleagues and I were very warmly welcomed to that house. As has happened on so many other occasions, I discovered that I knew his extended family and his in-laws, who are good, decent and well-respected people in that community. The hurt over that murder extended far beyond one community in that area, because the extended family circle are long-standing in that area and are well got and respected.

I genuinely hope that those responsible for that murder are caught and that they eventually see the error of their ways, as others have done in the past. They did not just pick up using threats and violence against prison officers and other members of the community at the hedge. As others have done, they should see the error of their ways. They are going absolutely nowhere, and seeing the heartbreak in that house would really bring that home hard and fast to anyone who needed it brought home to them. So, let nobody be in any doubt about the motivations of the SDLP. They are what they always have been: to try to bring about political solutions, engage through dialogue with people and bring an end to violence.

The Minister made a point about the SDLP amendment removing details from the motion. The SDLP amendment refers to noting the stocktake report. That report refers specifically to outstanding issues, including ongoing abuse of and threats to staff. That is included in the report that we refer to and suggest should be noted.

The amendment tabled by my party means to ensure that the progress made by both prison officers and prisoners in Maghaberry prison does not go unnoticed. The problems are not completely fixed, but the report goes some way to show the changes that have been made there. I echo the comments made by my colleague about the stocktake report, but I also want to note the Northern Ireland Prison Service's response to it. Its acceptance of the report shows the progress that has been made in Maghaberry since this agreement.

As outlined by the Minister, the Prison Service accepts eight of the recommendations fully and one partially. It is good to see, particularly, that progress has been made in the shared space and facilities in Roe House; the use of discretion in the requirement for full-body searching — the Minister referred to this — for those who are leaving prison in the case of a serious medical condition; the continuous review on the full-body search issue; and the use of prisoners' forums. The Northern Ireland Prison Service has agreed to the recommendations regarding the prisoners' forum. The report shows that improvement still needs to be made in some areas, including family visits and the ongoing issue of full-body searches. The SDLP supports the ongoing implementation of that agreement. Ongoing work is still needed in relation to the abuse of staff in the Prison Service, and I particularly condemn the targeting of prison officers in and outside the workplace.

That concludes our deliberations on the proposals in the SDLP amendment.

Mr Poots: I welcome the opportunity to wind up the debate. Prison Service staff stand between us and anarchy. The people who are behind bars are there because the justice system has deemed them to have committed a crime, to be dangerous to the community and to be in need of reform. That would not be carried out if it were not for the work of Prison Service staff. They are a critical component of the well-being of society and therefore deserve our full support. I am somewhat disappointed that the SDLP has pulled back from giving that support and sought to water down the motion with its amendment, which would remove key parts of it. Those staff deserve our support because they stand between us and anarchy.

I visited the home of David Black after his gruesome murder. His wife's words were "Why did they kill David?" Did they kill David to achieve a united Ireland? They know full well that killing one prison officer will not move a united Ireland closer by one millisecond. Why, then, did they kill David Black? Why have they targeted all of the other prison officers? Why have hundreds of prison officers had to have extra security applied to their homes? Why do they make threats against prison officers? It is because they see it as a means to an end. It is because they will use bully-boy tactics to achieve goals. The goals that they seek to achieve have been set out. They have made their requests and their demands. The approach employed over and over again is to use the bully-boy tactics, then back off a little. They will have negotiations, behave for a period of time, then engage more bully-boy tactics, extract more concessions — and so the cycle goes on until they get what they really want.

Mr Lynch referred to Roe House as being a prison within a prison. That is because the republican prisoners in Maghaberry wanted separated status. Just remember this: Roe House is there because republican prisoners wanted separated status. However, what they ultimately want is a prison regime that is similar to that when the Maze was closed down.

Mr Ramsey: I thank the Member for giving way. It is very clear that senior Prison Service staff do not believe in any way that the principles of the agreement will compromise the safety, security and integrity of Maghaberry prison. Does the Member not accept that?

Mr Poots: I accept that we have diametrically opposed opinions. The view of the Members opposite is that we need to give the prisoners a chance. Our view is very clear: the prisoners need to demonstrate that they are going to obey the rules of the regime, that they are going to engage with the regime and that they are not going to be threatening prison officers. We have had substantive threats to prison officers in the last few weeks. The prisoners are still misbehaving, but you want to give people a chance who were threatening to kill people weeks ago. You are saying, "We will give you a few more concessions now". Therein lies the problem: we have people who are well-meaning and sincere, but they are being taken for a ride by the prisoners. We must be very conscious of that.

We have people visiting the prison from the Republic of Ireland. Indeed, the Minister approved three visits from senior politicians in the Republic of Ireland this year, as well as visits in previous years. They are interfering with what is going on in our prison, and that is not appropriate. They are visiting dissident republican prisoners.

When we are talking about the safety of prisons, staffing is a key issue. There should be 861 members of staff in Maghaberry, yet there are currently 812. There is a recruitment issue there that the Minister and, indeed, the director general and officials need to address. The issue has not been addressed, and, consequently, that is putting the prison under more pressure.

Mr Ford: I am grateful to the Member for giving way. Will he accept an assurance that that is currently being addressed?

Mr Poots: I welcome the fact that it is "being addressed", but the situation should not have transpired in the first instance. We will closely monitor that. Of course, as a consequence, many prison officers are under greater pressure and greater stress, resulting in higher levels of sickness and therefore more people on overtime. Therefore, it is very important that it be addressed, and addressed very quickly.

Moreover, there were 47 assaults by prisoners on members of staff from August 2011 to July 2012, but, from August 2013 to July 2014, that figure doubled to 94. The number of assaults on other prisoners went up from 316 to 342, so we are not seeing an improvement in the safety of Maghaberry prison under this regime, this Minister and this director general. Those are all key aspects that need to be dealt with today.

On the recommendations, we go back to 2010. This has been like a game of ping-pong, with the debate on how we should be responding to the issues going from one side to the other. We have the people who are indicating that we should be giving ground to the prisoners, and we have those of us who are very clearly saying, "Let us see the colour of the prisoners' money in the first instance". The threats have to stop, and not just within the prison but outside. The behaviour of republican terrorist organisations associated with the prisoners needs to be such that prisoners are not, on the one hand, being allowed concessions whilst, on the other hand, people outside the prison are threatening, abusing, bullying and terrorising other individuals.

Let us be clear and take a very clear stance. Those people are in prison, not because they took an extra bun at the Sunday school picnic or for not paying a TV licence. They are in prison for murder, attempted murder, the possession of lethal weapons and explosives and all sorts of other activities. They are dangerous people.

Allowing six people to be on the wings is a significant concession to them, and they will keep pursuing their demands for free unlocked access for 24 hours whilst we keep conceding. Let us be very clear to the prisoners: they are in prison for a particular reason, because they have committed crimes against society and have lost their freedom. Given the nature of the offences that they have committed, they are high-risk prisoners and, consequently, we have to ensure the safety of the prison staff and other prisoners.

Prior to its closure, we saw what it was like in the Maze. We saw murders in the loyalist and republican wings and rape in the prisons. Drug abuse is commonplace in Maghaberry prison, and drugs are smuggled into that prison regularly. If drugs can be smuggled into the prison, surely explosives could also be smuggled into the prison.

Any attempt to drop security and reduce the steps that we take to ensure the security of our prison —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Poots: — can pose a risk to the security of the prison. Therefore, we in this party will continue to oppose that. I support the motion.

(Mr Principal Deputy Speaker [Mr Mitchel McLaughlin] in the Chair)

Mr McCartney: On a point of order, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I want to apologise for not being in my place during Question Time to the Education Minister. I have spoken to him as well, and I apologise for my absence.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Thank you very much for coming and apologising in person.

Motion made:

That the Assembly do now adjourn. — [Mr Principal Deputy Speaker.]

Adjournment

Cherry Tree Nursing Home, Carrickfergus

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The proposer of the topic will have 15 minutes and all other Members who are called to speak will have approximately eight minutes.

Mr Dickson: I thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, and the Business Office for the opportunity to debate the issue this afternoon. I also thank the Minister for his attendance.

I have been dealing with the concerns about the quality of nursing-home care in my constituency for quite a number of years now. I should stress that Cherry Tree House is not the only nursing home that has been drawn to my attention. It is, however, the home about which, as an East Antrim MLA, I have received the most complaints and expressions of concern from relatives and former staff. I pay tribute to those who have come forward to tell their stories and who have unfortunately had to battle with the system to try to get their voice heard, never mind get justice. It really should not be so difficult to get matters of great concern treated seriously.

We now at least have the report, which was published in July 2014, titled 'Independent Review of the Actions Taken in Relation to Concerns Raised about the Care Delivered at Cherry Tree House, Carrickfergus'. The Minister will be aware from correspondence that I have sent to him that the relatives whom I represent have concerns about the independence of the report and do not think that it goes far enough in its recommendations. Therefore, I would be most grateful if the Minister will agree to meet me and the families to discuss those concerns.

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Will the Member give way?

Mr Dickson: Yes.

Mr Wells: Yes, I am aware of the request, and I will meet you and the families.

Mr Dickson: I really appreciate that.

Despite its shortcomings, the report came to some disturbing but important conclusions and found that, in the period examined — a long period from 2005 to 2013 — Cherry Tree House consistently failed to comply with the minimum standards of care. There was a cyclical scenario of quality improvement plans being made but not being acted on. There was a consistent failure to address the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) requirements and recommendations, with some being restated up to seven times.

The RQIA inspectors mostly stuck rigidly to inspection plans, did not act on their own initiative and did not act to investigate recurrent issues, recent complaints or matters on which they had been given intelligence during inspections. Indeed, in one incident, the RQIA received information on the morning of an inspection that pages referring to serious shortcomings had been ripped from Cherry Tree's communications book, an important document in every nursing home, yet there was no evidence of the book having been inspected.

The report also found that, in a number of incidents, the RQIA relied on the home to provide reassurance that issues had been addressed, despite years of concern. It found that inspection reports did not provide supporting evidence to show that compliance had been achieved or sustained. Minimum standards on continence, a frequently raised issue of concern, were never examined by RQIA.

The review team also said that, under current procedures, it would have expected enforcement action to have been taken following an inspection in August 2009, which showed that Cherry Tree had taken little or no action to comply with requirements and recommendations from previous inspections. It strongly implied the same following an inspection in June 2011. A final important finding was that families were unclear about the roles and responsibilities of RQIA and the health trust, and about how to properly engage with the complaints procedure.

It is a damning report. That is reflected not only in the comments throughout but in the numerous recommendations. The RQIA is singled out for particular criticism, and I would be grateful if the Minister would share with us what information he has about the steps that the RQIA has taken since then to comply with the recommendations. I must say to him, however, that I think that the health trusts — in the case of Cherry Tree, mainly the Northern Trust — have got away very lightly in the report. It found that the trusts dealt with complaints appropriately under current procedures, but there is a question to be asked if a nursing home that they send their patients to consistently fails to comply with minimum standards of care over a sustained period of time. Does that not suggest that there might be something wrong with the procedures? How can a facility like that be allowed to keep operating in that way? I have said it before, and I will say it again: what does it take to line the ambulances and health trust staff up at the door and close a facility like that?

The Northern Trust in particular would have been aware of a number of complaints coming in over those years. Why did someone not take a step back and say, "OK; we are operating within the procedures, but clearly there are still problems, so we need to review those procedures"? The review team noted that:

"on many occasions the Trust relied on the outcome of internal investigations by Cherry Tree House management to provide them with assurance of the standard of care provided."

Were they not reading the RQIA reports? The report goes on to state that that is consistent with a particular trust policy. Well, if that is trust policy, it is wrong, it is weak and it needs to be changed. It is deeply disturbing that trusts cannot adapt to effectively deal with consistent failings in our care system. I really think that the Minister needs to look at how it is possible for trust patients to be sent to a nursing home that consistently fails to meet minimum standards of care over such a long period of time.

That the Northern Trust spent £653,000 of taxpayers' money sending patients to Cherry Tree House between September 2013 and July 2014 raises questions about how public money is being used responsibly. If one reads the July report and the RQIA inspection reports, one will find a catalogue of disturbing incidents, allegations and failings. On management and care, reports found various failings in the recording of fluid intake, the keeping of care records, the supervision of staff and the provision of mandatory training, including the very basics of first aid. There have been numerous allegations of assault and abuse over several years. I have heard allegations of residents being shouted at and denied the right to go to the bathroom. I have seen for myself photographs and heard allegations of residents being forced to use mattresses with the urine of other residents on them. I could go on.

I want to raise the issue of whistle-blowing. The report includes a timeline of whistle-blowing incidents and makes clear that whistle-blowers highlighted issues about the management of continence, moving and handling dependent residents, the use of bed rails, the quality of food, poor hygiene in the home, medicine management, fire safety, shortages of staff, lack of staff training, poor communication between management and staff, and, most importantly in this section, lack of support for the whistle-blowers themselves. Indeed, whistle-blowers approached the Department of Health, the former Minister, the Human Rights Commission, the Northern Ireland Ombudsman, the Northern Trust and the RQIA, and still the whistle-blower who spoke to the review team said that they did not feel supported and thought that very little was ever done about their concerns. It is unacceptable that those who step forward to highlight shortcomings feel so unsupported. How, Minister, do you propose to rectify that?

That is my first question to the Minister in the limited time that I have left. I have other questions that I would like to put to you, Minister. What actions have been taken to ensure that all the recommendations of the report are being implemented? Minister, will you work with the trust to explore how, under its policies and procedures, a nursing home to which it sent patients could continually fail to meet minimum standards of care? Will you look at putting in place a new and more robust enforcement policy for the RQIA that does not allow for requirements to be restated over and over again? Given that Cherry Tree House continues to operate and no one from the home has been held to account for the incidents that have failed residents and their families over the years, how do you envisage the latter getting justice?

Last week, the Assembly had a debate on appreciating age and the importance of recognising the contribution of older people to society. In that debate, I said that our society is measured by how we treat older people and that one way in which we could start to recognise their contribution was to make sure that they had the best care in their final years. I view our response to this matter as a test of our resolve in that regard. I very much hope that the Minister not only shares my determination to see the standards of care improved but wants justice for those who have seen their relatives denied the peace and dignity that they deserve at the end of life.

Mr Hilditch: At the outset, I acknowledge Mr Dickson's efforts in securing the Adjournment debate and the damning report telling us about the situation at Cherry Tree House.

Many of us will, at some stage, have to deal with the issue of care in nursing and residential homes, but mainly on a personal level as we seek to secure the best way forward and options for a family member. For that relative, we would seek the best quality care, delivered in a professional manner with skill and compassion in surroundings and facilities that give us confidence in our decision-making. Those who have gone through the experience will realise the complexities involved and how families place their trust and confidence in those who provide nursing and residential home facilities for their loved ones. How shocking it is, then, to read the report on Cherry Tree House. Mr Dickson summed up well the catalogue of horrors.

When the then Minister ordered a review of Cherry Tree nursing home, some eight years after a whistle-blower first made serious allegations of dreadful neglect and practices in the home, it really struck at the heart of the community.

Cherry Tree nursing home is placed very centrally in the community and is on one of the main arterial roads in Carrickfergus. In that community, it is almost impossible not to know someone involved at the home among the management, staff or residents. Locally, there was much thought, concern and passion for those innocently caught up in a situation at what must have been a very distressing time for everyone involved. My involvement began when the matter became public, and my office was contacted by people who indicated how relieved they were that the allegations were now, in their words, "being taken seriously". One person, who was a relative of one of the residents, said that she had been vindicated, having previously reported incidents on several occasions only to be treated as though she and her family were some sort of troublemakers. Let no one doubt the strength of feeling in the local community or the depth of knowledge about the situation.

5.30 pm

I turn to the 'Independent Review of the Actions Taken in Relation to Concerns Raised about the Care Delivered at Cherry Tree House, Carrickfergus'. The review was published in July. It sets out a chronological sequence of incidents, reaches a number of conclusions and, more importantly, makes recommendations that must be acted on. It is crucial for the wider sector, as well as for Cherry Tree nursing home, that confidence be restored. The Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority — the health watchdog — must not lose sight of the criticisms directed at it for the handling of the whistle-blowing complaints and its lack of robustness towards the owners of Cherry Tree nursing home.

The section on whistle-blowing in the Cherry Tree case is of particular interest to me, as I wear another hat as Deputy Chair of the Audit Committee. On a number of occasions over the last couple of years, I have raised the very issue of whistle-blowing, and I have had to deal with whistle-blowers directly. I am concerned about their treatment, how they are regarded and the timeline involved in dealing with issues. This can be a very stressful time for people who have done the right thing and brought to their employer's attention practice that is simply wrong. It is something of a coincidence that we are discussing whistle-blowing at Cherry Tree House today and the report of the Northern Ireland Audit Office — 'Whistleblowing in the Public Sector: A Good Practice Guide for Workers and Employers' — is issued today. On the back of the Cherry Tree case, I commend that document as someone who has, over the last few years, garnered the utmost respect for whistle-blowers.

Again, I thank Mr Dickson for the Adjournment debate and look forward to the Minister's response.

Mr McMullan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank Mr Dickson for securing the debate.

I acknowledge that I did not know much about Cherry Tree House until very recently — when I say “recently”, I mean the last few months — when I started to get phone calls about it from people who at first would not give me their name. At the end, I was talking to people who were openly giving me their name and status, and, in one case, I spoke to a family. To be honest, I was shocked at this. As Mr Hilditch said, when someone picks a nursing home for their loved one to stay in, it is to be a home for the loved one, a place of sanctuary and safety, not a place of anger and fear. That is what I cannot understand. When I first heard about Cherry Tree House, I thought that there must be something wrong, because there would be no way that a home could get away with some of the things of which it was accused, and, as we all know, there are always two sides to a coin. However, the more this went on, the more I started to believe.

I received the report only today, and it really compounds what people have been saying. Questions have to be asked about the inspections and the follow-up inspections of these reports. Who is looking at the reports or going into the homes? I have had reports of management harassing families outside for payment for their loved ones' care. This was in front of the public, with other people knowing their business. I have been told of poor record keeping and that the bookkeeping is a mess. I have been told of different types of assault and abuse of patients and of staff being shouted at and demeaned in front of patients and other people. Indeed, one person told me that patients were really only a means of making money. I really cannot say any more about this.

As Mr Dickson said, in the period 2013-14, £653,000 was put into this home for patient care. Earlier today, we debated for an hour and a half the MS centre in Ballycastle, which the Minister will close because of a budget of £500,000. We have a facility here that looks after the most vulnerable in society — elderly people who have worked all their life and expect to spend the twilight of their life in safety — and here they are in a place of fear. I call on the Minister now to put in place a full investigation of this home. If nothing else, it should be closed or somebody put in to run it. As we have seen tonight, what is going on there is nothing short of criminal.

Mr Beggs: I, too, thank my East Antrim colleague Stewart Dickson for bringing this Adjournment topic to the Assembly. Cherry Tree House has been in the headlines for the wrong reasons. It is important that lessons are learned from it and that others will not face similar circumstances.

First and foremost, we all have to welcome the fact that the whistle-blower had the courage to take a stand and highlight the worrying aspects of the care that residents were receiving at Cherry Tree House. The subsequent publication of the highly critical report, 'Independent Review of the Actions Taken', highlighted very basic failings in the original RQIA inspections. RQIA inspections need to be rectified, as many families rely on them to give a degree of reassurance, when they may be unable to be present, that their vulnerable family member is being cared for and looked after appropriately and protected. Lessons need to be learned for the benefit not only of this home but for the RQIA and, indeed, all residential homes throughout Northern Ireland.

I am keen to learn why it has taken so long to identify that there were such basic failings in the methods used by the RQIA. Only by changing the inspection process can failings be identified and addressed and standards of care for the elderly improved.

One of the recommendations is that new residents and their families should be provided with information on how to make a complaint. How fundamental is that? It is vital that every resident and every new resident in every home knows that information and feels empowered to do something if they feel that improvement is needed.

The summation of complaints received between January 2005 and January 2013 is quite unbelievable: 19 allegations of abuse, including 12 of abuse by staff, and 27 cases involving personal care in respect of individuals. There were 40 other care issues, including residents falling, poor hygiene and loss of residents' property. There were 13 staffing issues, including poor staff attitudes and inadequate staff training. It is really interesting that, in some instances, RQIA did not follow up on the issues raised in complaints during the next investigation of the home. Where is the intelligent inspection? Where is the thought process? Where is making sure that what needed to be improved was improved? That is fundamental. What a basic failing it was that the previous inspection was not gone through in detail before the next inspection so that you know what things should be rectified in order that standards can be improved. Those who made the complaints and met the review team expressed concerns regarding how their complaints were handled. That is also of concern. People should feel that they are given a fair hearing when they make a complaint.

The primary reason why the failings were highlighted was the whistle-blowing, as others have said. With a number of the recommendations, I am alarmed that they have had to be made in the first place. You would think that they would have been in place from the start. What are we talking about here? The whistle-blowers included an agency care assistant, three care assistants, three members of the Cherry Tree House staff, an observer in Carrickfergus and two other members of Cherry Tree House. Alarm bells should have been ringing very loudly during the process. It was not just someone with a gripe against the employer; the frequency of the complaints is unbelievable. Allegations of abuse of residents were mentioned at least 16 times. The standard of care delivered to residents was mentioned at least 25 times. Other care issues, such as failure to implement procedures for the protection of vulnerable adults, were mentioned at least 15 times. Glaring issues were raised, but they were not addressed.

Another fascinating detail in the report is this:

“We recognise that statutory organisations have difficulties in investigating allegations of historical abuse and poor care practice because residents may have died or staff moved on.”

You can see how that would cause a very practical difficulty, but it goes on:

“However, the review team believe that if, after being investigated, complaints had been followed through, and if contemporaneous records in Cherry Tree House had been inspected, some of these matters could have been addressed at the time they occurred.”

Again, a very fundamental assessment, you would have thought. When you are given a warning that there is a problem in an area, that area should be concentrated on, and any issues that arise should be addressed. Clearly, aspects of the RQIA inspection methodology and practices need to be implemented over the period. Lessons must be learned, as I said at the beginning, for the benefit of all our vulnerable elderly people or those who need care in such residential and nursing homes.

It must be a concern to us all that one relative is quoted as saying:

No lessons were being learnt, and no effective enforcement was being enacted on the home. It appears that the RQIA had more power; it could have muscled in and enforced. Previous requirements were not being corrected. Surely that could have warranted warnings or, if necessary, the removal of status and making people aware that that could easily have happened. If that had happened, the improvements would have happened much sooner, which would have benefited all concerned.

Mr Dickson: Will Mr Beggs give way for a moment?

Mr Beggs: Yes.

Mr Dickson: I will follow through on that. I am sure that he will agree — I hope that the Minister can address this — that you would think that, post the report and investigation, things might have improved. However, as recently as 28 May this year, two further failure-to-comply notices were issued against the home.

Mr Beggs: I have been talking to some relatives as well, and what they have been telling me is that there have been improvements. We have to recognise that. But they also indicated that there needs to be further improvement and that there is not the high quality of care we would all want for our own loved ones. There need to be further improvements, but let us recognise that there has been improvement.

5.45 pm

Cherry Tree is an option, and some patients are happy to reside there. It is important that there are facilities available locally for our constituents, and I hope that, with proper enforcement and the cooperation of the management, a high quality of care can be provided.

Mr Wells: I am grateful to Mr Dickson for securing this debate today. I know that he has worked tirelessly to represent the families of people in Cherry Tree. I listened very carefully to his views and those expressed by other Members. As I promised earlier in an interjection, I undertake to meet Mr Dickson and the families so that we can look at this very difficult issue in much more detail.

I assure Mr Dickson and Members of this House that I am committed to ensuring that people living in our nursing and residential homes receive a safe and quality standard of care. The important part of achieving these goals involves ensuring that proper and effective processes are in place to identify and rectify any instances where the care provided falls short of what any of us would regard as acceptable for our loved ones. That is why we have a strong independent regulatory body for Health and Social Care (HSC), the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority, or the RQIA as it is commonly known. This body has statutory powers to inspect standards and to enforce sanctions. I should emphasise that this body was formed in 2005, the time when concerns were being raised by Cherry Tree, and that is relevant, as we will hear later on.

The RQIA inspects provision against departmental minimum standards for nursing and residential care homes. The RQIA uses these standards and the corresponding regulations as the basis for regulation of the sectors. These standards set the benchmark for the quality of care that residents can expect to receive.

Each time the RQIA takes enforcement action, the nature and extent of that enforcement action is published on its website, so there is total openness here. A member of the public can go on to the website and see what has been said about their local residential or nursing home.

The sanctions available to the RQIA include the imposition of conditions on registration, restriction of further admissions until improvement is demonstrated, or cancellation of registration, which results in closure. So, the sanctions are quite draconian when used. The RQIA adopts a stepped approach to enforcement. Closure or urgent closure would be considered as a measure of last resort to be deployed when all other sanctions have failed.

Mr Beggs: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Wells: I certainly will.

Mr Beggs: Does the Minister accept that the RQIA was slow to move to such enforcement action against Cherry Tree House and that, as a result, the poor standards were allowed to continue? It does seem as if, once it moved to that, there has been improvement. So, would he accept that its threshold for requiring evidence of change has been too high and that there needs to be a review of that area?

Mr Wells: I am being honest with Members. The report issued in July 2014 does not paint the RQIA in a particularly attractive light. I accept that. What I am hoping to show is that the RQIA has learnt from errors and misjudgements in relation to Cherry Tree House. The penny has dropped, as it were, that improvements were required, and changes have been instigated by this and other examples.

We also have to recognise the impact that closure can have for residents, who may be obliged to give up their home as a consequence. It is also worth pointing out that not every resident of Cherry Tree complained. Some residents were relatively content. But, I also have to admit that many others were not content, and that is an important issue.

The frequency of inspection will increase above the statutory minimum in response to specific enforcement action and/or concerns about the quality of care in a registered home. Registered providers are required to notify existing residents and their families of formal enforcement action. The RQIA revises and updates its enforcement policy on a regular basis. The current enforcement policy was extensively updated as recently as March 2013 to reflect the lessons learned by the authority in taking enforcement action. The RQIA has also initiated a review of its inspection methodology.

In addition, trusts have a statutory duty to ensure that they provide quality care to all service users and are responsible for carrying out formal reviews of the care packages provided to individuals, as a minimum, once a year. In discharging this statutory duty of quality, trusts work closely with the RQIA in the event of regulatory issues arising, including both care and environmental issues.

Notwithstanding all of this, should any individuals or their families or carers have concerns about the care they are receiving, they can make a complaint in whatever way they are comfortable with. So, individual residents or their representatives do not have to wait until an inspection is carried out. Direct contact can be made with the RQIA if anyone has concerns. I urge MLAs to take that on board and let the RQIA know if they hear of any concerns in their community.

All regulated care homes must operate a complaints procedure that meets the requirements of applicable regulations, relevant minimum standards and the HSC complaints procedure. Complaints may be made by service users or persons acting on their behalf, providing that they have obtained the service user's consent. The registered provider is required by legislation to ensure that the complaint is fully investigated.

Alternatively, individuals may, if they prefer, raise their concerns through the local health and social care trust that has commissioned the care on their behalf. As Mr Dickson stated, it is mostly the Northern Trust in this case. The trust commissioning the care has a continuing duty of care to the service user and should participate in local resolution as necessary. Mr Dickson has been helpful in pointing out that, recently, £653,000 of trust money has been used to fund places in Cherry Tree; that is a very significant amount of money.

Where complaints are raised with the trust, it is its responsibility to establish the nature of the complaint and consider how best to proceed. The complaint may also trigger the need for an investigation under protection of vulnerable adults procedures or, indeed, highlight non-compliance with statutory requirements.

If the RQIA is notified of a breach of regulations or associated standards, it will review the matter and take whatever appropriate action is required. Trusts work closely with the registered providers, other professionals and the RQIA to enable appropriate decisions to be made. HSC trusts must also assure themselves that care homes that deliver care on their behalf are effective and responsive in their handling of complaints.

Of course, another important safeguard for the health and social care system is the identification of a positive whistle-blowing culture. Mr Hilditch made the interesting point that a publication on this very issue was released today. All my Department's arm's-length bodies are required to have a whistle-blowing policy in place. I am encouraged to note that, in a recent HSC staff survey carried out in 2012, 78% of the staff surveyed said that if they were concerned about negligence or wrongdoing by staff they would know how to report their concerns, and 60% said that they would have confidence in doing so. So, I think we are making considerable progress on this issue.

The Cherry Tree report makes it clear that there were shortcomings in the care provided there over a period of time. Everybody accepts that that is the case; no one would deny it. However, it would be remiss of me not to place this in context. Every day in Northern Ireland, care home staff deliver high quality care to almost 10,000 people who live in our residential and nursing homes, with just over 7,000 receiving nursing home care. In the vast majority of these cases, the care provided is of the highest standard. However, as we have seen, sometimes things go wrong and standards slip. What is important is that, when this happens, there are strong and effective measures in place to identify and deal with these cases.

My Department has fully accepted the report's 22 recommendations and is working with the relevant HSC organisations to ensure that they are implemented as soon as possible. I emphasise that because several Members raised that issue, including Mr McMullan, who is no longer with us. I am certain that, if Members have any concerns about the issue, they will be tabling questions for written or oral answer or writing to me to keep themselves up to date with what is happening in the implementation of the recommendations. There are certainly Members in the Chamber this evening who are extremely keen to write to me, because I get a vast amount of correspondence daily.

I was worried when I read about the Cherry Tree House issue. In fact, it arose when I was Chair and Deputy Chair of the Health Committee. I shared the same concerns that Mr Dickson so ably articulated. I have given my commitment that the Department will do all it can to implement the recommendations as quickly as possible.

My Department is also reviewing the minimum standards for nursing homes, and the revised standards have recently gone to public consultation. My Department is also taking forward the development of the adult safeguarding policy in conjunction with the Department of Justice to introduce a package of measures aimed at improving safeguarding outcomes for children and vulnerable adults across Northern Ireland.

The objectives supporting the policy will range from the prevention of adult abuse through the implementation of good safeguarding arrangements to effective protective responses from lead agencies when adult abuse occurs or is suspected. The intention is that we will publish the finalised policy in 2015.

Finally, I thank all who contributed to the debate. It is quite clear that the issue has caused a great deal of concern among elected representatives in the East Antrim constituency. It is entirely correct that Mr Dickson decided to use his Adjournment debate opportunity to raise the matter. I hope that, when I meet him — hopefully, fairly soon — we will be able to talk through the lessons learned by this unfortunate situation.

Perhaps the one good thing that can come out of all this is that, in future, vulnerable elderly and, sometimes, severely handicapped people in residential nursing care will be guaranteed a much higher and much more acceptable level of care than was evident in Cherry Tree House.

I regard this as a crucial and serious issue because, regardless of our present situation, the vast majority of us will have someone we love in a residential nursing home, or some of us may be residents ourselves at a future time. It is vital that we learn from the stark lessons that this example has exposed and ensure that we do not have a repeat of the Cherry Tree House issue.

Culture, Arts and Leisure

Líofa Website

Published at 6.30 pm on Tuesday 18 November 2014

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure):

On 22 September 2014 a Líofa participant contacted the department to advise that they had seen their name and e-mail address on the Líofa website. Subsequent checks of the site by department officials were unable to authenticate the claim. Officials contacted the website developer to advise and ask them to rectify any potential breach of security on the website. The reported difficulties were identified and DCAL advised that they had been corrected by the developer on 24 September and therefore the website was not taken down.

However, during routine duties on 4 November, departmental officials discovered that the names and contact details of Líofa participants could be accessed via the Líofa website's search facility.

Contrary to some of the recent claims being made in the media DCAL has taken this breach of security very seriously and initiated instructions on 4 November to shut the website down and in addition commence a robust investigation. The department has engaged IT security experts, accredited by the Communications Electronic Security Group (CESG) - the UK's National Technical Authority for Information Assurance - to establish the full extent of the website's vulnerabilities.

The Information Commissioner has also been advised.

I have asked the Departmental Accounting Officer to give specific personal assurance that the website is thoroughly re-checked by CESG accredited consultants through the use of manual and automated penetration testing and that the website undergoes a full IT health check before it is made live again. These individuals are fully qualified and highly experienced in assessing departmental and other public sector bodies IT systems.

The details that participants were asked to provide when they registered with Líofa were name, email address, home address or home town, age range, and whether or not they were attending Irish Language classes. It is this information which may have been accessible. The Líofa website did not hold any other personal or financial information.

The development and delivery of the website was commissioned by Foras na Gaeilge on the department's behalf and is managed and maintained through a contract. The specification for the development of the website included requirements for data protection and the encryption of data stored on the site.

Lead responsibility for management of the website's content transferred to the department in February 2014, and data protection responsibilities transferred on 25 September 2014.

The Departmental Solicitor's Office is being consulted on the matter.

I am deeply sorry about this potential breach and apologise unreservedly for any concerns this may have raised for Líofa participants. My officials have apprised them of the situation and will advise them further when additional information is available. They can be assured that I and the department are doing everything possible to correct this situation and to restore confidence in the Líofa website.

I would stress at this stage that there is no evidence to suggest that any information provided by Líofa participants has been accessed or misused in any way.

The Líofa website provides a valuable resource to all those interested in learning Irish and I have asked my officials to ensure it can be restored as soon as possible to provide access to help Líofa learners on their journey.

As soon as I get a response to these queries I will make a full oral statement to the Assembly.

Congenital Cardiac Services: Consultation on International Working Group's Recommended Future Model

Published at 12.00 noon on Monday 3 November 2014

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Members will recall that in my Statement to the Assembly on 14 October 2014 I stated that I intended to announce details of the public consultation on the future model for congenital cardiac services for the population of Northern Ireland as recommended by the International Working Group (IWG). I am honouring that commitment today through the publication of the consultation document by my Department for a 12 week period of public consultation ending on Friday 23 January 2015.

While I am satisfied that the IWG has fulfilled its Terms of Reference, before I make my final decision on whether to accept the recommendations, I want to hear the views of patients and their families who use this service, the clinicians who provide the service and the Northern Ireland public who have been engaged in the discussion on the future of this service.

This consultation provides the public with an opportunity to give its views on each of the IWG's 14 recommendations. It is intended that the consultation document will be publicised by way of a press release which will be highlighted on my Department's website. The consultation document provides a response form to enable those who wish to do so, to send their views to the Department. In addition to this, my Department will hold a number of public consultation meetings around Northern Ireland, to provide stakeholders with an opportunity to put their views directly to my Department.

In the meantime, while the consultation is ongoing, I have instructed my officials to work with health service commissioners and providers to immediately plan for the implementation of the service model recommended by the IWG. I will await the outcome of the consultation before making my final decision on whether to implement the IWG's recommended service model. My decision to proceed with the planning however is in keeping with the principle that precautions should be applied given the vulnerability of the sustainability of this service at the Belfast Trust.

Work of the Unscheduled Care Task Group

Published at 11.30 am on Wednesday 19 November 2014

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): On 10 February 2014, my predecessor, Edwin Poots MLA, announced that he had commissioned the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) to conduct a review of unscheduled care services in the Belfast Trust with a view to the wider regional context. On 1 July 2014 he announced that the RQIA had published its report and that he had accepted its findings and recommendations for transforming the delivery of unscheduled care.

Having considered the findings of the report my predecessor also announced on 1 July that he had decided to establish a regional task group to take forward the RQIA's recommendations, under the leadership of my Department's Chief Medical Officer, Dr Michael McBride, and Chief Nursing Officer, Charlotte McArdle, who co-chair the task group. The task group's immediate action was to oversee and coordinate a range of actions to support the reform of urgent and emergency care services and the implementation of the RQIA's recommendations. To achieve this, the whole system will have to work together, including our GPs, Ambulance Service, community care teams and staff in acute hospitals.

My predecessor also said that he wanted to see results, and therefore set the clear aims for the task group of eliminating all avoidable 12-hour emergency department waiting time breaches from this winter onwards and of making significant progress towards achieving the four-hour waiting time standard, over the next 18 months. Elimination of lengthy delays is critical to ensuring high-quality care and to improving patient experience.

The Assembly is aware that the HSC achieved a 44% reduction in the number of 12-hour waiting time breaches during last year. I am pleased to report that in the first six months of 2014/15 this progress has continued with the lowest number of 12-hour waits in five years. That is a considerable achievement, and I pay tribute to all staff in the HSC who worked hard to deliver this significant improvement, but there is still much more to do. Regrettably the Belfast Trust has been the exception to this continued improvement and I have made further comments below on the position in Belfast.

The RQIA's report contained 17 recommendations. The purpose of my Statement today is to update the Assembly on the progress being made in addressing these recommendations: 10 recommendations have been taken forward by the Task Group and 7 were for the Belfast Trust to address by a dedicated work stream within the Task Group. A report on progress achieved against the recommendations follows below.

Escalation

The task group has established an escalation work stream which has worked closely with the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) in developing a Regional Unscheduled Care Escalation Plan which will ensure that there is a consistent and robust methodology for monitoring and raising the level of escalation across the region including keeping the ambulance services informed of periods of heightened pressure across HSC Trusts. The work stream is also working with Trusts to review and test each of their escalation plans to provide assurance of the robustness of these plans. This will include an assessment of their ability to respond over the Christmas and New Year period.

Care of frail older people

The task group's focus is to strengthen the unscheduled care services provided to our frail older population. There has been considerable progress including: identifying improvements in the transfer of information between nursing homes and Emergency Departments; developing standards which reduce the number of internal hospital moves older people can be subjected to; and, developing a standard which restricts the discharge of older people from hospital late at night without their or their family's permission.

Recommendation 3 of the RQIA report specifically identified the potential for direct assessment of frail elderly patients to the Belfast City Hospital and I am pleased to report the Belfast Trust has now established Phase 1 of their project 'BCH Direct', which will ensure that frail elderly patients can be directly assessed and admitted to the City Hospital site. The number of patients assessed and admitted has been steadily increasing over the last number of weeks and the Trust has received very positive patient and carer feedback about the experience.

Respiratory Services

Recommendation 4 of the RQIA report similarly asked the Belfast Trust to examine the potential for direct access admission for respiratory patients. The Trust is in the process of finalising the arrangements to expand direct access to the Belfast City Hospital under the 'BCH Direct' project for those with respiratory illness and has set a target of January 2015 for full implementation.

In addition the task group is working to develop a discharge care bundle for COPD (Respiratory) patients, lead by the Trust's respiratory nurses, which will ensure a safe effective discharge home and contribute to prevention of hospital admissions.

Patient Flow

Ensuring effective patient flow, both within and across hospitals was a key thematic finding of the RQIA report. There were a total of four recommendations within the report (5, 7, 8, 13) highlighting the importance of getting this right. In response to this the task group established a patient flow work stream that has made substantial progress to date in driving forward improvements. These include: the development of a regional model for unscheduled care that identifies alternatives to ED attendances particularly for older people and those requiring urgent assessment rather than emergency care; an audit tool is being developed to identify any delays in the patient's journey. This will help Trusts identify gaps and take action to correct delays; a regional approach to multidisciplinary assessment at discharge is also being developed. This will ensure a safe discharge process which minimises the bureaucracy often associated with this process; regional standards for Triage nursing practice and Emergency Nurse Practitioners are being developed, supporting nurses to develop their skills and improving the consistency of approach throughout Northern Ireland; and, a regional audit tool is being developed and tested to monitor the fundamental aspects of nursing care in the Emergency Department. This tool will help quality assure that patients receive the care they need.

The Task Group has also proposed that the HSCB works with Marie Curie (MC) to introduce an extension of the seven day a week Out of Hours Rapid Response Palliative Care Service, currently in place in the North and Southern Local Commissioning Group (LCG) areas, to cover in-hours at weekends and bank holidays and to roll out a similar service to the northern sector of the Western LCG. The pilot is planned to commence on 1st January 2015 and will also involve partnership working with NIAS, who will refer, under agreed protocols, directly to the service, rather than transferring patients to an Emergency Department. The scheme will be evaluated after 12 months, when consideration will be given to full regional roll-out.

Diagnostics and Out of Hospital Care

Recommendation 10 of the RQIA report seeks to maximise alternative models of accessing hospital services outside of the traditional ED route, including an examination of the arrangements for provision of direct access to hospital-based assessment and admission services for appropriate patients. The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) is planning to introduce a clinical support desk to provide callers and responding ambulance staff with clinical advice, utilising decision support software and accessing referral pathways. All emergency vehicles, both ambulances and rapid response vehicles, have been equipped with mobile phones in addition to radio communication system. These are pre-programmed with the contact numbers of receiving hospital departments including: Emergency Departments; Cardiac Cath. Labs; and, potentially stroke teams.

The RQIA's recommendations 12 and 13 are closely linked and aim to ensure that large numbers of patients do not present to Emergency Departments at any one time, as this can cause significant pressure and have consequences for the patient experience. To address this Trusts are working with NIAS, and other transport providers, at local levels to improve non urgent transport of patients. The HSCB has also developed a Locally Enhanced Service to support general practitioners to commence home visits earlier in the day and bring forward the time of day patients are being referred to hospitals. This includes options for additional clinical (GP) sessions for managing acute demand. These sessions are to help meet the additional demand for acute appointments and home visits during the winter months with the aim of speeding up the triage and assessment of patients who present with an urgent acute problem who may require admission to hospital.

Belfast Trust

The Belfast Trust has started to implement a programme of measures designed to deliver sustained improvements in unscheduled care services. The programme, known as IMPACT, is a three year programme focused on significantly improving patient safety, patient experience and patient outcomes. The programme aims to achieve this by reducing waste, harm and variation in care. While I recognise that some progress has been made, the Trust in recent months has continued to experience, unlike most other Trusts, high levels of patients waiting more than 12 hours in both the RVH and Mater Hospital EDs. In addition the RQIA carried out an unannounced inspection of the RVH ED and Acute Medical Unit (AMU) on 12 to 14 May 2014. The RQIA's report highlights that although some progress had been made to address its recommendations by May of this year, a concerted effort was still required to ensure recommendations are actioned and implemented in full. Following this inspection, RQIA inspectors provided feedback to the Belfast Trust's senior management team and some staff. At this meeting RQIA described the interim findings of the inspection, and provided recommendations for immediate consideration, to ensure patient safety.

My Department received the RQIA's Inspection Report on 30 September 2014 and on 17 October 2014 held an accountability meeting with the Belfast Trust, HSCB and PHA to seek assurances that the Trust was addressing the RQIA's findings. The RQIA has today published its unannounced inspection report and the Belfast Trust has published its updated Quality Improvement Plan. My officials are considering the assurance provided by the Trust at the meeting on 17 October, supplemented by additional information provided by the Trust, that it has addressed the RQIA's findings. The information and assurance provided by the Trust will inform a further unannounced inspection by the RQIA before the end of this year.

I am very disappointed that given the assurances that the Belfast Trust made to my predecessor that it would bring about sustained improvement appear to have not been fully realised by the Trust. Therefore when I receive the follow-up unannounced inspection report by the RQIA later this year I expect to see and require significant improvement.

Values and Principles

A key recommendation of the RQIA report was the need for a set of principles to guide the future design of urgent and emergency care in Northern Ireland. I fully support this recommendation and in order to ensure that the focus and drive for improvement and innovation is maintained my Department is developing a Values and Principles Statement that will underpin the development of future policy and service delivery for Emergency and Unscheduled Care. I intend to begin a process of public consultation on the draft Values and Principles Statement in the coming days. This will be an important document and it is right that patients, their families, clinicians and the public should have a say in its development.

My Department is also considering how we might build on the progress achieved by the Task Group. Potentially this could involve a new regional policy framework for unscheduled and emergency care services in Northern Ireland. This will require further detailed work and I will provide a further update to the Assembly on this in the months ahead.

Education, Training and Development

The RQIA's recommendations focused on how we strengthen the contribution of our staff through education, training and developing. The Chief Nursing Officer and her team have been working with Trusts and our local universities to develop a training program for Advanced Nurse Practitioners. These new and exciting roles in nursing will help strengthen the contribution of a very experienced and skilled group of staff.

Preparations for Winter 2014/15

In addition to the specific responses to the RQIA recommendations the Task Group is also overseeing a range of work to ensure that urgent and emergency care services are prepared in advance of the winter. Each HSC Trust has developed a local implementation plan for the elimination of avoidable breaches of the 12 hour waiting time standard. These plans have been reviewed by the Task Group and my Department has asked that the HSCB monitor implementation of these over this winter.

The Executive has allocated a total of £5m funding to unscheduled care services to help ease winter pressures in the months ahead. To date, some £2.3m of this funding has been allocated to Trusts, including the Ambulance Service, to fully fund or contribute to the costs of a range of measures to improve unscheduled care. The remaining £2.7m of the additional funding will be allocated to Trusts to fund measures to improve patient flow and expand capacity over the winter.

I commend this Statement to the House.

Social Development

Regeneration and Housing Bill

Published at 3.00 pm on Tuesday 11 November 2014

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development):

The Executive agreed on 11 April 2013 that the Reform of Local Government should be implemented with effect from 1 April 2015 with the creation of 11 new councils and the transfer of a coherent package of functions and powers from central government to local government on that date. The aim of this fundamental reform programme is to transform local government, putting decision making on local matters in the hands of locally elected representatives. It is not just about doing things differently; it is about doing things better. By transferring key functions such as planning, urban regeneration, local economic development and local tourism from central to local government, councils will be provided with the means with which to shape their areas and communities.

In order to enable the new councils to discharge these new important responsibilities, I must first put in place the necessary legislative framework. The overall reorganisation of local government is covered in the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 and other transferring Departments will be putting their own legislation in place.

My predecessor and I have made a number of unsuccessful attempts to secure Executive agreement to the introduction in the Assembly of the draft Regeneration and Housing Bill. However, since taking up office, I have had some useful discussions with a number of Ministerial colleagues and I have taken their concerns on board. Concerns were raised regarding the proposed transfer of the Housing functions from the NIHE and, having discussed these concerns with Executive colleagues, I decided to remove the relevant provisions from the Bill. I recently brought a paper on a proposed new regulatory regime for HMOs to the Executive which was agreed, and in the Housing Strategy 2012-17, there is a commitment to review the statutory fitness standard across all tenures over the lifeline of the Housing Strategy Action Plan. I have therefore concluded that it is more appropriate to consider this work separately from the Bill.

In addition, I recently brought a paper on a proposed new regulatory regime for HMOs to the Executive which was agreed, and in the Housing Strategy 2012-17, there is a commitment to review the statutory fitness standard across all tenures over the lifeline of the Housing Strategy Action Plan. I have therefore concluded that it is more appropriate to allow this work to complete before any decisions are taken on the future of these functions.

As well as removing the transfer of specific housing functions from the Bill, an additional provision has been inserted requiring Departmental approval for any use of the new regeneration powers in respect of housing. I have also provided more detailed explanations in the Explanatory and Financial Memorandum about the Bill's policy context, its relationship to the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 and the safeguards in place regarding compulsory purchase powers and other constraints that it would place on councils.

I am pleased to be able to tell you that the Executive has now agreed for the Bill, which has been renamed the Regeneration Bill, to proceed to Introduction. Unfortunately, the timetable for passage of the Bill through the Assembly means that I cannot be certain that the legislation would become law in time for an April 2015 transfer. Without that certainty there are unacceptable risks to the smooth transfer of these important responsibilities to the new councils. I have carefully considered the options available to me. In trying to come to a decision on the way forward, it was important to consider the impact any further delay and uncertainty would have on the detailed planning by the Department and the receiving councils for the handling of this work from April 2015. At this stage I had planned to be in a position to be able to finalise the planned handover of work to councils and to reach agreement between the Department and the new councils on the arrangements for transfer of budgets, assets, staff etc. In the interests of business continuity it is crucial that there is clarity on the way forward.

After due consideration, and with the full support of the Executive, it has been decided that the best course of action is to defer the transfer of responsibilities from my Department to councils for one year until April 2016. This decision means that my Department will continue to have responsibility for the delivery of these key services to the community, retaining its statutory powers, control of the overall budget and ownership of the associated physical assets and it will continue to deliver the relevant programmes until April 2016.

I can assure you that I am still fully committed to the Reform of Local Government and the transfer of key powers and responsibilities from my Department to the new Councils and I intend to introduce the Regeneration Bill, with the Speaker's consent, to the Assembly as soon as possible.

I am certain that the excellent arrangements and relationships that have been put in place between the councils and the Department will continue as we work together to bring forward this key programme of work.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail their vision for the future role, purpose and functions of the Community Relations Council.

(AQW 32716/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The future role of CRC, in the context of delivering Ministerial good relations objectives, is still being considered. As stated in the Together: Building a United Community Strategy the Equality and Good Relations Commission will extend the roles and responsibilities of the current Equality Commission to include good relations. Legislation is currently under discussion to bring this about.

The responsibility for the delivery and administration of a proportion of good relations funding currently resides with the CRC. There are a range of options for the future delivery of good relations funding and through the Strategy we have committed to establish structures and mechanisms that can target funding to where it is most needed and in a way that best meets emerging good relations need. This commitment is being progressed through the ongoing Review of Good Relations Funding. The remit of this review includes the funding currently being administered by CRC.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what steps have been taken to reduce poverty amongst people with disabilities and their families since the launch of the strategy to improve the lives of people with disabilities.

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive's Disability Strategy provides a framework for all departments to drive improved service delivery, increase awareness of the needs of people with disabilities and improve opportunities for people with disabilities across all policy areas. It includes a specific priority to reduce poverty among people with disabilities and their families. The Strategy also seeks to protect the right to an adequate standard of living, as well as to address the identified inequalities experienced by people with disabilities and tackle the barriers that they continue to face in their daily lives.

Work is being taken forward, across all departments, to reduce poverty amongst families with children and young people with disabilities. Parents of children with disabilities have particular needs in relation to childcare and may need additional support. The development of childcare services for children with a disability is being taken forward through Bright Start. This will include providing training and small grants to enable childcare providers to meet the needs of children with a disability for childcare services. Through the Family Fund, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety provides grant support to low-income parents raising disabled and/or seriously ill children to help with essentials. Children with a statement of special educational needs and who require a special diet are entitled to Free School Meals, regardless of other criteria.

OFMDFM hosted a major, inclusive disability awareness conference to consider how current arrangements meet the needs of all people with disabilities on the basis of equality in May 2013.

A 2013/14 annual report on the delivery of the Disability Strategy will set out the actions that all departments have undertaken under the Strategy in its first year. We hope to publish the report in Autumn 2014.

We are currently considering a number of further projects submitted by departments to deliver outcomes under the Disability Strategy, to be taken forward within the Delivering Social Change Framework.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the (i) salaries; (ii) allowances; and (iii) expenses paid to members of the Maze Development Corporation, for each year since its inception.

(AQW 35992/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Details of salaries, allowances and expenses paid to date to the members of the Maze Development Corporation, for each year since the Board was appointed in 2012, are provided in the table below.

	2012/13 10/09/12 – 31/03/13 £	2013/14 1/4/13 – 31/3/14 £	2014/15 1/4/14 – 31/8/14 £
Salaries	52,500	85,250	34,000
Employer costs	2,456	3,246	1,267
Allowances	-	-	-
Expenses	1,305	2,606	309

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 35191/11-15, when the annual report on the delivery of the Disability Strategy for 2013/2014, setting out the actions that all Departments have undertaken under the Disability Strategy in its first year, will be published.

(AQW 36610/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The first Annual Report on the delivery of the Executive's Disability Strategy, setting out the actions that all departments have undertaken during the first year, is currently being developed.

It is anticipated that following Committee consideration and subject to Ministerial and Executive approval, the report will be published later in the autumn.

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many victims of the Troubles are being assisted by the Victims and Survivors Service for the treatment of chronic pain; and how this figure compares with the numbers prior to the restriction which required that Disability Living Allowance entitlement was a qualifying factor.

(AQW 36642/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Table 1 outlines the number of Chronic Pain and Disability Support award letters issued and the number of awards paid out in 2013/14. As some clients availed of an award under both Chronic Pain and Disability Support the total number of unique individuals receiving assistance was 902*.

Table 1: 2013/2014 Awards made on basis of assessed and agreed need.

Scheme	Number of Award Letters Issued	Number of Awards Paid
Chronic Pain	884	805
Total	1294	1163*

In 2014/15 Chronic Pain and Disability Support have been merged and the new scheme 'Support for the Injured' has been opened to those on High and Middle Rate Care Component of DLA as a result of a troubles/conflict related injury.

Table 2 below shows the number of individuals that the Victims and Survivors Service can support and the number of individuals who have registered with the Service for 2014/15 to date.

Scheme	Number of individuals VSS can support	Number of individuals who have registered with VSS for 14/15 to date for support
Support for the Injured – High Rate Care	333	241
Support for the Injured – Middle Rate Care	300	243
Total	633	484

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why Industrial Injury Benefit is not a qualifying benefit to allow victims to receive assistance from the Victims and Survivors Service in the treatment of chronic pain.

(AQW 36644/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Victims may be eligible for the new scheme, 'Support for the Injured', if they are in receipt of the middle or high rate DLA Care Component. This criterion was introduced as a standard measure and is consistent with the approach used by the Department for Social Development.

Mr McGimpsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what proportion of senior civil service posts in their Department is held by females.

(AQO 6744/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: There are currently 25 senior Civil Service posts within the Department. This includes two vacancies. Seven (30.4%) of the remaining 23 posts are filled by females.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether in the period May 2007 to May 2011 any Rural Development funding, or other departmental funding, was paid to Foyle Recyclers Limited; and, if so, (i) when payment was awarded; (ii) how much was awarded; and (iii) for what purpose was the funding to be used.

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): Foyle Recyclers Ltd. received funding of £25,000 in 2007 from the LEADER+ Programme for the purchase of equipment to set up a scrap metal recycling plant at Derry Port.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether licence holders under the Mourne Herring Fishery will benefit from the announced scheme by the EU Fisheries Council to permit the industry to bank 25 per cent of the 2014 quota.

Mrs O'Neill: The Mourne Herring Fishery is a small artisanal fishery with a quota allocation that comes out of the overall Irish Sea herring quota.

Last week the EU Fisheries Council amended the 2014 Total Allowable Catch Regulation (EC) 43/2014 and agreed that exceptionally and only in respect of the stocks that are most severely or directly affected by the Russian embargo, an increase in the percentage of the quantities unused in 2014 could be carried over to 2015. The Irish Sea herring quota is not one of these stocks and the normal arrangements for "banking" unused quota will apply.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in light of the fact that the price of herring has dropped by 40 per cent and that under proposals by the EU Fisheries Council licence holders may bank this year's quota for herring, whether she has any plans to implement a short term compensation scheme for licence holders under the Mourne Herring Fishery.

Mrs O'Neill: The Mourne herring fishery is a small artisanal fishery that normally operates over a few weeks each autumn. When fish are less plentiful, or the financial returns from the fishery are poor, participants take other fishing opportunities or return to their normal full-time employment.

I therefore have no plans for a compensation scheme.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what funding opportunities exist under the Rural Development Programme for the implementation of the new Millisle Village Plan.

(AQW 37486/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Rural Development Programme 2007 – 2013 provided funding of £4,770 to develop the village plan for Millisle. This Programme is now closed for applications. However, a new Rural Development Programme 2014 – 2020 will open for applications next year. This will be delivered by new Local Action Groups that are now being formed. The Programme will provide opportunities for funding projects identified in local village plans if the new LAG's identify this as a priority in their strategy.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the level of reserve funds held by her Department.

(AQW 37530/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Reserves or Taxpayers' Equity held in the Department is published in its Annual Report and Accounts and details of the Reserves held at the most recent year-end is provided in the table below.

Table 1: Reserves held in DARD

Departmental Reserves balance as at year ended:	DARD 31/3/14
General Fund Reserve	£507,321k
Revaluation Reserve	£517,595k
Total Reserves (equals total assets less total liabilities)	£1,024,916k

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she intends to improve the quality and clarity of her Department's communications; and whether her Department has links with the Plain English Campaign.

Mrs O'Neill: The Department is continually aiming to improve upon the effective communications which already exist between DARD and its wide customer-base. The way in which the Department communicates and conducts its business will continue to evolve in order to meet the needs of customers and support further growth within the agri-food and rural sectors.

An example of the Department's commitment to improve the quality and clarity of communications is the forthcoming consultation on the "Adoption of Online as the primary Channel for Communicating and Transacting with Customers" (due to commence in November 2014). This will be aimed at improving the way in which the Department engages with applicants on EU area-based schemes and highlights the potential for improvements to the Animal & Public Health Scheme, two significant examples of the services being delivered by DARD which affect a broad range of customers in the farming sector and wider rural community.

DARD has links with the Plain English Campaign Ltd and has regularly used the Campaign to provide training for DARD staff, and to quality assure documents, for example, the Campaign assisted DARD in preparing the 'Less Favoured Area Compensatory Allowances Scheme' explanatory notes booklet in 2012.

Customers are encouraged to provide feedback in order to help improve future communication.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions the Loughs Agency is taking to support the granting of warrant cards to allow members of the Camowen Community Angling Association to act as Bailiffs for the Upper Camowen River, Omagh.

Mrs O'Neill: I understand from the Loughs Agency that it can confirm receipt of an application for the appointment of Private River watchers from the Camowen Community Angling Association. This matter is currently in the hands of the Loughs Agency's Solicitors who are in correspondence with the Solicitors representing the Association.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) how many fishing rods have been seized by Loughs Agency staff on the Upper Camowen River; (ii) how many cautions have been issued; and (iii) how many prosecutions are (a) pending; and (b) complete.

(AQW 37633/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The Loughs Agency has seized 2 fishing rods in this area in 2014.
- (ii) The Agency has not issued any formal cautions in this area.
- (iii) (a) There are 2 case files under consideration for prosecution in this area and (b) No prosecutions have been completed in this area in 2014.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what strategy her Department has in place to reduce the turnaround time for processing single farm payment applications.

(AQW 37714/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department has made considerable efforts in recent years to improve Single Farm Payment performance. In 2013, the Department delivered a record payment performance with 90% of claims finalised in December and 96% of claims finalised by the following February. All inspection cases were finalised by April 2014 which was two months earlier than 2013 and four months earlier than 2012. The Department has built upon these successes for 2014. The proportion of claims submitted online has increased from 21.5% in 2013 to 38% in 2014. Inspections have commenced earlier in 2014 and the increase in the proportion of inspections carried out through Control with Remote Sensing will accelerate the throughput of cases. The Department has recognised the importance of an effective and efficient Integrated Administration and Control System (IACS) in reducing the level of error in claims made and increasing the level of integration and automation.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what support or funding is available to rural schools to open the school building in evenings to cater for community groups operating classes, such as ICT for farmers and rural dwellers.

Mrs O'Neill: I understand that you have tabled a similar question to the Minister for Education.

Under Axis 1 of the Rural Development Programme 2007-13 my Department provides a programme of support for farmers and farm families to improve skills and awareness on farm-related issues. This training is co-ordinated by the Countryside Agri-Rural Partnership which is my Department's external delivery agent for Axis 1 Measures.

Currently training is provided on ICT Skills and Health and Safety Awareness at various locations throughout the north of Ireland. To date payments totaling £565.32 have been made to 3 rural primary schools for hire of venues for this training.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the work to upgrade the North Down Coastal Path between Seahill and Cultra, that is being funded by her Department under Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme, including details of the work undertaken and timescale for completion.

Mrs O'Neill: North Down Borough Council received funding under Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme, through DRAP, to upgrade and make improvements to the North Down Coastal Path at Seahill, and between SeaPark to Cultra.

The Seapark to Cultra phase of the project is complete. Unforeseen delays have been experienced at Seahill but work is progressing. As this is a Strategic Project it is scheduled to complete by 31 December 2014.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the budgets of (i) Foras na Gaeilge; and (ii) the Boord o Ulstèr-Scotch in each of the years since they were established, broken down by the contributions in each year from the (a) Northern Ireland Executive; and (b) government of the Irish Republic.

(AQW 37528/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The North South Language Body, comprising Foras na Gaeilge and the Boord o Ulstèr-Scotch was established on 2 December 1999.

Both Agencies are funded by the Department for Arts, Heritage and Gaeltacht (DAHG) and the Department for Culture Arts and Leisure. Foras na Gaeilge receives 75% of its funding from DAHG and 25% from DCAL. The Ulster-Scots Agency received 75% of its funding from DCAL and 25% from DAHG.

Foras na Gaeilge also receives funding from the Department for Arts, Heritage and Gaeltacht for the Clár na Leabhar Gaeilge programme which is delivered solely in the south.

In 2004 Foras na Gaeilge were awarded funding of £86,000 from the Department of Education (DENI) to add a further four steps to the "Step by Step" reading scheme and to prepare a translation of the standard maths examination for use in the North's Irish medium schools.

Since 2009 the Colmcille initiative (a tri partite arrangement between the Executive, Southern government and Scottish government) has been administered by Foras na Gaeilge and Bòrd na Gàidhlig. Foras na Gaeilge receives equal amounts of funding for this from the Executive and the Southern government. Funding for both of these initiatives is included in the details provided in the tables, which show the annual budgets, allocated by the Executive and the Southern government to Foras na Gaeilge and the Boord o Ulstèr-Scotch from 2000 to date.

At present, Foras na Gaeilge can only provide the DAHG contributions for 2014 in Euros.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the level of reserve funds held by her Department.
(AQW 37531/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Used in the accounting sense, reserves equate to the stake the taxpayer has in publicly funded bodies. I have assumed that the question refers to reserves in the narrower sense of cash held by my Department.

The Department does not hold cash reserves. A major objective of my Department's cash management policy is to minimise cash balances held. It does so by making daily drawdowns of cash which are sufficient only to meet its immediate needs.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 36895/11-15 and in relation to the funding provided to Cycling Ireland, how this body apportions funding between different cycling disciplines.

Ms Ní Chuilín: Neither my Department, nor Sport NI hold information on how Cycling Ireland apportions funding between the different cycling disciplines, as this is an internal matter for that body.

Over the last 3 years, Sport NI has provided funding to the Governing Body of cycling, Cycling Ireland, under the Investing in Performance Sport Programme; the Athlete Investment Programme and more recently the Performancefocus programme.

Funding from Sport NI under its Athlete Investment Programme was provided to Cycling Ireland on the basis of agreed targets and it is required to report on its performance against these. Funding under the Performancefocus Programme for the period 2013-17 has been made on the basis of a 2013 strategic review of High Performance Cycling in Ireland.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when the refurbishment of Windsor Park will be complete.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Funding Agreement was issued to the IFA and the successful contractor (O'Hare and McGovern) was appointed in December 2013.

Design development by the contractor is complete and the release of the Construction Notice by the IFA was made on 2 May 2014. Construction works commenced on site on 6 May 2014 after the Irish Cup Final.

Construction work is on-going and progressing well, with the Phase 1 works (construction of the pitch) completed on time for the European Championship Qualifier on 11th October 2014.

Provided that significant delays around any legal issues are avoided, then the Windsor Park development can remain on programme with completion of the construction works planned for October 2015.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr Anderson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the number of work placements in the Upper Bann area that are available to students at the Southern Regional College.

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): According to the Southern Regional College, there were 189 work placements in training provision and 942 further education placements in the Upper Bann area in the 2013/14 academic year.

The process of obtaining, monitoring and evaluating work placements takes significant effort by colleges, but is a key element of the student experience and an integral part of their study.

Research emphasises the importance of work placements. In particular, learners benefit from experience of the work environment to complement their main studies. This is also a very effective way for learners to acquire the all-important employability skills required by employers.

My Department's current reviews of further education and youth training are considering how work placements can be included in the most effective way in individual students' programmes of learning.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department has taken to promote areas outside of Greater Belfast as locations for US companies who are seeking to invest in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37392/11-15)

Dr Farry: Working with Invest NI, the Assured Skills programme is designed to help attract new foreign direct investment companies to Northern Ireland by assuring them that the skills they need to be successful are available in Northern Ireland.

Working in partnership with Invest NI ensures the best possible proposition to potential investors. The programme not only delivers a boost to employment but also our local skill base. Assured Skills support is also available to encourage existing companies who are considering expansion.

My department has no input as to where a foreign direct investment company, who is thinking of investing in Northern Ireland, should locate its office. This is a decision entirely for the company with support from Invest NI.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how spending cuts will affect provisions for university students with special education requirements.

Dr Farry: I can advise that the current Disabled Students' Allowances for higher education students with special educational requirements will remain in place and I have no plans to change the funding available in light of the spending cuts.

The following is available in academic year 2015/16: A specialist equipment allowance of up to £5,266 for the whole course; a non-medical helper's allowance of up to £20,938 per year; a general allowance of up to £1,759 per year to help towards other disability related spending such as printer cartridges and Braille paper; and, any extra travel costs the student may have to pay to attend University or College because of their disability.

In their Widening Access and Participation Plans, all of the Higher Education Institutions have identified students with learning difficulties / disabilities as a target group for interventions aimed at raising aspiration and educational attainment and have set out their participation targets for these students for each academic year in the period 2015/16 – 2016/17. The institutions also detailed the additional measures they plan to introduce to support their retention and completion rates. The above support measures will be funded out of the tuition fee income raised by each institution and since there will be no reduction in tuition fee levels the Department would not anticipate any reduction in the support provided by institutions to students from disadvantaged backgrounds including students with special education requirements.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the number of people completing Post Graduate Diplomas in Education in the last three years, compared with the number of newly created jobs in this field.

Dr Farry: In Northern Ireland, the post-graduate qualification for Initial Teacher Education (ITE) is the Postgraduate Certificate in Education (PGCE) rather than a diploma. At undergraduate level a Bachelor of Education (BEd) is the relevant qualification.

For the 2010/11, 2011/12 and 2012/13 academic years, the number of graduates achieving a PGCE is detailed below:

	Queen's	Ulster	Stranmillis	St Mary's	Open University	Total
2010/11	165	140	15	20	15	355
2012/13	130	110	15	20	20	300

Figures in this table have been rounded to the nearest 5.

My Department's responsibility for teacher education relates to resourcing the ITE providers to deliver both the PGCE and BEd programmes. Responsibility for determining the number of teachers required falls to the Minister of Education. My Department does not therefore hold information on the number of newly created jobs in this field.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what discussions he has had with the Minister for Social Development in relation to improving the rights of student tenants in private houses.

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The Universities are responsible for their own policies and procedures, including those relating to student accommodation.

I have not had any discussions with the Minister for Social Development in relation to improving the rights of student tenants in private houses. However, I am advised that the Department for Social Development was present at recent University and further education college 'freshers' events across Northern Ireland and communicated directly with students about the rights and responsibilities of both tenants and landlords particularly in relation to the Tenancy Deposit Scheme and Landlord Registration.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what actions he has taken to preserve and expand full time and part time courses offered by further and higher education colleges, especially in respect of (i) the future impact on the local economy and workforce; and (ii) the health benefits for course participants.

Dr Farry: Further education colleges are key deliverers of my Department's skills strategy and of the wider economic strategy for Northern Ireland. Providing individuals with the skills to obtain a job or to progress within employment is one of the best ways to support learners and impact on the local economy and workforce.

My Department promotes further and higher education actively through the 'Skills to Succeed' communications campaign, including strands on Essential Skills, Apprenticeships, Training for Success, Foundation Degrees and 'Reach Higher' (encouraging wider participation in higher education).

Using the latest available validated data, over the period 2010/11 – 2012/13 both funding and enrolments in further education have increased. The number of funded further education enrolments has grown by over 6,000 to 100,266 in 2012-13, an increase of 8.92%. Furthermore, funding has risen by £1.3m, a growth of 1.85% over the period.

It is also worth noting that between 2007/08 and 2012/13 there was an increase in the proportion of the Department's funded further education enrolments that lead to qualifications on the regulated qualifications frameworks – from 63% to 80%.

Under the current strategy for further education in Northern Ireland, Further Education Means Business, the primary purpose of further education colleges is to strengthen and support economic and workforce development, to advance individuals' skills and learning and to meet the skills needs of employers.

My Department's curriculum policy for further education has been developed to ensure that through their curriculum colleges achieve an appropriate balance between provision that strengthens economic and workforce development and enhances social cohesion.

Therefore, I have been able to preserve and expand further education provision in recent years. However, this will become increasingly difficult in the current very difficult budgetary position.

Finally, colleges offer provision to students of all ages. However, while any associated health benefits for participants are to be welcomed, this is not the main responsibility of my Department.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the level of reserve funds held by his Department.

(AQW 37533/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department does not hold any budgeting reserves. Accounting reserves are reflected in the Department's Statement of Financial Position and do not represent reserves held to fund future projects.

The Departments Resource Accounts at 31 March 2014 detail the Statement of Financial Position regarding Taxpayers' Equity and other reserves as follows:

General Fund	1,438,523
Total equity	1,438,534

The General Fund of £1.4b represents the total assets less liabilities of the Department excluding the Revaluation Reserve, it is a technical accounting reserve and does not represent funds available for expenditure purposes.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the range of programmes delivered through The Idea Centre in the Omagh Campus of South West College; and how The Idea Centre is helping to increase the competitiveness of local students in their pursuit of employment.

Dr Farry: The Idea Centre is an interactive learning and exhibition space where South West College students, post-primary school children, community groups and local industry are encouraged to interact and participate in a creative process of generating ideas and rapidly creating prototypes to establish proof of concept.

Students and staff work together to identify problems and find solutions. Students learn by 'doing'. They identify the problem and work together to develop a range of possible solutions. Students have the opportunity to use the latest technology to develop solutions, thereby providing them with the skills, experience and knowledge needed to succeed in industry and to help them become more competitive in the job market.

The Centre delivered 186 classes/workshops and 17 events between September 2013 and May 2014, involving around 2,100 students, covering Design Process and Digital Fabrication, and areas such as Laser Cutting, 3D Printing, CNC Machining and Design Thinking.

Other examples include Coder Do Jo, providing an opportunity for children to come to learn about coding through play. Projects include creating computer games using scratch and HTML, 3D scanning and 3D printing and also building 3D printers.

The Idea Centre also opens as a MakerSpace which enables members of the local community to work on their own projects, with Idea Centre staff on hand to provide assistance and training on all available equipment.

These classes provide students and the wider community with the opportunity to gain skills central to both economic and social well-being, providing a close fit with elements of the revised curriculum and associated curriculum entitled framework, and supporting skills development to provide a value-added, highly skilled, innovative and enterprising economy.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the reduction in part time employment opportunities for further and higher education students, as a result of the growing under unemployment of graduates and skilled workers, on the ability of students to cope financially.

Dr Farry: I recognise that the economic downturn has had an impact on employment opportunities and on family incomes. I am however encouraged by recent statistical data published by the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency which has confirmed that the Northern Ireland economy continues to improve. In the latest summary of the economic and labour market indicators, for example, September data shows growth in employment for the fifteenth consecutive month. I accept however that many students and their families continue to face financial hardship and I acknowledge the importance of the financial support my Department provides to students in both further and higher education.

In order to alleviate the pressures faced by both Higher and Further Education students I have ensured that appropriate funding is available to help remove financial barriers to education. My Department, through Student Finance NI, provides financial support for students attending higher education courses. In academic year 2014/15 Northern Ireland domiciled students studying full time are eligible for a non-means tested tuition fee loan of up to £3,685 if they are studying in Northern Ireland or up to £9,000 if studying in Great Britain.

Students following vocational courses at further education colleges may be eligible for financial support through Further Education Awards and / or college Hardship Funds, both of which are funded by my Department. Both funds are means-tested to ensure that support is directed at those students most in need and who would, otherwise, not be able to attend a further education college. The maximum amount payable through a combination of both FE Awards and Hardship Funds is £3,500 per annum in total. Over the last five years, there has been a net increase of approximately £800,000 of the total amount available in the combined funds. This increase in the overall budget has ensured that applications for support are not refused due to lack of available funding.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what efforts his Department is making to increase the provision of foundation and undergraduate degrees offer at the Enniskillen campus of the South West College.

Dr Farry: South West College's allocation of full-time higher education places has increased from 186 in academic year 2008/09 to 565 in academic year 2014/15. This significant increase is the result of my Department's annual review of college full-time higher education allocations and additional full-time places that I have made available. This includes 68 places that I awarded in academic year 2013/14 and an extra 23 places awarded in the 2014/15 academic year, to accommodate new Foundation degree qualifications in Science Technology Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) subjects. These allocations of additional places demonstrate my continuing commitment to increasing higher education provision in the south west.

South West College has received the largest increase in allocation of full-time higher education places across the sector, in recognition of its excellent performance as a provider of higher education in further education across a range of metrics, including the provision of STEM courses and Foundation Degrees.

However, it is the responsibility of the senior management in the regional college to manage their allocation of full-time higher education places across campuses and curriculum areas to balance local demand and Departmental priorities.

My Department is committed to carrying out further reviews of college allocations in the future and to providing additional places if resources can be identified, but there can be no guarantee that any additional full-time places would be allocated to South West College.

At the same time my Department does not place a cap on part-time higher education places and expansion of that provision therefore offers South West College another route to increase higher education opportunities at the Enniskillen campus.

In Graduating to Success, the higher education strategy, my Department is committed to developing a pilot scheme for the creation of university bases at the FE Colleges.

The aim is to improve rural access to higher education, in partnership between the higher education and further education sectors. Project 10 of this strategy involves a pilot in South West College. Progress has been made with SWC to deliver programmes through blended / distance learning and summer schools.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 36921/11-15, whether he recognises a link between recreational courses provided at Regional Colleges and public health.

Dr Farry: As I have indicated in recent responses to similar questions, public health is not my Department's responsibility. However, any health benefits that are associated with individuals' participation on further education provision of any type are to be welcomed.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what correspondence he has had with the University of Ulster on deploying student places from Coleraine to Magee, in order to meet the 'One Plan' target.

Dr Farry: I have on several occasions mentioned publicly and in correspondence that the University of Ulster is at liberty to deploy its MaSN allocation across its campuses as it sees fit. I have asked the University to consider moving places to the Magee campus in order to help achieve the One Plan interim target of 1,000 additional undergraduate places by 2015. However, I have not suggested from which campus the places should be moved as that is a matter entirely for the University.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many places the University of Ulster at Coleraine has lost to the Magee campus, in each of the last three years.

Dr Farry: This is not information that my Department holds. However, the University of Ulster has confirmed that over the last three years, no places have been lost from the Coleraine campus to the Magee campus.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of (i) male; and (ii) female (a) Research Associates; (b) Senior Research Associates; and (c) Research Fellows in each local university.

(AQW 37711/11-15)

Dr Farry: The breakdown of researchers in our local universities, using each university's staffing structure, is set out below. It should be noted that not all of the job titles used in the question are applicable to Northern Ireland universities.

University of Ulster

Job Title	Male	Female	Total
Research Assistant	7	9	16
Research Associate	62	53	115
Research Fellow	10	10	20
Senior Research Fellow	3	2	5
Total	82	74	156

Queen's University

Job Title	Male	Female	Total
Research Assistant	30	40	70
Research Fellow	209	208	417
Total	255	254	509

Stranmillis University College and St Mary's University College have advised that they do not employ staff specifically as researchers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what opportunities exist for universities to use their reserves to meet funding shortfalls.

(AQW 37759/11-15)

Dr Farry: Universities are expected to earn surpluses of between 3% and 5% per annum to ensure their ongoing sustainability. The surpluses contribute to the universities' reserves position. Reserves represent income that is retained by the universities but they are not the same as cash. To realise cash, assets need to be sold. Whilst the universities can draw on their reserves, this is a short-term measure only. If the universities were to use their reserves to fund their operations over the medium to long-term, this will damage their ability to invest in new facilities and equipment for students and staff, to manage financial risk, to manage cashflow, to invest in curriculum development and to maintain existing facilities for students and staff. Once used, the reserves are gone and cannot be easily replaced. Drawing on reserves in time of financial need is a last resort and if we expect our universities to do this, we may reconcile ourselves to having to smaller, less competitive and insular universities which is not in the best interests of Northern Ireland.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the level of reserves held by each of the local universities.

Dr Farry: The latest published and audited figures available for the two local universities is at 31 July 2013. At that date their reserves position is show in the table below.

The position as at 31 July 2014 will not be available until early December.

	Queen's University £'000s	University of Ulster £'000s
Income and Expenditure Reserve	133,042	118,579
Pension reserve	(49,937)	(36,914)
Total	105,274	165,243

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many additional PhD places, which are financially supported by business and philanthropy, his Department has matched funding for in each year since 2012.

(AQW 37795/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department funds a baseline number of 495 postgraduate awards (PGAs) each year. Through the Higher Education strategy, I committed to considering funding additional places in areas of economic relevance and matching funding for places which are financially supported by business and philanthropy. The overall outcome reflected in the Strategy was to double the number of awards to 1,000 by 2020.

In response to this commitment, I have secured resources for an additional 351 PGAs, which are being funded from the Executive's Jobs and Economy Initiative and from my Department's Higher Education resources. These additional PGAs are being phased in from academic year 2013/14 at the rate of 117 per year and, rather than specifically match funding business or philanthropy places, the additional PGAs are targeted towards subjects deemed to be economically relevant.

Based on the current arrangements, the Department will be directly funding 846 postgraduate awards by 2015/16.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many additional PhD places his Department has provided funding for in areas of economic relevance, since 2012.

(AQW 37800/11-15)

Dr Farry: Under the Jobs and Economy Initiative and the Higher Education Strategy, I secured funding for a further 351 additional PhD places, all of which are in areas of economic relevance. Starting in 2013/14, in line with the previous approach, these have been phased in at a rate of 117 per year, meaning that, at this point, my Department is providing funding for 234 additional PhDs.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what monetary reserves are held by Stranmillis College.

Dr Farry: The latest set of audited published accounts available for Stranmillis University College are as at 31 July 2013. At that time the College reported cash at bank and in hand of £445,085. The position as at 31 July 2014 is due to be reported by the College in early December.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by his Department.

(AQW 37808/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department for Employment and Learning does not own any land.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what monetary reserves are held by Queen's University Belfast.
(AQW 37903/11-15)

Dr Farry: The latest set of audited published accounts available for Queen's University and St. Mary's University College are as at 31 July 2013. At that time Queen's University reported cash at bank and in hand of £10.008m whilst St Mary's reported £3.804m. The position as at 31 July 2014 is due to be reported by both institutions in early December.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what monetary reserves are held by the South Eastern Regional College.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the steps his Department is taking to improve job opportunities for people with degrees in science and technology; and (ii) whether his Department has worked with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment in order to see job growth in this sector.
(AQW 37935/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) Steps to improve job opportunities

Developing the skills of our current and future workforce will be essential if we are to achieve our economic aspirations of export led economic growth.

The Department's Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland and the STEM Strategy both highlight the need to increase the number of people qualifying from local higher education institutions with graduate and post graduate level qualifications in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM).

With the world becoming increasingly dependent on technology, it is envisaged that the range of businesses opportunities in these areas will grow significantly. If we are to ensure a steady pipeline of STEM skills for the future and support these economic prospects it is essential that our young people are encouraged to study STEM subjects at school, college and university. The business community, the education sector and my Department will all continue to have a fundamental role to play if we are to achieve our STEM aspirations. In particular, I have brought together government, academia and local employers in the areas of Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services; Food and Drink Manufacturing and Processing; and Information and Communication Technology, and through Ministerial led groups I am working with them to identify and address skills needs in these sectors.

Other key achievements include: an additional increase of 1,350 undergraduate places and 350 post graduate places in STEM subjects; the establishment of industry backed scholarships in the computing and engineering sectors; a wide range of skills intervention programmes such as academies in software testing, data analytics, cloud computing, a computer numerical control machining conversion course, and ICT apprenticeships.

(ii) Working with DETI

My Department works closely with both DETI and InvestNI in the development of skills provision in order to achieve economic goals, with particular reference to the importance of science and technology.

In particular, working in partnership with Invest NI, the Assured Skills programme is designed to help attract new foreign direct investment companies to Northern Ireland by assuring them that the skills they need to be successful are available in Northern Ireland, and also to support existing companies who are considering expansion.

The job creation and skills development potential that the Assured Skills programme brings is directly linked to the Programme for Government, with particular emphasis on the following key commitments:

- contribute to rising levels of employment by supporting the promotion of over 25,000 new jobs;
- achieve £1 billion of investment in the Northern Ireland economy; and
- increase uptake in economically relevant Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) places.

Since the commencement of the Assured Skills programme (2010/11) my Department has been involved in the creation of 3,736 potential new jobs. When all of the jobs are created they will be worth an additional £96m per year to the economy. The projects are mainly in the Financial Services, ICT, Legal Services and advanced manufacturing sectors. By the very nature of the jobs created a considerable number of these jobs will be in IT.

Further Assured Skills interventions are designed to enhance the capability of Northern Ireland in emerging skills areas, through either up-skilling lecturers, providing conversion courses for graduates in economically important sectors, or creating pools of potential employees with the skills that investors want, for example in cloud computing, software testing and data analytics.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what cash reserves are held by the North West Regional College.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of jobs created by international investors with assistance from InvestNI in each parliamentary constituency in (i) 2011-12; (ii) 2012-13; and (iii) 2013-14. (AQW 36637/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): Information relating to job creation is commercially sensitive at business level while a project is still 'live'. In order to ensure that individual companies are not identifiable, Invest NI therefore applies statistical disclosure controls.

In Foyle, 214 jobs were created by international investors in 2011-12 and 134 in 2012-13.

In 2012-13, 15 jobs were created in Fermanagh & South Tyrone and 96 in Mid-Ulster.

In Belfast East, there were 333 jobs created by international investors in 2011-12, 426 in 2012-13 and 649 in 2013-14. In Belfast South there were 428 jobs created in 2011-12, 522 in 2012-13 and 70 in 2013-14, whilst, in Belfast North, there were 69 jobs created in 2011-12.

Specific information for other years and PCA's cannot be provided as, in these instances, there would be less than 5 companies in each individual year. Information relating to job creation by specific companies will become publically available once a project is complete and the control period has ended.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what actions are planned to address the lack of Grade A Type Office Accommodation for potential investors.

Mrs Foster: The availability of suitable office accommodation is an important part of Northern Ireland's investment proposition. I am conscious of the concerns that have been raised from various quarters over the current level of availability.

An Invest NI commissioned review of the commercial property market has recently completed and the organisation is currently considering its findings and recommendations. Central to this was a need to ascertain the nature and extent of any market failure and whether government intervention would result in any demonstrable market advantage.

Once Invest NI has completed its deliberations it will decide on the most appropriate course of action. It does, however, remain of the opinion that the current level of availability of Grade A office space is not negatively affecting its ability to secure investment projects.

There have been a number of recent positive announcements concerning both new Grade A office developments and the refurbishment of existing office stock. Once completed these will be welcome additions to the local office market and can only enhance Northern Ireland's attractiveness as an investment location.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to list the road haulage contractors who have applied for financial support from InvestNI in each of the last five years.

Mrs Foster: Below is a list of transport companies who have applied for Invest NI financial or advisory support in each of the last five years.

2009-10

- McCulla (Ireland) Limited
- Dsv Road Limited

2010-11

- McKnight Transport Limited
- McCulla (Ireland) Limited

2011-12

- M.B. Freight Forwarding Limited
- McCulla (Ireland) Limited
- Countrywide Freight Group
- Hawkes Transport

2012-13

- Derry Refrigerated Transport Limited
- McCulla (Ireland) Limited
- Montgomery Distribution Limited
- PRM Logistics Limited
- Roadliner International
- Sawyers Transport

2013-14

- Derry Refrigerated Transport Limited
- McCulla (Ireland) Limited
- McMullan International Logistics

Donnelly Transport In line with European guidelines, particularly due to issues with displacement, Invest NI is, in the vast majority of cases, limited to the provision of advisory support to companies operating within the haulage sector.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what measures have been put in place by her Department to ensure that companies with a mineral prospecting licence comply with the licence terms; and to detail the implications should a company breach the terms.

Mrs Foster: The Licensee's proposed work programme is detailed in the terms and conditions of the Mineral Prospecting Licence as issued by my Department under section 11 of the Mineral Development Act (Northern Ireland) 1969.

Licensees must provide my Department with an annual report on the results of the work programme. The Department assesses this annual report to satisfy itself that the Licensee has fully observed and performed the terms and conditions of the licence.

In addition Licensees are required to furnish DETI with a detailed Annual Auditor's statement.

Each Licence is treated on its own merits. In the event of breach or non-observance by a Licensee of any of the terms and conditions of a Licence, DETI has the power to revoke the licence under the Mineral Development (Applications, Fees and Model Clauses) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1970.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her Department's support for credit unions; and to outline her Department's vision for any increased services which could be delivered by local credit unions in the future.

Mrs Foster: I recognise the importance of a thriving, and growing, credit union sector. My Department has taken the lead in introducing reforms which have placed credit unions in Northern Ireland on a more secure footing. I intend to build on the good work already done, and to continue the reform process by removing further restrictions on Northern Ireland credit unions and thereby permit them to expand the range of their activities, and reach out to new groups.

It will be for each credit union to determine the range of services they are able to provide in meeting the needs of their current and future members.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what impact the cancellation of Northern Ireland Tourist Board's Tourism Events Fund for 2014-16 will have on events in (i) Ballymoney; (ii) Ballymena; and (iii) Moyle council areas.

Mrs Foster: There is no way to gauge impact at present.

Currently international events which straddle these areas have already received 3 year funding offers from 2014 and will not be affected by the current funding situation. Letters of Offer and contractual commitments have already been issued and signed.

The nature of the Events Sponsorship Fund is that organisers apply to the fund annually and therefore there is never any guarantee of receiving funding. When applicants apply to the scheme, applications are assessed alongside all the other applications through a competitive process therefore no one has ever any guarantee of funding any year.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when she expects the enterprise zone in Coleraine to be confirmed by Her Majesty's Treasury.

Mrs Foster: The UK Government's Economic Pact, published on 14 June 2013, set out 3 commitments in relation to Enterprise Zones, focusing on Enhanced Capital Allowances (ECAs), which permit 100% first year allowances for qualifying plant and machinery expenditure.

The pilot Enterprise Zone announced in the Chancellor's Budget statement in March 2014 will only offer ECAs as an incentive. The decision to designate a particular area offering ECAs is ultimately for Treasury. Discussions are ongoing between the relevant stakeholders to put the necessary arrangements in place and it is anticipated that formal designation of the zone by HMT will be progressed as soon as those discussions have concluded.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in light of the success of the Giro d'Italia, whether her Department has had any discussions with the relevant bodies on the possibility of hosting stages of the Tour de France.

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board is currently implementing the Events Strategic Vision to 2020 and working in partnership with key stakeholders to identify and bid for major global events and achieve the objective of attracting at least one major event per annum.

As with all major global events, any future event will require a dedicated budget to enable bidding to take place and for an event to be secured.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQO 6832/11-15, why a number of the portfolio companies are facing winding up proceedings from the fund manager E Synergy; and what action InvestNI is taking to address this situation.

(AQW 37733/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI is aware that E-Synergy is pursuing certain portfolio companies in respect of outstanding debts. Invest NI has requested that E-Synergy does not pursue these debts and a meeting has been arranged between E-Synergy directors and Invest NI officials to discuss how this issue will be resolved.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the plans, including the timeframe, to ease visa restrictions for Chinese visitors.

Mrs Foster: The British-Irish Visa Scheme was officially announced by the UK and Irish Governments on 6th October 2014 and will be introduced in the autumn.

Under the first phase of this scheme Indian and Chinese nationals applying in their countries of origin (India and China respectively) will be able to visit the UK and Ireland using one visa. This will remove the need for Indian and Chinese nationals visiting Northern Ireland to apply for a separate visa to travel onto the Republic of Ireland, and vice versa.

This promotes travel throughout the island as a whole, with a view to promoting tourism here. Subject to the success of this first phase consideration will be given to further expansion of the scheme to other nationalities.

Department of the Environment

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether Regulation 13(l) of the Public Service Vehicles Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1985 is unenforceable.
(AQW 37322/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Regulation 13 (l) of the 1985 PSV Regulations enables my Department to endorse a condition on a PSV Vehicle Licence that prohibits the vehicle to which the licence refers from waiting in an area outside 45m from the licensee's place of business.

In practical terms it would not be possible to have the large number of taxis that are often affiliated to licensed taxi operators wait within a 45m distance from their place of business nor would parking restrictions necessarily afford compliance with such a requirement.

Therefore, the Department has never endorsed or imposed such a condition on a PSV Vehicle Licence.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the implications for Local Government Reform and for prospective developers/investors seeking the certainty that a 'plan led' system provides to the business community, following the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment's initiation of judicial review proceedings against his decision to adopt the Belfast Metropolitan Action Plan.

Mr Durkan: Given that the Adoption of BMAP is subject to current legal proceedings it would be inappropriate for me to make any specific comment until these proceedings have been concluded.

The Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 will come into effect on 1 April 2015 when planning powers transfer to local councils. In making any determination under the Act, regard is to be had to the local development plan, and the determination must be made in accordance with the plan unless material considerations indicate otherwise. This is commonly referred to as being 'plan-led'.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has sought the creation of a dedicated telephone number for (i) elected representatives; and (ii) car dealers to contact the Driver and Vehicle Agency given the recent transfer of services to Swansea.

Mr Durkan: Vehicle registration and licensing services were centralised within the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea on 21 July 2014. From that date, responsibility for the delivery of vehicle registration and vehicle excise duty in the North transferred to DVLA.

My officials wrote to local elected representatives prior to centralisation, setting out contact details for DVLA. There is a dedicated telephone number and dedicated email address for MPs and other elected representatives, including MLAs, to contact DVLA on behalf of their constituents. Emails should be sent to dvlaministerials@dvla.gsi.gov.uk, alternatively the telephone number is 01792 788585.

In addition, commercial customers have various means of contacting DVLA:

- General vehicles enquiry line - Individual enquiries regarding specific applications should be addressed via our Contact Centre's general vehicles enquiry line telephone number 0300 790 6802. The general enquiry line is open Monday to Friday, 8am to 7pm and Saturday between 8am to 2pm.

- General vehicles enquiry email - Alternatively general vehicle enquiries can be submitted via email at <https://emaildvla.direct.gov.uk/emaildvla/cegemail/dvla/en/index.html>. The email service is offered by our Contact Centre and is operational Monday to Friday, 8am to 7pm and Saturday between 8am to 2pm.
- Trade licence plate enquiries - Commercial customers with trade licence plate enquiries have a dedicated team that they can contact on 0300 300 1495, phone lines are open between 8.30am and 4.30pm on Monday to Friday. This number is for checking the progress of trade licensing applications only. Alternatively they can contact the team to check the progress of an application via email on TradeLicensing@dvla.gsi.gov.uk.
- Commercial Vehicles Team – deal with commercial fleet companies, where that company has registered their fleet with DVLA, enquiries can be made on telephone number 0300 083 0016 or via email fleetshd@dvla.gsi.gov.uk. Phone lines are open between 8.00am and 4.30pm on Monday to Friday. This number can also be used for companies wishing to join the fleet company scheme.
- AFRL - Commercial customers who use the Automated First Registration and Licensing service are able to contact a dedicated team with enquiries regarding use of the system on 0300 123 1345 option 1 or via email to afri@vla.gsi.gov.uk. This service is available during office hours.

In addition, as an interim measure, there is a dedicated email address for Northern Ireland commercial and general customers to offer support during the change in processes and procedures, NIEVS.oproject@dvla.gsi.gov.uk. This email is still available for general change enquiries but is expected to close at the end of the year.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment why the two main private hire taxi companies were given a special dispensation to dispose of booking records after six weeks, instead of the regulation six months; and to detail who authorised this dispensation.

Mr Durkan: There were no private hire taxi companies given a special dispensation to dispose of booking records after six weeks.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the role of the Criminal Justice Inspectorate (CJI) within Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) enforcement; and how many occasions CJI has completed inspections of DVA enforcement, including the dates of inspection, from 2007 to date.

(AQW 37482/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Criminal Justice Inspectorate (CJI) assesses the contribution that the Department of the Environment and its executive agencies are making to the criminal justice system including how it carries out its regulatory responsibilities in protecting the environment and improving road safety.

The CJI carried out an inspection of the Department of the Environment and its agencies in 2007 with a follow up review of inspection recommendations completed in November 2011.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment what funding opportunities exist for the implementation of projects within the new Millisle Village Plan.

(AQW 37485/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Coastal Communities Fund (CCF) promotes sustainable economic growth and jobs in coastal communities. The scheme therefore constitutes a funding opportunity for the implementation of the Millisle Village Plan.

The current round of funding for this scheme has now closed, however the scheme may re-open in the future if available funding is not fully utilised and the fund is extended beyond 2017.

No other funding opportunities currently exist in my Department for the implementation of projects within the new Millisle Village Plan.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the status of a Conservation Officers report when determining a planning application within a Conservation Area.

(AQW 37492/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A Conservation Officer's report is an important material consideration in assessing any consent or application within a Conservation Area.

It is necessary to give full regard to all material considerations including the policy guidance set down within Planning Policy Statement 6 – Planning Archaeology and the Built Heritage - Chapter 7.0; the advice and guidance in the relevant Conservation Area Document; the relevant Development Plan; consultee responses; Council views; objections and any other representations made.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of the Environment whether it is obligatory for the Planning Office to request a report from the Conservation Officer when considering a planning application within a Conservation Area.

Mr Durkan: The Department has a statutory duty to pay special attention to the desirability of preserving or enhancing the character or appearance of Conservation Areas in accordance with (Article 50 (5)) of the Planning (NI) Order 1991. In exercising this duty Conservation Officers must be consulted on all planning applications and consents within Conservation Areas.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on plans to review legislation regarding dilapidated buildings and neglected sites, in order to provide the new councils with an effective legislative framework for addressing and reducing the negative impacts caused by the sites.

Mr Durkan: A discussion document on legislation regarding dilapidated/dangerous buildings and neglected sites was issued to key stakeholders on 31 March 2014 with a request for responses by 30 June. By the closing date 20 substantive responses had been received, primarily from the local government sector, highlighting a range of complex policy and legal issues. A synopsis of these responses has been prepared and is available to view on the DOE website. Officials are currently in the process of engaging with stakeholders to discuss these issues with a view to issuing a formal public consultation on policy proposals by 31 March 2015. The link between dilapidation and anti-social behaviour is one of the important issues under consideration and I am committed to ensuring that District Councils have access to effective and fit for purpose legislation to address this and other significant issues throughout Northern Ireland. Another DOE initiative, the Dereliction Intervention Funding programme, has been accessed to great effect by a number of councils, including those within the East Londonderry constituency, and it is hoped that further funds for this scheme will be made available in the future.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department is taking to address dilapidated buildings in East Londonderry, which attract anti-social behaviour, in order to maintain the area as an attractive tourist destination.

Officials are currently in the process of engaging with stakeholders to discuss these issues with a view to issuing a formal public consultation on policy proposals by 31 March 2015. The link between dilapidation and anti-social behaviour is one of the important issues under consideration and I am committed to ensuring that District Councils have access to effective and fit for purpose legislation to address this and other significant issues throughout Northern Ireland. Another DOE initiative, the Dereliction Intervention Funding programme, has been accessed to great effect by a number of councils, including those within the East Londonderry constituency, and it is hoped that further funds for this scheme will be made available in the future.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of times he sought to present the matter of the adoption of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan to the Northern Ireland Executive; and what reasons were given by the Executive for its failure to engage with his Department.

Mr Durkan: This is already a matter of public record. I would refer the member to my oral statement on the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan which I made to the Assembly on 8 September 2014.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35963/11-15, whether his Department has set aside the requirement for planning permission for sand extraction taking place in Lough Neagh Special Protection Area in favour of pre-1972 onshore operations in order to facilitate the granting of Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme (ALCS) certificates, and in so doing, whether this facilitated the circumventing of the requirements of the Environmental Impact Assessment, Habitats and Wild Birds Directives.

(AQW 37520/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have previously advised that my Department is aware of the unauthorised sand dredging operations on the Lough and my officials have set about regulating this activity.

Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificates were issued following confirmation from Planning Service and other regulatory authorities that sites were operating within the regulatory framework. This assessment was based upon the on shore operations being lawful.

NIEA monitors the conservation status of the site selection features of Lough Neagh SPA. In the last 2 monitoring rounds a number of features were in unfavourable condition. In 2004, 6 site selection features were considered 'favourable' and 5 'unfavourable'. While in the most recent conservation assessment 7 selection features were 'favourable' and 5 'unfavourable'. (One new feature was added during a review of the SPA).

Of the 'unfavourable' features 4 are related to declines in diving duck populations, which research shows is unlikely to be related to sand extraction and one is related to international declines in Bewicks swans.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the recent work completed by his Department to improve bathing water on the Lecale coastline; (ii) how many Lecale beaches currently meet Northern Ireland Environment Agency standards to be designated as bathing waters; and (iii) when these beaches will be designated as healthy bathing waters. (AQW 37537/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department is the competent authority for identifying bathing waters in Northern Ireland. Implementation of any treatment works or upgrades are the responsibility of Northern Ireland Water, the provider of water and sewerage services in Northern Ireland.

In order to meet the requirements of a number of European Directives with the objective of protecting the water environment, there are 7 Waste Water Treatment Works delivering primary or secondary treated sewage to the Lecale coastline. These treatments remove polluting organic material from waste water.

There are currently 23 formally identified bathing waters in Northern Ireland, one of which is Tyrella on the Lecale coastline. The bathing water result for Tyrella for 2014 was "Excellent". This bathing water has consistently been assessed as "Excellent" since 1998.

For a site to become listed as a formally identified bathing water it must first be nominated and accepted as a candidate bathing water. The main criteria to be met for a nominated site to be listed as a candidate bathing water are as follows:

- Evidence of usage – 45 bathers on 1 occasion or 100 beach users on 2 occasions;
- Confirmation that bathing is not prohibited or inadvisable for safety reasons;
- Confirmation from an appropriate body that they are willing to take on bathing water operator responsibilities; and
- Provision of a bathing water management plan which should provide details of facilities at the site.

Nominations for candidate bathing waters can be made to the Department at anytime. However, the Department will be writing to councils and stakeholders in early 2015, inviting nominations for consideration in the next formal review of bathing waters, scheduled for completion in 2017. Nominations will be requested to be with the Department by the end of April 2015, to allow monitoring and usage surveys to be carried out in the 2015 and 2016 bathing water seasons.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with the Minister for Regional Development in relation to the pumping of raw sewage into bathing waters on the Lecale coastline. (AQW 37538/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have not had any discussions with the Minister for Regional Development in relation to the pumping of raw sewage into bathing waters on the Lecale coastline. I can confirm that no raw sewage is discharged into bathing waters on the Lecale coastline. All discharges from waste water treatment works are subject to either primary or secondary treatment.

My officials in NIEA work in conjunction with officials from both the Department for Regional Development and Northern Ireland Water on the identification and prioritisation of NIW assets and non-compliant works which require investment within the overall Price Control Regime. The prioritisation programme focuses on those works which are not compliant with the quality standards set within the consents to discharge.

Funding has been made available for any necessary upgrades for Ardglass and Ballyhornan Waste Water Treatment Works within the Price Control (PC) process.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment how many sanctions or penalties his Department have imposed on NI Water in relation to the mismanagement of waste water in the South Down area. (AQW 37539/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the last three years the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has taken successful prosecutions against Northern Ireland Water for causing pollution from two wastewater treatment works, one water treatment works and three sewage pumping stations in the South Down Constituency. The fines imposed total £10,550.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35878/11-15, to detail the nature of advice or direct engagement with InvestNI, including who represented his Department. (AQW 37541/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Officials from my Department's Road Safety and Vehicle Regulation Division engaged with officials in Invest NI on behalf of Belfast Public Hire (BPH), by way of telephone conversations and emails. The purpose was to identify the most appropriate contact information within Invest NI. These details were then forwarded to BPH representatives, providing them with the necessary contact information so they could obtain help and advice on business start up.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36863/11-15, whether Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement or any departmental officials had any contact with the PSNI regarding ongoing taxi problems centred on illegal pick ups by private hire taxis in the area of the Kingspan Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue/Onslow, in (a) 2011; (b) 2012; and (c) 2013. (AQW 37543/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Departmental Officials have had no formal contact with the PSNI regarding ongoing taxi problems centred on illegal pickups by private hire taxis in the area of the Kingspan Stadium/Mount Merrion Avenue/Onslow in 2011, 2012 or 2013.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36336/11-15, whether the Head of Enforcement authorised the use of video footage in advance of the assessment on 23 August 2013; and if not, whether this was completed without the specific authorisation of the Head of Enforcement.

Mr Durkan: The Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 introduced a system of authorisation and monitoring of surveillance activities by way of 'directed surveillance' that includes the use of video recording equipment, to ensure that the rights of individuals are not unnecessarily compromised in the pursuance of regulatory compliance.

In advance of the observations carried out on 23 August 2013, the Head of Enforcement authorised the use of 'directed surveillance' at Kingspan Rugby Ground.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of occasions local councils have seized noise making equipment and applied for forfeiture under the Noise Act 1996, broken down by (a) year; and (b) council.

Mr Durkan: When the Noise Act 1996 came into operation, district councils had discretion as to whether they would adopt the provisions of the Act. Belfast City Council was the only council who adopted it. Chapter 2 of Part 6 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (NI) 2011, which came into operation on 1 April 2012, amended the 1996 Act to remove the requirement for adoption thereby allowing councils the discretion to use the Noise Act powers as and when it was deemed appropriate. Section 10 of the 1996 Act provides powers of entry to enable district council officers to seize equipment.

The Department has been collecting information about noise complaints from district councils since 2003-04 for its annual report on Noise Complaint Statistics for NI. As the years have passed, additional information has been requested for the publication. However, details of the seizure of equipment under the Noise Act 1996 have only been collected since 2012-13. Belfast City Council recorded no seizures that year. The Department does not hold information for previous years for equipment seizure or forfeiture.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment how many occasions have local councils issued an abatement notice under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environments Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, broken down by (a) year; and (b) council.

Mr Durkan: The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (NI) 2011 came into operation on 1 April 2012. Part 7 of the Act deals with a range of statutory nuisances set out in Article 63 of the Act and gives district councils powers to serve an abatement notice where it is satisfied that a statutory nuisance exists, or is likely to occur or recur.

The information relating to the number of occasions district councils have issued noise abatement notices under Article 63 is published in the Department's annual Noise Complaint Statistics for NI and at present the only figures available relate to the 2012-13 year. The Department does not collect information on abatement notices served by Councils for other prescribed statutory nuisances. The details for noise abatement notices served by each council for 2012-13 are as follows:-

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will investigate why a staff member was removed from working for the Northern Ireland Environment Agency within one week of making whistle blowing allegations.

Mr Durkan: I am unable to comment on individual staffing matters, or on the detail of any case involving whistle blowing as the whistleblower's identity must be protected.

However, I can assure you, that where any allegations or concerns are raised under the Civil Service whistle blowing policy, these are investigated in line with relevant Civil Service policy and guidance, and the whistleblower concerned will be appraised of the progress of such an investigation.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) whether he is aware of problems faced by the local motor trade whereby vehicles that have been registered with different owners in a short period of time cannot be taxed in post offices, over the phone or via the internet as they have been labelled as 'Renewal Reminder Prohibited' meaning that all documents have to be sent to Swansea, which causes a significant increase in the length of time it takes for a dealer to sell a vehicle; and (ii) what steps he is taking to rectify this problem.

Mr Durkan: Vehicle registration and licensing services were centralised within the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea on 21 July 2014. From that date, responsibility for the delivery of vehicle registration and vehicle excise duty in Northern Ireland transferred to DVLA.

While the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) no longer has any role in the delivery of these services, I understand that a 'renewal reminder prohibited' notice does not mean that the vehicle has to be taxed by postal application to Swansea. It is still possible to tax the vehicle at the Post Office using the V5C Registration certificate/motor tax book, or V5C/2 new keeper supplement.

Whilst I am sympathetic to the issues now being faced by the local motor trade, I must refer you to DVLA to address any specific query in relation to the delivery of this service.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35963/11-15, to detail the pre-1972 operations which were used to justify each of the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme (ALCS) certificates which were granted in relation to unauthorised sand extraction taking place from Lough Neagh Special Protection Area.

Mr Durkan: My Department does not hold records of pre 1972 operations. The then Planning Service's response to the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme appears to have taken account of planning permissions associated to the onshore operations of the respective companies.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35963/11-15, whether the pre-1972 onshore sites used as the basis for granting Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificates for unauthorised mineral extraction from Lough Neagh Special Protection Area were exempt from the lawful requirements of Class 13, Schedule 1 of the Planning (General Development) Order 1973.

Mr Durkan: Class 13 of The Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1973 was applicable to the winning and working of minerals. Plant and buildings for processing of sand around Lough Neagh do not constitute winning and working of minerals.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35963/11-15, whether the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificates were granted in relation to the operations taking place from the onshore sites, or for the extraction taking place within Lough Neagh; and whether his Department was aware at the time certificates were granted that the extraction taking place required, but did not have, planning permission and represented unauthorised Environmental Impact Assessment development. (AQW 37578/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificates were issued for the onshore sites at Lough Neagh.

I have previously confirmed my Department's knowledge of historic and on-going sand extraction on Lough Neagh which is subject to current enforcement investigations.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the effectiveness of televised road safety campaigns in increasing awareness.

(AQW 37582/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE's road safety campaigns play a significant part in our aspiration of working towards zero road deaths in Northern Ireland; we have extensive evidence that the Northern Ireland public are aware of and are influenced by these campaigns.

Our campaigns consistently achieve awareness levels of over 90%. The average awareness level for TV advertising is 50%. The campaigns also achieve levels of influence ranging between 72% and 93%, indicating that road safety advertising has been very influential in improving road user attitudes and in producing positive change in behaviours. The industry norm for achieving levels of 'fairly influenced' is 30%.

It is difficult to measure the sole or unique contribution that any specific road safety intervention, including advertising, makes towards reducing casualties. However, work by Oxford Economics isolated the importance of the role of DOE advertising and calculated that from 1995 to 2011, some 21,977 men, women and children in Northern Ireland were saved from death and serious injury on our roads. This prevention of death and serious injury means that the economic payback was £10 per £1 invested by DOE, excluding human costs; and £42 per £1 invested including human costs.

I recognise that some of our campaigns can make uncomfortable viewing, but research and tracking evidence has consistently confirmed that they are effective, and that our 'tell it as it is' approach is a key reason for that.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department is taking to address the risk factors associated with road fatalities amongst young people.

Mr Durkan: The Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy to 2020 recognises that younger people are disproportionately likely to die on Northern Ireland's roads. The Strategy contains two targets, two of which focus on reducing significantly the number of children and young people killed or seriously injured in road collisions. I have outlined below some of the actions that my Department is taking to achieve these targets.

Young drivers – many of them newly qualified – are disproportionately involved in fatal and serious collisions compared to other drivers. This suggests that we need fundamentally to change how new drivers are trained, tested and gain experience. For this reason, the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill contains enabling provisions for a system of Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) in Northern Ireland. The premise of GDL is to prepare new drivers for the challenges of driving on their own – and to protect both them and other road users as they gain experience. The provisions aim to strike a balance between achieving road safety outcomes while not being unduly prohibitive. The Bill is currently at Committee Stage and the detailed provisions will be shaped by the Assembly process.

In addition, much of the focus of our Road Safety Education Officer Service (RSEOS) is on supporting teachers and other professionals to deliver road safety messages to young people, both at primary and increasingly at post primary schools. In primary schools this work includes the Junior Road Safety Officer Scheme, the Cycling Proficiency scheme, the Practical Child Pedestrian Safety Training scheme and Theatre in Education.

For post primary schools, we have developed a series of road safety lessons, presentations and education packs. These resources allow teachers to provide road safety lessons, involve students in discussions about aspects of road safety and ultimately encourage good road safety behaviours. RSEOS also provides support to schools which participate in the Motor Vehicle & Road Users Studies - a GCSE course which helps students prepare for driver training and the driving test and to become informed and responsible road users.

These resources are available on C2K, the ICT platform used by grant aided schools. Most of the information is also available on NI Direct, to cater for independent schools that do not have access to C2K and for other citizens.

My Department's advertising campaigns also aim to change those attitudes and behaviours which lead to death and serious injury on our roads. The campaigns are data-led, research-led and psychology-led. The messages that they contain are relevant to all road users. However, as young people are significantly over-represented in the casualties, many of the ads highlight young people at risk – whether as drivers, passengers, pedestrians, motorcyclists and cyclists.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the urgent need for progress on the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill, in light of the recent road fatalities in Coleraine and Belfast.

Mr Durkan: My Department is taking a broad range of actions to reduce the number of deaths and serious injuries on our roads. Our work centres around the main factors that cause collisions – excessive and inappropriate speed, drink/drug driving, and driver carelessness. It also focuses on groups which are over-represented in the casualty figures. This commitment is reflected in the Road Safety Strategy to 2020.

The Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill is critical to delivery of a number of the Strategy's commitments. The Bill addresses key road safety challenges, as seen in the numbers of casualties which involve drink driving and young and novice drivers. Its final provisions will be subject to Environment Committee scrutiny and Assembly approval. However, the Bill as drafted provides for:

- lower drink driving limits and new powers for police to stop and test drivers at the side of the road;
- a new graduated penalty regime to match the penalty to the amount of drink taken;
- a new graduated driver licensing regime with fundamental changes in how new drivers are trained, tested and gain experience.

The Bill is currently at its Committee stage. The Environment Committee is receiving evidence from key stakeholders and over the next few weeks my officials will be briefing the Committee on the detail of the Bill's provisions.

I am of course anxious to avoid any slippage in the legislative passage of this important Bill. At the same time, however, I am conscious of the need for effective Committee scrutiny and Assembly discussion. Once Committee stage has concluded, I will be seeking to schedule Consideration Stage of the Bill as quickly as possible.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of fatalities from road traffic collisions in Northern Ireland, compared to the rest of the UK, in each of the last three years.

Mr Durkan: Available information is provided in Table 1 and Table 2 below.

Year	Northern Ireland	England	Wales	Scotland	Great Britain
2011	59	1,594	121	186	1,901

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department might recognise compelling or particular circumstances where a local government authority might allow a proprietor of a burial ground to transfer a burial space to someone who is not a member of their family.

(AQW 37593/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department is responsible for legislation governing council burial grounds. Under the Public Health Act 1878 councils may sell the rights of burial in its burial grounds, either in perpetuity or for a limited period, under such restrictions and conditions as they think proper.

My Department has no powers to intervene in whatever arrangements a council has agreed.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Lead Enforcement Officer on duty at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013 has met with (i) him; and (ii) the departmental solicitor to discuss observations and a formal report; and if not, to outline the reasons for this.

Mr Durkan: None of the enforcement officers on duty at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013 have met with me or with the departmental solicitor to discuss observations, since there was no particular reason to do so.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36336/11-15, given the conclusions were approved by his officials, to detail (i) whether this approved request, under Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 Directed Surveillance Application, was a waste of resources, particularly given the hours of evidence gathering meant the staff in question would have been on overtime; and (ii) whether the full criteria consideration applied before approval was granted for this operation.

(AQW 37602/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DVA enforcement officers were granted approval to assess taxi services at Kingspan Stadium following full and proper consideration of all the relevant facts by the Head of Enforcement who deemed the proposed investigative approach to be justified and proportionate.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, following Driver and Vehicle enforcement inspections by the Criminal Justice Inspectorate, to detail (i) all recommendations made, per inspection; (ii) dates when recommendations were (a) implemented; and (b) not implemented, including the reasons for this.

Mr Durkan: The Criminal Justice Inspectorate (CJI) completed an inspection of the Department of the Environment, which included the Driver & Vehicle Agency, in 2007. The CJI report made 12 broad-based strategic recommendations which included elements of commonality across the Department.

A follow up report on the recommendations made is contained in the Criminal Justice Inspectorate Report entitled 'Enforcement in the Department of the Environment NI – A follow-up review of inspection recommendations' dated November 2011. All of the agreed Driver & Vehicle Agency related recommendations have largely been implemented.

I have placed a copy of the CJI Report in the Assembly Library.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether there is a problem with toxic waste arising from salmon farming; and how it has manifested itself in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37604/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Salmon farms have the potential to cause waste to accumulate on the seabed, which when it accumulates in high concentrations, can become increasingly toxic. This occurs through poor management practices and the utilisation of sheltered locations which allow for increased settlement below the cages.

Within Northern Ireland there is only one company operating marine based salmon farms, Glenarm Organic salmon. The company has two licensed locations at which they farm Salmon, one at Glenarm and the other at Red Bay. Both sites are monitored by my Department.

As a result of the organic farming methods used at both and the strong tidal currents, there is no problem with toxic waste at either site.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of the Environment, following the switch from paper tax discs to digital registration, whether he will consider engaging with the PSNI, noting the example set by Warwickshire and West Mercia Police, to repurpose vehicle tax disc holders with emergency contact information and medical alert cards for drivers.

(AQW 37624/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I agree that this idea merits further investigation. My officials have had initial discussions with PSNI road traffic policing officers, who are liaising with the Warwickshire and West Mercia force about the scheme.

I have asked them to report back to me with a view to further consideration if such a scheme would be beneficial here.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant AQW 36581/11-15, whether it would have been permissible to have assessed the environmental impact of, and approved the full planning application for K/2014/0387/F, had the constructional detail set out in his answer not been provided as part of that planning application.

Mr Durkan: The information required to assess a planning application will depend on the nature of the proposals in each case. In the case of K/2014/0387/F, sufficient information was provided in order to allow the Department to determine the application.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current number of refurbished wind turbines, broken down by local council

Mr Durkan: Information on whether a wind turbine is new or refurbished is not required in the submission and determination of a planning application for a wind turbine(s) under Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 18 - Renewable Energy. This information is therefore not collected by the Department.

Information and statistics relating to all renewable energy planning applications including wind turbines can be found at the following link, and is updated on a monthly basis.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment whether a British Standards number is required for a wind turbine.
(AQW 37631/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is no requirement within Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 18 Renewable Energy to provide a British Standard number for a proposed wind turbine in submission of a Planning Application.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36929/11-15, how many times Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement officers visited Kingspan Stadium to monitor taxi operations, in each of the last two years prior to and up to the dates provided.

Mr Durkan: Driver & Vehicle Agency enforcement officers visited the Kingspan Stadium to monitor taxi operations on 3 occasions in 2013. To date there have been no visits to the stadium during 2014.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37092/11-15, given the connection between his Department and the taxi service provider, whether the Driver and Vehicle Agency or his Department is facing a conflict of interest by attempting to develop a taxi system which is beneficial to the contracted taxi provider as one of the top two taxi companies who stand to gain most from Single Tier, but detrimental to smaller private hire companies and public hire taxi operators.

Mr Durkan: There is no connection between my Department and any specific taxi operator or group of taxi operators. I am not, therefore, of the view that there is a conflict of interest.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the progress on the proposed reforms to taxi legislation.
(AQW 37699/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Taxi Drivers' Licences Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2014, which introduce a new taxi driving test for those who wish to become taxi drivers and periodic training for all taxi drivers, came into force on 31 October 2014.

The proposed Taxi Licence Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2015, which introduce single tier licensing throughout Northern Ireland, and other changes including redesigned roof signs and taxi plates, are being finalised and I intend to lay them before the Assembly in November.

The proposed regulations on the retention and disposal of seized motor vehicles, which introduces new powers to seize vehicles suspected of being used for taxiing without a taxi licence, have received Executive approval and are due to come into operation from the end of January 2015.

The policy in respect of the introduction of a new and higher specification for wheelchair accessible taxis is being finalised and an SL1 is due to be considered by the Environment Committee in November prior to the regulation being developed.

Finally, the proposed delivery model for the introduction of mandatory taximeters (including fitment, sealing and testing) is being finalised in advance of a revised SL1 being submitted to the Environment Committee for their consideration. This will also see the introduction of a maximum fare.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the convergence process in local government; and whether all eleven councils will be operating as intended on the 1 April 2015.

Mr Durkan: Significant progress has been made in local government reform and important milestones have been met including the Local Government Act receiving Royal Assent in May 2014; the appointment of Chief Executives for the new councils; and the May elections, leading to the creation of the 11 new councils which are now operating in shadow form alongside the existing 26 councils.

A staff transfer scheme has been developed for Local Government staff. Capacity building plans have been developed with councils, the local government training group, DOE and others aimed at ensuring that elected members, local government staff and civil servants who are directly affected by reform are supported through the major change process.

Locally, the new councils are working through a number of issues, including how they will organise their new governance structures, organisational design and the development of corporate, business and financial plans.

The programme is subject to robust reporting arrangements. A critical path has been established for the programme with the interdependencies between tasks identified. The Regional Transition Operational Board meets every month to exercise operational oversight and ensure timely implementation of the programme. Each month, councils and departments report progress to me, through this group.

While Local Government reform is largely on track for achievement in April 2015, you will already be aware that I am concerned by the continued delay in Executive agreement to the introduction of the DSD Bill which is required to provide councils with regeneration powers. Whilst a failure to provide councils with urban regeneration and community development will not prevent the rest of the reform programme from going ahead, it is nonetheless an important element enabling new councils to shape their communities.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37176/11-15, whether private hire taxi regulation could be rectified directly with the relevant operators bringing them in line with legislation instead of changing the system to the detriment of other service providers.

Mr Durkan: The Taxis Act 2008 is the product of extensive consultation with the taxi industry, its customers and other interested parties on the issues around carrying passengers for reward. I remain of the view that the best way to achieve the objectives of the Act is to implement it in full.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36336/11-15, on how many occasions in the last four calendar years has a request been made under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 Directed Surveillance Application; and of these, how many were (i) granted/approved; (ii) refused; and (iii) pending.

Mr Durkan: The table below refers to the number of Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act (RIPA) 2000 Directed Surveillance Applications that were authorised and refused by the Driver & Vehicle Agency in each of the last four calendar years.

Year	RIPA Applications <sup>1</sup>

There are currently no RIPA authorisations pending.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of the Environment why elected representatives have been unable to contact the Coleraine and Londonderry planning offices by telephone or email for over a week.

Mr Durkan: I am unaware of any difficulties with either the telephone system or the Divisional electronic mail box for either the Coleraine or Londonderry offices. Both systems have been operating normally apart from a brief 3 minute break in the telephone system on the morning of 17 October 2014 when two calls failed to get through.

If an elected representative attempts to call a specific member of staff there is always the chance that they are out of the office on a site visit, in a meeting with colleagues or applicants and their representatives, or on leave. In these instances if the call is placed through NI Direct the call back system is initiated and the Department has 24 hours to respond.

In an effort to improve customer service I recently asked officials to set up a Duty Planner on-call rota. This has been in place for a few months now and this has proved to be very successful.

However, it is recognised that some minor disruption may occur over the next few months as staff move between offices to align with the new Council clusters in preparation for the transfer of planning functions and staff to local government on 1 April 2015. Officials are aware of the importance of providing a high quality customer service and will work with NI Direct to ensure that any disruption is kept to an absolute minimum over the coming months.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of the Environment when the Planning Service must contact the PSNI as a consultee.

Mr Durkan: The Department does not have a statutory obligation under Article 15 of the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 to consult the Police Service of Northern Ireland with regard to planning applications.

Under Article 15 of the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 the Department is required to consult the District Council and the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI). These bodies are referred to as statutory consultees. In addition, the Department may also consult with a range of other bodies depending on the location and nature of the planning application. Organisations falling within this category are referred to as non-statutory consultees. The Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) is categorised as a non-statutory consultee.

Some of the types of application the Department may consult the PSNI will include applications for wind turbines, with respect to any potential impact on the NI Emergency Services Radio Communications and Public Safety Telecommunications Infrastructure; applications for pistol and/or rifle ranges, with respect to design, construction and authorisation of such, given they are responsible for the safety of civilian shooting ranges in Northern Ireland; and applications for gun shops or gun stores, with respect to specifications of the building as fire arms licensing will be required.

This is however not an exhaustive list of where the PSNI may be consulted. Each individual planning application is assessed on a case by case basis, depending on the location and nature of the proposal.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of the Environment whether the PSNI has any consultative or statutory standing when the Planning Service make a recommendation to approve or refused a planning application.

(AQW 37902/11-15)

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his decision to permit unregulated sand extraction to continue from the bed of Lough Neagh is likely to be giving rise to adverse cumulative effects from this unauthorised Environmental Impact Assessment development; and whether this is placing the UK in an indefensible position, given that infraction complaints have already been submitted to the European Commission.

(AQW 37924/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have not made a decision to permit unregulated sand extraction from the bed of Lough Neagh. My Department has issued letters to operators advising that their works are unauthorised and that the activity should cease until this situation has been addressed. In the interim, my officials will continue to investigate activity on the Lough.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the dates of all emails sent from the Chief Enforcement Officer to the Passenger Transport Licensing Division, or any name by which it was formerly known within the Driver and Vehicle Agency, in relation to taxi operator licensing from January 2013 to date.

Mr Durkan: The Department's records reveal that from January 2013 to date there were no emails sent by the Chief Enforcement Officer to the Passenger Transport Licensing Division, or any name by which it was formerly known within the Driver and Vehicle Agency, in relation to taxi operator licensing.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36078/11-15, to provide a copy of the stated overall consideration of the arrangements which were passed to the Departmental Solicitors Office for their legal clarification and advice.

Mr Durkan: The concept of legal professional privilege safeguards the rights of a person or organisation, including the Department, to obtain legal advice on a confidential basis and not to disclose such information in the interests of the wider administration of justice. It has been the settled view that in this context, legal advice is not disclosed and that privilege applies to the information sought.

The Department is, therefore, unable to provide the information sought.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of fines issued for dog fouling, broken down by local council, in each of the last three years.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 35889/11-15, to provide a copy of the internal guidance; and to confirm when the guidance was first issued.

(AQW 37977/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A copy of the internal guidance that was issued to staff in September 2010 is provided below. As has been advised in AQWs 35889/11-15, 37039/11-15 and 37080/11-15, this guidance for staff was withdrawn on 4 April 2014 and is therefore no longer a material consideration.

PPS 21

Advice on the implementation of Policy CTY 10 –

Dwellings on Farm - Criterion (c) where there are no buildings on the farm

The above policy in PPS21 will allow for a dwelling to be permitted on an active farm, every 10 years, subject to certain criteria.

Criterion (c) of CTY10 requires that the new building be visually linked or sited to cluster with an established group of buildings on the farm. Policy CTY10 does not make reference to circumstances where the farm holding has no building or group of farm buildings for a dwelling to visually link or cluster with.

PNRD has advised that as applications for a house on a farm without any buildings was considered by DARD to be a rare occurrence no references were made to this situation in the final document.

Therefore, for the purposes of determining applications where there are no buildings on the farm, the site should comply with policies CTY13(a-f), CTY14 and CTY16, similar to applications where an alternative site is being considered under criterion (c).

Where there is one building on the farm holding, the farm dwelling should cluster with that building unless it is considered as an exceptional case for an alternative site in which case policies CTY13(a-f), CTY14 and CTY16 apply.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in relation to apartment reform, what results, recommendation, or decisions has evolved from the Apartments Interdepartmental Implementation Group.

(AQW 36044/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): As a first step the Apartments Report Implementation Group was asked to consider the Law Commission's recommendations with regard to the regulation of managing agents and advisory services. The Commission has recommended the introduction of a registration scheme for managing agents, similar to that which operates in Scotland under the Property Factors (Scotland) Act 2011, and the Group has been considering how that statutory scheme might be amended to take account of the Northern Ireland context. Any Bill will be subject to Executive approval and will go to consultation, but the work on the required instructions for Legislative Counsel has commenced. With regard to advisory services, it is hoped that existing services, such as Consumerline, can be called in aid, thereby obviating the need for a separate service.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he expects the findings of a review of MS services to be published; and whether he intends to place a MS specialist in the Causeway Hospital in the interim period.

(AQW 37370/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The HSC Board and PHA are due to commence a short review of MS services in December 2014 with a view to establishing agreed patient pathways. The findings of the review, which is part of a wider neurology service initiative across Northern Ireland, should establish agreed patient pathways and help develop service specification and agreed service profile for MS. The Board expects that the development of draft patient pathways anticipated from this work will be available by summer 2015.

Until recently, the gap left by the retirement of the full-time MS Consultant at Causeway Hospital in March 2012 was bridged by providing services on a part-time basis by this consultant.

A final decision on service requirements will be made when the draft patient pathway has been developed and agreed. In the interim a Consultant Neurologist based at BHSCT now provides clinics at Causeway Hospital as a visiting consultant. In addition, the MS Nursing Team in BHSCT continues to provide a range of MS Nursing Services that are not provided locally in other Trusts in Northern Ireland and a community-based MS Nurse is in place to receive telephone calls from patients and their families and visit them in their own homes if required and liaise with the multidisciplinary team.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans for screening or other measures in respect of the Ebola virus, at sea and airport entry points into Northern Ireland, or elsewhere.

Mr Wells: I have no plans at this time to introduce entry screening at sea ports or airports in Northern Ireland. Heathrow, Gatwick, Birmingham Airport, Manchester Airport and St Pancras Station are major international passenger hubs, and Heathrow receives around 85% of UK-bound air passengers, identified by the Border Force, coming on the main routes from Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone. This is a proportionate, risk-based approach. At this stage there are no plans to roll out entry screening to other airports in Great Britain or to seaports, and my Department is monitoring developments.

In order to reduce the risk of international spread of the disease, and in line with World Health Organization guidance, the affected countries have introduced exit screening at airports to ensure that individuals who are unwell do not board flights.

It is important to note that the UK has robust systems in place already for infectious disease control, including at airports and ports.

Advice for UK border staff has been circulated to all UK ports. In Northern Ireland the Public Health Agency, through its Health Protection Service, has communicated with colleagues covering all sea ports and airports in Northern Ireland informing them of the current situation in relation to the outbreak and directing them to sources of further information, including the actions to be taken should a sick traveller, potentially with an infectious disease, come to their attention. Posters have been sent to all airports and sea ports in Northern Ireland to advise arriving travellers about risk factors for Ebola, symptoms and signs and how to seek medical advice.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) number; and (ii) location of fully equipped isolation units to deal with infectious diseases there across the Health Service.

Mr Wells: Across the health service in Northern Ireland there is one fully equipped isolation unit which is located in the Royal Victoria Hospital. In the event of a case of Ebola being confirmed in Northern Ireland, it is intended that the patient would be cared for in this unit while awaiting transfer to an appropriate High Level Isolation Unit in Great Britain. This will depend on the clinical requirement of the patient as assessed by their care team.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will review the current support provided to parents who's child has passed away whilst attending a hospital outside Northern Ireland for a medical procedure or treatment.

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) is reviewing its arrangements for the repatriation of live and deceased patients whose transfer for treatment outside of Northern Ireland they have approved on request by clinicians. This is being considered within a revised HSCB travel policy, which is in the process of being finalised.

The Board has also recently funded a paediatric patient experience officer post, based at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children (RBHSC). The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust requested this funding following the outcome of focus groups held with families that had travelled outside of Northern Ireland for care, who felt that it would be helpful to have a single contact point at RBHSC to discuss any travel, accommodation, expenses or care requirements that they may have.

From 6 October 2014 the patient experience office at the RBHSC is available Monday to Friday 09:00-17:00 and the patient flow coordinator at RBHSC is available at all other times to provide guidance and support via telephone and email to all families travelling for care outside of Northern Ireland. This service is available to all families, regardless of the Trust area in which they reside, 24 hours per day, 7 days per week. All decisions regarding travel, accommodation and expenses are guided by the HSCB travel policy to ensure a consistent and fair service for all families in Northern Ireland.

In addition to the above, the Belfast Trust Cardiology Department has a transport coordinator nurse, a paediatric and an adult liaison nurse in post. Their role is to provide support to the patients and parents in the time preceding, during and after their treatment. They do this in a number of ways, either face to face, electronically or with regular phone calls before they travel, during their time away or in the period after their return.

The aircraft used under the Board's contract for air transport services are not contracted or intended for the repatriation of deceased patients. However, there have been a small number of cases, involving paediatric patients, in which exceptions have been made due to exceptional circumstances cited by clinicians and the availability of the aircraft.

Each Health and Social Care Trust also has a bereavement counsellor who provides dedicated support and information. This can be particularly relevant in circumstances of sudden, unexpected deaths and in the context of those dying in hospital and undergoing procedures, including children.

I also acknowledge the important support services provided by the voluntary sector for families who have lost a child in a hospital setting while undergoing medical treatment include Northern Ireland Children's Hospice, Clic Sargent for Children with Cancer, Cruse Bereavement Care, Barnardo's Child Bereavement Service as well as various charities providing support for children with long term and chronic conditions and disabilities (see www.familysupportni.gov.uk). These services are accessible to families irrespective of whether the child concerned died in Northern Ireland or outside Northern Ireland.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the funding provided to (a) Cara-Friend; (b) the Rainbow Project and (c) Here NI; and to provide breakdown of the funding received since 2007.

Mr Wells: Funding towards the organisations' administrative costs since 2007 has been provided as follows:

	Cara-friend	The Rainbow Project	Here NI*
07/08	£30,178	£30,880	-
08/09	£30,932	£31,652	-

* Prior to August 2012, Here NI was formerly the Lesbian Advocacy Services Initiative

The Rainbow Project and Cara-friend use the above core funding as a contribution towards their central administrative costs such as salaries and rent. In addition, a project grant was awarded to the Rainbow Project towards a sexual and physical health project for a two-year period commencing in April 2006, and funding of £42,922 was provided in 2007/08. In 2008/09, funding of £17,554 was provided to Cara-friend towards a printed resource of lesbian and bisexual women's health guidelines for health professionals.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a breakdown to the total cost relating to the International Working Group on the future of Paediatric Congenital Cardiac Services.

Mr Wells: The International Working Group (IWG) was appointed by my predecessor and Minister James Reilly TD on a no-fee basis. The costs arising from the assessment they carried out therefore relate to travel, accommodation and other costs incurred during their visit to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland (ROI) from 7-11 April 2014. The costs are to be funded by the Department of Health (ROI) and my Department. My Department has estimated that its contribution will be approximately £8,500.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why cancer patients are being asked to pay for their drugs, even though they have previously received them via the Health Service.

Mr Wells: Health service treatment is free at the point of delivery of care. No patient receiving approved health service treatment in any specialty should be asked to pay.

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has responsibility for commissioning cancer drugs in Northern Ireland. All NICE approved cancer drugs are either recurrently funded or available via a cost per case mechanism in Northern Ireland. No patient should be asked to pay for approved cancer drug therapy.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many cancer patients have paid for Health Service treatment in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37511/11-15)

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people who have signed the Organ Donor Register in each month of the last three years.

(AQW 37522/11-15)

Mr Wells: As at 20 October 2014, new registrations added on to the NHS Organ Donor Register for residents in Northern Ireland over the past three years are as follows:

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will make a decision on an air ambulance service for Northern Ireland in the near future.

(AQW 37523/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is in receipt of a report from the Health and Social Care Board on the feasibility and appropriateness of establishing a dedicated Helicopter Emergency Medical Service in Northern Ireland. In addition, my officials are participating in a working group led by the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland to make recommendations on how best to provide a dedicated Emergency Aeromedical Support service in the Republic, including recommendations in relation to the potential for expansion of the geographical reach of the service, including an all-island service. The group's report is not yet published. I will wish to consider the recommendations of both reports carefully before making a decision about an air ambulance service.

Definitive information is not available on the number of air transfers and trauma transfers which would benefit from an air ambulance service annually. I am not yet in a position to announce criteria for development of an air ambulance service.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the annual number of air transfers and trauma transfers which would benefit from an air ambulance service.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department is taking to ensure the early diagnosis of lung cancer by GPs.

(AQW 37550/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Public Health Agency (PHA) is currently developing a three year campaign programme of activity to improve knowledge and awareness of the signs and symptoms of cancer. As part of this work a Cancer Awareness Campaign strategy is being developed which aims to disseminate the proposed campaign strategy and enable all stakeholders to engage positively in the delivery of the campaign programme over the next 3 years. The PHA recently hosted a workshop to ensure that key individuals and stakeholders, including cancer charities, are fully engaged in planning and supporting the development of a cancer awareness campaign.

Whilst the campaign programme plans include a focus on a number of prioritised major cancer tumours it is envisaged that the programme will also incorporate information relating to a wide range of cancers and promote better awareness and early detection across the range, including lung cancer.

GPs currently have access to a multitude of learning resources which are available for them to utilise, including lecture courses, on line materials, e-learning resources and also useful patient information from various sources e.g. cancer charities. The HSCB has also made investment through the appointment of Macmillan GP facilitators who educate and update GPs on aspects of all cancers.

This work will continue and hopefully the secure improvements in diagnosis and care that we all would wish to see.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36930/11-15, whether he will give a commitment that there are no plans to reduce the number of examinations and assessments of infants for hip conditions.

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board has confirmed that it has no plans to reduce the number of examinations and assessments of infants for hip conditions from the level currently carried out as outlined in my response to your previous question AQW 36930/11-15.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the schedule for the establishment of services crucial to the success of the agreed all-island solution for the provision of paediatric cardiac surgery, including (i) a mobile extra corporeal life support service; (ii) an all-island governance committee; (iii) adequate specialist bed provision in Dublin; and (iv) mechanisms for the timely reimbursement of expenses incurred by families who are required to travel.

Mr Wells: My Department and the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland are working closely to prepare an action plan which we aim to have in place by the end of 2014. I will announce details of this plan as soon as it has been agreed with Minister Varadkar. This will include planning for implementing all of the recommendations of the International Working Group's (IWG) proposed model, pending my final decision after the public consultation, and will ensure continuity of care for all patients through the extension of current service level agreements as required. Emergency cases will therefore continue to be managed through existing arrangements with Our Lady's Children's Hospital, Crumlin, Birmingham Children's Hospital and Evelina Children's Hospital.

Families who are required to travel outside Northern Ireland for treatment will continue to have expenses reimbursed by the Health and Social Care Board's (HSCB) patient travel office. The Board is in the process of finalising a revised travel policy, having taken account of concerns raised by families in focus groups earlier this year which included the reimbursement of expenses. Families, regardless of where their child is being treated, can also benefit from a 24/7 patient experience service based within the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children since early October 2014.

Patient representatives will continue to be involved in the process of planning the future of this service, as they have been since the formation of the Board's PCCS Working Group in 2012. The public consultation, which is due to be launched shortly, will provide an opportunity for further engagement with stakeholders.

The IWG report provides a clear recommended way forward for congenital cardiac services. The deployment of personnel across both jurisdictions is a key element of the proposed service model, as it will help to ensure that essential life-saving skills are maintained in Belfast. My joint policy statement with Minister Varadkar on 14 October 2014 ended the uncertainty about the future of this service by confirming our commitment to bring about full implementation of the model as soon as possible, whilst giving full consideration to the consultation outcome. In doing so my expectation is that such posts will be more attractive as they will offer experience and opportunities to nurses and clinicians which previously were not available.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the precise mechanisms by which the care of children requiring emergency paediatric cardiac surgery or interventions will be managed during the eighteen months expected to elapse before an all-island solution can be fully implemented; and (ii) the measures he will take to keep families and their representatives, such as the Children's Heartbeat Trust, informed of any changes to these mechanisms which may occur throughout this interim period.

Mr Wells: My Department and the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland are working closely to prepare an action plan which we aim to have in place by the end of 2014. I will announce details of this plan as soon as it has been agreed with Minister Varadkar. This will include planning for implementing all of the recommendations of the International Working Group's (IWG) proposed model, pending my final decision after the public consultation, and will ensure continuity of care for all patients through the extension of current service level agreements as required. Emergency cases will therefore continue to be managed through existing arrangements with Our Lady's Children's Hospital, Crumlin, Birmingham Children's Hospital and Evelina Children's Hospital.

Families who are required to travel outside Northern Ireland for treatment will continue to have expenses reimbursed by the Health and Social Care Board's (HSCB) patient travel office. The Board is in the process of finalising a revised travel policy, having taken account of concerns raised by families in focus groups earlier this year which included the reimbursement of expenses. Families, regardless of where their child is being treated, can also benefit from a 24/7 patient experience service based within the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children since early October 2014.

Patient representatives will continue to be involved in the process of planning the future of this service, as they have been since the formation of the Board's PCCS Working Group in 2012. The public consultation, which is due to be launched shortly, will provide an opportunity for further engagement with stakeholders.

The IWG report provides a clear recommended way forward for congenital cardiac services. The deployment of personnel across both jurisdictions is a key element of the proposed service model, as it will help to ensure that essential life-saving skills are maintained in Belfast. My joint policy statement with Minister Varadkar on 14 October 2014 ended the uncertainty about the future of this service by confirming our commitment to bring about full implementation of the model as soon as possible, whilst giving full consideration to the consultation outcome. In doing so my expectation is that such posts will be more attractive as they will offer experience and opportunities to nurses and clinicians which previously were not available.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact of the paediatric cardiac surgery International Working Group's fourth recommendation that nurses and physicians should be deployed across both jurisdictions on the recruitment of appropriately qualified personnel, given that it has already proved challenging to attract such staff without the additional requirement for cross border travel.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether, in light of recent concerns raised by General Practitioners regarding the provision of appropriate medical evidence to the Social Security Agency, he would consider issuing advice to all GP practices regarding the availability of guidance for medical professionals published on the Department of Social Development website.

(AQW 37625/11-15)

Mr Wells: Responsibility for medical reports and their assessment as part of the benefit claims and appeals process rests with the Department of Social Development and therefore I regard that as a matter for DSD to address. The availability of any guidance on the completion of forms, which is currently held on DSD's website, should be drawn to the attention of GPs when DSD issue the form for completion.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36829/11-15, to detail the number of patients who have been (i) referred for surgery; and (ii) referred for shoulder surgery to Spire Fylde Coast Hospital in Blackpool in each month of the last three years.

Mr Wells: There are two distinct processes for referring patients to providers outside the Health Service. Patients may be referred via an Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) or as part of the independent sector/waiting list initiative process. An ECR is a referral to a provider for which there is no existing contract.

Information provided in AQW 36829/11-15 referred only to patients transferred via the ECR process. The Health and Social Care Board has reported that there have been no patients referred for surgery to Spire Fylde Coast Hospital, Blackpool, as part of the ECR process in the past three years.

Patients that are referred by Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts in Northern Ireland for treatment in the Independent Sector are referred to a specific Independent Sector provider. The HSC Trust that refers the patient to the Independent Sector retains responsibility for both the patients waiting time and their ongoing treatment.

The Western HSC Trust referred 15 patients to Spire Fylde Coast Hospital, Blackpool, for Trauma and Orthopaedic surgery during 2013/14. No patients were referred during 2012/13 or 2014/15. Of those 15 patients who were referred during 2013/14, 4 were transferred for shoulder surgery. To preserve patient anonymity, it is not possible to provide the actual numbers per month.

The Belfast HSC Trust has stated that they refer patients to 'Spire Healthcare' Group, which uses a number of different hospitals depending on the procedure or consultants location. They have advised that the number of patients referred to each hospital within the Spire Healthcare Group is not available. As a consequence, they are not in a position to provide details of the number of patients referred specifically to Spire Fylde Coast Hospital.

The Northern, South Eastern and Southern HSC Trusts have advised that they have not made any referrals to Spire Fylde Coast Hospital in the past three years.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what cycling facilities he plans to provide on departmental property.

(AQW 37652/11-15)

Mr Wells: All staff in my Department are based in Castle Buildings, within the Stormont Estate. The NICS estate is managed by DFP and whilst bicycle parking facilities are available I understand that there are currently no plans to extend the facilities offered.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what preventative spending his Department has planned to reduce rates of diabetes and obesity.

Mr Wells: The current Programme for Government commits to investing a total of £7.2 million in programmes to tackle obesity in support of the Department's 10 year Obesity Prevention Framework; A Fitter Future for All 2012-2022.

Preventing the rise of overweight and obese people in the population will help reduce the risk of developing a range of health conditions which includes Type 2 Diabetes.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of how investing £10 a year per person on cycling could save the Health Service money.

Mr Wells: All forms of physical activity, including cycling, can play an important role in improving physical and mental health and wellbeing. By encouraging people to take part in physical activity, and to eat a healthy balanced diet, we can reduce the prevalence of overweight and obesity. This will reduce the risk of developing long term health conditions such as heart disease and stroke, Type II diabetes, some cancers and mental health issues and therefore potentially lower costs to the Health Service.

My Department works closely with Department for Regional Development who are leading on the development of a draft Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland, currently out for public consultation and we will play an active role in the development of its delivery plan.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what correspondence he has had with the Minister for Regional Development in relation to cycling.

Mr Wells: I recognise the importance for health and wellbeing of creating an environment that promotes walking and cycling, and my Department is represented on the DRD – led Cross Sectoral Cycling Group. My officials have also provided evidence to the Committee for Regional Development's Inquiry into the benefits of cycling to the economy. Previously, DHSSPS was a member of the Active Travel Forum.

My Department will continue to work with DRD to deliver the health, economic, social and environmental benefits already identified in the Active Travel Strategy and will assist in the development of a Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland.

This work supports the delivery of my Department's obesity prevention framework, A Fitter Future for All (2012), DRD's Active Travel Strategy for Northern Ireland (2013), and the Active Travel Action Plan (2013). The need for this collaboration is further reinforced by the new strategic framework for public health, Making Life Better (2014).

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he intends to bring forward legislation to protect the elderly.

Mr Wells: My Department is taking forward the development of an Adult Safeguarding Policy in partnership with the Department of Justice. We intend to go to consult publicly on the draft policy, commencing in November 2014. Subject to the outcome of consultation, it is intended to publish the final policy in early 2015. In consultation, we will seek views on whether legislation is required to underpin the policy, and will include the proposals for legislation contained in the Commissioner for Older People's report "Protecting our Older People in Northern Ireland: A Call for Adult Safeguarding Legislation." Any adult safeguarding legislation introduced would need to extend to all adults at risk.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the plans to increase services for dementia care.

Mr Wells: Since the publication of the Regional Dementia Strategy in 2011, work has been continuing to take forward implementation of the Strategy recommendations in order to deliver a significant improvement in the quality of dementia care, and to provide support to people living with dementia to enable them to maintain their independence and live well with the condition for as long as possible.

Recurrent investment over the past 2 years has led to the enhancement of memory services, and an increase in the level of psychological support to individuals and carers. Criteria and protocols have been developed for referrals into memory services and work is ongoing to achieve timely assessment and diagnosis. Work is also on-going with GPs to enhance referrals to memory clinics.

Over the next 3 years, in addition to those plans already in place, the Dementia Strategy Implementation Group will focus on the key target areas of (i) awareness raising, information and support, (ii) training and (iii) short-breaks, respite and support to carers, using funding provided through the Delivering Social Change Signature Programme.

All five Trusts are committed to providing timely diagnosis, and services are being developed to include pre and post diagnostic counselling, comprehensive assessment, support and education.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the attendance figures for Emergency Departments in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 37678/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on new and unplanned attendances at emergency care departments is published on a quarterly basis, and available to view or download from:

<http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/waitingtimes/waitingtimes-emergency.htm>

The number of new and unplanned review attendances at emergency care departments is detailed in the table overleaf for each of the last six years only, as this information was not collected prior to 1st April 2008.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what proportion of attendance at Emergency Departments has been recorded as non-emergency issues in each of the last ten years.

Mr Wells: Information on attendances at emergency care departments for non-emergency issues is not available.

However, information is available on the proportion of attendances (new and unplanned reviews) at emergency care departments which were assessed as non-urgent on the Manchester Triage Scale (MTS) for each of the last two years, the most recent period for which information is available. This information is detailed in the table below.

Information is provisional and may be subject to change.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many locum doctors have worked for the Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts through the HSC Regional Medical Locum Service since it was introduced.

(AQW 37683/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board administer the HSC's regional e-Locum Service. The service advises that since its inception in January 2014, 161 doctors have worked shifts for all HSC Trusts.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an overview of the current provision of out-of-hours GP services in North Down.

(AQW 37690/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health & Social Care Board (HSCB) commissions GP Out of Hours (OOHs) services in the North Down area from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust (SE Trust). There are 3 centres in the SE Trust where patients can be seen, Newtownards, Lisburn and Downpatrick. The service operates from 6pm each evening until 8am when GP practices open the following morning and 24/7 at weekends and public holidays. The SE Trust deals with over 105,000 calls annually.

The HSCB is working with all Trusts and OOHs providers in supporting GP and nursing colleagues working in the service. The HSCB has invested an additional £1.5m in the OOHs budget during 2014/15 in order to support OOHs services across NI.

The HSCB has made additional funding to the SE Trust in 2014/15 of £179k for additional clinical staff at weekends and £30k for training. Further funding has also been provided to enhance clinical staffing at public holidays.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36800/11-15, whether the scanner due to be replaced in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area will be in place and operational by March 2015.

Mr Wells: The scanner in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area is located at Antrim Area Hospital. The project for its replacement is currently on programme for completion in March 2015 and the Trust is planning to have the new scanner operational from April 2015.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total number of staff at each grade employed at the Ulster Hospital; and of these, how many (i) are currently absent from work due to ill health and receiving statutory sick pay; and (ii) have been off work for longer than one week due to ill health.

Mr Wells: Due to the amount of time necessary to record absences for monthly and fortnightly payrolls, and the fact that statutory sick pay (SSP) is not payable until after the fourth consecutive day of absence and is not paid after the 28th week, it has not been possible to produce a contemporaneous account of the number of staff who are absent from work due to ill health and who are receiving SSP (or will receive it on their next pay date). The following figures therefore represent the situation at the Ulster Hospital as at the 28th of August 2014, being the most recent closed payroll month at the date of writing.

Because SSP eligibility is determined by a number of factors and thresholds aside from the four-day rule, it has not been possible for the Trust to supply a headcount figure of the number of staff receiving SSP within the timeframe for this question. However, included below is the amount of SSP paid at 28th August 2014, broken down by personnel area, for staff working at the Ulster Hospital as well as the headcount of staff who have been on sickness absence for longer than seven days.

The table below shows the number of staff based in the Ulster Hospital by personnel area, the amount of SSP payable to absent staff in each personnel area for the month of August 2014, and the number of staff who had been absent from work due to ill health for over 7 days. Figures are as at the 28th of August 2014.

Estates	50	£550.33	1

Nursing & Midwifery	1,621	£80,361.34	92
Professional & Technical	533	£19,397.43	21
Social Services	94	£4,490.10	4

In regards to AQW 37719, the Trusts' adoption of the new Human Resources, Payroll, Travel and Subsistence (HRPTS) system over the last year has significantly changed and improved the method used to calculate and record sickness absence. However, the discontinuity in data caused by the changeover and the differences between the systems mean that it is not yet possible to produce comparable twelve-month figures.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of supportive housing units in each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses can be found in Table 1 below.

Table 1. The number of supported housing units by service and HSC Trust

HSC Trust	Service
	Elderly	Learning Disability	Physical Disability	Mental Health
Belfast <sup>1</sup>	89	167	66	194
Northern	26	282	0	250 <sup>2</sup>
South Eastern	71	105	1	103 <sup>2</sup>
Southern	41	226	21	160 <sup>3</sup>
Western <sup>4</sup>	0	10	12	43

- 1 Figures provided by Belfast HSC Trust relate to the number of tenancies.
- 2 Figure relates to places for service users in supported living schemes as opposed to units.
- 3 Figure includes 23 places provided by the Northern Ireland Association for Mental Health (NIAMH).
- 4 Figures provided by Western HSC Trust do not include independent home providers who provide supported housing when contracted by the Trust.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of supportive housing units required in each Health and Social Care Trust to comply with Transforming Your Care.

Mr Wells: Supported Living provides an environment that is designed to help vulnerable and older people retain their independence in their local community, and as such is an important part of services for older people in the community.

Transforming Your Care identified that a diverse choice of provision should be available to meet the individual health and social care needs of older people, and supported the trend towards independent living at home or in supported accommodation, with appropriate regulation and safeguards in place to protect the vulnerable. It does not specify the solutions required to deliver that choice.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he supports the Action on Hearing Loss lip reading campaign and their call for all hearing aid users to be referred to a lip reading class.

Mr Wells: I am supportive of the Action on Hearing Loss (AHL) lip reading campaign however it is important to note that not everyone who is prescribed a hearing aid would require or benefit from a lip reading intervention.

In addition, the Regional Strategy Implementation Group (RSIG), tasked with the implementation of specific actions contained in the Physical & Sensory Disability Strategy Action Plan (2012 – 2015), recommended that the Health and Social Care Board should commission lip reading teacher training to be delivered locally in Northern Ireland. This training has been commissioned and is due to commence in November 2014 with a class size of 12 candidates, 2 per HSC Trust and 2 places are allocated to AHL.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what measures are in place to monitor Health and Social Care Trusts to ensure that they comply with the agency ranking system when recruiting locum doctors.

Mr Wells: Procurement and Logistics Service within Business Service Organisation (BSO), in conjunction with Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts, has worked to establish a Medical and Dental Agency Workers Framework. The day to day operation of the Framework lies with HSC Trusts who have responsibility for the issuing of this guidance to the relevant managers within their organisation to ensure compliance when recruiting locum doctors from agencies.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome clinic in Belfast City Hospital has closed.

(AQW 37764/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust did not provide a commissioned service for CFS/ME patients. A non-commissioned CFS/ME clinic was offered by Dr Welby Henry in Belfast City Hospital from approximately 1986 until his retirement in early 2014. This clinic was provided on a 'special interest' basis.

Following Dr Henry's retirement, there were no staff with sufficient expertise to continue providing a CFS/ME clinic on this basis.

The Trust now provides an occupational therapist service for patients with a definitive diagnosis of Chronic Fatigue Syndrome from GPs in line with NICE guidelines.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37022/11-15, whether a complex case panel is only constituted to deal with complex child protection cases.

(AQW 37765/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust complex case panel is normally only convened to discuss 'complex child protection cases'.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline his proposals to support the Healthy Living Alliance.

Mr Wells: The Public Health Agency (PHA) currently invests £1.1m p.a. through contracts with 14 Healthy Living Centres (HLCs) for example in relation to physical activity, smoking cessation, mental health and wellbeing and suicide prevention.

The PHA places considerable value on its working relationship with the HLC Alliance, which represents the HLCs. Examples of the joint work between PHA and the Alliance include support for showcase events promoting programmes delivered by the HLCs, sharing learning across HLCs and exploring further opportunities for HLC delivery.

The Public Health Agency is obliged to ensure that all existing contracts are subject to appropriate procurement processes. Funding for existing providers for 14/15 and 15/16 has been confirmed, subject to satisfactory performance and related monitoring of existing contracts. In 2016/17 a regional and sub-regional tender process will be undertaken. An evaluation of community health initiatives, including HLCs, is currently being finalised and this report will help inform future commissioning, planning, impact and implementation.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what initiatives will be taken to reduce the current waiting times for orthopaedic surgery for people living in County Fermanagh.

Mr Wells: Over the last three years the demand for orthopaedic treatments in Northern Ireland has continued to increase. The changing demographic profile of the population, increasing demand for revision surgery and changing clinical practice continues to put increasing pressure on the service.

I have been advised by the Western Trust that it has introduced a number of initiatives to reduce waiting times for orthopaedic surgery including:

- increased pre-operative assessment to prevent cancellations, including dedicated anaesthetic roles;
- Introduction of Band 3 healthcare assistants to take patients to theatre, to prevent delays between cases;
- discussions with the local and Board commissioners regarding other roles that need commissioned: e.g. specialist anaesthetic roles to improve throughput, Kit Co-ordinators in theatres to prevent cancellations;
- Procurement of an imaging machine to allow high volume lists for joint injection to be carried out outside theatres; and
- Use of non-operative interventions for some procedures, e.g. Dupytrens injections

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail all legal costs incurred by the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland since its establishment.

(AQW 37789/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI) has advised that since its establishment in September 2012 it has incurred legal costs amounting to £9,171.54. This includes legal costs of £2,244.99 associated with the SBNI's statutory Case Management Review function and £6,926.55 associated with the ongoing Thematic Review directed by the Department.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37022/11-15, whether a complex case panel deals with a child with complex medical needs where there is no child protection issue.

(AQW 37816/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust complex case panel does not deal with children with complex medical needs where there is no child protection issue.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current average waiting time for GPs.

(AQW 37820/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not available.

As independent contractors, GPs are responsible for the day to day management of their Practice, including patient appointment arrangements

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of home safety checks which have been conducted by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service in each month of the last three years.

Mr Wells: The table below details the number of Home Fire Safety Checks conducted by NIFRS in each month of 2011/12, 2012/13, and 2013/14.

Month	Year

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current level of resource wastage in the Health Service, in relation to unused drugs and dietary supplements in hospital and residential care environments.

(AQW 37834/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have been advised by each of the HSC Trusts that they are fully aware of the need to minimise medicines wastage and a range of systems and initiatives are in place to keep wastage to a minimum. However, it is not possible to fully quantify the amount of wastage in relation to unused drugs and dietary supplements in hospital and residential care environments.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what financial support has been provided by his Department to assist public health initiatives in East Londonderry, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37835/11-15)

Mr Wells: This information is available on two levels -

- (i) direct public health investment in the Coleraine and Limavady areas specifically.
- (ii) funding, on a capitation basis, invested in Trust wide areas and accessible to the local population in East Londonderry. This would include for example training, public health awareness campaigns and local projects.

Table: Summary of Public Health Investment in East Londonderry 2012-15

Level	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15	Totals
Local Direct Investment	£126,814.00	£98,364.00	£86,834.00	£312,012.00
Trust Capitation Share Investment	£212,713.00	£197,821.00	£205,305.00	£615,839.00

These figures do not include wider investment in health and social care services, eg screening, immunisations and child health services which will also support public health, nor in regionally available programmes.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to the Chronic Pain Department at the Ulster Hospital, to detail (i) the current average waiting time for initial assessment; (ii) the current average waiting time for a review appointment; and (iii) whether clinical targets for repeat steroid injections required by patients are being met.
(AQW 37840/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has stated that, in relation to the Chronic Pain Department at the Ulster Hospital,

- (i) The average waiting time for initial assessment is 12 weeks.
- (ii) and (iii) The local clinical target for review of steroid treatment is six months. The average waiting time for a review appointment is 8.5 months. These patients are currently waiting between 4 and 14 months depending on the consultant's area of expertise.

The figures in the answer refer to the waiting time position as at the week beginning 20th October 2014.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the efforts which are being made to seek alternative sources of funding for the illustrative hub and spoke model within Transforming Your Care.

Mr Wells: The Lisburn and Newry primary care centre schemes are proceeding as Third Party Developments (3PD) to test how the 3PD approach might incentivise developers in the local market to achieve the required accommodation standards at a lower Whole Life Cost than would be the case using conventional capital funding.

The Southern and South Eastern Trusts, supported by HSCB and SIB are progressing these developments and we expect the procurement process for these schemes to move to preferred bidder status early in 2015 and subject to final contract negotiation and approval, begin construction by late 2015.

We have agreed with DFP that the evaluation of the procurement stages of these projects will be used to inform whether or not a similar 3PD approach can be used to finance the wider programme. In parallel with this process, my officials have been working closely with DFP and SIB to consider whether ring fenced financial transactions capital (FTC) funding can be used within a wider 3PD programme.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the decision taken by the Health and Social Care Board to cease elective care in private clinics in relation to (i) patient care; and (ii) waiting times for surgery.

Mr Wells: A decision was taken by the Health and Social Care Board in July 2014 to pause waiting list initiative arrangements pending clarification of the 2014/15 financial position. The Board wrote to independent sector providers on 1 October 2014 to say that pending further clarification of the 2014/15 financial position, no new patients would be transferred to the independent sector for assessment, diagnostics and/or treatment in this financial year.

I regret that the HSC Board had to take this measure however it is necessary to constrain spending in light of the significant financial pressures which my Department is facing. The HSC Board and its Local Commissioning Groups are continuing to work with the HSC Trusts to address shortfalls in elective capacity within the resources available. As I said in my statement to the Assembly on 14 October 2014, whilst the additional £80 million is most welcome, there will still be consequences for the provision of health and social care as it will simply not be possible to maintain current levels of service provision in the absence of all the required levels of funding. I will allocate the funding I have received to those areas that will minimise the impact on front line patient care and I intend to make those decisions shortly.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has received following the introduction of the latest 2014 Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme; and how this has been spent to fund new medicines.

Mr Wells: Returns to Northern Ireland from the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme (PPRS) which started on 1 January 2014 have totalled £3.53 million. The bulk of the return covers the period 1 January 2014 to 31 March 2014 and a small amount is a residual payment in respect of 2013.

The £3.53m has been used to off-set any increase in the cost of branded medicines in the period 1 January 2014 to 31 March 2014 and has already been included in the final budget position for the 2013/2014 financial year. The monies are therefore not available for redeployment.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration has been given to the NHS Pay Review Body's recommendations, including the actions that are being taken to implement the recommendations.

Mr Wells: The NHS Pay Review Body recommendations are being considered in the context of the current financial challenges alongside the need to maintain the safe and effective delivery of services for patients and clients. I am considering all options available to Northern Ireland before issuing my response to the NHS Pay Review Body 28th Report.

I have not personally discussed this issue with UK Government counterparts. My officials have, however, been involved in some discussion and have taken account of each administration's response to the NHS Pay Review Body recommendations to inform our considerations on the way forward.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36952/11-15, to detail the five ring-fenced projects that will not progress at the timescale initially estimated.

(AQW 37932/11-15)

Mr Wells: The five ring-fenced projects which were identified as not going to progress to the timescale initially estimated are:

- Regional Children's Hospital and Energy Centre at the Royal Victoria Hospital (RVH) (£10.45m)
- Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) Logistics Support Centre (£2.6m)
- Wind Turbine at the Causeway Hospital (£1.2m)
- Paediatric Ward and Ambulatory Unit at the Craigavon Area Hospital (£0.5m)
- Paediatric Centre of Excellence at the Daisy Hill Hospital (£0.5m)

The largest of these is the RVH Children's Hospital. The original 2014-15 expenditure profile for this £223m project was made in June 2013 before the business case was finalised in February 2014 and it proved to be an over-estimate of expenditure in the first year as the project was in its early stages. This project remains on schedule to be completed in 2020-21.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the administrative costs incurred by his Department in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37976/11-15)

Mr Wells: Total administrative expenditure by my Department over the last 3 years was as follows:

- 2011/12      £29,335k
- 2012/13      £29,685k
- 2013/14      £29,979k

This relates to the Department alone and excludes the equivalent costs in sponsored bodies.

Department of Justice

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 36645/11-15, to state the instances that these in-cell use computers, or any others, have been misused by a prisoner, including non-approved adaptations, internet accessed or any other use which is not permitted.

(AQW 37468/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Between September 2011 and October 2014 there have been seven reports of misuse by prisoners outlined in the table below.

2012	3 incidents of unauthorised access to the internet
2012	1 incident of unauthorised access to a user account, resulting in unauthorised access to the internet
2013	1 incident of unauthorised access to the internet
2013	1 incident of unauthorised access to a user account
2014	1 incident of unauthorised access to the internet

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice why the terminology 'lethal foetal abnormality' is used in his current consultation on abortion, rather than 'fatal foetal abnormality'; and what are the resulting imports of the chosen terminology.

(AQW 37476/11-15)

Mr Ford: As explained in the glossary of terms on page 4 of the consultation paper, lethal foetal abnormality is to be read as synonymous with terminal or fatal abnormality/condition. One term has been used for consistency throughout the document but the Department regards their use as interchangeable.

The consultation focuses on the criminal law in relation to abortion in two specific areas. It does not seek to open a debate on the wider issues concerning abortion. Therefore, only responses, or parts of responses, relating to those aspects of the law identified in the consultation will be considered in deciding on future legislative proposals. This is explained in the introduction on page 3.

As regards petitions, they will be accepted, and I will carefully consider them in the wider context of information and evidence, alongside the various views provided by respondents. However, this is not an opinion poll and although the number of signatures to a petition will be noted, they will not count as individual responses.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice why responses to the abortion consultation which object in principle to abortion are to be ruled inadmissible, even if additionally they raise issues specific to the identified topics in the consultation.
(AQW 37478/11-15)

Mr Ford: As explained in the glossary of terms on page 4 of the consultation paper, lethal foetal abnormality is to be read as synonymous with terminal or fatal abnormality/condition. Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether submitted petitions in response to the consultation on abortion will be accepted; and if so, whether each signature will be counted as a response to the consultation.
(AQW 37479/11-15)

Mr Ford: As explained in the glossary of terms on page 4 of the consultation paper, lethal foetal abnormality is to be read as synonymous with terminal or fatal abnormality/condition. One term has been used for consistency throughout the document but the Department regards their use as interchangeable.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission is running out of funds for Legal Aid payments and warnings have been issued as to delays, including a number of claims submitted in this financial year not being considered and paid until 2015/16.

Mr Ford: The Executive faces a challenging financial environment. Following budget cuts in the June Monitoring Round, in-year cuts have been applied across all justice organisations including legal aid expenditure.

In response to these financial pressures, the Legal Services Commission adjusted its payment profile to live within the available resources. However, I have successfully bid for additional resources which have allowed the original profile to be restored and have informed the Law Society and Bar Council.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how many anti-social behaviour orders have been applied for since 2004, broken down by (a) year; and (b) local council.

Mr Ford: The number of applications made for Anti-Social Behaviour Orders, by Local Government District of defendant from 2007 to September 2014P, is shown in the table below.

Identification of applications for Anti-social Behaviour Orders prior to 2007 would require a manual trawl of court records and would therefore incur a disproportionate cost.

Source: Integrated Court Operations System (ICOS)

P 2014 data is currently provisional and may be subject to change.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether, and by what agencies, information is obtained in Northern Ireland from The Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre, or has a failure to extend the operation of National Crime Agency impeded the flow of such information.

(AQW 37555/11-15)

Mr Ford: The PSNI are able to access information and advice from the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre, which is an integral part of the National Crime Agency (NCA). What is missing, however, is access to operational support. Unless the Assembly agrees to a legislative consent motion, and the Westminster Parliament passes related legislation, then the NCA will not have this ability. Clearly that places the PSNI at a distinct disadvantage compared to other police services in the United Kingdom. This is especially relevant given the current pressures on the police budget.

Discussions are ongoing with the main political parties and others to seek to reach agreement on a way forward regarding the NCA.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether he was aware in advance of the letters in September and October 2014, to the legal profession from the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission, warning of a funding shortfall in Legal Aid; (ii) if so whether he approved these letters; and (iii) if not has he now been furnished with the correspondence.

Mr Ford: In July I commissioned all of the spending areas in my Department to prepare for reductions in budget due to in-year cuts. As part of this work, and following the outcome of the June Monitoring Round, the budget available for the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (NILSC) was reduced. The Chief Executive of NILSC wrote to the legal profession advising of the impact of the revised budget. I support the NILSC in taking this step.

I have been kept fully briefed by my officials on the impact of cuts across the justice system, the on-going pressures within the legal aid budget and the actions taken by the NILSC to live within the revised budget allocation. I have been provided with copies of the correspondence. I have also met with representatives of the Bar Council and the Law Society to discuss the implications of the potential budget shortfall. However, I have successfully bid for additional resources which will alleviate the potential impact.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether people tasked with compiling pre-sentence reports routinely verify what they are told by defendants on whom reports are based, particularly in relation to personal and financial circumstances, medical assertions and separate pending court cases.

(AQW 37609/11-15)

Mr Ford: In the preparation of pre-sentence reports, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland will liaise with the Police Service of Northern Ireland Investigating Officer, general practitioners and any other relevant services to substantiate information provided by defendants. When attending for interview, defendants are required to produce verification of financial circumstances. Through an arrangement with the Public Prosecution Service, staff have access to the Criminal Records viewer, which is routinely reviewed to determine if there are separate pending court cases.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the disposal of Bangor courthouse.

Mr Ford: In May 2014 the Northern Ireland Executive formally approved delivery of a Community Asset Transfer (CAT) policy as a priority within the Executive's Programme for Government 2011/15. A demonstration Programme has been established by Development Trusts NI (DTNI), a body appointed as the delivery partner to implement CAT. Bangor Courthouse is one of the eight pilot projects DTNI is using to test the policy framework. My Department is working with Department of Social Development and DTNI colleagues to progress this programme.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice how his Department is working with relevant bodies, including the Irish Football Association, to address violent and anti-social behaviour by football fans attending Irish league matches.

Mr Ford: My Department worked closely with the Irish Football Association and other sporting bodies in the development and creation of Part 4 of the Justice Act (Northern Ireland) 2011. Part 4 provides a package of powers to regulate conduct at sporting events including offences around throwing articles, offensive chanting, pitch incursion and possession of fireworks.

The IFA was particularly supportive of the football banning order provisions also created in the Act and undertook to support these with its own Code of Conduct. By way of IFA training programmes my Department was involved in briefing soccer clubs on the legislation. Giving effect to these powers is now an operational matter for the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

In addition to this legislative work, through my Department's Policing and Community Safety Partnerships (PCSPs) network, a number of sports-based diversionary and education initiatives are delivered in conjunction with a number of bodies.

For example, with District Councils, Churches and voluntary bodies, PCSPs help provide Midnight and Twilight Soccer programmes; cage soccer and sports facilities; and residential courses, many on a cross-community basis to divert young people from anti-social behaviour.

Many of these projects are jointly funded with assistance by the IFA, churches, voluntary bodies and PCSPs.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he will conduct a review or audit into how the NI Legal Services Commission is facing a funding shortfall in respect of Legal Aid, with a view to establishing what is causing the drain on resources, to identify how this can be addressed, particularly in relation to the eligibility criteria of Legal Aid and how robustly and routinely the criteria is enforced.

Mr Ford: Legal aid is a demand led service providing access to justice to those in greatest need. On devolution, I inherited a situation where the demands on legal aid outstripped the available budget. My legal aid reform programme has delivered a number of measures which have reduced costs and further steps are being implemented. This will include consideration of eligibility for legal aid.

Initially I prioritised reform of criminal legal aid and since devolution I have introduced measures to deliver some £20m of annual savings in criminal legal aid. Legal aid expenditure, however, continues to rise.

In order to bring expenditure within budget, I am now focussing on a number of reforms to reduce civil legal aid with the aim of introducing a more cost-effective Justice system without compromising the principle of Access to Justice.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether unpaid offender levies are subject to a fine default review, as is currently underway for the outstanding monetary penalties handed down at courts.

(AQW 37677/11-15)

Mr Ford: All unpaid offender levies for which the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service has responsibility for collection will be subject to a Fine Default Hearing.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department has any plans to discuss with Westminster colleagues any new legislation aimed at combatting internet trolling.

(AQW 37692/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am aware of the Justice Secretary's proposed legislative changes for England and Wales in relation to malicious communications or "internet trolling". My officials are already in touch with their Westminster equivalents as to the detail. As a devolved issue any proposal to change the law in Northern Ireland would be subject to public consultation and consideration by the Assembly. I will be keeping developments in Westminster under review.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice (i) how the matters originally listed for hearing on 9 June 2014 at Newtownards Court under Proceedings ID 14/0353 were settled; (ii) if the matters were settled between the parties, was the Court advised of the basis of settlement; (iii) if so, when; and (iv) under what terms did the parties advise the Court that the matter was being settled.

Mr Ford: Case ID 14/0353 was not listed for hearing at Newtownards court on 9 June 2014.

The charges brought in Case ID 14/0353 were withdrawn on 21 February 2014 after the defendant accepted a caution.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37143/11-15, how it was determined that the provision of an in-house translation service would cost more than the current system of £1.3m per annum; and, given the sums paid in E and F District, how an in-house service is deemed too costly.

(AQW 37737/11-15)

Mr Ford: The procurement of the translation service for the criminal justice sector commenced with the preparation and approval of a business case which set out a number of options, associated costs and a preferred option. The in-house option of employing translators was considered too costly and logistically difficult to manage. Salaries, retainers or fees would have to be paid to a large number of interpreters across a range of languages and there would have been a requirement to have a team of staff in place to manage bookings and ensure payments were made. The business case was approved by the Department of Justice and the Department of Finance and Personnel.

The Police Service of Northern Ireland also considered the potential to employ interpreters directly, before the previous contract was let, but rejected this as impractical and uneconomical.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's requirements are met from the Northern Ireland Civil Service Interpreting Contract, which is based on the same hourly rates and provided by the same contractor as the DOJ contract. Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) was the lead in both contracts and DOJ has been in regular contact with CPD experts throughout the process.

Responsibility for this contract transferred to the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service on 30 September 2014. NICTS has recently approached DHSSPS to discuss service delivery and contract management on the interpreting contract.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37143/11-15, what discussions his departmental officials have had with officials in the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in relation to translator costs.

(AQW 37739/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the costs awarded against the Police Federation of NI in relation to the Post-traumatic stress disorder class action, including when the ruling was made and how much has been paid to date.
(AQW 37809/11-15)

Mr Ford: This issue is outside of my remit and is a matter for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland's Central Committee and its members. You may therefore wish to direct your question to the PFNI.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why a member of staff was allowed to withdraw from the Prison Service Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme in March 2012.

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to my response to AQW/35324/11-15.

545 staff formally applied to the Scheme. 520 staff left under the terms of the Scheme, with 25 withdrawals for a range of reasons.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice how many staff signed up to the Prison Service Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme.

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to my response to AQW/35324/11-15.

545 staff formally applied to the Scheme. 520 staff left under the terms of the Scheme, with 25 withdrawals for a range of reasons.

Department for Regional Development

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to provide lighting along the Comber Greenway.

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The Comber Greenway is a well used largely traffic-free route which continues to attract both walkers and people who use the bicycle for leisure and commuting. It forms part of Route 99 of the National Cycle Network between Titanic Quarter, Belfast, and Comber. A small part of this route is 'on road' and already illuminated, whilst the remainder is off-road.

In order to maximise the use of the Greenway and to promote and encourage people to use the bicycle throughout the year, there may be a case for lighting improvements on, at least, part of the route. Lighting may not be appropriate along the entire route for aesthetic and conservation reasons. Furthermore, the needs of adjacent properties and neighbours will also have to be considered. Following the conclusion of the public consultation exercise on the draft Bicycle Strategy my Department's Cycling Unit will consider whether this should be included in the proposed Bicycle Strategy delivery plan.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total budget allocation for gritting in winter 2014/15; and how this compares with 2013/14.

Mr Kennedy: The total budget allocation for TransportNI's winter service programme for the 2013/14 season was £6.2 million. This figure includes all aspects of the winter service provision, including snow clearance and the provision and maintenance of salt bins and grit piles.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Translink has spent on hospitality in each of the last three financial years.

Mr Kennedy: The following are the relevant statistics in relation to hospitality extended by Translink:

Year	£
2011/12	30,716

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many job losses for outside contractors have resulted from the reduction in his Department's maintenance budget.

(AQW 37414/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As you will be aware, following the announcement on June monitoring, my Department's Resource Budgets, from which day-to-day maintenance of the road network is funded, have been cut. My Department no longer has sufficient funding to pay contractors and as a result has had no option other than to stop issuing new work instructions to the Department's contractors, who currently undertake a wide range of day-to-day maintenance activities.

I acknowledge this will have a detrimental impact on a number of companies and their staff and will have wider consequences both now and in the longer term, however, difficult decisions have had to be made regarding the deployment of my Department's limited resources. I appreciate the difficult situation which they and others find themselves in, but the Department simply cannot continue to spend money which it doesn't have.

There is little doubt these budget cuts will have an impact on the workload of external contractors, however, I do not have any information as to whether or not this has resulted in actual job losses to date.

I have met with representatives of the Quarry Products Association and plan to meet representatives of the Construction Employers Federation over the next few weeks to discuss a number of issues affecting the industry and I anticipate jobs will be one of the issues discussed.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the York Street Interchange road scheme.

Mr Kennedy: Design of the preferred option for the York Street Interchange, along with the associated work to inform and prepare the Statutory Orders, is progressing to schedule with publication of the draft Statutory Orders programmed for later this financial year.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36516/11-15, to list the dates on which the functionality of cats eyes on the A4 from Dungannon to Ballygawley was inspected since the road opened; and for his assessment of their current state.

(AQW 37470/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The A4 from Dungannon to Ballygawley is maintained on behalf of the Department by Amey Lagan Roads Limited and its Operator, Amey Government, under the DBFO Package 2 Contract. This section of road opened on 17th November 2010.

Inspections of the road studs were carried out in November 2012, December 2013 and most recently during week commencing 6 October 2014.

The condition of the road studs during the inspections of November 2012 and December 2013 was excellent, however, in the most recent inspection their condition had deteriorated significantly to the extent that remedial works are now required. These remedial works are currently being programmed by the DBFO Company.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development, given that his Department has been allocated additional funding through the October Monitoring Round, whether he intends to reinstate work to clear gullies and fix broken street lights.

Mr Kennedy: The additional funding of £4.5 million Resource DEL (cash) allocated to my Department as part of the October Monitoring Round is necessary to meet the Executive's commitment to concessionary fares. As such the allocation does not provide any additional funding for roads maintenance and street lighting repairs.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development how many street lights in Co Fermanagh are currently out of order.

(AQW 37472/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The information requested is not available in the format requested as my Department does not maintain its street lighting records by County boundaries.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much NI Railways has in its cash reserves.

(AQW 37495/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Railways as a business does not generate cash surpluses and runs at a loss. From time to time it may have surplus balances in its bank account due to timing differences on amounts owed to and from other Translink group companies. It is important to consider NI Railways as part of the NITHC group consolidated accounts and its net assets will be included in these group accounts. Net assets for NI Railways at 30 March 2014 were £4.5 million.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the management structure of Translink.

Mr Kennedy: This structure is outlined in the organisation chart below.

Management Structure of NI Railways

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the management structure of NI Railways. (AQW 37498/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This structure is outlined in the organisation chart below. The Infrastructure Executive also reports to the Chief Operating Officer and this provides infrastructure support to maintain and upgrade the rail network.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36599/11-15 and following the implementation of the passing loop between Coleraine and Londonderry, what scale of increase does he expect over the next ten years. (AQW 37514/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Installation of the passing loop will in itself not affect ridership, however this measure will provide the necessary infrastructure capacity to operate an hourly service and this, if implemented, should stimulate growth.

Experience in Northern Ireland Rail in respect of service enhancement from near two-hourly frequency to hourly frequency (previous service enhancements between Coleraine and Belfast) is that it generated circa 25% increase in ridership within one year of implementation and potentially in excess of 50% in the first 10 years.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether NI Railways plans to develop Adelaide Halt. (AQW 37545/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink is shortly going to carry out a feasibility study for the redevelopment of Adelaide halt. The main aims are to.

- Improve halt access and passenger facilities
- Make improvements to accessibility
- Increase platform capacity for 6-car train sets
- Improve operational efficiency and performance
- Improve the public perception of the halt within a clean, safe, secure and welcoming environment
- Improve corporate image
- Ensure service continuity with minimum disruption during construction

- Improve access/integration with proposed pedestrian path to Windsor Park Football Stadium.

Department for Social Development

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development whether the decontamination works at Fort George will be completed before the site is handed over to Derry City and Strabane District Council in April 2015.

(AQW 35952/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): Decontamination works on Fort George cannot start until outline planning permission is secured for the Fort George Development Framework. My Department is working closely with the Department of the environment and the Department of Regional Development to resolve the outstanding issues. I am hopeful that the outline planning permission will be secured before the end of 2014.

The decontamination works themselves are expected to take between 12 and 18 months to procure and complete. Since the work will not be able to start until early 2015 at the earliest, it follows that the work will not be completed before 31 March 2015. I hope that the excellent arrangements and relationships which have been established between the new Council and my Department will continue as we work together to determine the strategy and timetable for the remediation of Fort George.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the communities identified as being 'Small Pockets of Deprivation'; (ii) the size of the population affected; and (iii) the funding allocation to support the development of each area, broken down by constituency.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what degree of importance he will attach to the ongoing issue of recruitment levels within the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in light of the community background of recruits over a number of years.

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that it has currently embarked on a significant period of transformation not only in relation to the way in which it delivers its services and manages its business, but also in relation to staff realignment to ensure workforce structures, existing staff and potential employees meet and have the requisite skill sets to ensure optimum efficiency going forward.

At the forefront of this journey, equality of opportunity in relation to employment remains an important priority for the Housing Executive and as such it continues to operate its Appointments and Promotions Policy within the Northern Ireland equality framework in relation to the Fair Employment and Treatment (NI) Order 1998, the Fair Employment (Monitoring) Regulations (NI) 1999 and the principles established by the Section 75 Regulations contained in the Northern Ireland Act 1998. The organisation complies with the recommendations of good practice as contained in the associated Codes of Practice relating to discrimination and equality of opportunity and these are reflected with regard to all recruitment activity undertaken. All recruitment exercises complement the organisations Affirmative Action Strategy.

The main focus of that strategy, which has been developed and agreed with the Equality Commission, has been to implement measures specifically created to encourage applications from members of the Protestant community who are currently under represented in areas of the Housing Executives workforce. The Strategy focuses on four key areas, i.e. Recruitment; Community Outreach; a Schools Programme; and Research.

The Housing Executive has assured me that it will continue to work within the principles of equality of opportunity with appointments based on merit, implementing its affirmative action mechanisms where appropriate to ensure that the community background of its workforce is demonstrative of the Northern Ireland Economically Active population.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many (i) Housing Association; and (ii) Housing Executive tenants have been subjected to court proceedings for alleged anti-social behaviour in the last three years.

Mr Storey: In relation to (i) Table 1 below details the number of Housing Association tenants subjected to court proceedings for alleged anti-social behaviour in the last three years.

In relation to (ii) Table 2 below details the number of Housing Executive tenants subjected to court proceedings over the last three years, including the number of cases in which possession of a tenancy was achieved or an injunction granted.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what assessment was made by Triangle Housing Association of the composition of the Coleraine waiting list when determining the house size of the twenty home development currently under construction.

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that in May 2013 Triangle Housing Association was nominated to develop surplus Housing Executive land at Lisnablagh, Harpurs Hill, Coleraine. In January 2014 the association received a letter of support from the Housing Executive which contained an assessment of need and details of new build requirements for the Harpurs Hill common landlord area. In addition, the Housing Executive identified a number of applicants with complex needs who required bespoke accommodation. Triangle Housing Association was asked to design an appropriate housing solution to meet the special requirements of these individuals and their families, following an options appraisal and based on recommendations specified within the Occupational Therapist report.

Taking account of these factors, the Housing Executive's Area Planner confirmed support for the following housing mix:

- 4 x 2 person, 1 bed apartments
- 8 x 3 person 2 bed houses
- 5 x 5 person 3 bed houses
- 3 x 4 person 3 bed wheelchair bungalows (for named applicants)

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development on how many occasions the Northern Ireland Housing Executive have sought an injunction restraining any person from engaging in conduct causing a nuisance or annoyance using their premises for immoral or illegal purposes or entering such residential premises since the Housing (Northern Ireland ) Order 2003 came into operation.

(AQW 37350/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that since the introduction of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 2003 they have sought and obtained 33 injunctions. The injunctions relate to their involvement in attempting to resolve cases of any form of anti-social behaviour.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether he supports the Homeless Action Charter; and if so, what steps are being taken to implement its recommendations.

Mr Storey: I have read this Charter and I believe that the Four Steps referred to in it are currently being addressed through either the Housing Executive's Homelessness Strategy 2012 – 17 or through the Department's Fundamental Review of Allocations.

The two main steps directly relevant to the Housing Executive of creating individual support pathways and addressing repeat homelessness are dealt with through a recent prioritization of homelessness prevention measures in their Homelessness Strategy 2012-17. They have in place a range of individual support pathways which will prevent homelessness including repeat homelessness and reduce the length of time that people experience homelessness.

The Supporting People programme funds a range of support providers to assist households who are experiencing homelessness or who are at risk of homelessness. Support providers focus on providing person centred support, through individual needs assessment, support planning and client involvement in service delivery and governance.

A Housing Options approach is being introduced which will ensure that housing and support solutions are found for many people who present to the Housing Executive in housing need without homelessness resulting or the household requiring temporary accommodation.

The Housing Executive has introduced a Private Rented Sector Access Scheme which provides a viable accommodation alternative to anyone in housing need by allowing them access to affordable housing of a good standard in the private sector without the need for large upfront deposits. They are also piloting a Housing First service to tackle serial homelessness among the most chronic and entrenched homeless population. The service provides individuals with wrap around support and other services in their own independent accommodation rather than in a room in a hostel.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what proportion of homeless people presented as homeless on more than one occasion, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 37365/11-15)

Mr Storey: The statistics below outline the proportion of homeless people who presented to the Housing Executive as homeless on more than one occasion from 2008/09 to present. In relation to 2010/11 and 2011/12, the statistics are unavailable due to work being carried out to introduce a changeover in computer recording mechanisms within the Housing Executive.

Year	Proportion of Repeat Homeless Presentations
2009/10	8.4%
2013/14	13%

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are plans to correlate additional social housing provision with areas of the highest levels of homelessness.

(AQW 37368/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive's Strategic Guidelines set out priorities for the provision of additional social housing. These Guidelines, which are reviewed on an annual basis, are in place to target new social housing to where it is needed most. The Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP) comprises schemes to target social housing requirements across a wide range of different needs. The SHDP is shaped by the Housing Executive's Strategic Guidelines which take into account waiting list statistics, in particular levels of housing stress, including homelessness, to ensure that resources are equitably distributed amongst the various competing needs.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development why the 'Cavity Walls Insulation Report' by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive omitted a recommendations section.

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive released the Cavity Wall Insulation Report by the South Eastern Regional College (SERC) on the understanding that it is the outcome of a small scale, exploratory research study which aimed to provide an initial indication of the quality and performance of the cavity wall insulation inserted into the cavities of Housing Executive dwellings since the 1980s.

It did not include the recommendations as the Housing Executive did not accept them and believes that more work is required. A much larger survey has been commissioned as part of a Stock Condition Survey of Housing Executive properties which commenced in the Autumn of 2014. This will inform the future strategy and programmes required to address the issues raised in this report.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the proposals to increase the level of information provided to homeless applicants by the Housing Executive, including a full breakdown of points awarded.

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has a statutory duty under the Housing (NI) Order, 1988 to provide advice and assistance to anyone who presents as homeless. They do this through guidance at interview stage, letters, printed guidance and referrals to other advice agencies such as the Housing Rights Service.

As part of its strategy to prevent homelessness the Housing Executive has begun to introduce a Housing Options approach to how it delivers its frontline services. Housing Options will ensure information is available to applicants in a range of forms and will give Housing Executive customers an increased level of information on the housing choices and support available for them relevant to their individual needs

The Housing Options approach focuses on the specific needs of the individual or household and features early preventative intervention. It explores all possible housing options including social renting, private renting, owner-occupation and remaining in current accommodation. Frontline services will assess an individual or household's needs and draw upon a range of expert services to help meet those needs.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are any plans to review or uplift the number of points awarded to a housing applicant as a result of living in hostel accommodation.

(AQW 37416/11-15)

Mr Storey: The current Housing Selection Scheme is operated by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE). Under this Scheme, Interim Accommodation points will be awarded to a statutory homeless applicant who has been residing for six months in accommodation provided to him / her in discharge of the Housing Executive's interim duty under the Housing (N.I.) Order, 1988. These points will be in addition to 'Homeless / Threatened with Homelessness-Full Duty Applicant Points'.

In 2011, the NIHE consulted on a number of changes to the Scheme, including:

- whether additional interim accommodation points should be awarded after further periods spent in temporary accommodation; and
- whether any such additional points should be awarded to:
  - statutory homeless applicants placed in temporary accommodation arranged by the Housing Executive only;
  - statutory homeless applicants who are either placed by the Housing Executive or make their own alternative temporary accommodation arrangements; or
  - all statutory homeless applicants.

The proposed changes are still under consideration pending the fundamental review of social housing allocations policy, which is being led by my Department.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are target times for completing an assessment of housing need for homeless applicants to the Housing Executive.

(AQW 37419/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that it has the following two key target times when completing an assessment of housing/homeless need for homeless applicants:-

- 20 working days to complete a housing needs assessment after receipt of a housing application
- 33 working days to complete a homeless assessment after receipt of a homeless application.

The Homelessness assessment target is set at 33 days in line with UK DCLG (Department for Communities and Local Government) Guidelines. The longer timeframe reflects the statutory requirement to carry out such investigations as necessary to determine if the applicant is:

- Homeless
- Eligible for assistance

- In Priority Need
- Unintentionally homeless

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development to provide a breakdown of the costs of accommodating members of the Traveller community who have moved into temporary accommodation in Rathenraw, Antrim.

(AQW 37446/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that it has spent £4,186.76 to date accommodating members of the Traveller community who have moved into temporary accommodation in Rathenraw, Antrim. The following is a breakdown of the costs:

- Stand pipe £2,694.76
- Skip hire £450
- Portaloo £1,042.00

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development what funding opportunities exist for the implementation of projects within the new Millisle Village Plan.

(AQW 37487/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department for Social Development does not currently have any funding programmes open for application.

The Department's urban regeneration activities are restricted to settlements which have a population of 4,500 or more. According to the most recently published data at settlement level (NISRA Settlement Population Statistics 2008) the population of Millisle is 2,089 persons. Millisle is therefore classified as a rural settlement and does not fulfil the criteria for inclusion in any of my Department's funding programmes which seek to address spatial deprivation.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many accommodation units in North Down owned by Housing Associations have (i) one; (ii) two; (iii) three; and (iv) four or more bedrooms.

(AQW 37500/11-15)

Mr Storey: Housing Associations have reported the following accommodation units in North Down:

- One bedroom – 615
- Two bedroom – 580
- Three bedroom – 129
- Four or more bedrooms - 28

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many accommodation units in North Down owned by the Housing Executive have (i) one; (ii) two; (iii) three; and (iv) four or more bedrooms.

(AQW 37501/11-15)

Mr Storey:

No. of bedrooms	1	2	3	4 or more	Total
Total	473	1061	1035	51	2620

The Housing Executive has provided the table below which gives a breakdown of the bedroom sizes of properties owned by them in North Down.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant AQW 36466/11-15, to detail the size of the dwellings that will be completed in Coleraine in the next two years.

(AQW 37513/11-15)

Mr Storey: The size of the dwellings that will be completed in Coleraine Town in the next two years are as follows;

Scheme	Housing Association	Units	One bed	Two bed	Three bed	Four bed	Completion year
55 Mountsandel Road, Coleraine	Fold	5	0	5	0	0	2014/15
Harpurs Hill, Coleraine	Triangle	20	4	8	8	8	2015/16
Society Street, Coleraine	Fold	22	12	10	0	0	2015/16
31a Hazelbank Road, Coleraine	Apex Housing	11	0	7	4	0	2016/17

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36679/11-15, whether it is intended that the post of Director of Transformation will be filled; and if so, to detail (i) when; and (ii) how.

(AQW 37558/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that there is no current intention to fill the post of Director of Transformation.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many accommodation units in North Down owned by the Housing Executive have one bedroom, broken down by District Office area.

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that their Bangor District office which covers North Down currently manages 473 one bedroomed properties.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many (i) one; and (ii) two bedroom accommodation units in North Down owned by (a) the Housing Executive; and (b) Housing Associations are specifically for allocation to the elderly.

(AQW 37564/11-15)

Mr Storey: In relation to (i) the Housing Executive has advised that they do not have any accommodation in the North Down area which is specifically for allocation to the elderly. The vast majority of Housing Executive accommodation is classified as general needs and can be allocated to any household composition. However, the rules governing allocations under the Housing Selection Scheme seek to match offers of accommodation to the specific needs of the applicant, taking into consideration the characteristics of the dwelling – ground floor, bungalow or level access accommodation and the locational features of the dwelling such as a block of accommodation which has been designed for applicants over 35 years. Many elderly applicants often have mobility and functionality needs and are often considered for such dwellings. As a general rule sheltered accommodation is normally allocated to older persons.

In relation to (ii) Housing Associations have reported the following number of one and two bedroom accommodation units in North Down which are specifically for allocation to the elderly:

- One bedroom units - 497
- Two bedroom units - 423

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in North Down have purchased their homes from the Housing Executive in each of the last five years.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Social Development what help is available to groups who wish to set up social enterprises.

Mr Storey: My Department has a Programme for Government commitment to 'support social enterprise growth across the broader voluntary and community sector.' Two social economy growth pilot projects are currently being supported by the Department in Lisburn and Omagh. The evaluation of these projects will inform future priorities in this area and provide an indication of how social economy growth can be supported across the Sector. In addition, one of the key priorities of the Neighbourhood Renewal Programme is 'Economic Renewal', which seeks to develop economic activity in the most deprived neighbourhoods. Groups setting up social enterprises within Neighbourhood Renewal areas may qualify for Neighbourhood Renewal funding.

In conjunction with DETI and Invest NI, my Department is piloting a Delivering Social Change signature project for OFMDFM to establish 11 Social Enterprise Incubation Hubs across Northern Ireland. These hubs deliver business support to anyone wishing to develop a social enterprise idea by providing training, hot desk facilities and test trading opportunities. Hubs are currently operational in Belfast, Londonderry, Ballymena, Enniskillen, Strabane, Lurgan, Lisburn and Downpatrick.

I also understand that Invest NI provides support to groups who wish to set up social enterprises through its Social Entrepreneurship Programme and that its Job Fund also offers support by way of a Social Enterprise Employment Grant and Franchise Programme.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Social Development how many commercial units have been transferred to community organisations to set up social enterprises in the last five years.

Mr Storey: My Department has not transferred any commercial units to community organisations in the last five years. The Housing Executive has advised that it currently has 34 commercial units let to community groups at a nominal rent charge. Of those, 12 have had their leases renewed in the past five years.

These units have been let to community groups where there was no commercial demand and are used for a variety of community purposes including social enterprises.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) location of neighbourhood wardens employed in North Down.

(AQW 37618/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that in relation to:

(i) There are two Neighbourhood Wardens employed to cover North Down.

(ii) One Neighbourhood Warden covers:

- Hollywood
- Kilcooley
- Clandeboye
- Jubilee and
- Fern Grove

The other Warden covers:

- Crawfordsburn
- Groomsport
- Whitehill
- Breezemount and
- Bloomfield/Balloo/Rathgill

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the timetable for the remaining installation of double glazing in North Down.

(AQW 37619/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that two double glazing schemes went on site on 13 October 2014 and they include all 432 Housing Executive dwellings in North Down which still have single glazing. These schemes are due to be completed by March 2015.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on decontamination works at Fort George.

Mr Storey: Decontamination works on Fort George cannot start until Outline Planning Permission is secured for the Fort George Development Framework. My Department is working closely with the Department of the Environment and the Department of Regional Development to resolve the outstanding issues. I am hopeful that the Outline Planning Permission will be secured before the end of 2014.

The decontamination works themselves are expected to take between 12 and 18 months to procure and complete. I hope that the excellent arrangements and relationships which have been established between the new Council and my Department will continue as we work together to determine the strategy and timetable for the remediation of Fort George.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the funding that their Department, and its arm's-length bodies, invested in East Belfast between May 2011 and May 2014.

(AQW 35940/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): Between May 2011 and May 2014, OFMDFM invested £478,085 in East Belfast.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what departmental services they have made available to the public via the post office network.

(AQW 36018/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM has no public services that it could appropriately deliver via the post office network.

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail (i) what consultation has taken place regarding the Household Energy and Thermal (HEaT) Efficiency Programme; (ii) what future consultation will take place regarding the HEaT Programme; and (iii) the (a) invitees and (b) attendees at any consultation events.

(AQW 36735/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness:

- (i) Consultation has taken place with a wide range of stakeholders including householders, sector representative groups, insulation and heating contractors, product manufacturers, financial institutions, utilities, the Utility Regulator, the Housing Executive, Housing Associations, and Government Departments including DSD, DFP, DETI, DEL and DARD.
- (ii) There are no immediate plans for any future consultations, however, this will be kept under review.
- (iii) The consultation with householders involved a representative sample of over 600 households. Invitations for industry consultation events held in July 2014 were available through the eSourcingNI portal. In addition, there was a general notification published on the Central Procurement Directorate's website. In addition to 600 householders, some 47 companies were represented at two industry consultation events.

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by their Department which (i) they have identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

(AQW 36955/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department has submitted the following three inescapable bids in October Monitoring:

- £1.341m - Victims and Survivors Service;
- £1.3m - Hillsborough Sites
- £0.376m - Exchange loss on EU Peace III programme claims

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline their plans to reassess the designation of Social Investment Zones in order to allow for changes in need since May 2012; and what criteria an area is required to meet in order to be considered eligible for social investment funding.

(AQW 37020/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: From the outset our approach to the Social Investment Fund (SIF) has been bottom up and community led so that the projects have the support of the communities they are seeking to help. All SIF projects have therefore been identified and prioritised according to need across communities by the nine Social Investment Zone Steering Groups.

The area planning process, completed in February 2013, has culminated with funding commitments to twenty three projects worth £34.4 million. These projects, and those others prioritised within the funding allocations in November 2013, have been and continue to go through a rigorous assessment process which includes consideration of evidence of need.

There are therefore no plans to reassess the area plans or projects proposed at this stage, but rather the focus is on moving to expedite delivery on the ground.

Details of the SIF eligibility criteria are available on the OFMDFM website at <http://www.ofmdfmi.gov.uk/index/delivering-social-change/social-investment-fund.htm>

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will place a copy of the PEACE IV and INTERREG V draft programmes, as submitted to the EU Commission, in the Assembly library.

(AQW 37072/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: As the draft programmes have not yet been finalised and are subject to ongoing discussions with the EU Commission, it would be inappropriate to place them in the Assembly Library.

Mr Dunne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the planned investment of £365,000 through the Social Investment Fund to the 3G sports pitch in Kilcooley, Bangor.

(AQW 37217/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The 3G sports pitch at Kilcooley, Bangor was submitted by the Social Investment Fund (SIF) South Eastern Zone Steering Group as part of their Community Operated Sports Facilities cluster.

This cluster project is continuing to be considered for funding through the formal economic appraisal process and officials will continue to update the Steering Group as it progresses.

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) for a breakdown of their Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether they will deposit a copy of their Department's bid in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

(AQW 37299/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness:

(i) The Department submitted the following bids in October Monitoring:

- £3.076m - Victims and Survivors Service - to meet a number of commitments in the Victims Support and Individual Needs programmes;
- £1.300m – Hillsborough Sites - to meet running costs eg Security, Maintenance;
- £0.376m – Exchange loss on EU claims; and

On behalf of all departments responsible for Delivering Social Change programmes, OFMDFM submitted a central bid of £7.15m.

(ii) The bids from the list above that were categorised as inescapable are:

- £1.341m - Victims and Survivors Service - to meet a number of commitments in the Victims Support and Individual Needs programmes;
- £1.300m – Hillsborough Sites - to meet running costs eg Security, Maintenance; and
- £0.376m – Exchange loss on EU claims.
- The £7.15m central funds bid submitted by OFMDFM on behalf of all departments responsible for Delivering Social Change programmes, was also classified as inescapable.
- At its meeting on 9 October 2014 the Executive agreed the position in respect of non ring-fenced Resource DEL in the 2014-15 October Monitoring Round. For OFMDFM this resulted in an allocation of £1.3m for Victims and Survivors Service.

(iii) It is not normal practice to deposit a copy of bids in the Assembly library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate.

Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on progress of the Together: Building a United Community redevelopment of the Girdwood site.

(AQO 6635/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The development of Girdwood Park is being taken forward under an agreed Masterplan Conceptual Framework (MCF) which has cross political and cross community support with the Department for Social Development responsible for the delivery of the infrastructure works (roads, public realm, landscaping and services required to support the various uses outlined for the site.

The procurement process to appoint a contractor for the infrastructure works is now almost complete with construction expected to commence in the next few weeks. The Belfast City Council led development of the Community Hub, with funding provided by SEUPB, is already under way and is expected to complete in June 2015, with Apex taking forward one of the housing elements due for completion in early 2016. DSD has appointed a consultant to take forward consultation and an economic appraisal on the options available in terms of the development of the indoor sports and mixed use facilities and this preparatory work is expected to complete by March 2015.

The total funding allocated to these projects is approximately £5.8 million representing a significant investment in the Belfast North area.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why, despite making the removal of all interface barriers by 2023 and the roll out of a nursery school buddy scheme key commitments of the Together: Building a United Community strategy published in May 2013, they are providing no sustainable long term funding to the existing Community Relations in Schools Buddy Scheme which brings children and parents of Holy Cross Nursery, Ardoyne and Edenderry Nursery, Shankill together across the Crumlin Road Interface for facilitated, meaningful contact that has significant community support, well over a year after this key commitment was made.

(AQW 37547/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department of Education (DE) is taking forward the commitment, set out in the Together: Building a United Community strategy, to roll out a Buddy Scheme in all publicly funded nursery and primary schools.

DE officials met with Community Relations in Schools (CRIS) representatives in late 2013 to discuss the CRIS programme. They have also engaged with Education and Library Boards colleagues to discuss how a buddying scheme might be delivered across Northern Ireland. Proposals for the DE scheme are at an early stage of development.

CRIS is a partner, along with a number of primary and nursery schools in North Belfast, in the 'Active Respectful Communities: Ardoyne and Shankill Together' (ARC) initiative, which received funding from OFMDFM and Atlantic Philanthropies (AP) under the Contested Space/Interface Programme from 2011-2014.

This Programme was instigated by OFMDFM and AP with the intention of deriving learning from positive good relations outcomes in contested spaces, and ascertaining which elements of best practice might be mainstreamed into future intervention strategies. It was not intended to supplant or replace existing core funding initiatives.

OFMDFM has allocated a small grant to CRIS from the Central Good Relations fund in 2014/15 to fund a cross-community adult good relations programme.

Mr McGlone asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the operational costs, including the total funding distributed to clients, of the Victims and Survivors Service.

(AQO 6859/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Expenditure for the Victims and Survivors Service within 2013/14 totalled £12.8m, of this £10.7m related directly to funding distributed to clients through the Victims Support Programme and the Individual Needs Programme.

The remainder of expenditure relates to staffing and operating costs.

Funding for Victims per annum has increased threefold since 2002.

The Victims and Survivors Service annual report and accounts for 2013/14 are currently being audited by the Northern Ireland Audit Office and a further breakdown on expenditure is not possible until the accounts have been signed off.

Mr Sheehan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the progress of the Disability Strategy.

(AQO 6863/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Since the publication of the Executive's Disability Strategy in February 2013, departments have taken forward a number of actions to drive improved service delivery, increase awareness of the needs of people with disabilities and improve opportunities for people with disabilities across all policy areas.

We are currently considering a number of further projects submitted by departments to deliver outcomes under the Disability Strategy, to be taken forward within the Delivering Social Change Framework.

A 2013/14 annual report on the delivery of the Disability Strategy will set out the actions that all departments have undertaken under the Strategy in its first year. We hope to publish the report in Autumn 2014.

Mrs Cochrane asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in light of the financial strain and resource limitations faced by all Departments and the Executive's acknowledgement that the work of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) has the most pressing need, whether they will consider rebalancing ministerial priorities and making a strategic decision to reallocate junior ministerial posts to the DHSSPS.

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The number and functions of Junior Ministers are kept under review in the light of our assessment of changing needs and priorities. We have, however, no plans at this time to effect such a reallocation of posts.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the total paid in salary costs to departmental staff in the last 12 months.

(AQW 37941/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister incurred a cost of £16,656,826 for the year ended 30 September 2014 in respect of salaries.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the impact of budgetary cuts on the ongoing work programme of the Rivers Agency and Drainage Council to maintain water courses and prevent flooding.

(AQW 37499/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): In the current year, my Department has faced Resource DEL reductions amounting to 4.4%. In the case of the Rivers Agency, a number of posts have been left vacant, which would otherwise have been filled. The Agency will continue to deliver its maintenance programme, to the extent to which funding permits. Work continues to be carried out on rural watercourse maintenance and I would want, as far as possible, to avoid any increased risk of flooding.

For clarity, the role of the Drainage Council is to make decisions on the designation of watercourses, based on recommendations from Rivers Agency. It also makes decisions on the acceptance of schemes and works. That will continue to be the case.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what are the prevailing licensing arrangements in regard to salmon farming at Glenarm and Redbay.

(AQW 37615/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The existing marine salmon farms at Red Bay and Glenarm Bay operate under a number of consents granted by DARD and NIEA/DOE. The Northern Salmon Company Ltd, which now trades as Glenarm Organic Salmon Ltd, was granted Fish Culture Licences authorising the cultivation of Atlantic salmon at each of its sites by my Department under the provisions of the 1966 Fisheries Act. The Licences for Red Bay and Glenarm Bay sites were granted on 24 October 1990 and 20 May 1994 respectively. DARD also granted the Company an additional optional Licence, a Marine Fish Fishery Licence, for its Glenarm Bay site on 3 June 1994.

Under the provisions of the 2009 Aquatic Animal Health Regulations, DARD granted the Company Aquaculture Production Business Authorisations for each of the sites on 21 March 2011.

The Company were granted revised Consents to Discharge Effluent under the 1999 Water Order by NIEA Water Management Unit on 11 February 2011.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the promotion of aquaculture; and to outline any established projects.

Mrs O'Neill: I have committed £648,034 under the European Fisheries Fund for eight Aquaculture projects to promote the sector. In addition, I have committed additional funding of £606,503 to Aquaculture Initiative projects under the European Fisheries Fund. I have also commissioned the Agri-food and Biosciences Institute to undertake environmental assessments on proposed aquaculture developments in accordance with the provisions of the Habitats Directive and national environmental legislation.

The Aquaculture Initiative EEIG, currently funded under the European Fisheries Fund, promotes aquaculture development in the north of Ireland. The Initiative has established the Aquaculture Representatives Group (ARG) which gives a voice for the Aquaculture sector in the north. In the last three years, three collective action projects have been applied for and facilitated by the Initiative namely: A Diversification Report for Land Based Aquaculture Sector; Advance Through Disease Control (Oyster Herpes Disease); and Marine Stewardship Council certification for Bottom Grown Mussels in Ireland. Industry is currently represented by the Aquaculture Initiative on such relevant bodies as the Agri-Food Strategy Board who produced the Going For Growth Strategy and the Seafish NI Advisory Committee. The Aquaculture Initiative also acts as the secretariat to the All-Ireland Bottom Grown Mussels Forum.

The Loughs Agency, is lead on the INTERREG IVA IBIS (Integrated Aquatic Resource Management between the Island of Ireland and Scotland) project, with partners The Queen's University, Belfast and the University of Glasgow, has undertaken extensive research to underpin and aid the sustainable development of the aquaculture industry within the eligible programme area.

IBIS studies include developing science-based management strategies for improving the yield of blue mussels, Mytilus edulis, in benthic cultivation and developing science-based management strategies for environmental and commercial sustainability of native oysters, Ostrea edulis.

A number of Knowledge Transfer Workshops have taken place dealing with the history and future of shellfish, shellfish production, aquaculture processing and shellfish marketing.

In Going for Growth, the Agri-Food Strategy Board made a number of recommendations and outlined key growth targets for the fisheries and aquaculture sub-sectors, recognising their contribution to the wider agri-food sector. The Executive Response to Going for Growth has recently been published and sets out actions to be taken across Government to support the industry in achieving those targets. A copy may be accessed at the following link: http://www.dardni.gov.uk/ni\_executive\_response\_to\_going\_for\_growth.pdf

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) for her assessment of the threat posed by the small hive beetle; (ii) what steps her Department can take to protect local beekeepers; and (iii) what plans her Department has in the event of the beetle being discovered in Northern Ireland.

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The small hive beetle has recently been detected in 49 apiaries in South West Italy. All known affected apiaries are within a 20km control zone. Within this zone, official controls including destruction of affected colonies are being implemented by the Italian authorities to control this outbreak. Controls in Italy will reduce the threat posed to both European and local beekeepers and assist in preventing the establishment and further spread of this serious pest. The potential for spread of this pest is mainly through movement of queens and package bees.
- (ii) The risk of Small Hive Beetle arriving imminently in the north of Ireland is low. The main risk of the pest being introduced is through the trade or movement from Italy to here of queen and package bees that are infected with larvae. Restrictions in place in the 20km control zone and the further 100 km surveillance zone established by the Italian authorities, allied to a cessation of trade in bees due to the onset of winter, mean the risk in the north at this time is assessed as low as any known trade has ceased. DARD Bee Health Inspectors have maintained inspections of colonies of bees at higher risk apiaries in the north, including those near airports and ports. Bee health inspections have mostly concluded due to the onset of colder weather conditions and shorter day length which reduces the potential to detect the pest during this period. My officials have also maintained regular contact with the National Bee Unit within the Animal and Plant Health Agency who regularly inspect a network of Sentinel Apiaries in order to allow early warning of any spread of serious bee pests to Britain. It is intended to establish a number of Sentinel Apiaries locally in order to provide early intelligence on possible SHB introductions to the north. Officials have also maintained contact with officials in DAFM responsible for bee health.

Imports of fruit and produce from Italy and some African countries also present a potential but low risk pathway for entry of the beetle into the north. DARD Inspectors responsible for inspections at the ports and at the principal fruit import and distribution premises have received training on pest recognition to aid early detection and implementation of eradication measures in the event of a finding. CAFRE also facilitate training courses delivered by the Ulster Beekeepers Association which include content on disease and pest control.

Officials are working with local Beekeeping Associations to develop an awareness programme for beekeepers with the objective of preventing the introduction and spread of this potentially damaging pest of bees. Over the winter period briefings will take place to emphasise the need for those considering the importation of queens or package bees to be very careful from where and whom bees are imported and through the maintenance of strong vigorous colonies of bees that will be better placed to cope with an introduction of SHB.

- (iii) As part of my Department's preparedness for dealing with serious pests and diseases affecting bees, officials maintain a contingency plan should there be a suspected outbreak in the north.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by her Department.

(AQW 37750/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development has no surplus land identified at present.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she sought the advice of her College Advisory Group on the delivery of the Level 2 Agricultural Qualification for the Young Farmer Scheme delivered at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise; and to publish any advice she received.

(AQW 37775/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The College Advisory Group provides advice at a strategic and operational level to the Management Team at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE). I have not received advice from this Group on the specific delivery arrangements for the Level 2 qualification currently being offered by CAFRE.

The decisions that I made relating to the Young Farmers' Scheme were taken after I had considered carefully the responses to the CAP Pillar 1 consultation. Having considered the views expressed by Stakeholders, I decided to reduce the qualification requirement from the suggested Level 3 to a Level 2 qualification in agriculture, or a closely related subject containing at least a farm business management module.

CAFRE is offering the necessary courses for those who do not currently have the minimum required qualification. These courses are being delivered using CAFRE's model for industry training, on a part-time basis, using College campuses and local venues.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to ministerial appointments, what the respective success rates have been for (i) Protestant; and (ii) Catholic applicants, since June 2012.

Mrs O'Neill: Since June 2012 I have made 10 appointments to DARD sponsored public bodies. Of these, 6 appointees (60%) declared community background as Protestant and 4 as Catholic (40%).

There were 60 applicants for these appointments, of which 28 declared community background as Protestant, 29 as Catholic and 3 as 'Neither'.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 37210/11-15, to detail the source of the finance for the new database.

(AQW 37875/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: NIFAIS is one of a number of key Departmental change programmes going forward. It is anticipated that the NIFAIS Programme's resource and capital requirements will be addressed through the Department's normal public expenditure process.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of rural enterprises in the agri-food sector in East Londonderry that her Department has supported through funding for capital investment projects in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37890/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Funding for capital investment has been awarded under Axis 1 and Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme 2007-13 to 243 rural enterprises in the agri-food sector in East Londonderry in the past three years as detailed below:

2012

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what fiscal support currently exists for farm businesses, specifically in the agri-food sector, which are seeking to expand.

(AQW 37892/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is currently no financial support available to new applicants seeking to expand their businesses.

The final tranches of financial assistance under the EU-funded Rural Development Programme 2007-13 Modernisation of Agricultural Holdings and the Agricultural and Forestry Processing and Marketing Scheme measures, have now closed.

On 14 October 2014 I announced the submission of the draft Rural Development Programme 2014-20 to the European Commission. Subject to EU approval, anticipated by April 2015, the proposed Farm Business Improvement and the Agri-food Processing Investment Schemes will provide extensive support for sustainable growth in the agri-food sector.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to flooding in the Glenone area of Portglenone, what progress has been made following the Rivers Agency's meetings with NI Water in early 2014 and in answering AQW 33374/11-15.

Mrs O'Neill: Rivers Agency is continuing to work with NI Water in finding a long term solution to flooding in the Glenone area of Portglenone. It has not been possible for NI Water to take forward the preferred engineering solution and a revised solution is being developed. In the meantime, Rivers Agency is available to provide assistance during any future flooding emergency.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions her Department has taken in the last five years to address the problem of flooding faced by residents in the Hightown Crescent/ Hightown Drive area of Newtownabbey; and how her Department will address the ongoing problems.

Mrs O'Neill: Rivers Agency has responded to requests from residents for assistance in dealing with blockages of an undesignated watercourse in the area. A culvert across Hightown Gardens is prone to blocking in times of high river flow and the Agency, subject to approval by the Drainage Council, is proposing to construct a new protective trash grille to the inlet in the 2015/16 financial year.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the animation work for the new Local Action Groups.

Mrs O'Neill: As you will be aware I have said before that I want the new Local Action Groups formed, and ready to start by the time the new programme, which has now been submitted, has been signed off by the European Commission.

I am pleased to report that the animation process has started with a view to having fully engaged with all rural stakeholders and to have agreed the membership of the new wider LAG's by the end of December 2014, with the LAG's including their Boards being formally appointed by the end of January 2015. I officially launched the animation process last week at Loughry and I also officially announced that I had agreed the allocations to each of the new LAG areas. This is good progress and over the coming weeks there will be events held right across the rural north to energise the rural community into getting involved with the new LAG's.

It is through this involvement that local people can ensure that they have their say in how government funds are invested in their areas and what they think their priorities are. The LAG's will have to develop a Local Rural Development Strategy and it is essential that this is developed within the framework of the Council Community Plans. It is only through better co-ordination of funds that we can make best use of government and other funds and maximise the impact they have. But key to this is local people working in partnership with government, this is what LEADER is all about.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the plans in place to help mitigate any possible difficulties for the agriculture and fishing industries arising from adverse weather this winter.

Mrs O'Neill: With your permission Mr Speaker, I will answer questions 7 and 8 together.

There are a number of steps farmers can take in preparation for extreme winter weather and to try and mitigate difficulties. Many of these steps are normal management practice for the vast majority of farmers but I would encourage all farmers to reassess the risks to their business now before the winter sets in.

Farmers should also keep a close check on weather forecasts and make appropriate adjustments and management decisions where severe weather is expected. Measures such as moving stock to less exposed fields and securing vulnerable buildings are basic steps that would help lessen the effects of severe weather. Farmers are also advised to check and consider the insurance cover they have for livestock and farm buildings.

DARD will reinforce this message and present practical information to farmers on preparing for winter in the coming weeks through press articles and the DARD website.

Fishing activity varies from season to season, with the weather affecting the availability of the targeted species and subsequently impacting on cash flow. Earlier this year I established the Fishing Industry Task Force to look at the challenges facing the fishing industry and this is one of the areas that will be examined. I expect the Task Force to make an initial report to me by the end of the year.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the measures she has taken to prepare for possible adverse weather conditions over the coming winter months.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the integrated project to address flooding in the Sicily Park and Greystown areas of South Belfast.
(AQO 6918/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Rivers Agency is working in partnership with NI Water on the integrated project to address flooding issues in the Sicily Park and Greystown areas of South Belfast. The proposed scheme involves upgrading existing infrastructure and a business case is currently being prepared to establish the most cost effective options.

Rivers Agency is also proposing to take on responsibility for three privately maintained urban drains in the area, so that they can be upgraded and maintained at public expense. Subject to approval by the Drainage Council in October 2014, the upgrading works will follow over the next twelve months.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline any discussions she has had with the Minister of the Environment regarding the impact the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill NIA 35/11-16 will have on rural areas.

Mrs O'Neill: I have held no discussions with the Minister of the Environment on issues relating to the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill. However, the Minister of the Environment wrote to me and other Executive Colleagues outlining the provisions of the Bill prior to its introduction.

All government Departments are signed up to rural proofing. Therefore, it is for each Department to undertake rural proofing to assess any potential impacts that its policies may have on rural areas and to make adjustments, where appropriate, so that the needs of rural areas are met.

That said, I believe there is more we can do to improve the effectiveness of rural proofing and I intend, subject to Executive agreement, to introduce rural proofing legislation during the lifetime of this current Assembly. This important Bill will provide my Department with a firm basis for promoting rural proofing across government and will help ensure that rural needs are fully considered in policy making.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the impact the proposed five-year Rural Development Programme will have on the local agriculture industry.

Mrs O'Neill: Agri-food is our largest indigenous industry, largest manufacturing industry, largest single employer and most important exporter. It is one of the few industries to have recorded sustained growth during the recession and is a strategically important industry with the potential to help accelerate economic recovery. The Agri-Food Strategy Board's Going for Growth report highlights tremendous opportunities to grow our agri-food sector. It contains challenging targets and over 100 recommendations addressed to government and industry. The key headline recommendation to DARD in Going for Growth is the delivery of a Farm Business Improvement Scheme to improve competitiveness and productivity in primary production.

In response to this recommendation, DARD has included proposals for a Farm Business Improvement Scheme of up to £250 million as part of the Rural Development Programme 2014-2020. This Scheme will comprise a range of measures aimed at knowledge transfer, innovation and capital investment. Subject to EU approval, there is potential for the Farm Business Improvement Scheme to have a significant positive impact on sustainable farm production, improved competitiveness through increased efficiency, integration of supply chains and flexibility in response to market requirements.

Additionally £157.8 million will be made available for a range of environmental actions which will support farmers and land managers to carry out environmentally beneficial farming practices.

The onus will be on the industry bringing forward as many eligible successful applications as possible so that I can draw down the full amount of funding available to ensure the industry gains the maximum possible benefit.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she is taking to reduce the departmental costs for tuberculosis.

Mrs O'Neill: Our EU Commission approved TB eradication programme is vital in safeguarding our export-dependent livestock and livestock products industry, which is worth over £1,000 million annually.

As you may be aware, I have recently established a government/industry TB Strategic Partnership Group to develop a comprehensive and practical implementation plan to progressively reduce both the TB levels in cattle here and the cost burden of this disease. My ultimate aim is eradication of this scourge and by as early a date as possible. I recognise the enormity of the task facing this group, but concerted action must be taken. I have made it clear that I want the strategy to be all embracing and to address all the relevant issues.

The Department's current Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) is being replaced with a new system called the NI Food Animal Information System (NIFAIS). This also provides an opportunity to reduce TB programme costs through improving the efficiency of our disease control systems and processes. A number of projects are being initiated to inform the design of NIFAIS so it can support more efficient ways of delivery, such as involving mobile technology, increased digital engagement, improved work flow and better management information systems. While it is too early to estimate the quantum of these potential efficiency gains, I can assure you that this is an important aspect of the project.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the European Commission's position regarding elements of the Young Farmers' Scheme yet to be finalised.

Mrs O'Neill: I am pleased to report that I have just published an update outlining the clarification received from the EU Commission regarding the Young Farmers' Scheme and other outstanding aspects of CAP Reform, particularly greening.

In relation to the Young Farmers' Scheme, the update clarifies the position on partnerships involving young farmers, including 50:50 partnerships. It also clarifies that a young farmer who is a member of an existing business and who moves to take control over that business and is, therefore, head of holding of a business for the first time, may be eligible for the Young Farmers' Scheme, provided all the other requirements of the scheme are met.

My officials have written to all those who applied to the CAFRE Level II qualification and published a press article outlining possible sources of evidence the Department may require as proof of head of holding status. These sources included information about the applicant's VAT, income tax, banking, herd records, as well as buying, selling and investing activities in the business. If relevant, some form of partnership type agreement outlining, among other things, the roles and responsibilities of the members of the business and verified by an appropriately qualified professional may also be required.

The EU Commission still has to confirm formally their position on several remaining issues, including clarification on how the number of years a person has been head of holding should be calculated, and, hence, the number of years their business can receive the Young Farmers' payment. I will publish further details as they become available.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the Rural Development Programme.

Mrs O'Neill: My officials formally submitted the draft programme to the European Commission on 14 October. Formal approval by the European Commission will depend on the nature and extent of the comments on the draft programme. My officials are working to obtain a European Commission decision by April 2015.

In conjunction with seeking EU approval on the overall funding package, my officials are working to design the detail of the schemes. The date for the opening of any calls will depend on the programme being approved by the European Commission and on getting the necessary business case approval.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to explain the relationship between the Ulster-Scots Agency and the Institute of Ulster-Scots Studies.

(AQW 37340/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The Ulster-Scots Agency supported the establishment of the Institute for Ulster-Scots Studies by the University of Ulster in 2001. Between 2001 and 2009 the Agency funded the University to support the core work of the Institute and a range of related projects.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the management arrangements, oversight and governance of the Institute of Ulster-Scots Studies; and what input there was from the Ulster-Scots Agency as the main external funder.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Institute of Ulster-Scots Studies was managed at an operational level by a Director appointed by the University of Ulster. At a strategic level, it was managed by a Management Board which was appointed by the University of Ulster, with one representative from the Ulster-Scots Agency. The Management Board was supported by an Advisory Board which was appointed by both the Agency and the University. As part of the funding criteria the Institute was required to furnish the Agency with six monthly progress reports.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what effect the cuts to Libraries NI will have on each library in North Down.

(AQW 37565/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: As a result of the need to make in-year budget reductions, Libraries NI is currently implementing a number of measures. These include releasing agency staff who covered staff vacancies, maternity leave, secondments, special projects, annual leave and sickness. In addition, libraries in the North of Ireland, including those in North Down, may be affected by a reduction in expenditure on new stock. Libraries NI is also reducing opening hours for the time being at Bangor Carnegie Library. Bangor Library's hours will reduce from 57 hours to 52 hours per week from early November.

Other libraries, especially smaller libraries, may be affected by temporary ad hoc closures.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how the level of public use of the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland's Titanic site compares with the previous Balmoral Avenue site.

Ms Ní Chuilín: There has been an increase in the level of public use at Titanic Quarter compared with the previous Balmoral Avenue site. During the last three full business years at Balmoral Avenue (2007/08 - 2009/10), the average number of visitors per year was 16,872. In the first three full business years at Titanic Quarter (2011/12 - 2013/14), the average number of visitors per year was 18,003. This represents a 6.3% increase in the level of public use. During this business year up to September (2014/15), PRONI has welcomed 9,952 visitors.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether there are any plans to provide parking facilities or concessions for users of the Public Record of Northern Ireland's Titanic facility.

Ms Ní Chuilín: There is on-street parking adjacent to the Public Record Office, and car parks within walking distance.

My Department has no plans to provide parking facilities or concessions for users of the Public Record Office.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much funding her Department provides to the Ulster Orchestra.

(AQW 37634/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The following table illustrates the amount of funding awarded to the Ulster Orchestra by the Arts Council and DCAL (via Creative Industries) over the last four financial years.

Year	ACNI Annual Funding £	Lottery £	Creative Industries £	Total £
2014/15	1,879,568			1,879,568
2013/14	2,031,966	8,130	48,206	2,088,302
2012/13	2,196,720	70,000		2,266,720
2011/12	2,205,315	77,580		2,282,895

The £48,206 awarded by DCAL Creative Industries Innovation Fund (CIIF) in 2013/14 is broken down as follows: £5,000 to contribute to costs associated with a launch event to announce formal collaboration with NI Screen; £12,792 capital grant to assist with the purchase of instruments; and £30,414 to develop and deliver a pilot community engagement initiative.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in her Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Public Sector Reform Division has not completed any efficiency related work for this Department and no efficiencies have, therefore, been realised.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what financial support her Department provides to Coleraine Borough Mini Soccer.

(AQW 37725/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Neither my Department nor Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department is aware of any organisation named 'Coleraine Borough Mini Soccer'. However, I am aware that Coleraine Football Club operates a North West Mini Soccer Academy and this answer is provided on that basis.

The delivery of mini soccer throughout the Causeway Coast District Council area is supported through Sport NI's Active Communities programme. Sport NI invests in the new Causeway Coast District Council area to support the deployment of a network of eight coaches to increase sports participation; one of these posts is an association football (soccer)/multi-sports coach. The post holder is currently employed by Coleraine Borough Council. Sport NI's total investment in Active Communities in the Causeway Coast District Council area in the period 2011/12 to 2014/15 is £829,633.

In addition, in 2014, my Department through Sport NI awarded Coleraine Borough Council a grant of £1.5 million towards the North Coast Sports Village. This investment funded the construction of two synthetic training facilities. These facilities can be used for a variety of sports, including soccer.

Coleraine FC has recently submitted an application to Active Awards for Sport (Round 2) which closed on 20 October 2014. Coleraine FC's application will be assessed against previously published criteria and the outcome of the assessment process will be notified to all applicants in December 2014.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by her Department.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Department does not hold any surplus land.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what consideration has been given to the reallocation of departmental resources to provide greater assistance to the Ulster Orchestra.

(AQW 37772/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My officials, together with the Arts Council, are assisting the Ulster Orchestra and have been liaising with the Orchestra and its sponsors to discuss potential future operating models and alternative funding mechanisms.

The Orchestra need to develop a long-term, sustainable approach to address its current financial difficulties. If the Orchestra identifies a new sustainable operating model, I will give it serious consideration and, subject to receiving assurance it can be delivered, I will engage with Executive Colleagues to assess how the Executive might support it.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, in relation to ministerial appointments, what the respective success rates have been for (i) Protestant; and (ii) Catholic applicants, since June 2012.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The success rate of (i) Protestant applicants for Ministerial appointments made since June 2012 is 22.2% while the success rate of (ii) Catholic applicants for the same period is 22.1%.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether there are still regular North South plenary and committee meetings of the Arts Council of Northern Ireland and An Chomhairle Ealaíon; and to detail the dates of each meeting since 2008.

(AQW 37885/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There continue to be Plenary and Committee meetings and the requested details are provided below:

Plenary Meetings took place on	North South Working Group Meetings took place on
28/4/08	24/5/11
29/4/09	26/3/12
28/4/10	15/10/12
24/5/11	18/4/13

25/4/12	17/4/14
20/5/14

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 523/07, to detail whether the Arts Council of Northern Ireland raised the issue of the publication of the minutes of plenary meetings with An Chomhairle Ealaíon; and if so, to detail the decision, and if it was positive, whether the minutes have been published on the Arts Council for Northern Ireland's website.

(AQW 37886/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Previously An Chomhairle Ealaíon (ACE) did not publish minutes of its meetings. This position changed at the beginning of 2014 and ACE now plans to publish its minutes. Meetings of future joint plenary meetings will be published, albeit a year after the meeting takes place.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what definition of 'traditional music' is used by (i) the Arts Council of Northern Ireland; and (ii) her Department.

(AQW 37887/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council's Music Strategy 2013-18 confirms its commitment to a long-term programme of support and development for traditional music in the North of Ireland. The Strategy aims to gain a deeper understanding of the sectors strengths and weaknesses; the challenges it faces; and its development needs going forward. A component of this is to develop an agreed definition of the traditional music sector in the North and a consultant, Dermot McLaughlin, has been appointed to undertake this work. The definition will be agreed in conjunction with my Department.

Details of the Web sites for the Strategy and the Arts Council's artform policies are provided below:

Ambitions for the Arts' Five Year Arts Strategy, 2013-2018 - www.artscouncil-ni.org/about-us/strategy

Art Form and Specialist Area Policies, 2013-2018 - www.artscouncil-ni.org/the-arts

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, in relation to the Traditional Music Forum which was recently created by the Arts Council of Northern Ireland, to detail (i) the purpose and remit of the Forum; (ii) the membership of the Forum; and (iii) the structure of the Forum.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council's Music Strategy 2013-18 confirms its commitment to a long-term programme of support and development for traditional music in the North of Ireland. One of the actions identified in the Strategy it is to draw traditional music organisations into a forum with the purpose of exploring the sector's own aspirations and proposals for development.

There is no specific membership for the Forum and the aim is to keep it deliberately broad to inform both the Arts Council's future planning and its advocacy for increased support and profile for the sector. Meetings are open to all and the inaugural meeting had been widely promoted on social media and by direct invitation to organisations, individual artists, instrument makers, Education and Library Boards, umbrella organisations, venues, festivals, local authorities, promoters and key stakeholders. Membership is expected to grow given the strong support for the inaugural meeting.

The structure will be led by the forum itself. It is a platform to explore the sector's own aspirations and proposals for development. There may be large group meetings accompanied by smaller working groups in areas of education, touring etc

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she has held discussions with other Departments and Libraries NI with regard to developing Belfast Central Library.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I discussed the development needs of Belfast Central Library and related financing options with the Minister of Finance and Personnel, Simon Hamilton MLA, at a meeting with him in March 2014 on wider budgetary pressures facing the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL). Following on from this, my officials have had a number of discussions with the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) about the preparation of an Outline Business Case that would objectively assess the costs and benefits of any potential investment. Similar discussions have been held with the Strategic Investment Board (SIB). As part of these, advice has been sought and obtained from DFP and SIB on how the type of financing options I discussed with Minister Hamilton may be most appropriately modelled and assessed within the Outline Business Case.

My Department is engaged in detailed, on-going discussions with Libraries NI on its emerging proposals for the re-development of Belfast Central Library. DCAL is represented on Libraries NI's Project Board for Belfast Central Library which the authority set up in June 2014 to manage and direct the project. In addition, my officials have reviewed and provided written comments to Libraries NI on an initial draft Outline Business Case for re-developing the Library which the organisation submitted to DCAL in July 2014. Libraries NI is re-examining the Case in light of these comments and a revised version is currently expected to be re-submitted to the Department in November 2014. It is also my intention to seek DFP's approval of the Case once it has been completed by Libraries NI and reviewed by my officials.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what steps she is taking to prepare a bid to host the Commonwealth Games in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37933/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has not taken any steps to prepare a bid to host the Commonwealth Games in the north of Ireland.

Responsibility for events, including the Commonwealth Games, lies in the first instance with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what matters of co-operation and mutual interest have been identified as a result of the North South meetings between the Arts Council of Northern Ireland and An Chomhairle Ealaíon during the last three years.

Ms Ní Chuilín: Both Arts Councils have identified areas of mutual interest including the following:

Joint funding - a range of organisations with an all island remit such Irish Pages; Source Magazine; Camerata Ireland; Tyrone Guthrie Centre; Irish Traditional Music Archive; Poetry Ireland and Visual Arts Ireland have received funding.

All Island Working –

- In 2012 the Arts Council NI joined with An Chomhairle Ealaíon (ACE) to contribute to the all island Children's Laureate;
- Both arts councils have combined resources to create a simpler, joined-up approach to cross-border artistic touring;
- Opera NI has been successful in touring in the South under the Arts Council's Opera project funding scheme, an arrangement that that has been beneficial to the provision of quality opera throughout Ireland.

An area of mutual interest still under discussion is the commemoration of the life, work and legacy of Seamus Heaney.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list the members of the North South committee of the Arts Council of Northern Ireland and An Chomhairle Ealaíon and from which of the two organisations they are nominated.

(AQW 38003/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There is an annual plenary session meeting of the Arts Council NI (ACNI) and An Chomhairle Ealaíon (ACE) and this is open to senior management and boards of each organisation. In addition, a North South Working Group is held twice a year. The following staff and nominated board members attend:

ACNI representatives

- Roisin McDonough, CEO
- Nick Livingston, Director of Strategic Development
- Noirin McKinney, Director of Arts Development Dept
- Brian Sore, Board Member
- David Alderdice, Board Member
- Anna Carragher, Board Member

- Judith Woodward ACE Council Member

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much money was allocated by the Arts Council of Northern Ireland to Musical Instruments for Bands, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38004/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council has awarded a total of £512,661 to the Musical Instruments for Bands Programme in the last three years, broken down as follows;

Financial Year	Total Awarded
2014/15	104,415

Financial Year	Total Awarded
2013/14	205,555
2012/13	202,691

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether the Arts Council of Northern Ireland and An Chomhairle Ealaíon still employ an Arts Co-operation Officer.

(AQW 38005/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council employed a European Affairs Officer (jointly with An Chomhairle Ealaíon) from 1991/92. This post was not renewed at the end of the contract period.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) how much lottery funding, that would have been allocated to arts and sports in Northern Ireland, was retained by the UK government to help fund the 2012 London Olympics; (ii) how much of this funding has since been returned to local sport and arts; and (iii) what action she has taken to ensure that all of this retained money is returned.

(AQW 38006/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The exact Arts Council NI (ACNI) and Sport NI (SNI) figures re-directed by the GB Government to the Olympic Lottery Distribution Fund were £4.514m and £4.192m respectively.

The Lottery Distribution Funds of both bodies were restored to pre Olympic levels after August 2012 and in July this year the unspent portion of the Olympic funding was refunded based on the percentage contributions to the overall re-direction. ACNI's share of this was £0.440m and SNI's share was £0.410m. Additionally, both bodies will shortly receive refunds in the same proportions (0.56% for ACNI, 0.52% for SNI) producing £0.380m for ACNI and £0.360m for SNI, following the sale of the Olympic Village.

My officials continue to liaise with DCMS in GB to secure any additional re-imbursments that may be due to the north of Ireland distributors, to be generated from further land sales at the Olympic Park.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when the redevelopment of Windsor Park is due to be completed.

(AQO 6929/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Funding Agreement was issued to the IFA and the successful contractor (O'Hare and McGovern) was appointed in December 2013.

Design development by the contractor is complete and the release of the Construction Notice by the IFA was made on 2 May 2014. Construction works commenced on site on 6 May 2014 after the Irish Cup Final.

Construction work is on-going and progressing well, with the Phase 1 works (construction of the pitch) completed on time for the European Championship Qualifier on 11th October 2014.

Provided that significant delays around any legal issues are avoided, then the Windsor Park development can remain on programme with completion of the construction works planned for October 2015.

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department promotes its activities to students.

(AQO 6930/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The delivery of services to students is a key area of activity for my Department and its' Arms Length Bodies (ALBs) and there are a number of programmes and services aimed at students of all ages.

These are promoted by a variety of means. Websites and social media are used extensively and are key to publicising initiatives and activities of interest to students. There is also direct liaison with schools, colleges and universities to promote services and encourage registration on programmes. For example:

- Sport NI promotes its activities to students across the education sector through its website and registration facility. Programmes promoted directly to schools include a Activ8, Active Communities, Midnight Street Soccer and the Disability Sport NI 5 Star Challenge.
- The Arts Council's visual arts team hold information sessions twice a year in the University of Ulster's Art College to raise awareness of their Support for the Individual Artist Programme.
- Líofa Officers visit schools and attend University Fresher's days to promote the Irish Language and to encourage students to sign up to Líofa and become fluent in Irish.
- The Ulster-Scots Agency funds programmes and schemes for the target audience of students, including: after – school clubs; flagship programme for schools; school twinning programme; and school workshops.
- These examples are in addition to the ongoing engagement which Libraries, National Museums and other bodies have with places of study and individual students.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support and funding opportunities her Department can offer to existing grassroots level sports initiatives wishing to expand.

(AQO 6931/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The need to develop and prioritise sport at grassroots level is recognised within my Department's Strategy for Sport, Sport Matters. Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, works with a range of organisations that seek to provide and develop grassroots sports opportunities in sports clubs, schools and community/ voluntary organisations.

Sport NI provides a range of support services and resources to assist those groups wishing to expand, which includes the provision of funding through the Active Awards for Sport programme. This small grants programme is primarily aimed at providing grassroots support to community based sport and is due to re-open for applications at the end of March next year. The priorities are sports clubs, community groups and governing bodies of sport, especially those based in areas of greatest need.

Sport NI also assists in the development of grassroots sports clubs through the provision of coach development workshops; the implementation of the quality standard for clubs, Clubmark NI, the introduction of a new Equality Standard, and a Code of Ethics and Good Practice for Children's Sport.

In addition, my Department has provided funding of four point five million which has been distributed equally between the Ulster Council GAA, the Ulster Branch Irish Rugby Football Union and the Irish Football Association over a three year period up until 31st March 2015. This funding was for a programme to promote equality, tackle poverty and social exclusion through sport. Grassroots level sports clubs and communities will benefit from part of this funding.

I have asked my officials and Sport NI to explore what other funding opportunities may be available for grassroots sports in the future.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline her Department's plans for the Library Service across Northern Ireland.

(AQO 6932/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am committed to ensuring that Libraries NI continues to provide a comprehensive and efficient public library service for people living, working or studying in the north of Ireland. In addition, I am committed to realising the Department's Vision for the library service. This is set out in the libraries policy, Delivering Tomorrow's Libraries. This is to have:-

'A flexible and responsive library service which provides a dynamic focal point in the community and assists people to fulfil their potential.'

In line with Delivering Tomorrow's Libraries we are looking for a library service which, within available resources, is: centred on people and relevant to their current needs; responsive to local communities particularly those experiencing poverty and social exclusion; sufficiently flexible within its core activities to reflect new demands; and provides space, stock and expertise to enable people to develop themselves, their families and their communities.

While the management of available resources for the library service is primarily the responsibility of Libraries NI, my officials and I stand ready to support its Board and Senior Management Team as they seek to identify how best to deliver tomorrow's libraries in the current budget environment.

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on how investment in arts and culture facilities will be made available in rural communities.

(AQO 6933/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My department invests in rural arts and culture facilities in a number of ways, for example.

- The Arts Council has provided capital funding which has delivered an arts venue within a 20 mile radius of every person in the North of Ireland.
- In the North West, to enhance the impact of City of Culture 2013, DCAL will support projects and interventions across the entire region including Derry, Strabane, Coleraine, Limavady and Dungiven. The programme is currently in development and will be announced in the coming months.
- Also, a DCAL North West Office has been established to work closely with local communities and organisations.
- NI Screen, through its Creative Learning Centres, has a specific remit to work with people from rural and hard to reach areas. The expansion of the Creative Learning Centres in 2013-15 is specifically targeted at reaching further into rural communities.
- NI Screen's Digital Film Archive (DFA) can be accessed at a range of locations including rural sites while customised outreach presentations are offered to reach further into these rural communities.
- Libraries NI has a statutory duty to provide a comprehensive library service, including rural areas. This is currently discharged through the provision of 34 branches in small rural settlements, around 30 mobile libraries and an on-line library service on librariesni.org.uk.
- Libraries NI also has a commitment to ensure that 85% of households have access to a library service point within two miles.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support her Department has given to the Glenavy District Angling Club following the major fish kill in June 2014.

(AQO 6934/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Following the fish kill at the Glenavy River on 28 June 2014 my Department's Fisheries Protection Officers assisted officials in the Environment Agency in carrying out a detailed count and classification of the dead fish at the scene of the incident.

The Agency is undertaking an investigation which is on-going and you will therefore appreciate that I am unable to comment further at this stage.

My officials are available to work with fishery owners and angling clubs in providing technical advice to assist with the re-instatement of fish stocks following any fish kills. We have recently developed an improved methodology for the calculation of the costs of a fish kill and we were successful in recent prosecutions taken by the Environment Agency where the Courts awarded damages towards the reinstatement costs.

My Department has worked closely with Glenavy District Angling Club in the past, including authorising a major re-stocking programme in the Glenavy River in 2010 and supplying some ten thousand salmon fry and ten thousand brown trout fry for the programme.

While there have been no approaches from the club in relation to the June incident, I am happy for my officials to work with the club to offer advice and guidance on initial steps that may be taken to encourage the restoration of fish stocks in the Glenavy River.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much has been spent on the Líofo Initiative since its launch in 2011.

(AQO 6936/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has spent £526,405 on Líofo since its launch in 2011.

This figure includes £196,957 for the 2013/14 advertising campaign, which was approved by the Executive.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the redevelopment of the Brandywell stadium.

(AQO 6937/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am aware of plans to redevelop the Brandywell Stadium. No formal funding application has been received by my Department.

I intend to submit a bid to the Executive to secure funding in the next CSR for a Sub Regional Stadium Programme. The Executive previously endorsed the development of sub-regional stadia as a priority area of spend in the next CSR period beginning 2015-16. A sub-regional stadia programme is a logical channel for any potential funding application as the Brandywell would be one of a number of eligible venues across the north of Ireland. My Department is currently preparing a Strategic Outline Case for submission to the Executive to support the case for funding.

No decision has been taken on specific stadia that will benefit from this funding.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the long term future of Libraries NI services in Newry & Armagh.

(AQO 6938/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am committed to ensuring that Libraries NI continues to provide a comprehensive and efficient public library service for people living, working or studying in all areas of the North of Ireland including Newry and Armagh. There are currently pressures on the library service as, like all other DCAL Arms Length Bodies, Libraries NI is required to plan for budget reductions of 4.4% in 2014/15.

Whilst reductions of this nature may have an impact on front line service provision across the North, the Libraries NI Board and Senior Management Team is working hard to minimise this and to ensure that no locality, including Newry and Armagh, is disproportionately affected. My officials and I also stand ready to support Libraries NI as it explores the potential for savings to be identified.

Mrs McKeivitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a breakdown of the £2.8 million allocation in the last monitoring round to the City of Culture legacy projects.

(AQW 38176/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Building on DCAL's significant investment in the North West to date, I bid to the Executive in this financial year for additional funding to maximise ongoing development of a social and economic legacy from City of Culture 2013.

£2.8 million in capital funding was allocated to my Department in the October Monitoring Round to support a strategic development programme in the North West.

The funding, which includes allocations for the North Coast Sports Village, boxing projects and a community cultural development programme, seeks to achieve the following:

- Provide support for identified sporting and cultural facilities which align with my Department's key objectives;
- Provide equipment for community and festival organisations to contribute to longer term sustainability;
- Provide creative, cultural and sporting equipment for communities to increase skills and encourage social enterprise;

As business cases for the programme are still being finalised, I will be making further announcements in due course.

Department of Education

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) when the Western Education and Library Board applied for funding for a new youth centre in Enniskillen; (ii) the level of local consultation on this project; and (iii) what consideration has been given to locating the youth centre on the proposed public services sector hub along with the South West College on the site of the former Erne Hospital in Enniskillen.

(AQW 37236/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): As The Lakeland Youth Centre is a controlled Youth Centre, the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) is responsible for capital works at the Centre.

I am advised by the WELB that:

- (i) A revised Economic Appraisal was submitted by the WELB to the Department of Education on 18 April 2014.
- (ii) The Lakeland Youth Centre has operated out of its existing premises in Enniskillen since 1993. Due to the deterioration in the condition of the building the WELB identified a need to upgrade the current provision. In addition to undertaking an Economic Appraisal the WELB consulted with young people who attend the Lakeland Youth Centre.
- (iii) The Economic Appraisal explored options for the Lakeland Youth Centre. When assessing the options, consideration was given to the availability of both brown and green field sites and their availability within the timeframe, two years, for a new build centre. The Economic Appraisal recommended a new build on the existing site which provided best value for money. The existing site is within the ownership of the WELB and is in a prime location due to its proximity to the Lakeland Forum, Bus Station and other town centre amenities, to meet the needs of the Youth Service and the young people it serves.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education, following the amalgamation of Education and Library Boards, how his Department will work alongside the North Eastern Education and Library Board Youth Service to ensure they can continue to support local communities and the specific educational needs of young people.

Mr O'Dowd: The single Education Authority, when established, will have a statutory duty to deliver and support youth work. Services will be delivered in line with the Department's priorities as set out in Priorities for Youth. The Regional Youth Development Framework will provide a clear framework for the delivery of youth services in response to assessed need. It will be a matter for the Education Authority to decide how services can be delivered most effectively within that context.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education how the amalgamation of Education and Library Boards will impact on support for Outdoor Education Centres which provide practical life skills training for young people in throughout Northern Ireland, and particularly Woodhall Outdoor Education Centre in Kilrea.

(AQW 37509/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not directly fund Outdoor Education Centres. These are currently funded by the Youth Service within each Education and Library Board area in accordance with their statutory obligations. This function will transfer to the single Education Authority, when established. It will be a matter for the Education Authority to decide how outdoor education provision is managed in line with the Department's priorities, as set out in Priorities for Youth.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserve funds held by his Department.

Mr O'Dowd: The level of reserves in my Department as at 31 March 2014 is £(50,645,000).

This accounting balance represents the total assets less liabilities of the department, and does not represent spending power.

The Department has negative reserves due to the level of liabilities and the fact that my Department does not hold significant assets.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of schools in West Tyrone which have benefited from any programmes that provide pupils with the opportunity to learn a modern European language, including (a) Irish; (b) French; (c) Spanish; (d) German; (e) Polish (f) and Portuguese; and (ii) the educational benefits of such programmes.

(AQW 37589/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: To support primary schools wishing to deliver language learning, the Primary Modern Languages Programme was introduced in 2007 to give pupils at Foundation Stage / Key Stage 1 the opportunity to learn an additional language in school.

A breakdown of the number of schools in West Tyrone is not available however the number of primary schools currently benefitting from this programme in County Tyrone as a whole is set out in the table below:

Language	Number of Schools
Irish	27
Spanish	36
Total	69

At post-primary level, the European Studies Programme links schools in Ireland (North & South) with schools across the rest of Europe on collaborative curriculum-based projects. The emphasis whilst working together on these projects is on communication and pupils are encouraged to use the language of their partners where possible. Currently ten post-primary schools from County Tyrone are involved in this programme.

In addition, the Northern Irish Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research (NICILT) provides courses and activities for teachers and pupils. All schools receive notice of NICILT courses, film days, events and language debates. From 2012 to present, seven post-primary schools in County Tyrone visited NICILT for teacher training or film days for pupils.

I acknowledge the importance of language learning both socially and economically. Learning a second language can help our young people to become creative, confident and articulate individuals, able to play their full part in our increasingly diverse society and to achieve their full potential.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserve funds held by the South Eastern Education and Library Board.

Mr O'Dowd: I refer you to AQW 37220/11-15, to ask the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's Arms Length Bodies as of 1 October 2014, tabled by Michael Copeland, MLA, and published in the official report on 17 October 2014.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Education to list the schools in West Tyrone which have benefited from minor works projects in the current financial year; and to detail the type of improvements in each case.

(AQW 37610/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The following table lists schools in the West Tyrone constituency that have benefited from minor works projects in the current financial year and details the type of improvements in each case.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has a community asset transfer policy.
(AQW 37656/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not have its own Community Asset Transfer (CAT) policy however it is contributing to the implementation of the Executive's policy on CAT, which was agreed in May 2014.

Eight pilot projects are currently underway to explore how this policy will work in practice. Two of these projects involve closed schools, Ballygolan Primary School (a controlled school) and St Gemma's High School (a catholic maintained school).

My Department is represented on the CAT Implementation Oversight Group. The steering group, through the progress being made on the pilot projects, is identifying amendments required to current procedures across all Departments, to ensure that the Executive's policy is considered when future decisions about disposal of surplus assets are taken.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail the estimated cost of the required repair works at St. Columbanus' College in Bangor.

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards' estate management system indicates that the current maintenance backlog for St. Columbanus' College in Bangor is £496,795 with an additional £30,890 required to address issues with school meals accommodation. The total estimated 'make good' maintenance cost for the college is therefore £527,685.

I am committed to reducing the levels of maintenance backlog across the schools' estate and additional monies are allocated, when available, to assist the Boards in reducing the most critical elements of the maintenance backlog.

While St. Columbanus' College has a significant maintenance backlog, the college has benefited from substantial capital investment over the past two years totalling £1,265,736 through my Department's Capital Minor Works Programme.

In addition, extensive structural concrete repairs have been carried out at the school at an estimated cost of circa £120k.

Under the Schools' Energy Efficiency Programme which I approved earlier this year, the SEELB submitted a proposal to undertake boiler replacement works at St. Columbanus' College at an estimated cost of £80k. The Department has conveyed approval in principle for this scheme and a "Letter of Undertaking" was issued to the school for completion on 15 October 2014.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what minor capital works will be funded in North Down in 2015/16.

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB) has confirmed that it has not yet concluded the process of setting a minor works programme for the controlled sector in 2015/16.

In respect of the non-controlled sectors the Education and Library Boards take these works forward on behalf of the Department.

As 2014/15 is the last year of the current CSR period, the amount available for the capital budget for 2015/16 and beyond years has not yet been confirmed.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education, of the primary and post-primary schools that are currently awaiting approval for capital projects, whether any assessment has been made regarding the possible adverse health and safety implications for pupils attending the schools in the current academic year.

Mr O'Dowd: I am committed to ensuring that all of the schools' estate is appropriately maintained to prevent unacceptable deterioration of the buildings and to mitigate any health and safety risks to pupils, teachers, staff and others who use the school buildings.

Condition surveys are carried out on all schools on a five-year cyclical basis to identify maintenance requirements, including those which create a health and safety issue. Additionally, health and safety risks can be identified through regular site visits by officers from the Education and Library Boards or by school staff. If the risk is deemed unacceptable, it is addressed as a matter of urgency.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) why the Education Bill (NIA 38/11-16) permits the education authority to borrow money when the Education Bill (NIA 14/11-15) explicitly prohibited the Education and Skills Authority from this; (ii) who the new education authority will be permitted to borrow money from; (iii) whether there are any limits to the amount the new education authority will be permitted to borrow; and (iv) the benefits that borrowing powers would afford the new education authority.

Mr O'Dowd:

- (i) The Education Bill (NIA 38/11-16) permits the education authority to borrow money by means of an overdraft facility or similar to enable effective daily management of cash, which is within standard business operating practice.
- (ii) Details of who the new education authority will be permitted to borrow, through an overdraft facility or similar, have not yet been confirmed as this will depend on the future provider of banking services.
- (iii) Limits to the amounts the new education authority will be permitted to borrow have not yet been determined.
- (iv) The ability to borrow through an overdraft facility or similar will enable the new education authority to manage cash effectively and enable the prompt payment of invoices to suppliers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of children in (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools that have dyslexia.

(AQW 37726/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below. The information provided relates to the 2013/14 school census, the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October this year, provisional figures will be available in December, finalised figures in February.

Primary and post-primary pupils with dyslexia, 2013/14

Primary	3,125
Post-primary	5,345

Source: NI school census

Notes:

1. Figure for primary includes nursery, reception and year 1 - 7 classes.
2. Figures include pupils at stages 1-5 on the Special Educational Needs Code of Practice.
3. Data refers to any special educational need rather than primary need

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education how much his Department is planning to invest in cycling for pupils and school staff.

(AQW 37766/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As part of the Department for Regional Development's Active School Travel Programme, my Department is currently carrying out scoping for provision of school cycle parking facilities in 60 schools across the schools estate.

An investment decision will be made once this exercise is complete.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by his Department.
(AQW 37807/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not own any surplus land. Responsibility for land and property is dependent on the particular type of school. Within the controlled sector, decisions on the use of vacant buildings and land, including declaring them surplus, will rest with the relevant Education and Library Board taking account of guidance from Land and Property Services (LPS).

Decisions on the use or sale of vacant properties and land within the Voluntary Grammar, Maintained and Grant Maintained Integrated sectors are the responsibility of the Trustees of individual schools.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the dates of; and (ii) the individuals present at meetings to discuss the establishment of a cross border area learning community involving St. Mary's High School, Brollagh since his rejection of development proposal 256; and when he expects a pilot model to be brought forward.

(AQW 37810/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I announced my decision to turn down a development proposal to close St Mary's High School Brollagh in June 2004. At that time I advised that the option of cross-border collaboration needed to be examined. I called on the Catholic Council for Maintained Schools (CCMS) and the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) to bring forward a pilot scheme which would allow the school to work with schools on the other side of the border.

Discussions are continuing on a way forward.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, in relation to schools for children with special educational needs, to detail the current stipulated ratio of (i) teachers; and (ii) classroom assistants, to pupils.

(AQW 37819/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not stipulate teacher or classroom assistant ratios for special schools.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education what percentage of the remarking of AS level and A2 level modules in (i) 2012; (ii) 2013; and (iii) 2014 have resulted in increased marks.

(AQW 37839/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am able to provide relevant statistics for CCEA, which is the main Awarding Organisation in the north of Ireland, but not for all awards made here; enquiries about results (EAR) statistics are not presented by jurisdiction.

The statistics below provide a detailed breakdown of:

- the percentage requests for remarks compared to the total number of AS and A2 unit entries;
- the percentage mark increases overall compared to the total entries for AS and A2 examinations at unit level;
- the percentage mark increases for AS and A2 compared to the total number of unit remarks requested by schools;

	2011-12		2012-13		2013-14
	AS	A2	AS	A2	AS	A2
Percentage remark requests compared to the total number of entries	2.70%	2.53%	2.46%	2.63%	3.05%	2.82%
Percentage mark increase compared to the total unit entries	1.04%	0.83%	0.91%	0.84%	1.10%	0.97%
Percentage mark increase compared to the total number of remarks requested	38.59%	32.74%	37.18%	32.05%	35.93%	34.35%

Please note:

- A and B above provide an overall context for the information requested and provided in C.

It is important to note that an increase in mark does not necessarily equate to a grade change.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education, in relation to ministerial appointments, what the respective success rates have been for (i) Protestant; and (ii) Catholic applicants, since June 2012.

(AQW 37847/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The community backgrounds of those I have appointed to public bodies sponsored by my Department since 1 June 2012 are as follows:

Community Background	Number
Protestant	15
Roman Catholic	20
Neither Protestant nor Roman Catholic	2
Total	38

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education for an update on the progress of Development Proposal 313 as submitted by Holy Trinity College, Cookstown; and to detail when his Department will be issuing a final decision on the proposal.

(AQW 37849/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Development Proposal (DP) number 313 was published by the Southern Education and Library Board on behalf of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools on 2 September 2014.

DP 313 proposes a phased increase to the approved enrolment of Holy Trinity College, from September 2016 or as soon as possible thereafter. Following the publication of the DP a statutory two month objection period begins which affords all interested and affected parties an opportunity to submit their comments on the proposal to DE; this ends on 3 November 2014.

It is likely to be a number of weeks after the end of the objection period before I am in a position to make a decision on this proposal. Once my decision is made, my Department's website will be updated accordingly.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Shared Educational Campus for Moy Regional Primary School and St. John's Primary School Moy, including identifying a site for the new build.

(AQW 37868/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Moy Project is one of three schemes I announced in July to be supported under the Shared Education Campuses Programme. The project is now in the early stages of planning.

A site search for the new campus is currently being undertaken by Land & Property Services. The Southern Education & Library Board (SELB) will then carry out the technical feasibility work for the sites identified. This information will inform the preparation of the economic appraisal which will be carried out by the SELB in conjunction with the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools.

Once submitted to my Department, the economic appraisal will be considered within business case approval processes and in line with NI Guide to Expenditure Appraisal and Evaluation guidelines, including value for money and affordability.

Only after approval of the economic appraisal, and subject to available capital funds, will the project proceed to tender and construction.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education for an update on the provision of counselling services to children of primary school age.

(AQW 37873/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have previously indicated that I would like to be in a position to offer provision of counselling support to pupils of primary age.

There are a number of issues around how such a service would operate when dealing with very young children that require to be teased out but I am committed to doing this and to bringing forward proposals for the introduction of such a service at the earliest opportunity.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education whether there is a minimum footprint or area of land required for a new build primary school; and if so, to detail the requirement.

(AQW 37884/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The recommended site area for a New Build Primary School is dependent on the enrolment of the proposed school and other factors including the topography of the site. Guidance is contained in Appendix 2, the Handbook Section 3a, Primary Schools Building Handbook, which is published on my Department's website at:

Information pertaining to play and site areas for primary schools is detailed below:

1. For long-term enrolments (LTE) of less than 86 pupils, site and play areas shall be advised by the Department upon application.
2. For long-term enrolments (LTE) of more than 820 pupils, site and play areas shall be advised by the Department upon application.
3. In all cases, the recommended site area includes an allowance for School Meals Accommodation, staff and visitors parking, access and modest landscape works.
4. The site areas provided above are the preferred minimum. However, it is recognised that attaining the minimum is not always possible, particularly within the confines of an urban setting or when re-developing an existing site. In such circumstances, the Department will give due consideration to the minimum acceptable area on a case by case basis.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education how he is currently engaging with relevant stakeholders to ensure that parents of prospective pupils are aware of, and included in, all discussions regarding plans for the transition process, following the amalgamation of Coleraine High School and Coleraine Academical Institution.

(AQW 37889/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North-Eastern Education and Library Board advises that following my approval of a Development Proposal to establish a new Co-Educational Grammar School in Coleraine, an Interim Board of Governors for the school has been established, comprising equal representation from Coleraine Academical Institution and Coleraine High School. In accordance with TNC 2013/2 (School Reorganisation Agreement) the Interim Board of Governors will conduct all necessary business in respect of the establishment of the school.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Education what support or funding is available to rural schools to open the school building in evenings to cater for community groups operating classes, such as ICT for farmers and rural dwellers.

Mr O'Dowd: The local management and arrangements for the use of facilities by community groups is a matter for the school's Board of Governors. The Department's Guide for School Governors 'Every School a Good School – The Governors' Role' provides support and guidance to schools with regard to making their premises available for wider community use.

In January 2014 the Department published 'Community Use of School Premises: A Guidance Toolkit for Schools' which provides detailed operational guidance to assist school leaders in considering the practical issues involved when making school premises available for wider community use, including links to a range of external funding opportunities which schools may find relevant.

In 2014/15, the Department has made £12m of funding available to almost 500 schools through the Extended Schools (ES) programme allowing for the provision of a range of activities outside of the normal school day. ES resources enable schools operating in areas of the highest social deprivation to work with its pupils, families and community in helping to raise the standard of pupils' achievement.

In response to identified needs ES can provide opportunities for lifelong learning and personal development and allow for the use of school premises and facilities outside of school hours for the benefit of learners and the wider community. There are currently 140 rural schools eligible to receive ES funding.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserve funds held by the Belfast Education and Library Board.

(AQW 37937/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer you to AQW 37220/11-15, to ask the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's Arms Length Bodies as of 1 October 2014, tabled by Michael Copeland, MLA, and published in the official report on 17 October 2014.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserve funds held by the Western Education and Library Board.

Mr O'Dowd: I refer you to AQW 37220/11-15, to ask the Minister of Education to detail the level of reserves in each of his Department's Arms Length Bodies as of 1 October 2014, tabled by Michael Copeland, MLA, and published in the official report on 17 October 2014.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education how many (i) teaching; and (ii) non-teaching staff have received voluntary redundancies in (a) 2013/14; and (b) 2014/15 to date; and how much of the funds are still to be allocated to severances through this scheme.

(AQW 37957/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) Teaching Staff:

My Department did not offer a voluntary redundancy scheme for teachers, rather my Department provided a Cost Based Teaching Redundancy Programme in 2013/14 and 2014/15. The purpose of this programme was to assist schools to reduce their cost base through a reduction in their full-time equivalent (FTE) staff numbers.

The position of the 2013/14 and 2014/15 Strategic Cost Based Teaching Redundancy Programme is that the programme has now concluded and all payments have been made in respect of those approved teaching redundancy applications.

In response to the numbers of teaching staff who received redundancy payment in a) 2013/14 and (b) 2014/15, figures have been provided in the table below:

Year	Number	Cost (£)
2013/14	292	17.1m
2014/15	92	3.9m

(ii) Non-teaching Staff:

Likewise there was no voluntary redundancy scheme for non-teaching staff; rather schools could seek to make non-teaching posts redundant under the Department's Cost Based Redundancy Programme in order to invoke long-term savings to live within delegated budgets.

In addition, funding has been provided to cover the cost of inescapable redundancies that have arisen for various reasons such as school closures, mergers or relocations; pupil movement; changing pupil needs or the end of temporary contracts that have exceeded two years.

It is feasible that a further small number of inescapable non-teaching redundancies may occur before the end of the financial year. The situation is extremely fluid and proposals already approved may be subject to change as employers work to redeploy as many of the affected staff as possible which may reduce the anticipated costs to date.

The total number of approved non-teaching redundancies in 2013/14 and in 2014/15 (to date) is set out in the table below:

Year	Number of Posts	Cost (£)
2013/14	394	4.1m
2014/15 (to date)	261	1.96m

Note:

The number of non-teaching staff affected by redundancies will be smaller than the number of redundant posts due to double and triple jobbing.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 36979/11-15, how the Regional Training Unit (RTU) ensures that employers have agreed appropriate arrangements for release; and whether any concerns have been raised with the RTU in this regard.

(AQW 37972/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Arrangements for releasing teachers for training provided through the Regional Training Unit (RTU) are entirely a matter for schools working within guidelines set by the employing authorities. As such, and as outlined in my response to AQW 36979/11-15, it is for employers to agree appropriate arrangements for the release of individuals to attend courses.

While some concerns have been raised about the availability of sub-cover, in recent years support provided by RTU has been tailored to minimise the extent of day release through greater reliance on twilight and on-line provision.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education how many schools have been nominated for the Derrytrasna Pastoral Care Award to date.

Mr O'Dowd: 14 nominations for the new Derrytrasna Pastoral Care Award have been received to date.

The closure date for the receipt of nominations is 14 November so there is still time for nominations to be made. Full details are available on the Department website or on the NI Direct website.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education what support is in place for pupils from year ten onwards when making choices in relation to further education.

(AQW 37979/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Young people must have access, at the right time, to high quality careers education, information, advice and guidance so that they can make informed choices leading to the most appropriate progression route for them as individuals.

Careers-related learning is a substantial component within the Learning for Life and Work part of the statutory curriculum. Through this young people are given the opportunity to learn about careers opportunities and to develop the skills to become effective decision makers.

Schools work in partnership with DEL's careers advisers who offer impartial advice and guidance to young people at key transition points on making appropriate and informed choices on pathways that lead to higher or further education, training or employment.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education what support his Department has in place to assist pupils with emotional health problems.

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education (DE) promotes positive mental health and well-being of pupils in schools through a range of developments.

The Revised Curriculum for primary and post-primary schools has elements designed to develop the young person as an individual and to enhance young people's own awareness of the stressors in their lives and their capacity to deal with them.

The "iMatter" Programme is intended to support the entire school community to be engaged in promoting resilient emotional health for all pupils. Under the programme a suite of homework diary inserts and posters on topics of concern to young people such as self esteem and coping with stress, worry and anxiety, and outlining sources of help are prepared and distributed annually.

Pupils are also alerted to a topical "Message of the Month" each time they access the C2K system.

The Department issued a "Guide to Managing Critical Incidents in Schools" in February this year. The Guide is aimed at ensuring a regional approach to dealing with critical incidents and is designed to help schools be prepared and to ensure effective management before, during and after the event. The Guide is available on the DE website.

DE is a member of and funds the local Anti-Bullying Forum (NIABF) which brings together local statutory and voluntary organisations to help schools and organisations working with young people to develop appropriate strategies to prevent and deal with bullying behaviours. In August 2013 the Forum published "Effective Responses to Bullying" to support schools in the management of alleged bullying incidents. Further information is available at www.niabf.org.uk.

The Independent Counselling Service for Schools (ICSS) has been accessible to young people of post-primary age in mainstream schools since September 2007 and in special schools from January 2011. On average 1432 pupils per month use the ICSS Service. As part of the current arrangements for support following a critical incident, pupils in primary schools have access to counselling support. Work will start later this year on how access to the counselling service might be extended to primary aged pupils.

In October 2012 the Delivering Social Change programme provided funding for a series of six Signature projects. One of these projects, the "Nurture Unit" Signature Project, which is being taken forward jointly by DE and DSD, involved the establishment of 20 new nurture units. Nurture Units offer a short term, focussed intervention strategy which addresses barriers to learning arising from social, emotional and/or behavioural difficulties, in an inclusive, supportive manner. The units aim to improve the child's ability to engage effectively with adults and their peers so that, following their time in the Nurture Unit (typically 2-4 terms) they are able to re-integrate and participate effectively within their mainstream class. In addition to the 20 new nurture units established under the Signature Project, DE is also funding existing nurture units in 10 schools where funding had ceased or would be due to cease during the life of the Signature Project (June 2015).

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Education to provide a breakdown by constituency of the £5.4m of funding provided for school uniform grants.

Mr O'Dowd: The £5.4m of funding relates to my Department's estimated budget for 2014/15 for the clothing allowance scheme. This is a demand determined service and funding will be provided to meet the number of awards. Funding is allocated to Education and Library Boards which are responsible for administration of the Clothing Allowance Scheme. The scheme was extended in September 2014 to include post-primary pupils in the Working Tax Credit criterion.

The Education and Library Boards have provided actual expenditure on the clothing allowance scheme in the 2014/15 financial year up to 24 October 2014 broken down by constituency as follows:

Constituency	Expenditure 2014/15
Belfast East	£164,641.00

Note: Expenditure relates to awards to pupils attending schools in the constituencies listed.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 37060/11-15, whether senior management of the Southern Education and Library Board received annual salary increases, in addition to performance related pay, in the last five years.

(AQW 38001/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I can confirm that no senior management staff in the Southern Education and Library Board received both performance related pay and annual salary increases in the last 5 years.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 32495/11-15, whether Education Welfare Officers are now able to access C2K attendance records from their offices.

(AQW 38046/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I would refer you to the answer to AQW 34155/11-15 dated 26 June 2014 which informed Mr Kinahan MLA that C2k intended to conduct the pilot from September 2014 to December 2014 with a view to Education Welfare Officers (EWO) being able to access C2k attendance records from their offices.

An initial pilot involving one EWO from the Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) area and one school commenced during August/September 2014. Another EWO and another school within the BELB will follow the same process before the end of this year and if the process is robust and no security risks are present the pilot will be extended to each of the Education and Library Boards.

The Department will review the position with C2k early in the New Year.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the amount of funding initially allocated to Gingerbread NI in 2014/15; and (ii) whether this amount has been reduced due to budget pressures.

(AQW 38069/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Early Years – the Organisation for young children has awarded Gingerbread NI £14,410 from the DE Early Years Fund in 2014/15, which represents a slight increase on the allocation made to them in 2013/14.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many (i) controlled; and (ii) catholic maintained post-primary schools have transformed their management status to integrated since the option became available.

(AQW 38074/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since the introduction of the statutory measures contained in the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989, which facilitate the transformation process, a total of 5 controlled post-primary schools have transformed to integrated status.

To date, no catholic maintained schools have transformed to integrated status.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AWQ 33588/11-15, for his assessment of the Drumragh Judgement, particularly of the conclusion that the inflexibility of its projections could inhibit his Department in the outworking of its Article 64 duty to integrated education in its day-to-day decisions.

(AQW 38077/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I welcome the Court's clarification in respect of Article 64 and the finding that I had not fettered my discretion on the Drumragh Integrated College Development Proposal. I also welcome the Court's acceptance that it is acceptable and necessary to use an analytical tool, i.e. the Needs Model, for area planning.

The Needs Model was designed to calculate estimates for growth in broad sectors based on population projections and current patterns of enrolment. However, it has been made clear to all parties that this is the starting point for planning purposes. It is not intended that the plans adhere rigidly to the distribution of the calculated need for places across the sectors.

It is important, therefore, that those representing the Integrated sector make a robust case in discussions with the Boards and CCMS to ensure that genuine need for local expansion in the sector is reflected in amended need figures and, subsequently, in the area plans.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Education how many children diagnosed with autism spectrum disorders are in primary and post-primary education in South Antrim.

(AQO 6947/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The 2013/14 school census recorded 209 pupils as having Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) in the South Antrim constituency. Of these, 138 are in the primary sector and 71 are in the post-primary sector.

The data is sourced from the school census rather than a diagnostic source. The school census data relates to those children who have been assessed as having ASD.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education what steps he is taking to promote greater community use of schools.

(AQO 6948/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Departmental Guidance Community Use of School Premises: A Guidance Toolkit for Schools which seeks to encourage and assist schools in providing for community access to school facilities was published and issued to all schools in January 2014. The Guidance is also hosted on the DE webpage.

The Department's guide for School Governors also highlights the responsibility governors have in promoting the use of the school in the community and actively encourages them to consider making school premises available as a community facility where possible.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Education, in light of the June 2012 capital investment announcement, for an update on the progress of the school builds which are currently on site.

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details schools that were announced in 2012 that are currently on site or where construction work is about to commence. Of the 18 schools announced, one project has already been completed.

At a further 5 schools designs have been completed and procurement of the construction work is underway. It is anticipated that these schools will be on site before the end of this financial year.

The remaining schools are at an earlier stage of planning.

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the Chief Inspector of the Education and Training Inspectorate's bi-annual report.

(AQO 6951/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Chief Inspector's biennial report, covering the period from 1 July 2012 to 30 June 2014, is due to have its official launch on 6 November 2014. I will meet with the Chief Inspector prior to that for a briefing on her findings.

The Chief Inspector's Report is the Education and Training Inspectorate's independent, professional, evaluation of the quality of education being provided across our local education and training system, including strengths and areas for improvement. The findings of the report are based on first-hand evidence gained from a broad range of programmed inspections and surveys and incidental visits to schools and other organisations undertaken by District Inspectors.

This will be the second Chief Inspector's Report presented to me as Minister for Education. I see it as an essential component in informing me about the state of education and training here and in promoting improvement and building capacity in the system.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education why the Education Bill does not give the Education Authority the right to appoint its own Chief Executive.

Mr O'Dowd: The Education Bill states that the Education Authority shall appoint all of its Chief Executives, with the exception of the first Chief Executive, who shall be appointed directly by the Department. This is normal when establishing a new Non-Departmental Public Body.

There are practical reasons for this. The Board of the Authority will not be established in time to undertake the selection and appointment of the first Chief Executive to be in post on or before 1 April 2015. This is critical for the Education Authority to ensure that the necessary minimum administrative arrangements are in place by 1 April 2015.

As I stated in the Assembly during second stage debate of the Education Bill, it would be my intention that the first Chief Executive would be appointed on an interim basis, for a period no longer than 2 years.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education what actions his Department has taken to tackle pupil absenteeism.

(AQO 6953/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Regular school attendance and educational attainment are inextricably linked. Regular attendance ensures that pupils get the best possible outcomes from their period in compulsory education and improves their chances of employment and life chances in the longer term.

I have given close attention to the conclusions and recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee report on this issue, in particular that we need a Pupil Attendance Strategy. A Memorandum of Reply was published in August and it sets out a programme of work for my Department and the Education and Library Boards (ELBs).

Much has already been done. For example, to assist with the development of the Pupil Attendance Strategy, my officials have held workshops with schools and the Education Welfare Service (EWS). Direct engagement will also take place with pupils, parents, school governors, other government departments and the wider community.

My Department's guidance to schools on "Pupil Attendance and Absence Recording" has been revised and will issue in the coming weeks. It strongly recommends, among other things, that each school should have a clear pupil attendance policy. This has been supplemented by "School Attendance Matters – a Parent's Guide" which was issued in September for distribution to the parents/carers of all school-age children.

My Department and the ELBs continue to provide support to vulnerable groups, such as Looked after Children, Travellers, School-Age Mothers and Newcomers. This work is supported by the EWS, looked after children teams, the Traveller Education Support Service (TESS) and the Inclusion and Diversity Service.

The levels of unauthorised pupil absences are unacceptable. Evidence shows that not all schools are following up on the reasons for absences. My Department will be writing to these schools in the coming weeks to highlight how many days of education have been missed by their pupils where the reason for the absence is unknown. If we are to develop a meaningful Pupil Attendance Strategy, we need to know the underlying causes of absenteeism which develop into educational underachievement for so many of our young people.

I remain committed to addressing the issue to ensure that our young people have every opportunity to reap the benefits of regular school attendance.

Department for Employment and Learning

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department is taking to assess and address the risk factors resulting in young people who are Not in Education, Employment or Training.
(AQW 37353/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): My Department is responsible for the implementation of the Executive's "Pathways to Success" which seeks to address the needs of all young people who are presently Not in Education, Employment or Training (NEET). This work is monitored and supported by a delivery infrastructure under the direction of the NEET Advisory Group, which is representative of key decision makers from Government Departments, the voluntary and community sector, education, health, social care and business sectors and local government.

A range of programmes has been developed to meet the needs of those young who are in the NEET category, all of which include the development of a personal action plan based on a detailed assessment of each young person's specific needs. The following programmes currently provide targeted support to young people in the NEET category. I have also referenced a number of new initiatives which will provide additional support to those young people furthest away from the labour market. These include:

Collaboration and Innovation Fund

This programme commences with an initial assessment by qualified staff to identify the barriers which are preventing the young people moving towards employment. This enables staff to develop a meaningful action plan designed to address the specific barriers and help the young people to improve their employability skills.

Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS)

This is a community-based employment initiative designed to help the "hardest to reach" in targeted geographical areas. LEMIS Mentors travel to meet clients with a common employability barrier in their local area, to conduct an assessment of the clients' specific needs and to arrange mentoring and other support measures to address the critical barriers.

The Community Family Support Programme (CFSP)

CFSP focuses on the needs of the most disadvantaged families, to enable young people to re-engage with Employment, Education, or Training. This programme has received additional financial support from OFMDFM and has been designated as a 'Signature Project under the Delivering Social Change initiative.

Careers Service

My Department's Careers Service currently provides dedicated advice and support to all 16-17 year olds in the NEET category. These clients are allocated a specific careers adviser who provides support and advocacy to assist them to secure an appropriate education, employment or training opportunity. Careers advisers also work with those young people who have unfortunately dropped out of education and training, to help them back into a positive labour market opportunity.

The United Youth Programme (UYP)

My Department is leading on the development of the Executive's United Youth Programme which has two specific outcomes: The personal development of young people who are Not in Education, Employment or Training (NEET), to improve their confidence, skills and experience; and

- i. The promotion of good relations between these young people and others across the community, including people (and particularly young people) from other religious backgrounds.
- ii. In the early pilot phase I am particularly interested in finding new and creative ways of engaging those most disadvantaged or at risk of exclusion.

Apprenticeships

In June 2014, my Department published Securing our Success: The Northern Ireland Strategy on Apprenticeships which will be central in transforming our skills landscape and securing our economic success. The new model for apprenticeships will be in place for 2016 and includes a range of commitments to increase participation by a wide range of individuals. In particular, a pilot project will be taken forward to develop a new youth training offer to widen access to apprenticeships to individuals with disabilities or other barriers that are impacting on their ability to engage in education and training.

Economic Inactivity

My Department is currently working in partnership with DETI, DSD, Invest NI and DHSSPS to develop a new strategy to tackle economic inactivity. A key aspect of this Strategy will be the delivery of initiatives designed to reduce the numbers of young people who are economically inactive.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what training programmes his Department offers to people over the age of 25 years who are trying to get back into employment.

Dr Farry: Those seeking to return to work who are over 25 can avail of assistance in the first instance from my Department's Employment Service Advisers. This assistance can include training through the voluntary Employment Service Support (ESS) provision. This provision offers a number of different choices around work related activities which can be tailored to suit an individual's employability needs, for example, the opportunity to undertake a short accredited training course. It operates from June 2014 to March 2015. Anyone over 18 years old who is not working or working less than 16 hours each week may apply.

The Department's new main employment programme, Steps 2 Success (S2S) commenced on 20th October 2014. Its primary purpose is the delivery of a flexible personalised service tailored to meet individual needs, which will help people move into and remain in employment. Training within the programme is matched to individual job goals. S2S is available to all eligible jobseekers irrespective of their employability, need or age.

Clients who are in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) and aged between 18 and 24 will be mandated onto S2S after 9 months on benefit and those aged 25+ and on JSA for 12 months will be mandated onto the programme after 12 months on benefit. Early entry for all other JSA claimants, clients on Employment Support Allowance (Work Related Activity Group) (ESA (WRAG)) and existing ESA clients is available with the agreement of their Employment Service Adviser. The Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS), an initiative designed to help unemployed people aged 16 plus in the community overcome those issues that may be preventing them from finding and keeping a job, is also available through by Department. The service is provided by local community employment organisations in the Belfast area, Derry, Strabane, Newry & Mourne, Moyle and Cookstown District Council areas. In addition to these areas LEMIS is also available on an outreach basis throughout Northern Ireland to individuals with a common employability barrier to employment, for example, young people (16-24 years) Not in Education, Employment or Training (NEET). In participating in the programme clients may avail of Short Accredited Training Courses.

The Service is particularly focused on the homeless, ex-offenders/ex-prisoners, people with a history of drug/alcohol misuse and care leavers.

More job ready LEMIS clients may also participate in short pre-employment training courses to enable them to gain work experience relating to vacancies and prepare them for interviews.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the current income figures for (i) Queen's University; and (ii) the University of Ulster from (a) block grant for undergraduate teaching; and (b) fee income from NI-domiciled undergraduate students, for each of the last three years.

(AQW 37673/11-15)

Dr Farry: The income figures requested is detailed in the tables below.

Queen's University

Block grant	57.0	52.6	52.3

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for a breakdown of the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of university students from each district council area that dropped out during the first year of their course, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37713/11-15)

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of departmental funded PhD places available in each year since 2012.

(AQW 37798/11-15)

Dr Farry: Since 2012, my Department has made available funding for up to the following numbers of PhD studentships at the Queen's University Belfast and The University of Ulster:

Academic Year	PhD Studentships
2012/13	595
2013/14	631
2014/15	729

The universities can at their discretion commute some of these PhD studentships to students undertaking Masters Research degrees, although this is uncommon.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of Post-Graduate awards that his Department has provided in partnership with universities, in each year since 2011.

(AQW 37799/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department makes available funding for postgraduate awards in the form of PhD studentships at the Queen's University Belfast and The University of Ulster. At the discretion of the awarding university, these awards can be commuted to students undertaking a Masters Research degree (MRes). The awards since 2011 are as follows:

Academic Year	Funded PhD Studentships	Committed to MRes
2011/12	695	20
2012/13	595	18
2013/14	631	NA
2014/15	729	NA

Information in respect of funded MRes degrees for academic years 2013/14 and 2014/15 is not yet available.

In addition to the above, my Department also provides funding for the Aerospace MSc Bursary Programme. In academic year 2013/14 DEL supported 11 bursary holders and in academic year 2014/15 is supporting 10. There will be a further intake of bursary holders in academic year 2015/16.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the increase in the number of further education qualifications provided for by his Department in each year since the launch of his Department's Skills Strategy.

(AQW 37801/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have interpreted your question as being about the number of qualifications achieved by learners in further education colleges, which have been funded by the Department through the further education recurrent grant.

On this basis, the numbers of qualifications achieved by learners in further education colleges between 2010/11 and 2012/13 are provided in the table below.

Academic Year	Achievements
2010/11	51,443
2011/12	53,066
2012/13	61,932

Source: Funded Learning Unit (FLU) data.

The figures provided above exclude Essential Skills. The numbers of qualifications achieved by learners in further education colleges in the Essential Skills of literacy, numeracy and ICT, over the same period, are provided in the table below.

Academic Year	Achievements
2010/11	14,907
2011/12	16,132
2012/13	15,643

Source: Funded Learning Unit (FLU) data.

2010/11 is the earliest academic year for which the Department holds validated and reliable data on learner achievements in further education colleges. The 2012/13 academic year is the most recent year for which validated data is available.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, in relation to the Work and Families Bill, why he did not include a section on children and young people with special education needs or disabilities, as included in the Children and Families Act 2014.

(AQW 37871/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Work and Families Bill currently before the Assembly is an employment Bill with a tight focus on employment rights issues, and in particular the entitlements of working families following the birth or adoption of a child.

Whilst I am satisfied that it is appropriate for the Bill to have that specific focus, my Department has been alert to the need to consider the potential applicability here of provisions within Part 3 of the Children and Families Act 2014 concerning the needs of young people with special educational needs or disabilities in England.

Although this is very much a cross-cutting issue, my Department's assessment regarding those provisions falling within its own remit is that there is no direct read-across to structures in Northern Ireland and that a birth to 25 education, health and care plan of the kind supported by the Act does not sufficiently recognise and respond to the changing needs of young people as they move into adulthood.

Officials in my Department will continue to monitor developments in Great Britain and elsewhere, and to liaise with those other Northern Ireland Departments having a relevant policy responsibility, to ensure that the potential applicability to our own systems of the latest thinking in this important area can be appropriately considered.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he has agreed on a location for the proposed new facility for the Northern Regional College.

(AQW 37891/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Northern Regional College is currently preparing a business case for the provision of further education in the Ballymoney, Coleraine and Ballymena areas. Until the outcome of that business case is known and associated funding identified, it is not possible to provide details of any preferred option.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the proposed new facility for the Northern Regional College.

(AQW 37893/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Northern Regional College is currently preparing a business case for the provision of further education in the Ballymoney, Coleraine and Ballymena areas. Until the outcome of that business case is known and associated funding identified, it is not possible to provide details of any preferred option.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the careers fairs held outside Northern Ireland which were attended by representatives from (a) Queen's University Belfast; and (b) the University of Ulster, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 37929/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The Universities are responsible for their own policies and procedures, including staff attendance at events.

As my Department does not hold the information you have requested, departmental officials contacted both Queen's University and the University of Ulster for this information, as detailed below:

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the importance of the provision of facilities such as the Apprenticeships NI programme in the plans for the new Northern Regional College.

(AQO 6963/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department's new Strategy for Apprenticeships, published in June 2014, outlines a new apprenticeship model which will be operational here by 2016. This new approach to apprenticeships will be central to transforming our skills landscape and to securing our economic success.

Fundamentally, the Strategy establishes apprenticeships as a system of employment and learning that can be applied to a much wider range of occupations. It will put employers in the driving seat of developing apprenticeships and Further Education will have a central role to play - working with employers to develop and deliver curriculum and qualifications at level 3 and above that will offer seamless progression across further and higher education and mobility across the wider economy.

The Strategy will have a greater focus on quality and therefore it will be those providers who meet the highest quality standards that will be funded to deliver apprenticeship training in areas of importance to our economy.

The further education sector, including Northern Regional College, will be central to the delivery of the future apprenticeship model and this enhanced role should be fundamental to their plans going forward.

The Northern Regional College is currently liaising with my Department in the preparation of an outline business case to explore options for the provision of further education, including the new Apprenticeship model, in the Ballymena, Ballymoney and Coleraine areas.

This business case will identify the accommodation needed to deliver the planned curriculum and other further and higher education courses appropriate to the area.

My Department is working closely with the College to ensure that learners, employers and the community in the College's area will benefit from the state of the art accommodation and equipment that are now available in many other College areas.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the financial support his Department has provided to new jobs introduced and promoted by InvestNI, over the last three years.

Dr Farry: In total, my Department has agreed to provide financial support totaling £5,704,519 to 14 projects in respect of 3,690 new jobs introduced and promoted by Invest Northern Ireland since the start of the 2011/2012 financial year.

You will wish to note that the financial support is that which is agreed in the Assured Skills Letters of Offer with the respective companies, and will only be fully spent when all the jobs are created. Furthermore, in most cases the financial support crosses several financial years.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, given that Belfast Metropolitan College has informed staff that budget cuts will have a detrimental impact, for an update on the current position of the college.

Dr Farry: You will be aware that for 2014/15 a cut of 4.4% has been confirmed for my Department. However, to date, there has been no detrimental impact to Belfast Metropolitan College in 2014-15, as my Department has managed this in-year budgetary reduction through cuts to the central Departmental budget, rather than to front line services.

Looking forward to 2015-16, until final decisions have been agreed regarding the extent of the budgetary reductions for further education, I am unable to advise what the impact will be at Belfast Metropolitan College or indeed any other college. However, due to the potential scale of the proposed cuts, it is likely that all services will be affected.

Given the likely severity of budget cuts facing the sector next year, all colleges, including Belfast Metropolitan College, have been asked to identify and assess possible savings options and report back. My officials are currently reviewing these.

I can assure you that my Department will continue to work directly with the further education sector to minimise the impact of any future budget cuts on student delivery. However should further budget cuts be implemented, it is my assessment that all front line services will be impacted.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the action plan arising from the Disability Employment and Skills Strategy.

(AQO 6957/11-15)

Dr Farry: A new Disability Employment Strategy is currently being developed in conjunction with the main local disability organisations throughout Northern Ireland. It has been, and continues to be a very positive example of partnership working between my Department and the Community and Voluntary sector.

There has also been extensive engagement with various groups of people with a full range of disabilities, and their feedback and input will be reflected in the public consultation document that is currently being drafted.

In order to provide a more comprehensive contribution to the Transitions Action Plan, arising from the Bamford Ministerial Group on mental health and learning disability, it is proposed that the strategy is extended to formally include the other key services for which my Department has lead responsibility.

This would result in a more integrated and cohesive Disability Employment and Skills Strategy for people with significant disability related barriers to work. One of the key aims of this strategy therefore, is to provide a clear transitions pathway from education through to economic employment; one that will offer a menu of tailored, quality services and support, to assist young disabled people in their pursuit of new skills, employment opportunities and career development.

My Department will carry out a public consultation exercise on the proposals contained within the strategy document in the early part of 2015 with a target date for the launch of the strategy thereafter.

The associated Action Plan to take forward the recommendations will be developed following the public consultation, and will be incorporated into the new Disability Employment and Skills Strategy.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the total number of undergraduate students at Queen's University; and the percentage who are (i) members of the Protestant community; (ii) members of the Roman Catholic community; and (iii) of unknown background.

(AQW 38228/11-15)

Dr Farry: The attached table was produced by the Higher Education Statistics Agency and shows the latest figures available. The table also shows the non-NI Domiciled undergraduates.

All Undergraduate enrolments at Queen's University, Belfast by Religion - 2012/13

Catholic	7,395	41%

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the Review of Careers Education, Information, Advice & Guidance.

(AQO 6960/11-15)

Dr Farry: Minister O'Dowd and I have just received the final report from the Independent Panel. We intend to consider the review findings carefully before making any decisions on the way forward.

I know that the panel's report has built on the detailed review undertaken by the Employment and Learning Committee and reports from the CBI.

Mr Milne asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of his Department's report on Labour Mobility.

(AQO 6964/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Labour Mobility in Northern Ireland report was produced by Oxford Economics and published in mid September. The research reinforces the point that labour mobility is an important driver as we seek to realise our economic ambitions.

By matching demand and supply better, labour mobility helps individuals get the best return on the skills they develop. It helps businesses by creating a wider recruitment pool and it helps society by developing more cohesive, inclusive workplaces.

The work shows that improved transport and childcare can act to encourage labour mobility. It finds that chill factors or sectarian division continue to negatively influence job search activities for some. This is concerning.

On foot of the research, my Department is preparing a policy response to ensure labour mobility can be facilitated effectively. My officials will engage with others as that policy response is formulated.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when he will introduce his proposed reforms to employment law.

(AQO 6965/11-15)

Dr Farry: I recently held a series of constructive high level discussions with stakeholders to assist in finalising policy decisions associated with my Department's employment law review.

With those meetings complete, I am currently in the process of seeking the agreement of Executive colleagues to the drafting of an Employment Bill, which I intend to introduce in the spring of next year. The purpose of the Bill will be to provide the legislative basis to implement key policy decisions.

My Department will publish the policy response to the employment law review in the near future, setting out in detail the decisions that I have taken and the reasons for those decisions.

Mr McCartney asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much his Department contributed to the Higher Education Better Regulation Group in 2013-14.

(AQO 6966/11-15)

Dr Farry: During the 2013-14 year my Department made a contribution of £2,421 to the Higher Education Better Regulation Group.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what support mechanisms are in place to ensure that people with hidden disabilities are able to participate in further and higher education.

(AQO 6967/11-15)

Dr Farry: All students are encouraged to declare disabilities when enrolling in further education. Students declaring a disability or learning difficulty are assessed by college staff and, if required, by external professionals, so that support arrangements funded through the Additional Support Fund can be implemented.

There are a number of additional support mechanisms in place in colleges to identify students with disabilities. These include liaison between lecturing staff and colleges' learning support staff as well as liaison between colleges and external bodies, such as schools and the careers service.

Where students declare a disability or learning difficulty on enrolment, an individual supplementary learning agreement is completed to ensure the necessary support is put in place. Integral to the process are formal reviews of this agreement which also facilitates the identification of additional hidden disabilities.

A range of support mechanisms are also in place to facilitate the participation in higher education of students with a disability or learning difficulty. Access to this support is dependent on the student self-declaring their disability.

On self-declaring, students are encouraged to apply for Disabled Students Allowances. These allowances can help to cover the costs of an assessment of the student's support needs and any extra costs of the additional support they may require throughout their course as a direct result of the specific condition. This can include major items of specialist equipment, the assistance of non-medical support providers, travel and other costs.

A student can apply at any time before or during their course. The amount of assistance available is not means tested and does not have to be repaid.

Mr Brady asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how he will apply the lessons learned from his recent trip to the USA to ensure that people in Newry and Armagh have the necessary skill set to make the area more attractive to inward investment.

(AQO 6968/11-15)

Dr Farry: During my trip to the United States, I explained to companies that our doors are open for business and investing in Northern Ireland makes good business sense. I also examined the current and future skills needs of companies who are either establishing an operating base here or are looking to establish one.

My Department has no input as to where a foreign direct investment company who is considering investing in Northern Ireland should locate its office. This is a decision entirely for the company.

However, my Department leads a number of interventions to ensure that skills required by employers are available throughout Northern Ireland. For example, working with Invest NI, the Assured Skills programme is designed to help attract new foreign direct investment companies by assuring them that the skills they need to be successful are available here.

In partnership with Invest NI, I believe Assured Skills support continues to be instrumental in securing new jobs. To date, there have been fifteen company projects through Assured Skills and, when fully realised and all 3,736 jobs are created, this will benefit the local economy by £96m each year.

Furthermore, the Department's Skills Solutions service plays an active role in helping local businesses across Northern Ireland, and within the Newry and Armagh area, to address their skills needs. During the current year a total of thirteen companies in the Newry and Armagh area received training through Skills Solutions.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the (i) bureaucracy barriers with Invest NI in respect of encouraging inward investment in Northern Ireland; and (ii) information requested of companies wishing to locate in Northern Ireland, compared to information requested in the Republic of Ireland.

(AQW 37703/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment):

- (i) Invest NI competes in a very competitive international market for inward investment. This involves a significant element of business development, which includes running tailored inward visits for potential international investors. This is a proactive process, which hopefully results in Northern Ireland being considered as a suitable investment location.

As the relationship with the potential investor develops, both parties will exchange information. The company will carry out detailed due diligence on Northern Ireland, including skills, operating costs, academic linkages and property. Invest NI will carry out detailed due diligence on the company and its business plan, ahead of securing funding and agreeing a Letter of Offer with the company. This process is not considered to be bureaucratic by the companies as the majority have been through a similar process to raise money from investors, Banks, Venture Capital and for some, the Stock Market.

Invest NI recognises that this engagement process is central to building a positive relationship with potential and existing investors. This process is independently reviewed, with results from Invest NI's 2014 Annual Customer satisfaction survey showing that for those who received funding from Invest NI, that 79% were satisfied with the application process and 73% were content with the time taken to approve their application.

Therefore, Invest NI is confident that there are no unnecessary barriers in respect of encouraging inward investment in Northern Ireland.

- (ii) Invest NI has not carried out a detailed analysis of due diligence and approval processes across the UK and Ireland, however it has met with a number of the development agencies, including those in the Republic of Ireland, to share experiences and to discuss matters of mutual interest. It is clear from these discussions that the due diligence and approval processes are very similar. This should be expected as the funding schemes run by Invest NI and the Irish development agencies are governed by the EU. There should be consistency in approach, funding levels and the kinds of information requested.

Therefore, Invest NI is confident that the information requested of companies wishing to locate in Northern Ireland, would be comparable to information requested in the Republic of Ireland, and in other parts of the UK.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what role her Department has in securing export accreditation for Northern Ireland food products into China; and what steps her Department has taken.

(AQW 37722/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The issue of export certification is a reserved matter and is therefore dealt with on a UK-wide basis by the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). DARD has been working closely with DEFRA on this matter for a number of years now and we believe we are close to a final inspection of our pork plants, which should allow exports of pork products to commence in 2015.

I have written to the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on this matter on a number of occasions and also to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills, asking them to progress this matter during their respective visits to China. I have also raised the matter with the UK's Consul General in Shanghai.

I am aware of the potential that exists in China for our food companies and Invest NI will have a group stand at the Food Hotel China Exhibition from 19th - 21st November, when 10 companies will be exhibiting with a further 4 companies visiting the exhibition.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 36539/11-15, (i) how many days have been allocated for Barry McGuigan and Carl Frampton to act as Northern Ireland Ambassadors; (ii) what activities this will involve; and (iii) how the Tourist Board's social media and digital content will be shared through fan bases.

(AQW 37729/11-15)

Mrs Foster: NITB's Sponsorship Agreement contained:

- (i) An allocated number of Barry McGuigan's time and Carl Frampton's time to be used for NITB's promotion and PR purposes – the allocated number is commercially sensitive information.
- (ii) This time will be used for a variety of activities including:
- Attendances at NITB events for media or competition prize winners.
  - Distributing NITB messages, footage, images.
  - Production of photographs & editorial for NITB literature and collateral distribution.
  - Photographs and footage on NITB website(s) and social media.
  - Media interviews and quotes for press releases.
  - Representation on behalf of NITB at key events where appropriate.

Cyclone Promotions, Barry McGuigan and Carl Frampton will share NITB social media posts relating to the fight itself, and other sporting events in Northern Ireland through an agreed framework.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what role her Department is playing in the preparation of an development plan for mid and east Antrim from 2015.

(AQW 37754/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI and Invest NI continue to work in partnership with the new Council area of Mid & East Antrim District Council to provide input to the region's Community Plan on matters relating to economic development. Invest NI is leading as the Statutory Partner for Community Planning on economic development matters.

As part of Local Government Reform three broad economic development functions will transfer from Invest NI to Councils. These functions are entrepreneurial awareness, social enterprise and under-represented groups. Significant progress has been made between DETI, Invest NI and the CEO team at Mid & East Antrim District Council in preparation for this transfer.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department, and InvestNI, are developing the opportunities for social enterprises to expand, develop and become involved in entrepreneurial opportunities; and what funding has been allocated to assist these enterprises.

(AQW 37791/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department leads, on behalf of the Executive, on the development of social economy policy for Northern Ireland. This is taken forward through a cross departmental Social Economy Policy Group (SEPG) which includes representatives from several Executive departments which will be delivering their own social enterprise projects.

In October 2012 my Department appointed Social Enterprise Northern Ireland to design, manage and deliver a Social Economy Work Programme (SEWP), with funding from my Department of £150,000 per annum for up to a maximum of three years. The main objective of SEWP is to develop and implement a programme of initiatives to enable the continued growth of a sustainable social economy sector.

Invest Northern Ireland is developing opportunities for social enterprises to expand, develop and become involved in entrepreneurial opportunities through its following programmes:

- Social Entrepreneurship Programme (SEP): In 2013-2014 SEP supported 55 new social enterprise start ups at both the business idea and business planning stage to develop skills to enable them to grow.
- Jobs Fund:
  1. Social Enterprise Employment Grant: In 2013-2014 109 new jobs were created through employment grant support of £182,000 from Invest NI.
  2. The Social Enterprise Franchise Programme: Provided support to 35 social enterprises interested in franchisor/franchisee business models. Total programme costs were £165,833.
- Social Enterprise Hubs Project: OFMDFM signature project under the Delivering Social Change (DSC) framework. The Project Board includes DSD, DETI and Invest NI. The hubs are located in Londonderry, North Belfast, South Belfast, East Belfast, West Belfast, Lisburn, Downpatrick, Lurgan, Ballymena, Strabane and Enniskillen providing space (admin or retail) for social enterprises to test trade. There is also advice, mentoring and training available.

In addition to the above during 2013/14 Invest NI assisted 14 social enterprises to access additional Invest NI support related to their business growth plans, including Innovation Vouchers, help with exports, design and ICT.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she has any plans to carry out a review of the role and functioning of small business support, including the work of the enterprise agencies.

Mrs Foster: My Department and Invest NI are acutely aware of the importance of small business in our economy, where over 99% of businesses are classified as SMEs. Invest NI has a comprehensive range of support available to meet the needs of small enterprises, and in 2013/14 Invest NI offered £66million of support to SMEs. Indeed, in June, Thompson Aero Seating announced it plans to create 85 skilled manufacturing jobs, with Invest NI contributing £1.7 million to support the creation of the new jobs.

Invest NI is constantly reviewing its products and services to meet changing environments. Recent examples of these products and services include the Access To Finance funds launched specifically to enable small businesses and start ups to access equity and debt financing; the launch of a free-phone advice and signposting line; and Innovation Voucher which is designed to help small businesses take the step towards R&D.

This work is ongoing, and staying close to small business remains a key consideration for Invest NI in delivering its services.

With regard to the Local Enterprise Agency network, Invest NI, recognising the important contribution local enterprise agencies can make in their areas, helped this network undertake a review in 2010. The network, and its member organisation Enterprise NI, accepted and acted upon that review.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what progress has been made with the Department of the Environment on levies on the disposal of end of life tyres.

(AQW 37802/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI has no role in this area.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department has advanced the provision of a recycling charge here and in Britain.

(AQW 37803/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI has no role in this area.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what opportunities exist for engagement between Mid and East Antrim Council and the social economy in Larne.

(AQW 37812/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department leads, on behalf of the Executive, on the development of social economy policy for Northern Ireland. This is taken forward through a cross departmental Social Economy Policy Group (SPEG).

In October 2012 my Department appointed Social Enterprise NI to design, manage and deliver a Social Economy Work Programme (SEWP), with funding from my Department of £150,000 per annum for up to a maximum of three years. The main objective of the SEWP is to develop and implement a programme of initiatives to enable the continued growth of a sustainable social economy sector.

Social Enterprise NI works closely with a number of social enterprises in the East Antrim area, as well as with Ballymena Business centre and Antrim Enterprise agency. Both of these organisations have a good understanding of the sector and the support they require. Social Enterprise NI has also delivered 'Introduction to Social Enterprise' workshops in North Antrim, and has met with both Larne Borough Council, and Carrickfergus Council to raise awareness of their work.

My Department and Invest NI continue to work in partnership with the new Council area of Mid & East Antrim District Council to provide input to the region's Community Plan on matters relating to economic development. Invest NI is leading as the Statutory Partner for Community Planning on economic development matters.

Significant progress has also been made regarding the transfer of the three broad economic development functions from April 2015, as part of Local Government Reform, which includes social entrepreneurship. Social entrepreneurship is currently the responsibility of Invest NI and the delivery is through the Social Entrepreneurship Programme (SEP). The programme is contracted across Northern Ireland to Enterprise NI and the Programme Manager works for Larne Enterprise Development Company (LEDCOM).

SEP focuses on supporting new social economy businesses with the potential to grow, helping them to build the skills and capabilities to make an impact on the local economy. The programme offers support at both the business idea and business planning stage. Since the current Invest NI SEP began two years ago there have been 14 participants from the Mid and East Antrim Council area (Ballymena 3, Carrick 4 and Larne 7). Four of these groups are now trading and collectively have created 26 new jobs in the area.

The Social Enterprise Hubs Project is one of the OFMDFM six signature projects under the Delivering Social Change framework. DSD, DETI and Invest Northern Ireland are managing the project through a Project Board. Invest NI is managing the contracts for delivery of the business services including, mentoring, signposting, training, best practice visits and space (admin or retail) where social enterprises can test trade. One of the hubs is located in Ballymena, with LEDCOM as the delivery agent.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how existing expertise and resources are being utilised for economic development in the Mid and East Antrim Council area.

Mrs Foster: Invest NI provides a range of financial and advisory support to people with export focused business ideas. Support is wide ranging and can focus on trade development, skills development, research and development, process development, intellectual property and assistance toward the costs of employing new staff.

Over the 5 year period 2009/10-2013/14 Invest NI has made 1,251 offers of support totalling £36.40 million of assistance to businesses in the Mid & East Antrim District Council area. This contributes towards £207.14 million of investment in the area and has helped promote 1,798 new jobs promoted and safeguarded 1,325 jobs.

DETI and Invest NI continue to work in partnership with the new Council area of Mid & East Antrim District Council to provide input to the region's Community Plan on matters relating to economic development. Invest NI is leading as the Statutory Partner for Community Planning on economic development matters.

As part of Local Government Reform three broad economic development functions will transfer from Invest NI to Councils. These functions are entrepreneurial awareness, social enterprise and under-represented groups. Significant progress has been made between DETI, Invest NI and the CEO team at Mid & East Antrim District Council in preparation for this transfer.

Invest NI has also worked closely with all Councils in the region – including those in the Mid & East Antrim District Council area - to help identify gaps in the provision of support to the SME base and develop initiatives to complement existing economic development provision. These projects are primarily aimed at increasing SME capability and competitiveness and are funded through the Local Economic Development Measure of the EU Sustainable Competitiveness Programme, Invest NI and local Councils.

Examples of businesses in the area that have been supported by Invest NI include Wrightbus, Garage Door Systems, Schrader, The Advantage Foundation, Terumo BCT and Old Mill Saddlery.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what lessons have been learned from the FG Wilson job losses in 2012; and what recovery assistance her Department offered Larne and East Antrim.

(AQW 37821/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI continues to maintain a good relationship with Caterpillar management, both in Northern Ireland and in the United States, in order to fully appreciate the key influences impacting on their global plans and on their local operations in particular. Through this engagement and the strong relationship with Caterpillar, Invest NI has been able to work with company management to identify a number of opportunities for specialist, high value manufacturing activities to be established here.

The securing of the 200 new jobs in 2013 in the company's Shared Services Centre in Springvale was the first of these opportunities to come to fruition and was clear evidence of management's continued commitment to Northern Ireland. Since then further investments have been made which now see the company assembling complex material handler machines at its Larne site (with significant associated fabrication work at Monkstown) and in producing a range of axles for articulated vehicles, again at Larne.

Other major investments in the area have been announced since 2012 including Terumo (460 jobs in Larne) and Schrader (241 in Carrickfergus) as well as major expansions in Wrightbus (130 jobs) and Moy Park (628 jobs) in bordering constituencies.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 36881/11-15, to detail the range of budgetary pressures faced by her Department which (i) she has identified as truly inescapable; and (ii) officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel have indicated as being truly inescapable.

Mrs Foster: Refer to AQW 36881/11-15 which answered this question.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 36881/11-15, for an explanation of every inescapable pressure.

(AQW 37864/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The inescapable pressures arose because of the success of Invest NI in delivering jobs and investment projects, and the Tourist Board in delivering a step change in the events Northern Ireland is delivering as advised in the response to AQW 36881/11-15.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she has any plans to introduce measures to set up the Warm Home Discount Scheme.

(AQW 37866/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Warm Homes Discount Scheme operates in Great Britain and does not apply in Northern Ireland. It was originally a four year scheme, which was due to close in March 2015, but it has recently been extended by the UK Government to 2016.

The Scheme is a form of social tariff funded by consumers. Suggestions that the scheme be introduced in Northern Ireland need to take account of the proportion of customers who would benefit against the proportion of customers who would pay more. In our small market, we need to balance helping those in fuel poverty and ensuring that energy costs are kept as low as possible, for all consumers, so that more people do not fall into fuel poverty and businesses remain competitive. For these reasons I do not plan to promote implementation of the Scheme in Northern Ireland but, as this area is crosscutting, I remain open to considering any proposals from Executive colleagues.

I note the range of schemes that are available to support qualifying consumers with their energy usage. These include the NI Sustainable Energy Programme, the Warm Homes and Affordable Warmth Schemes and the Boiler Replacement Scheme. These are in addition to the availability of cold weather payments and the winter fuel payment.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the proposed timing of the Energy Bill.

(AQW 37897/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The timing for the Bill depends on resolution of a number of complex policy issues which are currently under consideration.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the estimated impact on employment as a result of not providing finance for the Events Fund in 2015/16.

(AQW 37923/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The nature of the National Events Sponsorship Fund is that organisers apply to the fund annually, therefore there is never any guarantee of receiving funding on a recurring basis. When applicants apply to the scheme, applications are assessed through a competitive process and therefore there can never be any guarantee of funding.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps her Department is taking to encourage growth in science and technology industries.

Mrs Foster: The Executive recognises the need to target those areas which have the greatest potential to grow the Northern Ireland Economy and that this can be achieved by encouraging growth in science and technology industries.

The Programme for Government and the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy (NIES) both focus on the need to build on our existing strengths as well as exploit new opportunities in the global economy.

The NIES focuses on a number of technology based markets, identified by MATRIX, where we already have considerable science and technology strengths. These include Telecommunications & ICT; Life & Health Sciences; Agri Food; Advanced Materials, Advanced Engineering and Sustainable Energy.

Within the world class science and technology capabilities of our research base, we are rolling out the Northern Ireland Competence Centre programme. Concentrating on the key MATRIX market opportunities, and driven by industry needs, the Competence Centres will support companies to bring new products and services to markets that otherwise would not have been possible.

The recently published Innovation Strategy sets out a range of actions designed to increase the innovation performance of the Northern Ireland economy. This includes recognizing the role of the public sector should play as a driver of innovation in the economy through approaches such as the Small Business Research Initiative (SBRI).

Building on the UK Life Sciences Strategy, and on the MATRIX Life & Health Sciences Foresight study, Northern Ireland is now prioritising its Life & Health Sciences sector through the development of its own regional strategy. As part of this strategy, DETI and DHSSPS will continue to develop their collaboration under a new and ambitious Memorandum of Understanding.

To ensure that the strategy's ambitions are realised Northern Ireland is also now developing a facility which will demonstrate a committed visible leadership & co-ordination capability for the sector. The Health Innovations & Life Sciences (HILS) Hub will be a focal point or 'nerve centre' for the life and health sciences sector to stimulate interaction, innovation, networking and collaboration across the academic, business and clinical communities, facilitating investment and promoting economic opportunities.

These policies, strategies and initiatives, combined with the support provided by Invest NI through its Proof of Concept, Techstart, Propel, Accelerator (currently being procured), Collaborative Network, Skills Growth and Grant for R&D programmes, as well as the provision of a full suite of risk capital funds, will seek to maximise the growth and impact of technology businesses on the Northern Ireland economy.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given the recent report published by Barclays which estimated that local shoppers will buy £41m worth of goods online annually by 2018, what efforts her Department is making to ensure that local companies are maximising the opportunities that exist through using the Internet as a method of both selling and marketing goods and services.

Mrs Foster: There are a number of initiatives my Department provides to support Northern Ireland businesses wishing to sell and market products or services via the Internet.

Invest NI has a network of Information Communication Technology (ICT) advisors based across Northern Ireland helping businesses make best use of ICT to be more productive or access new online markets. This includes help for businesses with an export focus wishing to market or sell their services online. Invest NI ICT advisors can also offer one to one advice and support to businesses and regularly organise seminars, with over 20 delivered a year on a range of ICT topics including helping SMEs with online marketing and selling their products online. Indeed, over the last 3 years Invest NI has offered export focused SMEs a total of £7.5 million of funding towards ICT improvements within their business.

There is also a wealth of practical guidance available on the nibusinessinfo.co.uk website to help any business interested in selling online.

Invest NI has also been working closely with Councils to develop initiatives to support the needs of businesses in their local areas. These initiatives are funded through the Local Economic Development (LED) Measure of the EU Sustainable Competitiveness Programme with match funding from Invest NI and Councils. Within this Measure Invest NI has approved 17 LED projects totalling £2.9 million of assistance which target local businesses to encourage online sales and marketing.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail any proposals for the provision of large scale tourist accommodation in East Londonderry that her Department has received in the last twelve months.

Mrs Foster: Invest NI has received no proposals in the last twelve months for the provision of large scale tourist accommodation in East Londonderry. Invest NI does, however, continue to offer its range of developmental advice and financial support to established tourism accommodation businesses in the area.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many jobs have been created in the hospitality sector in East Londonderry in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37991/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI is unable to provide a breakdown of how many jobs have been created in each of the last three years as information relating to job creation is commercially sensitive at business level while a project is still 'live'. In order to ensure that individual companies are not identifiable, Invest NI therefore applies statistical disclosure controls.

As there are less than 5 companies in each individual year Invest NI is not able to release the information as an individual company could be identifiable.

Information relating to job creation by specific companies will become publically available once a project is complete and the control period has ended.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of hospitality sector business start-ups in East Londonderry that received financial assistance from her Department in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37992/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The number of potential hospitality sector start-up businesses that received Invest NI financial support in each of the last three full financial years is outlined in the table below:

Year	No of Hospitality Start-up Businesses Supported
2011/12	1
2012/13	1
2013/14	0

Notes

1. Each start-up business is counted in the financial year when it received its first package of financial support from Invest NI.

It is worth noting that in line with European and National guidelines, particularly due to issues with displacement, Invest NI is, in the vast majority of cases, limited to the provision of advisory support to companies operating within the hospitality sector.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what impact the cancellation of the Tourism Events Fund will have on large events in East Londonderry, such as the International Air-show.

Mrs Foster: The nature of the Tourism Events Fund is that organisers apply to the fund annually and therefore there is never any guarantee of receiving funding. When applicants apply to the scheme, applications are assessed through a competitive process and therefore there can never be any guarantee of funding.

In the financial year 2014/15 NITB funded 63 National events under the Tourism Events Sponsorship Scheme and 13 International events under the International Tourism Events Fund with a total contribution from NITB of £2.8million.

However based on the information provided by the event organisers, the 76 events funded in 2014 are projected to:

- Generate a £12:£1 return for every £1 invested by NITB; and
- To attract 2.2m visitors.

I am very keen for events to go ahead with funding, but at present there is not budget available to open a Tourism Event Funding Programme for 2015/16. However, when the 2015/16 budget is known the position will be reviewed.

Department of the Environment

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Information Service.

(AQW 37154/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): There is currently 27.5 staff supporting communications activities in the DOE. These posts cost £1,045,586 annually.

These communications staff work on a wide range of activities beyond traditional Information Office roles. In addition to 5 posts in the DOE Press Office, there are staff dealing with IT systems to support electronic communications, staff working on education and interpretation activities, print and design and supporting administration staff.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment what consideration he has given to the creation of an independent environmental protection agency.

Mr Durkan: When I became Minister of the Environment I announced a vision of "A Better Environment - A Stronger Economy". In the 21st Century, it is reckless to remain wedded to the paradigm that economic prosperity is in conflict with a healthy environment. Environmental and economic success are dependent on each other as is becoming increasingly recognised throughout the world.

My Department, including NIEA, has a vital role to play in delivering my vision. After listening to customers and stakeholders in my first few months in office and having received the Mills Report into waste management, I concluded that NIEA needed to be much more outcome and customer-focused.

That is why I instructed the Chief Executive to undertake a root and branch review of NIEA. This review has resulted in significant changes to NIEA's structures, systems and programmes, including four new Operating Principles:

1. to make it easy for people to do good business and difficult for people to do bad business;
2. to help create a resource efficient Northern Ireland;
3. to help people see our environment and heritage as an opportunity, not a barrier; and
4. to be a customer-focused and people-centred organisation.

These changes apply to all the environment functions carried out by the Department. Indeed, one of the key findings of the independent Mills Report emphasised the need for closer working between NIEA and other parts of my Department with responsibilities for resource efficiency and waste management. The changes which have been made are ensuring that these closer working relationships are starting to deliver concrete results as evidenced by the integrated Waste Operation Plan I published last week.

I will continue to closely monitor the performance of the Department's environment functions to ensure continued performance improvements are being delivered. If this shows that any further adjustments of these arrangements are needed to drive stronger improvements, I will make them.

While an independent environmental protection agency could have merits, it is not necessary to create a new statutory body outside of government to secure the improvements necessary. As the above actions show, it is possible for me as Environment Minister to promote and direct actions within government to secure better environmental outcomes for businesses and communities in the North.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department is taking to increase knowledge and research into the risks associated with nanoparticles on health, climate, air quality, particularly those released from waste incinerators.

Mr Durkan: While the Department itself does not carry out any research into the risks of nanoparticles, officials monitor developments ongoing elsewhere, both at EU and UK level.

There is a wide range of research activity surrounding the risks of nanomaterials to human health and the environment. At EU level the NANoREG project brings together governments, industry and an interdisciplinary network of internationally recognised researchers to develop risk assessment and decision making tools for regulating consumer products which contain manufactured nanomaterials.

In the wider UK, the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology, along with several universities, are researching the effects of nanoparticles on the environment. The Institute of Occupational Medicine is carrying out research on the risks of nanomaterials to human health. The 'From Airborne exposure to Biological Effects' (FABLE) research programme is currently investigating pathways for health impacts of nanoparticles.

There are presently no UK or EU regulations which specifically deal with nanoparticles that might be produced from waste incinerators. However, all such installations must meet the requirements of the European Directive on Industrial Emissions which specifies stringent operating conditions and emission limits including total dust. In Northern Ireland waste incineration installations are regulated by the Industrial Pollution and Radiochemical Inspectorate (IPRI) under the Pollution Prevention and Control (Industrial Emissions) Regulations (NI) 2013.

Our links to the EU and Defra ensure that, in Northern Ireland, we maintain policy measures and control to be consistent with current understanding.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what additional actions will be taken to improve the quality of beaches following the latest Good Beach Summit.

Mr Durkan: All the stakeholders who attended the last Summit on 19 September listened to a list of achievements to date; these included improved water quality at a number of beaches throughout Northern Ireland, improved beach cleanliness through targeted campaigns in association with partner agencies and the development of uniform signage across all the designated beaches in Northern Ireland.

They then discussed the actions required to ensure that these achievements could be maintained and improved on going forward. Consequently, my officials are now working on a draft Action Plan for 2015 – 2017 which will be presented, discussed and hopefully agreed at the next Summit in early 2015. It is important that all stakeholders are fully engaged in this process to ensure that the best ideas come forward and can be implemented across all of our designated beaches.

I will ensure that when agreed, you receive a copy of the 2015 - 2017 Action Plan.

I can say however that we will continue to work closely with all stakeholders including those within Central and Local Government and we will continue to communicate fully with the public in terms of bathing water quality and other relevant matters concerning our beaches.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department is monitoring new councils to ensure they have their community plan in place for 2015.

Mr Durkan: The new duty of Community Planning will become the responsibility of councils from 1 April 2015. The Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 sets out the process by which councils, working with their community planning partners, will identify long term objectives for improving the social, economic and environmental well being of the district. The legislation does not require councils to have a community plan in place by 2015, rather it requires the community plan to be produced as soon as is reasonably practicable after the council is of the opinion that an appropriate degree of consensus has been reached amongst the community planning partners.

To help ensure that councils are as well prepared as possible to implement their community planning duties from 2015, they have been taking forward (on a voluntary basis) the community planning foundation programme which is facilitated by Community Places on behalf of the Department. My officials have also been working with councils, potential community planning partners and other central government departments to provide appropriate help and guidance and will continue and intensify this work over the coming months.

I am therefore confident that all councils will be well prepared to take forward their community planning duties from 1 April 2015 and know that they will be aiming to reach the level of consensus required to produce their community plan as soon as possible after that date.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the rationale for a farmer requiring an expensive permit to bring tyres onto their farm for agricultural use,

Mr Durkan: Farmers may keep waste tyres, already in place on the farm, to re-use in agricultural activity. An example of this would be for use in a silage clamp. However, it is important that the quantity of tyres should not exceed the number required for the silage clamp(s). If a farmer wishes to bring additional waste tyres onto the farm, the farmer must hold an appropriate waste authorisation, the transport must be undertaken by a registered waste carrier, and he must complete waste transfer notes and these must be retained by the farmer for two years.

Under Article 4(1)(b) of the Waste and Contaminated Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 (as amended), a person shall not treat, keep or dispose of controlled waste or knowingly cause or knowingly permit controlled waste to be treated, kept or disposed of (i) in or on any land ... except under and in accordance with a waste management licence.

There are however criteria and thresholds in the legislation which permit certain small scale, low risk waste activities to be exempt from the waste licensing regime. In this instance a farmer may apply to NIEA to register a Paragraph 16 waste exemption for the beneficial use of tyres. This exemption permits a person to use the tyres provided:

- (a) they are put to that use without further treatment; and
- (b) that use of the tyres does not involve their disposal.

The fee to register a Paragraph 16 exemption is currently £842 for 3 years.

Guidance on the use of tyres on farms has been produced in conjunction with DARD and NIEA are more than happy to assist farmers on this issue.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37305/11-15, to provide a breakdown of the taxi offences for the last three years.

(AQW 37753/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have included the table below, with figures derived from published statistics, which provides a breakdown of the fixed penalty offences relating to taxis for the last three years.

Details of taxi offences prosecuted at court is not captured on the Driver and Vehicle Agency enforcement database and it is therefore not possible to provide a breakdown of this information.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the length of time that the Waterfall Walk at Crawfordsburn Country Park has been inaccessible; and (ii) the timescale for repair.

(AQW 37756/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have been advised by officials in the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, which manages Crawfordsburn Country Park, that a 60 metre section of pathway leading to the waterfall has been closed to ensure public safety since 12 November 2010, following a landslide.

A timescale for completion of repair works cannot be provided at this time. Civil engineers were unable to assure NIEA that the path could be made safe for public use by a short term fix. A long-term solution to address the slope stability issues is required. Options for this are under consideration. However they are limited because a section of the unstable slope is not owned by my Department and any such works are likely to be costly and will be dependent on budget availability.

Visitors to the Country Park can still access the waterfall via the path on the opposite bank of Crawford's Burn and enjoy 11 kilometres of paths within the Park.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the approximate change in numbers of public hire taxis between January 2009 and January 2014.

(AQW 37781/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As taxis require an enhanced vehicle inspection every year, the Driver & Vehicle Agency is able to provide a breakdown of the number of PSV tests conducted for public hire taxis in each financial year from 2009/10 until 2012/13. These help to provide an approximate indication of the change in public hire taxis in recent years.

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Belfast public hire	558	548	498	437
Public hire Outside Belfast	8,189	7,834	7,680	6,957
Total	8,747	8,382	8,178	7,394

1 As Taxi licensing is a real time system it is not possible to determine retrospectively the number of public hire taxis licensed at a particular time or between different times. As taxis require a vehicle test certificate psv tests conducted annually provide an approximate indication for change in the numbers of licensed public hire taxis, as detailed in the table above.

As of June 2014, there are 444 Belfast public hire vehicles and 6,986 Public hire outside Belfast vehicles currently licensed (7,430 in total).

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the result of his Department's investigation into the discrepancies between the levies charges by retailers under the Duty of Care system and those in Britain in respect of end-of-life tyres.

(AQW 37796/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Levies charged by tyre retailers or used tyre collectors are not made under the Duty of Care system. The Duty of care is required by Article 5 of the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997 (the 1997 Order) and it places an onus on those who handle waste (including tyres) to ensure that:-

- the waste is handled properly, in a way that does not pose any threat to the environment or human health;
- it is only passed to someone who is authorised to accept it; and
- records are kept to ensure that the waste is being managed legally and to provide an audit trail.

Article 5 of the 1997 Order does not contain powers to introduce a recycling levy.

The tyre levy scheme that is operated both here and in the rest of the UK is a voluntary agreement between the tyre retailer and the customer. DOE believes it is not appropriate to interfere in the operation and/or utilisation of the voluntary levy scheme, as imposed by the industry itself.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to the levies charged by retailers for the disposal of end-of-life tyres, what efforts have been made to obtain the power to regulate the collection and utilisation of the levy.

Mr Durkan: The collection of such a levy is a reserved matter and would be for the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) to consider and take forward for all regions of the UK.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by his Department.

Mr Durkan: Land holdings are periodically reviewed to identify land which may become surplus to requirements. Currently my Department has not identified any surplus land that could be sold.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37092/11-15, how much his Department, and its agencies, has paid to the contracted taxi company in each of the last four financial years.
(AQW 37817/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table below provides details of payments made by my Department to the contracted taxi company over the past four financial years.

Year	Total Cost (£)
2010-11	471
2011-12	585
2013-14	2,109

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37257/11-15, whether this email constituted producing a report and the information passed to the departmental solicitor; and if so, why there has been a denial of the existence of any report on this specific matter.
(AQW 37818/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer the Member to my response to AQW 27856/11-15 where I made it clear that the observations of enforcement officers formed part of the overall consideration of taxi arrangements at Ravenhill rugby ground and no separate formal report was produced. I do not consider that an internal email summarising the observations of enforcement officers constitutes producing a formal report on the legalities of the taxi arrangements at Ravenhill rugby ground.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of farm buildings that are required to satisfy CTY10 (C) of Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 21.

Mr Durkan: I can advise the Member that PPS 21: Sustainable Development in the Countryside – Policy CTY 10: Dwellings on Farms – Criterion (c) requires that a new dwelling on a farm is visually linked or sited to cluster with an established group of buildings on the farm.

Policy CTY 10 does not specify how many buildings constitute an established group of buildings on a farm. This is a matter of planning judgement with each application being assessed on a case by case basis on its own planning merits, taking into account the relevant planning policy and all other material considerations.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36988/11-15, how many vehicles with (i) public hire plates in (a) Belfast and (b) outside Belfast; and (ii) advanced booking only plates currently operate from private hire companies within Belfast city limits.

Mr Durkan: The following table provides a breakdown of the latest official figures showing the current number of vehicles with (i) public hire plates in (a) Belfast and (b) outside Belfast.

As at June 2014:

Belfast public hire	444
Public restricted (outside Belfast)	6,986
Total	7,430

Note: Figures sourced from DOE Official Statistics published as of the end of June 2014.

Information is not stored on the Taxi Licensing IT system in a way that would facilitate your request for the number of advanced booking only plates currently operating from private hire companies within Belfast city limits.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37097/11-15, whether (i) fonaCAB signed a declaration on their operator's licence at Kingspan Stadium; and if so, whether this declaration was appropriate in all respects, including for the relevant planning permission; and (ii) the Passenger Transport Licensing Division within Driver and Vehicle Agency incorrectly issued the licence.

(AQW 37877/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An application was made by Fonacab to have an operating centre at Ravenhill Rugby ground included in their taxi operator licence. The application included all the required declarations including the Planning Declaration which stated:

'I declare, that the operating centre(s) on my application does not require planning approval and is outside the scope of any planning enforcement action.'

Procedures do not require the inspection of operating centres upon application. The application was granted correctly in line with procedures.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37257/11-15, whether he has seen the email; and if so, when; and whether he is satisfied that the contents therein do not undermine or constitute any challenge or raise any concerns to taxi provision at Ravenhill Stadium and the proposed Single Tier Taxi system legislation in its current format.

Mr Durkan: I have not seen the internal email summarising the observations of enforcement officers at Ravenhill Stadium on 23 August 2013 and cannot therefore comment on its content.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36783/11-15, why this legislation features in the legal position regarding taxi provision at Ravenhill Stadium provided by core department on 18 October 2013, if it has never been endorsed or enforced.

(AQW 37881/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am of the view that the advice issued by my Department on this matter remains pertinent.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37026/11-15, whether he can confirm that the importation of materials and filling of land at Camcosy Road in close proximity to the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation, does not form part of planning approval K/2013/0072/F.

(AQW 38000/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Allegations of the importation of materials and filling of land in connection to planning approval K/2013/0072/F are subject to live enforcement investigations.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the Health and Social Care Board will make investment proposals for the £1m, which he has confirmed is still in place, to support and improve the current service provided at the Paediatric Cardiac Department in The Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children.

(AQW 37516/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): As mentioned in my Oral Statement to the Assembly on 14 October 2014, I shall be requesting that the HSCB bring forward, in conjunction with the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust's management and clinical teams, detailed investment proposals to further develop a cardiology centre of excellence at the Belfast Trust and to strengthen the Northern Ireland cardiology network. My Department is working with the Board and Trust in this regard and I expect to be in receipt of their initial proposals by the end of this year.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) when; and (ii) on what directive a decision was taken that, with limited exceptions, diabetic clinicians will no longer provide reports on a Disability Living Allowance applicant, particularly young people transferring from paediatric to adult services; and whether this applies across all Health and Social Care Trusts or does each Trust have its own policy.

(AQW 37648/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am advised that there has been no such decision or directive in relation to the completion of reports by diabetes clinicians for applicants for Disability Living Allowance (DLA). Information provided by HSC Trusts regarding the completion of DLA reports is set out in the table below.

HSC Trust	Trust Response
Belfast	Belfast Trust has not made a decision nor issued a directive advising diabeticians not to provide reports in respect of Disability Living Allowance.  In relation to children's service, due to increased demand on the service, paediatricians providing the endocrine and diabetes service have identified the completion of Disability Living Allowance reports as a task that is better performed by a patient's own GP, who should have thorough knowledge of the child's full medical history, including care that is delivered by other care professionals. In such instances the individual specialty will write to the patient's GP with a request to do so.
Northern	The Northern HSC Trust is not aware of any such directive either at Trust or at wider HSC level.
South Eastern	The South Eastern Trust continues to complete Disability Living Allowance applications for children, young people and adults who have diabetes.
Southern	The Southern Trust is not aware of a formal directive concerning this. Disability Living Allowance forms in respect of patients are completed when requested to do so by the Department for Social Development.
Western	The Western Trust has not made a decision to no longer provide reports on a Disability Living Allowance applicant. Requests for clinicians caring for adult patients with diabetes to complete DLA reports are considered by individual clinicians on a case by case basis.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, following his statement on the future of paediatric congenital cardiac services, to outline the process whereby family representatives will be included in the governance and delivery groups.

(AQW 37661/11-15)

Mr Wells: Subject to my final decision on the way forward, my Department will consult with the proposed groups, including family representatives, on their nominated representatives on both the Governance Committee and Family Advisory Group, as proposed in Recommendations 1 and 2 respectively of the International Working Group's report. We will ask for their views on how they would wish to see those groups established and how they would want the families they represent to be involved in them.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he intends to implement a voluntary early retirement scheme across Health Trust Care Trusts.

(AQW 37662/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have no plans at this time to introduce a voluntary early retirement scheme across Health and Social Care Trusts.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to reduce the cost of locums, agency and bank staff across Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 37665/11-15)

Mr Wells: While I recognise the importance of securing cover to maintain delivery of service, it is an important policy aim for the health service, to reduce expenditure on locum and bank staff.

I recognise the ongoing work by the Health and Social Care Trusts in continually seeking to drive down these costs through a range of initiatives. One such initiative which seeks to more effectively manage the use of and expenditure associated with locum doctors, is the new e-locum system currently being piloted within HSC Trusts. This should help with the difficulty in securing cover for gaps in rotas by offering greater opportunity to systemise and organise staffing cover.

In addition, and as I indicated in my Written Statement of 30 October, in order to help address the financial deficit, elective care treatments will be focussed on urgent procedures, assessed by clinicians in priority order, and potentially provided on different sites in order to reduce locum and agency spend.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the Health and Social Care (HSC) Regional Medical Locum Service, otherwise known as HSC e-locums, launched; and how many locum doctors have registered with the service.

(AQW 37682/11-15)

Mr Wells: HSC e-Locums (formerly Regional Medical Locum Service) was launched on 20 August 2012 and to date 364 Locum Doctors are registered and live on the system. A further 593 doctors have commenced the registration process but have not yet submitted their applications.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline how the ranking system of framework agencies operates, including the financial benefit of using a higher ranked agency and the difference in cost of ranked agencies.

Mr Wells: Operation of the ranking system for framework agencies is based on a vacancy fill protocol contained within the Medical and Dental Agency Workers Framework.

Under this protocol, when a vacancy becomes available a request is issued to all appropriate contractors simultaneously, with a specified deadline. Once the allotted response period has passed the responses are considered according to the framework ranking; i.e. the first ranked supplier's response will be considered first, (provided they have offered a candidate). If the candidate offered is considered unsuitable then the Authority proceeds to the response from the second ranked supplier and so on until a suitable candidate is found.

Development of the ranking system was based on the most economically advantageous tenders in terms of 60% Quality & 40% Price; therefore, low priced suppliers may not be highest on the rankings as they may not have attained a good quality score.

The difference in cost of using a higher as compared to a lower ranked agency will vary depending on the posts for which locum cover has been provided. The information as requested could therefore only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 36921/11-15, whether he recognises a link between recreational courses provided at Regional Colleges and public health.

Mr Wells: Recreational courses can encourage and engage people at any age in social, cultural, sport and leisure activities. Participation in such activities can impact positively on both physical and mental health and wellbeing in many ways - for example by providing new skills, enhancing self esteem and confidence which have been shown to be associated with healthier behaviours. In addition recreational courses provide opportunities for social interaction which is in turn associated with better health.

The links between life- long learning, participation and improved health and wellbeing are recognised in the new cross-cutting strategic framework for public health "Making Life Better". One of the aims of the framework is to equip and enable individuals, families and communities to take greater control over issues affecting their health and wellbeing.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether agencies who supply locum doctors that are not employed through the agency's payroll are permitted to charge his Department or Health and Social Care Trusts for (i) Working Time Directive allowances; and (ii) National Insurance contributions.

(AQW 37762/11-15)

Mr Wells: Recruitment agencies who would bid for the contracts are advised that, when a Limited Company contractor is used, no charges for Employer's National Insurance Contribution (ENIC) or Working Time Directive Allowance (regulatory term for Holiday Pay) shall be passed to the Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts.

The majority of contractors fall within the category of Limited Company, and hence no charges apply. For the small number that are not limited companies, the associated costs could only be identified at disproportionate cost.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has been paid to locum framework agencies in respect of (i) Working Time Directive allowances; and (ii) National Insurance contributions, since December 2013.

(AQW 37763/11-15)

Mr Wells: All employment agencies are advised when bidding, that when a Limited Company contractor is used, no charges for Employer's National Insurance Contribution (ENIC) or Working Time Directive Allowance (regulatory term for Holiday Pay) shall be passed to the HSC Trusts. The majority of contractors used are Limited Companies.

The payment information in respect of those contractors who are not limited companies is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline his plans to support the increase of 7 per cent in GP activity in the last twelve months.

(AQW 37773/11-15)

Mr Wells: As part of the GMS Contract negotiations my Department gave a commitment to deliver equitable core funding across GP Practices in Northern Ireland.

A working group has been established with representation from the Department, the Health and Social Care Board and the Northern Ireland general practitioners Committee (NIGPC) to review the elements of and allocation methodology of core funding to GP Practices under the General Medical Services arrangements in Northern Ireland.

The findings of this group will be considered and taken forward as part of any future contract negotiations with NIGPC.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline his proposals in relation to the minimum unit pricing of alcohol.

(AQW 37774/11-15)

Mr Wells: The price at which some supermarkets sell alcohol, sometimes cheaper than bottled water, is damaging to individuals, communities, and families. Therefore I am determined to take action to address alcohol's affordability, and I believe this is vital given that alcohol is 67% more affordable now than it was in 1980.

236 people died last year and 12,255 people were admitted to hospital from alcohol related disease. It is estimated that the full social cost to the Northern Ireland economy is up to £900m per year. I believe Minimum Unit Pricing (MUP) potentially offers a targeted and proportionate response to the growing concerns about the effects of alcohol harm on our society.

We are working with colleagues in DSD and DOJ in this matter, and we also continue to watch developments in Scotland, England and Europe very closely.

However, MUP is only one potential part of our approach to this issue, and it is important we take a range of actions, including education and early intervention and providing services for those to need additional support, to address alcohol misuse across the population.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the arrangements in place by the Western Health and Social Care Trust to deal with the demand for access to a consultant neurologist for clinics in the South West Acute Hospital.

(AQW 37782/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social (HSC) Trust has advised me that patient referrals to a Consultant Neurologist in the South West Acute Hospital are triaged by a Consultant and prioritised for their clinic appointment. The waiting list is managed depending on triage category. There are two visiting Consultant Neurologists who attend clinics in the South West Acute Hospital.

Regionally the Neurologists are working closely with the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) to review Neurology services across all Trusts.

There is a high demand of new referrals for Neurology appointments across the Western Trust, as with patients requiring reviews. The Western HSC Trust has recruited one new Consultant Neurologist with the support of the local Commissioner to address the demand capacity gap that exists.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of his Department's compliance with the MS Society's Treat Me Right campaign; and what steps he intends to take to meet the needs of MS patients.

(AQW 37811/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care in Northern Ireland is addressing all four of the goals of the 'Treat Me Right' campaign as set out below.

1. Availability of licensed MS treatments

The Health and Social Care (HSC) Board commission's medicines which are recommended by the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE). For medicines that NICE does not appraise, the HSC Board will look to other UK health technology appraisal bodies, such as the Scottish Medicines Consortium (SMC) and others, to inform a decision as to whether a drug is accepted for use in Northern Ireland. For medicines not recommended by NICE or other UK health technology appraisal bodies, and therefore not currently commissioned, the HSC Board has a clear process (Individual Funding Request – IFR) by which individual patient requests can be considered.

Of the 10 currently licensed drugs, 7 are currently commissioned, 1 is being implemented and is available now on a cost per case basis and the remaining 2 are available under the IFR process.

2. Treatment and review of MS Patients

With regard to regular reviews of treatment and care by MS specialists, it should be noted that not everyone with MS attends a neurologist. Some patients have chosen not to, some attend a general neurologist and others attend a neurologist with specialist interest in MS.

All Health and Social Care Trusts invite MS patients for regular reviews however the interval between appointments can vary as scheduling is based on the progress of the patient's clinical condition and each patient's individual need as well as available capacity.

3. Information regarding the availability of new disease modifying drugs

At review, it is routinely the case that clinicians will determine whether MS patients are on the right treatment for their stage of disease and discuss all treatment options with patients.

4. Patient role in decision making process

Commencement of disease modifying therapy and other treatment for MS patients is a shared process between clinicians and patients across all Trusts. Discussion of treatment options is an integral part of the review process between patients and their MS specialists.

The services detailed above are key elements of the services being provided to meet MS patients' needs. In order to further improve services, the HSC Board and Public Health Agency are developing a service specification for MS services which aims to offer clinically consistent, appropriate and equitable care across the Trusts.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the services offered by the South West Acute Hospital that were not available in the Erne Hospital.

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised that the services provided in the South West Acute Hospital which were not available in the Erne Hospital are: Endobronchial Ultrasound (EBUS); Full Pulmonary Function Tests and Multi channel sleep studies; eye laser procedure within the outpatient department; and VNUS procedures as an alternative to varicose vein surgery.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the progress of eliminating mixed-sex hospital wards.

Mr Wells: In Northern Ireland, all of our hospitals aim to accommodate patients in single gender accommodation insofar as possible.

It has been the Department's policy since 2008 that all new adult acute inpatient hospital accommodation should be planned to provide 100 percent single rooms to promote this aim. The number of single rooms in existing hospitals is also maximised whenever possible when carrying out major refurbishments. However, it remains that there are circumstances where, for clinical reasons, placing patients in mixed gender accommodation may be necessary to access specialist treatment or services such as that provided in specialised intensive care units.

The Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) reported on mixed gender accommodation in 2012. The RQIA found that:

- The Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts had developed local policies for the admission of patients to mixed gender bays;
- In the majority of circumstances where mixed gender accommodation was being provided, it was being managed appropriately;
- Patients were being consulted regarding their placement in advance of admission to mixed gender bays;
- Privacy and Dignity was maintained at all times;
- Patients were transferred to single gender accommodation within 24 hrs of admission where ever this was possible;
- Patients were consulted in advance of their admission that they would be admitted to a mixed gender area;
- Complaints procedures were in place and patients were made aware of the process.

RQIA made the following recommendations:

1. The DHSSPS, in conjunction with the HSC Board and The PHA should - issue a definitive policy statement on care in mixed gender accommodation;
2. That there should be regular monitoring and reporting;
3. The HSCB should ensure that any performance targets should be considered for impact on the patient experience;
4. All Trusts should ensure that ward based staff have training in respect of vulnerable adults.

Progress in implementation of these recommendations is being monitored by the Department in conjunction with the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the decision taken by the Health and Social Care Board to cease elective care in private clinics in relation to (i) current; and (ii) future budgets.

Mr Wells: I indicated in my written statement of 30 October 2014 that I am allocating £14 million for elective care; however this is much less than the full extent of the pressure and thus the current restrictions on the use of the independent sector will have to continue.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has recently considered instigating a campaign highlighting the importance of folic acid during pregnancy to reduce the incidence of neural tube defects in children.

(AQW 37882/11-15)

Mr Wells: The mandatory fortification of flour is supported by all four UK Chief Medical Officers, the UK Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition, the Food Standards Agency and all three devolved Health Ministers, as an effective measure to reduce the incidence of foetal neural tube defects such as spina bifida, hydrocephalus and anencephaly.

In April 2014 the English Health Minister decided to postpone until 2015 a decision on whether to legislate for mandatory fortification of flour with folic acid. This effectively rules out the possibility of Westminster legislation on this issue before the next Parliament. In the meantime Department of Health officials will discuss with the relevant food industry companies their willingness, in principle, to stop voluntary fortification of food products with folic acid, if mandatory fortification were to be introduced.

While the Food Standards Agency in NI has confirmed that the Northern Ireland Assembly has the legislative competence to introduce mandatory fortification of flour with folic acid, a decision to introduce mandatory fortification would be most effective at a UK level given the production and distribution of food stuffs across the UK. I discussed this issue at a meeting with my Scottish and Welsh counterparts in Belfast on 30 October and we agreed to write to Minister Ellison to highlight the need to progress this matter as a matter of urgency.

My Department is in discussions with the charity Shine to explore what more can be done to raise awareness of the importance of taking extra folic acid before conception.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has considered the fortification of grain based food products, such as flour, with folic acid, in an attempt to limit instances of children born with neural tube defects.

(AQW 37883/11-15)

Mr Wells: The mandatory fortification of flour is supported by all four UK Chief Medical Officers, the UK Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition, the Food Standards Agency and all three devolved Health Ministers, as an effective measure to reduce the incidence of foetal neural tube defects such as spina bifida, hydrocephalus and anencephaly.

In April 2014 the English Health Minister decided to postpone until 2015 a decision on whether to legislate for mandatory fortification of flour with folic acid. This effectively rules out the possibility of Westminster legislation on this issue before the next Parliament. In the meantime Department of Health officials will discuss with the relevant food industry companies their willingness, in principle, to stop voluntary fortification of food products with folic acid, if mandatory fortification were to be introduced.

While the Food Standards Agency in NI has confirmed that the Northern Ireland Assembly has the legislative competence to introduce mandatory fortification of flour with folic acid, a decision to introduce mandatory fortification would be most effective at a UK level given the production and distribution of food stuffs across the UK. I discussed this issue at a meeting with my Scottish and Welsh counterparts in Belfast on 30 October and we agreed to write to Minister Ellison to highlight the need to progress this matter as a matter of urgency.

My Department is in discussions with the charity Shine to explore what more can be done to raise awareness of the importance of taking extra folic acid before conception.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the clinical contracts; (ii) the value of the contracts; and (iii) the groups awarded contracts, by local health commissioning groups, broken down by group, in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 37898/11-15)

Mr Wells: Local Commissioning Groups (LCGs) are sub-committees of the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and do not contract separately outside HSCB processes. They have therefore awarded no contracts directly for clinical services in the last three financial years.

The HSCB has awarded the following contracts for clinical services and/or clinical goods and services during the period 2011/12 – 2013/14:

Provider	Nature of Contract	Annual Value £m	Duration
Marie Curie	Palliative Care	1.4	Awarded annually
NI Hospice (Adults)	Palliative Care	2.1	Awarded annually
NI Hospice (Children)	Palliative Care	0.6	Awarded annually
Southern Area Hospice	Palliative Care	1.1	Awarded annually

Provider	Nature of Contract	Annual Value £m	Duration
Air Liquid (Homecare) Ltd	Supply of Domiciliary Oxygen Concentrator Service	1.4	1/4/12 – 31/12/12
OCS Group UK Ltd T/A: Cannon	Collection, Transportation, Treatment & Disposal of Clinical Waste from Chemists	0.3	1/1/12 – 31/12/16
Woodgate Aviation (NI) Ltd	Air Ambulance/Air Transfer Service	1.0	1/1/14 – 31/12/16
BOC Healthcare	Supply of Home Oxygen Services	2.3	1/1/13 – 31/12/17

Note: Excluding Family Health Services (GPs, General Dental Services etc) and Social Care

The HSCB commissions the majority of the clinical services required for the Northern Ireland population from the six Health and Social Care Trusts. This commissioning process is not done by way of legal contracts or open tenders, but rather through an annual process of engagement and negotiation which culminates in the setting of Service and Budget Agreements with the trusts. The HSCB may also contract directly through Service Level Agreements (SLAs) with NHS Trusts in other parts of the UK.

The wider legal framework favours in-house services: most public sector bodies are generally free to transact between one another without going through a formal public competition process.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether preferential treatment is given to Health Service providers in competitive tenders for clinical services by local health commissioning groups; and if so, to explain the rationale behind this and the steps he intends to take to ensure that clinical services contracts are awarded to Health Service providers.

(AQW 37899/11-15)

Mr Wells: Local Commissioning Groups (LCGs) are sub-committees of the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and do not contract separately outside HSCB processes. They have therefore awarded no contracts directly for clinical services in the last three financial years.

The HSCB has awarded the following contracts for clinical services and/or clinical goods and services during the period 2011/12 – 2013/14:

Provider	Nature of Contract	Annual Value £m	Duration
Marie Curie	Palliative Care	1.4	Awarded annually
NI Hospice (Adults)	Palliative Care	2.1	Awarded annually
NI Hospice (Children)	Palliative Care	0.6	Awarded annually
Southern Area Hospice	Palliative Care	1.1	Awarded annually
Air Liquid (Homecare) Ltd	Supply of Domiciliary Oxygen Concentrator Service	1.4	1/4/12 – 31/12/12
OCS Group UK Ltd T/A: Cannon	Collection, Transportation, Treatment & Disposal of Clinical Waste from Chemists	0.3	1/1/12 – 31/12/16
Woodgate Aviation (NI) Ltd	Air Ambulance/Air Transfer Service	1.0	1/1/14 – 31/12/16
BOC Healthcare	Supply of Home Oxygen Services	2.3	1/1/13 – 31/12/17

Note: Excluding Family Health Services (GPs, General Dental Services etc) and Social Care

The HSCB commissions the majority of the clinical services required for the Northern Ireland population from the six Health and Social Care Trusts. This commissioning process is not done by way of legal contracts or open tenders, but rather through an annual process of engagement and negotiation which culminates in the setting of Service and Budget Agreements with the trusts. The HSCB may also contract directly through Service Level Agreements (SLAs) with NHS Trusts in other parts of the UK.

The wider legal framework favours in-house services: most public sector bodies are generally free to transact between one another without going through a formal public competition process.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37237/11-15, and given that his Department, the Health and Social Care Board and Health and Social Care Trusts have consistently failed to meet the stated targets, whether he would consider reintroducing the previous bands of (a) '>26 - 30 weeks'; (b) '>30-36 weeks'; and (c) '>36 weeks' for inpatient waiting times.

Mr Wells: As previously stated in AQW 37237/11-15, the inpatient waiting times publication provides a breakdown of patients waiting for inpatient treatment using the following time bands: 0-6, >6-13, >13-21, >21-26 and >26 weeks.

These time bands are selected to align with the current target, which for 2014/15 states that, from April 2014, at least 80% of inpatients and daycases should be treated within 13 weeks; and no patient waiting longer than 26 weeks for treatment.

My Department currently have no plans to provide a more detailed breakdown of the '>26 weeks' time band, however, such issues are reviewed on an ongoing basis. As inpatient waiting times are collected on a patient level basis, more detailed breakdowns are available on request and a requested breakdown has been provided in response to AQW 37901/11-15.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a breakdown by (i) speciality; and (ii) Health and Social Care Trust of inpatient waiting times (a) 0-6; (b) >6-13; (c) >13-21; (d) >21-26; (e) >26-31; (f) >31-36; (g) >36-41; (h) >41-52; (i) >52 weeks from 1 April to 30 June 2014.

Mr Wells: A breakdown of the inpatient waiting times by (i) speciality and (ii) Health and Social Care Trust for each of the requested time bands, at 30th June 2014, the most recent quarter for which official statistics are available, are detailed in the tables overleaf.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of fires that were started maliciously and attended by the Northern Ireland Fire Service in each of the last three years; and what costs were incurred. (AQW 37967/11-15)

Mr Wells: The table below details the number of mobilisations by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) to deliberate fires in 2011/12, 2012/13, and 2013/14.

NIFRS do not routinely calculate the costs of attending individual call types.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of (i) fire engines; and (ii) ambulances vandalised in each of the last three years. (AQW 37968/11-15)

Mr Wells: Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS)

NIFRS does not record details of vandalism to fire appliances. NIFRS does record incidents where appliances are damaged as a result of attacks on Firefighters.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to minimise waiting times at the Emergency Department of Antrim Area Hospital, given that waiting times are normally exceeded as a result of winter pressures; and whether he will increase provision at Whiteabbey Hospital Minor Injuries Unit.

(AQW 37998/11-15)

Mr Wells: I look to the Health and Social Care Board to work with the Health and Social Care Trusts to ensure that effective plans are in place to respond to anticipated winter pressures on emergency departments.

The Northern Health and Social Care Trust is taking steps to address emergency care pressures and prepare for winter. Over the last 18 months the Trust has put additional measures in place to improve the flow of patients through Antrim Area Hospital including opening up alternative access routes for patients such as the Acute Assessment Unit and rapid access to diagnostics pathways. Significant development has also taken place within community services to reduce unnecessary admissions to hospital and to ensure safe and efficient discharge pathways. A programme of work is currently under way involving senior clinicians and managers to systematically improve the unscheduled care service and improve care delivery across primary, secondary and community care settings.

As part of the Northern Trust's contingency plan, Whiteabbey Minor Injuries Unit will close temporarily. The Trust will put in place alternative arrangements to maintain safety and ensure patient flow.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the imminent closure of the children's cardiac surgery unit at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children, whether he can provide an assurance that children who are currently on the local waiting list who have to travel to specialised hospitals in England for surgery are not placed at the bottom of the waiting list, and that their existing waiting time and health conditions will be taken into account.

(AQW 38060/11-15)

Mr Wells: The timing and location of all children's cardiac surgery are matters of clinical judgement to be taken by the appropriate healthcare professionals. Currently a small number of lower complexity, non-urgent paediatric cardiac operations are carried out each month in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust (equating to approximately 35 cases per year). All other elective surgery is carried out in heart centres in England or Dublin and is planned in advance through case conferences between both sets of clinicians, which will take account of a range of factors to determine the appropriate timing for treatment. When surgery ends in Belfast in December 2014, the small cohort of children to be added to the number requiring surgery in England, while capacity is being increased in Our Lady's Children's Hospital Crumlin, will be managed in the same way. I can therefore provide assurance that they will not simply be placed at the bottom of a waiting list. The heart centres in Birmingham and Evelina Children's Hospitals have sufficient capacity to treat these children when deemed appropriate in agreement with their clinicians.

The Clark Clinic will continue to provide all non-surgical care for children with congenital cardiac conditions.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, to explain his understanding of the word "temporary", when used by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust on 30 October 2014, in relation to Multiple Sclerosis respite care and intermediate beds in Dalriada Hospital.

(AQW 38061/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has said that: "for the remaining part of 2014/2015 to achieve reduced spend in-year of £6.9m; in the Moyle area this involves the temporary closure of Intermediate Care beds in Dalriada Hospital (20 beds) from the 30 November 2014. The length of stay in our intermediate care beds has been reduced, making the remaining Trust beds more efficient so the Trust is confident that patients' needs can be met with reduced bed numbers. This will enable staff to be redeployed to support unscheduled care and acute services at Causeway and Antrim Area Hospitals. The Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre will also temporarily close from 30 November 2014 with services being provided in independent nursing homes or via home based respite or direct payments which allow service users to make their own respite arrangements".

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the recent announcement that nine beds will close at Downe Hospital, whether he will carry out an Equality Impact Assessment to ascertain if any Section 75 groups will be unduly effected.

(AQW 38065/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust is designated as a public authority for the purposes of Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. Public authorities are responsible for equality screening any proposed substantive change to or withdrawal of services they provide.

The Trust has carried out an equality screening on this proposal in order to identify potential impact on any of the Section 75 groups. The outcome of this was a recommendation for on-going screening which means that the Trust will continue to monitor the impact of the proposed changes during the implementation phase.

This is a temporary closure, in line with other changes taking place across Northern Ireland due to the ongoing financial pressures. If the Trust were to propose to close these beds on a permanent basis a full consultation process, including equality screening, would have to be undertaken.

Department of Justice

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department has any plans to introduce legislation aimed at combatting internet trolling.

(AQW 37693/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I am aware of the Justice Secretary's proposed legislative changes for England and Wales in relation to malicious communications or "internet trolling". My officials are already in touch with their Westminster equivalents as to the detail. As a devolved issue any proposal to change the law in Northern Ireland would be subject to public consultation and consideration by the Assembly. I will be keeping developments in Westminster under review.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice for a breakdown of the cost of the research and report he commissioned into prostitution in Northern Ireland.

Mr Ford: A budget of £60,000 was allocated for the research into prostitution in Northern Ireland.

I have been advised by Central Procurement Directorate that to provide a breakdown of the costs reduces the ability of a tenderer, for any contract, to compete successfully for such services in the future in both the public and private sectors. Disclosing commercially sensitive material in this way could diminish confidence in the integrity of the public tendering process, and disincline companies from competing in such contests. This would weaken the ability of public authorities to obtain value for money in procurement.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice what legal action can be taken against an individual who collects payment for rates from a tenant for a premises they do not own, and then fails to make that payment to the rightful landlord or authority.

Mr Ford: In terms of the civil law, in appropriate circumstances a landlord or authority may be able to take a civil action, in respect of money owed, against a person who collects money and then fails to make payment.

In terms of the criminal law, and again subject to the circumstances involved, amongst other offences, offences of fraud by false representation and theft may have been committed. Decisions on charging and prosecutions are a matter for the independent prosecuting authorities based on the nature of the specific crimes involved.

Subject to the charges brought, offences of fraud by false representation or theft by dishonest appropriation of another's property with intent to deprive permanently can both, for example, attract penalties of up to ten years imprisonment on indictment.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether a person was transferred to Burren House as part of his pre-release; and if so, on what date was he transferred from Maghaberry.

Mr Ford: To release the information requested would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice what penalties are in place for people who collect rent or rates for premises without the permission of the owner.

(AQW 37757/11-15)

Mr Ford: In terms of the civil law, in appropriate circumstances a landlord or authority may be able to take a civil action, in respect of money owed, against a person who collects money and then fails to make payment.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by his Department.

(AQW 37806/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice, including its Agencies but not its arm's length bodies, does not currently possess any surplus land.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many deputy district judges are registered; and how many are practicing (i) solicitors; and (ii) barristers.

(AQW 37822/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are 24 deputy District Judges (Magistrates' Courts) and nine deputy District Judges (Civil).

Judge Type	Practicing Solicitor	Practicing Barrister	Other
Deputy District Judge (Magistrates' Courts)	8	13	3
Deputy District Judge (Civil)	4	1	4

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice to detail the goods and services that the Police Ombudsman has procured from outside Northern Ireland in each of the last three years, including (i) when the goods and services were procured; (ii) the value of each procurement; and (iii) from whom the services were procured.

(AQW 37858/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Office of the Police Ombudsman is operationally independent of my Department. The level of detailed information sought is not retained by my Department. I have, however, been assured by the Office that its procurement policy complies with the requirements of Managing Public Money NI and incorporates relevant procurement guidance from both DFP and DOJ.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what action has been taken by G4S to deal with the issue of faulty palm scanners, particularly at Dungannon Courthouse, and to detail (i) the actions that have been taken, including the date and results; (ii) whether any other courthouses are affected; and (iii) whether the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service are being kept fully appraised.

(AQW 37879/11-15)

Mr Ford: G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Ltd commenced discussions in early September 2014 with its own Information Technology Department in order to remedy the connectivity issues. G4S is considering installing static Internet Protocol (IP) addresses at all sites across the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service estate. Additionally, G4S has revised and will circulate an updated Hand Punch Operations and Usage Policy to all G4S staff on the NICTS security contract in November. All courthouses have experienced connectivity issues and the proposed actions should resolve any connectivity issues going forward. The NICTS is being kept fully appraised of this situation.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the person was ever an inmate of the Prisoner Assessment Unit; and if so, to detail the dates.

Mr Ford: To release the information requested would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why Prison Service staff were provided with information on the Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme via a notice on February 2014 based on figures to be paid in April rather than March.

(AQW 37908/11-15)

Mr Ford: Two Notices to Staff were issued in February 2012 (NS 17/12 and NS 20/12). Neither of these notices referred to staff leaving in March being paid in April.

The Staff Exit Unit carried out a number of checks on the figures provided to staff. The incorrect calculations arose in a minority of cases for a range of reasons which the Prison Service had no control over. Late notification from staff (including marital status) impacted upon their pension illustrations. Payroll information for the final month is interfaced after the award has been calculated and can impact upon the benefits payable. Revisions to the benefits payable meant that in some cases the maximum lump sum exceeded the 25% limit.

The Prison Service put measures in place, when this situation arose in 2012, to prevent these staff from being adversely affected, ensuring they received their correct calculations and were able to leave under the terms of the VER Scheme as close to the appropriate date as possible for their tranche.

In 2012, the Prison Service secured an agreement from HM Revenue and Customs that the Additional Payment made under the terms of the VER Scheme would fall under Section 401, in addition to the Compensation Lump Sum payment. This ensured that, when these payments were aggregated, staff were able to benefit from a tax free element up to £30,000 and did not have to pay national insurance contributions on these two payments.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why 51 Prison Service staff were provided with incorrect calculations on their entitlement under the Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme when it was meant to be checked by the Staff Exit Unit.

(AQW 37910/11-15)

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice how many victims of human trafficking were interviewed as part of his Department's Report on Prostitution.

(AQW 37911/11-15)

Mr Ford: Chapter 8 of the report of the independent research into prostitution in Northern Ireland details that two victims of human trafficking, confirmed as such by the National Referral Mechanism, were interviewed by researchers from Queen's University. The same chapter describes how, out of a further 19 interviews held with sex workers, one interviewee said that she had been trafficked into the sex industry at an earlier stage.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice how many illegal republican parades have taken place in each of the last three years; and how many (i) prosecutions; and (ii) convictions have resulted.

Mr Ford: The information available indicates that there were two illegal Republican parades in 2012, three in 2013 and one in 2014 (at 28 October).

Information on prosecutions and convictions is not readily available for these years and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number and type of weapons discovered in each prison, in each of the last three years; and the date each weapon was discovered.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to place a copy of the Police Association Regulations 1991 in the Assembly Library, or specifically the section on emoluments for full time Police Federation NI officials showing the required agreements amongst Central Committee, the NI Policing Board and the Chief Constable; and whether these agreements have been, and remain, in practice.

(AQW 37962/11-15)

Mr Ford: A copy of the Police Association for Northern Ireland Regulations 1991 has been placed in the Assembly Library and I would refer to regulation 18 regarding emoluments of the office bearers of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland (PFNI) officials. Regulation 18 has not been amended or revoked.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why tranche one applicants to the Prison Service Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme were treated differently to applicants in tranches two and three.

(AQW 37984/11-15)

Mr Ford: I would refer the Member to my response to his question AQW/35324/11-15.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why applicants for tranches two and three of the Prison Service Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme were given an option to withdraw from the scheme whilst those in tranches one were not afforded this opportunity.

(AQW 37985/11-15)

Mr Ford: I would refer the Member to my response to his question AQW/35324/11-15.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what cash reserves are held by the Public Prosecution Service.

(AQW 38010/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am committed to respecting the independence of the Public Prosecution Service. Questions regarding their finances and cash reserve should be forwarded to them for further information and answer.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the progress of developing the joint public services college at Desertcreat.

(AQW 38212/11-15)

Mr Ford: Development of a joint training college for the police, Prison Service and Fire and Rescue Service is a Programme for Government commitment. Decisions on this will be taken by the Executive.

At a recent meeting of the Programme Steering Group, the three Services reiterated their commitment to some form of integration but expressed concern at the impact of budget reductions on their long term training requirements and their ability to meet future running costs.

As a result, the Steering Group has commissioned a two stage review. The first stage will involve the Programme Board urgently establishing what the present position means for the current procurement process. This will be completed within a short, two-week timescale. During this period, the Programme Board will also firm up the scope of the second stage review which will, inter alia, re-affirm the training requirements of the three Services and the scope for integration; review underlying assumptions; and establish what is appropriate, affordable and deliverable in the current budgetary climate.

Department for Regional Development

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will commission research, similar to that published by the Australian government, measuring the benefit to the economy each time a person cycles or walks for at least twenty minutes to and from work.

(AQW 26314/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The economic benefits of cycling have been well established in a number of key studies. These were considered in depth by the Active Travel Forum in developing the Active Travel Strategy "Building an Active Travel Future for Northern Ireland". This Strategy was agreed by the Executive and published in January of this year. Both the Strategy and supporting papers produced by the Active Travel Forum, including its research on economic drivers, are available on my Department's internet site.

I have no plans to commission further research into the economic benefits of Active Travel. Rather my priority is to drive delivery of the vision set out in the Active Travel Strategy and associated Action Plan to put walking and cycling at the heart of local transport, public health and well-being and wider government strategies for the benefit of society, the environment and the economy as a whole.

To this end I have established a new cycling unit to ensure cycling issues and initiatives are progressed in a more coherent and coordinated manner across my Department, in partnership with local government, voluntary bodies, public transport operators and the health and education sectors.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to upgrade and enhance the railway station at Scarva.

Mr Kennedy: Substantial works were carried out to the platforms at Scarva station in 2007/08 to improve passing clearances and facilitate increased line speed. Further works were completed to the station as part of Translink's New Railway Vision programme and to make it compliant with Disability Discrimination legislation. Standard on-going minor maintenance works are routinely undertaken, e.g. repairing lights and refurbishing posters that have been vandalised.

TransportNI within my Department has provided pedestrian warning signs on both approaches to this location. It has also had initial discussions with the Police Service of Northern Ireland regarding the extension of the 30mph speed limit beyond the train station on Station Road. My officials will undertake speed surveys to ascertain if it is appropriate to extend this limit beyond the station and to review the position of the warning signs on both approaches to the station.

In addition, I can confirm this road is fully lit at the station/restaurant entrances to a standard commensurate with the road classification and type.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the £19 million funding for the signalling relay on the Coleraine to Londonderry line is ring-fenced and available for the project.

(AQW 36726/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I made a statement to the Assembly on 3 November in which I indicated that the estimated cost of Phase 2 is likely to increase but a final figure is subject to a procurement. My statement confirms a commitment on my part to fund the project subject to an updated economic appraisal.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on Phase 2 of the Derry to Coleraine rail link renewal project.

(AQW 36905/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The civil works design for Bellarena Station is complete and approvals are being finalised to allow the start of construction.

The signalling principles design is nearing completion and Translink are preparing to go out to the market for its detail design and build package.

I have made a statement to the Assembly on 3 November.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much NI Railways has spent on hospitality in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36907/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The following are the relevant statistics in relation to hospitality extended by Northern Ireland Railways:

Year	£
2011/12	11,658

Year	£
2012/13	8,173
2013/14	18,537

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Translink has spent on business trips in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36908/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The following are the relevant statistics from Translink's business travel account, in relation to business travel conducted by Translink personnel:

	£k
2011/12	333
2012/13	314
2013/14	278

Of these figures more than two thirds were made up of mileage claims, most of which relates to operational business travel as part of Translink's ongoing business.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much NI Railways has spent on business trips in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 36909/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The following are the relevant statistics from Translink's business travel account, in relation to business travel conducted by NI Railways personnel:

	£k
2011/12	218
2012/13	232
2013/14	165

Of these figures more than two thirds were made up of mileage claims, most of which relates to operational business travel as part of Translink's ongoing business.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the volume of leakage from mains water pipes over the last three years.

(AQW 37132/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that the leakage levels from mains water pipes over the last 3 years are as follows:

Year	Losses (mega litres per day)
2011/12	168.32

* New leakage management software to estimate leakage levels was introduced in 2013/2014. The Regulator in its Annual Information Return has recognised this change by acknowledging that the 2012/13 figure should be adjusted to 170.73 MI/d under the revised method of calculation. It therefore set NI Water a target of 169 MI/d for 2013/14 which the company has exceeded.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the current extent of compliance with the EU Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive and the EU Water Framework Directive; (ii) the current extent of the risk of infraction proceedings commencing; (iii) the level of fines possible as a result of this infraction; and (iv) the level of investment needed to avoid such proceedings.

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) The Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive protects the environment from the adverse effects of sewage discharges. It sets treatment levels on the basis of sizes of sewage discharges and the sensitivity of waters receiving the discharges. There are 79 wastewater treatment works (WWTW) in Northern Ireland assessed for compliance with the Urban Wastewater Treatment Directive (UWWTD). All sites, except Ballycastle WWTW and Benone WWTW complied with UWWTD requirements resulting in a compliance rate in 2013 of 98%.

The Water Framework Directive (WFD) requires member states to implement measures to prevent deterioration of the status of all bodies of surface water and groundwater and to protect, enhance and restore all water bodies with the aim of achieving "good" status by 2015. This is achieved through the production and implementation of River Basin Management Plans (RBMPs) for each River Basin District (RBD) which set out the measures through which improvements in the water environment can be achieved across a six-year cycle. The first set of RBMPs was submitted to the European Commission in 2009 with the second set of RBMPs due in 2015. The first formal classification of water bodies under WFD will not take place until 2015 and thus no assessments have been performed yet in terms of the extent of compliance. The implementation and reporting of compliance with the WFD is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment (DOE).

- (ii) The European Commission has commenced infraction proceedings against the UK Government in respect of Ballycastle WWTW as the works does not have secondary treatment in place. NI Water has begun a capital works project to deliver an upgrade at Ballycastle to meet the UWWTD requirements. Progress on this upgrade is being monitored by the European Commission. The Benone WWTW failed to meet the required standards in 2013 and has been decommissioned. A new works at Magilligan, which serves the Benone area as well, was opened in 2014.

With regard to compliance with the WFD, DOE is due to report to the European Commission in 2015 on progress of the delivery of the Programme of Measures for the first River Basin Planning Cycle of the WFD. An infraction risk is likely to arise in respect of Belfast Harbour water quality, where monitoring to date suggests that the required standard will not be met. In response to this risk, a Strategic Drainage Infrastructure plan is being developed for Northern Ireland and the first phase will focus on South and East Belfast. One of the key aims of this phase is to deliver improvements in the water quality in Belfast Harbour. It is likely that this initiative would be taken into account by the European Commission when it determines whether or not to commence infraction proceedings, and subsequently if it were to consider the imposition of fines by way of enforcement.

Article 9 of the WFD requires Member States to take account of the principle of recovery of the costs of water services and requires Member States by 2010 to have water-pricing policies that provide adequate incentives for users to use water resources efficiently. Although Northern Ireland has charges for non-domestic water users the absence of charges for domestic users could represent an infraction risk.

- (iii) The Commission has powers to apply financial sanctions to the UK where, following infraction proceedings for a breach of EU law, the Court of Justice has found the UK to be in breach of its obligations. The level of infraction fine in an individual case is difficult to assess as it will be determined by the seriousness and duration of the breach. Although infraction proceedings may commence, in most cases in the UK to date it has been possible to avoid financial penalties through committing to a prioritised programme of work to address the breach. It is hoped that the interdepartmental work now begun to develop a Strategic Drainage Infrastructure Plan may help to reduce the risk of infraction fines and further action by the Commission.
- (iv) The funding allocated to complete the building of the new Ballycastle WWTW is £10.8 million at the initial design stage. It is estimated that additional funding (of at least £750m) will be needed to progress an integrated drainage infrastructure solution for the greater Belfast area as part of the Strategic Drainage Infrastructure Plan.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) when Roads Service decided to resurface the Coa Road in Enniskillen; (ii) when NI Water decided new water mains were needed in the area surrounding the Coa Road in Enniskillen; (iii) when the resurfacing work on Coa Road, Enniskillen was completed; (iv) when the water mains project on the Coa Road commenced; and (v) what action he will take to ensure that any similar utility works take place prior to or during resurfacing. (AQW 37235/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) TransportNI decided to resurface the Coa Road in Enniskillen on 18 May 2011.
- (ii) Water quality issues were identified in the local area around Coa Road and Chanterhill Road during the summer of 2013. Northern Ireland Water defined the scope for this scheme on 6 September 2013 and included the water main scheme into an existing South Phase 1 work package at the time. Following initial site investigation works, Northern Ireland Water held a meeting with TransportNI on 21 November 2013 to discuss the South Phase 1 package and at this meeting it was highlighted that the Coa Road had been resurfaced in recent years. TransportNI confirmed that as 2 years had passed since the resurfacing was carried out, the 12 month prohibition period had lapsed and Northern Ireland Water was permitted to submit a proposal for a new water main. Northern Ireland Water had made a commitment to use trenchless techniques for this scheme with the aim of reducing the number of open excavations. A further meeting with TransportNI was held on 21 May 2014, after Northern Ireland Water completed the final design and budget approval had been received in advance of scheme commencement.

- (iii) The resurfacing work on Coa Road, Enniskillen was completed on 8 August 2012.
- (iv) The Coa Road and Chanterhill Road scheme commenced on 7 July 2014 and is scheduled for completion on 30 October 2014. There are additional schemes linked to the Coa Road scheme, at Aughawart Road and Irvines Crescent, and these will be completed during the period November 2014 to February 2015. Northern Ireland Water's contractor has attempted to maximise the use of trenchless technologies during the installation of the new water main. However, a number of open excavations were required due to the congestion of other services and inaccuracies in existing record drawings.
- (v) In accordance with current procedures, Northern Ireland Water (like all other utilities) is given advance notice of all plans for resurfacing works and, wherever possible, all works are co-ordinated. After resurfacing works are complete, there is a 12 month statutory prohibition period which restricts the completion of non-emergency works to the newly applied surface. Northern Ireland Water will continue to post notification of proposed schemes, as early as possible, onto the Northern Ireland Street works Registration and Notification Service.

In the case of Coa Road, Enniskillen, the Northern Ireland Water works were carried out over two years after completion of the TransportNI scheme, and as this was outside the 12 month prohibition period no restriction was imposed on its proposals.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) to list the organisations that have received, or will receive, a refund for water and sewerage services through standard usage or trade effluent as a result of being overcharged since the introduction of the legislation that came into effect in 2008; (ii) to detail the amount in question for each organisation; (iii) what efforts are being made to identify other organisations that may have been affected; (iv) what resources NI Water or his Department are allocating to help identify other organisations that may be affected.

(AQW 37402/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) It would be inappropriate to list individual customers or organisations and their respective account adjustments. A detailed disclosure of that nature would be an infringement of the duty of confidentiality owed to customers.
- (ii) 6,705 accounts have received a credit relating to overcharges to water and sewerage bills from 1 April 2008 to 31 March 2014 with a total amount of £2,186,300. The breakdown of these figures is as follows:

Date Range	Number of Customer Accounts	Total Credit Amount
Apr 08 – May 11	5,007	£906,550
May 11 – May 14	1,698	£1,279,750

- (iii) There is an ongoing programme to improve data quality and thereby ensure that customers are billed accurately and fairly. This programme includes close scrutiny of customer account configurations in the billing system as well as fieldwork to verify physical data elements such as meter serial numbers.
- (iv) A customer data quality project team of 15 staff, covering office and fieldwork, has been established to supplement the existing account management teams. Further account corrections are to be expected as the project team continues its work.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (a) number; and (b) location of street lights which are not working in Omagh; and when he will authorise Transport NI officials to carry out repairs, given that this current situation presents health and safety risks to local residents, including older and vulnerable people.

(AQW 37591/11-15)

The Northern Ireland Executive's June and October monitoring process has been completed and despite my Department starting the year with a significant funding shortfall and submitting bids for additional funding as part of the monitoring round process, the Resource budget has been cut significantly. The Resource budget is used to fund the day to day maintenance of the street lighting system.

As a direct result and with regret, I have had to suspend the issuing of new works to external contractors for a range of activities, including street lighting maintenance operations. If additional funding becomes available following January monitoring, the situation will be reviewed urgently.

Until further notice, my Operations and Maintenance staff will be endeavouring to deal with as many street lighting defects as possible in the Omagh area and across the province. However, they will not be able to provide the level of service the public would expect in normal circumstances.

They will give priority to larger group outages followed by smaller group outages and our lowest priority will be given to individual street lighting outages.

Unfortunately, the number of outages is increasing and at this time I am unable to predict when I will be in a position to repair all of the outages in your area.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development when his Department will be in a position to repair street lights in East Londonderry.
(AQW 37597/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department started repairs to the street lights in East Londonderry on 29 September 2014 initially within the Coleraine Borough Council area and my Department's Operations and Maintenance staff are currently completing work in Garvagh and Kilrea. This team is then likely to move into the Limavady Borough Council area to carry out further repairs.

Regrettably, due to the current budgetary constraints my Department is no longer able to provide the service the public would expect under normal circumstances.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development to list the current street light repairs required in (i) Coleraine; and (ii) Limavady Borough Council areas.

Mr Kennedy: Due to the numbers involved and as defects are being reported and repaired on an ongoing basis as available resources permit, it would not be practicable to individually list the 517 street lights currently awaiting repair in both the Coleraine and Limavady Borough Council Areas. However, I can confirm that as at 21 October 2014, 179 reported street light repairs were outstanding in the Coleraine Area and 338 in the Limavady Area.

The Northern Ireland Executive's June and October monitoring process has been completed and despite my Department starting the year with a significant funding shortfall and submitting bids for additional funding as part of the monitoring round process, the Resource budget has been cut significantly. The Resource budget is used to fund the day to day maintenance of the street lighting system.

As a direct result and with regret, I have had to suspend the issuing of new works to external contractors for a range of activities, including street lighting maintenance operations. If additional funding becomes available following January monitoring, the situation will be reviewed urgently.

Until further notice, my Operations and Maintenance staff will be endeavouring to deal with as many street lighting defects as possible in Coleraine and Limavady and across the province. However, they will not be able to provide the level of service the public would expect in normal circumstances. They will give priority to larger group outages followed by smaller group outages and our lowest priority will be given to individual street lighting outages.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any delays are anticipated for the Glenmachan Strategy Project; and what assurances he can give that he will allocate sufficient resources to the project in an effort to fasttrack delivery.

Mr Kennedy: NI Water has advised me that Phase 1a (Upgrade of Sicily Park & Marguerite Park) and Phase 1b (Greystown & Upper Malone Road) of the Glenmachan Strategic Project are planned to commence in May 2015 with a construction period of two years. The estimated combined cost of both projects is £11 million with Phase 1b being part funded by the Rivers Agency. This part of the overall Glenmachan Strategic Project was advanced following the flooding of June 2012 and required extensive investigation, design and stakeholder engagement due to the complexity of the solution. There are still some third party land issues to conclude and statutory approvals required for this phase of the project but progress is being made on these.

The remainder of the work to complete the Glenmachan Strategic Project is a longer term commitment currently estimated to cost in the region of £110 million. I can confirm that NI Water has included sufficient development funding in its PC15 Business Plan to progress the feasibility, planning and design work, which will take up to three years to complete. It is important that sufficient time is taken at the development stage to ensure that the best solution is taken forward for this significant capital investment.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development who is responsible for the removal of manure from public roads. and whether there are any plans in place to alter this policy.

Mr Kennedy: Any person who allows manure to be deposited on the road is responsible for restoring the road to its original condition. Under Article 94(1) of the Roads (NI) Order 1993, anyone who deposits or allows anything to be deposited on a road, which is likely to cause an obstruction or danger, shall be guilty of an offence and held liable, on summary conviction. Responsibility for taking any prosecution under this Article lies with the Police Service of Northern Ireland, and I understand that deposits on the road must be such that they are deemed to constitute a danger to persons using the road before proceedings are instituted.

The objective of enforcement is, however, not so much to secure convictions and to impose penalties, as to restore the condition of the road, and/or to discourage other potential offenders. Where my Department's interests can be protected by constructive dialogue, rather than prosecution, so much the better.

To this end my Department monitors roads on a regular basis and, when they can be clearly identified, any offenders are instructed to clean a road when officials become aware that it is unduly dirty. The Police Service of Northern Ireland is also informed and if the offenders do not co-operate, taking action under the above 1993 Roads Order is considered.

In certain circumstances, particularly in the interests of road safety, my Department may carry out whatever operations are necessary to restore the road condition and may subsequently seek to recover costs from the offender, where it is practicable to do so.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development how much the A5 project was originally forecast to cost; (ii) how much was budgeted for the project; (iii) for a breakdown of the spend on the project to date; (iv) how much the A5 project is now estimated to cost due to the modifications to the original proposal; (v) how much allocated to the A5 project has been reallocated to other projects, or surrendered during the monitoring rounds; (vi) for a breakdown of the reallocations; and (vii) how much is required to complete the A5 project, broken down by financial year from 2014/15.

(AQW 37636/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

- (i) In 2011 the estimated total cost to complete the A5 Western Transport Corridor project was £800 million.
- (ii) In February 2012 the Irish Government reduced its short term contribution to the A5 West Transport Corridor project from £400 million to £50 million. The Executive then agreed to commit funding of £330 million to the project, with a view to constructing the sections from Newbuildings to north of Strabane and south of Omagh to Ballygawley.
- (iii) A breakdown of the spend to date on the project is outlined below:

Year	(£)
2007/08	875,000
2008/09	8,350,000
2009/10	14,600,000
2010/11	11,395,000
2011/12	10,753,310
2012/13	13,121,911
2013/14	9,432,421
2014/15 spend to end of August	2,180,000
Overall Total	£70,707,642

Note: the above figures exclude capitalisation

- (iv) The scheme now being proposed is broadly similar to the original proposals with the minor changes included in the revised design having an insignificant effect on the likely overall costs. The 2011 estimate of £800 million therefore remains relevant as a baseline figure. A more significant factor will be the timing of delivery of the various phases and the associated inflationary implications. This will be subject to successful completion of statutory procedures, other public consultations and the availability of funding.
- (v) The reduced requirements, returned to the Department of Finance and Personnel in relation to the A5 Western Transport Corridor totalled some £277.5million broken down as follows:
- £50 million in 2012/13;
  - £108 million in 2013/14; and
  - £119.5 million in 2014/15.
- (vi) Reallocation of the A5WTC budget was a matter for the Department of Finance and Personnel.
- (vii) The level of funding required to complete the A5 project will be significantly influenced by the evolving delivery strategy and the inflationary impacts of a phased implementation.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development given the pressures on departmental budgets, the significant cost of the A5 project and the lack of progress on this project, for his assessment of the necessity and value of the continuation of this project; and what consideration he has given to abandoning the project and reallocating this funding into sustainable transport infrastructure, and other departmental priorities, such as flood alleviation.

(AQW 37637/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The A5WTC project remains an Executive project and work to address the one area of concern identified in the Court ruling is advanced. This relates to undertaking Appropriate Assessments under the Habitats Directive of the impact of the A5 proposals on the Special Areas of Conservation.

With regard to capital money allocated to Strategic Roads projects, such as the A5, my Department's budget settlement from DFP is ring-fenced. Any monies that are not required to meet the spend profile of a project within a particular year must be returned to the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development what method his Department is using, including details of the tendering process, to dispose of vehicles and plant held by Transport NI and NI Water.

(AQW 37645/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: TransportNI disposes of end of life vehicles and plant through a Service Level Agreement with the Ministry of Defence Disposals Services Authority. The Disposals Services Authority has enabling agreements with private sector contractors across the UK, secured through an open tendering process, which accords with all European and UK procurement procedures.

The disposal of vehicle and plant items within Northern Ireland Water is carried out periodically by a nominated contractor / auctioneer who has tendered for such services.

Northern Ireland Water is currently evaluating tender submissions recently received in order to appoint the next successful contractor / auctioneer. The tendering process is managed by NIW's Operational Procurement Team through a publically advertised competition which complies with all Departmental policies and procedures.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of repairing vandalised bus shelters in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 37664/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The provision and maintenance of bus shelters is funded by Adshel through advertising revenue and at no cost to my Department. The contract covers the vast majority of Northern Ireland's bus shelters and my Department does not retain information on costs incurred by Adshel in carrying out its contractual commitments.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what impact the current budget restrictions will have on the ongoing plans to dual the A26 road between Glarryford and Coleraine.

Mr Kennedy: The current budget restrictions will have no impact on the A26 Dualling project.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Regional Development why it is necessary to have Royal Assent granted on Off Street Parking by 1 April 2015 as per clause 112 of Local Government Act (NI) 2014.
(AQW 37720/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Royal Assent is required in respect of any Executive Bill before it may become an Act of the Northern Ireland Assembly. The present timetable for the Bill envisages the Final Stage debate taking place on 3 February 2015 following which Royal Assent will be sought. The process of achieving Royal Assent takes a number of weeks to complete.

For the purposes of clarification, The Off-Street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill relies on Section 122 (not clause 112) of the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 to make the transfer schemes necessary to transfer my Department's off-street car parks to the new councils. However, those provisions will only apply if the Off-Street Parking Bill comes into operation on 1st April 2015.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36808/11-15, and in relation to the work carried out by Enterprise Managed Services on behalf of NI Water during the 2008/2009 contract period, (i) to detail the property types that were surveyed during this period; (ii) to detail the type of meter being installed; and (iii) whether they were (a) internal fits; (b) meters screwed into existing boundary boxes; or (c) boundary box and meter installs.

Mr Kennedy: In relation to the work carried out by Enterprise Managed Services on behalf of NI Water during the 2008/2009 contract period, which was during my predecessor, Conor Murphy's time, Northern Ireland Water has advised as follows:

- (i) all of the 32,977 properties surveyed during 2008/09 were non-domestic covering all industry sectors;
- (ii) there were two types of meter installed, a concentric rotary piston type meter where the supply pipe was up to 32 millimetres in diameter and helix meters with flanged outlets where the supply pipe was greater than 32mm in diameter;
- (iii) of the meters installed at non-domestic properties (a) 1,071 were internal fits, (b) 2,294 were screwed into existing boundary boxes; and (c) 3,241 involved installation of a new boundary box and meter.

For completeness, there were 5,832 meters installed at new build domestic dwellings during this period, in accordance with the legislation, these were screwed into the boundary box provided at the time of connection.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to make Galgorm Road, Ballymena safer for cyclists.
(AQW 37743/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Galgorm Road, which carries in excess of 15,000 vehicles per day, is one of the main routes into Ballymena from a westerly direction. Whilst a shared use cycle lane has already been provided on the North side of the Galgorm Road from the Sourhill Road Roundabout to the Galgorm Roundabout, there are limited opportunities to provide dedicated cycle facilities due to road width constraints along significant sections of the Galgorm Road.

I can confirm, however, that legislation is currently being progressed to extend the 30mph speed limit from the junction with the Old Galgorm Road to just beyond Cambridge Avenue, which will reduce vehicle speed and create a safer environment for cyclists using that stretch of the road.

In addition, my Department's Cycling Unit has recently engaged with Ballymena Academy as part of the Active Travel for Schools Programme, and this work will include consideration of what additional measures can be implemented to assist pupils cycling to and from the school.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what improvements he is considering for cyclists that wish to transport their bicycles on Translink buses.

Mr Kennedy: In launching my draft Bicycle Strategy I set out my commitment to address barriers to modal interchange, including the opportunities to enable cyclists to transport their bicycles on public transport. Consultation on the Strategy is ongoing, however, responses to date make it clear that this is an issue for many cyclists. My officials will, therefore, engage with Translink to ensure that the Delivery Plan for my Bicycle Strategy directly addresses this issue.

In the interim folding bicycles are permitted on all Translink Bus Services. I can also confirm that Translink are currently exploring opportunities to facilitate the carrying of conventional bicycles on specific routes such as the Mourne Rambler Service. It is hoped to commence this service in the next summer and I will keep the member advised of progress.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what funding does his Department provide to the Belfast Harbour Commissioners.

(AQW 37745/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department currently provides no funding to Belfast Harbour Commissioners.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what funding does his Department provide to the Warrenpoint Harbour Authority.

(AQW 37747/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Generally, my Department does not fund Trust Ports. In exceptional circumstances my Department can provide grants for certain capital works. I can confirm that funding of that nature was provided to Warrenpoint Harbour Authority.

In 2006 Warrenpoint Harbour Authority successfully submitted a business case for a budget allocation of approximately £16.5 million to provide funding for a Roll on-Roll off (RoRo) facility and deep water developments.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much could be raised by selling surplus land owned by his Department.

(AQW 37749/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is working towards achieving some £1.3 million of disposal income from the sales of surplus departmental land this financial year. This amount has already been adjusted for in the Department's Budget by the Department of Finance and Personnel as part of the Executive's budget process.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the amount of cash reserves held by each of his Department's arm's-length bodies.

Mr Kennedy: NI Water holds no reserves. In terms of Translink I refer you to my response to AQW 36507/11-15 to Mr Easton.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the decision to amalgamate Coleraine Inst and Coleraine High School, what discussions will be held with the education authorities on the traffic implications of the newly enlarged school.

(AQW 37785/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am aware the Education Minister, John O'Dowd MLA, announced his decision to approve the amalgamation of Coleraine Academical Institution and Coleraine High School, and the increase in enrolment at Coleraine College on 24 September 2014.

The North Eastern Education & Library Board will be taking forward the outworkings of this decision, however, I understand the entire process is at a very early stage of development and is set against a background of falling pupil numbers in the wider area.

Initial indications are that it is proposed to utilise the existing sites at Coleraine Academical Institution and Coleraine College. Should the proposals require a planning application, then my Department will be engaged as a consultee to the planning process and consider any transportation issues which may arise.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has in place to address the sewage odour at the Rossorry Church Road, Enniskillen.

(AQW 37787/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Northern Ireland Water is fully aware of the longstanding issues with odours from the sewerage system in the west of Enniskillen in the vicinity of Rossorry Church Road. The cause of the odours is septicity in sewage pumped from the Rossorry Wastewater Pumping Station, that flows through the main sewer running through Blackvede Park, Dannys Mill Road, Rossorry Church Road and Galliagh Park. Sewage odours have been escaping through manhole covers and sewer connections in these areas.

In order to address the issues, NI Water has developed a four phase programme of work involving short, medium and long-term measures. These have been ongoing since 2012.

Phase 1 was completed in January 2013 and involved the diversion of private house connections away from the section of trunk sewer that used to run through the Dannys Mill Road area.

Phase 2 was completed in July 2014 and involved cleaning and repairing the trunk sewer that runs through the Blackvede Park, Rossorry Church Road and Galliagh Park areas.

Phase 3 involves replacement and extension of the Rossory Wastewater Pumping Station's existing pumped sewer in order to improve its hydraulic performance and divert odorous sewage flows away from the problematic trunk sewer to a new discharge location. Site investigation and detailed design work began in September 2014. Subject to gaining all necessary statutory approvals and the satisfactory completion of all necessary lands and procurement procedures, construction work is expected to commence in April 2015 with completion that summer.

Phase 4 involves an overarching review of the wider sewerage system, including addressing septicity issues. A draft business case for this is currently being refined.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the submission of a business case to address sewage and odour problems in the West End of Enniskillen.

(AQW 37788/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In order to address sewage and odour issues caused by septicity of sewage, in the west of Enniskillen in the vicinity of Rossorry Church Road, NI Water has developed a four phase programme of work. Phases 1 and 2 were completed in 2013 and 2014, with construction work on Phase 3 anticipated for completion in summer 2015, subject to gaining all necessary statutory approvals and the satisfactory completion of all necessary lands and procurement procedures.

Phase 4 involves an overarching review of the wider sewerage system to address the sewerage problems, including addressing septicity issues. A draft business case, which considers the long-term requirements, has been prepared and is being refined to ensure the risk of future odour problems is minimised.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration his Department has given to cycleways and footways that glow in the dark, such as those seen in Cambridge.

(AQW 37825/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Officials in my Department are aware of luminous road markings being trialled in areas such as parks in Cambridge and on roads in the Netherlands, and have made contact with the manufacturers. A local road markings manufacturer has also tried to develop an experimental mix but has had limited success so far.

The draft Bicycle Strategy currently out to consultation outlines my commitment to creating a network of high quality, direct, joined up routes throughout Northern Ireland.

The development of quality routes will consider the use of innovative engineering measures which emerge on the market.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what action he is taking to promote cycle to work schemes and its benefits for large private employers.

(AQW 37827/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Cycling Unit through its Travelwise initiative promotes cycling as a sustainable mode of travel to and from education, training and employment. Travelwise regularly promotes the Cycle to Work Scheme in its campaigns: including reference to the scheme in press and media releases highlighting cycling matters; in Workplace Travel Plans prepared by Travelwise for employers in all sectors; and at promotional events held in workplaces. More generally the Department provide advice on the Cycle to Work Scheme to a range of employers in all sectors who contact the Department.

The Cycle to Work Scheme is a HMRC scheme for employing organisations.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to make the Changing Gear cycling conference an annual event.

(AQW 37830/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Northern Ireland Changing Gear seminar was an exciting event with an excellent array of speakers designed to harness Northern Ireland's interest in cycling and explore possibilities to transform Northern Ireland into a modern, vibrant, healthy cycling society.

The event was attended by over 180 people and will unquestionably have raised awareness of and encouraged participation in the consultation process for the draft Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland.

I am buoyed by the level of interest in and enthusiasm about the Northern Ireland Changing Gear event and will consider what further events my Department might undertake on foot of it.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department is considering any changes to the Albert Bridge in Belfast to make it safer for cyclists.

(AQW 37832/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's draft Bicycle Strategy, currently out to consultation, outlines my commitment to creating a network of high quality, direct, joined up routes throughout Northern Ireland.

My vision is to create 'arterial routes' in our urban areas beginning with Belfast, which will largely mirror our arterial road network to enable safe cycling into town and city centre.

I am also keen to develop 'Quiet routes' and 'Greenways' which will offer convenient yet quieter, less trafficked options for cyclists in our urban areas and off road routes into or between our urban areas.

It will not be possible to develop ideal cycle facilities at all locations due to local constraints, such as the restricted road width available on the Albert Bridge. However, it must be remembered that my vision is for the development of a cycling network over a 25 year period and such constraints may in certain places be able to be overcome in the future.

Instead my Department is looking at alternative routes which will provide safe corridors from the east of the city from the Comber Greenway and routes leading to the proposed Ormeau Park Bridge from the south-east.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development, since May 2011, what has been the change in the number of staff at his departmental headquarters in Clarence Court who cycle to work.

(AQW 37837/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Cycling Unit promotes cycling as a sustainable mode of travel to school and work through the Travelwise NI initiative. Marketing information and material, highlighting the benefits of cycling, is also made available to staff within DRD.

Records indicate that the number of NICS staff using cycling facilities at my departmental headquarters in Clarence Court, Belfast has increased from approximately 15-20 in May 2011 to around 30-35 at present.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there will be a cycle lane on the new A2 road from Silverstream Banks to Seapark.

(AQW 37841/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm the A2 Shore Road, Greenisland scheme will include a continuous combined footway/cycleway on the shore side of the road between Jordanstown Road and Station Road, Greenisland.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Regional Development how his Department plans to address health and safety concerns, raised by public representatives and members of the public, with regard to the necessary maintenance work to overgrown trees, which are not currently being addressed due to budget constraints.

(AQW 37913/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Most roadside trees and hedges are on lands adjacent to public roads and property owners or occupiers of those lands are responsible for ensuring that such trees and hedges do not endanger or obstruct road users. From time to time TransportNI places notices in the local press and in farming journals reminding owners and occupiers of their responsibilities.

Generally, overgrown trees and hedges that endanger or obstruct road users are identified by TransportNI staff during routine maintenance inspections. In addition, members of the general public also report trees and hedges causing concern to local section offices.

As a first step, owners or occupiers are identified and are requested to co-operate in removing or cutting the trees or hedges. If that fails, TransportNI has powers under Article 50 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 to serve a notice on the owner or occupier requiring them to remove or cut back the tree or hedge so as to remove the danger or obstruction. Where an owner or occupier does not comply with the requirements of the notice, TransportNI may carry out the necessary works and seek to recover the costs.

With regard to the relatively small number of trees which are the responsibility of my Department, specialist external contractors are generally employed to undertake this type of work as my Department's Operations and Maintenance staff do not have the necessary specialist skills or equipment.

However, as a result of budget cuts, external contractors are only being employed to undertake emergency work at this time, for example, where there are road safety implications.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Regional Development how many requests have been received by Transport NI in the last six months for maintenance work to be carried out to overgrown trees; and of these, how many have been acted upon.

(AQW 37914/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has received 551 requests in the last six months relating to overgrown trees, which were either our responsibility or belonged to private landowners, all of which have been or are being acted upon.

For example, maintenance work was undertaken in a number of instances by either Operations and Maintenance staff or external contractors working on behalf of the Department. In other instances officials wrote to landowners requesting that action be taken and maintenance action may have already taken place or still to be completed. If necessary, the Department may serve a statutory notice compelling the landowner to take action. Failure to do so may result in the Department undertaking the necessary work for which it may seek to recover the costs. In certain instances, following site inspections, officials may consider that no action is required and therefore do not take the matter further.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) how many outstanding requests for streetlight maintenance have been received by Transport NI; and (ii) what action does he intend to take to address the serious health and safety concerns arising should these streetlights be not repaired.

Mr Kennedy: Street lighting maintenance defects are being reported on an ongoing basis, and repairs are being carried out as available resources permit. As of 29 October 2014, records show that the number of lighting defects listed for repairs stood at just under 13,500.

In order to deal with the health and safety implications, I have set priorities for dealing with street lighting faults. Priority will be given to those faults that present an electrical hazard to members of the public and contractors will still be employed to deal with these faults. My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff, who can provide around twenty five percent of the overall resource required to fix street lighting faults, will endeavour to repair as many lights as possible, prioritising large groups of lights which are out, and then individual lights that have failed.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36182/11-15, to detail the total number of (i) surveys completed; and (ii) meters installed by Enterprise Managed Services Ltd on behalf of NI Water during the (a) 2007-2008 and (b) 2009-2010 contract periods.

(AQW 37917/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The total number of surveys completed, and the total number of meters installed, by Enterprise Managed Services Ltd during 2007/2008 and 2009/2010 were as set out in the table below.

Number	2007/2008	2009/2010
Surveys completed	15,451	4,501
Meters installed	5,341	4,620

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how many cycling parking spaces or loops were available for public use in (i) 2012; (ii) 2013; and (iii) 2014.

(AQW 37939/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The information requested by the Member is not available in the form requested.

Whilst my Department has been developing the infrastructure and providing improved facilities for cyclists, Councils and, for example, the Department for Social Development as part of public realm works, may have also installed cycle stands and other cycling facilities, details of which are not maintained by my Department.

My draft Bicycle Strategy highlights the need for a comprehensive cycle network with end to end routes. This will include the provision of secure cycle parking where it is required. As part of our development plans, we will be making an assessment of current parking provision.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the annual cost of the free bus pass for people over 60 years old; and what percentage of users are aged between 60 and 65.

Mr Kennedy: For 2013/14 the cost of free bus travel for the over 60s was £27.9m out of a total for free travel of £40.2m

In terms of users, passenger journeys 2013/14 show that 27% of smart pass users were in the 60-65 age category across both bus and rail.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development how much has been spent on repairing vandalism to bus shelters in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37956/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The provision and maintenance of bus shelters is funded by Adshel through advertising revenue and at no cost to my Department. The contract covers the vast majority of Northern Ireland's bus shelters and my Department does not retain information on costs incurred by Adshel in carrying out its contractual commitments.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development whether traffic attendants can display flexibility on parking infringements during the Public Realm works in North Down.

Mr Kennedy: Traffic Attendants do not have the authority to grant parking concessions, other than those already provided within existing parking legislation. However, as a result of ongoing road works it may not be possible to enforce some restrictions, for example, where signs or markings have been removed.

Waiting restrictions are beneficial in both maintaining a turnover in parking and increasing availability for delivery vehicles serving local shops and businesses. They discourage long stay parking and maximise the use of short stay spaces. There are a number of public realm schemes currently ongoing in the North Down and Ards area, namely Bangor Town Centre, Donaghadee, Comber, Newtownards and Holywood.

My Department's officials are working with North Down Borough Council and Ards Borough Council officials on the five public realm schemes in the area to ensure the works are carried out in a manner to minimise the impact of the works on the parking spaces available for use.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development what road improvement works are planned for the Seahill area of North Down.

(AQW 37997/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not have any road improvement proposals for the Seahill area of North Down within its current work programme.

Budgets and associated work programmes for 2015/16 and beyond have yet to be agreed.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what action he has taken on the alleged incident of Translink staff bullying a colleague with a learning disability, (ii) to provide a report into the outcome of any departmental investigation; and (iii) for an update on any planned action.

(AQW 38031/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has operational responsibility for these issues. This matter is currently the subject of an internal inquiry being undertaken by Translink as part of its established disciplinary procedures. As such it would be inappropriate to comment further until the investigation is complete. I am aware that Translink has been in contact with the individual and family in respect of this very distressing incident.

Department for Social Development

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether the resolution by the Assembly on 11 November 2013 to carry out a review of the range of insulation materials used in Housing Executive homes has been acted upon; and if so, whether any report has been produced following this review and if it will be published.

(AQW 36661/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive commissioned a small scale exploratory survey to determine the condition of its previously installed cavity wall insulation. As a result of the findings from that, a much larger piece of work is now being commissioned as part of the Stock Condition Survey of Housing Executive dwellings which will inform the future strategy and programmes required to address the issues.

Additionally, further research is being carried out in collaboration with Building Research Establishment (BRE) and other key partners called S-IMPLER to determine the best means of insulating the Housing Executive's "No Fines" stock. This research includes heat retention, sustainability and value for money analysis for the insulating materials being considered.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the current number; and (ii) the number in each of the last three years of social housing properties in each Northern Ireland Housing Executive district area.

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has provided Table 1 below which details: (i) the current number and (ii) the number in each of the last three financial years of their stock in each district office area.

The information is not available in the same format for Housing Association stock because my Department does not collect this data by Housing Executive district area. However, the information on stock is collected by Council area from Housing Associations through the Annual Regulatory Return for each year as at 31 March, which is published in November. Therefore, the information as at 31 March 2014 is not yet available nor are the current figures.

The Table 2 below provides details of Housing Association stock for 2011/12 and 2012/13 by Council area.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail how many Housing Executive applicants (i) are currently living in a hostel; (ii) have been living in a hostel for longer than twelve months; and (iii) have been living in a hostel for longer than two years. (AQW 37366/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has provided the following information in relation to:

(i) Hostel accommodation placements at 14 October 2014:

	Total
Housing Executive hostels	69
Voluntary Sector hostels	435
Total	504

(ii) Hostel placements longer than twelve months but less than two years:

	Total
Housing Executive hostels	23
Voluntary Sector hostels	130
Total	153

(iii) Hostel placements longer than two years:

	Total
Housing Executive hostels	8
Voluntary Sector hostels	42
Total	50

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what information is given to homeless applicants by the Housing Executive concerning their rights, entitlements and available services.

(AQW 37367/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that homeless applicants are provided with the following advice and assistance:

Two detailed leaflets which are also available on the Housing Executive's website.

- Homelessness Explained and
- Homeless? How to request a review of a decision

Housing / Homeless Information Pack

In accordance with my Department's Homeless Persons Advice and Assistance Regulations (NI) 2011 the Housing Executive also provides the following advice:

- Housing advice
- Advice on social issues
- Financial advice
- Advice on legal procedures and services.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the points awarded to a Housing Executive applicants as a result of living in hostel accommodation.

(AQW 37417/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information requested is published and can be found on page 28 of the Housing Selection Scheme document on the Housing Executive's website at the following link:

http://www.nihe.gov.uk/housing\_selection\_scheme\_rules.pdf

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how the Housing Executive record 'repeat homelessness'; and whether there are plans to change how it is recorded.

(AQW 37502/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that it records all instances of homelessness on its Housing Management System which retains a detailed history of an individual's or household's homeless presentations. The Housing Executive has no plans to change how this information is recorded.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the action taken by his Department to recover more than £800,000 awarded to Trinity Housing in 2008 for an Advanced Land Purchase in Crossgar; (ii) the current status of this grant; (iii) the steps he will now take to recover this money; and (iv) whether his Department has the power to seize the land in question.

(AQW 37536/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- (i) The issue of recoupment is an operational matter for the Housing Executive as the managers of the Social Housing Development Programme.
- (ii) The current status of the grant is that it was paid by the Housing Executive to Trinity Housing and subsequently expended by Trinity to purchase the site.
- (iii) The decision to recover is one for the Housing Executive to take and I understand that recovery proceedings have now been initiated.
- (iv) My Department has the power to vest land. However, given the problems in Trinity developing the site arise from not being able to obtain planning permission there is no benefit in having the land in departmental ownership. The best way to put this back on a proper footing is for the grant to be recovered and used elsewhere.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Social Development how many residential units have been transferred to community organisations to set up social enterprises in the last five years.

(AQW 37607/11-15)

Mr Storey: There have been no residential units transferred to community organisations to set up social enterprises in the last five years.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development, given that the delay in the legislative progress of the Welfare Reform Bill has resulted in the stalling of engagement events proposed by the Social Security Agency to educate the health sector on the medical evidence which may be requested to support a claimant's Personal Independence Payment, whether he would consider providing an interim update to all GPs in relation to provision of appropriate medical evidence in support of Disability Living Allowance claims.

(AQW 37626/11-15)

Mr Storey: Where medical evidence is sought to support a claim for Disability Living Allowance, a standard report is issued to the GP to request the information and is designed to collect only the relevant clinical evidence. The covering note which accompanies all GP report requests explains the purpose of the report, advises that no examination is required and that the information can be completed from their knowledge of the patient where appropriate and their medical records. Given that there are no plans to change the current arrangements for how GPs provide reports in support of Disability Living Allowance claimants there are no plans to update the GP regarding completing medical reports for Disability Living Allowance. Engagement events are planned with GPs in relation to the introduction of Personal Independence Payments once agreement has been reached on the passage of the Welfare Reform Bill (NI) 2012.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36657/11-15, for a breakdown of the £66m by areas of responsibility, as set out on his Department's website under (a) Neighbourhood Renewal Funding for voluntary and community organisations; (b) Urban Development Grants; (c) Management of the Liganside; (d) Belfast Streets Ahead; (e) Strategic Regeneration Frameworks; (f) Comprehensive Development Schemes; and (g) Area Project Team Grants.

(AQW 37639/11-15)

Mr Storey: The £66 million proposed for transfer to Councils is an indicative allocation based on my Department's 2014-2015 baseline for Urban Regeneration and Community Development. A decision on the final allocation will be taken in the context of the Executive's 2015-16 Budget and subject to a due diligence review.

The allocation model is not based on specific programmes but on the following broad themes:

■ Tackling disadvantage	£27,490,000
■ Physical regeneration	£24,440,000
■ Community development	£5,287,000
■ Liganside	£2,592,000
■ Staff & administrative Costs	£6,188,000

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the most up to date information on the number of people in receipt of Disability Living Allowance in each of the last ten years, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 37681/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information requested is provided in the table below.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the public housing shortfall in East Londonderry; and how the current budgetary crisis is affecting his Department's ability to address the shortfall.

(AQW 37698/11-15)

Mr Storey: Table 1 below, provided by the Housing Executive, identifies the current approved Social Housing Development Programme (SHDP) 2014/15 – 2016/17 for East Londonderry Parliamentary Constituency, set against the Housing Need projections for 2013-2018 for the areas in which the schemes are located.

Table 2 below, also provided by the Housing Executive, identifies the shortfall between the current Housing Need projections and the current SHDP in East Londonderry.

The adjustments to NI Block Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit as a result of the delay in implementing welfare reform in Northern Ireland will have a negative impact on spending on public services, however my Department is making best efforts to direct cuts towards those areas of spend which will have least impact on service delivery.

Mr Brady asked the Minister for Social Development how much annually managed expenditure has been paid in (i) Pension Credits; and (ii) Working Family Tax Credits in each of the last four years.

(AQW 37708/11-15)

Mr Storey: The amount of Pension Credit expenditure paid by the Department for Social Development in the last four years is disclosed in the table below.

The Department for Social Development does not pay Working Family Tax Credits. This is administered by HM Revenue and Customs.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development how many (i) individuals; and (ii) organisations have been investigated by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland since its establishment.

(AQW 37709/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- (i) Information has not been recorded on the number of individuals investigated by the Charity Commission since its establishment.
- (ii) Some 296 organisations have been investigated by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland since its establishment. Organisations may be counted more than once due to limitations in the Charity Commission's recording process.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the (i) sites; and (ii) the size of the sites in County Fermanagh that are under the control of (a) his Department; (b) the Housing Executive; and (c) housing associations, which could be developed for social housing.

(AQW 37710/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- a. I can advise that the detail of the sites and size of sites under the control of my department, the Housing Executive and Housing Associations in County Fermanagh can be broken down as follows:
- b. My Department through the Regional Development Office holds a site of 17.2 acres at the former Grosvenor Barracks in Enniskillen. Planning permission for the regeneration of the site for housing is ongoing.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development how many people have been barred from operating a charity due to an investigation by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland or court conviction.

(AQW 37768/11-15)

Mr Storey: One person has been barred from operating a charity due to an investigation by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland.

The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has not been notified by the courts of any people barred from operating a charity due to a court conviction.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the investigatory powers of the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37769/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has a range of investigatory powers (mainly information powers and powers to act for the protection of charities) which are set out in the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008.

These include powers to: institute inquiries; call for documents and search records; disclose information to, or receive information from, any public body or office-holder; act for the protection of charities; suspend or remove trustees, officers, agents or employees from the exercise of that person's office or employment and also from membership of a charity; make provision with respect to the functions to be discharged by an interim manager appointed for a charity; give specific directions for the protection of a charity; direct the application of charity property; determine membership of a charity; enter and search premises (where certain conditions are met and a warrant has been issued) and order an investigation and audit of the accounts of a charitable company.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development how many complaints regarding the conduct of (i) an individual; and (ii) organisations have been received by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37770/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- (i) Information on the number of complaints regarding the conduct of individuals received by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland is not recorded.
- (ii) The number of complaints regarding the conduct of organisations received by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland in each of the last three years is as follows:
  - 2011-12: 106
  - 2012-13: 67
  - 2013-14: 107

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Urban Villages project.

(AQW 37778/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Together: Building a United Community Strategy published by OFMdFM in May 2013, outlined that 4 Urban Villages would be established to create and stabilise change within communities. The first two Urban Villages announced by OFMdFM in March 2014 are Colin and the Newtownards Road.

The delivery of the Urban Village programme is currently being led by my Department with support from OFMdFM and resources have been secured from the Strategic Investment Board (SIB). My Department is currently working with SIB to engage stakeholders. Both projects are progressing and are at different stages of development.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Social Development when the last external cyclical maintenance scheme was carried out by the Housing Executive in Lagan Valley.

(AQW 37826/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that the last external cyclical maintenance scheme carried out in the Lagan Valley constituency was at Rushmore and Knockburn estates in Lisburn in April 2011. It involved work to 132 dwellings with a contract value of £312,000.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the delayed roof scheme for Grove Park, Culcavy.

(AQW 37828/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has confirmed that this scheme went on site on 6 October 2014 and is expected to take 13 weeks to complete. Work includes roof replacement to 23 dwellings and six garages at Grove Park, Culcavy and Dunbeg Park, Hillsborough.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development to detail what engagement his Department has had with the Irish Football Association, Ulster Rugby and GAA to develop community relations.

(AQO 6906/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department for Social Development has provided financial support from a Volunteering Innovation Fund and has had initial meetings with the IFA, GAA and Ulster Rugby and has had preliminary meetings to discuss a partnership arrangement to promote benefits uptake.

Financial support of £487k, covering the three year period April 2012 – March 2015 was provided for a 'Sport in the Community' project which focuses on volunteer development and community capacity building. This project involves the three organisations working closely in partnership for a range of joint development programmes which include shared learning workshops, club development programmes, community outreach initiatives, neighbourhood renewal objectives and volunteer training and development.

The Social Security Agency is seeking to promote the Make the Call benefits advice line through these sporting organisations community networks. Community level partnerships have been identified as key levers in reaching people with benefit entitlement. Engagement with these organisations is still at an early stage.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to introduce measures to set up the Warm Home Discount Scheme.

(AQW 37860/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Warm Homes Discount Scheme is a four year scheme operating in Great Britain which commenced in April 2011 and is scheduled to run to March 2015. The purpose of the scheme is to help low-income and vulnerable households with energy costs. The scheme is specifically aimed at those on a low income or receiving particular types of pension credit. The UK Government informs suppliers which households to support through sharing limited data between the Department for Work and Pensions and the energy suppliers.

The Warm Homes Discount Scheme is covered by legislation which does not apply in Northern Ireland. Responsibility for introducing any corresponding legislation in Northern Ireland would be a matter for the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment.

The Department for Social Development already offers energy efficiency improvement schemes for low income households through the Warm Homes Scheme, Boiler Replacement Scheme and the recently launched Affordable Warmth Scheme.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the legislative provision he plans, including the timescale that provision will be brought forward, to reflect the passage of the Pensions Act 2014.

(AQW 37869/11-15)

Mr Storey: I have secured the agreement of the Northern Ireland Executive to introduce a Pensions Bill in the Northern Ireland Assembly which will replicate many of the provisions of the Pensions Act 2014.

Subject to the agreement of the Speaker, it is my intention to introduce the Pensions Bill in the house on 10 November.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the correspondence he has had with older people to ensure they are availing of all applicable social security entitlements.

(AQW 37949/11-15)

Mr Storey: Since 2005, my Department has delivered annual benefit uptake programmes using a range of evidence based approaches to improving uptake. These have included direct and indirect targeting, advertising and community outreach activities.

Investment in this work has generated over £67 million in additional annual income for people across Northern Ireland. Of this, over £50 million has been generated for more than 15,500 older people.

The 2014/15 Benefit Uptake Programme is currently underway and again focuses mainly on older people. The programme includes a direct targeting exercise aimed at providing 25,000 older people with an opportunity to receive a full benefit entitlement check. In October 2014, letters were issued to those older people who have been identified, as potentially missing out on benefits and this will continue until the end of January 2015

The annual 'Make the Call' regional advertising and promotion campaign also recommenced in October 2014. This is focused on older people and benefits greatly from the direct participation of Claire Keatinge, Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland. Older people can contact the 'Make the Call' Benefits Advice Line where experienced advisors will assess their entitlement to benefits, services and other government supports. The advisor can also provide help and assist with making a claim and a visit from a Community Outreach Officer can be arranged if required.

As part of its daily business the Social Security Agency also provides information and advice on a full range of social security benefits to ensure that people, including older people, are aware of their entitlements.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) why the mandatory registration of letting agents with a redress scheme has not been introduced; and (ii) what consideration his Department has given to the introduction of such a scheme.

(AQW 37950/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department does not have any regulatory powers in relation to letting agents in Northern Ireland. The power contained in the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act 2013 which allowed a redress scheme to be introduced in England does not extend to Northern Ireland.

The Housing Strategy Action Plan commits my Department to commence a review of private rented sector regulation during 2014/15 with consultation on proposals planned to take place during 2015/16. Preliminary work has begun and the regulation of letting agents is something that may be considered as part of this review. The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment will be consulted.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 29667/11-15, to detail for each individual council area the number of complaints and disputes received by their environmental health departments relating to the Private Tenancies (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 which (a) did not result in court action; and (b) did result in court action in the last five years; and for his assessment of this level of enforcement activity.

(AQW 37953/11-15)

Mr Storey: The number of complaints and disputes received by each council's environmental health departments relating to the Private Tenancies (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 which (a) did not result in court action; and (b) did result in court action in the last five years, are detailed in the table below.

My officials will continue to work with councils to ensure that, where appropriate, enforcement action is taken.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the sufficiency of the parking in Rosnarick Close, Derrygonnelly; and what plans are in place to increase the number of spaces for Housing Executive tenants. (AQW 37955/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has no plans to increase the number of spaces available as the area in question is 100% owner occupied.

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the total number of new social housing units built in (i) North; (ii) South; (iii) East; and (iv) West Belfast in the last five years. (AQW 37994/11-15)

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr McGlone asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in relation to the Titanic Showdown boxing event held on Saturday 6 September 2014, (i) what financial contribution in the way of sponsorship was made to the event by their Department; and (ii) what representations regarding the event were received by their Department from (a) public representatives; (b) Ministers; (c) Special Advisors; and (d) lobby interests.

(AQW 35790/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): OFMDFM made no financial contribution to the Titanic Showdown boxing event nor did the Department receive any representations from public representatives, Ministers, Special Advisors or lobby interests.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 22188/11-15, whether external organisations have delivered or arranged visits at any time to the Maze site since May 2007; and if so, to detail the (i) dates; and (ii) organisations.

(AQW 36144/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: External organisations do not deliver or arrange visits to the Maze/Long Kesh site.

Organisations interested in visiting the site must apply to the Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation (MLK DC).

If approved, visits are delivered by MLK DC staff. Prior to the establishment of the MLK DC on 10 September 2012 this service was provided by OFMDFM staff.

Mr D Bradley asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what proportion of the Social Investment Fund budget is contractually committed on capital and revenue projects.

(AQO 6860/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Funding has been allocated to 23 projects totalling a commitment of £34.4million or 43% of the Social Investment Fund £80 million budget.

Mr G Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the progress being made on the United Youth programme of Together: Building a United Community.

(AQO 6861/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Together: Building a United Community is the Executive's strategic framework for improving good relations and recognises 'the need to improve attitudes amongst other young people' and 'to build a community where they can play a full and active role in building good relations'.

One of the seven core headline actions committed to within Together: Building a United Community is the creation of 10,000 one year placements which includes the development of an employment and youth volunteering programme (United Youth Programme) which builds capacity for leadership and improves community relations.

To date there has been comprehensive and detailed engagement with youth related organisations and young people themselves to ensure the programme has maximum buy-in and consensus. This culminated in the delivery of a United Youth Programme Design Day in January of this year at the Waterfront Hall, hosted by OFMDFM and a further youth design residential in September 2014 in Corrymeela.

The Department for Employment and Learning is now leading on the development and implementation of the United Youth Programme and has established a design team to take this forward. Membership of the design team includes representation from the Department for Employment and Learning, the Department for Social Development, OFMDFM, the Department of Education, Community Relations Council, Youthnet, Youth Council, International Fund for Ireland, Public Health Agency and Education and Library Boards.

Selected pilot projects will roll out in January 2015 to the 16-24 age group who are not in education, employment or training. By summer 2016 the programme will extend the eligible age range to 14-24 age group.

The resources necessary to allow the pilot programmes to proceed have been secured and it is anticipated that the programme will be offered to approximately 300 young people in the 16 to 24 age group.

Ms McGahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the specific needs of rural communities are being taken into account in the development of the Childcare Strategy.

(AQO 6862/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The first phase of the Bright Start Childcare Strategy includes a number of Key First Actions aimed at addressing rural childcare needs. These include actions to create up to 1,000 new childminder places in rural areas and up to 1,000 centre-based school age childcare places serving rural communities.

Work to develop the Bright Start rural childminder initiative is currently underway. With regard to school age childcare, a first round of applications to the Bright Start School Age Grant Scheme has resulted in grants worth more than £400,000 being approved for rural childcare settings. These will, over a three year period, support some 360 childcare places aimed at children in the 4-14 age group.

Work to develop the full Bright Start Childcare Strategy is currently underway. Officials are engaging with key childcare stakeholders, region-wide, on the content of the Strategy. When this is complete, we will proceed to public consultation with a view to launching the final Strategy in the new year.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many business start ups the Social Investment Fund has supported in areas of deprivation in East Londonderry, since 2012.

(AQW 37829/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: None of the three projects prioritised by the Derry/Londonderry Zone Steering Group within their funding allocation are focused on supporting business start-ups.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the Social Investment Fund has been used to support the community/voluntary sector as a means of targeting educational underachievement and skills shortage in East Londonderry, since 2012.

(AQW 37831/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: One of the projects prioritised by the Derry/Londonderry Zone Steering Group in their Area Plan is the Community Work Programme. This project has been designed to improve employment prospects for the long term unemployed and particularly the under 25s. It aims to provide tailored training to participants and subsequent placements with a view to linking training and education to securing employment. Officials are currently working with the lead partner to finalise letter of offer conditions so that it can progress to delivery across the Derry/Londonderry zone.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the Social Investment Fund has supported individuals and families facing economic hardship in East Londonderry since 2012.

(AQW 37833/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Three projects were prioritised by the Derry/Londonderry Zone Steering Group within the budget allocated to this zone for delivery of the area plan.

One of these projects, the Community Work Programme has been approved for funding and is subject to an agreed letter of offer. Officials are currently working with the lead partner to finalise letter of offer conditions so that it can progress to delivery shortly. Therefore, whilst delivery has not yet commenced and it is not possible at this stage to determine the impact given the focus of this project on training and employment, it is expected that on implementation it will provide support to the long term unemployed and particularly the under 25s, which are likely to include families and individuals facing economic hardship.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the current number of staff employed in their Department, broken down by the sections or areas in which they work.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 37210/11-15, to explain the rationale behind the value of the contract ranging between £56,000,000 and £65,000,000, excluding VAT; and how this figure was derived. (AQW 37874/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The figures given in the Notice of Intended Procurement published in the Official Journal of the European Union advised prospective suppliers that the estimated value of the contract ranged between £56,000,000 and £65,000,000 GBP (excluding VAT) for a period of up to 15 years.

The contract will cover the development of the new system - including testing, support, migration of data from the existing systems, and managing the transition to the new system, as well as on-going maintenance and upgrades for up to 15 years from Award of Contract.

NIFAIS will provide an efficient replacement for APHIS, which is central to the delivery of the majority of the Veterinary Service's work, for example the TB programme. The traceability which NIFAIS will provide will underpin the assurance of our livestock produce in local and export markets, and as such is also central to the achievement of the aims of "Going for Growth".

Business Cases are compiled under HM Treasury guidelines and the estimated costings used must include an "Optimism Bias (OB)" factor, to accommodate and make allowance for the range of risks to which all complex ICT projects are exposed. The original Outline Business Case (OBC) for NIFAIS was completed in 2009. The estimated costs for the new system were developed through detailed discussions with the ICT industry based on pricing the current functionality of the APHIS system. The OBC was reviewed and updated in 2013 to reflect additional APHIS functionality, potential costs of implementing an exit agreement from the current system and increased ICT development costs. These costs also included "OB" for NIFAIS which was calculated using the Mott McDonald Model, and applied at 62% of the capital costings.

A number of interested companies have now been short-listed and invited to participate in Competitive Dialogue from 4th November. As commercial confidentiality is key to the Department obtaining value for money and the maintenance of competitiveness, fairness and trust, it would not be appropriate to place any more detailed information into the public domain at this time. However my officials would be very happy to meet with you and explain the detail behind the Mott McDonald and the other calculations underpinning the Outline Business Case in confidence at a time of your convenience.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 37210/11-15, to detail all costs already incurred in relation to the new Northern Ireland Food Animal Information System. (AQW 37876/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The NIFAIS programme was formally constituted in 4th July 2011.

Costs since then till end September 2014 total £1,480,163 for programme staff, and Programme Costs of £309,288, made up of £241,451 for specialist procurement support from Central Procurement Directorate, and £67,837 which includes costs associated with mandatory gateway reviews undertaken.

The programme has also incurred Consultancy Costs of £252,870 for the provision of specialist legal, financial and commercial support (including consultancy support for the revision of the Outline Business Case and development and agreement of the APHIS exit agreement).

NIFAIS will provide an efficient replacement for APHIS, which is central to the delivery of the majority of the Veterinary Service's work, for example the TB programme. The traceability which NIFAIS will provide will underpin the assurance of our livestock produce in local and export markets, and as such is also central to the achievement of the aims of "Going for Growth".

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 37632/11-15, when the application for the appointment of Private River Watchers was received by the Loughs Agency.

(AQW 38025/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have been advised by the Loughs Agency that the application for the appointment of Private River Watchers was received by the Loughs Agency on 21 March 2014.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what progress has been made on the PEDU recommendations to move Rivers Agency into the Department for Regional Development and the establishment of a flood alert and forecast service.

(AQW 38041/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As I have stated before, I am not opposed, in principle, to Rivers Agency moving to the Department for Regional Development, if it improves the management of flood risk, but I believe this issue should be considered in the wider context of a review of Government Departments.

Since the publication of the PEDU report, there have been significant developments in relation to flood warning and informing, which are of benefit to the north of Ireland. Formal engagement between Rivers Agency and the Met Office now takes place routinely to inform severe weather warnings. Water level alerts, where appropriate, are also being installed to be used by selected communities to improve the overall response to flooding. Community engagement in flood-prone areas is helping to inform property owners about flood risk and how to improve their resilience to flood events.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the amount of funding paid to reimburse the use of Smart Passes for rural transport, in each of the last four completed financial years.

(AQW 38090/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Working in conjunction with the Department for Regional Development (DRD) my Department through the Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation Programme continues to fund passenger trips on Rural Community Transport Partnership vehicles, across the north of Ireland, for elderly and disabled rural dwellers that hold a SmartPass. The following DARD funding has been provided in each of the last four completed financial years:

Financial Year	10/11	11/12	12/13	13/14
Assisted Rural Travel Scheme (ARTS) Funding	£315,000	£400,000	£540,000	£570,000

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in her Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38151/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There has been some initial discussion with the Public Sector Reform Division. However this is at an early stage of development and no savings have been realised to date.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) whether her Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38238/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development participates in the NICS wide Cycle to Work Scheme.
- (ii) Staff can join the scheme at any time throughout the year.
- (iii) The NICS Cycle to Work Scheme does not extend to NDPBs as the NICS is not their employer. However the Department of Finance and Personnel, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has secured any commitment from the Chinese authorities that they will accept red meat from Northern Ireland, similar to that secured by the Irish Government.

(AQW 38435/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My officials are working towards this objective, however the Chinese are subject to resource constraints as we are, and negotiations to secure approval to export red meat from the north of Ireland will take time. In addition, unlike the position in the south, the north was subject to a ban on British and north of Ireland beef exports which Europe lifted in 2006.

Therefore in order to secure commitment on market access, the Chinese authorities must be assured of the high standard of our TSEs (Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies) control regimes. Therefore, similar to the process adopted by the south, the Export Certification Partnership for Britain and the north of Ireland has entered into a Memorandum of Understanding on TSEs with China which includes the establishment of a TSE working group. An expert on TSEs, based in AFBI Veterinary Sciences Division, will contribute to this group.

It is anticipated that this working group will meet in the coming months with the aim of providing evidence-based assurances to China on our TSE controls and to provide evidence of our robust traceability. This is an important step in this labour-intensive procedure. To advance the process, I am sending one of my senior veterinary officials, supported by staff from the recently established north of Ireland Bureau in China, to carry out export negotiations in Beijing in mid-November.

I will also continue to liaise with the high-level contacts I have made during my visits to China to maintain momentum on trade negotiations across all sectors.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what effect the cuts to Libraries NI will have on each library in North Belfast.

(AQW 38110/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: As a result of the need to make in-year budget reductions, Libraries NI is currently implementing a number of savings measures. These include releasing agency staff who covered staff vacancies, maternity leave, secondments, special projects, annual leave and sickness. In addition, all libraries in the North of Ireland, including those in North Belfast, may be affected by a reduction in expenditure on new stock. Some smaller branches may, as well, be subject to temporary ad hoc closures.

With effect from 3rd November 2014, Libraries NI has also changed or reduced the weekly opening hours, for the time being, of four libraries in North Belfast (ie Belfast Central, Cloughfern, Glengormley and Rathcoole). Weekly opening hours remain unchanged at three other libraries in the area (ie Ardoyne, Chichester and Grove). Details of the changes to weekly opening hours announced by Libraries NI for each library in North Belfast are set out in the Annex attached.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the budget of the Irish Language Broadcast Fund in each year since it was established; and how much of this was allocated.

(AQW 38125/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Irish Language Broadcast Fund has an annual budget of £3 million and it has remained at this level since the Fund became operational in 2005.

Of this, £2.5 million is spent on Irish language moving image content and £0.5 million is spent on training programmes and overheads.

The allocated annual budget is spent every year.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the films and programmes, and the relevant production companies, which were supported by the Irish Language Broadcast Fund in each year since it was established.

(AQW 38126/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have attached a list of the information you have requested at Annex A.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, what are the priorities of the Irish Language Broadcast Fund; and who set the priorities of the fund.

(AQW 38128/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The priorities of the Irish Language Broadcast Fund (ILBF) are set by the ILBF Investment Committee.

The current priorities are as set out below but these are due to be revised in the next number of weeks.

The ILBF;

- aims to fund a minimum of 60 hours per year of quality Irish language programming which will appeal to a North of Ireland audience;
- welcomes applications for content that ensures prominence of the Ulster dialect, geography, history, society and culture. A minimum of 70% of the spoken word must be Irish;
- will consider any genre that meets its funding criteria, but particularly welcomes content that is aimed at a youth audience (under 25's). This could take the form of, for example, drama, magazine series, animation, documentary, light or factual entertainment;
- is keen to develop and support the low budget drama sector in the North of Ireland and currently supports at least one Irish language drama series per year;
- welcomes enquiries regarding funding for mobile phone applications, digital games and website content, particularly those aimed at a youth audience and language learners. Consideration could be given to the translation to Irish of existing applications and games which have proven market success and/or reached a wide audience. In all cases applicants will have to provide evidence of extensive audience reach, and, if appropriate proven audience need or desire for this content, particularly if a traditional broadcaster is not attached;
- recognises the crossover of skills in radio and television production and therefore welcomes enquiries regarding funding for a training and content production scheme. It currently supports an Irish language radio content production and broadcasting scheme with strong training elements at its core and would seek to emulate this scheme;
- will only consider applications for landmark documentaries/documentary series with tariffs exceeding those set out in the joint commissioning documents if the following information can be provided: evidence of broadcaster support (support from more than one broadcaster encouraged); significant audience reach (could the series reach a wider audience in a different territory?); evidence that other funding sources are being sought (BAI's Sound & Vision Scheme, Irish Film Board etc.) evidence that the proposed project necessitates the significant & extensive use of the following: drama reconstruction, archive, animation/graphics, travel, filming in areas with risk attached.
- Irish language learners make up a significant part of its audience and they welcome applications to fund educational programming aimed at any age group. Applicants should have some experience in producing educational content and be knowledgeable of the North of Ireland curriculum.
- Interested applicants are also encouraged to examine the jointly produced commissioning documents which are updated on an annual basis. These documents provide more detail on the slots available and the specific genre and type of content that the individual broadcasters (BBC NI, TG4 & RTÉ) are seeking.

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why £1.2 million of the £3 million allocated to boxing has been withheld.
(AQW 38129/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: None of the allocated £3.27 million Lottery funding for the Boxing Investment Programme has been withheld. Administration of this programme is a matter for Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department.

Sport NI has allocated £2.5 million of this funding to take forward capital works for repairs, major refurbishment and new builds for club premises. This work is progressing with initial design work now completed for 40 eligible clubs. In addition, £170,000 has already been spent on boxing equipment for 94 clubs. The remainder of the funding is being used for costs associated with professional fees and the project management of the capital works programme.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what impact the groups funded through Sceim Phobail Gaeilge have had on the number of people who have signed up Liofa 2015; and how much funding these groups have attracted to the Irish language sector, beyond Foras Sceim Phobail Gaeilge funding.

Ms Ní Chuilín: There are no official records held in relation to the impact groups funded through Scéim Phobail Gaeilge, have had on the number of people who have signed up to Líofo

Neither the department or Foras na Gaeilge holds any information on how much funding such groups have attracted to the sector. Attracting additional funding is not part of the criteria for receipt of funding from the Scéim Phobail Gaeilge.

Foras na Gaeilge has been continuously promoting and supporting the Líofo campaign since 2011 through the groups it funds. The current groups awarded Scéim Phobail Gaeilge (since January 2011) and based in the North are encouraged to register with Líofo but are not specifically monitored on their activities involving Líofo. My department is aware these northern based groups in receipt of Scéim Phobail Gaeilge have held specific open registration days for Líofo in their respective localities and continue to encourage registration of new members through the Líofo website.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) what budget has been set aside for the Audit of Traditional Music commissioned by the Arts Council of Northern Ireland; (ii) how the audit will be conducted; and (iii) what the timeframe is for completion of the audit.

(AQW 38463/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The total available budget for the audit of Traditional Music is £10,000 (inclusive of VAT).

The audit will be conducted using desk research and structured interviews as the core methodological approaches. Annex A, attached, provides a project description and the Terms of Reference.

A final draft report is scheduled to be brought before the Arts Council Board for consideration in January 2015.

Department of Education

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 30987/11-15, to detail (i) the rate per thousand of fifteen to seventeen year old pupils who had less than 85 per cent attendance in 2013/14, broken down by (a) council area; and (b) electoral ward; and (ii) what further action is being taken to reduce levels of absenteeism.[R]

(AQW 38040/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education):

- (i) The information provided in AQW 30987/11-15 is still current. Data for 2013/14 will not be available until March 2015.
- (ii) Regular school attendance and educational attainment are inextricably linked. Regular attendance ensures that pupils get the best possible outcomes from their period in compulsory education and improves their chances of employment and life chances in the longer term.

I have given close attention to the conclusions and recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee report on this issue, in particular that we need a Pupil Attendance Strategy. A Memorandum of Reply was published in August and it sets out a programme of work for my Department and the Education and Library Boards (ELBs).

Much has already been done. For example, to assist with the development of the Pupil Attendance Strategy, my officials have held workshops with schools and the Education Welfare Service (EWS). Direct engagement will also take place with pupils, parents, school governors, other government departments and the wider community.

My Department's guidance to schools on "Pupil Attendance and Absence Recording" has been revised and will issue in the coming weeks. It strongly recommends, among other things, that each school should have a clear pupil attendance policy. This has been supplemented by "School Attendance Matters – a Parent's Guide" which was issued in September for distribution to the parents/carers of all school-age children.

My Department and the ELBs continue to provide support to vulnerable groups, such as Looked after Children, Travellers, School-Age Mothers and Newcomers. This work is supported by the EWS, looked after children teams, the Traveller Education Support Service (TESS) and the Inclusion and Diversity Service.

The levels of unauthorised pupil absences are unacceptable. Evidence shows that not all schools are following up on the reasons for absences. My Department will be writing to these schools in the coming weeks to highlight how many days of education have been missed by their pupils where the reason for the absence is unknown. If we are to develop a meaningful Pupil Attendance Strategy, we need to know the underlying causes of absenteeism which develop into educational underachievement for so many of our young people.

I remain committed to addressing the issue to ensure that our young people have every opportunity to reap the benefits of regular school attendance.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 30988/11-15, to detail (i) the rate per thousand of primary school pupils who had less than 85 per cent attendance in 2013/14, broken down by (a) council area; and (b) electoral ward; and (ii) what further action is being taken to reduce levels of absenteeism.[R]

(AQW 38042/11-15)

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Education how many foreign national children are taking additional English language lessons in each Education and Library Board; and to detail (i) the additional cost incurred by this; and (ii) whether the additional cost is covered by each Education and Library Board's budget or the schools delegated budget.

(AQW 38049/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is not routinely collected by my Department.

My Department's policy "Every School a Good School: Supporting Newcomer Pupils", published in April 2009, aims to ensure that newcomer pupils receive the support they need to access the curriculum so that they can fulfil their potential.

My Department provides funding to schools, through the Common Funding Formula, for each newcomer pupil who has significant language acquisition needs. This enables schools to provide the support most appropriate to their newcomer pupils and it is for them to decide how this funding is utilised. If a school decides to provide additional English language classes for newcomer pupils, the costs are not covered by the Education and Library Boards.

My Department funds the Education and Library Boards' Regional Inclusion and Diversity Service (IDS) which provides a range of support and advice services to schools, to guide and assist them in making appropriate provision for newcomer pupils, including pupils with English as an additional language.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education, following the creation of a single education board, how the staff of the North Eastern Education and Library Board located in County Hall Ballymena will be affected.

Mr O'Dowd: The staff of all five education and library boards will transfer to the Education Authority. These staff will have their current terms and conditions of employment protected by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006, in accordance with Schedule 2 of the Education Bill. All staff will also be afforded pension protection.

The establishment of the Education Authority will represent a rationalisation of existing structures and the new Authority is therefore expected to employ fewer staff, particularly in management grades, than are currently employed by the education and library boards.

Significant reductions in staff have already been made in anticipation of the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority. It is therefore my expectation that any remaining reductions under the Education Authority will be achieved through voluntary redundancy, retirement and resignation.

The location of Education Authority staff and functions will be determined by the new Education Authority through the development of a location strategy in consultation with Trades Unions.

It will take time for the Education Authority to arrive at a "steady state" and so issues around location of staff and functions will be implemented incrementally. These will need to be reviewed at the appropriate time to determine their equality impact as well as conducting other screening processes such as rural proofing.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education how many primary school teachers have a science degree.

(AQW 38063/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Data held by the General Teaching Council (GTCNI) indicates that there are currently 122 teachers employed in primary schools, including preparatory departments, who hold a degree qualification in which the main specialism is a science subject.

This figure does not include those teachers who hold a teaching degree, i.e. a Bachelor of Education, the primary programme of which is the most common route into teaching in the primary sector here. This programme prepares students for all areas of the primary curriculum including science, and students may also select optional science related modules as part of this provision.

In addition there may also be teachers employed in schools who have not advised the GTCNI of additional qualifications they may hold over and above those required to teach here.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many integrated schools have sought to expand their numbers in the last five years.

(AQW 38075/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Based on published development proposals, nine integrated schools have sought to increase their enrolment in the last five years. Their details are listed in the table below.

Name of School	Position	Increased enrolment
Ulidia Integrated College	DP published 6 November 2014	From 500 to 660 pupils (proposed)
Rowandale Integrated PS	Decision pending	From 174 to 399 pupils (proposed)
Millennium Integrated PS	DP approved	From 203 to 392 pupils
Shimna Integrated College	DP approved	From 480 to 620 pupils
Portadown Integrated PS	DP not approved	None
Priory Integrated College	DP approved with modification	From 450 to 500 pupils
Enniskillen Integrated PS	DP approved	From 244 to 392 pupils
New-Bridge Integrated College	DP approved	From 500 to 620 pupils
Drumragh Integrated College, Omagh	DP not approved	Decision currently being retaken

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many integrated schools have sought to expand their numbers since the Drumragh Judgement.

(AQW 38076/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since the Drumragh Judgement two integrated schools - Rowandale Integrated Primary School and Ulidia Integrated College, have sought to expand their numbers.

A record of all current development proposals and decisions made is available on my Departments website at:
http://www.deni.gov.uk/14-schools\_estate\_devprop\_pg.htm

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education for an update on the revised written departmental guidance to encourage and facilitate integrated education after the Drumragh Judgement.

(AQW 38078/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As I explained in my answer to AQW 33963/11-15, the court judgement provided clarity as to whom the Article 64 (1) duty of the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989 is owed. I have already instructed my officials to ensure that the application of the duty placed on the Department to encourage and facilitate integrated education takes account of that clarity.

Additional guidance has now been provided to all senior staff within the Department via internal workshops that have presented an opportunity to make clear my expectations that the statutory duties to encourage and facilitate both integrated and Irish-medium education are discharged fully, positively and proactively and to explain the implications of both statutory duties, including in the context of the Drumragh Judgement. The use of the workshop approach has proved a very effective means of communication and this approach will be rolled out to other relevant staff in the months ahead.

At the same time, I have been considering what additional guidance is needed for the executive non-departmental bodies which are accountable to my Department and which must play their part in supporting us in discharging these important duties. I expect to see much greater prominence given by our non-departmental public bodies to supporting the Department in encouraging and facilitating both integrated and Irish-medium education and I shall be signalling this to the appropriate bodies, including the new Education Authority, as we move forward into a new business planning period.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education how he envisages the new education authority making positive steps or removing obstacles to integrated education

Mr O'Dowd: I am committed to ensuring that my Department continues to have a rigorous approach to its statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education.

The new Education Authority will be accountable to, and operate within the strategic framework set by, the Department. This will include assisting the Department in discharging its statutory duty to integrated education. In addition, the Department will hold the Authority to account through the Management Statement/Financial Memorandum (MSFM), as it does with the existing five Education and Library Boards.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) how his Department exercises its scrutiny and challenge role in relation to Area Plans; and (ii) the process by which it approves Area Plans.

(AQW 38080/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Area Plans are developed by the Education & Library Boards working in conjunction with CCMS and engaging with the other school sectors. Given that this is a new approach to planning the schools estate, the Department has provided ongoing advice and guidance to ensure a consistent approach across the Board areas. I have also established the Area Planning Steering Group to ensure regular engagement with the Department on strategic issues relating to area planning.

Departmental officials meet representatives of the Boards and CCMS to discuss and examine area plans prior to and following public consultation. Any significant changes required to individual schools are subject to the rigour of the Development Proposal process. There is no legislative requirement at present for the Department to approve area plans.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education for a breakdown of the membership of the Area Planning Steering Group.

(AQW 38081/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Area Planning Steering Group (APSG) is chaired by a senior official from the Department and of Education and comprises representatives the Chief Executives of the five Education and Library Boards (ELBs), the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS), the NI Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) and Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta (CnaG). A senior official from the Department of Employment and Learning (DEL) attends as an observer to provide advice on FE issues and policies.

The table below sets out the current membership of the Group:

Name	Organisation
Dr Clare Mangan	Belfast ELB
Shane McCurdy	North Eastern ELB
Gregory Butler	South Eastern ELB
Gavin Boyd	Southern ELB
Barry Mulholland	Western ELB
Jim Clarke	CCMS
Noreen Campbell	NICIE
Dr Micheál Ó Duibh	CnaG
Dr Mary Mclvor	DEL

Given the number of Catholic Maintained schools and the regional nature of the work to be covered by CCMS, it should be noted that Gerry Lundy (CCMS) also attends the meetings to support the CCMS CEO.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education what steps are in place to build on the progress made through the recruitment of teachers under the Delivering Social Change Programme in 2013.

(AQW 38099/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Delivering Social Change Signature Programme to improve Literacy and Numeracy continues to provide support to pupils at risk of underachievement in English and/or maths.

A key component of the programme has been the ongoing monitoring and evaluation of schools' delivery of the programme. ELB officers have been appointed to the programme to provide support to schools and they are working with the schools to identify effective interventions which are delivering positive outcomes for pupils. This good practice is already being disseminated to schools through face to face training sessions, and via the DSC web page on the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) website. ESAGs.tv will also be a valuable tool in the dissemination of this best practice.

In relation to the overall evaluation of the programme, the WELB led project team is currently collecting and collating information on the pupils supported in the last academic year. In addition the Education and Training Inspectorate will shortly be undertaking a qualitative evaluation of the first year's delivery of the programme.

This quantitative and qualitative evaluation evidence will be disseminated to ensure that effective practices are shared across the school system.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to detail the new nursery schools and nursery units that have been established in the past ten years; and the year in which each of them opened.

(AQW 38124/11-15)

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Education to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38148/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department is co-operating with preparations for an OECD led strategic review of public sector reform, to be commissioned by the Department of Finance and Personnel's Public Sector Reform Division. I have met with the DFP Minister to discuss public sector reform and my Department has suggested areas which may be considered suitable as case studies to inform this review.

An Executive Sub Committee for Improving Public Services will oversee this work and determine which case studies are to be progressed. It is premature at this stage to speculate on any efficiencies that may result from this engagement.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education to detail the expected cost saving from establishing a single Education Board.

(AQW 38163/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer the Member to the answer to AQO 6770/11-15 which was published on 10 October 2014.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to outline the timescale for schools being on site at the Lisanelly campus.

(AQW 38178/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The current delivery schedule estimates completion of the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus by 2020, with five post primary schools coming into operation in September of that year.

Arvalee School & Resource Centre will be constructed earlier as part of Phase 1 of the programme and is due to open in September 2016.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education whether the schools on the Lisanelly campus will own their own school site.

(AQW 38179/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My officials are working with the relevant school managing authorities on a broad range of matters, including how the campus will be governed and managed. The issue of ownership is being taken forward as part of that work. Discussions on ownership are at an early stage and no decisions have been taken.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Education to detail the (a) number; and (b) percentage of children who have not continued education in grammar schools after completing GCSEs in the last five years.

(AQW 38237/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information contained in the table below includes year 12 grammar pupils leaving the school system and those year 12 pupils leaving grammar schools and enrolling in other schools to continue their education.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of pupils in Ulidia Integrated College who currently receive free school travel.

(AQW 38286/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board informs me that it provides transport assistance to 258 pupils who attend Ulidia Integrated College.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of primary school pupils that are in receipt of free school meals in East Antrim, broken down by school, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38287/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table overleaf. The information provided relates to the 2013/14 school census, the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October this year, provisional figures will be available in December, finalised figures in February.

Notes:

1. Figures for primary include nursery, reception and year 1 - 7 classes.
2. Figures include all pupils entitled to free school meals; including nursery units (whether free school meal or JSA).
3. Constituency refers to where the school is situated rather than where pupils reside
4. * denotes fewer than 5 pupils suppressed due to potential identification of individual pupils

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education how many Catholic Maintained School Estates are wholly owned by the Catholic Church.

(AQW 38311/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are currently 482 schools under Catholic Trusteeship. These schools are all vested in the Department of Education, which enables the Department to pay capital grants in respect of them.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education what role the Education Authority and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools have in planning for integrated education, given their capacity as Planning Authorities; and what accountability his Department has in ensuring Planning Authorities plan for integrated education.

(AQW 38312/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The new Authority will assume, unchanged, the powers, duties and responsibilities of the five Education and Library Boards (ELBs), including those in relation to Area Planning. Until the new body is established, responsibility for Area Planning for all sectors, including the Integrated sector, remains with those bodies with statutory responsibility for planning, i.e. the ELBs (and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) in relation to planning for the Catholic Maintained sector.)

However, the Terms of Reference for Area Planning recognise that the other sectoral bodies have an important contribution to make, and it is an explicit requirement that they be involved in the process. It is important, therefore, that those representing the Integrated sector make a robust case in discussions with the Boards and CCMS to ensure that genuine need for local expansion in the sector is reflected in the area plans.

The Department's role in the process is one of scrutiny and challenge. To this end, Departmental officials meet representatives of the Boards and CCMS to discuss and examine area plans prior to and following public consultation.

Also, the Chief Executive of NICIE is a member the Area Planning Steering Group which provides a platform for regular engagement with the Department on strategic issues relating to Area Planning.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQO 6778/11-15, what he meant by "work with schools within the sector to develop and maintain the collective ethos of the sector including, where appropriate, a role in identifying, encouraging and nominating governors and in ensuring ethos is part of employment considerations".

(AQW 38313/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It will be the responsibility of the Controlled Schools Support Body, when it is established, to determine its core principles and values and to work with schools and the Education Authority to ensure that a collective ethos is promoted. This may include a range of activities such as working with school governors in developing schemes of management.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Education (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38324/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: All NICS Departments – including the Department of Education - are participants in the NICS Cycle to work scheme.

The NICS cycle to work scheme is open to all NICS staff all year round.

The scheme is a NICS Cycle to Work Scheme and therefore does not extend to NDPBs for whom the NICS is not their employer. However DFP, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the current membership of the Area Planning Steering Group.

(AQW 38331/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Area Planning Steering Group (APSG) is chaired by a senior official from the Department and of Education and comprises representatives the Chief Executives of the five Education and Library Boards (ELBs), the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS), the NI Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) and Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta (CnaG). A senior official from the Department of Employment and Learning (DEL) attends as an observer to provide advice on FE issues and policies.

The table below sets out the current membership of the Group:

Name	Organisation
Dr Clare Mangan	Belfast ELB
Shane McCurdy	North Eastern ELB
Gregory Butler	South Eastern ELB
Gavin Boyd	Southern ELB
Barry Mulholland	Western ELB
Jim Clarke	CCMS
Noreen Campbell	NICIE
Dr Micheál Ó Duibh	CnaG
Dr Mary Mclvor	DEL

Given the number of Catholic Maintained schools and the regional nature of the work to be covered by CCMS, it should be noted that Gerry Lundy (CCMS) also attends the meetings to support the CCMS CEO.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what priority areas have been identified in the work programme of the Area Planning Steering Group.

(AQW 38332/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The work of the Area Planning Steering Group is focused on embedding a single approach to area planning and implementation across all existing organisations and identifying priority areas for action in the short and medium term.

The Group is currently dealing with a number of key issues.

- The development of revised area planning structures and governance arrangements in advance of the new Authority. The group's recommendations are due to be presented to me shortly.
- The development of new practical guidance to support the school amalgamation process.

Its future work will include consideration of the process for reviewing and revising the Area Plans.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what changes he envisages to the membership of the Area Planning Steering Group in the light of the proposal to reorganise education administration.

(AQW 38333/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The membership of the Area Planning Steering Group currently reflects the present education structures and responsibilities. It will, however, be kept under review and future arrangements will reflect the new structures including the Education Authority when it becomes established.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what responsibilities the proposed Education Authority would have in relation to Area Planning.

(AQW 38334/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The new Education Authority will assume, unchanged, the powers, duties and responsibilities of the five Education and Library Boards (ELBs), including those in relation to Area Planning. There will be no change to the Sustainable Schools Policy or terms of reference for area planning as a result of the Authority's establishment.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education when he intends to publish the regional plan for Special School provision.

(AQW 38335/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I commissioned a review of special needs provision, the purpose of which was to undertake an assessment of existing provision and recommend a regional plan for the future structure and provision of Special Schools. The review group is due to present its report to me in the near future. I will wish to take time to consider it.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Education to detail the (a) number; and (b) percentage of children who have not continued education in grammar schools after AS level in the last five years.

(AQW 38346/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information contained in the table below includes year 13 grammar pupils leaving the school system and those year 13 pupils leaving grammar schools and enrolling in other schools to continue their education.

Due to the nature of these data, it is not possible to determine how many of these year 13 pupils were enrolled on an AS level course.

Number and percentage of year 13 pupils leaving grammar schools 2008/09 to 2012/13

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how his Department is promoting cycling in schools.

(AQW 38356/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department is promoting cycling through a range of measures.

The statutory curriculum provides teachers with opportunities to encourage children to take up cycling and my Department delegates funding to schools, which is used for a range of curricular based activities. The specifics of what is taught under each Area of Learning within the curriculum is determined by individual schools.

During 2014/15, my Department fully participated in the Giro d'Italia Schools programme. Giro d'Italia and cycling related resources were made available to teachers and these are still available at (<http://www.ccea.org.uk/giro/giro2014/>).

In addition my Department, together with the Public Health Agency, jointly funded the 'Sustrans Giro Schools Challenge' competition. A key aim of this competition was to maximise participation and engagement in cycling and physical activity beyond May 2014.

As part of the Department for Regional Development's Active School Travel Programme, my Department is also currently carrying out scoping for provision of school cycle parking facilities in 60 schools across the schools' estate. Decisions on capital investment will be made after this exercise is complete.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, given that the North Eastern Education and Library Board published a revised vision of post-primary Area Plans in August 2014, whether revised plans will be published for each Education and Library Board; and if so, when this will take place.[R]

(AQW 38363/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Area Plans are living documents and therefore need revision as circumstances change and more up-to-date information becomes available.

The Department intends to work with the Area Planning Steering Group (APSG) to consider and agree the process for reviewing and revising the Area Plans.

Currently each Education and Library Board, in conjunction with CCMS and the other sectors where necessary, can update its Area Plans to reflect the current position.

I understand the North Eastern Education and Library Board has recently updated its Area Plan to take account of decisions on Development Proposals and updated statistical information.

Department for Employment and Learning

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many job vacancies have been notified to NI Employment services and advertised on the jobcentreonline website during September 2014, in the (i) Strabane; and (ii) Omagh districts, broken down by occupational area.

(AQW 38059/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): During September 2014 there were 205 vacancy positions raised in the Omagh and Strabane area. This is broken down into 140 vacancy positions in Omagh and 65 vacancy positions in Strabane.

During the past three months August 2014 to October 2014 inclusive there were 512 vacancy positions raised in the Omagh and Strabane area. This is broken down into 325 vacancy positions in Omagh and 165 vacancy positions in Strabane.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the amount of funding initially allocated to Gingerbread NI in 2014/15; and (ii) whether this amount has been reduced due to budget pressures.

(AQW 38067/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department offered funding to Gingerbread NI amounting to £265,736 (£163,530 40% ESF and £102,206 25% DEL contribution) during 2014/15 for their Choices Plus project, which is funded under Priority 1 of the Northern Ireland European Social Fund Programme, 2007-13. The project is required to provide an additional 35% of match funding of £143,090. The amount of funding offered by the Department to Gingerbread over 2014/15 has not been reduced due to any budgetary pressures

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of his Department's treatment of staff under the Inefficiency Sick Absence policy.

Dr Farry: Managing sickness absence within the Northern Ireland Civil Service is a particularly challenging task and unfortunately there is no easy solution to what has become a persistent problem. In recent years, significant resources have been dedicated to reducing sickness absence levels and ensuring employees and managers are aware of and fulfil their roles and responsibilities however absence levels remain stubbornly high.

My Department implements the comprehensive range of NICS policies and procedures which are designed to address sickness absence and which are carefully balanced to ensure that employees are supported to maintain their health and wellbeing and remain in work or, where absence has occurred, to return to the workplace at the earliest possible opportunity. Unfortunately, circumstances can arise where neither of these options applies and in such cases early exit is appropriate.

The NICS Inefficiency Sickness Absence policy allows for inefficiency action, ranging from written warning to dismissal, to be taken where absence levels are unsatisfactory however mechanisms are in place for employees to challenge such decisions. I receive regular updates from my senior officials on sickness absence inefficiency activity and all such matters are also subject to regular internal and external scrutiny.

I am satisfied that my Department applies the NICS policy in a consistent, robust and entirely proportionate manner which takes account of the circumstances of each individual case. I am also satisfied that the appropriate strategies, governance, reporting and monitoring arrangements are in place to support this approach.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his Department's Human Resources negotiations with NIPSA over the establishment of an Industrial Relations Framework.

(AQW 38120/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department recognises the value of good industrial relations and is committed to ensuring to the highest level of cooperation with Northern Ireland Public Service Alliance (NIPSA) for the benefit of the organisation and its employee.

Negotiations with NIPSA over the establishment of an Industrial Relations Framework are currently ongoing. Negotiations commenced on 7 October 2013 and NIPSA representatives were provided with a draft Industrial Relations Framework on this date. Human Resources (HR) met with NIPSA on 17 October 2013 at which time representatives were invited to put forward comments on the draft. NIPSA subsequently provided a revised draft Industrial Relation Framework to HR on 15 September 2014. HR is currently in the process of reviewing this draft and it is envisaged that a final document will be agreed by the end of the financial year.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 36805/11-15, when people working in the Further Education sector will be paid their increments from 2013/14.

Dr Farry: Further education employers inform me that the increments from 2013/14 were paid as follows:

Non-Teaching Staff	Eligible staff (more than 6 months service at 1 April 2013) - paid April/May 2013 Non-eligible staff (less than 6 months service at 1 April 2013) – paid February 2014
Lecturing staff	paid September/ October 2014
Principals and Vice Principals	DFP approval received in October 2014; payments currently being implemented

Mr McCausland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the total number of undergraduate students at the University of Ulster; and the percentage who are (i) members of the Protestant community; (ii) members of the Roman Catholic community; and (iii) of unknown background.

(AQW 38268/11-15)

Dr Farry: The attached table was produced by the Higher Education Statistics Agency and shows the latest figures available.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the proposed merger of Queen's University and Stranmillis College.

(AQW 38400/11-15)

Dr Farry: I refer to my response to AQW 30880/11/15 which also addressed this issue. The Chair of the Governing Body of Stranmillis University College has advised the Department that the position in relation to the proposed merger with Queen's University Belfast has been superseded by the College's submission to the second stage of the Review of Teacher Training Infrastructure in Northern Ireland.

The stage two review has now completed and following the publication of the International Review Panel's report – "Aspiring to Excellence", I have commenced engagement with the four Initial Teacher Training providers to seek a way forward.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) who will pay for the additional generating capacity that SONI Ltd is seeking by tender; (ii) how much this is estimated to cost; and (iii) will such result in an increase on the average household bill.

(AQW 37669/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): The additional generation capacity will have some impact on consumers' electricity bills.

An update paper on security of supply is being prepared by my Department and the Utility Regulator for publication within the next few weeks. This will include more detail on the costs and benefits associated with the additional generation capacity.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on SONI Ltd's tendering process for extra generating capacity.

(AQW 37670/11-15)

Mrs Foster: SONI, in co-operation with the Utility Regulator, has taken forward a competitive process resulting in the award of a contract to provide 250 megawatts of additional generation capacity.

The additional capacity is to be in place by January 2016.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given the ongoing integration of the systems, how far is SONI Ltd now dependent on EirGrid to operate the Northern Ireland system.

(AQW 37671/11-15)

Mrs Foster: SONI's key function is the operation of the transmission network in Northern Ireland. SONI and EirGrid each have separate control centres from which dispatch instructions to generation sets in each of their respective jurisdictions are issued. The SONI Transmission System Operator licence facilitates SONI to work in conjunction with EirGrid in relation to generation in the Single Electricity Market and operational planning.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what updates she has had from the Utility Regulator on licence compliance monitoring of SONI Ltd, EirGrid and NIE; and on what dates were the last compliance reports submitted by SONI Ltd and NIE.

Mrs Foster: As I indicated in response to AQW/26473 11-15 and AQW 26400/11-15 tabled by the Member in October 2013, licence compliance monitoring is a matter for the Utility Regulator which is accountable to the Northern Ireland Assembly, not my Department. As the Regulator is required to act independently of Government, my Department does not interfere in this matter and I neither ask for, nor receive, updates on compliance monitoring as a matter of routine. I am advised by the Regulator that it requested information on licence compliance from SONI and received a response in September which it is currently considering. The Regulator has also advised that NIE submitted a compliance report in accordance with Condition 12 of NIE's Licence to Participate in Transmission and NIE's Electricity Distribution Licence on 27 June 2014 to cover the period April 2013 – March 2014.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in her Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 37674/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No efficiencies have been realised in my Department as a direct result of the work of DFP's Public Sector Reform Division.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail any interest for inward investment in East Londonderry since 1 April 2013; and how her Department and Invest NI have followed each of these up.

(AQW 37701/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There have been three visits by potential investors to the East Londonderry PCA between 1 April 2013 and 1 October 2014. One of these developed into an investment project but the company concerned decided to locate elsewhere in Northern Ireland.

Invest NI remains in contact with the other two companies; however at this point discussions are still at an early stage.

Invest NI seeks to build positive relationships with potential investors through hosting visits and maintaining regular contact. The decision whether to invest and where, is a matter for the company concerned and often takes place after a prolonged period of internal research and evaluation. All discussions and contact between Invest NI and a potential investor are regarded as 'commercial in confidence' until a formal offer is accepted.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what inward investment benefits have resulted from the International Sales Conference stakeholder event that was held in Portstewart in March 2011.

(AQW 37786/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The primary aim of the event on 30 March 2011 was to outline the Coleraine proposition to the Invest NI overseas sales teams. This was a successful event and the overseas teams were able to see first-hand the initiatives that the Council has undertaken, including Digital Causeway Ireland.

The conference was just one of the ways that Invest NI works with local stakeholders to encourage the development of regional propositions which can help ensure that the offering for their area is maximised to attract visits and investment by potential investors.

Since the conference in March 2011 Invest NI has hosted visits to the Coleraine Borough Council area. However, securing an inward investment project is the end point of an extensive process which may span a period of years. A potential investor can often make a number of visits to a number of areas before deciding on where to locate its business. It may therefore not be possible to directly link it back to the sales conference.

Invest NI is committed to working with local councils on how to develop a sales proposition that shows the strength and opportunities within their area. The agency has developed an "FDI app" and a "District Council App", which will help present a snapshot of the benefits of setting up in Northern Ireland to potential investors. The new Causeway Coast and Glens Council has indicated that it wishes to be involved and Invest NI is working with it to develop downloadable mobile applications which will form a promotional toolkit highlighting the area's attractiveness as a potential investment location.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact of the cancellation of the Tourism Events Fund on the recent growth in tourism and hospitality.

(AQW 37989/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The overall financial position for the Northern Ireland Block for 2015/16 is very difficult. It is on this basis that applications are not being sought for the Events Fund for National Sponsorship Scheme and new International Events in 2015/16.

Currently 9 International events have a commitment of receiving 3 year letter of offer from 2014/15 through to 2016/17 and will not be affected by the current funding situation.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department received a request to include Larne Oil and Gas on Petroleum Licence PL1/10; and whether this request has been agreed.

(AQW 38091/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to set out Tamboran's grounds for judicially reviewing her decision to terminate its licence; and whether her Department intends to contest the application for leave.

(AQW 38262/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As the matter is before the courts it would not be appropriate to set out the grounds of the application for leave.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department has acted in accordance with the Aarhus convention on access to justice and information on environmental matters in their refusal to disclose environmental information to third parties affected by the outcome of the judicial review by Tamboran Resources.

(AQW 38441/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department seeks to act in compliance with European legislation in relation to Environmental Information Regulations but reserves the right to apply the exemptions set out in that legislation where appropriate.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what land in the Dungannon and South Tyrone Borough Council area is available or zoned for industrial development.

(AQO 6991/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The zoning of land is currently a matter for the Department of the Environment through the area plan process.

I can, however, advise that Invest NI holds ninety one acres within the Council area. Of this total there remain five acres available to support economic growth. This area of land is located within Dungannon Business Park

The organisation is also aware of a range of private sector commercial property options available across the Council area including sites previously operated by Tyrone Brick that were brought to market last month. Further information can be found through the agency's commercial property database through the NIBusiness Information website.

I understand that the Chief Executive of Invest NI will be meeting with members of the Council on Thursday 13th November to discuss the provision of industrial land within the area.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what further measures she will put in place to support knowledge economy businesses including increasing the percentage of the workforce employed in this sector.

(AQO 6992/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As highlighted in the recent Knowledge Economy Index report, produced by NISP Connect in the Northern Ireland Science Park, Northern Ireland is now the second fastest growing knowledge economy region in the UK. This is excellent news. It is critical, however, that we work collaboratively, businesses academia and government, to replicate this growth across all sectors of the Northern Ireland economy. The recently published Innovation Strategy sets out a range of actions designed to achieve this.

The further development of Northern Ireland's knowledge economy businesses remains a key strategic priority for the NI Executive and through my Department and others we will ensure that knowledge economy businesses continue to receive a high level of support tailored to their needs.

Invest NI already provide a comprehensive range of support to large and small businesses throughout the knowledge sector across Northern Ireland. This support includes an extensive range of Business Solutions and initiatives as well as providing direct funding to support new knowledge sector start-ups and business expansions. The new twenty six point three million pounds fund, TechStart NI, is just one example of this.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her plans for the implementation of the Going for Growth strategy.

(AQO 6994/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive Response to Going for Growth contains a comprehensive action plan which sets out how Departments will take forward those actions which fall to Government. The Agri-Food Strategy Board will have a key role to play, in partnership with Government, in driving the third of recommendations in Going for Growth which fall to the industry to deliver.

My Department has already been taking forward a range of actions such as the introduction of the Agri-Food Loan Scheme and a major review of Northern Ireland agri-food marketing and promotion.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how she plans to improve the availability of gas to rural towns.

(AQO 6996/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I continue to support the economic and efficient development of the natural gas industry in Northern Ireland. Further extension of the gas network will depend on the availability of sufficient gas loads and willingness of a gas company to apply for a licence to provide new networks.

Where it is not feasible to provide natural gas, my Department will continue to support the availability of other energy options, such as renewable heat technologies, as alternatives to heating oil.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her Department's commitment to support economic recovery and tackle disadvantage.

(AQO 6997/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Economic Strategy sets out what the Executive is doing collectively to boost the competitiveness of the economy and create wealth and prosperity for all.

I have recently published the second Economic Strategy Annual Report which illustrates that considerable progress has been made in implementing Departments' commitments.

Latest figures at end May 2014 indicate that my Department, through Invest NI, has promoted 25,543 jobs. £402million investment was secured in R&D by March 2014, and 451 businesses were supported to undertake R&D for the first time.

I am also working with Minister Farry to develop a Strategy to tackle Economic Inactivity which will seek to reduce economic inactivity and provide support through skills, training, incentives and jobs creation.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the economic return on investment of grants awarded through the International Tourism Events Funds and the Tourism Events National Sponsorship Scheme.

(AQO 6998/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In the financial year 2014/15 NITB funded sixty three National events under the Tourism Events Sponsorship Scheme and thirteen International events under the International Tourism Events Fund with a total contribution from NITB of £2.8million.

NITB is in the process of completing independent economic evaluations for ten of these events.

Department of the Environment

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment why the Northern Ireland Environment Agency objected to plans to develop a community sports facility at Lough Park in Ballynahinch.

(AQW 37568/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) had raised concerns, in relation to planning application R/2013/0307/F, about the impact of the submitted location of the 3G pitch on priority habitats and bats, a European protected species. However, NIEA officials engaged with the Project Development Officer to look at options for adjusting the location of the pitch.

On 11 September 2014, I met with Councillor Mark Murnin and local community representatives, to hear their views. At a subsequent project meeting involving officials from my Department and all interested parties, a number of options were discussed.

I understand that the Department has recently received an amended application proposing a revised positioning of the pitch. Further information has been requested before engagement with consultees can commence. The Department shall then proceed to determine the application.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, given the eleven written objections to the demolition of the Orpheus building in Belfast, what research was completed in relation to architecture for the newly proposed Belfast city campus of the University of Ulster, regarding to the surrounding Cathedral Quarter conservation area with reference to the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 Article 104, section (11).

Mr Durkan: The planning application for the new Belfast campus for the University of Ulster (UU), which was granted planning permission by the Department on 16 May 2013 under planning reference Z/2012/0361/F, was accompanied by an Environmental Statement, a Design Statement and a Built Heritage Appraisal.

The proposed development comprises three blocks (Blocks A, B and C) to be erected at the junction of York Street, Frederick Street and Great Patrick Street and requires the demolition of the existing buildings on the site. Block B lies within the Cathedral Conservation Area whereas Blocks A & C are outside the conservation area but adjacent to its boundary. The sites are also adjacent to a number of listed buildings, including St. Patrick's Church and St Anne's Cathedral in Donegal Street. Accordingly, in deciding to approve the new campus proposal, and therefore accepting the demolition of the Orpheus building, the Department fully assessed the development proposals, having particular regard to relevant architectural and built heritage issues. This included an assessment against the policies contained in Planning Policy Statement 6 – Planning, Archaeology and the Built Heritage, specifically policies:

- BH 11 'Development affecting the setting of a listed building';
- BH12 'New development in a Conservation Area' and
- BH14 'Demolition in a Conservation Area.'

You refer to Article 104 of the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, which deals with Conservation Areas. Although the Act received Royal Assent on 4 May 2011 after completing its passage through the previous NI Assembly, the bulk of the Act, including Article 104, will not come into force until planning powers transfer to councils. The current relevant legislation is set out under Article 50 (5) of the Planning (NI) Order 1991. This article requires that "where any area is for the time being designated as a conservation area special attention shall be paid to the desirability of preserving or enhancing its character or appearance." This will be the prime consideration for the Department in the exercise of its planning functions within conservation areas.

Policies BH 12 and BH14 reflect this statutory requirement and I am satisfied that my Department took into account relevant architectural and built heritage issues.

In deciding to approve the new campus proposal and therefore accepting the demolition of the Orpheus building, the Department took into account all the relevant material considerations in the case, including: the economic benefits of regeneration; the design of the new build and its impact on the character of the area and the setting of the Cathedral and Belfast City Centre Conservation Areas.

In addition the Department fully considered the environmental information contained in the Environmental Statement, the comments of consultees, third party representations and had regard to the relevant planning policy context, the statutory development plan and all other relevant material considerations.

I am satisfied that the decision to approve was the correct decision and will secure a much needed investment of £250 million to this part of the city with enormous economic and social regeneration benefits to Belfast as a whole and the north part of the city in particular.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36990/11-15, how many Belfast public hire taxis currently have a dual tariff programmed into their meters.

(AQW 37854/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver & Vehicle Agency records show that currently five licensed Belfast public hire taxis have a dual tariff programmed into their meters.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36987/11-15, how enforcement officials from the Driver and Vehicle Agency conduct roadside spot checks on meters of Belfast public hire vehicles who operate from private hire companies, given that private hire fares are unregulated.

(AQW 37856/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Belfast Public Hire plated taxis are permitted to have dual tariffs programmed into their meters. The first tariff, the regulated fare, must be displayed when the driver is providing a public hire service and the driver cannot charge a fare greater than that prescribed by the Department. The second tariff can be used when the vehicle is pre-booked and operating on a private hire basis.

DVA Enforcement Officers routinely conduct roadside spot checks on taxi meters installed in licensed Belfast Public Hire Taxis to ensure they satisfy fitment requirements, remain properly sealed and to validate the tariff being used. Where a taxi meter is inspected and found to be insecure, unsealed or inaccurate, enforcement action can be taken including the issue of a Defect Notice or a Prohibition Notice. Where prohibition action has been taken this would result in the suspension of the vehicle's PSV Vehicle Licence until remedial action has been taken and the taxi meter re-tested and sealed by the Agency.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment how much revenue the Carrier Bag Levy has generated since it was introduced.

(AQW 37894/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The first set of official Carrier Bag Levy statistics, covering the period 8 April 2013 to 31 March 2014 were published by my Department on 27th August 2014 informing that in its first year the levy generated net proceeds of £4.17 million.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment who is responsible for covering the costs of fines imposed by Europe as a result of successful infraction proceedings brought against the UK in relation to environmental failures affecting Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37925/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Infraction proceedings under Article 258 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union are brought by the European Commission against a member state which the Commission considers has infringed EU law. Consequently, it is against the relevant member state that any EU fine will be levied.

If any penalty were to be imposed against the UK by the European Court of Justice, it would be a matter for the UK Government to determine how the penalty would apply to a devolved administration. The outcome cannot be predicted since the UK has never been the subject of financial sanctions imposed by the European Court of Justice.

Northern Ireland district councils may, under discretionary powers introduced by the Localism Act 2011, be required to pay some or all of a fine where they have caused or contributed to the imposition of the sanction.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37092/11-15, to provide the regulations for his Department and its agencies when proposing legislation which directly involves existing government contacted companies and for which the proposed legislation would be advantageous.

(AQW 37947/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The existence of a service wide contract between the NICS and the company in question does not affect the way my Department develops, or has developed, policy or legislation in respect of taxis.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of cases of illegal dumping, broken down by local council, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37970/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The figures in the attached table indicate the number of cases of illegal dumping received by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency in each of the last three years. These cases include a range of unauthorised activities, from illegal dumping of various wastes (construction and demolition, fuel laundering etc.) through to unlicensed treatment facilities for end of life vehicles.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the anticipated time period for approving planning applications for large scale wind turbine developments.

Mr Durkan: The processing times for wind energy applications can vary. The applications raise a number of highly technical and complex planning issues which requires my Department to consult with a range of other authorities by reason of their specific environmental responsibility. However, as with all applications, the aim is to bring them to conclusion in a timely manner having fully considered all the issues. In 2014 I increased the number of staff within the renewable energy team. This has been focused on dealing primarily with a backlog of applications however the result of this should be an improvement in processing times for renewable energy applications in the future.

I would also add that not all planning applications involving wind turbines are approved. Whilst there is a presumption in favour of all development, a careful balance has to be struck between the benefits associated with harnessing wind energy and the protection of the environment and the amenity of nearby residents.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has consulted with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment regarding the implications of planning decisions for large scale wind turbine developments for the local economy.

(AQW 38052/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My officials notify the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment on all wind farm developments. The purpose of this process is to assist DETI in their responsibility for monitoring the renewable energy targets under Northern Ireland's Strategic Energy Framework.

The economic benefits, along with the wider environmental and social benefits of wind farm development, are material considerations in the determination of all applications and are given significant weight in determining whether planning permission should be granted. However comments are not sought from DETI on the implications of individual planning applications for the local economy as the weight to be attached to these considerations is a matter of planning judgement on the merits of each individual case.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the situation on the Sixmile River following the major fish kill, given that the river is a major tributary to Lough Neagh and is the third major incident in the last six years. (AQW 38064/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) was first alerted to this fish kill at 11:15hrs on Wednesday 29 October 2014, when a report was received, via NIEA's Water Pollution Hotline of a number of dead fish in the Six Mile Water at Ballyclare. NIEA staff were immediately tasked to investigate the report and determine the environmental impact.

During the subsequent NIEA investigation statutory samples were collected from two different premises. A number of other potential sources of pollution in the catchment were also visited and investigated by NIEA staff.

Department for Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL) Inland Fisheries Group was informed of the fish kill. The DCAL investigation confirmed that a total of 964 fish of all sizes had been killed.

As part of the investigation NIEA have also collected a number of investigatory water samples from the river and its tributaries, and have carried out a detailed biological survey of insect life in the river and its tributaries. Analysis of the findings from these samples and surveys are continuing.

I can assure you that NIEA is committed to continuing to work to find the cause of this latest fish kill.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of planning applications that the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has been involved in the last two years in (a) Coleraine Borough Council; and (b) Limavady Borough Council. (AQW 38083/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the 2012-13 business year the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) were consulted on 143 planning applications in Coleraine Borough and on 78 applications in Limavady Borough. In the 2013-14 business year NIEA were consulted on 157 planning applications in Coleraine Borough and on 80 planning applications in Limavady Borough. These figures are provided from Planning administrative systems and do not form part of published and validated DOE Official Statistics.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of the Environment what value Planning Service places on planning applications that increase economic development and jobs. (AQW 38086/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a key role to play in promoting economic development by ensuring that the planning system is a vehicle to grow a dynamic, innovative and sustainable economy, safeguard and create a better environment, aid economic recovery, unlock development potential and support job creation.

In doing so, I recognise that many planning applications have associated economic and job benefits and thus my Department seeks to ensure such applications are processed successfully in line with statutory requirements. Over 90% of planning applications received by my Department are approved.

My Department also has a key commitment under the Programme for Government 2011-2015 to ensure that 90% of large scale investment (LSI) planning decisions are made within 6 months and applications with job creation potential are given additional weight.

For the first three months of 2014/15, 19 LSI applications were either received, or carried forward from the previous year, where a decision was either reached or it was possible to reach a decision within the 6 month processing target. Of these, 18, or 95%, were processed within 6 months.

I intend to continue to make prompt and sound planning decisions and to build on a planning system that is fast, fair, fit for purpose and will create a better environment and a stronger economy.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to outline Tamboran Resources' grounds for judicially reviewing his decision to require an Environmental Impact Assessment for exploratory drilling at Belcoo, County Fermanagh; and whether his Department intends to contest the application for leave. (AQW 38096/11-15)

Mr Durkan: It would not be appropriate for me to make any comment in relation to this case due to the ongoing legal proceedings.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37026/11-15, whether the materials imported to the site under planning approval K/2013/0072/F which is in close proximity to the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation, constitute waste. (AQW 38098/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Investigations have demonstrated that material imported to this site is consistent with processed aggregate. My officials are continuing to investigate activity at this site.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on application (P/2013/0189/F) from St. Bronagh's GAA, including the expected timeframe.

(AQW 38104/11-15)

Mr Durkan: This is a substantial and complex planning application from the St Bronagh's Club for the development of a new playing facility at Drumsesk Road.

My officials have met with club representatives on a number of occasions. Those discussions have produced a series of revisions to the application, not least, a proposed new means of access to the site and changes to the proposed clubhouse.

The amended scheme is currently the subject of a consultation exercise. A number of consultations remain outstanding.

The Department hopes to be in a position to conclude its assessment of this application in February or March 2015.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37358/11-15, what rationale was given by each council, other than Belfast, for not issuing fixed penalty notices under the provisions of the Noise Act 1996.

(AQW 38191/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Clean Neighbourhoods & Environment Act (NI) 2011, which came into operation on 1 April 2012, amended the Noise Act 1996 to allow district councils the discretion to use the Noise Act powers as and when it was deemed appropriate. As this is a discretionary power, the Department is not required to hold any details on the non issue of fixed penalty notices. However, the information may be available from each individual council.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37924/11-15, on what date his Department issued warning letters to the operators of the unauthorised sand extraction taking place from the bed of Lough Neagh Special Protection Area; and what assurances he can give that this unregulated activity has now ceased.

Mr Durkan: My officials issued letters between 25 September and 10 October 2014.

Inspections of the Lough Neagh area are currently being arranged. These inspections will observe whether operations have ceased.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department is working with the DVLA offices in Swansea to address teething problems since the centralisation of services from Coleraine.

(AQW 38217/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Vehicle registration and licensing services were centralised within the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) in Swansea on 21 July 2014. From that date, responsibility for the delivery of vehicle registration and licences in Northern Ireland transferred to DVLA.

Following the transfer, I was aware that the DVLA were experiencing a number of transitional issues which were affecting local customers. I wrote to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Robert Goodwill MP, on 13 August 2014, on behalf of Northern Ireland customers to express my disappointment that the level of service provided by DVLA was not of the high standard expected in Northern Ireland.

In response to my letter, Claire Perry MP, replied confirming that she was aware that there were issues with a small number of records, reassuring me that these would be rectified as a matter of priority. DVLA have since stated, at official level, that the initial teething problems have been rectified.

Since the transfer of the service to Swansea, DVA has no access to the DVLA system to monitor or resolve issues relating to Northern Ireland motorists. Therefore, should you need to highlight a particular issue on behalf of a constituent you can raise it directly with the DVLA at the address below:

Mr Oliver Morley, Chief Executive, Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, Swansea SA6 7JL

There is also a dedicated telephone number and email address for MPs and other elected representatives, including MLAs, to contact DVLA on behalf of their constituents. Emails should be sent to dvaministerials@dvla.gsi.gov.uk, or alternatively the telephone number is 01792 788585.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37576/11-15, to detail the specific planning permissions associated with onshore operations which were used to justify the granting of each of the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificates relating to Lough Neagh.

Mr Durkan: The attached table is the record held in relation to the granting of each of the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme certificates.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37576/11-15, whether it was appropriate for his Department to grant onshore planning permissions to facilitate unauthorised Environmental Impact Assessment Development taking place within Lough Neagh Special Protection Area; and whether he has concerns regarding the implications of such a practice. (AQW 38304/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While historically planning permissions have been granted for the land based operations associated with sand extraction on Lough Neagh, once the unauthorised development was brought to my attention I sought to remedy this.

It is my policy that all unauthorised extractive and waste operations require the most rigorous and prompt enforcement action. It is not acceptable that mineral extraction activities be allowed to continue without first having been through relevant assessments and obtained appropriate planning approval.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37628/11-15, why the level of detail of the explosive store, which was considered sufficient for approval K/2014/0387/F, was not considered necessary for the approval of K/2013/0072/F given that his Department claims that full approval for an explosives store was granted under the earlier permission.

Mr Durkan: Information required in determining a planning application will be dependent upon the particular merits of that application, the site and the development proposed. It is considered that the Department had sufficient information in order to determine K/2013/0072/F.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the timescale for the requirement for all taxis to have meters and carry receipt printers.

(AQW 38456/11-15)

Mr Durkan: All taxis will be required to have taximeters and printers from September 2015.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the Strategic Planning Policy Statement for Northern Ireland.

(AQO 7001/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On 4 February 2014, I issued for public consultation the draft Strategic Planning Policy Statement for Northern Ireland (SPPS). The SPPS sets out the Department's regional planning policies for securing the orderly and consistent development of land under a reformed two-tier local planning system. It is a proportionate and appropriate framework for delivery of the reformed planning system when the primary responsibility for planning functions transfers from the Department to councils on 1 April 2015.

The 12 week public consultation exercise on the draft SPPS was facilitated by means of online digital consultation with stakeholders invited to respond electronically. This is the first time the Department has incorporated digital engagement into the policy-making process. The consultation closed on 29 April 2014.

Over 700 responses were received from individuals and a wide range of stakeholders, such as Business and Industry interests (including CBI, NIIRTA, IOD, NIFHA); Environmental interests (including NIEL, RSPB); Community / Academic / NGO interests (including Royal Town Planning Institute, Belfast Civic Trust, Historic Monuments Council, various residents groups); and Local Government interests (including NILGA and a number of local councils).

The scale of the response and the diverse composition of respondents is considered to be encouraging as it indicates a healthy public interest in planning matters generally but particularly the future of planning under the new two tier system that will be brought into effect in April 2015.

Officials have finalised the detailed analysis of all responses received to the public consultation exercise. A full synopsis of consultation responses report was presented to the Environment Committee on 6 November 2014.

The Department is aiming to finalise the SPPS by the end of the year, subject to Executive Agreement.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the urban regeneration and community planning functions that are yet to be scheduled for transfer to the new councils.

(AQO 7004/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Member's question concerns two elements of the reform of local government.

The first is the provision to councils of urban regeneration powers currently exercised by the Department for Social Development and which requires primary legislation to be brought forward by DSD. As this is firmly the remit of the Minister for Social Development, I do not intend outlining this function in any great detail, other than to state that I have raised my concern in recent meetings with Ministerial colleagues, including Minister Storey, at the continued delay in reaching Executive agreement for the introduction of the DSD Bill to provide councils with regeneration powers to the Assembly.

Whilst a failure to provide councils with urban regeneration and community development powers will not prevent the rest of the reform programme from going ahead, it is, nonetheless, a very important element of the reform process. I believe that the re-coupling of regeneration with the planning functions transferring from my department will provide councils with the ability to shape their communities.

The second function raised by this question, relates to community planning. Councils will have duties and powers of community planning, but these are not transferring to councils – they are entirely new and have been provided by the Local Government Act (NI) 2014.

Community planning involves integrating the various streams of public life, such as the services and functions that are delivered in an area, and producing a plan that will set out the future direction of a council area. Councils will lead this process. However, they will not be able to achieve this on their own. A duty has been placed on all Government Departments to promote, encourage and have regard for community planning. Councils will also work with statutory bodies, agencies and the wider community, including the voluntary, community and business sectors, to develop and implement a shared vision for promoting the well-being of an area and improving the quality of life of its citizens.

I recently launched a consultation on those bodies to be named in subordinate legislation as statutory community planning partners, and I would encourage anyone with an interest in community planning to respond to that consultation.

Local government has been preparing for the new community planning powers for some time, and capacity building work is ongoing with both central and local government to ensure that all key partners are able to fulfil their community planning responsibilities from April 2015.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of how the measures proposed in the Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill NIA 35/11-15 will impact rural dwellers.

Mr Durkan: At the outset, I should highlight the fact that rural roads present a particular road safety problem. Over the 5-year period from 2009 to 2013, 70% of all fatalities and 51% of serious injuries occurred on rural roads. PSNI statistics for 2014 to date indicate that of 68 fatalities so far this year, 47 have occurred on rural roads. This is why almost every DOE road safety campaign has a rural element.

The Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill has 3 key elements. These are a range of new drink driving provisions, a new graduated driver licensing regime and enabling provision to require quad bike users to wear helmets on public roads.

I will not dwell on the drink driving provisions of the Bill. For both rural and urban communities the message is clear - Never, ever, drink and drive.

The graduated driver licensing provisions include proposals for a mandatory minimum learning period and passenger restrictions for new drivers. The minimum learning period is designed to ensure that learner drivers gain sufficient and appropriate driving experience under supervision, which in turn, better prepares them for driving solo. The passenger restrictions apply only to those drivers under 24 years of age and in the first 6 months post test. They recognise the increased risk when newly qualified drivers carry other teenage passengers. The aim is to help such drivers to gain further experience in a safe driving environment prior to being exposed to these additional risks.

I acknowledge that some people believe that the proposed passenger restrictions in particular have an undue impact on rural communities. In response, I would emphasise that the restrictions are limited to a 6 month period post test, with exemptions in place for the carriage of immediate family members. I believe that this strikes an appropriate balance between minimising the impact on mobility and achieving a reduction in road casualties.

Finally, I should mention the proposal to require quad bike users to wear helmets on public roads. Quad bikes provide minimal protection for riders in the event of a collision. I acknowledge that such provision might have implications for farmers who may be working on and off the road quite frequently. However it remains my view that the requirement to wear a helmet is a sensible safety precaution.

In conclusion, the objective of the Road Traffic Amendment Bill is to improve safety on our roads – an objective which we all share. I look forward to working with Members to shape the precise provisions of the Bill as it continues its passage through the Assembly.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment how he plans to raise the awareness of drivers of motorised vehicles in relation to the safety of cyclists and pedestrians.

(AQO 7007/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has a statutory duty to promote road safety and, within the context of the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy, does this through a wide range of road safety education activities, including road safety public information campaigns and education programmes.

We all have the right to use our roads; as a pedestrian, cyclist, rider or driver and therefore we all must share the responsibility to keep each other safe. My Department continues to work towards building greater mutual respect and understanding between all road users.

Drivers are responsible for the majority of collisions, with the main causes being speeding, drink driving and inattention on our roads. Changing the attitudes and behaviours of drivers is therefore the most effective way of protecting all road users and our campaigns concentrate on changing such behaviours.

The Department has also taken steps with regard to improving attitudes and raising mutual respect between pedestrians and drivers and cyclists and drivers through two recent campaigns.

Television campaigns, supported by radio, outdoor, press releases, online and social media activity, address drivers, pedestrians and cyclists alike, remind drivers of the vulnerability of pedestrians and cyclists and advise all three road user groups to pay attention when sharing the road with other road users. Both these campaigns carry the core message "Respect Everyone's Journey".

The campaigns encourage drivers to give extra consideration to more vulnerable pedestrians and cyclists. Likewise, the messages also encourage pedestrians and cyclists to increase their own safety by behaving appropriately on the road.

I cannot emphasise enough that the vast majority of casualties on our roads are caused by human error and ultimately each of us as individuals has to take personal responsibility for our attitudes and behaviours whatever type of road user we are.

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment, given that planning decision making powers are transferring to local councils in April 2015, whether associated funding will transfer in relation to legacy undetermined planning applications and enforcement cases.

(AQO 7009/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In addition to the annual funding local councils shall receive post reform, the Local Government sector will also receive a one-off payment in 2015-16. This payment is the Local Government's share of the planning fee income from those uncompleted planning applications transferring on 1 April 2015.

My Department operates a Deferred Income System with regards to the money received from Planning Applications. The Deferred Income Policy divides the planning application process into 6 key stages. My Department considers fees from planning applications to be earned only after the application passes through various stages of the planning process. This deferred income policy has been in place for a number of years and is periodically reviewed and audited.

The principles of the Deferred Income Policy will be followed when identifying the percentage of the planning fee my department will retain and the percentage of the fee which will transfer to the councils for each application that transfers. This principle will ensure that councils will be adequately funded to perform the uncompleted steps.

In relation to enforcement actions, my department has analysed past and projected volumes of enforcement cases and has identified, through a workforce planning model, the resources required for all current and anticipated enforcement actions per council area. On 27 August 2014, my Department presented figures to councils setting out the financial and other resource consequences of the transfer of planning functions to local government. In calculating the funding that will be required by the councils my Department took account of those costs the councils will pick up as a result of the transferring enforcement action cases.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the costs associated with his Department's operational plan for managing and regulating waste.

(AQO 7010/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A key finding of the Mills Report was that the Department needs to better co-ordinate its existing waste management resources much more effectively. The Operational Plan is, therefore, designed to be delivered with the resources currently allocated to the Department of the Environment.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with the Minister for Social Development concerning the transfer of Neighbourhood Renewal to local councils following the expiry of the current policy framework.

(AQO 7011/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In accordance with the Executive agreement, from 1 April 2015 the Department for Social Development is to confer powers to enable councils to undertake regeneration and community development activity in their districts. The legislation which is required to confer those powers has yet to be introduced to the Assembly and I have discussed this continued delay in recent meetings with Ministerial colleagues, including Minister Storey.

That legislation will allow councils to take decisions about how they address urban regeneration and community development. The new community planning duties provided by the Local Government Act (NI) 2014 mean that councils will have to do that within the context of the community planning process. This identifies the long term objectives for improving social, economic and environmental well being of their communities.

It is, however, a matter for the Minister for Social Development to determine how future council-led activity in terms of tackling deprivation meets the objectives of his department's Urban Regeneration and Community Development policy framework.

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of the Environment to outline how many groups in Upper Bann have received funding from the Carrier Bag Levy for the NGO Challenge Fund 2015.

(AQO 7012/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Assessment of all applications for the 2015 Challenge Fund concluded on Friday 7 November. No groups have received funding as of yet.

10 applications were received for projects in the Upper Bann constituency from 9 different groups. All applications were considered based on their own merit.

I have allocated £1.3 million from the Carrier Bag Levy to the 2015 Challenge Fund and look forward to again seeing the positive environmental and community outcomes this support enables.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of whether the £60 million allocated to the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in the October monitoring round will be sufficient to address the current in-year operating deficit across Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQO 7017/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): As the Member will be aware the Department of Health stated it was facing an in-year funding gap of some £160 million. In August 2014, Minister Poots made it clear that if the Health Service was provided with £80m, DHSSPS would be able to ensure that patient safety and quality of care would not be compromised.

In response I, with the endorsement of my Executive colleagues, was able to provide this £80m to DHSSPS during in-year monitoring rounds and further to this, I have protected DHSSPS from the in-year budgetary reductions that other Departments have had to manage.

In his statement to the Assembly on 30 October the Health Minister outlined a series of actions to be taken forward in the remainder of 2014-15. These reflect what is achievable in maintaining patient safety and minimising costs between now and the end of the financial year.

It now remains a matter for the Health Minister to ensure that the Department of Health effectively manages their available resources to ensure that the Department and the Health and Social Care Trusts remain within their agreed Budgetary allocations, while also ensuring that high quality front-line Health Services are maintained.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in light of the recent announcement by HMRC which stated that "HMRC will support these staff to look for jobs in other offices in HMRC or across the Civil Service", whether he has been approached by HMRC officials.

(AQO 7018/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is my understanding that the reference to the "Civil Service" in the announcement by HMRC is in fact the GB Civil Service and not the Northern Ireland Civil Service, which is a separate employer.

My officials have already been approached by HMRC with a request to redeploy their staff surpluses within the Northern Ireland Civil Service. The Northern Ireland Civil Service is facing its own considerable challenges in managing staff surpluses and major staff redeployment. The Northern Ireland Executive has committed to taking steps to manage recent DVA staff surpluses, including redeployment to other suitable posts within the Northern Ireland Civil Service. The Executive has also agreed to DFP bringing forward a range of proposals for strategic personnel interventions to manage a significant pay bill reduction across the Northern Ireland Civil Service.

Other major programmes, such as Welfare Reform and Universal Credit, have potential to result in considerable staff redeployment and reductions in the future, including the redeployment of those Northern Ireland based HMRC staff that are directly impacted by the Universal Credit arrangements.

I should also add that all appointments to the Northern Ireland Civil Service are regulated by the NI Civil Service Commissioners in accordance with their Recruitment Code, which governs that appointments must be made on merit on the basis of fair and open competition. Any departure from this can only be made in very exceptional circumstances and on the basis of a robust business case approved by the Commissioners.

For the reasons which I have outlined, it is not possible to consider redeploying HMRC staff that are to be declared surplus into the Northern Ireland Civil Service.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the estimated timescale for the Assembly scrutiny of the 2015/16 Budget.

(AQO 7020/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: On 3rd November I announced the draft Budget and set an eight week consultation period. Assembly Committees will undoubtedly request briefings with departmental officials as they seek to develop their 2015-16 Budgets.

In addition, I will be having a series of departmental bi-laterals with Ministers during the course of this consultation period.

I anticipate that the Executive will agree a final Budget for 2015-16 in early January and this will be presented to this House for debate and Assembly vote.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the current Executive review of fiscal powers has taken into account the British Government's recent concession that further tax and welfare powers would be devolved.

(AQO 7021/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Government has not recently set out any formal proposals in respect of the transfer of responsibility for taxation powers to the devolved administrations. In addition, it is not expected to respond to the recommendations for further devolution to Scotland from the Smith Commission until January 2015.

However, the work we are currently undertaking to examine the potential for the devolution of additional fiscal powers to the Northern Ireland Assembly will reflect the recent developments on this issue in Scotland and Wales.

This includes the analyses and findings from the various commissions which have previously made recommendations in respect of the main UK taxes and duties which would be appropriate to devolve, and those where it would be better for the Government to retain responsibility.

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline any engagement he has had with Cerberus with regard to the National Asset Management Agency's former loan portfolio.

(AQO 7022/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have met with representatives of Cerberus to discuss their operations in Northern Ireland, and my officials continue to liaise with the company on a regular basis.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the work of the Joint Ministerial Taskforce on Banking and Access to Finance.

(AQO 7023/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The work of the Joint Ministerial Taskforce is progressing well and we held our third meeting on 15th October 2014. Most recently we have been considering the operation of national initiatives intended to promote access to finance, and in particular, the range of Business Bank interventions and the impact that they are having in Northern Ireland. We have also had positive discussions about the implementation of the Wholesale Guarantee Programme and the progress of the Investment Programme locally.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why a recent response to a departmental Freedom of Information request referred to variations between HM Treasury data and departmental data regarding local expenditure as "opening a can of worms".

(AQO 7024/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is not for me to interpret the handwritten notes of a junior official taken at an internal meeting over five years ago.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how his Infrastructure Action Plan is being implemented.

(AQO 7026/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is vital that we can have confidence in the commissioning and delivery of high priority infrastructure projects. The Infrastructure Action Plan was developed to remove barriers to successful commissioning and delivery of these projects, which are integral to improving the economy. While several Executive Ministers have supported it, I am disappointed that some have reserved their position. I will continue to work with Ministerial Colleagues to convince them that this is a proper course of action. In the meantime, practical issues need to be addressed and an implementation plan covering a series of best practice improvements has been drawn up.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the financial benefits of removing the upper limit of £400,000 on domestic rates.

(AQO 7027/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The removal of the maximum capital value would provide additional rates revenue for the Executive of just over £4 million a year.

Just over £3 million a year would be received by councils.

The financial benefits to regional and local government of removing the maximum capital value at a local level would need to be assessed against the financial impacts at an individual household level.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the annual cost of running the Health and Social Care Regional Medical Locum Service.

(AQW 37684/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The Health and Social Care (HSC) E-locum system (formerly known as Regional Medical Locum Service) is currently operated by a range of authorised booking staff across the HSC who undertake this role alongside other responsibilities. The cost of the Trust Administrators is therefore not currently quantifiable. This is an area in which the Service is now progressing towards the long term objective of having a single regional booking office to streamline this activity. Each Trust participating in the service will pay a proportion of the costs.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total expenditure on locum doctors sourced during the last ten months through (i) the Health and Social Care e-locum regional service; (ii) approved framework locum agencies; and (iii) non-approved locum agencies.

(AQW 37685/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information in the table below was provided by Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) and provides a breakdown of the expenditure for employing locum doctors through (i) the e-locum service, (ii) Approved Framework Agencies and (iii) Non Approved Framework Agencies.

HSCT	E-Locum Service	Approved Framework Agencies	Non Approved Framework Agencies
BHSCT	£2,685,022	£7,483,133	£1,674,665
SEHSCT	£259,653	£2,473,548	NIL
SHSCT	£156,825.56	£2,790,863	£214,147.43
NHSCT	£31,331	£3,947,015	£1,654,091
WHSCT	NIL	£7,561,000 WHSCT unable to separate these costs

Locums are particularly vital to provide services across a range of specialties and/or locations where junior doctor or consultant vacancies have been difficult to fill on a substantive basis, therefore our smaller hospitals and those in the Western HSCT (SWAH and Altnagelvin) and Northern HSCT (Causeway) are disproportionately affected.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the private health insurance companies with provision on the island of Ireland that are (i) accepted; and (ii) not accepted for cover in the South West Acute Hospital in Enniskillen.

(AQW 37813/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust (WHSCT) does not have a process of accepting/ not accepting private insurance companies at the South West Acute Hospital. Rather, the Trust has contracts with a number of companies, whilst others are dealt with on individual patient basis. The insurance companies from which the WHSCT received payment in 2013/14 were as follows:

- Allianz Worldwide;
- Aviva Healthcare - Ireland ;
- Aviva Healthcare - UK;
- AXA PPP Healthcare, including QBE Health Insurance);
- General & Medical Healthcare;
- PRUHealth;
- LAYA;
- Simply Healthcare;
- Universal Provident;
- VHI Healthcare;
- Western Provident Association;
- GLOHealth; and
- St.Paul's Gardia Medical.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the annual cost of the free prescriptions programme, compared to the previous system which included exemptions.

(AQW 37960/11-15)

Mr Wells: Based on the income generated under the previous system when a prescription charge of £3.00 per item was in place, alongside a number of exemption categories, it is estimated that the annual cost of the introduction of free prescriptions in April 2010 is £5m - £6million per annum.

It should be noted, however, that in the four years from 2010/2011 2013/2014 the Health and Social care Board has reported that it has reduced expenditure on prescriptions from £426m to £346m a reduction of over 18%.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much money his Department has recouped from the insurance companies of drivers involved in road traffic accidents, to cover the costs of his departmental resources being used to rescue or provide transport to hospital, in the last five years.

(AQW 38016/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Recovery of Health Services Charges (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 provides for a scheme for the recovery of charges in cases where an injured person who receives a compensation payment in respect of his injury, has received health services hospital treatment or ambulance services. The charges are specified in certificates issued by the Department for Social Development and are payable by persons who pay compensation to the injured person.

Recoveries in respect of ambulance costs in the past five financial years are detailed in the table below.

Financial year	£'000
2009-10	243.4
2010-11	325.0
2011-12	413.5
2012-13	390.8
	1,775.3

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether full risk assessments are carried out in all cases of care packages being reviewed prior to the reduction or removal of any supplied services for senior citizens living independently within the Southern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38017/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Southern Trust advise me that all individuals, including older people, have a full assessment of their needs carried out before an initial care package is put in place. Subsequently clients will then be subject to regular review of their needs, to establish whether the allocated care package is continuing to meet their identified eligible needs.

At the point of review and reassessment, staff will consider, in partnership with the client and their carer/family as appropriate, any risks that would potentially present to the client should the care package be reduced or removed.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of cancer nurse specialists in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust that specialise in Urology, broken down by facility.

(AQW 38026/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust currently employs one full-time Nurse Specialist in urological cancers, at the Causeway Hospital. A further 3.0 whole-time equivalent Urology Nurse Specialists can also provide care to patients with a cancer diagnosis.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to commission an audit similar to the National Prostate Cancer Audit for England and Wales in order to compare available resources.

(AQW 38028/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board has no plans to commission an audit similar to the National Prostate Cancer Audit at this time.

The Board has, however, commissioned the National Peer Review Team to roll out the National Peer Review Programme for Cancer Multidisciplinary Teams (MDTs). Through this programme, MDTs treating urological cancer, including prostate cancer, will be reviewed against the National Manual of Cancer Services measures with visits scheduled for June 2015.

The findings of the peer review visits will allow direct comparison of Urological MDTs across Northern Ireland as well as with England and Wales.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the timescale for the closure of the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor.

Mr Wells: The minor injuries unit at Bangor Community Hospital will close, on a temporary basis, from 1 December 2014.

People who can no longer access minor injuries services in Bangor Community Hospital can access the minor injuries service at Ards Hospital, Newtownards, or contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the rationale for the temporary closure of the minor injuries unit in Bangor Community Hospital was that there are two minor injuries units in the North Down and Ards area and amalgamating two units into one would achieve economies of scale, whilst still providing the population with a minor injuries service. An options appraisal, on where the minor injuries unit should be located, identified the Ards minor injuries unit as the preferred option, as this location is better able to serve the whole population of the North Down and Ards area, including the Ards peninsula.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average daily number of patients treated in the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor.

(AQW 38032/11-15)

Mr Wells: During the last 12 months (October 2013 to September 2014), there was an average of 41 attendances (new, unplanned and planned review) each day at Bangor Minor Injuries Unit. This average is based on the department being open Monday to Friday each week.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assurances he can provide regarding the temporary nature of the closure of hospital beds and Minor Injury Units.
(AQW 38033/11-15)

Mr Wells: The contingency plans announced by Health and Social Care Trusts are to apply until the end of March 2015. If Health and Social Care Trusts were to propose to make any significant service changes permanent, those proposals must be subject to appropriate public consultation. I would expect engagement from Trusts in their local areas so that the public would be kept fully informed.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what alternative arrangements are being implemented to cater for patients who are unable to use the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor.

Mr Wells: The minor injuries unit at Bangor Community Hospital will close, on a temporary basis, from 1 December 2014.

People who can no longer access minor injuries services in Bangor Community Hospital can access the minor injuries service at Ards Hospital, Newtownards, or contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the rationale for the closure of the Minor Injury Unit in Bangor.

Mr Wells: The minor injuries unit at Bangor Community Hospital will close, on a temporary basis, from 1 December 2014.

People who can no longer access minor injuries services in Bangor Community Hospital can access the minor injuries service at Ards Hospital, Newtownards, or contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has concerns regarding the roll out of pulse oximetry for all newborns in relation to (i) the costs involved; and (ii) the accuracy of the saturation probe monitor test.
(AQW 38072/11-15)

Mr Wells: In 2013, the UK National Screening Committee (NSC) issued, for consultation, a review of the evidence on adding pulse oximetry to the screening pathway to detect congenital heart disease in newborns. The consultation closed in December 2013 and was discussed by the NSC at their meeting in March 2014.

The NSC review of the evidence raised some important questions that require further consideration and therefore recommended piloting the pulse oximetry test to screen newborn babies for congenital heart defects.

The NSC will use the findings from the pilot to help define the optimal test procedures for pulse oximetry and better understand the implications of its introduction for neonatal services. Following the evaluation of this pilot the NSC will make a policy recommendation for the UK and I will await this recommendation before making a policy decision on this for Northern Ireland.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety detail (i) the number of employees currently on temporary contracts through a recruitment agency; (ii) the duration of the contracts; (iii) the total cost of the contracts; and (iv) the element claimed by the recruitment agency by way of commission and servicing.
(AQW 38082/11-15)

Mr Wells: HSC Employers have advised that this information is not readily available in the format requested and can only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the transfer of £0.2m under Delivering Social Change for family support hubs will be allocated.

(AQW 38105/11-15)

Mr Wells: The £0.2m funding will be used to meet the projected cost of the Delivering Social Change Family Support Hub Signature Project in year. This is not additional investment; the funding has already been committed. The funding will be allocated to the HSCB in the normal manner by way of an allocation letter.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he intends to review the funding allocation to Foyle Hospice in Derry, given the level of need in the North West region.

(AQW 38108/11-15)

Mr Wells: Responsibility for the commissioning of health and social care services lies with the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) in conjunction with the Public Health Agency (PHA).

The Western Health and Social Care Trust currently sub-contracts with the Foyle Hospice for palliative care services in the north-west. Services provided by the Hospice include inpatient beds, day hospice and community services.

The HSCB recently reviewed the funding provided to voluntary hospice organisations across Northern Ireland. The result of their analysis highlighted that Foyle Hospice had a funding pressure in respect of the services they provide. The HSCB, in discussion with the Hospice, Western HSC Trust and the Local Commissioning Group, have agreed the following:

- To uplift the SLA with Foyle Hospice by £200,000 in 2014/15, bringing the value of the funding for services in 2014/15 to £662,497; and
- In conjunction with the Foyle Hospice to further review the financial position going forward into 2015/16 and 2016/17.

The HSCB, Local Commissioning Group and Western Health and Social Care Trust met with Foyle Hospice on 6 November 2014 to confirm the uplifted funding for the 2014/15 SLA.

The Western Health and Social Care Trust and Foyle Hospice share the services of a Consultant in Palliative Medicine. The Trust is commissioned to fund 50% of this post.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what discussions he has had with his counterpart in Dublin regarding the North West Health Innovation Corridor.

(AQW 38109/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have not had any direct discussions with the Irish Health Minister regarding the North West Health Innovation Corridor. However, there has been engagement between officials regarding the initiative and we await the outcome of the Department of Health's deliberations.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current waiting times for patients referred (i) urgently; and (ii) routinely by their GP to the dermatology department at the Ulster Hospital.

Mr Wells: The South Eastern HSC Trust has advised that all GP referrals to the Dermatology Department are triaged by a consultant, who may change the priority status of the referral. The hospital's computer system will subsequently be updated to align with the consultant's priority decision. Therefore, the priority type presented in the answer may not reflect the original priority assigned by the patient's GP.

The current waiting times for patients referred (i) urgently and (ii) routinely by their GP to the dermatology department at the Ulster Hospital are shown in the tables below, broken down by time band and type of clinic, i.e. consultant led, nurse led or Integrated Clinic Assessment and Treatment Services (ICATS).

(i) Urgent Referrals

The figures in the answer refer to the waiting time position as at the week beginning 3rd November 2014.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the Alcohol and Drugs Commissioning Framework for Northern Ireland 2013-2016 completed consultation on the 18th April 2013, why the report has not yet been published.

(AQW 38156/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the cross-departmental strategy to prevent and address the harm related to substance misuse, known as the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2, the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and the Public Health Agency (PHA) were tasked by my Department with developing a Regional Commissioning Framework for Alcohol and Drug Services in Northern Ireland.

52 organisations responded to the subsequent public consultation on the draft Framework which closed in April 2013. Following this, the HSCB and the PHA published an analysis of, and a response to, the issues raised during the consultation in July 2013.

Since this time the HSCB and PHA have focused on the development and implementation of a procurement plan to tender for a range of services to address the key priorities outlined in the framework. The process of developing the tenders has taken longer than expected, however the procurement process has recently gone live, with new services now envisaged to be in place by the beginning of April 2015. The HSCB and PHA anticipate that the finalised framework will be published once the procurement process currently underway has been completed.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what criteria were used to decide on the closure of intermediate care beds in Dalriada Hospital.

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has to reduce its spend by almost £7m between now and the end of March 2015. Frontline and emergency services have, as far as possible, been protected, and by consolidating on fewer sites, the Trust will divert staff from non-acute areas to acute and community services.

The Trust has 5 non acute hospitals: Dalriada (Ballycastle), Robinson (Ballymoney), Inver (Larne), Mid Ulster (Magherafelt) and Whiteabbey. Overall there are 106 intermediate care beds and 64 sub acute beds across these sites. Over 40% of the intermediate care beds lie in the Causeway area. The Trust has sought to ensure that non acute beds would continue to be available across the localities within the Trust. As Causeway area is served by two intermediate care facilities less than 20 miles apart and an acute hospital within 20 miles of Dalriada and 10 miles of Robinson, it was considered that one of the intermediate care facilities would temporarily close in this area to allow skilled staff to be redirected to Causeway acute hospital and community response services. In view of its central location at Ballymoney, Robinson Hospital was identified as having the potential to ensure intermediate beds are accessible to a greater number of the population in the causeway area.

The length of stay in intermediate care beds has reduced as the Trust has increased active rehabilitation. The Trust is confident that although there will be reduced bed numbers the more efficient use of beds means that sufficient capacity will be provided for patients in each locality within the Trust to access intermediate care and rehabilitation beds.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the total amount of funding given to GP practices in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38173/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total amount of funding given to GP practices in each of the last five years was as follows:

Funding to GP Practices over last 5 years

Year	Amount
2009/10	£234.4m
2010/11	£230.8m

Year	Amount
2011/12	£232.3m
2012/13	£232.7m
2013/14	£245.7m

Source: Technical Steering Committee (TSC) returns. The TSC is chaired by the Health & Social Care Information Centre (HSCIC) with representatives from UK Departments, NHS Employers, NHS England and the British Medical Association (BMA).

Funding of local GP Practices compared to the rest of UK (i) per capita and (ii) as a percentage of the overall health budget is set below:

GMS Costs per Capita 2011/12 to 2013/14

	2013/14	2012/13	2011/12
England	£142	£141	£140
Wales	£130	£128	£127
Scotland	£165	£163	£158
Northern Ireland	£125	£119	£120
UK	£143	£141	£140

Source: Expenditure data was sourced from TSC returns and per capita figures calculated by DHSSPS. To enable comparability across the UK countries, some elements of funding have been excluded (e.g. IT funding) and some funding figures that sit outside the remit of TSC (e.g. NHS Direct and NHS 24) have been sourced separately and included. Dispensing costs are funded from community pharmacy budgets and have therefore been excluded from all countries. The population denominator is the GP registered list for each country.

GMS Funding as a % of the Total Health Budget

	2012/13	2011/12	2010/11
England	8.40%	8.50%	8.48%
Wales	7.81%	7.77%	7.76%
Scotland	7.76%	7.78%	7.93%
Northern Ireland	7.96%	8.10%	8.22%
UK	7.98%	8.03%	8.09%

Source: Total health budgets were sourced from annual expenditure figures published by each UK country. GMS expenditure was sourced from TSC returns. For comparability, social care expenditure has been excluded from the total health budget for Northern Ireland.

I am not in a position to respond to the Member's question regarding plans to increase the percentage share of the health budget awarded to GP practices at this time as financial planning for 2015/16 cannot be completed until after an announcement on the Final Budget for 2015/16 which is not due to be published until January 2015.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken by his Department to provide input on, and to co-ordinate, a cross departmental action plan to tackle Female Genital Mutilation. (AQW 38185/11-15)

Mr Wells: Female Genital Mutilation is an important issue which cuts across a number of Departments. That is why, alongside others, my Department has been involved from the early stages in assisting in developing Multi-Agency Practice Guidelines on Female Genital Mutilation which were published in July by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

I understand that a cross departmental meeting is being arranged to discuss and agree how best to raise the profile of these guidelines and take forward actions required to address the issue of FGM here, and my officials stand ready to participate in that event.

The joint DHSSPS and DOJ strategy Stopping Domestic and Sexual Violence and Abuse in Northern Ireland is currently being developed. It recognises that domestic violence and abuse can manifest itself through the perpetration of unlawful activities and practices such as female genital mutilation.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 32350/11-15, whether the replaced bath in Pinewood Residential Care Home is fully operational; and whether all apparatus and equipment needed to assist in the bathing of residents is in place.

(AQW 38192/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust has advised me that the bid for funding for a new bath for Pinewood Residential Care Home remains on the Trust's priority list.

In the interim, a bath from another facility has been fitted and is available for the use of residents although the availability of additional apparatus suitable for use with this bath is limited.

The majority of the residents in Pinewood Residential Care Home use the showering facilities available, and these have all the apparatus and equipment required.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many bedrooms in Pinewood Residential Care Home are currently (i) empty; or (ii) being used as a storeroom.

(AQW 38193/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust have advised me that Pinewood Residential Care Home has 30 bedrooms in full use. The bedrooms operate on a booking system so may be empty on occasion whilst waiting on a discharge from hospital or to facilitate a terminal clean following discharge.

3 former bedrooms are in use to store the additional equipment which is required to provide services to more complex intermediate care residents.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has spent on maintenance of Pinewood Residential Care Home in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38194/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust have provided the following figures for maintenance spend on Pinewood residential care home in the past five years:

- 2010/11** £3,307.42 (6 months figure for this year)
- 2011/12 £8,327.41
- 2012/13 £10,075.99
- 2013/14 £17,364.80
- 2014/15 (YTD) £6,592.94

**Please note previous figures are not held electronically and cannot be provided within the timeframe specified

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37063/11-15, to provide this information broken down by Programmes of Care.

(AQW 38197/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Serious Adverse Incident (SAI) system was established by the Department in July 2004. The Department did not record SAI's by Programme of Care so this information is not available for the period July 2004 – 30 April 2010.

The HSC Board took over responsibility for the SAI system on 1 May 2010. The figures for 2010 cover the period 1 May 2010 to 31 December 2010.

The number of Serious Adverse Incidents, broken down by Programmes of Care, from 1 May 2010 to 31 December 2013 is outlined in the table below. This information was provided by the HSCB.

The data outlined in the table above is provided from a live database which is subject to change; SAI reports can be based on limited information at the time of reporting and on further investigation the situation may change. This can result in the incident no longer meeting the criteria of an SAI and, in line with the HSCB Procedure for the reporting and follow up of SAIs; the SAI can subsequently be de-escalated

Figures for 2013 are not completely comparable with previous years as the definition of an SAI and the associated guidance was changed in October 2013 to encompass a wider range of incidents.

The HSCB/PHA publishes information on SAIs on a six monthly basis. The latest SAI report for the period 1 October 2013 to 31 March 2014 can be accessed at -

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38235/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department has been liaising with the Public Sector Reform Division to explore opportunities to collaborate in our shared public sector reform agenda. It is important to recognise, however, that this work is still at an early stage and, as such, there are no associated efficiencies to report.

My Department has, however, been delivering challenging efficiencies over many years in order to continue to meet the increasing health and social care needs of the population and deliver safe and effective services while remaining within allocated resources.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38242/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) The Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety is a participant in the NICS cycle to work scheme.
- (ii) The NICS cycle to work scheme is open to all NICS staff all year round.
- (iii) The scheme is a NICS Cycle to Work Scheme and therefore does not extend to NDPBs for whom the NICS is not their employer. However DFP, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what impact the closure of the Regional Multiple Sclerosis (MS) Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle will have on the care of patients diagnosed with MS.

(AQW 38246/11-15)

Mr Wells: Respite Services to MS patients will still be provided and everyone who requires respite will receive it. The Health and Social Care Trusts affected by the temporary closure of the Respite Centre are working to ensure that service users' assessed needs are met.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide an update on the number of people currently receiving treatment for Multiple Sclerosis.

(AQW 38297/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of people receiving treatment for Multiple Sclerosis at the end of October 2014, the most recent data available, is shown in the table below. This data is broken down by Trust of Residence.

Number of patients on treatment for Multiple Sclerosis at 31st October 2014

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust will reconsider the decision to close twenty beds and the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital by 1 December 2014.

(AQW 38307/11-15)

Mr Wells: My priorities are to ensure the services provided by Health and Social Care are safe and effective and to ensure that my Department achieves financial balance, as is required of all Ministers. To achieve these aims, Health and Social Care

Trusts have produced a range of contingency proposals to achieve financial break even. Each Trust has provided assurances that their services will remain safe and effective.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that it has no plans to reconsider the contingency measures within the current financial year. The closures are temporary measures and the contingency plans are to apply until the end of March 2015.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust made the correct decision to close twenty beds and the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital.

Mr Wells: My priorities are to ensure the services provided by Health and Social Care are safe and effective and to ensure that my Department achieves financial balance, as is required of all Ministers. To achieve these aims, Health and Social Care Trusts have produced a range of contingency proposals to achieve financial break even. Each Trust has provided assurances that their services will remain safe and effective.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that it has no plans to reconsider the contingency measures within the current financial year. The closures are temporary measures and the contingency plans are to apply until the end of March 2015.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether an Equality Impact Assessment was carried out on the decision to close beds at Dalriada Hospital.

(AQW 38349/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust has advised that an equality impact assessment was not carried out prior to the implementation of the temporary measures. An Equality Screening exercise followed by an Equality Impact Assessment will, if appropriate, form part of the formal consultation process for any proposed permanent service changes.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38373/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department does not have a separate Equality Unit. 2.25 FTE staff are engaged on Equality functions as well as other duties relating to Human Rights, Disability Action plan, etc. The full annual cost of equality related work is £87,142.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) what changes have recently been agreed to IV Infusion services for children with Osteogenesis; and (ii) how affected patients have been informed of these changes.

(AQW 38414/11-15)

Mr Wells: Over the next year there is a planned change in the provision of this service from Orthopaedics to a joint service with the Endocrine or the Rheumatology Service. The service will remain within the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children and should not have any impact on patient welfare or services.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the proposals to close beds at Dalriada Hospital was subject to rural proofing prior to being announced.

(AQW 38416/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust has advised that a rural proofing exercise was not carried out prior to the implementation of the temporary measures.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost savings which are expected to be made as a result of the proposed closures at Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38418/11-15)

Mr Wells: The savings which are expected to be made as a result of proposed closures at Bangor Community Hospital are as follows:

- The temporary closure of the GP Ward (planned from 1 December 2014) will save approximately £207k.
- The temporary closure of the Bangor MIU (planned from 1 December 2014) will have a cash releasing savings of approximately £65k.

They form part of the Trust's overall plan to achieve financial break even while maximising patient safety.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether an assurance was provided to patients in the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital that the centre will remain open until the end of the current financial year. (AQW 38473/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has to reduce its spend by almost £7m between now and the end of March 2015. Frontline and emergency services have, as far as possible, been protected, and by consolidating on fewer sites, the Trust will divert staff from non-acute areas to acute and community services.

The savings plan includes the temporary closure of 12 MS Respite beds and 20 Intermediate Care beds in Dalriada Hospital. The changes are proposed as temporary measures to protect patient safety and will apply until the end of March 2015.

Following the announcement on 30 October 2014, the Northern HSC Trust contacted MS service users and families from the Northern area to advise of the decision that the unit would temporarily close from 30 November 2014, and that relevant key workers would be in contact to arrange appointments to meet and discuss options for their future respite care.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much will be saved as a result of the temporary closure of the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital. (AQW 38484/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the temporary closure of minor injuries unit in Bangor Community Hospital will have a cash releasing saving of approximately £65,000.

It forms part of the Trust's overall plan to achieve financial break even while maximising patient safety.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has for patients requiring complex palliative care support and end of life care following the closure of Dalriada Hospital, given that the Northern Health and Social Care Trust Chief Executive has advised that he has no plans to increase funding for district nursing which is already under strain and that the Robinson Hospital in Ballymoney is at 96 per cent occupancy without the additional 94 per cent occupancy beds from Dalriada Hospital. (AQW 38497/11-15)

Mr Wells: The "Living Matters, Dying Matters" Strategy for Palliative and End of Life Care for adults in Northern Ireland (DHSSPS, 2010) recommended that access to specialist palliative care advice and support should be available across all care settings on a 24/7 basis. The responsibility to ensure that such care is available to patients with identified complex need, their families and carers, spans across the commissioner, statutory, voluntary and independent sector and across care settings.

The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) have embraced the opportunity to ensure through partnership working a robust service is available to support those with palliative and end of life care needs across the entire Trust area. A 12 bed specialist palliative care unit, the Macmillan Unit, is based on the site of Antrim Area Hospital. GPs and acute services can refer patients with complex palliative care needs to this specialist inpatient care. This model of care enables the patient and their family to be supported by a specialist multi-disciplinary team and is similar to the level of expertise also available within hospices across Northern Ireland. Furthermore as is practice in other areas of the Trust, where bed based care is required, which cannot be delivered in the home setting, consideration can be given to nursing home placements.

To meet the response to complex palliative care need across the NHSCT, Palliative Medicine consultants provide 24/7 telephone advice to medical colleagues to support treatment decisions and optimise symptom management. Specialist Palliative Care nurses working across the acute and community hospitals are also available to support ward and district nursing teams to manage the holistic care needs of the patient and their family and provide specialist advice regarding the complexity of issues which can arise.

A similar specialist palliative care nursing team is also available within the community, provided by Northern Ireland Hospice. Complex palliative care needs can be managed by the community nursing team or care home team with the support of the specialist advice and experience provided by the NI Hospice community specialist care team. In addition to this Marie Curie and Hospice at Home compliment the community nursing service and domiciliary care by providing care and support to patients as far as possible, in accordance with their wishes, to be cared for and die in their own homes.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the effect the closure of the 32 beds at Dalriada Hospital will have on other services currently based at the site. (AQW 38535/11-15)

Mr Wells: The following services will remain operational at Dalriada Hospital:

- Treatment Room Nursing;
- Ballycastle Intermediate Team (District Nursing / Social Workers / Occupational Therapy);
- Domiciliary care services;
- Outpatient clinics;
- Dental;
- Community children's Speech and language therapy;
- Midwifery;
- Podiatry;
- Dietetics;
- Physiotherapy;

- Mental health team;
- Health visiting services;
- Orthoptics;
- Community and voluntary services;
- GP Health Centre.

These services will not be affected by the bed closures. For staff delivering these services, their work will continue as normal.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline how he intends to address the issue of trips and conferences attended by Health and Social Care Board representatives.

(AQW 38618/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSCB has advised that any travel, including that outside the UK and Ireland, must be required for business purposes and contribute towards improving the Health and Social Care Board's objective to commission safe, high quality and effective care for the population of Northern Ireland.

Travel outside the UK and Ireland is necessary on occasion to share learning or best practice, participate in seminars or conferences, build relationships and expertise, or to attend training events or staff development opportunities not available in Northern Ireland.

The governance arrangements associated with such travel require all proposed travel to be approved by the Health and Social Care Board's Senior Management Team with oversight being provided by the Board's Governance Committee who receive a report of all travel undertaken outside the UK and Ireland.

Department of Justice

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he will conduct an audit or investigation into the granting of Legal Aid by deputy District Judges covering magistrates courts, balancing the figures against the usual practice of the presiding District Judge in each court division.

(AQW 37963/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Where a person is charged with any offence in the magistrates' court or is brought before it to be dealt with, the court may grant in respect of him a criminal aid certificate where it is satisfied that his means are insufficient to obtain legal aid and that it is in the interests of justice that he should have free legal aid. Each district judge, or deputy, must consider these two tests before granting legal aid. Where there is doubt, the legislation requires the judge to exercise discretion to the benefit of the applicant. This is a judicial decision and I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Office of the Lord Chief Justice. I am aware that the judiciary keep these issues under review.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why no agreement was in place between his Department or the Prison Service and Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs on the taxation issues relating to applications for the Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme prior to the launch of the scheme in 2012.

(AQW 37983/11-15)

Mr Ford: Officials in the Northern Ireland Prison Service were in contact with HM Revenue and Customs from August 2011 in relation to taxation issues. Staff were treated in accordance with the tax rules at the date of their departure.

The correspondence dated 16 February also states HMRC will check that PAYE is operated on the earliest of the two dates (i.e. when the person is entitled to payment or when they are actually paid). The launch document issued in November 2011 provided the leaving date of 31 March 2012. Moving this date could have been interpreted as facilitating tax avoidance.

This was an entirely voluntary scheme. As taxation depends on individual circumstances staff were advised to contact their tax office.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice why his Department informed the Committee for Justice that Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) had told the Prison Service (NIPS) that NIPS staff had to be paid at the end of March 2012, when HMRC had informed NIPS on 16 February 2012 that when an employee is entitled to payment is a factual matter based on the terms and conditions of the contract of employment and the redundancy package.

(AQW 37986/11-15)

This was an entirely voluntary scheme. As taxation depends on individual circumstances staff were advised to contact their tax office.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the email correspondence with Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs on 15 February 2013, why the Prison Service did not allow staff to revoke their applications to the Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme.

(AQW 37987/11-15)

Mr Ford: Officials in the Northern Ireland Prison Service were in contact with HM Revenue and Customs from August 2011 in relation to taxation issues. Staff were treated in accordance with the tax rules at the date of their departure.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what cash reserves are held by his Department.

(AQW 38007/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice, including its agencies, does not retain cash reserves.

It retains a minimum balance in bank accounts in order to meet day-to-day working capital requirements in line with Managing Public Money NI.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what cash reserves are held by the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 38008/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service does not retain cash reserves.

It retains a minimum balance in bank accounts in order to meet day-to-day working capital requirements in line with Managing Public Money NI.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what cash reserves are held by the PSNI.

(AQW 38009/11-15)

Mr Ford: As stated in previous AQW/37241/11-15 answered on 23 October 2014 the Department of Justice's arm's length bodies do not retain cash reserves. This includes the PSNI.

They retain a minimum balance in bank accounts in order to meet day-to-day working capital requirements in line with Managing Public Money NI.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for a breakdown, or an estimate in absence of available totals, of the costs in the recent aborted trial of Mr Fred McClenaghan.

(AQW 38027/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated costs for the recent aborted trial are given in the table below.

Cost Type	Estimated Cost
Legal Aid <sup>1</sup>	£36,311
Prosecution <sup>2</sup>	£472
Court Costs <sup>3</sup>	£21,626

- 1 The fees in respect of the Crown Court proceedings have been estimated in accordance with the Legal Aid for Crown Court Proceedings (Costs) (Amendment) Rules (Northern Ireland) 2011.
- 2 In the absence of detailed records of time spent on individual cases it is not possible to produce precise costs for a particular case. Regarding prosecution counsel, under the current guidelines fees incurred are not calculated until the case has fully concluded. To date approximately £472 has been paid in witness expenses.
- 3 The estimated court cost include judicial and staff salaries, facilities and juror costs
- 4 Costs for individual investigations and subsequent court appearances for PSNI Officers/Staff are not recorded separately.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the current proposal to scrap police cautions in England and Wales for minor offences; and whether he has any plans to introduce a similar policy.

(AQW 38029/11-15)

Mr Ford: In England and Wales a caution is issued at the discretion of a police officer.

In Northern Ireland, however, a police caution is not issued at the discretion of an individual police officer and can only be issued following a direction by the Public Prosecution Service.

The proposal to simplify the use of out of court disposals in England and Wales, including ending the use of police cautions, is to be piloted for a twelve month period before being evaluated.

My Department will be monitoring the progress of the pilots but I have no plans to introduce a similar policy in Northern Ireland at this time.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether judges can order set amounts to be paid to charitable causes in lieu of fines following conviction of criminal offences, as is the case in the Republic of Ireland; and (i) if so, how often this has been done; and (ii) if not, whether he will consider introducing such a scheme.

(AQW 38036/11-15)

Mr Ford: Courts in Northern Ireland have no powers to require payments to charitable causes in lieu of fines along the lines of the "Court Poor Box" system in the Republic of Ireland. Other options are available both to the courts and to my Department to ensure that monies recovered from offenders are directed to victims of crime and relevant support organisations.

Under the Offender Levy, £250,819 was collected across the last two financial years and distributed to a range of victim support projects via the Victims of Crime Fund. Across the same period, courts also imposed 6573 compensation orders whereby an offender can be required to pay compensation to the victim of his/her crime.

I understand that the Irish Government has plans to abolish the "Court Poor Box" scheme and create a new statute-based Reparation Fund to provide additional funding for services for victims of crime, compensation and reparation.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what action he took in response to representations in late 2012 from two women about the handling of a prosecution case in which they featured as victims of sexual abuse along with Mairia Cahill.

(AQW 38048/11-15)

Mr Ford: I do not comment on individual cases. I have no role in decisions taken by the Public Prosecution Service (PPS). In response to letters to me about prosecution matters, I explain this and, if appropriate, I forward correspondence to the PPS for consideration and reply.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice what length of sentences have been given to foreign nationals for criminal convictions for (i) assault; (ii) actual bodily harm; (iii) sexual assault; (iv) attempted murder; (v) threats to kill; (vi) theft; (vii) drug offences; and (viii) other serious offences, over the last three years.

(AQW 38111/11-15)

Mr Ford: The prosecutions and convictions datasets held by the Department of Justice do not currently contain information in relation to the nationality of the defendant. The information requested is not therefore available from these and could be obtained, if at all, only by individual examination of individual records.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice how many foreign nationals, convicted for criminal offences, have re-offended over the last five years.

(AQW 38112/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice does not currently hold information pertaining to the nationality of the defendant within its reoffending datasets. In addition, a continuous series of reoffending information for the period in question is not yet available.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the proposed shared Police, Fire and Prison Service training facility at Desertcreat.

(AQW 38119/11-15)

Mr Ford: Development of a joint training college for the police, Prison Service and Fire and Rescue Service is a Programme for Government commitment. Decisions on this will be taken by the Executive.

At a recent meeting of the programme's Steering Group, the three Services reiterated their commitment to some form of integration but expressed concern at the impact of budget reductions on their long term training requirements and their ability to meet future running costs.

As a result, the Steering Group has commissioned a two stage review. The first stage will involve the Programme Board urgently establishing what the present position means for the current procurement process. This will be completed within a short, two-week timescale. During this period, the Programme Board will also firm up the scope of the second stage review which will, inter alia, re-affirm the training requirements of the three Services and the scope for integration; review underlying assumptions; and establish what is appropriate, affordable and deliverable in the current budgetary climate.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38138/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Yes the DOJ is a participant in the NICS Cycle to work scheme;
- (ii) The NICS cycle to work scheme is open to all NICS staff all year round;
- (iii) The scheme is a NICS Cycle to Work Scheme and therefore does not extend to NDPBs for whom the NICS is not their employer. However DFP, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many Committal Warrants have been issued for fine defaults in each of the last two years, broken down by court division.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether John McDermott resided for any time in Dromore, County Down, either directly following release from prison, or at any subsequent time since his release.

(AQW 38144/11-15)

Mr Ford: Individuals subject to post-release supervision are managed by Probation Board for Northern Ireland (PBNI). PBNI does not provide information on an individual's location post-release in recognition of their right to protection of their personal data.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) how many defendants have gone missing whilst on bail in each of the last five years; (ii) what are the alleged offences or charges in each case; and (iii) how many remain at large, broken down by court division.

(AQW 38145/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details the number of defendants issued with at least one arrest (Magistrates' Court) or bench (Crown Court) warrant in each of the last five years who failed to surrender to court in accordance with their bail.

Court records show that on 6 November 2014, 971 defendants currently have an outstanding arrest or bench warrant.

Provision of data on the charges relating to each of these warrants would incur a disproportionate cost.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Justice whether the ongoing cost of pensions for early retirement under the Patten severance scheme is met directly out of the annual departmental budget or is there a special compensatory arrangement with HM Treasury to help defray this pressure.

(AQW 38157/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no specific funding arrangement in place with HM Treasury for the payment of pensions relating to the Patten Severance Scheme. The cost of pensions is met directly from the PSNI annually managed expenditure (AME) budget.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37324/11-15, (i) whether the two judges who preside in the affected courts were not personally consulted before the change was made; (ii) if not, why this was the case; and (iii) whether a Section 75 exercise was completed in respect of this change.

(AQW 38187/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) The two judges were not consulted. However, the Lord Chief Justice and Presiding Judges were consulted in advance of the proposal being approved by the Minister.
- (ii) It is usual practice for Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service officials to consult with the Lord Chief Justice and Presiding Judges in the first instance regarding any policy or other changes affecting the running of the courts.
- (iii) An Equality Impact Assessment was carried out in respect of the transfer of business from the Old Townhall to Laganside Courts which included consideration of any Section 75 persons impacted by the changes.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether his consultation on abortion was taken to, and approved by, the Executive as a cross-cutting and controversial matter.

(AQW 38190/11-15)

Mr Ford: The scope of the consultation is confined to proposals to change the criminal law on abortion, which is the responsibility of the Department of Justice. It is therefore not a cross cutting issue.

It is my intention to bring proposals to the Executive once policy consultation has been concluded.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Justice what has been the cost to date of developing the joint public services college at Desertcreat.

(AQW 38210/11-15)

Mr Ford: As at 30 September, the total spend on the project was £9.6m. This excludes the £2.85m in relation to site acquisition.

The Department is not undertaking any option studies of alternative sites. Such studies would only be appropriate if the current project was unable to proceed as planned.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he would accept any body recognised by his Department as alternative representation for members of the police force who are not members of the Police Association as per Regulation 25 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1988; and if so, what criteria would be appropriate in the setting up of a separate association.

(AQW 38263/11-15)

Mr Ford: By law, every member of the Police Service of Northern Ireland is a member of the Staff Association with membership dependent on the rank of the officer.

Within the Association, the Police Federation exists to represent its members in matters affecting welfare and efficiency, and is the only official representative body for ranks below superintendent with whom consultation on matters affecting terms and conditions is required.

In addition, police officers are forbidden by legislation from membership of any trade union or association which seeks to control or influence the pay, pensions or conditions of service of the PSNI.

As the current arrangements fulfil their objectives it is not my intention to change any of these protections.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of inmates in each prison; and of these, how many are serving a second or subsequent sentence.

(AQW 38278/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of inmates in custody in each prison and the number serving a second or subsequent sentence are included in the table below. The figures are based on the NIPS population in custody on 10 November 2014.

Name of Establishment	Number of Inmates in Custody on 10 November 2014	Number of Reoffenders (Inmates serving a second or subsequent sentence)
Hydebank Wood – Female	68	22
Hydebank Wood – Male	150	36
Maghaberry	1021	389
Magilligan	550	263

The figures for reoffending are based on custodial records held on the Prison Record Information System since its inception in November 2006. Prior to this date the information was not recorded on PRISM.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total annual cost of providing (i) food; and (ii) education in each prison; and the average cost per inmate.

(AQW 38279/11-15)

Mr Ford: The tables below sets out the total annual cost and the average cost per inmate requested in parts (i) and (ii) above for the financial year 2013-14.

Prison	(i) Food costs 2013-14		(ii) Education costs 2013-14
	Annual Cost	Average Cost per inmate	Annual Cost	Average Cost per inmate

Magilligan	£626,215	£1,143	£1,208,357	£2,205
Hydebank Wood	£270,207	£1,160	£918,740	£3,943

Mr B McCreá asked the Minister of Justice what steps his Department has taken to facilitate better understanding between the judiciary and social services in adoption cases, in order to prevent adopted children being reallocated between parents and potential adopters.

(AQW 38294/11-15)

Mr Ford: The legal framework governing the determination of public law cases by courts is the responsibility of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. In accordance with the principle of judicial independence, the application of that legislation to individual cases is a matter for the judiciary, as is judicial training. However, sharing knowledge and experience can only improve the operation of the system and outcomes for vulnerable children and families.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to case number 14/099194 at Dungannon Magistrates' Court, why the alleged drugs issue has been split from the charges which were processed and dealt with; and to detail the estimated cost of prosecuting any potential offence from the same detection and directly connected to the convictions.

(AQW 38321/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) is responsible for investigating crimes and submitting a file of complaint to the Public Prosecution Service (PPS). The decision as to whether to prosecute a complaint is taken by the PPS.

I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the PPS. You may therefore wish to direct your question to the PSNI or the PPS.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to case numbers (a) 12/087230; and (b) 12/087229 at Downpatrick Magistrates' Court, to detail (i) how many times this case has been adjourned, including the dates and reasons for adjournment; and (ii) why this case has been delayed repeatedly.

(AQW 38323/11-15)

Mr Ford: A timeline of the court hearings and the adjournment reasons in case numbers 12/087229 and 12/087230 are detailed in the table below. Adjournments and the listing of cases are judicial decisions.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37422/11-15, how many law firms have been instructed in these cases; and how many times each law firm acted per judicial review.

Mr Ford: From 1 April 2013 to 31 March 2014 26 law firms took instructions in 51 judicial reviews, as per the table below.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Justice to detail the (i) number and location of illegal fuel laundering plants that have been detected in each of the last ten years; and (ii) prosecutions which followed in each case.

(AQW 38458/11-15)

Mr Ford: Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC), who lead in relation to fuel laundering, have provided the following figures:

Year	Fuel laundering plants dismantled in Northern Ireland
03/04	13
04/05	18
05/06	16
06/07	18
07/08	08

10/11	20
11/12	29
12/13	22
13/14	38

HMRC have advised that it is not their policy to detail locations.

In relation to associated prosecutions, in AQW/34252/ 11-15 I provided details of conviction for oils fraud in recent years.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps will he take to ensure that defaced road signs are replaced in such a way as to make further vandalism more difficult.

(AQW 36328/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): It is an offence under Article 33 of the Road Traffic (NI) Order 1981 for a person to unlawfully and intentionally interfere with or damage a traffic sign and anyone caught defacing road signs will be prosecuted.

However, as you will appreciate it can be difficult proving a case in this regard, as the courts will require substantial and clear evidence before an effective prosecution can be brought.

My Department carries out regular inspections of all public roads and footways, to ensure that essential maintenance needs are identified and remedial work is completed as necessary. During these inspections, all defects are noted, including defective or vandalised signs, in addition to those signs needing cleaning to improve visibility.

The need for an anti-graffiti coating will be considered by engineers before replacing any signage which is the subject of regular vandalism. Whilst this is done routinely for new signs, it is generally only done on a sign-by-sign basis for replacement or existing signs when the sign has either reached the end of its serviceable life, has been vandalised beyond repair or needs replaced to reflect changes to the local road network.

However, treating traffic signs with anti-graffiti coating only makes it easier for the graffiti to be removed and does not prevent the graffiti from being applied in the first instance. Officials will continue to remove graffiti from traffic signs and prioritise those deemed offensive or affecting road safety.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many NI Railways trains are currently in storage.

Mr Kennedy: NI Railways has no operational trains in storage.

One retired Class 450 train is being kept to provide engineering spares for support of NIR's Sandite train (a locomotive and carriage set which is used to apply Sandite to railhead to avoid wheel slip conditions during the Autumn).

In addition old MKII carriages for the Railway Preservation Society of Ireland in Whitehead remain in temporary storage in Lisburn station sidings.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much money his Department has received from sources other than the Executive, in each of the last two years.

Mr Kennedy: I refer you to my answer to AQW 37230/11-15.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of the lack of repairs being carried out to street lights, whether his Department has made provision for additional legal claims.
(AQW 37700/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has not received any additional legal claims.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what bicycle parking facilities he plans to provide for staff and visitors to County Hall in Ballymena.

Mr Kennedy: Bicycle parking facilities at the County Hall in Ballymena currently consist of a covered stand which accommodates six bicycles. They are available for use by the 550 staff currently based at the location and members of the public. Based on observations by the Premises Officer since the facility was installed, this level of provision is considered sufficient to meet current demand.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to address the road safety and car parking concerns raised by the parents of pupils who attend Derryhale Primary School, Portadown.

Mr Kennedy: The school already benefits from the provision of flashing Safer Routes to School signs and enhanced road markings, which were installed in 2012, and there have been no recorded injury collisions at this location in the last eight years.

In addition, an assessment has been scheduled for the possible provision of traffic calming measures on Derryhale Road. This will determine the priority of this provision, relative to the numerous other requests for work of this nature, and I will arrange for you to be advised directly of the outcome when it is available.

The provision of additional car parking facilities at the school would be a matter for the local Education Board.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how many cycling parking spaces or loops were available for public use in Belfast in (i) 2012; (ii) 2013; and (iii) 2014.
(AQW 37942/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has been developing the infrastructure and providing improved facilities for cyclists in Belfast over a number of years. With regard to the 2011/12, 2012/13 and 2013/14 financial years, details of additional cycle stands/ loops provided in Belfast, which were available for public use, are shown in the table below:

Year	Number of cycle stands/hoops provided
2011/12	97
2012/13	97
2013/14	192

In addition, Councils and the Department for Social Development, as part of public realm works, may have also installed cycle stands and other cycling facilities prior to and during this period, details of which are not maintained by my Department.

My draft Bicycle Strategy highlights the need for a comprehensive cycle network with end to end routes. This will include the provision of secure cycle parking where it is required. As part of our development plans, we will be making an assessment of current parking provision in Belfast.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what his Department is doing to promote a better understanding of the economic benefits to businesses of cycling.

(AQW 37945/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has particular focus on encouraging and assisting people to use the bicycle as a means of everyday travel and the promotion of cycling through the Travelwise initiative.

I recognise that employers have an important role to play in facilitating and encouraging people to travel to work by bicycle and my department already works with employers through

- Bike to Work Day
- Promotion of the Cycle to Work Scheme; and
- The development of Workplace Travel Plans

My Department's draft Bicycle Strategy highlights the many benefits of cycling including the economic contribution to town and city centres by making them vibrant and safer urban spaces which are more attractive in encouraging people to spend time in.

Evidence from elsewhere indicates that higher levels of bicycle use equate to a range of economic benefits to society. Investment in infrastructure for the bicycle has also been demonstrated to represent a cost-effective investment.

A developed cycling culture can help:

- Create jobs;
- Inject money directly into the economy via the cycle trade;
- Boost the vitality of town centres; and
- Transport people and deliver goods efficiently

A significant additional economic benefit to businesses is the improved health and well-being of their employees when they adopt more active lifestyles. Cycling and walking even part of a journey on a regular basis will result in fitter and healthier employees, lowering levels of obesity and resulting in fewer sick absences.

The draft bicycle strategy highlights that while other bodies may have a remit for a specific area, such as tourism and leisure, there are areas of common interest where bodies can work together to support projects that deliver mutual benefits, such as greenways beyond urban areas.

The public consultation events which have taken place to raise awareness of, and encourage participation in the draft Bicycle Strategy have sought to engage with large businesses as well as the public so that businesses are fully informed about the strategy and the range of benefits that the strategy will deliver when implemented.

Mr Attwood asked the Minister for Regional Development how much has been realised of the anticipated release of £20 million from the Belfast Harbour Commissioners.

(AQO 7025/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: To date 'Release of Value' Schemes totalling £41.5 million have received full planning approval, and are at various stages of development.

City Quays 1 a £10 million, 83,000 sq ft office accommodation project, was granted planning approval in September 2013. Following a competitive tendering process Heron Brothers Ltd, were appointed as the main contractor. Construction commenced in January 2014, with completion expected in early 2015. Belfast Harbour has had expressions of interest, mainly via Invest NI, in letting the accommodation and expects that it will be substantially let by early 2015.

City Quays 2 is a £20 million, 124,000 sq ft office accommodation. Planning Approval has been granted. The project design team has been appointed and the construction works are due to be competitively tendered in early 2015, with a view to construction commencing mid-2015 and ready for occupation in 2016.

Belfast Harbour Commission also funded the developed Concourse 2 at a cost of £5.5 million and this building is now fully occupied.

Concourse 3 is the £6 million, 55,000 sq ft Science Park. Planning Approval is already in place with tenancy terms agreed; a date for project commencement is directly linked to the conclusion of ongoing discussions between the Department of Finance and Personnel and HM Treasury regarding the Financial Transactions Capital scheme.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress has been made on the PEDU recommendations to move Rivers Agency into his Department and the establishment of a flood alert and forecast service.

(AQW 38043/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I remain firmly of the view that the consolidation of the flood response agencies within a single department, will improve our ability to respond to emergency situations, and thus improve the service we provide to the public. The Executive has deferred a final resolution on this as part of the wider review of post-2015 structures of government.

The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) is the lead Department for coordinating the response to the recommendations contained in the PEDU Report. DARD has advised that since the publication of the PEDU report, there have been significant developments in relation to flood warning and informing which are beneficial for Northern Ireland. Formal engagement between Rivers Agency and the Met Office now takes place to inform severe weather warnings. Water level alerts, where appropriate, are also being installed to be used by selected communities to improve the overall response to flooding. Community engagement in flood-prone areas is helping to inform property owners about flood risk and how to improve their resilience to flood events.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update from Roads Service on application (P/2013/0189/F) from St. Bronagh's GAA, including the expected timeframe.

(AQW 38103/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am familiar with this planning application, having attended meetings with local residents who are objecting to the proposed new GAA pitches at Drumsesk Road.

My Department's TransportNI (formerly known as Roads Service), in its capacity as a statutory consultee, was re-consulted by the Department of the Environment's Planning Division on 24 October 2014 regarding a proposed increase in parking provision and a reduction in the size of the clubhouse. These latest amendments are being considered by my officials and a response to the Department of the Environment's Planning Division will issue after this work has been completed.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38140/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Department of Finance and Personnel operates the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) Cycle to Work Scheme and staff from my Department are able to join the scheme at any time. The scheme does not extend to NDPBs for whom the NICS is not their employer. However the Department of Finance and Personnel, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 37514/11-15, how many Assembly Questions, relating to the passing loop provision on the Londonderry to Coleraine railway line, were tabled in the period between him being made aware of the increase in the estimated cost of phase 2 of this line, and his statement to the Assembly on Monday 3 November 2014.

(AQW 38274/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The question you refer to, AQW 37514/11-15, which I answered on 29 October 2014, is the only question tabled in relation to the provision of the passing loop on the Coleraine to Londonderry line during the period between when I was made aware of the estimated costs increase and 3 November 2014.

There were three questions received during the same period in relation to Phase 2 of the Coleraine to Londonderry rail scheme but none of these referred to passing loop provision.

I explained in detail during my statement to the Assembly on 3 November that the independent review commissioned by myself in relation to the Phase 2 project was received at the end of September and was then communicated to and discussed with Translink in early October. The results of the review were communicated to the Assembly at the earliest opportunity.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development when Translink's current contract with Lissan Coal Company is due to expire.

(AQW 38343/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The contract that Translink has with Lissan Coal Company is due to expire in March 2016.

Department for Social Development

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development when he expects construction to be completed following the award to Coleraine Rural Urban Network for a purpose built building in Coleraine town centre.

(AQW 36688/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): Coleraine Rural Urban Network project has been awarded funding from the Modernisation Fund Capital Programme for the development of a multi-purpose community hub in Coleraine Town Centre. The completion date for this project currently is estimated to be August 2015.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development what steps he has taken to ensure the continuation of neighbourhood renewal programmes beyond their current remit.

(AQW 36773/11-15)

Mr Storey: Under the Reform of Local Government my Department will confer powers and budgets to enable Councils to decide how best to take forward regeneration and community development in their areas. They will have to do that within the community planning process that identifies the long term objectives for improving social, economic and environmental well being of their communities.

My officials are working closely with the Councils to assist them in putting in place effective arrangements to meet the needs of their communities. My Department is in the final stages of evaluating the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy and officials are continuing to review all existing contracts. Councils will be provided with the outcome of these reviews to enable them to take informed decisions about the arrangements they wish to put in place.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development what consideration is given to the rights and needs of residents of housing developments when the Northern Ireland Housing Executive relocate tenants from one development to another due to anti-social behaviour.

(AQW 37082/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive is statutorily bound by the rules and regulations of the Common Selection Scheme when allocating properties. It must also comply with the provisions of the Data Protection and Freedom of Information regulations and therefore is not in a position to discuss any potential allocations with tenants in an area in which a property is to be allocated.

However, the Housing Executive acknowledges that every individual is entitled to live in peace within their neighbourhood and residents of housing developments are entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of their home. They advise that, as part of the General Conditions of Tenancy, all tenants are obliged to refrain from causing annoyance or nuisance to their neighbours. Where this is breached and anti-social behaviour occurs, the Housing Executive will take appropriate action involving the various statutory and non-statutory interventions at its disposal (e.g. mediation, court action etc.).

Should a tenant that has been re-housed have a previous history of anti-social behaviour and causes nuisance at a new address, past incidents will be used to strengthen court proceedings where applicable.

It is unlikely that the Housing Executive would condone the relocation of perpetrators of anti-social behaviour, except where the perpetrator has been subject to a threat and the Housing Executive has a duty of care to them or it becomes apparent the situation would be resolved by separating the two parties involved. It is also important to note that the Housing Executive has no power to transfer such tenants against their will.

It should also be noted that the Housing Executive's procedures for dealing with incidents of anti-social behaviour specify that in the context of re-housing, the Housing Executive will take full account of any anti-social behaviour carried out by the housing applicant or their household, to the extent that is legally permissible.

Where a tenant has engaged in anti-social behaviour they will be placed on a disqualification register which is checked on the receipt of an application for the allocation of a property. Should a perpetrator of anti-social behaviour recorded on the disqualification register apply for housing, they can only be removed from the register where the Housing Executive has a statutory duty to them under the homeless legislation. However, in such circumstances the Housing Executive will check their eligibility for re-housing and where an applicant has been involved in unacceptable behaviour, the Housing Executive has a statutory power to treat the applicant as ineligible for re-housing.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36460/11-15, whilst his predecessor reached a conclusion, whether he, with ongoing responsibility to ensure the affairs of his Department have been conducted properly, is satisfied that the matter has been dealt with in accordance with the recommendations of the Department of Finance and Personnel's fact-finding investigator.

(AQW 37253/11-15)

Mr Storey: As previously advised, this was a matter for my predecessor.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) how many people currently reside in social housing; (ii) how many people are currently on the housing waiting list; (iii) how many social houses are currently available; and (iv) how many social houses are currently being built in North Down.

(AQW 37406/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information is not available in the format requested as neither the Housing Executive nor Housing Associations collate data on the number of people residing in their properties.

However, in relation to (i) the Housing Executive has advised that at 31 March 2014* they had 2,649 properties and Housing Associations have reported that they have 1,436 properties respectively in their ownership in North Down. In relation to (ii) the Housing Executive advises that at 30 September 2014* there were 2,057 applicants on the waiting list for North Down of which 1,179 were in housing stress. In relation to (iii) the Housing Executive has advised that at 31 March 2014* there were 34 operational voids and Housing Associations have reported that they currently have 18 voids respectively in North Down.

Finally, in relation to (iv) the table below details the housing schemes currently on site in the North Down Parliamentary constituency at 15 October 2014: -

Scheme	No. of units	Scheme type
Bloomfield Road/South Circular Road, Bangor	37	New Build, General needs (Transfer scheme)
South Circular Road extension	4	New Build, General needs (Transfer scheme)
Bangor ESPs	4	Existing Satisfactory Purchase, General Needs
Total	45

* These are the most up to date figures available.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will introduce individual support pathways for people experiencing homelessness who apply to the Housing Executive.
(AQW 37418/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has in place a range of individual support pathways to both prevent homelessness and reduce the length of time people experience homelessness. The following measures focus on an individual's needs and provide solutions and pathways to address these needs:

- Through the Supporting People programme the Housing Executive funds a range of support providers to assist households who are experiencing homelessness or who are at risk of homelessness.
- A Housing Options approach was introduced to focus on the specific needs of individuals and features early preventative intervention and explores all possible housing options.
- A Private Rented Sector Access Scheme has been introduced to provide a viable accommodation alternative to anyone in housing need by allowing them access to affordable housing of a good standard in the private sector without the need for large upfront deposits.
- A Housing First service is being piloted to tackle serial homelessness amongst the most chronic and entrenched homeless population. The service provides individuals with wrap around support and other services in their own independent accommodation rather than in a room in a homeless hostel.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding his Department will provide to North Down and Ards District Council for Areas at Risk.
(AQW 37469/11-15)

Mr Storey: Funding of £36,000 has been allocated to the North Down and Ards Areas at Risk programme in the current financial year

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of people in hostel accommodation with addiction problems.
(AQW 37689/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the Homelessness Strategy 2012 - 17 the Housing Executive has recognised that increasing numbers of people presenting as homeless have complex needs which require intensive support. In relation to (i) and (ii) a local survey of homeless presenters in Londonderry indicates that around 517 (28%) have underlying needs related to mental health or addiction issues or a combination of both. Strategies are in place to ensure that those who present with these types of complex needs are referred to and provided with the necessary assistance to help them.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 33121/11-15, how this answer compares with the interpretation of the Commission on Disposals of Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 provided by Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Northern Ireland Office (Lord Lyell) in the HL Deb 22 April 1986 vol 473 cc1144-6 1144 when the then Minister introduced the legislation and stated "It (the Order) will bring to an end the current practice in Northern Ireland whereby on the grant of a lease or letting of land the landlord may oblige his tenant to pay for his (the landlord's) agent's professional services".

Mr Storey: My Department does not have any regulatory powers in relation to letting agents in Northern Ireland. My answer to AQW 37950/11-15 refers.

I am not in a position to give a view on the interpretation of the Commission on Disposal of Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 provided as the responsibility for this legislation falls to the Department of Finance & Personnel.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Social Development how many people are currently on the social housing waiting list in Lagan Valley.

(AQW 38012/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that at the 30 September 2014 there were 1,772 applicants on the waiting List for the Lagan Valley Parliamentary constituency, of which 932 were in housing stress.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the amount of funding initially allocated to Gingerbread NI in 2014/15; and (ii) whether this amount has been reduced due to budget pressures.

(AQW 38068/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- (i) My Department, through Neighbourhood Renewal, has allocated £42,573 to Gingerbread NI in Londonderry for the year 2014/15.
- (ii) This amount of funding has not been reduced due to budget pressures.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister for Social Development whether Craigowen Lodge in Seahill, Holywood is under the ownership of his Department or Hearth Housing Association.

(AQW 38071/11-15)

Mr Storey: Craigowen Lodge in Seahill is not in the ownership of the Department for Social Development. I understand the property remains in the ownership of the Department for Regional Development.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development how the transfer of £1.2m under Delivering Social Change for Nurture Units and Social Enterprise Units will be allocated.

(AQW 38107/11-15)

Mr Storey: The £1.2m transfer under Delivering Social Change has been allocated as follows:

- £300k for the Nurture Units and
- £900k for the Social Enterprise Units.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development how the 25,000 people who received letters to alert them to the importance of checking their benefit entitlements were selected.

(AQW 38161/11-15)

Mr Storey: The claimants to be contacted about their benefit entitlement were selected by matching a range of benefit data sets, available through the social security benefit payment systems, against filters to indicate low incomes and/or other additional factors, which would indicate potential entitlement to benefit.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the proposed Stock Transfer Scheme of Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties at Abbeyville Park, Newtownabbey.

(AQW 38372/11-15)

Mr Storey: As you will be aware a Review of the Stock Transfer Scheme was commissioned in February of this year to determine whether the programme in its current form is the best way to effectively deliver the desired outcomes.

The Review Group, having considered the issues in detail, has concluded that the current model will not deliver the announced programme and therefore a different approach is being proposed. The revised approach was endorsed by the NIHE Board and I have now also approved the proposals.

In broad terms, it is proposed that the programme is reconfigured into a smaller number of schemes with each scheme comprising larger bundles of properties based on locality.

I have written to the NIHE Chairman asking NIHE to begin work on developing revised Stock Transfer schemes as one element of a wider programme to improve and invest in NIHE properties. Once a revised programme is agreed the Housing Executive will write to all of the affected tenants to clarify if they are to remain in the programme and if so, the timescale for the transfer of properties.

Additionally, given the delays in the programme to date I have agreed to planned maintenance schemes being undertaken for the properties that had been included in the original Stock Transfer Programme on the understanding and expectation that any investment is reflected in the Tenanted Market Value in any future stock transfer to ensure the appropriate use of public money.

In the meantime the Housing Executive will continue to undertake normal response maintenance works where necessary.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Allister asked the Assembly Commission to detail the cost of providing refreshments for Assembly Committee meetings in each of the last two years.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Hussey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the recent decision notices by the Information Commissioner regarding the non-disclosure of information to the public by their Department.
(AQO 5995/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister received four decision notices in March. The first two notices concerned OFMDFM's risk registers and the Peace-building and Conflict Resolution Centre.

In each case, the Commissioner decided that OFMDFM engaged the appropriate exemptions but disagreed with our public interest test arguments.

Judging what is in the public interest is a difficult balancing exercise and opinions will vary. Given the Commissioner's remit, it is understandable in cases where the balance is fine that he should give precedence to arguments in favour of disclosure.

The other two notices concerned a series of information requests, derived from a list of unanswered Assembly Questions. The Commissioner's decision was that the exemption engaged was not appropriate, and that OFMDFM should disclose the information.

These cases were novel, even in UK terms. The series of requests we received concerned a wide variety of unconnected issues. And, as the only link between them was that they had been tabled as Assembly Questions, we could only conclude that freedom of information legislation was being used inappropriately to obtain information sought by MLAs. We do not believe that the Assembly's processes should be undermined in this way.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to quantify the total budget requested by successful group applicants who have yet to receive funding through the Victims and Survivors Service; and whether their Department has the necessary budget to honour these applications.
(AQW 34516/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The total budget requested by approved group applicants who have yet to receive funding through the Victims and Survivors Service is £469k.

The member will appreciate that available funding is finite. This year's group funding has been fully utilised.

OFMDFM successfully bid for £1.3m for victims in the October Monitoring round. Individual victims and those in greatest need remain a priority.

Efficiencies have been applied across the Department and to its Arms Length Bodies and the Victims and Survivors Service is working with individual groups to maintain front line services to victims.

Mrs Overend asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the timescale for the cross-departmental internet safety strategy to be brought to the Executive.
(AQW 36409/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In June 2014, agreement in principle was obtained from the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI) to develop an e-safety strategy and action plan.

In the near future, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety will submit a proposal, to commission the SBNI to take this work forward, to the Executive for approval.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the Executive is using local Social Enterprise Hubs, as part of the Accelerating Social Enterprise Signature Programme, to actively encourage business start-up within local communities.
(AQW 36611/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Accelerating Social Enterprise is part of the unique approach by the Executive to tackle poverty and social exclusion.

The Delivering Social Change framework represents a new level of joined-up working by Ministers and senior officials across Executive departments to drive through initiatives which have a genuine impact on the ground and helping to break the long term cycle of multi-generational poverty.

It is about creating a new culture and focus on cross-cutting work to achieve social benefits and through the Accelerating Social Enterprise Signature Programme, Social Enterprise Hubs are now operational across the nine Social Investment Fund zone areas. Programme delivery is designed to encourage local social entrepreneurs and enterprises to gain access to and make use of the Hubs.

Nine Delivery Agents have been appointed in each of the nine Social Investment Fund zone areas to deliver a range of business support services to new incubating social enterprises in local communities throughout Northern Ireland. Each Hub contract is being managed by a Hub manager and delivery team with the relevant expertise to develop social enterprises.

The Delivery Agents are working with various community organisations through a structured community engagement process. The Agents are also working with a stakeholder group to ensure that Hub delivery is covered across the entire Social Investment Fund zone area.

The Programme is also being promoted to potential clients across Northern Ireland through various launch and social enterprise events, web and social media and press coverage.

Mr Ramsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the creation of a further phase of funding under the Social Investment Fund.

(AQO 6746/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Funding has been allocated to 23 projects to date with a total commitment of £34.4 million.

There are a further 11 projects valued at £14.1 million at final stage approval subject to DFP approval and budgetary pressures.

A residual 22 projects are currently being reviewed as part of a comprehensive appraisal process. The outcome of this should be known shortly.

No decisions have been made on any potential further phases of SIF further to the current £80m fund.

Lord Morrow asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how much Social Investment funding is planned for distribution in the 2014/15 financial year.

(AQO 6748/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Funding has been allocated to 23 projects to date with a total commitment of £34.4 million.

Details of all projects prioritised within the funding allocation for each of the nine social investment fund zones are available on the OFMDFM website. Lead partners with letters of offer are currently working on profile plans to be submitted to the Department. When these are received we will have a more accurate picture of funding to be distilled in 2014/15 financial year.

Mr Ramsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the Disability Strategy will be finalised.

(AQO 6856/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive's Disability Strategy was finalised in early 2013 and was launched by Junior Ministers in February 2013.

A 2013/14 annual report on the delivery of the Disability Strategy will set out the actions that all departments have undertaken under the Strategy in its first year. We hope to publish the report in Autumn 2014.

Mr McElduff asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the issues which have emerged during the consultation on the Racial Equality Strategy.

(AQO 6857/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In the responses to the Racial Equality Strategy consultation that have been analysed so far one view that emerged time and again was the need to tackle race hate crimes.

We condemn all racist attacks. We are committed to tackling racism and all forms of intolerance and strongly encourage all victims to report any incident.

The 'Together: Building a United Community' Strategy, along with the new Racial Equality Strategy, will provide the framework for departments and others to tackle race hate crime.

Our officials recently convened a special sitting of the Good Relations Programme Board in which departments explored what immediate action can be taken to tackle race hate.

A range of actions are at an advanced state of preparation. These include resources that will show how much minority ethnic people contribute to our society and will challenge the dangerous myths that circulate.

We will continue to work with community leaders in the areas where attacks have been most prevalent.

In the interim work continues with our Executive colleagues and external stakeholders to raise awareness, challenge unacceptable behaviour and encourage reporting of all such incidents.

Mr Moutray asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what actions their Department has taken to tackle the increase in race hate crimes.

(AQO 6858/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In the responses to the Racial Equality Strategy consultation that have been analysed so far one view that emerged time and again was the need to tackle race hate crimes.

Mr F McCann asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on Community Family Support programme under the Delivering Social Change framework.

(AQO 6864/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Community Family Support Programme is part of the overall approach by the Executive to tackle poverty and social exclusion.

The Delivering Social Change framework represents a new level of joined-up working by Ministers and senior officials across Executive departments to drive through initiatives which have a genuine impact on the ground and helping to break the long term cycle of multi-generational poverty.

It is about creating a new culture and focus on cross-cutting work to achieve social benefits. The Community Family Support Programme is providing support to 720 families; encouraging them to make life changing decisions, enhancing their prospects and assist in becoming full participants in society. This follows an initial pilot of the Programme which focused on the needs of 44 families, delivered between January and June 2013.

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether work will be considered at the former Army Camp at Ballykelly to more permanently deal with the ongoing potential flooding issue which is costing a considerable sum on an annual basis to contain.

(AQW 38100/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We can confirm that work has been undertaken to reduce the risk of flooding on the site. This includes:

- regular maintenance of the four industrial pumps and the network of drainage channels that run through the site;
- purchasing a spare pump, which ensures continuity of service, should a pump fail; and
- installation of an early detection flood warning system.

In addition, a maintenance contract for regular servicing of the pumps to reduce unplanned maintenance costs is being introduced.

A soft market testing exercise was completed earlier this year and we are currently considering options for the future development of the site.

Mr Clarke asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) whether their Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and; (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38136/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness:

- (i) OFMDFM, along with all departments, operates the NICS Cycle to Work scheme.
- (ii) Staff may join the scheme at any time.

The NICS Cycle to work scheme is open to all civil servants. It does not extend to non-NICS staff working in non-departmental public bodies. However the Department of Finance and Personnel provides advice and guidance to non-departmental public bodies on the establishment and operation of similar Cycle to Work Schemes.

Mr McCallister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in their Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38150/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Public Sector Reform Division has not completed any efficiency related work for the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister.

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the proposed timescale for the creation of the Chinese Consulate in Belfast.

(AQW 38250/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The timescale for the establishment of a Chinese Consulate-General in Belfast is a matter for the Chinese Government.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) how many people their Department sponsored to attend the global summit to end sexual violence in conflict in London in June 2014; and (ii) who comprised the delegation, including those from the Training for Women Network.

(AQW 38329/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM acceded to a request for financial assistance that enabled 6 women to attend the Global Summit to End Sexual Violence in Conflict. The delegation included a representative from the Training for Women Network, Women's Aid, Footprints Women's Centre, Falls Women's Centre, Kilcooley Women's Centre, and Irish Street Youth and Community Association.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail (i) when they received a report from the former Victims' Commissioner on the issue of a pension for people severely disabled during the Troubles; (ii) why the report has not yet been published or made available to interested parties; and (iii) whether they will now publish the report.

(AQW 38423/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Proposals put forward by former Commissioner Stone in June 2014 are currently under consideration. Discussions are ongoing between Departmental officials and the Commission for Victims and Survivors regarding the details. The report will be published in due course.

Mr McNarry asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQT 1626/11-15, to outline the savings that could be made by a Civil Service voluntary redundancy scheme.

(AQO 6969/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Following the Executive's agreement on the draft 2015/16 Budget the Finance Minister has been asked to bring forward a range of proposals that would effect a paybill reduction including a voluntary exit scheme.

At this early stage it is not possible to outline precisely the savings that could be made.

It is important to stress that a voluntary exit scheme would only be one of a number of measures to be considered.

Work has begun on establishing the overall size of the pay bill reduction that needs to be delivered by the Civil Service and how this is to be achieved. An exercise has started that will help to secure the necessary information from departments to develop the range of proposals in more detail. The actual scale and scope of the required interventions will only be known once departmental budgets are agreed for 2015-16.

It is important to note that the figures quoted by the First Minister in his response to Topical Question 1626/11-15 related to reductions in public sector employment as a whole rather than the civil service.

Mr Clarke asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will continue to support the calls for cases, such as Kincora House, to be included in the United Kingdom historical child sexual abuse inquiry.

(AQO 6978/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are disappointed that the Home Secretary has decided not to include allegations of cover up by intelligence services and MI5 relating to abuse in Kincora boys' home in the Westminster independent inquiry panel into institutional failures in respect of child sexual abuse.

However, we have no doubt the Sir Anthony Hart is more than capable of carrying out such investigations as long as there is full co-operation from Westminster and all the evidence he requires is provided to him, given that he does not have the legal authority to compel evidence from Westminster departments and associated bodies.

It is too soon to be sure that the Inquiry will find itself able to deal satisfactorily with allegations of cover up by the Ministry of Defence or the Security Services, but we are heartened to note that consideration can be given at any time to bring it into the remit of the Westminster inquiry panel.

Mr Byrne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Victims and Survivors Service.
(AQO 6979/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We were pleased to be able to confirm recently that through October monitoring the Victims and Survivors Service will receive an additional £1.3 million funding this year. This will allow the Service to expand on the schemes already available to victims and survivors.

The Service will continue to proactively manage its budget to maintain frontline services. It will continue to prioritise the needs of individuals in order to protect those with the greatest needs.

The Service is also progressing its work with the Commission and our Department to improve the services it provides through the implementation of the recommendations from the independent assessment.

Ms P Bradley asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on their recent talks with the First Minister of Wales.
(AQO 6983/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We had a very constructive meeting with the First Minister of Wales on 22 October in Wales.

Discussions covered representation of devolved interests at JMC and at European Union level. We also discussed the devolution of fiscal powers which included exchanges on issues such as Corporation Tax, Air Passenger Duty, Landfill Tax, Aggregates Levy, bonds and borrowing and the continuing use of the Barnett formula.

Each administration has different devolved arrangements and powers so the focus for each administration will clearly be different in regard to adopting further fiscal powers. However there was a will to work together where administrations have common aims and to support each other when we have different areas of focus and interest.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the full cost benefit analysis regarding the proposed relocation of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development's Headquarters; and when it will be published.
(AQW 38384/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): I can advise that a significant amount of analysis has been completed by my Department in determining the location, and costs, to relocate my departmental headquarters to Ballykelly. The costs of the project, as identified in the business case have been shared with Ministers, including the Finance Minister.

On 26th June the Executive agreed to progress with the project and to provide the necessary funding based on the analysis provided. The costs will continue to be refined and scrutinised as we move through the various stages of the project.

The results of the public tender for the new building and the actual staff transition numbers will refine the final business case which is to be completed by November 2015.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in her Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.
(AQW 38558/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) have no employees, on either the Industrial or Non Industrial pay scales, which are paid below £7.20 per hour therefore all DARD staff are paid the proposed living wage of £7.20 per hour.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in her Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38594/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is a total of 4 staff employed in the DARD Equality and Internal Communications Unit, two of whom work on equality matters part-time. The annual cost of employing these staff is £115,551.48 which includes salary, National Insurance contributions and pension costs.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what steps her Department is taking to assist fisher men and women with a disability.

(AQW 38093/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Over the past three years my Department has provided enhanced facilities for disabled anglers at Public Angling Estate (PAE) fisheries across the North. This includes improved access for disabled anglers by providing dedicated car parking facilities and upgraded pathways. We have also provided sixteen purpose built disabled fishing stands during this period and we will continue to develop a minimum of two new stands each year. My Department is also looking at other ways to improve disabled facilities in partnership with local councils and community organisations.

A wide range of quality, game and coarse fishing is available to disabled anglers across the Public Angling Estate. Almost half of the current 63 waters within the PAE have dedicated disabled facilities, with some large waters, such as Lough Erne, having these at multiple sites. My Department also produces a dedicated disabled angling guide, which provides information on waters with disabled facilities and offers advice on distances and gradients to assist disabled anglers to assess the suitability of particular waters based on their mobility.

In addition, since 2011, I have provided over five thousand concessionary licenses and permits to eligible anglers with disabilities. My officials are also working in partnership with organisations such as Extern, Action Mental Health, Disability Action NI and Erne Disabled Anglers to promote awareness of the value of the sport and in supporting initiatives to encourage greater participation, including organising special angling events and the donations of seized fishing equipment.

My Department also exhibited at this year's Disability Action Show in Belfast and we have regularly featured angling in the media to promote the value of the sport to those with disabilities.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support her Department provides to the Ulster Angling Federation.

(AQW 38097/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster Angling Federation (UAF) is the representative body for game angling clubs in the North. It is one of the recognised stakeholder groups consulted by my Department on angling policy development and legislative changes.

The UAF is also represented on the Salmon and Inland Fisheries Forum (SIFF), which is my Department's consultative forum for the range of inland fishery interests across the North.

SportNI, an Arms Length Body under the remit of my Department, undertook a Strategic Review of Angling and the UAF was represented on the project Steering Group. The UAF has received funding of £4,900 towards angling training as part of the recommendations identified in the Strategy. Sport NI also provides practical advice and financial support to UAF on a range of angling related development programmes.

Sport NI has recently approved the investment of up to £190,000 in the UAF through its 'Active Clubs' programme. Included in this amount is funding for the provision of an angling development officer to work on behalf of the UAF, the Ulster Coarse Fishing Federation and other angling representative bodies to develop the sport.

SportNI is also planning a series of capacity building engagements with National Governing Bodies, including the UAF.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) how many staff have been seconded to her Department from the Strategic Investment Board (SIB); (ii) to detail the full cost of this secondment to her Department, including salary and overheads; and (iii) to outline the projects delivered in the past year by seconded SIB staff.

(AQW 38135/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has an Operational Partnership Agreement (OPA) with SIB. The OPA recognises the need for SIB and DCAL to work closely to achieve the delivery of better public services and improved infrastructure whilst demonstrating Best Value for Money.

- (i) Four individuals have been engaged by DCAL using this mechanism
- (ii) The cost to DCAL, up to 31 October 2014, is £243,453.76.
- (iii) The projects delivered in the past year include;

- Work on the Stadium projects at Ravenhill, Windsor Park and Casement Park;
- Work on the new Sub-Regional Stadium Programme;
- The management of the 2013 World Police and Fire Games Legacy Activity Programme.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support her Department offers aspiring writers in getting their work published.

(AQW 38146/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council provides grants to aspiring writers through a variety of schemes within the Support for Individual Artists Programme. Through this programme writers may apply for financial support including assistance with travel and research. In addition, funding is made available for publishers towards the commissioning, production and marketing of literary publications.

The Support for the Individual Artist Programme which includes the following schemes, opens twice a year and is due to re-open in February/March 2015.

General Art Awards

Awards of up to £1,500 are available. Writers can apply to “buy time” to complete work or research projects.

Major Individual Award

A £15,000 award is made available for established artists with national or international recognition to develop extended or ambitious work.

Self-arranged Residencies

These awards (up to £5,000 in value) enable individual artists, including writers, to avail of residencies outside the north of Ireland.

Artist Career Enhancement Scheme (ACES)

The ACES scheme makes awards of £5,000 available for artists' development purposes with a targeted package of training, mentoring and support provided for successful applicants.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure under which criteria was the £2.5m earmarked for sports provision in Dungiven granted.

(AQW 38160/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Funding from my Department for sports provision in Dungiven has not yet been granted.

I can advise that my Department has received a proposal from Limavady Borough Council to develop sports facilities in Dungiven and that Sport NI, an arm's length body of my Department, has been in contact with the Council and is currently reviewing the business case.

I have given my support to the development of the sporting facilities in Dungiven as the proposals fit with my Department's commitment to provide a legacy in the North West from the 2013 City of Culture. The proposals also fit with my Department's priorities to promote social and economic equality, tackle poverty and social exclusion and the promotion of sustainable and social interventions in deprived areas.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37400/11-15, for an update on the investigation.
(AQW 38164/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department commissioned a report from the Agri-Food & Biosciences Institute (AFBI) to investigate the recent fish kill incident at Portna on the Lower Bann.

My officials are currently considering the report to establish the full circumstances relating to the incident.

I will publish the report when my Department has concluded its consideration of the issues.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, how the Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee assess whether, and to what extent, a proposal contributes to the status and promotion of the Irish language.

(AQW 38229/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The committee assesses whether the application will meet the minimum language requirement, which is 70% of the spoken word. Other factors which may be taken into account include whether the subject matter pertains to the history, development or promotion of the Irish language and to what degree.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, how the Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee assess the quality of a proposal; and what factors they take into account.

(AQW 38230/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is not possible to be prescriptive in answering this question. The quality of the proposal can be assessed in several ways including for example: the quality of the written application; the feasibility of the project and the perceived quality of the end product. Factors taken into account can include: the suitability of the proposed contributors and presenters; the appropriateness of the language levels and the experience and competency of the production team.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, how the Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee assess the audience appeal of a proposal; and what factors they take into account in so doing.

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is not possible to be prescriptive in answering this question. Broadly, in considering the audience appeal of a proposal, assessors consider the content from the perspective of beginner learners and/or more fluent Irish speakers. Assessments also consider the educational, informative and entertainment aspects of the content in the context of its appeal to wider audiences or target audiences in terms of, for example, age.

The Irish Language Broadcast Fund undertakes research with the viewing public and works alongside broadcasters in terms of monitoring audience appeal and viewing figures to further inform decisions.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, how the Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee assess value for money aspects of a proposal; and what factors they take into account.

(AQW 38232/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Budgets for each application are assessed by NI Screen's Head of Finance and the Irish Language Broadcast Fund to ensure that they are in line with industry tariffs. Different genres require different tariffs, for example drama is more expensive than reversioned animation or straightforward documentaries. Factors taken into account include the need to balance awards made amongst the different genres to ensure that the audiences for the different genres can be catered for within the resources available.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, (i) to explain the meaning of maximising audience aspects; (ii) how the Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee assess maximising audience aspects; and (iii) what factors they take into account in so doing.

(AQW 38269/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Maximising audience aspects refers not only to maximising actual audience numbers for the funded content but, within this, also seeking to diversify audience types to ensure the content has a broad appeal where appropriate.

The Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee can take the following factors into account in assessing the potential audience reach of the proposed content: whether the content has a broadcaster attached; whether the proposed slot will allow for maximum audience access; and how the content will be marketed to ensure maximum audience awareness.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, (i) to explain what is meant by additionality aspects and how these relate to, or differ from, value for money aspects; (ii) how the Irish Language Broadcast Fund committee assess additionality aspects; and (iii) what factors they take into account in so doing.

(AQW 38271/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Additionality refers to whether the proposed content is new and additional to existing content already available to viewers. In terms of value for money, additionality would be taken into account in assessing whether the proposed content is over and above programming that the broadcasting organisation might otherwise have produced itself.

In assessing additionality aspects, the committee can take the following factors into account: the number of hours of Irish language programming previously transmitted by the broadcaster; whether the proposed content is new and additional to previously funded content; and whether the proposed content is similar to previously funded or currently broadcast content by the proposed broadcaster.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, to explain what is meant by 'the Irish language independent production sector in the North of Ireland'.

(AQW 38272/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Irish language independent production sector refers to the Irish speaking production companies & Irish speaking personnel working on Irish language content within the independent screen production sector in the north of Ireland.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15 and 37281/11-15, (i) why the criteria for the Irish Language Broadcast Fund refer to 'additionality aspects'; (ii) why the criteria for the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund refer to 'additionality aspects and match funding arrangements'; and (iii) to explain why these are different. (AQW 38273/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Pursuant to AQW 37820/11-15 and 37821/11-15, I can clarify that additionality aspects and match funding arrangements form part of the assessment criteria for both Irish Language and Ulster-Scots Broadcast funds. Both funds have the same requirements in respect of additionality and match funding arrangements.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when she expects the hoist for anglers with a disability on Lower Lough Erne to be reinstated and operational. (AQW 38317/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is envisaged that the disabled hoist facility at Garvary on Lower Lough Erne will be fully operational by the start of the 2015 angling season.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) whether her Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies. (AQW 38325/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

- (i) Yes my Department operates a Cycle to work scheme, all NICS Departments are participants in the NICS Cycle to work scheme.
- (ii) Yes the scheme is open all year round and staff can join it at any time.
- (iii) The scheme is a NICS Cycle to Work Scheme and therefore does not extend to NDPBs for whom the NICS is not their employer. However DFP, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15 and 37281/11-15, to detail (i) why the criteria for the Irish Language Broadcast Fund (ILBF) refers to 'the growth and development of the Irish language independent production sector in the North of Ireland', whereas the criteria for the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund (USBF) refers to 'the growth and development of the Ulster-Scots independent production sector and infrastructure'; (ii) why the ILBF criteria are geographically specific, whereas the USBF criteria are not; and (iii) why the USBF criteria refers to 'infrastructure', whereas the ILBF criteria do not and what is meant by 'infrastructure' in this context. (AQW 38337/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

- (i) There is an Irish language independent production sector in the south of Ireland making it necessary to specify that it is the Irish language production sector in the north of Ireland which is the strategic interest for the Irish Language Broadcast Fund (ILBF). Since the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund (USBF) is also only strategically interested in the development of the sector in the north of Ireland that clarification is unnecessary.
- (ii) In practice, both funds are geographically specific with regard to the sector and infrastructure.
- (iii) While there may be differences in wording across the various documents relating to the funds, there is no difference in the definition of infrastructure for the ISBF and USBF. Infrastructure is defined as expertise and resources other than the production companies themselves which are important to the production of television programmes.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, whether any production companies from outside Northern Ireland have received support from the Irish Language Broadcast Fund. (AQW 38338/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Production companies from outside of the north of Ireland have received support from the Irish Language Broadcast Fund, but only as a co-production partner with a production company from the north of Ireland.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37280/11-15, what weighting is given to each of the eight criteria in assessing an application to the Irish Language Broadcast Fund. (AQW 38339/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: No specific weighting is afforded to the eight criteria. Assessment is based on an objective analysis of how an application meets the criteria which are made known to potential applicants in advance.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the number of film production companies in 'the Irish language independent production sector' in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 38340/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have not made an assessment of the number of film production companies in the Irish language independent production sector in the North of Ireland.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much money has been contributed by the Arts in East Antrim, including the amount for the Special Educational Needs and Disability sector, in each of the last five years,

(AQW 38350/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL funding for the Arts is disbursed by the Arts Council NI and NI Screen. The amount of money contributed by them in respect of Arts in East Antrim in each of the last five years is as follows;

Year	Amount
2010/11	15,398
2011/12	19,649
2012/13	41,366
2013/14	71,598
2014/15	30,119

These figures include the amount for the Special Educational Needs and Disability sector.

Please note that DCAL also provides funding to East Antrim through the Community Festivals Fund (CFF) which is administered by the local councils. The total CFF funding from DCAL in each of the last five years to the East Antrim area is detailed below. A number of the festivals funded will have included an arts element.

Year	Amount
2010/11	35,414
2011/12	32,737
2012/13	30,744
2013/14	29,594
2014/15	32,800

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department is working with relevant stakeholders in East Londonderry to advance the aim of developing the North West as a hub for the creative industries and social innovation.

(AQW 38379/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Building on the successful delivery of the 2013 City of Culture year, I am committed to the development of the North West as a regional driver for creativity and innovation.

My officials are continuing to engage with stakeholders across the North West, including a number in Coleraine and Limavady.

As well as supporting a number of projects through the Creative Industries Innovation Fund in these areas, my Department has also supported the Stendhal Festival in Limavady, to assist the organisers with the delivery of the festival.

I secured additional resource and capital funding through the October monitoring round and some of this funding will be allocated to projects within your constituency. Details of the projects which will receive funding are still being finalised and I will be making further announcements in due course.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how Sport Northern Ireland, as an arm's-length body of her Department, are encouraging grass roots soccer programmes to operate on a cross-community basis and demonstrate an active commitment to equality.

(AQW 38380/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI supports governing bodies, including the Irish Football Association, to work towards achieving a required level of the Equality Standard for Sport. Sport NI has encouraged grass roots soccer programmes to operate on a cross-community basis and demonstrate an active commitment to equality as follows:

- Sport NI was instrumental in the creation and support of the Irish Football Association's 'Football For All' advisory panel whose aim is to ensure football in the north of Ireland promotes both equality of opportunity for all persons and good community relations.

- Sport NI's Active Communities programme employs 116 (Full Time Equivalent) coaches across the north of Ireland to encourage participation in sport and physical activity. The coaches deliver soccer programmes at a community level, many of which have a cross community aspect.
- During 2011/12, Sport NI provided funding of £6,596 to the NI Women's Football Association under the Awards for Sport programme. This project increased grass roots soccer participation amongst girls aged 5-11 years of age, with 409 females benefitting from the project. The investment supported cross-community engagement amongst the clubs who benefitted from the funding.
- Since 2013, Sport NI has invested £330,000 in Midnight Street Soccer which is a community football project that involves late night football leagues at nine community facilities for young people aged 14 to 17 years and provides an opportunity for many young people from diverse backgrounds to come together through sport. The project also aims to make young people more aware of pertinent social issues that affect them and their communities and includes good community relations training as part of the programme.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she or departmental officials met the Chief Executive of Limavady Council to discuss progress for the Dungiven sports and community facilities project; and when her Department expects to receive a final draft business case for the project.

(AQW 38381/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I can confirm that officials from my Department and I met with Liam Flanagan, Chief Executive of Limavady Council on 12 March 2014 and again on 13 October 2014 to discuss the development of sports and community facilities in Dungiven.

Furthermore, I can advise that Sport NI, an arm's length body of my Department, has been in contact with the Council and is currently reviewing the business case for the project.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how the withdrawal of funding from the tourism events fund will impact sports competitions in the North West, specifically the Foyle Cup and Milk Cup youth football tournaments and the North West 200.

(AQW 38382/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for providing funding for events including the Foyle Cup, Milk Cup and North West 200, lies in the first instance with the Department for Enterprise, Trade and Investment.

The withdrawal of the funding from the tourism events fund has the potential to have a negative impact on the above competitions as well as having an impact on other events that bring visitors and participants to the north of Ireland.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what communication her Department, or associated arm's-length bodies, have received from Coleraine Football Club Academy requesting financial assistance for grass roots soccer programmes; and to outline the nature of the responses provided.

(AQW 38383/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: In March 2014, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, received a request for funding through Active Awards for Sport (Round 1) from Coleraine Football Club to support the running costs associated with the Mini Soccer Academy. Sport NI advised Coleraine Football Club that the application scored below the Quality Threshold for the programme and thus failed to secure funding.

Coleraine Football Club has recently submitted an application to Active Awards for Sport (Round 2) which closed on 20 October 2014 for the Mini Soccer Academy. I understand this was towards facility hire, coach education and advertising associated with a proposed project to increase participation in football by increasing the activities it offers to children and young people. Sport NI has advised that responses will be provided to all applicants in December 2014, when they will be notified whether their applications to the programmes have been successful.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline her Department's proposals for the current and future functioning of libraries in North Belfast.

(AQW 38606/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: As a result of the need to make in-year budget reductions, Libraries NI is currently implementing a number of savings measures which may impact on the current and future functioning of libraries in North Belfast. These include releasing agency staff who covered staff vacancies, maternity leave, secondments, special projects, annual leave and sickness. In addition, all libraries in the North of Ireland, including those in North Belfast, may be affected by a reduction in expenditure on new stock. Some smaller branches may also be subject to temporary ad hoc closures.

With effect from 3rd November 2014, Libraries NI has also changed or reduced the weekly opening hours, for the time being, of four libraries in North Belfast (ie Belfast Central, Cloughfern, Glengormley and Rathcoole). Weekly opening hours remain unchanged at three other libraries in the area (ie Ardoyne, Chichester and Grove). Details of the changes to weekly opening hours announced by Libraries NI for each library in North Belfast are set out in the Annex attached.

Mr McCausland asked Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 232/07, whether Foras na Gaeilge posts an English language translation of its minutes on its website.

(AQW 38648/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Foras na Gaeilge publishes full minutes of Board Meetings in Irish on its website. It also publishes decisions taken at Board Meetings in English.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) why the minutes of the meetings of the Interdepartmental Charter Implementation Group for 31 January 2013 and 21 November 2013 have not been posted on the departmental website; and (ii) whether she will ensure that they are placed on the website as soon as possible.

(AQW 38784/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Minutes of the Interdepartmental Charter Implementation Group for 31 January 2013 and 21 November 2013 were not posted on the Departmental website due to an administrative error.

The Minutes of both meetings have now been posted on the Departmental website.

Department of Education

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education when training for teachers in Special Educational Needs was last reviewed; and what changes in provision have been implemented as a result.

(AQW 38073/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Following the review of Special Educational Needs (SEN) and Inclusion, I have provided funding for a number of important capacity-building initiatives to support the proposals under that Review. These include: a SEN course at Masters level focused on support for children with literacy difficulties; an Early Years Pilot in Department of Education-funded statutory and non-statutory early years settings; and an Educational Assessment Pilot in almost 300 primary and post-primary settings.

A comprehensive SEN Resource File and leadership and management training for SEN Coordinators (SENCOs), has been made available to all grant-aided schools. Funding has also been made available for a one-day training course in leadership and management of classroom assistants, which will be offered to all SENCOs and delivered by board staff in this school year. As an extension to the SEN Resource File, Early Years Handbooks have been developed for staff in all funded pre-school settings.

My Department also funded joint working on SEN between the University of Ulster and Queens University to extend the SEN content of the PGCE. A pilot reading module was developed as part of the PGCE programme for student teachers to allow them to address literacy issues in post primary, and in particular, with pupils who have SEN. This module was mainstreamed in the 2013/14 academic year.

My Department is represented by a member of the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) in the European Agency for special needs and inclusion and currently participating in a European wide project on raising standards for all learners. Previously the ETI has participated in related projects including early years, ICT, SEN statistics across Europe and teacher education which combine to contribute to the raising of standards through policy information and development in special needs education.

In addition, officials are currently working on a revised strategy for teacher education. This will provide an overarching and coherent framework for teacher education and continuing professional development to strengthen the professionalism and expertise of teachers in all areas.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education for a breakdown of the amount spent on the Lisanelly campus in each financial year since 2010/11; and what the projected spend is for (i) 2014/15; and (ii) 2015/16.

(AQW 38180/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The amount spent on the Lisanelly campus from 2010/11 and projected to 2015/16 is as follows:

Financial Year	£000's
2010-11	1,335
2011-12	1,186
2012-13	541
2013-14	816
2014-15	4,956
2015-16	11,678

The 2014/15 forecast expenditure will be reviewed in the January Monitoring Round.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education for an update on proposals to amalgamate Listress, Craigbrack and Mullabuoy Primary Schools.

(AQW 38251/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my January 2013 statement to the Assembly on the Major Capital Investment Programme, I identified the amalgamation of Listress, Craigbrack and Mullabuoy Primary Schools' as one of 22 projects to be taken forward in planning.

The current position of this project is a Development Proposal for the amalgamation of the three schools was approved in August 2014. The Council for Catholic Maintained schools (CCMS) has commenced work on the feasibility study for the new build and are working closely with my Department.

Once the feasibility study has been completed, a supporting Business Case will be prepared by the Department prior to the appointment of a multi-disciplinary design team to take forward the detailed design of the new school.

I cannot offer a definitive timescale for the commencement of construction works until the feasibility work is complete and a design team is in place. However it is unlikely to commence on site before the last quarter of the 2015/2016 financial year.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the proposed social clauses that are under consideration for inclusion in the Lisanelly Shared Educational Campus scheme; and (ii) whether his Department will consider including the payment of a living wage to all construction workers on the site as part of the social clauses.

(AQW 38318/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In line with Executive policy, significant and locally targeted social clauses will be used in all contracts let under the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus Programme (LSEC) to ensure maximum return on the Executive's investment.

The tender documentation for the first Phase of the Programme (Arvalee School and Resource Centre) which recently issued on 31 October includes tailored social clauses. Key elements include:

- Social clause delivery, in terms of employment and training opportunities, targeted towards those sectors of society where there is inequality and greatest objective need;
- Expectations that all contractors engaged in the delivery of Arvalee School seek to achieve accreditation under the Living Wage Foundation;

- Local community engagement and a localised 'Meet the Buyer' for full supply chain opportunities.

Work is continuing to prepare the site and develop the overall campus design. Future procurements will build on the approach taken for Arvalee School and social clauses will continue to be developed to ensure significant social return on the investment in the LSEC.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the costs associated with the Middletown Centre for Autism; and (ii) the number of people trained by the centre, in the current budgetary period.

(AQW 38347/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Chief Executive of the Middletown Centre for Autism (MCA) has advised that the costs associated with MCA, as documented in their 2013/14 annual accounts, were £1,489,582.

In the same period the number of people trained by MCA was 14,762.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to outline his guidance on how he expects his Department to approach decisions with regard to his Department's duty under Article 64 of the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989.[R]

(AQW 38360/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am committed to ensuring that my Department continues to have a rigorous approach to its statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education when making decisions.

As I explained in my answer to AQW 33963/11-15, the recent Drumragh court judgement provided clarity as to whom the Article 64 (1) duty of the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989 is owed. I have already instructed my officials to ensure that the application of the duty placed on the Department to encourage and facilitate integrated education takes account of that clarity.

Additional guidance has now been provided to all senior staff within the Department via internal workshops that have presented an opportunity to make clear my expectations that the statutory duties to encourage and facilitate both integrated and Irish-medium education are discharged fully, positively and proactively and to explain the implications of both statutory duties, including in the context of the Drumragh Judgement. The use of the workshop approach has proved a very effective means of communication and this approach will be rolled out to other relevant staff in the months ahead.

At the same time, I have been considering what additional guidance is needed for the executive non-departmental bodies which are accountable to my Department and which must play their part in supporting us in discharging these important duties. I expect to see much greater prominence given by our non-departmental public bodies to supporting the Department in encouraging and facilitating both integrated and Irish-medium education and I shall be signalling this to the appropriate bodies, including the new Education Authority, as we move forward into a new business planning period.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail how the role of the new Education Authority will differ from the work completed by each Education and Library Board.[R]

(AQW 38362/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education Authority will carry out all of the duties, roles and responsibilities of the education and library boards, with the exception that the Assembly has placed additional duties on the Authority to encourage, facilitate and promote shared education and the community use of school premises.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Education for his Department's assessment of the extent and current level of support available to pupils who are deaf or suffering hearing loss and attend post-primary schools in the Western Education and Library Board.

(AQW 38387/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Western Education and Library Board provides a very comprehensive level of support for pupils with a hearing loss in post-primary schools across the Board area.

A Service for Children and Young People with a Hearing Impairment is available from diagnosis to school leaving age and is available to pupils, their families and staff in early years, nursery, primary and post-primary school settings.

Support provided in post-primary settings includes:

1. Whole school training

Training is offered to all school staff to advise them of the nature of the individual pupil's hearing loss and impact on their learning, and to inform staff of ways in which they can address the pupil's needs within the school setting to enable the young person to access the curriculum at an appropriate pace and level, ultimately achieving his/her full potential.

2. Advisory support

Advisory support is available on an agreed frequency to relevant school staff including specific advice regarding:

- the pupil's hearing loss and the implications on learning;
- maintenance of hearing aids and associated equipment;
- management of the pupil within the classroom;

- strategies for developing the pupil's attention and listening skills;
- strategies for maximizing linguistic opportunity;
- strategies for improving memory skills;
- strategies to assist the pupil access the curriculum;
- strategies to develop social skills and self-esteem.

The frequency of advisory support is dependent on a number of factors including:

- type and level of the pupils hearing loss;
- amplification systems used;
- communication skills;
- educational progress;
- personal & social development.

The level of support is reviewed on a termly basis to ensure that the needs of the pupils are addressed appropriately.

The Service has also produced a post-primary booklet containing further detail on all of the above areas and is available to all post-primary schools within the Board area with pupils who have a hearing loss.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the voting membership vacancies currently within each controlled integrated school Board of Governors.

(AQW 38391/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The following information is provided in relation to controlled integrated schools:

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 36855/11-15, to detail the organisations and number of posts impacted by the current Education and Skills Authority Implementation Team staffing arrangements.

(AQW 38392/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Nine staff members are currently seconded from across six education organisations; BELB, NEELB, SEELB, WELB, CCEA and CCMS.

My Department does not hold specific information on the number of posts within their organisations that are impacted by these arrangements.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the school closures in each Education and Library Board in each of the last 5 years; and to outline the financial situation in each school at the time of closure.

(AQW 38393/11-15)

Special Schools are not funded through Local Management of Schools arrangements and do not, therefore, have a budget position on closure. Five special schools have closed (including two amalgamations) within the past five years, in the WELB area, as outlined below:

DE Ref No.	Special School	Date of Closure
231-0015	Belmont Special School	31/08/2014
231-6525	Foyle View Special School	31/08/2014

231-6235	Erne School	31/08/2012
231-0029	Altnagelvin Special School and Tuition Service	30/09/2012

Notes:

1. The definition of a "closed school" is one with an approved development proposal to discontinue in line with Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986. This includes those which have closed to facilitate an amalgamation;
2. Closing surplus/deficit data have been supplied by the relevant Education and Library Board (ELB);
3. Surplus/deficit data are currently only available up to the end of the 2013/14 financial year.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of how many children are not educated in a school environment.

(AQW 38394/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The best place for children and young people to be educated is in school. It is recognised, however, that for some young people a school placement cannot be sustained and education outside the school environment may be necessary to meet their educational and other needs.

This is known as 'Education Otherwise Than At School' (EOTAS) and legal responsibility for this rests with the Education and Library Board (ELB) in which the young person resides. EOTAS encompasses a broad range of ELB funded interventions, allowing for a flexible response based on the assessed needs of the individual young person. While normally delivered in a group setting within specialist centres, EOTAS can include ELB provided tuition services delivering one-to-one teaching, in a home or other setting.

Each year, my Department collects statistics on the number of pupils in EOTAS provision. Data is currently held to 2013. Figures for 2014 are in the process of being collated but are not yet available. The available figures, broken down by board area are in the table below:

Date	BELB	WELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	Total
October 2009	225	155	179	161	146	866
October 2010	236	129	190	128	143	826
October 2011	172	87	192	125	111	687
October 2012	141	103	159	65	116	584
October 2013	164	90	64	134	106	558

* Figures are collated for the first week of October each year and include pupils in any form of ELB delivered EOTAS provision. They do not include children receiving Elective Home Education (EHE).

Under existing legislation a parent may educate his/her child at home. I understand that the ELBs are aware of 254 children who are being home educated. I would note, however, that this is likely to be an under-estimation of the overall figure as the ELBs may not be aware of those children who are currently being home educated if they have not previously been registered at school or brought to the attention of the ELB by any other individual or agency.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how will the new Education Authority and controlled body reflect his Department's need to be 'alive to Article 64 duty at all levels, including the strategic level'. [R]

(AQW 38417/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The new Education Authority will be accountable to, and operate within the strategic framework set by, the Department. This will include assisting the Department, as appropriate, in discharging its statutory duty to integrated education. In addition, the Department will hold the Authority to account through the Management Statement/Financial Memorandum (MSFM), as it does with the existing five Education and Library Boards.

The controlled sector body, when established, will be expected to assist the Department (appropriate to the body's own role) in discharging its duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education how he is currently engaging with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in relation to achieving adequate and timely diagnosis of autism in children within the primary education setting.

(AQW 38447/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I acknowledge the importance of close collaboration between the Education and Health sectors in supporting pupils with special educational needs (SEN), including autism.

While the responsibility for adequate and timely diagnosis of autism in children rests with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS), addressing the individual SEN of a child with autism is not dependent upon receipt of a diagnosis. The identification, assessment and provision for children with SEN, including those with autism, will be addressed in line with the procedures outlined in the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs.

My Department will continue to cooperate with DHSSPS and other Departments, to support those pupils diagnosed with autism.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Education what procedures are in place to ensure the proper referral and diagnosis of primary school children with autism, in order to receive any additional help and support that they require.
(AQW 38449/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The responsibility for diagnosis of children with autism rests with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. Addressing the individual special educational needs (SEN) of a child with autism is not, however, dependent upon receipt of a diagnosis. The identification, assessment and provision for children with SEN, including those with autism, will be addressed in line with procedures outlined in the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the (i) parent groups; and (ii) parent organisations which have made representations in relation to formal consultations by his Department, in the last five years.
(AQW 38557/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The details of the parents groups and parent organisation which have made representations to formal consultations by the Department of Education are detailed in the table below.

Year	Consultation	Parents Groups / Parent Organisations
2009	Draft Food in Schools Policy	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ Academy Primary School, Saintfield Parent Teacher Association</li> <li>■ Ballymagee Primary School, Bangor Parents</li> <li>■ Hazelwood Integrated Primary School Parent Teacher Association</li> <li>■ St Joseph's Boys' High School, Newry Parents' Association</li> <li>■ Whitehouse Primary School, Newtownabbey Parent Teacher Association</li> </ul>
2010	Draft Early Years (0-6) Strategy	Parents Advice Centre
2012	Learning to Learn – A Framework for Early Years Education and Learning	Parents Out Loud Parenting NI

The Department has also commissioned parent organisations to carryout consultations with parents on its behalf. The details of these consultations are provided in the table below.

Year	Consultation	Parent Organisations
2009	Preparation of a leaflet for parents advising on the post-primary transfer process	Parenting Forum
2013	Review of the Common Funding Scheme	Parenting NI
2013	Fundamental Review of GCSEs and A Levels	Parenting Forum

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.
(AQW 38560/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: No Department of Education employee is paid below £7.20 per hour.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education to detail the change in the estimated numbers of primary school age children who have been home schooled between 2003 and 2013.
(AQW 38567/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that the number of primary school age children educated at home of whom they are aware for 2003 and 2013 are as follows:

YEAR	BELB	SELB	NEELB	WELB	SEELB	Total*
2003	4	58	29	5	1	97
2013	11	21	38	13	20	103

* The data reflects the position at October of each year.

This is likely to be an under-estimation of the overall figures as the ELBs may not be aware of those children being electively home educated if they had not previously been registered at school or brought to the attention of the ELB by any other individual or agency.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many pupils in North Down currently have a school bus pass.
(AQW 38622/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education and Library Board has informed me that 980 pupils in the North Down area, comprising post codes (i) BT18, 164 pupils; (ii) BT19, 520 pupils; (iii) BT20, 228 pupils; and (iv) BT23, 68 pupils have a sessional ticket ('bus pass') for the current school year.

The sessional ticket is not a 'smart card' system that records when the ticket was used. Information on ticket usage is therefore not available.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education for an update on the timetable for the amalgamation of the two maintained primary schools in Glenravel.
(AQW 38628/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In my January 2013 statement to the Assembly on the Major Capital Investment Programme I identified the amalgamation of Glenravel Primary School and St Mary's Primary School as one of 22 projects to be taken forward in planning. A Development Proposal for the amalgamation of these schools was approved in February 2014.

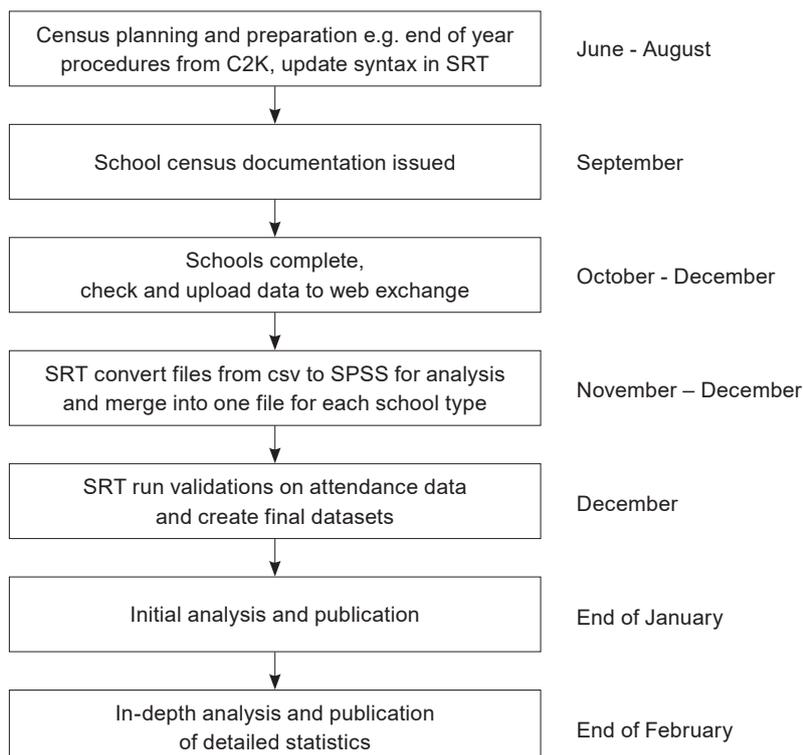

The Project Manager has commenced work on the feasibility study for the new build and is working closely with my Department. The feasibility study and supporting business case will be prepared and a design team appointed to take forward the detailed design of the new school.

It is currently anticipated that the design will commence in early 2015 with construction works starting in late 2015.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 38044/11-15, given that school attendance is recorded electronically, why it takes a further ten months to provide a breakdown of levels of absenteeism by ward.[R]
(AQW 38651/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Attendance data are collected via the annual School Census, which is conducted on the Friday of the first full week of October each year. This means that attendance data for the school year 2013/14 were collected via the 2014/2015 school Census (10 October 2014). Due to the nature of the Census exercise, it is often the end of November before all Census returns have been made. The following few weeks are taken up by validation of the data and creation of the final datasets.

Publication of initial analysis occurs at the end of January, while publication of detailed statistics occurs at the end of February. Both of these publications are National Statistics, and as such are subject to the Code of Practise for Official Statistics – it is not possible to provide any statistical breakdown of the attendance data until these reports have been published. Therefore a breakdown of absenteeism by ward for school year 2013/14 is not possible until March 2015 at the earliest. See below processes and timescales:

Notes on table:

- The original (First) survey of buildings ended in 1994. It was then decided to bring the earliest records up to the standard of the later records and to confirm that all the buildings on the list were of special architectural interest. This is known as the Second Survey and, where appropriate, the outcome of this more recent survey, together with the survey date, is also recorded in the table.
- Where there are two separate listings for the same site in the "Northern Ireland Buildings Database", these are identified by (a) and (b) inserts in the above table.
- The listings are described as follows:

Grade A: Special buildings of national importance including both outstanding grand buildings and the fine, little altered examples of some important style or date.

Grade B+: Special buildings that might have merited A status but for relatively minor detracting features such as impurities of design, or lower quality additions or alterations. Also buildings that stand out above the general mass of grade B1 buildings because of exceptional interiors or some other features.

Grade B1 and B2: Special buildings of more local importance or good examples of some period of style. Some degree of alteration or imperfection may be acceptable.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) each of his Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38702/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The full time equivalent (FTE) number of staff in (i) my Department; and (ii) each of my Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years is as follows:

The FTE figures in the table above include:

- Headquarter staff and out centre staff; and
- Permanent staff and temporary staff who may be covering permanent posts.

School based staff are not included in these FTE figures, and figures can fluctuate during the year due to leavers and new starts.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education, in light of the revelations of the BBC Spotlight programme which revealed that photographs of schools girls appeared on pornographic websites, to detail what support (i) his Department; and (ii) each Education and Library Board have provided, and intends to provide, to the schools involved.

(AQW 38704/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The BBC Spotlight programme did not contact the Department directly either about the making of this programme or in relation to its findings but did email the schools directly affected.

The Department contacted the programme makers for information about the content of the programme on being approached for advice from some of the schools concerned and from the 5 ELB Child Protection Support Services for Schools (CPSSS).

The main concern of schools, and the Department, was to ensure that pupil identities were protected and that pupils and their families were not distressed by the information revealed. The Department therefore liaised closely with the CPSSS to provide advice on how schools might respond to the issues highlighted.

The Department has not received any further calls subsequent to the programme airing and has no intention at this time of issuing any further specific advice on this issue. Any school that requires additional support and advice may contact the relevant ELB CPSSS.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how many complaints have been received in each of the last five years referencing dissatisfaction with how pupils suffering from diabetes have been provided for; and what lessons have been learned from these complaints.

(AQW 38747/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of items of correspondence received by Special Education Team in the Department of Education regarding diabetes in each of the last five calendar years is as follows:

2010	2
2011	11
2012	1
2014 (to date)	0

I am fully aware of the importance of addressing pupils' medication needs in the school setting. The joint Department of Education/Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety publication "Supporting Pupils with Medication Needs" provides guidance for use in all schools and has a section dedicated specifically to diabetes.

Furthermore, in 2012, I wrote to all school principals to highlight some of their responsibilities within the existing guidance and to reflect recommended practice for pupils with type 1 diabetes.

The Education and Library Boards and Public Health Agency have also recently launched a joint booklet for parents outlining the support that children with diabetes can expect within their school and providing advice and contact details should parents wish to discuss any of the issues.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Education what provision his Department makes for pupils from the Western Education and Library Board who suffer from Cerebral Palsy and other motor disorders, including provision for pupils whose parents want conductive education for their children and believe that this is best provided at The Buddy Bear School in Dungannon.

(AQW 38772/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Western Education and Library Board (WELB) has advised that children with cerebral palsy or other motor disorders who have a statement of special educational needs (SEN) will receive an appropriate level of adult support and access to physiotherapy and/or occupational therapy as provided by the Health Care Trust. In special schools these children will also be taught in small class settings again with appropriate adult support.

Children with cerebral palsy or other motor disorders in mainstream schools who do not have a statement of SEN will have access to physiotherapy and/or occupational therapy as provided by the Health Care Trust. If the child also has a learning need they will also receive support from the relevant learning support service within the Board and each child will have an Individual Education Plan and an individual Health Care Plan.

Education and Library Boards can place a child in Buddy Bear School if they consider it appropriate to meet the child's SEN and this decision will be informed by parental choice.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to detail the current number of pupils in (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary education.

(AQW 38787/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information provided relates to the 2013/14 school census, the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October this year, provisional figures will be available in December, finalised figures in February.

Total enrolments are: (i) 171,548 in primary; and (ii) 143,973 in post-primary.

Source: NI school census

Notes: Figures for primary include nursery, reception and year 1 - 7 classes.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Education to detail the names of all ministerial appointees to each Board of Governors in post-primary schools in Belfast.

(AQW 38854/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Details of the Ministerial or public appointments to the Boards of Governors of voluntary grammar schools and grant maintained integrated post primary schools are set out below.

The appointments process is ongoing as Boards of Governors are currently being reconstituted. The DE website will have information about future DE governor Ministerial appointments shortly after they are made.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how many formal meetings have been held between the Chief Inspector and the Chief Executive of the General Teaching Council for Northern Ireland in the last two years.
(AQW 38874/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There have been two formal meetings held between the Chief Inspector and the Chief Executive of the General Teaching Council in the last two years.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education how the Ulster diaspora, from the 17th century onwards, can be explored within the school curriculum; and to detail the resources available to teachers.
(AQW 38964/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The curriculum provides scope for the teaching of the Ulster-Scots language, literature, culture and history at both primary and post-primary level. These can be delivered through areas such as Language & Literacy, Environment & Society and Learning for Life and Work / Local and Global Citizenship, where young people are able to explore their own and others' cultural identity, heritage and diversity.

CCEA has engaged with the Ulster Scots Education Project which is currently developing fifteen units of work for post-primary, to be available in 2015. To date, this engagement has taken the form of provision of curriculum advice and templates for the development of the units. There are also specific units within A level and GCSE History which enable students to learn about the origins of the Ulster Scots, the actions of Ulster Scots in the 18th century and the contributions of Ulster Scots men and women in the 19th and early 20th centuries.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many foreign national students in each Regional College are taking additional English language lessons; and what additional costs are incurred by each college as a result.
(AQW 38047/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): During 2012/13, the most recent year for which figures are available, there were 3,207 individuals studying English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) courses at further education colleges. However, of the 3,207 figure, 2,753 individuals were funded through the further education funding formula, which provided colleges with approximately £2m to support the delivery of ESOL courses. In addition, colleges also have their own fees policies, and can charge students a fee for ESOL provision, depending on the level and duration of the course. Colleges are funded by the Department to deliver ESOL provision in recognition of the benefits that ESOL provision brings to individuals, the economy and society.

The table provides a breakdown, by college, of the 2,753 individuals who were enrolled on DEL funded ESOL provision in 2012/13, and the amount of funding provided to each college.

Therefore, there are no "additional costs".

Further Education Colleges Funded Provision - English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) 2012-2013

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.
(AQW 38149/11-15)

Dr Farry: There have been no efficiencies realised in my Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the progress made with his Dublin counterparts on a cross border learning zone in the North West.
(AQW 38159/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department and I are engaged with relevant Government Ministers in the Republic of Ireland on a range of activities designed to increase cross border co-operation for mutual benefit. My response to the previous question on this subject, AQW 33040/11-15, provides an overview of these activities, which are ongoing.

My officials are continuing to work with counterparts from the Department of Education and Skills in preparing the joint paper on cross border further education issues, to which I referred in my previous response. Officials from both Departments, along with the Higher Education Academy, met in September and are planning to submit a joint report to the next high level Permanent Secretary group meeting planned for December 2014.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.
(AQW 38239/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- (i) The Department for Employment and Learning participates in the NICS Cycle to Work scheme.
- (ii) The NICS Cycle to Work scheme is open to all NICS staff all year round.
- (iii) The NICS Cycle to Work scheme does not extend to Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) for which the NICS is not their employer. However DFP, as the lead department for the NICS, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what communication his Department has had with universities on the current freeze on student fees, in light of departmental budgetary pressures.
(AQW 38284/11-15)

Dr Farry: Executive policy is to keep tuition fees at their current levels rising only in line with inflation for Northern Ireland domiciled full time undergraduate students studying in Northern Ireland. I have met with the Vice Chancellors of Queen's University Belfast and the Ulster University to discuss the implications of the significant budgetary pressures being faced by my Department and the resultant impact that this will have on their institutions.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the financial support available through his Department, and other bodies, for students from Northern Ireland who relocate to other areas of the UK for university education.
(AQW 38285/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the current academic year 2014/2015, a Maintenance Loan of up to £6,780 is available for Northern Ireland domiciled students living and attending college in London. If the course is anywhere else in Great Britain, the loan available is up to £4,840. Twenty-five percent of the loan is means tested.

Maintenance Grant (non repayable)

The maximum maintenance grant is £3,475 and is means tested. Students from households with an income of £19,203 or less should receive the maximum grant. Students from households with an income between £19,204 and £41,065 will receive a partial grant on a sliding scale basis.

Special Support Grant (non repayable)

A special support grant rather than a maintenance grant is payable to students who may be eligible to claim means-tested benefits such as Income Support and Housing Benefit. This will generally be lone parents, other student parents if they have a partner who is a student, and students with disabilities. The amount of the special support grant is £3,475 and is calculated in the same way as the maintenance grant. Unlike the maintenance grant, the special support grant will not affect the amount of maintenance loan the student may be entitled to.

Tuition fees (repayable)

The tuition fee loan is not means tested. However, it is restricted to the actual fee being charged up to a maximum of £9,000 in Great Britain.

Supplementary Grants (non repayable)

A range of other means tested grants are available to some students in certain circumstances (i.e. Parent Learning Allowance, Childcare Grant and Adult Dependents Grant). Non means tested Disabled Students Allowances are also available.

In addition, Universities in Great Britain offer Hardship Funds to provide help for students on lower income who may need extra financial support in order to remain in higher education. The funds can be used to meet course and living costs which are not already being met from other grants.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what consideration the University of Ulster has given to changing the name of the Magee campus.

(AQW 38314/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The Universities are responsible for their own policies and procedures, including those relating to branding.

Departmental officials contacted the University of Ulster and have been advised that the University has recently conducted brand research with prospective students but no decision has been taken with respect to changing the name of the Magee campus.

The University plans to discuss any considerations with civic and community leaders, staff and students.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the level of reserves held by (i) the University of Ulster; and (ii) Queen's University Belfast in (a) 2004; (b) 2009; and (c) 2014.

(AQW 38355/11-15)

Dr Farry: The information requested is detailed in the table below and relates to the position reported as at 31 July in each year. The information relating to 2014 will not be available until after the financial statements are audited and released by the institutions in early December. Therefore, the 2013 figures have been added in their place.

	University of Ulster	Queen's University Belfast
	£m	£m
2004	143.7	58.7
2013	165.2	105.3

The universities are not-for-profit institutions and are expected to earn surpluses of around 3% to 5% per annum. The surpluses add to the institutions' reserves and these are mainly used for investing in their infrastructure and to ensure their ongoing financial sustainability. The reserves held by the two universities will be used to support their currently planned capital developments. The use of reserves is also a key source of funding from which the universities can lever additional resources from public, private and philanthropic sources. In the absence of this leverage it is unlikely that the levels of capital required by the universities could be obtained. A final point to keep in mind is that reserves are not cash and are, therefore, not a recurrent source of funding. Reserves should not be used to cover either recurrent operating costs or recurrent reductions in funding.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how undergraduate fees compare with those in (i) England; (ii) Wales; (iii) Scotland, for non-Scottish students; and (iv) the Republic of Ireland.

(AQW 38357/11-15)

Dr Farry: I can advise in the current academic year 2014/2015 Northern Ireland domiciled students attending a higher education institution in Northern Ireland are liable for tuition fees of up to £3,685. Students from Great Britain can be charged up to £9,000 for attending a higher education institution in Northern Ireland. In England, Scotland (for non-Scottish students) and Wales all students are charged tuition fees of up to £9,000.

The tuition fee policy exceptions are that Scottish domiciled students do not pay tuition fees for attending Scottish higher education institutions. Welsh domiciled students are able to take a tuition fee loan for the first £3,685 of the tuition fees charged. If the tuition fees are more, the Welsh student can avail of a non repayable Welsh National Assembly fee grant of up to £5,315 to assist with tuition fees up to £9,000, wherever they study in the United Kingdom.

Students attending a higher education institute in the Republic of Ireland pay an annual Student Contribution Fee, formerly known as a Registration Fee, instead of a tuition fee. The maximum amount for academic year 2014/2015 is €2,750. Northern Ireland domiciled students can avail of a Student Contribution Fee Loan to cover this cost.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many staff work at the South Eastern Regional College.
(AQW 38398/11-15)

Dr Farry: The last audited accounts for South Eastern Regional College show that, for the year ending 31 July 2013, 746 full time equivalent staff were employed by the college.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what new capital build plans his Department has for the next three financial years.

(AQW 38399/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department has four capital build projects which have Department of Finance and Personnel approval and are planned to be delivered, subject to funding availability, in the period April 2015 to March 2018.

A Performing Arts and Technology Innovation Centre is currently under construction in Bangor for the South Eastern Regional College and is due to be completed by July 2015.

The other three projects are planned for the Southern Regional College at Armagh, Banbridge and Craigavon. The completion date for these projects is planned for March 2018.

In addition to this, business cases are currently being prepared for capital build projects at the Northern Regional College to provide services for the Coleraine, Ballymoney and Ballymena areas and by the South West College to deliver services in Enniskillen.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what is the deadline for applications to the European Social Fund.
(AQW 38578/11-15)

Dr Farry: Launch of Call for Applications to the European Social Fund

Planning work is underway within my Department to launch the call for applications to the new Programme on the Department's website on 28th November 2014. The closing date for receipt of applications is anticipated to be 9th January 2015.

A series of road shows to publicise the opening of the call for applications and detailing the application and assessment process for the new ESF Programme took place during October and November throughout Northern Ireland in each of the 11 new Council areas.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what financial support is available for students from Northern Ireland studying at universities in England.

(AQW 38646/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the current academic year 2014/2015, a Maintenance Loan of up to £6,780 is available for Northern Ireland domiciled students living and attending college in London. If the course is anywhere else in England, the loan available is up to £4,840. Twenty-five percent of the loan is means tested.

The amount of the special support grant is £3,475 and is calculated in the same way as the maintenance grant. Unlike the maintenance grant, the special support grant will not affect the amount of maintenance loan the student may be entitled to.

Tuition fees (repayable)

The tuition fee loan is not means tested. However, it is restricted to the actual fee being charged up to a maximum of £9,000 in England.

Supplementary Grants (non repayable)

A range of other means tested grants are available to some students in certain circumstances (i.e. Parent Learning Allowance, Childcare Grant and Adult Dependants Grant). Non means tested Disabled Students Allowances are also available.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given Tamboran's decision to judicially review her decision not to extend its licence, whether the local community will be afforded the opportunity to participate in any proceedings. (AQW 37517/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): Tamboran have now lodged judicial review proceedings in the High Court. The participation of third parties at any subsequent hearing is a matter to be determined by the Court and not the proposed Respondents.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) who will pay for the required repairs to the Moyle Interconnector; (ii) how much the repairs are estimated to cost; and (iii) will such result in an increase on the average household bill. (AQW 37668/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The interim repair to the Moyle Interconnector is expected to cost up to £4million. The cost of the permanent repair involving the laying of new low voltage cables is subject to the completion of tendering arrangements by owners Mutual Energy. When contract details for the permanent repair of the Moyle interconnector are finalised, Mutual Energy and the Utility regulator plan to publish details.

The Moyle repair costs will be funded from company reserves, and operational revenue, with the remainder being passed through to consumers. The Utility Regulator therefore expects some impact on electricity bills during the 2015/16 electricity tariff year to fund the capital investment required, however the scale of this is still to be confirmed.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 36881/11-15, to detail the level of funding which had been pledged by InvestNI and at which her Department was not in a position to pay. (AQW 37865/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI's inescapable pressures pledged under contracts will be funded.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps her Department is taking to encourage the development of large scale wind turbine farms. (AQW 38045/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Large scale wind farms are incentivised under the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO). The NIRO will close to new generation in 2017 as part of UK-wide Electricity Market Reform. After this time, large scale renewable electricity projects, including wind farms, will be incentivised under a Feed-In Tariff with Contracts for Difference mechanism.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 37635/11-15, what reassurance she can give Armoy Motorcycle Road Racing Club that the lack of this funding will not impact adversely on the Race of Legends. (AQW 38053/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There is no way to gauge impact on any event at present.

The nature of the National Events Sponsorship Fund is that organisers apply to the fund annually, therefore there is never any guarantee of receiving funding on a recurring basis.

When applicants apply to the scheme, applications are assessed through a competitive process and therefore there can never be any guarantee of funding.

The overall financial position for the Northern Ireland Block for 2015/16 is very difficult and it is on this basis that applications are not being sought for the Events Fund for National Sponsorship Scheme and new International Events in 2015/16.

I am very keen for events to go ahead with funding, but at present the Northern Ireland Tourist Board does not currently have the funds required to open an Events call within their core budget.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the amount of funding initially allocated to Gingerbread NI in 2014/15; and (ii) whether this amount has been reduced due to budget pressures.

(AQW 38070/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has not provided any funding to Gingerbread NI in 2014/15.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) whether her Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38139/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment is a participant in the NICS Cycle to Work scheme.
- (ii) The Cycle to Work scheme is open to all staff all year round.
- (iii) The scheme is a NICS Cycle to Work Scheme and therefore does not extend to Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) for whom the NICS is not their employer. However the Department of Finance and Personnel, as the lead department on the NICS scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of Cycle to Work Schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the (i) the total grants awarded by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board in the 2013/14 Tourism Events Funding Programme; and (ii) the total estimated economic impact of the sponsored events.

(AQW 38203/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) A total of 43 events were awarded £1,034,500 funding by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) in the 2013/14 Tourism Events Funding Programme. 10 international events and 33 National Events were supported. A full list of funded events can be found on www.nitb.com/events.
- (ii) NITB independently evaluated 8 of the funded events in 2013/14 resulting in a tourism return on NITB investment of £8.00 for every £1.00 invested.
- (iii) NITB also supported and independently evaluated 5 events during the Londonderry UK City of Culture 2013 year with total funding of £750,000 generating tourism return on investment for NITB of £20.70 for every £1.00 invested.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department has taken steps to prepare a bid for Northern Ireland to host a future Commonwealth Games.

(AQW 38224/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Unfortunately, Northern Ireland does not currently have the infrastructure required to host a Commonwealth Games. However, there are other Commonwealth events that we may be in a position to bid for.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB), the lead organisation for major events in Northern Ireland, has established a Major Events Bidding Group. This group is set up to consider the feasibility of events such as this. The group is scheduled to meet in November 2014 when it will be discussing a range of events.

NITB, in partnership with the Major Events Bidding Group, will deliberate and debate all events which fit the global event criteria. After due consideration, if an event being considered can be hosted in Northern Ireland and has return for Northern Ireland, particularly in relation to our economic/visitor spend targets, it will then be taken forward through due process.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in her Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38374/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Currently 0.8 FTE (full-time equivalent) staff members are employed in my Department's Equality Unit at a total annual cost of £25,718.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 37863/11-15 and AQW 36881/11-16, to provide a breakdown of each pressure including (i) the full reason; and (ii) the monetary scale of each.

(AQW 38378/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI was allocated £21.5 million Resource funding in monitoring in 2014-15 to meet inescapable pressures in Invest NI and NITB. DETI was also allocated £37.7 million Resource funding in the draft budget for inescapable pressures.

The inescapable pressures arose because of the success of Invest NI in delivering jobs and investment projects and the Tourist Board in delivering a step change in the events Northern Ireland is delivering as advised in AQW 36881/11-16 and AQW 37864/11-15.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given the recent draft budget agreement, whether she will consider reinstating the Northern Ireland Events Fund.
(AQW 38389/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The draft Budget allocations for 2015/16 for my Department mean that significant savings will need to be identified. My Department is currently engaging with all its arm's length bodies including the Tourist Board on the savings which will need to be made. The availability of funding support for events is being assessed as part of that work.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to provide details of the information that her Department has been provided regarding the chemicals and the quantity of these chemicals that Infastrata are proposing to use at their drilling site in Woodburn forest; and whether her Department is aware of an intention by Infastrata to stimulate the rock using fluids as part of this exploratory well.
(AQW 38442/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Information on the chemicals and their quantities has not been provided to DETI. InfraStrata plc has informed DETI in writing that this information will be provided to the Northern Ireland Environment Agency in due course and copied to DETI.

InfraStrata plc has informed DETI in writing that there is no intention by the company to stimulate the rocks using fluids.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) what efforts InvestNI has made to find a fixed-wing aircraft maintenance tenant for the currently unused airport hanger at St Angelo Airport, Enniskillen; (ii) to detail the number of potential investors they have brought to the site; and (iii) how many jobs could be created and sustained if a suitable tenant was found.
(AQW 38494/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Both Fermanagh District Council and the Airport Management Company have an interest in actively seeking a tenant for the facility at St Angelo Airport where possible.

Staff from Invest NI's Regional Office, Advanced Engineering & Construction team and its Property Solutions team have met with representatives of Fermanagh District Council and Airport Management and have visited St Angelo Airport, Enniskillen.

Invest NI provided Airport Management with a database of aviation related businesses in America and it is their understanding that Airport Management subsequently made contact with those companies to advise them of the availability of the new facility.

Invest NI is proactively marketing the facility to potential investors through its commercial property database which is accessible through the NI Business Information website.

Invest NI has put two potential investors in direct contact with the management team at St Angelo Airport and continues to signpost the facility as appropriate during the course of its ongoing contact with businesses seeking premises.

It is my understanding that should a suitable tenant be found that up to 20 jobs could be accommodated at the facility.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what impact the draft budget for 2015/16 will have on any proposed tourism event funding programmes.
(AQW 38495/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) assumed responsibility for the events function in 2010 there has not been a Budget exercise to allow for an appropriate dedicated budget baseline to be established for events. As a result NITB has always relied on in year monitoring to meet its commitments for events funding. At present the Northern Ireland Tourist Board does not currently have the funds required to open an Events call.

The draft Budget allocations for 2015/16 for my Department mean that significant savings will need to be identified. My Department is currently engaging with all its arm's length bodies including the Tourist Board on the savings which will need to be made. The availability of funding support for events is being assessed as part of that work.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 27979/11-15, whether the costs and benefits analysis of renewable generation has been completed; and when the results will be published.
(AQW 38511/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This work is ongoing and I expect the results to be published in the first half of 2015.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the assertion by the solar Photovoltaic (PV) industry that a drop from 4 Renewable Obligation Certificates (ROCs) to 1.6 ROCs for solar PV would lead to a boom followed by a bust.

(AQW 38513/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The proposed reduction in ROCs for small scale solar PV projects is based on an assessment which indicates a reduction in technology costs. The intention of the reduction is to ensure that ROC levels allow deployment at least cost to the consumer.

A large number of responses were received which argued in support of a higher ROC level. These are being considered and I will respond in due course.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when the outcome of the investigation into the Northern Ireland Events Company will be published.

(AQW 38515/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department appointed inspectors to the Northern Ireland Events Company Limited under Article 425(2) and Article 425(2A) of the Companies (NI) Order 1986. Under the terms of the appointment, and in line with Article 425(2A), any report made in connection with the inspection is not for publication. Accordingly, it is not the intention of my Department to publish the report of the company inspectors.

However, I understand that the Audit Office is investigating the issues relating to the Events Company and will be reporting their findings to the Assembly in due course.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why the tourism events fund was not made available on a more sustainable basis than an annual bidding process; and whether she will reinstate the fund on a more sustainable basis.

(AQW 38516/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) assumed responsibility for the events function from the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) in 2010, there has not been a Budget exercise to allow for an appropriate dedicated baseline to be established. The original DCAL budget was reduced to £1 million upon the function transfer to NITB and the NITB has had to rely on in-year monitoring rounds to ensure that adequate funding was available.

I am fully supportive of the need for an adequate baseline to be put into place to support the events programme for the longer term. The baseline funding will need to be considered in the context of Executive decisions on future Budget allocations to my Department for the coming years.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the effectiveness of local Social Enterprise Hubs in actively encouraging business start ups within local communities.

(AQW 38574/11-15)

Mrs Foster: All eleven Social Enterprise Hub locations are now operational and providing physical workspace, training, events, action planning and mentoring to potential new social enterprises across Northern Ireland. Although it is still early days there are reports of significant activity through the Hubs.

At the end of September 2014, the nine delivery contracts reported the following: 102 community engagement sessions had taken place, 59 participants/groups had progressed to Action Planning around a social enterprise business start, 134 mentoring sessions had been completed with groups, and 68 promotional and information events had taken place to encourage social enterprise start up.

In terms of the incubation space utilisation, 15 potential social enterprises were working within the hub premises, and additional 13 groups had been approved to set up a test trading model in the premises - all of these are potential new start social enterprises.

I think this represents a positive start to this innovative project.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on work to improve and extend rural broadband.

(AQW 38580/11-15)

Mrs Foster: On 4th February 2014 my Department entered into a £23.68million project with BT for the delivery of the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement project which aims to provide improvements in access to basic and superfast fixed-line broadband services to over 45,000 premises across Northern Ireland by the end of 2015, particularly, in rural areas.

The project is being delivered in eight phases, each of which requires an extensive survey and design process which takes account of technical feasibility, quality of existing infrastructure in the area, reasonable costs, number of anticipated customers etc and seeks to achieve the greatest value for money and the highest number of beneficiaries.

The areas where improvements have already been made under the first two phases of the project have been published on the NI Direct website. In addition consumers can use an online postcode checker to find out when work is scheduled to be carried out in their area. This information can be accessed at: <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project>.

By the end of the project it is anticipated that 96% of premises will have a broadband service of at least 2 Megabits per second (Mbps) and 85% of premises will have access to a broadband service of 24 Mbps or better.

Recognising a need to extend access to superfast broadband services even further, my Department has issued an Invitation to Tender for a project aimed at further increasing the coverage of fixed-line broadband services of 24 Mbps by 2017.

The intervention area for this project has been informed by a public consultation which took place over the period 26 August to 26 September 2014. It is anticipated that the contract for this project, which is to be supported by public funding of £14.48million, co-financed by Broadband Delivery UK and DETI, will be in place by the end of February 2015.

Further information will be released once the procurement process has completed.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the process used to plan the roll out of the scheme to improve broadband access in rural areas, including the criteria used to identify the areas which would benefit from the scheme.

(AQW 38587/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has prepared a fact sheet explaining the aims and objectives of the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project. This includes a section which sets out the design process from consultation on the proposed intervention area, to establishing maximum benefit for the funding available. The fact sheet is available on the DETI website at http://www.detini.gov.uk/northern\_ireland\_broadband\_improvement\_project\_\_nibip\_\_factsheet.pdf and hard copies are being distributed to all Northern Ireland MPs, MEPs and MLAs as well as each of the District Councils.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the involvement her Department had in determining the areas that would benefit from the scheme to improve and extend access to broadband in rural areas.

(AQW 38588/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In September 2012 my Department established and publicly consulted on the proposed intervention area for the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project. The consultation document set out the rationale behind the project and the postcode areas in which the Department had assessed there would be a requirement for public intervention to deliver both basic and superfast fixed-line broadband services. Due to changes in the European State Aid requirements for broadband deployment, the consultation was repeated in June 2013.

The outcomes of the consultations were used to identify the scope of the project in an Invitation to Tender. In bidding for the contract, the winning tenderer, BT detailed how much of the intervention area could be addressed for the available funding.

Subsequently DETI reached agreement with BT that at least 45,000 premises would benefit from the infrastructure improvements.

The project is being delivered in eight phases (0-7) with deployment of services determined by an engineering model which takes account of a number of factors including technical feasibility, quality of existing infrastructure in the area, reasonable costs and number of anticipated customers. This methodology has been adopted across all projects delivered under the UK-wide framework.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the location of the points of presence boxes that have been (i) installed; and (ii) upgraded; as part of (a) phase 1; and (b) phase 2 of the scheme to improve and extend access to broadband in rural areas.

(AQW 38590/11-15)

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on her Department's position on Giro Legacy events which will include the Mournes.

(AQW 38595/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) assumed responsibility for the events function in 2010 there has not been a Budget exercise to allow for an appropriate dedicated budget to be established for events. As a result NITB has always relied on in year monitoring to meet its commitments for events funding.

I fully understand the importance of events such as a Giro Legacy event and am thus reviewing the funding position with NITB to assess what is possible.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much investment her Department has earmarked for the development of energy storage to reduce inefficiency and improve affordability, security and sustainability.

(AQW 38612/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Investment in our energy infrastructure is principally a commercial matter for developers subject to scrutiny by the Utility Regulator, which balances the need for investment with the protection of the interests of consumers who, ultimately, pay for the investment.

My Department continues to support three storage projects.

Two of these projects have been designated as European Projects of Common Interest (PCI) - the development of an underground gas storage facility at Islandmagee by developers Infrastrata/ Mutual Energy, and a compressed air energy storage facility in East Antrim to be developed by Gaelectric. Achieving PCI status enables access to EU Connecting Europe Funding under the EU TEN-E Regulation.

I am also supportive of ongoing discussions between AES Corporation and the Utility Regulator concerning the potential for a pilot battery storage proposal at the Kilroot power station site.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail her Department's strategy for encouraging the development of large scale and fast response energy storage facilities.

(AQW 38614/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive's Strategic Energy Framework recognises the potential of energy storage to provide additional security of supply and to diversify Northern Ireland's reliance on fossil fuel-generated electricity.

The strategy's actions include encouraging investment in a number of energy storage proposals such as the development of an underground gas storage facility at Islandmagee by developers Infrastrata/ Mutual Energy, and a compressed air energy storage facility in East Antrim to be developed by Gaelectric. My Department has supported both projects, which have been accepted as Projects of Common Interest under the EU TEN-E Regulation, in recent bids for Connecting Europe Funding (CEF).

I am also supportive of ongoing discussions between AES Corporation and the Utility Regulator concerning the potential for a pilot battery storage proposal at the Kilroot power station site.

Department of the Environment

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, on how many occasions the Director of Road Safety and Vehicle Regulation has been accompanied by the Driver and Vehicle Agency Chief Enforcement Officer to meetings with or regarding Value Cabs at their offices in Belfast; and to detail the (i) date and time; and (ii) the minutes of each meeting.

(AQW 37736/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): The Director of Road Safety and Vehicle Regulation Division, accompanied by the Driver and Vehicle Agency Chief Enforcement Officer, met with representatives from Value Cabs on 26 June 2013 at 2.00pm. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss matters connected with the Taxis Act 2008 and its implementation; there are no recorded minutes of this meeting.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of the Environment how many joint investigations the Driver and Vehicle Agency has carried out with the PSNI in the last two years in East Londonderry.

(AQW 38084/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There have been no specific joint investigations carried out by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) and PSNI in East Londonderry in the last two years. However, DVA frequently works with the assistance of PSNI and other relevant enforcement bodies throughout Northern Ireland in order to address road safety matters.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the average turnaround time when the Northern Ireland Environment Agency have been involved in a planning application.

(AQW 38085/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the 2013-14 business year, the number of decided applications where the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) was consulted was 2,878. The average processing time (in working days) for these decided applications where the NIEA was consulted was 135 days.

It is important to note that when considering the average processing time for planning applications, consulting with NIEA, where required, will be only one element of the application process. There are many factors involved in the application process including liaising with other consultees, considering other material considerations, and in many cases additional information is required from the applicant, often resulting in the need for further consultation. These factors will all have a bearing on processing times.

It must be noted that these figures are provided from Planning administrative systems and do not form part of published and validated DOE Official Statistics.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment what plans are in place for the introduction of more wind farms.
(AQW 38167/11-15)

Mr Durkan: While my Department will determine planning applications received for wind farms, any plans for the introduction of more wind farms would be a matter for the renewable energy companies. Decisions to build wind farms are a commercial matter for this industry. Such decisions will take into account government policy and network capability.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37924/11-15, whether European Union environmental law has been persistently breached since the designation of Lough Neagh Special Protection Area in 1998.

Mr Durkan: A number of EU directives apply to activities within Lough Neagh including the Habitats and Birds Directives, the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive and the Water Framework Directive. As the Department has never been consulted on or granted permission for any extraction activities within the Lough, neither the EIA Directive nor the Habitats Directive have been breached. No breach of the Water Framework Directive has occurred.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 38000/11-15, whether his Department has moved to stop all works pending the outcome of the Department's live enforcement investigation, given the close proximity of Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation, the strict requirements of the precautionary principle which underpins Article 6(3) of the Habitats Directive and the fact that the manner in which this case was handled is currently subject to infringement complaints lodged with the European Commission.
(AQW 38208/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department, having engaged promptly with the developers of the Dalradian site on Camcosy Road, has received a written statement that works have ceased in regard to the alleged breach.

Officials have been monitoring the site and will continue to do so.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment where responsibility lies for covering the costs of any fines imposed by Europe as a result of successful infraction proceedings brought against the UK Member State in relation to environmental failures affecting Northern Ireland.
(AQW 38209/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Infraction proceedings under Article 258 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union are brought by the European Commission against a member state which the Commission considers has infringed EU law. Consequently, it is against the relevant member state that any EU fine will be levied.

If any penalty were to be imposed against the UK by the European Court of Justice, it would be a matter for the UK Government to determine how the penalty would apply to a devolved administration. The outcome cannot be predicted since the UK has never been the subject of financial sanctions imposed by the European Court of Justice.

Northern Ireland district councils may, under discretionary powers introduced by the Localism Act 2011, be required to pay some or all of a fine where they have caused or contributed to the imposition of the sanction.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has any plans to implement a shared space initiative in order to improve accessibility of urban spaces for the visually impaired.
(AQW 38223/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am committed to ensuring that my Department plays its part, along with other Departments, in the creation and maintenance of shared spaces for all, which includes the visually impaired.

The recent publication of the draft Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS) for public consultation in February this year demonstrates this commitment. The draft SPPS consolidates a suite of existing planning policy statements and provides a strategic policy framework which will assist councils as they undertake their planning responsibilities from 1 April 2015. One of SPPS's core planning principles is 'Creating and Enhancing Shared Space'. This core planning principle affirms the aims of the Executive's "Together: Building a United Community" strategy which sets out its commitment to addressing all barriers that prevent or interfere with the creation and maintenance of shared space.

Improving accessibility to all is imperative to our health and well being and is considered to be an important element within the planning environment. Indeed Improving Health and Well-being is also set out in the draft SPPS as a core planning principle in its own right.

Improving accessibility and creating and enhancing shared space are also fundamental themes which are representative of my Department's 'Living Places' An Urban Stewardship and Design Guide for Northern Ireland, which was published in September 2014.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38236/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No efficiencies have been realised in my department as a direct result of the work of the Department of Finance and Personnel's Public Sector Reform Division.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) how many Fixed Penalties have been issued by the Driver and Vehicle Agency to drivers of company vehicles whose company does not hold a hauliers licence; (ii) the Fixed Penalty charge; (iii) the offence/breach; (iv) the number of Fixed Penalties issued that were paid; and (v) how many Fixed Penalties were marked/sent for prosecution for non-payment; and of these how many were withdrawn before reaching court or without proceeding with prosecution, in each of the last two years.

(AQW 38244/11-15)

Mr Durkan: During the period 1 November 2012 to 31 October 2014 there have been no Fixed Penalty Notices issued to drivers of company vehicles whose company does not hold a hauliers licence.

There were however sixteen Fixed Penalty Notices issued to drivers who owned and were using their vehicle without a Goods Vehicle Operator's Licence in force.

The Fixed Penalty charge for such an offence is presently set at £200 and the offence breach is defined as using a vehicle on a road contrary to Section 1 (6) of the Goods Vehicle (Licensing of Operators) Act 2010.

The PSNI Fixed Penalty Office is responsible for the administration of the Fixed Penalty Scheme and does not inform the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) whether a Fixed Penalty Notice has been paid or is being pursued through the courts for non payment.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment what research has been undertaken to measure the effect on the construction industry of the consultation on 'Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing'.

(AQW 38247/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A draft partial Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) setting out the economic, social and environmental costs and benefits of options for the introduction of developer contributions was published for consultation alongside my Department's draft Planning Policy Statement 22 'Affordable Housing' and the Department for Social Development's draft 'Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing' paper.

The draft RIA acknowledges that whilst economic modelling/cost benefit analysis has been conducted that a further Small Business Impact test will be undertaken following consideration of the responses received during the consultation and prior to any preferred policy option being implemented.

Officials are currently considering the 53 responses received through the public consultation and are liaising further with DSD officials in relation to the responses received to their consultation. Along with the Minister for Social Development, I intend to take account of all the views received before considering how to move forward with the proposals for affordable housing.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the plans in place for refurbishment or maintenance works on the Ballycopeland Windmill, Millisle.

(AQW 38253/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Ballycopeland windmill is a unique historic monument in Northern Ireland, and of considerable historical interest in terms of mills and mill technology in Ireland and beyond. It was originally built in the late 18th century and continued in use as a working mill until 1915. The mill, along with the miller's house, was brought into State Care in 1935.

Since 1935 there have been periodic repairs and maintenance works conducted at Ballycopeland windmill, as and when such works have been required. However, in recent years the windmill has been adversely affected by high winds and bad weather. High winds have partially dislodged the cap of the mill, and it is now jammed in a fixed position, which prevents the turning of the sails and mill stones. I am also advised that the main sails and fantail are also in need of repair and maintenance.

My Department, through its Conservation Works Team, has sought to carry out the necessary repairs to the sails, but there have been difficulties in achieving safe access for plant and machinery to the site. The works required to free-up the cap of the mill are specialised, and advice on this aspect must be sought from a suitably qualified millwright.

Longer-term plans for refurbishment and maintenance of this site are currently being reviewed by senior management within my Department, to see what can be realistically achieved in the current financial climate and the challenges my Department faces at the present time. I will keep you updated of proposals and works in due course.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37541/11-14, why Belfast Public Hire (BPH) would require information and advice on business start-up when they are already operating in business; and, (ii) whether this advice and information was sought with the intention to have BPH set up alternative businesses from that which they currently operate. (AQW 38264/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The advice was sought to allow Belfast Public Hire operators, who currently largely operate as one vehicle operator, to determine if there were benefits to working together and forming companies to take advantage of any economies of scale available to larger taxi operators.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has considered the research compiled by the Pedestrian Accessibility and Movement Environment Laboratory when dealing with planning applications for town regeneration schemes. (AQW 38288/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Research, including that undertaken and published by the Pedestrian Accessibility and Movement Environment Laboratory (PAMELA), is not planning policy or supplementary planning guidance.

However research, where relevant, can act as a source of advice and guidance and can inform the approach taken by architects and urban planners when designing pedestrian environments for individual development proposals. If any such information or research were therefore to be submitted to the Department in association with a planning application it would be considered in terms of its materiality and relevance to the development proposal under consideration and weight, if any, would be attached as appropriate.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether a decision by his Department not to initiate formal enforcement action against unauthorised development can, in terms of the law, be construed as constituting a development consent. (AQW 38305/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The answer to this question depends on the circumstances of the particular case. However the general issue of immunity is set out below.

Under the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 planning permission is required for the development of land. Where development is carried out without the required planning permission, or without complying with any condition or limitation subject to which the planning permission was granted, that is a breach of planning control. Where it appears to the Department that there has been a breach of planning control and it is expedient to do so, having regard to the development plan and to any other material considerations, then it may issue an enforcement notice. If the Department does not take enforcement action against a breach of planning control then on the expiry of the period 5 years from the date of the breach of planning control that breach becomes immune from enforcement action. Where a breach of planning control has become immune from enforcement action a person may then apply to the Department for a Certificate of Lawfulness of Existing Use or Development ("CLUD"). Where a CLUD is issued the lawfulness of any use or operation in respect of which a CLUD is in force is conclusively presumed.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37576/11-15, whether his Department relied on pre-1972 onshore operations to justify the granting of Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme (ALCS) certificates for sand extraction from Lough Neagh Special Protection Area; and if so, how his Department claims not to have any records of these operations, given that this information must have been available at the time ALCS certificates for Lough Neagh were granted between 2004 and 2007. (AQW 38306/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My responses to AQW 37576/11-15 and AQW 33055/11-15 refer. In my response to the former question I have previously advised that my Department does not hold records of pre 1972 operations. The then Planning Service's response to the Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme appears to have taken account of planning permissions associated to the onshore operations of the respective companies.

In response to the latter question, you were advised my Department has granted a number of onshore planning permissions associated with sand extraction from Lough Neagh.

The permissions include plant, stockpiles, buildings, car parks, settlement ponds and weighbridges. The permissions (nine in total) date from 1982 until 2005 and relate to four sites.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37818/11-15, particularly that he "does not consider an internal email summarising the observations of enforcement officers constitutes producing a formal report on the legalities of the taxi arrangements at Ravenhill rugby ground", to detail (i) why a formal report based on the content was not compiled in light of the issues which have followed and which is normally required for proper consideration when legal advice is sought; (ii) his Department's procedures or protocol when moving to obtain legal advice on any issue, including what is required by the legal advisers in order to study the issue; and (iii) whether full statutory procedures or protocols were followed by departmental staff and the Driver and Vehicle Agency.

(AQW 38319/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In response to each of the member's questions:

- (i) Officials sought and received legal advice regarding the provision of taxi services at Ravenhill rugby ground;
- (ii) This is consistent with normal procedures; and
- (iii) There are no statutory procedures or protocols in this regard.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of the Environment whether there has been (i) an evaluation of the High Hedges Act (Northern Ireland) 2011; and (ii) an assessment of feedback from the public on their experiences of using the legislation.

(AQW 38353/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The High Hedges Act became operational on 31 March 2012 with responsibility for its implementation transferred to district councils from that date. As a result of the reorganisation of councils, the Department is deferring a review of this legislation until after sufficient time has been given to allow its full implementation within the new council structures.

As the Department is not responsible for the implementation of this legislation it does not hold information on feedback from the public on use of the legislation. However my Department did liaise with councils during 2013 and acquired initial figures that indicated that around 800 queries about high hedges had been received but only 8 per cent (approximately 60) of those became formal complaints, with 67 per cent of those resulting in the issue of a remediation notice. We would anticipate that the public experience will be part of the future review.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38376/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Currently there are two staff working in my Department's Equality Unit. The annual cost of these staff is £90k.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37877/11-15, whether he plans to revise his answer taking into account Section D1, Planning and Accounts, and the printed warning.

(AQW 38413/11-15)

Mr Durkan: An application was made by Fonacab to have an operating centre at Ravenhill Rugby ground included in their taxi operator licence. The application included all the required declarations including the Planning Declaration. Consequently, the application was granted correctly and in line with procedures.

I have no plans to revise the previous answer.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what communication he has had with companies that supply taxi meters in the last three months.

(AQW 38419/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department is continuing to develop procedures within the context of the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 to ensure that compliant taximeters are installed, calibrated and tested in all licensed taxis in Northern Ireland. I will provide detailed information on the arrangements when this process has been completed, in sufficient time to allow the industry to meet the timetable set out in my Statement to the Assembly in June 2014, that compliant taximeters will be installed by September 2015.

I have had no communication with taximeter suppliers during the last three months.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what further steps are required to establish approved taxi meter centres; and to outline a timescale for these steps.

(AQW 38420/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department is continuing to develop procedures within the context of the Taxis Act (NI) 2008 to ensure that compliant taximeters are installed, calibrated and tested in all licensed taxis in Northern Ireland. Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the reasons for the delay in establishing approved taxi meter centres.

(AQW 38421/11-15)

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to a fine imposed by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) for (a) receiving; (b) processing; and (c) storing waste, to detail the percentage of the fine retained by the NIEA.
(AQW 38444/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency does not impose fines; rather, it prepares prosecution files that are taken forward by the Public Prosecution Service on the basis of sufficient evidence and the public interest test. Any fines imposed from associated legal proceedings are passed directly to the Exchequer and the NIEA does not receive any money back.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment how the Northern Ireland Environment Agency accounts for monies raised through fines in their financial returns and reports.
(AQW 38445/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency provides evidence files to the Public Prosecution Service, who on the basis of sufficient evidence and the public interest test may decide to escalate these cases to court proceedings. The Court imposes fines to act as a deterrent to future offending and these fines are passed directly to the Exchequer. Therefore the NIEA does not receive any of these monies and consequently it does not report them in its financial returns or reports.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the money realised by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency through fines in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 38446/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency does not gain financially from any of the fines imposed in the prosecution cases it oversees as they are passed directly to the Exchequer. The total of these fines (for the last three full financial years) is set out below.

	Total fines
2011-12	£137,450
2012-13	£142,250
2013-14	£114,593
Total	£394,293

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the locations of the discovery of waste products from illegal fuel smuggling in each of the last five years, including the extent of waste that was identified at each site and the cost of the clean up.
(AQW 38457/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Illegal fuel smuggling is dealt with by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC). The investigation of illegal fuel laundering is led by HMRC, who deal with the disposal of any fuel laundered waste (FLW) that is discovered in association with illegal fuel laundering plant.

However the majority of FLW is dumped indiscriminately in the countryside throughout Northern Ireland and this is dealt with by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA).

NIEA is currently operating a Flytipping Partnership with 21 Councils. The first Council, Newry and Mourne joined the partnership in June 2012. Before June 2012, local Councils dealt with the disposal of this FLW that had been dumped in their respective areas.

Under this partnership Councils can refer cases of Flytipping of under 20m<sup>3</sup> of non hazardous waste and certain hazardous wastes including FLW for investigation and or clean up to NIEA.

NIEA does not hold data in respect of FLW before June 2012. From June 2012 until the end of October 2014, 328 separate incidents have been referred to and resolved by NIEA. This has involved NIEA removing a total weight of 2609.85 tonnes of FLW at a total cost of £931,916.37.

Due to the numbers involved and the detail requested I have placed a copy of the information in the Assembly Library. NIEA does not have the cost and weight for each individual case in a readily accessible form, therefore the detailed information has been broken down into a list of addresses, total weight and cost per council area per calendar year.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the operation of the Environmental Crime Unit in the Northern Ireland Environment Agency; and to detail (i) the number of staff working in the unit; (ii) the operating costs of the unit; (iii) the number and nature of cases investigated by the unit; and (iv) the number of successful prosecutions the unit assisted in securing.

(AQW 38460/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The work of the Environmental Crime Unit (ECU) is designed to complement all the other work in the Department to achieve compliance outcomes. This includes clear guidance and support to businesses and efficient regulatory oversight. ECU has a key role in this system in carrying out investigations into some of the most serious environmental offences.

The officers in the ECU have been doing, and continue to do, good work in testing circumstances. In one recent example, the ECU was responsible for securing the highest confiscation order secured to date in Northern Ireland for environmental offending, £500,000 against a Ballymena scrap metal dealer. This builds on a further almost £1.6 million of confiscations achieved since the Unit was established and confiscation powers enacted.

At 1 November 2014, the staff complement of the ECU was 34.4 full time equivalent and its budget for the current financial year is £1.691 m.

Since the start of 2013, ECU has undertaken 137 enforcement cases into a range of waste criminality, which includes the serious and persistent, commercial-scale environmental offending that the Unit was established to deter and disrupt. These cases include unauthorised land-filling, scrap metal and end-of-life vehicles, fuel laundering wastes and waste tyre disposal.

In the same period, the team has secured 43 successful convictions against environmental criminals.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37818/11-15, particularly his response "I do not consider that an internal email summarising the observations of enforcement officers constitutes producing a formal report on the legalities of the taxi arrangements at Ravenhill rugby ground", whether he has seen the email; and if so, for his assessment of the impact that the email would have on the Driver and Vehicle Agency and his Department should it become discoverable.

(AQW 38468/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have not seen nor do I intend to request sight of the email summarising the observations of enforcement officers at Ravenhill on 23 August 2013.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37647/11-15, why there were three visits in 2013 and none in 2014, particularly given continued, repeated and ongoing concerns as to operational activities and alleged regulation breaches; and to confirm if this venue is now considered off limits by the Driver and Vehicle Agency.

(AQW 38550/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There were three visits during 2013 for the purposes of assessing compliance with Taxi Operator Licensing requirements. Following which the Department determined that the provision of taxi services at Ravenhill complied with the requirements of the Taxi Act (NI) 2008. There are no areas or venues which the DVA considers off limits.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department plans to reduce the cost of driving licences for motorists, following the announcement by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency that fees will be reduced from October 2014.

(AQW 38577/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The administration of driver licensing in Northern Ireland is expected, as far as possible, to be a self-financing service, with costs recovered through fee income. These costs include salaries, maintenance, support and development of the IT system, production of the licence, postage and the payment of fees for certain medical assessments. The licence fees are varied according to the complexity of individual transactions.

Following a public consultation, driving licence fees were increased on 18 October 2012 which resulted in a gap across a range of transactions between the fees charged in NI compared to those charged in GB. This gap exists largely due the lack of economies of scale for recovering the costs of processing driver licences locally. I am also aware that DVLA recently introduced a reduction in their fees that has further widened the gap between NI and GB. I understand that the DVLA have indicated that they have been able to reduce their fees through developments in technology, with the ability to offer online transactions.

However, I can advise that the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) is currently developing a new driver licensing IT system to be delivered by April 2016. This system will improve the customer experience, deliver service efficiencies and will enable online processing. This will provide an opportunity to review the fees currently charged for the processing of driver licences.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the effectiveness of the High Hedges legislation.

(AQO 7005/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The High Hedges Act became operational on 31 March 2012 with responsibility for its implementation transferred to district councils from that date.

My Department liaised with councils last year and acquired initial figures that indicated that around 800 queries about high hedges had been received but only 8 per cent (approximately 60) of those became formal complaints, with 67 per cent of those resulting in the issue of a remediation notice.

I believe that introducing this legislation has provided a mechanism for people to use when they feel they have nowhere else to go. It has, by its very existence, brought about actions for individuals, who had previously not been able to address these problems directly. This has resulted in many high hedges being removed or reduced in such a way as to remove the nuisance.

However, I am aware from my constituency work and reports from colleagues that the legislation has its limitations in relation to dealing with trees for example.

While the legislation was introduced by my Department responsibility for its implementation rests with councils.

It is my intention to imitate a review of the legislation following reorganisation of councils. This will provide an opportunity to explore if the legislation is working effectively and if it is dealing with the concerns that people are raising.

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of the Environment, given the rise in road fatalities this year, for his assessment of the success of the current road safety message.
(AQO 7008/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am extremely concerned by the number of road deaths this year. My sincere sympathy is with all of the families and communities affected by those tragedies.

Even though the overall picture shows that fewer lives are being lost than in the past, indeed, over the last five years (2009 to 2013) the number of people killed on our roads has halved; it is disheartening that so far thirteen more people have lost their lives in 2014 than last year in total.

My Department continues to address high risk behaviours through various activities, including the road safety information campaigns. In addition to the existing media programme, I launched two new campaigns in 2014, addressing cyclist safety and inappropriate speed. Both of these have been identified as priority issues.

The campaigns consistently achieve awareness levels of over 90%. The average awareness level for TV advertising is 50%. The campaigns also achieve levels of influence ranging between 72% and 93%, indicating that road safety advertising has been very influential in improving road user attitudes and in producing positive change in behaviours. The industry norm for achieving levels of 'fairly influenced' is 30%.

It is difficult to measure the sole contribution that any specific road safety intervention, including advertising, makes towards reducing casualties. However, work by Oxford Economics isolated the importance of the role of DOE advertising and calculated that from 1995 to 2011, some 21,977 men, women and children in Northern Ireland were saved from death and serious injury on our roads.

I recognise that some of our campaigns can make uncomfortable viewing, but research and tracking evidence has consistently confirmed that they are effective, and that our 'tell it as it is' approach is a key reason for that.

I cannot emphasise enough, however, that the vast majority of casualties on our roads are caused by human error and ultimately each of us as individuals has to take personal responsibility for our attitudes and behaviours as road users.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to outline his Department's responsibility for addressing coastal erosion.
(AQW 38624/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department has no statutory responsibility for carrying out the construction, maintenance or repair of coastal defences; and no role in inspecting incidents of coastal erosion.

My Department does have a regulatory role as the marine licensing authority for construction/development proposals below the high water mark; and planning permission may be required for construction above the low water mark.

The long-standing position on which department is responsible for coastal protection work is determined by the "Bateman Formula". In effect, this means that departments only have a responsibility to construct, maintain and repair coastal defences in their possession, or which are protecting assets for which they have responsibility.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 36780/11-15, how many operators have received a £200 Fixed Penalty Notice for using an unlicensed vehicle in these circumstances.
(AQW 38630/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There have been no operators issued with a £200 Fixed Penalty Notice where a driver of a licensed private hire taxi has picked up passengers without a pre-booking within Belfast City limit.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of noise complaints received by each council in the last three years.
(AQW 38720/11-15)

Mr Durkan: District councils collect information about noise complaints and send these details to the Department each year where they are collated for the annual report on Noise Complaint Statistics for Northern Ireland. The most recent information is for the 2010-11, 2011-12 and 2012-13 years. The report for the 2013-14 year will be published online on 28 November 2014.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many people have used the High Hedges Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 since its introduction.

(AQW 38722/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The High Hedges Act became operational on 31 March 2012 with responsibility for its implementation transferred to district councils from that date.

As my Department is not responsible for the implementation of this legislation it does not hold information on use of the legislation. However my Department did liaise with councils during 2013 and acquired initial figures that indicated that around 800 queries about high hedges had been received but only 8 per cent (approximately 60) of those became formal complaints, with 67 per cent of those resulting in the issue of a remediation notice.

As a result of the reorganisation of councils, my Department is deferring a review of this legislation until after sufficient time has been given to allow its full implementation within the new council structures. We would anticipate that the public usage of the legislation will be an integral part of the future review.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many people have been fined under the High Hedges Act (Northern Ireland) 2011.

(AQW 38723/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department does not hold the information you are seeking as responsibility for implementing the High Hedges Act rests with district councils.

However, under the legislation, an individual would only be liable to a fine if they were convicted by the courts for committing an offence of failing to action a remedial notice issued by the council. When my Department carried out an informal liaison with councils during 2013, initial figures indicated that around 40 of some 800 queries, about high hedges, resulted in the issue of a remediation notice. The Department is unaware of any court action relating to these remediation notices.

As a result of the reorganisation of councils, my Department is deferring a review of this legislation until after sufficient time has been given to allow its full implementation within the new council structures. How the councils enforced the legislation and ensured compliance will form an integral part of the future review.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment whether there is any legal requirement for children to wear helmets whilst cycling on public roads or any plans to introduce such a requirement.

(AQW 38894/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is no legal requirement for cyclists, either adults or children, to wear helmets whilst cycling on public roads in Northern Ireland or any other part of the United Kingdom.

The topic of cycle helmets has been a controversial one for many years. Although a good deal of research has been done in this area, no consensus has been reached on whether the wearing of helmets should be made compulsory. Taking this into account, along with the practicalities of enforcement, the possible impact on levels of cycling and the potential loss of wider environmental and health benefits, I am not persuaded that making helmets mandatory is the right option. I therefore have no current plans to introduce such a requirement.

My Department does however view the wearing of helmets as best practice when cycling, and promotes this in a number of key ways.

The Cycling Proficiency Scheme (CPS) is offered to all primary schools in Northern Ireland and is very popular. The objectives of CPS are to teach children in years 5, 6 and 7 how to ride their bicycles safely, to learn the basics of the Highway Code and help them become safer road users. In 2013 CPS was delivered in 538 schools with 8,365 children being trained. All children are encouraged to wear helmets during this training and many schools include the wearing of helmets in their school policy.

In order to further promote road safety amongst cyclists, and in particular children, my Department is developing a new Education Pack on cycling for use in primary and post primary schools. The pack, due for release early next year, is intended to initiate discussions about road safety and the choices that cyclists make on the road.

In April this year, I launched a cyclist safety campaign aimed at reducing road deaths and serious injuries involving cyclists by positively influencing the relationship between cyclists and drivers. The campaign is supported by the message "Respect Everyone's Journey". The message encourages drivers to look out for cyclists and encourages cyclists to take steps to increase their own safety. As such, the cyclists depicted in the advert are all wearing the correct helmet, as advised in the Official Highway Code for Northern Ireland.

My Department's policy on the use of cycle helmets is clear. All cyclists are encouraged to wear an approved helmet – one that conforms to current regulations, is the correct size and fits properly.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, given the recent heavy rainfall, whether there has been any pollution, or risk of pollution, to the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation due to the unauthorised depositing of waste at the site of planning approval K/2013/0072/F.

(AQW 38950/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) issued a consent under the terms of the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999, (consent number 068/12/2), for the discharge of drainage arising from the proposed development, on 6 February 2014. This consent contains conditions formulated to ensure that water quality objectives set for the Owenkillew will not be at risk of adverse impact by the proposed discharge.

The NIEA is closely monitoring this site, and officials have met with representatives of Dalradian Gold Ltd. on site on a number of occasions in recent weeks to discuss pollution prevention measures during both the construction and operational phases of the proposed development, and to assess the potential for impact on the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation (SAC).

Dalradian Gold Ltd. has provided the NIEA with copies of Pollution Prevention Management Plans which include details of mitigation measures proposed/ being taken to ensure protection of the Owenkillew SAC, during the proposed works at the site.

There has been no evidence of polluting impact as a result of the operations on site detected by the NIEA on any of the occasions that officers visited the site. The most recent inspection took place on Tuesday, 18 November 2014 and no evidence of pollution was observed.

An incident of alleged infilling in the proximity of the Owenkillew has been raised previously and my Planning officials are currently investigating.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will provide compensation to ratepayers affected by the difference between the legacy council rate and the new council rate.

(AQW 37560/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The support provided by the Executive is not intended to compensate ratepayers for the difference between the legacy council rate for 2014/15 and the new council rate for 2015/16.

The support provided to ratepayers under the District Rate Convergence Scheme will take the form of a pre-determined discount applied to the district rate poundage. This discount is confined only to the effects that convergence will have on district rates.

The Scheme will reduce the immediate impact on ratepayers and will also allow the new councils time to make efficiencies through this major reorganisation which should moderate district rates in the medium term.

Councils, of course, must also play their part in managing their affairs and act responsibly when striking their district rates.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are plans to utilise funds in dormant bank accounts. (AQW 37852/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Under Dormant Bank and Building Society Accounts Act (2008), the devolved administration in Northern Ireland (NI) receives a proportion of the dormant account funding, apportioned according to the Barnett formula.

The legislation allows the funds to be used for social or environmental purposes and provisions are included which enables the devolved administrations to set their own spending priorities.

In Northern Ireland this responsibility rests with my Department and my officials are currently developing plans on how to best utilise this funding.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the average space allocation per workplace in the Central Government Office Accommodation Estate in each of the last ten years. (AQW 38452/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The average space allocation per workstation in the central government benchmarked office estate is:

- 2010/2011 - 15.54 m<sup>2</sup> per workstation;
- 2011/2012 - 15.42 m<sup>2</sup> per workstation;
- 2012/2013 - 15.25 m<sup>2</sup> per workstation.

The information requested is not available prior to 2011 as workstation data was not collected at that time.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the payment arrangements under the Property Management Pan Government Collaborative Framework Agreement 2014. (AQW 38472/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The form of Contract upon which the Property Management Pan Government Collaborative Framework Agreement 2014 has been awarded is the NEC3 Term Service Contract. The payment clause within the Term Service Contract (Clause 51.2) states that 'each certified payment is made within three weeks of the assessment date'.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the capital spend in each of the last four financial years; (ii) the planned capital spend for 2014/15; and (iii) a real terms spending figure, taking into account Treasury Gross Domestic Product deflators. (AQW 38482/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The table below shows Final Outturn reported for 2010-11 to 2012-13, Provisional Outturn for 2013-14 and Forecast Outturn for 2014-15 for Capital DEL. Capital DEL adjusted to 2014-15 prices using GDP deflators is detailed in the table below.

£m	2010-11 Final Outturn	2011-12 Final Outturn	2012-13 Final Outturn	2013-14 Provisional Outturn	2014-15 Forecast Outturn

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the level of (a) domestic; and (b) business rates arrears, in the last three years. (AQW 38610/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The level of (a) domestic; and (b) non-domestic debt outstanding at the end of each of the last three financial years is provided in the table below.

Year	Domestic Debt	Non-Domestic Debt
31st March 2012	£70,657,475	£90,764,179

Year	Domestic Debt	Non-Domestic Debt
31st March 2013	£78,805,756	£89,755,558
31st March 2014*	£80,097,027	£82,664,895

*2013/14 figures subject to audit assurance.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people have been taken to court for rates arrears in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38613/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The number of people taken to Court for rates arrears in each of the last three years is not available. The number of occupancies that have been listed for Court action and issued with a Court process in each of the last three years, for which information is available, is given in the table below. An occupancy represents a liable ratepayer in a property at a given time.

Rating Year	Number of Occupancies Issued with Court Processes
2011/12	41,311
2012/13	42,607
2013/14	43,851

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the review of social clauses.

(AQW 38680/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Programme for Government contains a commitment to “include social clauses in all public procurement contracts for supplies, services and construction”. Targets in respect of this commitment are included in the Procurement Board’s Strategic Plan.

Officials are currently liaising with DEL and other stakeholders on the implications of the end of the Steps to Work Scheme and implementation of Steps to Success for social clauses.

At its last meeting on 5 November 2014 the Procurement Board agreed to look at options for conducting a review of the impact of social clauses. Officials are currently considering options for commissioning this review.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration his Department has given to reforming procurement legislation.

(AQW 38681/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Public procurement in Northern Ireland is regulated by The Public Contracts Regulations 2006 (as amended), The Utilities Contracts Regulations 2006 (as amended) and the overarching EU Treaty principles.

A new EU Procurement Directive came into force on 17 April 2014 and will be transposed into implementing Regulations next year.

My officials are working closely with colleagues in Cabinet Office to ensure the Northern Ireland view is reflected in the Regulations.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what percentage of his Department’s DEL is spent on salaries; and how he intends to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38689/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Approximately 45% of my Department’s DEL expenditure relates to salaries.

My Department has already taken steps to minimise spend in this area by only filling vacancies that would otherwise have had a disproportionate affect on delivering our priorities and those that are funded through charging.

Any further staff reductions required to enable the Department to live within its 2015-16 budget will be managed in line with NICS policies, including the voluntary exit scheme announced by the Executive.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how each non ring-fenced Resource Departmental Expenditure Limits baselines were constructed in the 2015/16 draft budget.

(AQW 38715/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In terms of Resource DEL, the approach to constructing a one year Resource DEL Budget has favoured an incremental approach. This has been reinforced by comments from pre-consultation stakeholders. Therefore, rather than seeking to establish departmental resource budgets from a zero base, the 2015-16 Budget was established based on a substantive roll forward from the 2014-15 Opening Monitoring position but removing time-bound allocations.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the realisable value of all assets currently available for disposal by Departments.

(AQW 38719/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Individual departments are best placed to advise on the detail of the realisable value of all assets currently available for disposal.

Whilst Land and Property Services (LPS) hold detail of land and property assets declared surplus by departments, valuations may not reflect the current realisable value. LPS do not hold information relating to other asset types.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much money allocated to each Department in the draft budget for 2015/16, is restated money from the previous budget allocation.

(AQW 38831/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: No funding has been re-stated from 2014-15 allocations. 2015-16 Budgets were provisionally set as part of the draft Budget.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the Barnett consequential of HM Government's announcement of additional healthcare spend in England and Wales.

(AQW 38855/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: At this stage the UK Government has not outlined how the recently announced additional funding for 'NHS winter pressures' has been funded.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer's Autumn Statement on 3 December 2014 will detail in full the Barnett consequential due to Northern Ireland as a consequence of UK Government spending decisions.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the administrative costs incurred by each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37973/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): Administrative costs incurred by each Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last three years, are set out in the table below. Costs include total administrative and clerical costs of HSC Trusts, including staff supporting the delivery of front line services to patients and clients.

	2013/14 £'000	2012/13 £'000	2011/12 £'000
Belfast Health and Social Care Trust	99,750	99,104	99,921
Northern Health and Social Care Trust	48,907	50,296	48,955
Southern Health and Social Care Trust	49,330	49,376	45,448
South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust	36,655	36,004	36,649
Western Health and Social Care Trust	41,693	42,180	38,926
Northern Ireland Ambulance Service HSCT	4,085	3,907	3,792

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the administrative costs incurred by the Health and Social Care Board in each of the last three years.

(AQW 37974/11-15)

Mr Wells: Administrative costs incurred by the Health and Social Care Board in each of the last three years are set out in the table below. This includes goods and services, running costs and salaries costs.

2013/14 £'000	2012/13 £'000	2011/12 £'000
30,456	28,630	27,557

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37401/11-15, to detail (i) the number of managers that have progressed through the pay range based on the evaluated level of the post on the basis of delivering satisfactory performance over the last five years in each Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) the number of managers on the maximum salary; and (iii) the (a) minimum and (b) maximum salary range.

(AQW 38018/11-15)

Mr Wells: In keeping with AQW 37401/11-15, the term 'managers' has been interpreted as senior executive staff i.e. Director level and above (including Chief Executive).

The numbers and personnel in the senior executive pay scheme have not been a constant over previous years and comparisons would consequently be unreliable. The collation of 5 years' figures could also only be carried out at a disproportionate cost.

Progression through the pay range is based on performance over the previous year. The most up to date figures currently available are for the year 2012/13.

- (i) The table below shows the number of managers in each Health and Social Care Trust that have progressed through the pay range based on the evaluated level of the post and on the basis of delivering satisfactory performance.

	2012/13
Belfast HSC Trust	11
Southern HSC Trust	8
South Eastern HSC Trust	8
Northern HSC Trust	10
Western HSC Trust	11
NIAS HSC Trust	4

	2012/13
Belfast HSC Trust	2
Southern HSC Trust	1
South Eastern HSC Trust	1
Northern HSC Trust	0
Western HSC Trust	3

2	96,949	129,264
3	83,098	110,801
4	72,712	96,949
5	62,323	83,098

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether the proposed consultation on 'The International Working Group's recommended future model for delivering congenital cardiac services for the population of Northern Ireland' meets the legal standards set for bona fide consultations in R v Brent London Borough Council, ex p Gunning, (1985) 84 LGR 168.

(AQW 38056/11-15)

Mr Wells: The consultation document, which I launched on 3 November 2014, provides patients, their families, clinicians and the public with an opportunity over a twelve week period to give their views on each of the fourteen recommendations, and invites alternative views to the model recommended by the International Working Group (IWG), having considered four possible service configuration options. There will be six public engagement events at locations throughout Northern Ireland during the consultation period, which will provide further opportunities for views to be shared on how that model might work best. I will await the outcome of the consultation and consider those views thoroughly before making my final decision on whether to implement the IWG's recommended service model.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the amount of funding initially allocated to Gingerbread NI in 2014/15; and (ii) whether this amount has been reduced due to budget pressures.

Mr Wells: The interim grant letter issued to Gingerbread NI for 2014/15 provided them an allocation of £45,424.67. The letter of offer and terms and conditions of grant stated that the Department was unable to confirm funding beyond the four month period covered in the letter.

Now that we have clarity on the financial position of my department in 2014/15 following the October monitoring round, I intend to confirm the final allocation to all community and voluntary organisations this year very shortly.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why an employee would be engaged for five or more years through a recruitment agency; and what plans are in place to prevent such a practice from reoccurring.
(AQW 38087/11-15)

Mr Wells: In the absence of specific information as to which Health and Social Care sector organisation, and to which post the Member is referring, it is difficult to comment on the particular circumstances referred to and what steps, if any, the organisation is taking to prevent such a practice from reoccurring in the future.

Health and Social Care Trusts will only use agency staff when unable to recruit and in situations of urgency. Agency workers have the right to apply for all vacancies within their Trust.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the costs experienced by the families of premature and sick babies; and what assistance his Department can provide to these families.
(AQW 38094/11-15)

Mr Wells: I fully appreciate that there are costs for parents and families associated with having a baby in neonatal care and that this can be an additional worry at an already difficult time. For this reason, our neonatal units offer various support services, which may include free accommodation for parents, free parking, meals, meal vouchers, kitchen facilities, and childcare/crèche facilities. The Health and Social Care Hospital Travel Costs Scheme also provides reimbursement of travel costs to hospital for health service treatment for patients and their dependents falling under certain criteria.

I am aware of the soon to be released report produced by the charities Bliss and TinyLife, which sets out the results of a recent survey on the costs faced by families of premature and sick babies. I will be giving careful consideration to the findings of this report, and my Department will work closely with stakeholders on any issues that are highlighted.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what increases in salary have been received by Northern Health and Social Care Trust staff who currently earn in excess of £60,000 per annum, between 1 January 2009 and 1 January 2014; and how many staff received these increases.

Mr Wells: HSC staff who earn in excess of £60,000 include a wide range of disciplines that are subject to different pay agreements. The information requested is not readily available and can only be obtained at a disproportionate cost

In general terms, increases in salary between 1 January 2009 and 1 January 2014 would have been given as the result of annual pay awards. All HSC staff, subject to satisfactory performance, would have received a cost of living increase for that particular financial year and where appropriate incremental progression. It should be noted, however, that a Government pay freeze was in place during 2011/12 and 2012/13, when no cost of living increases were made.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the £31m for unscheduled care and the £4m for nursing staff levels from the October Monitoring round will be allocated.

Mr Wells: The £31m allocation for unscheduled care will be aimed at:

- Unscheduled Care (£5m): Some of this allocation will fund unscheduled care initiatives which are already in place such as expansion of the medical workforce at a number of sites; support for 24/7 acute community working and the continuation of Hospital Ambulance Liaison Officers (HALOs) at four Emergency Departments. Funding will also be provided to enhance out of hours capacity in primary and community care and to support winter pressures across the Trusts, including NIAS.
- Domiciliary Care (£8m): This funding will help to address the increasing demands for new packages and the increased costs in this area. It will help to maintain patient flow through the hospital system and ensure that the most vulnerable people in the community are prioritised for support in their homes.

- Trusts Contingency Plans (£18m): This funding will help the trusts to manage some of the pressures in relation to agency/bank/locum medical, nursing and social work staff and to minimise the impact on the delivery of services from contingency plan proposals.

In terms of Safety and Quality (£4m), this will be used to help to meet the ongoing pressures of nursing staffing in medical and surgical inpatient hospital wards. This funding equates to approximately 100 posts, and will:

- Assist in ensuring safe nursing levels on medical and surgical inpatient wards;
- Bring acute in patient wards closer to alignment with the requirements of normative nursing; and
- Reduce the number of additional hours required through bank and agency

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37840/11-15, what action he will take to ensure that the Ulster Hospital's clinical target of 6 months for steroid injection treatment is met; and how he plans to address the current situation whereby a lack of consultants with specific expertise is resulting in some patients having to wait 14 months between injections.

(AQW 38121/11-15)

Mr Wells: The responsibility for arranging treatment for patients including the frequency of steroid injections is both a clinical and an operational matter which, in this case, is the responsibility of the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust (SHSCT).

The SHSCT is currently reforming the way its chronic pain service is delivered in order to manage certain types of patient in a more effective way, thus freeing up more clinic time for the more complex patients. An injection clinic session has also recently commenced to manage the less complex cases allowing a higher number of patients to be seen. In addition, a consultant from the Trust is currently receiving training in chronic pain in Scotland and will be returning to the Trust early next year.

Not all patients require steroid injections every six months and some patients will not need a further injection after 6 months. However, if a patient is in pain and the GP re-refers the patient, they will be given an urgent appointment.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why appointment times for post-transplant patients are being extended in each Health and Social Care Trust; and what impact this decision will have on vulnerable patients who are susceptible to infection.

(AQW 38147/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is assumed this question refers to renal transplant recipients. The review interval for post-transplant patients steadily increases as the time from transplantation increases and is set by the responsible clinician in line with individual patients' clinical need. Health and Social Care Trusts have not reported any issues regarding the extension of post-transplant review intervals beyond that which is clinically appropriate.

To minimise the risk of infection, post-transplant patients are provided with appropriate advice on behaviour, on regular immunisations and pharmaco-prophylaxis in line with standard clinical practice and national clinical guidelines. All patients are encouraged to seek medical advice at an early stage should they feel they are developing an infection.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether TomoTherapy is available as a means of treatment for cancer patients.

(AQW 38153/11-15)

Mr Wells: Tomotherapy is not available in Northern Ireland as a means to deliver external beam radiotherapy treatment for cancer patients.

Tomotherapy machines have been installed in a small number of UK sites; however, the vast majority of cancer centres have chosen linear accelerator based solutions in view of their superior versatility and accuracy of their image guided technology.

The linear accelerators currently installed at the Belfast Cancer Centre can deliver all of the equivalent functionality and clinically effective treatment options of tomotherapy. There is little research evidence to suggest that tomotherapy is superior to conventional radiotherapy. The linear accelerators in the Cancer Centre are capable of much more precise, accurate, efficient and versatile therapy than tomotherapy. This view is supported by a number of published studies comparing the possible treatment and dosimetric advantages of a range of radiotherapy treatment modalities.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he is aware of the availability of TomoTherapy treatment in Britain.

(AQW 38154/11-15)

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what was the spend on the cleaning and hygiene regime of Pinewood Residential Care Home in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38195/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust have provided the following figures for cleaning and hygiene spend on Pinewood Residential Home in the past five years:

2008/09 £125,793

2009/10 £140,439

2010/11 £138,329

2011/12 £148,965

2012/13 £146,252

The Trust have also advised me there are additional costs incurred by Trust rapid response cleaning teams and time spent by care assistants on these regimes which are difficult to determine, but are estimated to be an average of approximately £25,000 per year.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what he classifies as frontline health and social care services; and whether such includes the provision of intermediate and respite beds.

(AQW 38196/11-15)

Mr Wells: I classify frontline care as the health and social care services provided directly to patients and clients. This can occur in a range of settings and locations.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail each statutory residential care home, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, including the number of (i) beds; and (ii) residents in each, as of 1 November 2014, for each year since 2011.

(AQW 38248/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not collected centrally and was requested from the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board.

The tables below detail the number of beds and residents in statutory residential homes for the elderly and elderly mentally infirm (EMI) at 1st September, for each year since 2011 in each HSC Trust.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the potential closure of statutory residential care homes in each of Health and Social Care Trust in the next (i) six; and (ii) twelve months.

(AQW 38249/11-15)

Mr Wells: Following a HSC Board- led public consultation on proposed criteria for the evaluation of statutory residential homes for older people, final agreed criteria for evaluation of homes were published in June 2014.

Trusts were required to apply the criteria to relevant residential care homes for older people in their area, and subsequently make proposals for change to the Board for consideration.

It is anticipated that Trust proposals for change will be considered at a HSC Board meeting in early 2015.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail where Multiple Sclerosis respite services will be provided in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust following the closure of services in Dalriada Hospital in November 2014.

(AQW 38295/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that those who access Multiple Sclerosis (MS) Respite Services in the Dalriada Hospital mainly come from the Northern (45 users), Western (currently 10 users), and Belfast Health and Social Care Trust areas (currently 2 users). There are a range of independent sector providers in these areas and the other Health and Social Care Trusts have been providing MS respite care through the independent sector for some time.

For those who require respite services after November 2014, the Northern Health and Social Care Trust will continue to meet their needs and named workers are currently meeting with service users and their carers to discuss those needs and agree suitable alternative arrangements. Respite services to MS patients will still be provided and everyone who requires respite will continue to receive it.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he was first informed by officials from the Northern Health and Social Care Trust of the proposal to close Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle.

(AQW 38296/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust's final contingency plan was submitted to my Department on 23 October 2014.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the current maximum waiting time for a visit from an Occupational Therapist in County Fermanagh; and (ii) what efforts his Department is taking to reduce the waiting time.

(AQW 38315/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust (WHST) has advised that the longest wait for occupational therapy at 30 September 2014 was 314 days. The WHST has further advised that service demands currently outweigh funded staff capacity. All referrals are screened on the basis of clinical need, risk and appropriateness. Priority is given to those clients who are deemed at highest clinical risk and all other referrals are processed chronologically.

The Health and Social Care Board and Public Health Agency are currently working closely with the WHST to address this waiting time issue. Work is ongoing to establish the level of demand for occupational therapy services and the capacity necessary to meet such demand in line with my challenging 9 week access standard.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how his Department intends to improve the provision of cancer services for people in County Fermanagh.

(AQW 38316/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust is responsible for the delivery of cancer services in County Fermanagh. Residents in Fermanagh have access to the full range of local cancer services; including surgery, chemotherapy and specialist palliative care, servicing a total population of approximately 300,000.

People living in County Fermanagh will benefit from the new radiotherapy unit at Altnagelvin Hospital when it becomes operational in 2016. Currently all radiotherapy is delivered at the Belfast Cancer Centre. The location of the new unit will mean that all cancer patients in Fermanagh will have access to radiotherapy treatments closer to home.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, to detail the number of referrals made by each Health and Social Care Trust to the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital, in each of the last three years, broken down by month.

(AQW 38326/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of referrals made by each Health and Social Care Trust to the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital is not collected centrally.

Information is however available on the number of admissions to Dalriada Hospital with a primary diagnosis of respite care by the patient's trust of residence, which is detailed in the table below.

Notes:

Figures relate to admissions rather than individuals as such an individual may be admitted to hospital more than once during the year and will be counted for each admission.

Cell sizes less than 5 have been masked to protect patient confidentiality.

- 1 Admissions are estimated using deaths and discharges.
- 2 Respite Care has been defined using the International Classification of Disease (revision 10) code Z75.5, in only the primary diagnostic position.
- 3 HSC Trust of residence refers to the patient's Local Commissioning Group which is based on the patient's postcode.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the services provided at the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre at Dalriada Hospital were promoted or communicated (a) within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust; and (b) to the other Health and Social Care Trusts in the last two years.

(AQW 38327/11-15)

Mr Wells: In the last two years, within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, when a service user with Multiple Sclerosis (MS) was assessed as requiring respite, the MS Centre at Dalriada Hospital was explored as an option for meeting this need. It would then be the service user's personal choice as to whether this option was progressed or an alternative considered.

In relation to Health and Social Care Trusts, in the last two years annual contract review meetings were held with the other two Trusts who commission services i.e. the Western Health and Social Care Trust and the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust. The commissioned levels of activity have been reducing over the past 10 years.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the £600,000 that the Northern Trust have said would be saved as a result of closing 32 beds at Dalriada Hospital.

(AQW 38368/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust expects to make the following savings as a result of the temporary closure of 12 MS Respite beds and 20 Intermediate Care beds in Dalriada Hospital. The savings plan will apply until 31 March 2015.

Cost Savings for Intermediate Care (Inc MS Respite) – Dalriada Hospital

Ward Costs	Cost Savings for 4 months from 01/12/2014 £'000
Nursing Costs	405
Goods & Services Costs of Ward	31
Support Service Costs	79
Utilities	9
Medical Cover	41
Allied Health Professional Costs	57
Total Dalriada Ward Costs	622
Less: Gross Reprovision Costs of 6 MS beds	(61)
Totals Net of Reprovision Costs	561

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety where Multiple Sclerosis patients will be relocated to should Dalriada Hospital close.

(AQW 38369/11-15)

Mr Wells: Any decision regarding the future of the Dalriada Hospital rests with the Northern Health and Social Care Trust. Following its recent decision to propose a temporary closure of the MS respite beds in the hospital, as part of its financial contingency plans, the Trust has provided public assurance that respite services to MS patients will still be provided and everyone who requires respite will receive it. The Trust is working with everyone involved to ensure that service users' assessed needs are met.

The Trust has confirmed that named workers are currently meeting with service users and their carers to ascertain their specific needs and to identify those providers who would provide the best alternative to that provided at the Dalriada Hospital.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the pressure that would be put on acute services by the closure of intermediate beds at Dalriada Hospital.

(AQW 38370/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has a number of services in place within the community to ensure patients are supported in their own home, are only admitted to hospital when absolutely necessary and to facilitate early discharge. The range of services operating across the Trust are: domiciliary care; reablement services; and, a rapid response service. With regard to intermediate care services, the Trust currently operates 106 intermediate care beds with 40% of these in the Causeway locality.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the closure of intermediate care and respite beds is in keeping with Transforming Your Care.

(AQW 38371/11-15)

Mr Wells: The recent announcements of temporary closures of intermediate care and respite beds were due to the need to maintain the integrity of services and make required savings in what is left of the current financial year. At all times, my clear focus is on ensuring that services are safe and effective while seeking to achieve financial balance. Due to the seriousness of the current financial situation, there may be instances where necessary short term actions do not match the Department's long term policy aspirations.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the outpatient specialities for which consultations are currently held at Moyle Hospital, Larne; and the reasons why any specialities have ceased since 2011.

(AQW 38385/11-15)

Mr Wells: The following consultant-led services are provided in the Moyle Hospital: Rheumatology; Diabetic; Ear Nose and Throat (ENT); Surgery; Orthopaedics; Gynaecology; Antenatal; Ophthalmology (which is a visiting speciality from Belfast Trust) and Visual Fields; and Paediatrics.

Four consultant-led services have been relocated from the Moyle Hospital site since 2011.

- The Consultant led Dermatology clinic held on the Moyle Hospital site was re-located to the Antrim site due to job planning requirements in 2013/14, this is a permanent move.
- There is a current staff maternity leave within the respiratory service which is being covered by a Locum Consultant. The job planning for the locum has located the clinic temporarily at Whiteabbey Hospital Outpatients rather than the Moyle Hospital Outpatients.

- Patients currently requiring ultrasound scans during pregnancy have to attend Antrim Area Hospital for this service due to a fault with the equipment. A new scanner has been ordered and it is expected this will be in place by the end of this year at which point the service will resume in the Moyle Hospital.
- The speciality of General Medicine has been reconfigured in the last 3 years with General medicine clinics reconfigured to speciality medical clinics. There was activity for General medicine outpatients in Moyle Hospital in 12/13 which did not continue in 13/14.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of Sapphire Nurses; and (ii) the range of support services available for patients with epilepsy in the Western Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 38386/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are currently no Sapphire funded Nurses engaged in the Western Health and Social Care Trust. The Western Trust has a 0.5 wte epilepsy nurse specialist for Acute Adult medicine who sees patients aged 16 and older. Patients younger than this are seen within the paediatric epilepsy service.

Support services for epilepsy patients within the Western Trust include:

- Consultant outpatient clinics;
- Epilepsy Nurse Specialist Outpatient clinics;
- Epilepsy Nurse Specialist transition clinics – paediatric to adult service;
- Telephone advice from Epilepsy Nurse Specialist;
- Referral to Occupational Therapy and Social Services;
- Signposting to voluntary sector – Epilepsy Action Group.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the measures contained in the Western Health and Social Care Trust's savings plan for 2014/15, particularly measures which threaten to reduce essential health services at the Tyrone County Hospital and in the Omagh area. (AQW 38388/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust, like other Trusts is currently implementing a number of contingency measures which are necessary to address a range of competing pressures and priorities across health and social care, as it is simply not possible to maintain current levels of service provision from within existing budget allocations. In developing these measures, paramount consideration has been given to patient safety, whilst also seeking to achieve financial balance for DHSSPS.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37334/11-15, for an update on his consideration of these recommendations; and when a decision about the viability of an air ambulance service will be made. (AQW 38406/11-15)

Mr Wells: I discussed the Republic of Ireland's (ROI) Emergency Aeromedical Support service group's review with the ROI's Minister of Health, Leo Varadkar TD, at a North South Ministerial Council meeting on 12 November 2014. I expect to receive the group's report in the near future and will consider the recommendations in this report and the Health and Social Care Board's Helicopter Emergency Medical Service study before making a decision about an air ambulance service.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the full time equivalent staff allocation of the Emergency Department in (i) the South West Acute Hospital; and (ii) Erne Hospital at the time of its closure. (AQW 38407/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western HSC Trust have provided the figures shown in the table below, showing whole-time equivalent (WTE) staff allocations (funded establishment posts) for the Emergency Departments at Erne Hospital, at the time of its closure in June 2012, and at the South-West Acute Hospital in November 2014.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether all Health and Social Care Trusts have a specific universal threshold in respect of care packages; and if so, to detail how they are calculated for senior citizens requiring domiciliary care, including the range of packages; and if each Health and Social Care Trust sets their own threshold, to detail their respective ranges of care packages and expenditure.

(AQW 38412/11-15)

Mr Wells: All the Health and Social Care Trusts assess the needs of older people using the Northern Ireland Single Assessment Tool (NISAT). The Regional Access Criteria for Domiciliary Care (Circular HSS (ECCU) 2/2008) is used to determine eligibility and fair access to domiciliary care services, to ensure resources are targeted to those most in need.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the decision was taken to merge a palliative care ward and a rehabilitation ward at Tyrone County Hospital, given that the palliative care ward cares for terminally ill patients and the rehabilitation ward cares for patients that are recovering.

(AQW 38415/11-15)

Mr Wells: My priorities are to ensure the services provided by Health and Social Care are safe and effective and also to ensure that my Department achieves financial balance, as is required of all Ministers. To achieve these aims, Health and Social Care Trusts have produced contingency plans to achieve financial break even. Each Trust has provided assurances that their services will remain safe and effective and has taken steps to protect frontline services.

The Western Health and Social Care Trust decided on 11th November 2014 that it will keep the palliative care and rehabilitation wards at Tyrone County Hospital separate.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37153/11-15, for an update on (i) the progress of the evaluation of the Individual Funding Request process currently being carried out by departmental officials; and (ii) the expected completion date for this evaluation.

(AQW 38422/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Chief Medical Officer is leading on this work; a project board has been formed and has met. Consultation work to consider the views of patients, the industry and other key stakeholders is being taken forward. I have requested initial findings by the end of November and the evaluation will be completed by the end of the year.

I empathise entirely with patients undergoing treatment for cancer and other serious conditions and want to assure them that my aim is to ensure they receive the most effective treatment possible.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the repercussions for staff of Dalriada Hospital following its temporary closure.

(AQW 38428/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am advised that there are just under 120 employees associated with the Dalriada Hospital site, and it is anticipated that 61 employees will be affected by the service change.

Permanent staff will be redeployed to support acute, community and emergency services. No staff will lose their jobs and the hours they work will remain as per their contract.

There are a number of posts in the Causeway locality (ie Ballymoney, Coleraine and Ballycastle) and Human Resources staff and service managers, in partnership with Trade Unions, are currently working with staff to match their skills to posts available and to ensure that, as far as possible, individual circumstances are taken into account.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action is being taken to alleviate the length of waiting times in relation to primary school children being referred for autism diagnosis.

(AQW 38448/11-15)

Mr Wells: Over the last few years demand for Autism Spectrum Disorder specific services has continued to rise. This increase is due in part to improvements in the early identification of children for assessment by General Practitioners, Health Visitors, and Educational Services. As a direct result of this sustained and continuing pattern of increased demand on autism services, the waiting times for assessment and support continue to lengthen. It is recognised that there is a shortfall in resources and this area has been identified as a core pressure requiring additional investment.

To help alleviate the length of waiting times, the HSC Board is reviewing the current operating models across all Trusts with a view to remodelling the assessment and diagnostic process. This should maximise the current capacity of the system. A new template to record waiting times in excess of 13 weeks will enable the Board to monitor average waiting times for commencement of assessment.

As an interim measure, the Board are working with Trusts to agree, based on their respective capacity, a maximum waiting time. Once agreed, families will be made aware of the maximum time that they can expect to wait to commence the assessment process.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he supports the Alzheimer's Society's new Right to Know campaign; and what steps he will take to improve early diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease and support patients following diagnosis.

(AQW 38471/11-15)

Mr Wells: A key objective for the regional Dementia Strategy Implementation Group is to raise diagnosis rates across NI to 75% and above. The most recently available figures show that NI has a diagnosis rate of 63.2% which is well above the UK average (46%). The rate for Belfast is 75.1%, which is the highest in the UK.

Over the next 3 years, the Implementation Group will focus on the key target areas of (i) awareness raising, information and support, (ii) training; and (iii) short-breaks, respite and support to carers.

The Delivering Social Change Programme will be contributing £6.2m to support this work over the next three years, and this will aim to deliver a significant improvement in the quality of dementia care and the support people living with dementia need to maintain their independence and live well with the condition for as long as possible.

I have no doubt that these objectives, alongside the work of Alzheimer's Society; will make a significant contribution to the quality of life, care and treatment of people with dementia and their carers.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much will be saved as a result of the temporary closure of the GP Ward in Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38485/11-15)

Mr Wells: The cost savings which are expected to be made as a result of the temporary closure of the GP Ward (planned from 1 December 2014) are approximately £207k.

They form part of the Trust's overall plan to achieve financial break even while maximising patient safety.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can provide a reassurance to staff currently working in the Minor Injuries Unit and GP Ward in Bangor Community Hospital that their jobs will be protected.

(AQW 38486/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has given an assurance that all permanent staff in both the Bangor GP Ward and Bangor Minor Injuries Unit will have their jobs protected.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the proposed changes for short break services for children with a disability at Willowgrove House in Banbridge; and what consideration has been given to incorporating parental views on these changes, including whether the potential impact on the health and wellbeing of parents and their children is being considered.

(AQW 38489/11-15)

Mr Wells: In keeping with Transforming Your Care, the Southern Trust is currently reviewing the short break provision it offers to children with disabilities with the aim of providing a more flexible, responsive, quality service, and a wider range of family oriented services in the community. This will provide an alternative option to the existing traditional residential short breaks units, such as Willowgrove House.

Family based carers may include childminders and short break foster carers, offering a service which is more flexible than a facility providing for a large number of children. It also allows carers and their children/family to develop a supportive relationship with another family. The Trust's aim is for all children with disabilities, under 12 years old, and assessed as requiring an overnight short break, to be able to avail of this in a family setting, wherever possible.

As the number and range of support services and options increases, it is anticipated that the numbers of children and young people using Willowgrove will decrease. In the meantime there will be no reduction in the service being offered by Willowgrove or the other residential short breaks units within the Trust. The children and young people currently using the facilities will be able to continue to do so at a level that meets their assessed needs.

The Trust has arranged a number of meetings with parents over recent months to discuss potential developments in short breaks' provision, and the consultation process is ongoing. Parents' views and assessments regarding the impact of being a carer are also considered on an individual case basis for every child and family availing of overnight breaks. Parents will continue to be involved in discussions in relation to the development of the Trust's range of short breaks services.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current waiting time for access to the Meals on Wheels service in County Fermanagh.

(AQW 38490/11-15)

Mr Wells: This information is not held centrally by the Department and was therefore requested from the Western Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. Their response can be found below.

The Western HSC Trust does not record this information.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) current full time equivalent (FTE) complement; and (ii) allocated FTE of community occupational therapists in County Fermanagh.

(AQW 38491/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust advises that there are currently 4.5 WTE (whole-time equivalent) Community Occupational Therapists, and 1.0 WTE Technical Instructor in post in County Fermanagh. This corresponds to the allocated WTE.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to quantify the number of patients from across the border accessing services in (i) Erne Hospital; and (ii) South West Acute Hospital, broken down by clinical area, in each quarter since January 2010.

(AQW 38492/11-15)

Mr Wells: Due to the small numbers of patients accessing services at Erne and South West Acute hospital information requested has been presented by calendar year rather than quarter.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) location; and (ii) number of 'alternative nurse' assisted intermediate facilities in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area, including the percentage occupancy from 2009 to date.

(AQW 38498/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally therefore it was requested from the Northern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. Their response can be found in Table 1 below. Note that information is not available for 2009/10.

Table 1. Number and occupancy rates of nursing intermediate care beds in the Northern HSC Trust (2010/11 - 2014/15)

Unit	Beds	Occupancy %
		2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14	YTD 2014-15
Robinson Hospital	21-25	82.5	84.9	88.1	87.8	91
Inver Hospital	16-18	78.4	86.9	82	89.7	90.2

Whiteabbey Hospital	min 4*	N/A	N/A	94.3	89.1	89.6
Dalriada Hospital	20	87	86.8	86.8	86.3	92

* The intermediate care beds in Mid Ulster Hospital and Whiteabbey Hospital are in the Sub-Acute Rehab Wards which allow for some flexibility at times to increase numbers. Occupancy figures are therefore in relation to the whole ward as these beds are not monitored separately.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a breakdown of the projected net savings for 2014/15 for the temporary closure of the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38503/11-15)

Mr Wells: As both these questions relate to projected cost savings in Bangor Community Hospital, a combined response has been provided

The savings which are expected to be made as a result of proposed closures at Bangor Community Hospital are as follows:

- The temporary closure of the Bangor MIU (planned from 1 December 2014) will deliver cash releasing savings of approximately £65k.

- The temporary closure of the twenty beds (planned from 1 December 2014) will save approximately £207k.

They form part of the Trust's overall plan to achieve financial break even while maximising patient safety.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the staff complement of Northfield House Residential Home in Donaghadee.

(AQW 38529/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Trust have provided the current staffing position at Northfield House by headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE). This is shown in the table below.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of residents of Northfield House Residential Home in Donaghadee.

(AQW 38530/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information is not collected centrally and was requested from the South Eastern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust.

The South Eastern HSC Trust stated that Northfield House is registered for 41 beds. At 13 November 2014 there were 4 permanent residents, 3 respite residents, 8 intermediate care residents and 26 vacant beds.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the staff complement of the Minor Injury Unit in Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38532/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Trust have provided the current staffing position at the Bangor Minor Injury Unit (MIU) by headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE). This is shown in the table below. The Trust note that all staff work across both Bangor and Ards MIUs, and that they have excluded members of staff on sick leave for reasons of confidentiality.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact on addiction service provision in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust of the decision by the Department of Justice to cease funding the Railway Street Addiction Service in Ballymena from 31 January 2015.

(AQW 38536/11-15)

Mr Wells: Railway Street Community Addiction Service has been a successful partnership between the Community Safety Unit of the Department of Justice (DoJ) and the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) for over 14 years. The service works in partnership with the local community and criminal justice agencies to reduce the harm caused to individuals, their families and the wider community by drug misuse.

The Railway Street service has been independently assessed as a model of best practice in harm reduction services for injecting drug users across the UK and I am extremely disappointed by the DoJ's decision to remove funding from this effective example of cross-Departmental working.

The NHSCT have informed me that the withdrawal of two thirds of the funding for the scheme means that it cannot be sustained in its present form and they are currently reviewing the way in which a significantly reduced service can be provided in the future. It should be clarified that, following a meeting between the NHSCT and DoJ, funding has been provide to extend the service until the end of February 2014 to facilitate the work with staff and service users in managing this change.

Since that meeting, the NHSCT has had a number of meetings with staff at Railway Street to advise them of the decision and to discuss the implications for staff and service users. A working group has been established to draw up options to ensure that those engaged in the service continue to be supported, albeit in a different way. As part of this process, NHSCT will also meet with other stakeholders including local GPs and pharmacists.

NHSCT is also meeting with officials from the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency on 24 November 2014 to discuss and review further the implications of the DoJ's decision. The Northern Trust has also written to all current service users advising them of the change and assuring them of its commitment to continue to support them as much as possible. However, the withdrawal of funding will undoubtedly have implications for the total level of community (i.e. Tier 3) alcohol and drug services provided the area.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the actual or planned discussions with the Northern Health and Social Care Trust on the future provision of addiction services provided by Railway Street Addiction Services in Ballymena in light of the decision by the Department of Justice to cease funding from January 2015, which represents a 66 per cent cut in funding in an area with the largest number of drug related deaths outside of the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38537/11-15)

Mr Wells: Railway Street Community Addiction Service has been a successful partnership between the Community Safety Unit of the Department of Justice (DoJ) and the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) for over 14 years. The service works in partnership with the local community and criminal justice agencies to reduce the harm caused to individuals, their families and the wider community by drug misuse.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the decision by the Department of Justice to withdraw funding from the Railway Street Addiction Service in Ballymena will result in job losses.

(AQW 38538/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (the Trust) has advised that those posts funded by the Department of Justice will, regrettably, be lost. During the four month period before which funding is withdrawn, however, the Trust will support permanent staff in securing alternative employment in either the remodeled service or other Trust services. The Trust will also explore opportunities to enable temporary staff to be employed within Trust services as part of the management of change process.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to provide a breakdown of the number of intermediate beds available in each Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) how many of these beds are (a) nurse; and (b) carer assisted; and (iii) what are the specific limitations in a carer assisted compared to nurse assisted beds, with regard to the services offered to and types of patients which can be accepted.

(AQW 38546/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on intermediate care beds is not collected centrally and was requested from the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts.

- (i) Information on the number of intermediate care beds available in each Trust is detailed in Table 1 below:

Table 1: Intermediate Care Beds, by HSC Trust

HSC Trust	Intermediate Care Beds
Belfast	35
Northern	88*
South Eastern	113
Southern	25
Western	78

* The number provided by the Northern HSC Trust indicates the minimum intermediate care beds that are available. It does not include intermediate care beds in Dalriada Hospital.

- (ii) Information on the number of nurse and carer assisted intermediate care beds in each Trust is detailed in Table 2 below:

Table 2: Intermediate Care Beds, by Type and HSC Trust

HSC Trust	Nurse Assisted	Carer Assisted
Belfast	0	35
Northern#	44	44
South Eastern	76	37
Southern	20	5
Western^	-	-

Note this table does not include 20 nurse assisted intermediate care beds in Dalriada Hospital.

^ Patients admitted to intermediate care beds in the Western HSC Trust receive care and treatment from a multi-professional team including medical consultants, GPs, specialty doctors, nurses and AHPs.

- (iii) Patients assessed as having a requirement for 24 hour nursing care are placed in intermediate care nursing beds whilst those who do not require 24 hour nursing care are placed in carer assisted beds. Patients are placed in the most appropriate setting based on their assessed need. This would include patients' access to the services of medical, nursing and allied health professionals in accordance with their health and social care need.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the closure of Dalriada Hospital will affect ambulance cover.

(AQW 38562/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Trust has advised my Department that the temporary closure of MS respite and intermediate care beds in Dalriada Hospital will not affect ambulance service cover in the area.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the Alcohol and Drug Commissioning Framework for Northern Ireland 2013-16 will be published, given that the consultation period closed on 18 April 2013.

(AQW 38568/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the cross-departmental strategy to prevent and address the harm related to substance misuse, known as the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2, the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and the Public Health Agency (PHA) were tasked by my Department with developing a Regional Commissioning Framework for Alcohol and Drug Services in Northern Ireland.

52 organisations responded to the subsequent public consultation on the draft Framework which closed in April 2013. Following this, the HSCB and the PHA published an analysis of, and a response to, the issues raised during the consultation in July 2013 (available online at http://www.publichealth.hscni.net/sites/default/files/PHA\_HSCB%20response%20to%20Commissioning%20Framework%20Consultation.pdf).

Since then, the HSCB and PHA have focused on the development and implementation of a procurement plan to tender for a range of services to address the key priorities outlined in the Framework. The process of developing the tenders has taken longer than expected, however the procurement process has recently gone live, with new services now envisaged to be in place from April 2015. The HSCB and PHA anticipate that the finalised Framework will be published once the procurement process currently underway has been completed.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can provide a guarantee that the temporary reduction of services imposed on Downe Hospital as a result of the recent budget will not become permanent. (AQW 38579/11-15)

Mr Wells: This is a temporary reduction in beds, in line with other temporary changes in services taking place across Northern Ireland due to the ongoing financial pressures. If the Trust were to propose to close these beds on a permanent basis a full consultation process, including equality screening, would have to be undertaken.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service has been advised to prepare for a fifteen per cent budget cut in 2015/16; and what risk assessment vis-à-vis the public's safety has been conducted relating to such a cut. (AQW 38585/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service has been asked to develop savings proposals for 5, 10 and 15% in 2015/16. NIFRS will be required to risk assess proposals to ensure the continued delivery of all statutory requirements.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the development of a new health and wellbeing centre in Bangor. (AQW 38598/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board's high level Strategic Implementation Plan for future investment in primary care infrastructure, which includes a proposal for Bangor, is currently under consideration. This wider investment programme cannot be progressed until the pilot Lisburn and Newry projects are evaluated.

This Plan will be considered alongside other capital investment priorities and will be dependent on the outcome of future budget exercises and confirmation of value for money and affordability.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has to monitor and respond to the demand for social care support when the Independent Living Fund closes in June 2015. (AQW 38601/11-15)

Mr Wells: The UK Government decided to close the Independent Living Fund (ILF) to new users in June 2010 and in Northern Ireland it continues to be the case that social care support is provided on the basis of assessed need. There will be no change to this position following the closure of the Independent Living Fund in 2015.

In addition, as I have previously made clear, I endorse and support fully my predecessor Edwin Poots' undertaking that DHSSPS would do all it could to ensure that those disabled people in Northern Ireland who are most in need of care and attention are not disadvantaged by the Department of Work and Pension's decision to close the ILF.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the system to replace the Independent Living Fund promotes independent living, as required under Article 19 of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 38602/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department's comprehensive public consultation on the future support of Independent Living Fund (ILF) users in Northern Ireland ends on 30 November 2014. Following the closure of this exercise, I will carefully consider how best to support ILF users in Northern Ireland on the basis of all the responses received. This will include the important matter the member has raised in this question, and indeed on earlier occasions. I plan to announce my decision in early 2015.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans their Department has to monitor and address the impact of the decision to close the Independent Living Fund in June 2015 on the inclusion of people with a learning disability in local community activities.

(AQW 38603/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department's comprehensive public consultation on this issue ends on 30 November 2014. Following the closure of this exercise, I will carefully consider how best to support Independent Living Fund users in Northern Ireland on the basis of all the responses received. This will include the important matters the member has raised in this question, and indeed on earlier occasions. I plan to announce my decision in early 2015.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the Domestic and Sexual Abuse Strategy.

(AQW 38604/11-15)

Mr Wells: A Public consultation exercise on the Stopping Domestic and Sexual Violence and Abuse Strategy launched on 15 January 2014 and officially closed on 11 April 2014. The consultation received 68 responses.

A Consultation Response Report has been prepared and will be published on the Department's website as soon as is practicable.

I have agreed with the Justice Minister that we will aim to publish the strategy by March 2015.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much funding his Department provided to The Addiction Service on Railway Street, Ballymena in each of the last fourteen years.

(AQW 38609/11-15)

Mr Wells: Details of the amount of funding provided in each the last 14 years to the Railway Street Community Addiction Service are not available. Funding provided through the Northern Health and Social Care Trust from 2007 to the present is outlined below:

2007/08	139,000
2008/09	155,627
2009/10	159,362
2010/11	159,362
2011/12	159,365
2012/13	163,518
2013/14	165,153
2014/15	167,398 (full year amount)

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) his plans for the future of mental health services; and (ii) the current (a) facilities; and (b) funding available for mental health services.

(AQW 38616/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) Plans for the future of Mental Health Services in Northern Ireland are set out in the Mental Health section of the Bamford Action Plan, the HSC Board Commissioning Plan and the Department's Mental Health Service Framework.

In addition, the following strategies detail plans for specific Mental Health issues and conditions:

- Protect Life-Suicide Prevention Strategy;
- Psychological Therapy Strategy;
- Personality Disorder Strategy;
- New Strategic Direction on Drugs and Alcohol; and
- Mental Health Care Pathway-Promoting Recovery Approaches.

These policies and strategies aim to improve the mental health of people in Northern Ireland; reduce the impact of the condition on people with mental health problems; and reduce the stigma associated with mental health conditions.

- (ii) Health and Social Care Trusts provide a wide range of mental health services in a wide variety of settings and facilities, according to the individual's particular needs, including:
- Primary Care Talking Therapies Teams – accessed through GP;

- Community Mental Health Services – this involves care provided by one or more professionals such as social workers, psychiatrists, psychologists etc;
- Acute Mental Health Services – these services provide support at a time of crisis and can provide intensive home support and/or admission to hospital; and
- specific services - these usually involve receiving care from a specialist team such as Alcohol/Drug Addiction, Eating Disorders, Psychological Therapies or Trauma, Personality and Forensic Services.

The funding invested by the HSC Board in Mental Health Services in 2013/14 was £247.3million.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what statutory provision is available for people with alcohol and drug dependency in East Londonderry.

(AQW 38629/11-15)

Mr Wells: Through my Department's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase Two, the Health & Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency commission a full range of alcohol and drug services – from education and prevention through to treatment and support.

Details of the full range of alcohol and drug services available to people living in East Londonderry and currently provided by Statutory and Voluntary/Community sectors across both the Northern and Western areas can be found by accessing the following links:

- http://www.publichealth.hscni.net/sites/default/files/DrugsAlcohol\_Directory\_Northern\_12\_12.pdf
- http://www.publichealth.hscni.net/sites/default/files/DrugsAlcohol\_Directory\_Western\_12\_12.pdf

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the average waiting time for an Asperger Syndrome assessment in the Western Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) the provision in place to address the needs of people with Asperger Syndrome whilst awaiting assessment.

(AQW 38632/11-15)

Mr Wells: The waiting time for an Asperger Syndrome assessment within the Children's Autism Services in the Western Trust was 22 weeks as on 31 October 2014. Within adult services the waiting time is approximately 14 months. This is a historic anomaly as the Trust has only had capacity to undertake adult Autism assessments over the last year. It is hoped that all people on the waiting list will be seen within 13 weeks by March 2016.

Following referral of a child or young person for assessment, the Trust will issue the parent/carer with an acknowledgement letter which includes information regarding the assessment process and a link to the Trust's web-site containing information on the Autism Service and a video clip of the assessment process. Whilst awaiting assessment, contact can be maintained with the referring agent for advice and guidance and access can be continued with other services, including those within the Trust, Education and the Community and Voluntary Sector.

Those on the adult waiting list can access a range of support services for advice, for example, their general practitioner services and the Trust's Autism Coordinator/Team. If they have a co-existing mental health issue or learning disability they can access those services. There are also a range of voluntary specialist Autism voluntary providers, for example, Autism Initiatives, National Autistic Society and Autism NI who each offer support, advice and advocacy.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessments or assumptions have been made of the additional cost, particularly to the Ulster Hospital, as a result of the displacement of patients arising from the temporary closure of the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38661/11-15)

Mr Wells: During the period October 2013 to September 2014 there was an average of 41 attendances per day at Bangor Community Hospital minor injuries unit. Patients from the North Down area who require treatment for minor injuries can access the minor injuries service at Ards Hospital or contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service. The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust anticipate that there will be a minimal increase in minor injuries attendances at the Ulster Hospital and will keep the position under review.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether pain clinics will be provided at the South West Acute Hospital in Enniskillen.

(AQW 38677/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has been developing a 'hub-and-spoke' model for chronic pain management within the Trust, aiming to centre pain activity and resources in Tyrone County Hospital with satellite activity and resources in the South West Acute Hospital and Altnagelvin Hospital.

The expansion of clinics to the South West Acute Hospital has been delayed due to difficulties in providing medical staff with expertise in pain management.

In the interim, the pain management team continues to ensure patients are being seen as quickly as possible, although regrettably, this means a small number have to travel to use this service.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the expected annual savings that will result from the closure of the (i) Minor Injuries Unit; and (ii) GP Ward in Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38682/11-15)

Mr Wells: The savings which are expected to be made in 2014/15 as a result of proposed closures at Bangor Community Hospital are as follows:

The temporary closure of the Bangor Minor Injuries Unit (planned from 1 December 2014) will have cash releasing savings of approximately £65k.

- The temporary closure of the GP Ward (planned from 1 December 2014) will save approximately £207k.
- They form part of the Trust's overall plan to achieve financial break even while maximising patient safety.

The temporary closures of these two facilities are planned from 1st December 2014 to 31st March 2015, therefore, annual savings are not applicable.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he and his officials were informed of the 2014/15 savings in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38695/11-15)

Mr Wells: All Trusts were advised during the summer that it would be necessary to implement a range of contingency proposals given the outcome of June Monitoring. South Eastern Trust produced the first draft of their proposals in August.

Since then the HSCB (in liaison with the PHA) has liaised very closely with the South Eastern Trust, and has critically reviewed, analysed and revised the proposals as appropriate to safeguard the safety and integrity of services and to reflect the subsequent outcome of October Monitoring.

The decisions taken by the South Eastern Trust reflect what is achievable in maintaining safety and minimising costs between now and the end of the financial year.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of General Practice care in Bangor.

(AQW 38725/11-15)

Mr Wells: I fully recognise the very important role that GPs play in the delivery of high quality healthcare to their patients right across NI, including Bangor.

Currently there are 9 GP Practices in Bangor serving a population of approximately 55,000 patients.

The Quality and Outcomes Framework is an annual reward element of the General Medical Services Contract designed to remunerate General Practice for providing quality care to their patients and it is intended to reward good practice. All of the GP Practices in Bangor have signed up to provide the Quality and Outcomes Framework within the GMS Contract and have a high level of achievement at 98%+. The GP practices also provide a wide range of enhanced services for their patients.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the current position of statutory residential care homes in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust, including Roxborough House, Moy.

(AQW 38734/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Stage One consultation report on the future of statutory residential care homes was approved by the Health and Social Care Board on 12 June 2014. The report provided a thorough analysis of views shared during consultation and sets out the final agreed criteria for evaluating statutory residential home provision for older people.

The Health and Social Care Trusts have been asked by the Health and Social Care Board to review their statutory residential care homes using the new criteria, and then to review their positions on admissions once they have made proposals for the future of each home.

It is anticipated that all Trust proposals for change will be considered at a HSC Board meeting in early 2015.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current provision of hospice care.

(AQO 7031/11-15)

Mr Wells: Translink I am aware of the very valuable work that is being done by hospices in Northern Ireland to deliver high quality specialist palliative and end of life care, and the expertise, dedication and compassion in caring that hospices provide.

I am committed to improving palliative and end of life care across all care sectors and, in line with the vision of my Department's Living Matters:Dying Matters Palliative and End of Life Care Strategy, ensuring that any person with an advanced, incurable condition lives well and dies well irrespective of their condition or care setting.

Hospices play an important role in this through providing a range of specialist services including inpatient care; day hospice services; hospice at home care for people in their own homes; support for carers and families; and bereavement counselling services.

They also provide education services and specialist advice and support to health and social care professionals who deliver generalist palliative care in hospitals, care homes and the community helping to improve the awareness and quality of palliative and end of life care.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessments or assumptions have been made of the additional number of patients who will use the Ulster Hospital, as a result of the temporary closure of the Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38741/11-15)

Mr Wells: During the period October 2013 to September 2014 there was an average of 41 attendances per day at Bangor Community Hospital minor injuries unit. Patients from the North Down area who require treatment for minor injuries can access the minor injuries service at Ards Hospital or contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service. The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust anticipate that there will be a minimal increase in minor injuries attendances at the Ulster Hospital and will keep the position under review.

Mr Allister asked Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why petitions opposing the closure of Dalriada Hospital have been confiscated by an administrator in the Causeway Hospital; and whether he will direct that they are returned.

(AQW 38746/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust was originally not aware of the intention to display the petitions and make them available to the public. They were therefore forwarded to the Trade Union Office in Causeway Hospital.

Having been made aware of this intention, the Trust has now provided an area inside the main hospital entrance where people can sign the petitions.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why petitions relating to the proposal to close beds at Dalriada Hospital were ordered to be removed from Causeway Hospital; and what was subsequently done with the petitions.

(AQW 38759/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust was originally not aware of the intention to display the petitions and make them available to the public. They were therefore forwarded to the Trade Union Office in Causeway Hospital.

Having been made aware of this intention, the Trust has now provided an area inside the main hospital entrance where people can sign the petitions.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the recent statistics that 1,300 children are waiting on autism diagnosis, what action is being taken to address this as a matter of urgency.

(AQW 38760/11-15)

Mr Wells: It should be stressed that diagnosis, as to whether or not a child has autism, only occurs after a thorough process of assessment, involving a number of professionals over a period of time which may last a number of months. It is therefore inevitable that there will be a period when children are awaiting diagnosis, as the assessment is not yet completed.

It is however, the case that a number of children are also awaiting a first assessment. This is due to the increase in the number of referrals from eg GPs, Health Visitors and Educational Services, which have doubled since 2010/11, resulting in waiting times for assessment and support also lengthening. It is recognised that there is a shortfall in resources and this area has been identified as a core pressure requiring additional investment.

To help alleviate the length of waiting times, the HSC Board is reviewing the current operating models across all Trusts with a view to remodelling the assessment and diagnostic process. This should maximise the current capacity of the system. A new template to record waiting times in excess of 13 weeks will enable the Board to monitor average waiting times for commencement of assessment. As an interim measure, the Board are working with Trusts to agree, based on their respective capacity, a maximum waiting time. Once agreed, families will be made aware of the maximum time that they can expect to wait to commence the assessment process.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many extra patients would he anticipate will attend the Emergency Department at the Ulster Hospital as a result of the closure of the Minor Injuries Unit at Bangor Community Hospital; and what effect he anticipates this will have on waiting times at the Emergency Department.

(AQW 38767/11-15)

Mr Wells: During the period (October 2013 to September 2014) there was an average of 41 attendances per day at Bangor Community Hospital minor injuries unit. Patients from the North Down area who require treatment for minor injuries can access the minor injuries service at Ards Hospital or contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service. The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust anticipate that there will be a minimal increase in minor injuries attendances at the Ulster Hospital and will keep the position under review.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether an Equality Impact Assessment has been carried out in respect of the decision to close (i) the Minor Injuries Unit; and (ii) GP Ward at Bangor Community Hospital.
(AQW 38818/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care Trusts are carrying out equality screenings on the individual local decisions within their contingency plans. Where the evidence of a screening indicates that an Equality Impact Assessment is necessary it will be completed in accordance with each Trust's Equality Scheme and the Equality Commission's guidance.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the proposals to temporarily close the minor injuries unit and the GP Ward at Bangor Community Hospital up until 31 March 2015 have been subject to equality screenings. The outcome of these screenings was a recommendation for on-going screening for both proposals.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what protective measures are being taken to protect public health following the discovery of a highly contagious strain of bird flu at a poultry farm in the Netherlands.
(AQW 38835/11-15)

Mr Wells: The recent outbreaks of avian influenza in poultry farms in the Netherlands and Yorkshire are thought to be connected to the outbreak in Germany earlier in the month. These outbreaks are believed to be the H5N8 strain. Defra has ruled out the H5N1 strain.

No human infections with H5N8 have ever been reported anywhere in the world. The risk for transmission from animals to humans in the EU/EEA countries is considered to be extremely low.

Public Health England has advised that the threat to the public's health is considered extremely low based on what is currently known about the specific strain of avian flu.

The Food Standards Agency has advised that bird flu does not pose a food safety risk for UK consumers. Properly cooked poultry and poultry products, including eggs, are safe to eat.

To prevent virus spread, Directive 2005/94/EC requires Member States to have contingency plans detailing measures for the killing and safe disposal of infected poultry, feed and contaminated equipment as well as the procedures and methods for cleaning and disinfection.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the consultation on the Independent Living Fund.
(AQO 7038/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department's public consultation on how best to support Independent Living Fund (ILF) users in Northern Ireland following the closure of the fund on 30 June 2015 was launched on 8 August 2014 and it will close on 30 November 2014.

In developing the consultation, my Department has carefully considered the actions of the other UK jurisdictions in relation to the future support for ILF users. In addition, my officials are in regular close contact with senior representatives from the ILF based in Nottingham. Furthermore, to ensure that a wide range of views are obtained to help inform my final decision, during September and October, my Department recently held two well attended public consultation events.

You can be assured that I will carefully consider all responses received before deciding on the way forward and I plan to announce my final decision in early 2015.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he is ensuring that proposed reductions in frontline services will be subject to adequate Equality Impact Assessments.
(AQO 7033/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is the statutory responsibility of Trusts to undertake equality impact screening of all policy proposals, and to undertake equality impact assessments when indicated.

My Department has been in contact each of the Trusts to seek their assurance that they are meeting all of their equality scheme responsibilities in relation to their contingency plans. Trusts are very clear about their statutory obligations and provide regular assurance to my Department that they are meeting their obligations as part of their governance framework.

Should any of the temporary measures outlined in Trust contingency plans be proposed to be made permanent, I have been explicit that that a full consultation exercise must be carried out.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the average turnaround time for ambulances at the Antrim Area Hospital.
(AQO 7034/11-15)

Mr Wells: The average ambulance turnaround time at Antrim Area Hospital from January to October 2014 was 26 minutes and 21 seconds. Our ambulance crews do a superb job delivering vital services to the community. I pay tribute to their professionalism and dedication as they carry out their duties around the clock sometimes working under very difficult conditions.

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what progress has been made on the use of Deep Brain Stimulation as a treatment for people diagnosed with Parkinson's disease.

(AQO 7035/11-15)

Mr Wells: Although the main treatment for Parkinson's is medication, there are some types of surgery available to treat the symptoms of the condition. Deep brain stimulation is the main type of surgery used. It is not a cure, but it can give some people better control of their symptoms. It is not suitable for all patients and it will not work for everyone who has the operation.

The treatment is not routinely commissioned within Northern Ireland. However, patients here can access the treatment through the Health and Social Care Board's Extra Contractual Referral process which provides for circumstances where specialised care cannot be provided within Northern Ireland.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what psychiatric support has been identified for soldiers diagnosed with severe post-traumatic stress disorder.

(AQO 7036/11-15)

Mr Wells: Armed Forces personnel with mental health problems (including PTSD) have access to outpatient, day-case, and inpatient treatment as necessary from the Defence Medical Services occupational psychiatric service. Support in the field is provided by trained mental health staff. Outpatient services are primarily provided through 15 military Departments of Community Health. Inpatient care is provided by the health service, contracted by the Ministry of Defence. For veterans, the Health and Social Care Board has agreed a care pathway which provides access to the residential treatment service in Scotland provided by Combat Stress.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department is taking to address levels of sick absence within the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service.

(AQO 7037/11-15)

Mr Wells: For 2014/15 the department has agreed individual targets with each of the trusts for rates of staff absence. The target for the NIAS has been agreed at 7%. These targets are monitored by my Department throughout the year with the Trust required to provide a report on their performance twice a year. Any shortfall in performance against objectives is included on the agenda for discussion at the Mid and End Year Accountability Review Meetings that my Department holds with each of its Arms Length Bodies.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the proposal by the Western Health and Social Care Trust to merge the palliative care ward and a rehabilitation ward at the Tyrone County Hospital.

(AQO 7039/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust decided on 11 November 2014 that it will keep the palliative care and rehabilitation wards at Tyrone County Hospital separate. The number of beds in the palliative care ward will reduce by four and the rehabilitation ward will reduce by six, to reflect current usage.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what impact the current financial situation will have on independent healthcare providers.

(AQO 7040/11-15)

Mr Wells: I indicated in my Statement of 30th October 2014 that I was allocating £14 million of the June and October Monitoring Round funding to elective care. This is much less than the HSC needs to meet the current demand and thus the restrictions on the use of the independent sector will have to continue.

I am disappointed that the HSC has had to take this measure and I understand the impact this will have on patients waiting for assessment and treatment. However, my priorities are to ensure that the services provided by the HSC are safe and effective, and that my Department achieves financial breakeven, as is required of all Ministers.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the reasons for the temporary closure of seven intermediate care and rehabilitation beds in the Mid Ulster Hospital by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQO 7041/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust has to reduce its spend by almost £7m between now and the end of March 2015 to achieve financial breakeven. Frontline and emergency services have, as far as possible, been protected, and by consolidating services across the Trust for a temporary period, including the beds in the Mid Ulster Hospital, savings can be made. The Trust is confident that the consolidation of beds will provide sufficient capacity in each locality within the Northern area.

I am disappointed that the Trust has had to take this measure and I acknowledge the impact this will have on patients. However, my priorities are to ensure that the services provided by the HSC are safe and effective, and that my Department achieves financial breakeven, as is required of all Ministers.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will ensure that all staff in Oak Villa and Ash Villa at the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital will be retained.

(AQW 38918/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised that only staff working in Ash Villa will be affected by the proposed service redesign. The service reform will generate opportunities for staff, as additional nursing posts will be created across both in-patient and community services and also with the development of the therapeutic hub for patients. Details of these developments have been shared with the staff during the consultation process.

If there are insufficient permanent posts available for the redeployment of all affected staff, it may be necessary to redeploy some staff to other Older People's Mental Health facilities temporarily, with a view to permanent redeployment when possible. The Trust's arrangements for organisational change will be implemented for displaced staff. There will be no compulsory redundancies.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what mechanisms are in place to ensure that planned November admissions to the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Unit in Dalriada Hospital are not overlooked, and that these patients receive sufficient care for their specific needs.

(AQW 38941/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) has provided assurance that anyone who has been booked into the respite centre in Dalriada Hospital in November will have no change to their booking. For those who require respite services after the end of November, the NHSCT will continue to meet their assessed needs and the Trust's staff are currently meeting with service users and their carers to discuss those needs and agree suitable alternative arrangements.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he will make an announcement regarding the future support of Independent Living Fund users in Northern Ireland; and whether he can provide an assurance that current users will see no reduction in the support offered.

(AQW 38944/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to the answer given to AQW 35542/11-15 provided by my predecessor, Edwin Poots MLA.

Department of Justice

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether schedule 17/92 of the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service Records Management System after 2 December 1999 was subject to negative procedure under section 8(4) Public Records Act Northern Ireland, or did it have permanent effect at the expiry of section 1 of the Temporary Provisions Act, or take effect, before the devolution of Policing and Justice.

(AQW 38166/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): Schedule 17/92 was agreed in November 1992 and remained in operation until the devolution of policing and justice in April 2010 when a schedule for the Department of Justice was prepared and subsequently laid before the Assembly in November 2012.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Justice what steps are being taken by his Department to provide input on, and to co-ordinate, a cross departmental action plan to tackle Female Genital Mutilation.

(AQW 38184/11-15)

Mr Ford: The joint DOJ and DHSSPS strategy Stopping Domestic and Sexual Violence and Abuse in Northern Ireland which is currently being developed recognises that domestic violence and abuse can manifest itself through the perpetration of unlawful activities and practices such as female genital mutilation.

As you will be aware, my Department has been involved from the early stages in assisting in developing Multi-Agency Practice Guidelines on Female Genital Mutilation which were published in July by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

At the most recent meeting of the Regional Strategy Group for Domestic and Sexual Violence it was agreed that a cross-departmental meeting would be held to agree how best to take forward cross-departmental actions to further address the issue of Female Genital Mutilation in Northern Ireland.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38234/11-15)

Mr Ford: No efficiencies have been realised in the Department of Justice as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of Article 63 Firearm Prohibitions that have been successfully removed within the eight year prohibition term, broken down by constituency; and the reasons for each removal in each of the last two years.

(AQW 38275/11-15)

Mr Ford: Within the last two years I have removed one eight year prohibition. At the time of the application, the individual lived within the Upper Bann Constituency. I consider each case on its merits and was satisfied that the individual presented exceptional circumstances as required by the legislation.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the cost of sick leave among staff in prisons in each of the last five years; and the number of staff off work due to stress, anxiety or other related illnesses.

(AQW 38280/11-15)

Mr Ford: The cost of sickness absence for all staff working within the Northern Ireland Prison Service is set out below:

Date	Cost
2010/11	£4.5 million (from 12 April 2010)
2011/12	£4.7 million
2012/13	£4.2 million
2013/14	£3.7 million
2014/15	£1.9 million (up to 30 September 2014)

The number of Northern Ireland Prison Service Staff (all grades) that have been off work due to stress, anxiety or other related illnesses is set out below:

Date	No. of staff
2010/11	155 (from 12 April 2010)
2011/12	164
2012/13	174
2013/14	176
2014/15	123 (up to 30 September 2014)

The figures provided are for the period from the date of the devolution of justice powers, 12 April 2010.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether John McDermott benefitted from 50 per cent remission on his custodial sentence; and whether he was considered rehabilitated on release.

(AQW 38308/11-15)

Mr Ford: I can confirm that as John McDermott was not sentenced under the Criminal Justice Order 2008 he was eligible for 50% remission. He will remain under supervision, and on license, for the remainder of his 10 year sentence.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to case numbers (a) 14/011704; (b) 14/029601; and (c) 14/011705 at Londonderry Magistrates' Court, to detail (i) whether legal aid been granted; and if so, whether this covers solicitor and counsel; (ii) the costs, or estimated costs, to date, of each defendant; (iv) whether legal aid has been granted for appeal; and (v) the estimated final costs following appeal.

(AQW 38320/11-15)

Mr Ford: Legal aid was granted for representation by solicitor and junior counsel for the magistrates' court proceedings in respect of all three defendants. Following the conviction of all three defendants at the magistrates' court, legal aid was granted for representation by solicitor and junior counsel at the County Court appeal proceedings.

No claims for costs have been received by the Northern Ireland Services Commission in respect of these proceedings.

The fees for representation in the magistrates' court have been estimated at £990 in respect of each defendant.

The fees for representation in the County Court have been estimated at £286 in respect of each defendant.

This gives a total estimated cost of £3,828.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37879/11-15 and as G4S is the contracted service to the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service, whether he will communicate with G4S in respect of staff who were disciplined as a result of the faulty palm scanners, to have the matters revisited and disciplinary actions overturned.

(AQW 38402/11-15)

Mr Ford: Disciplinary actions, and any decisions to revisit or overturn such actions, are a matter for G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Ltd (G4S) as the employer.

The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) does not have a role in G4S employee investigations. The outcome of G4S investigations is routinely shared with NICTS through the contract management process if they relate to the management of the contract but this does not include details of the investigation as this is regulated by Data Protection legislation.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Justice what action his Department is taking to tackle low levels of rape convictions despite the increase in sexual crime reporting.

(AQW 38405/11-15)

Mr Ford: Given the evidence that there is significant underreporting of sexual crimes, a great deal of effort has been made across the justice system to improve the confidence of victims in the justice system and encourage them to come forward. I therefore welcome the increase in reporting of these crimes.

However, I also recognise that in the past four years 26% of the rape cases and just over 55% of all sexual offences cases that have gone forward for prosecution have resulted in conviction.

This is an issue of concern for agencies in the justice system. The joint DOJ and DHSSPS strategy Stopping Domestic and Sexual Violence and Abuse in Northern Ireland which is due to be published in the Spring will reflect the need to strengthen justice for victims and hold perpetrators to account and address their harmful behaviour.

In addition, the five year victim and witness strategy published in June 2013 includes a range of actions to support victims, including the new Victim Charter, and a victim and witness care unit that provides a single point of contact for victims.

The Rowan sexual assault referral centre in Antrim is a significant step forward in supporting all victims of sexual violence. The victim centred services provided by this purpose built facility assist in providing the evidence to help achieve prosecutions, bringing together justice and health and social care agencies.

My Department will continue to work with partner agencies to provide better support to victims and survivors and bring those responsible to justice.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) why legal aid was granted in the case of a person at Omagh Magistrates, given the income as stated in court passes the threshold for financial assistance; (ii) what distinguished this case from others of a similar nature where legal aid is not afforded; (iii) whether the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (NILSC) or Northern Ireland Legal Aid Agency (NILAA) will seek to recoup the fees from the defendant in light of income being known; and (iv) whether he, NILSC or NILAA will issue guidelines to relevant parties, including defence representatives and the judiciary, to ensure qualifying criteria rules are being applied across all jurisdictions.

(AQW 38475/11-15)

Mr Ford: The award of criminal legal aid is a judicial decision. Where a person is charged with any offence in the magistrates' court or is brought before it to be dealt with, the court may grant a criminal aid certificate where it is satisfied that his means are insufficient to obtain legal aid and that it is in the interests of justice that he should have free legal aid. Each district judge, or deputy, must consider these two tests before granting legal aid. Where there is doubt, the legislation requires the judge to exercise discretion to the benefit of the applicant.

Where it comes to the attention of the court that a person to whom a legal aid certificate has been granted has:

- (a) wilfully withheld material information from the court;
- (b) knowingly made a false statement in furnishing information to the court; or
- (c) furnished to the court, due to error or mistake, a statement of means which was misleading to a significant extent, the court may revoke the certificate and the cost of legal aid incurred to the date of revocation may be recovered.

This is a judicial decision and as I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Office of the Lord Chief Justice it would not be appropriate for me to issue guidelines in this respect.

The criminal legal aid regulations enable the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission, in certain circumstances, to seek an order requiring a person in respect of whom a legal aid certificate in the Crown Court to pay some or all of the cost of legal aid incurred under the certificate. These provisions do not apply to certificates granted in respect of the magistrates' courts.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether an appeal has been lodged by the Public Prosecution Service over the six month sentence handed down in cases 14/082943 and 14/082946 at Dungannon Magistrates Court.

(AQW 38476/11-15)

Mr Ford: An appeal has not been lodged by the Public Prosecution Service against the six month sentence in this case.

The power to refer cases to the Court of Appeal under Section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 does not apply to these charges.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether John McDermott been categorised as dangerous under the NI Act 2008 definition; and if not, what consideration is to be given to such a categorisation.

(AQW 38478/11-15)

Mr Ford: The relevant provisions of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2008 only relate to specified offences committed after 15th May 2008 and do not have retrospective application.

However the public protection arrangements, which provide for the appropriate management of risk of serious harm posed by individuals, apply in this case as they do in any case where there has been a conviction for a relevant sexual offence either before or after the introduction of the 2008 Order.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice to detail the change in the annual cost to the public purse of the legal aid bill between 1 January 2009 and 1 January 2014.

(AQW 38545/11-15)

Mr Ford: This information is available by financial year and has been reported on that basis from the date of devolution.

Financial year	Cash expenditure £m
2010/11	93.3
2011/12	101.7
2012/13	95.8
2013/14	105.0
2014/15 Forecast	101.7

Notes:

Figures include expenditure from contributions made by legally assisted persons.

The figures reported for 2013/14 are still to be audited by NIAO.

All figures exclude administration costs.

In cash terms, legal aid expenditure has increased by £11.7m over the four year period since the devolution of the Department of Justice in April 2010. Figures reported for 2014/15 are based on current forecasts from Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers have been medically retired in each of the last 24 months.

(AQW 38552/11-15)

Mr Ford: There have been a total of 41 Prison Officers medically retired in the last 24 months.

In the period between 1 November 2012 and 31 October 2014 this is broken down as follows:

Month	No. Prison Officer Grade staff medically retired

December 2012	0
January 2013	5

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Justice what impact his Department's decision to cease funding the Railway Street Addiction Service in Ballymena will have on addiction service provision in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 38554/11-15)

Mr Ford: Due to the overall financial climate, my Department's contribution to the total cost of the services provided by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust based at Railway Street in Ballymena will cease within this financial year.

This was a project that was jointly funded by my Department and the Trust. Clearly the Northern Trust will now need to reconfigure service delivery given the cessation of this funding.

I am aware that the Member has met with Trust officials to secure a more detailed assessment of the impact of this decision. However, while regretful, this difficult decision was necessary in the context of the significant financial challenges facing my Department.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Justice for the timeline for the Northern Ireland Community Safety College Steering Group's two stage review into the development of the joint training college for the police, Prison Service and Fire and Rescue Service at Desertcreat.

(AQW 38564/11-15)

Mr Ford: The first stage of the review will involve examining the extent of changes and the implications for the business case and the current procurement process. The Programme Board has been tasked with completing this work within two weeks and reporting back to the Steering Group on 25 November.

During this period, the Programme Board has also been asked to firm up the scope of the second review. This stage of the review is likely to take several months. However, it is anticipated that a decision will be made within the current Assembly mandate.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Justice whether a decision will be made on the future of the Northern Ireland Community Safety College within the current Assembly mandate.

(AQW 38566/11-15)

Mr Ford: The first stage of the review will involve examining the extent of changes and the implications for the business case and the current procurement process. The Programme Board has been tasked with completing this work within two weeks and reporting back to the Steering Group on 25 November.

During this period, the Programme Board has also been asked to firm up the scope of the second review. This stage of the review is likely to take several months. However, it is anticipated that a decision will be made within the current Assembly mandate.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how much funding his Department awarded to the Railway Street drug misuse service in Ballymena in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38607/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice provided the Northern Health and Social Care Trust with £329k in 2012/13 and £320k in 2013/14 towards the cost of operating the Railway Street Service. The Department has agreed to provide a sum not exceeding £330k in 2014/15.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice whether an application has been made for legal aid during 2014 in respect of a judicial review of police investigations into a case brought by the families and relatives of those killed in Londonderry on 30 January 1972.

(AQW 38638/11-15)

Mr Ford: Article 24 of the Legal Aid, Advice and Assistance (NI) Order 1981 precludes the release of information in relation to civil cases in which Legal Aid has been granted.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37356/11-15, what measures are in place to ensure that the issue of unpaid fines does not reach the stage which led to these fine default reviews having to be listed at courts.

(AQW 38643/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Courts & Tribunals Service continues to operate a Fine Collection Scheme to contact debtors on two occasions to encourage payment of fines which remain unpaid after the payment due date.

I will also be bringing a Fines and Enforcement Bill to the Assembly in early 2015, which will provide for a new Fine Collection and Enforcement Service with a range of new powers including deductions from pay or benefits, seizure of motor vehicles and access to bank accounts to secure payment of unpaid fines.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Justice to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38667/11-15)

Mr Ford: No employee of DOJ or any of its agencies, paid on either the Industrial or Non-Industrial pay scales, is paid below £7.20.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Justice what plans there are to simplify the Access NI procedures to avoid the expense and delays involved with people having to make multiple applications for each organisation or charity.[R]

(AQW 38672/11-15)

Mr Ford: AccessNI checks are currently only valid on the day they are printed and issued. There is, at present, no mechanism to update this information. As a result AccessNI recommends that checks are not transferable between jobs.

Provisions to enable changes to the current system are contained in the Justice Bill 2014. If this legislation comes into force as drafted an applicant will, on seeking a new check, have the option to subscribe to the Update Service. Once in the Update Service an applicant's criminal record is updated with any new offences and changes in police or barring information are monitored. This means that a subscriber to the Update Service can present his or her check to an employer or voluntary organisation including when he or she changes jobs. This is known as portable disclosure. In turn that employer or organisation can go on-line free of charge to see if the information on the original check has changed. This means that individuals may not have to re-apply for an AccessNI check, unless the individual is seeking to work with a different category of vulnerable people.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37962/11-15, in relation to the section on emoluments for full time Police Federation for Northern Ireland officials and the required agreements amongst Central Committee, the Northern Ireland Policing Board and the Chief Constable, whether he will provide a copy or template of the wording of the required agreement.

(AQW 38708/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department is not party to any agreement between the central committee of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland, the Northern Ireland Policing Board and the Chief Constable in respect of pay, pension or allowances to the chairman and secretary of the central committee. I can also confirm that this matter has not been referred to me as Minister in line with the provision of Regulation 18(1).

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Justice what discussions he has had with the Minister of Finance and Personnel in relation to equal pay for Department of Justice and former Northern Ireland Office staff.

(AQW 38769/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Finance Minister and I have not discussed any particular proposal to date.

I welcome the fact that he has submitted a draft paper on this matter for consideration by the Executive and continue to be supportive of a centrally funded and centrally driven resolution.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 38144/11-15, whether he will reconsider his answer in the interests of public safety and scrutiny of management mechanisms, given, (i) the concerns of the public caused by the alleged sighting of this individual in the area; (ii) in light of the fact that the person has since been moved and the question does not seek to disclose any current address or residence; (iii) the issue of any alleged place of residence as opposed to actual address is not protected under Data Protection; and (iv) the high relevance offences for which this person served custody and the lack of accurate information from various departmental agencies after the alleged sighting.

(AQW 38779/11-15)

Mr Ford: As outlined in my previous answer to AQW/38144/11-15, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland does not provide information on an individual's location post-release.

Individuals subject to post-release supervision have their risk managed appropriately in the community through the relevant agency and/or through the multi-agency Public Protection Arrangements Northern Ireland. Staff within these agencies are highly trained in the assessment and management of risk to prevent reoffending.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice whether he will take steps to set up a Task Force comprising the PSNI, Immigration Office, Social Security Agency and Inland Revenue to detect illegal immigrants and employers, gang masters and anyone else involved in this 'trade'.

(AQW 38824/11-15)

Mr Ford: Immigration and the licensing of gangmasters are not devolved matters, and therefore do not fall within the remit of the Department of Justice.

In respect of organised immigration crime, the Organised Crime Task Force has established a subgroup on immigration and human trafficking, although the main focus of this group is human trafficking, which is a devolved matter.

The subgroup includes representation from relevant statutory bodies including the Police Service of Northern Ireland; United Kingdom Visas and Immigration; Border Force; An Garda Síochána, the Gangmasters Licensing Authority, NSPCC and the Northern Ireland Safeguarding Board.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the outcome of his recent consultation on revised custodial arrangements for children.

(AQO 7051/11-15)

Mr Ford: Following the publication of the consultation summary in May 2014, work has been ongoing to identify the necessary changes to legislation, and to draft instructions for the development of the proposed new custodial arrangements, including a new order.

What has become clear through this process is the complex nature of the proposals and the extent of legislative changes required to underpin something which is already working well in practice. Administrative arrangements have meant that no young person under 18 has been held in Hydebank Wood since 2012 and I intend to keep it that way.

Having considered these complexities, alongside comments made during the consultation on issues such as community sentences, I am now proposing to pause the introduction of this proposed legislation and go back to basics.

My Department will examine the entire youth sentencing structure with the aim of simplifying the system and ensuring more focused interventions which meet the individual needs of children and young people. I intend to create a system which is easier for the child to understand so that they are clear about exactly what is expected of them, and to reduce any unnecessary use of custody by maximising the community and restorative justice options that are available.

Overall, we will be working to ensure that the youth justice system is delivered in a way which utilises the available resources to best make Northern Ireland safer, and encourages and supports young people to desist from further offending.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Justice how he plans to rebuild confidence in the justice system following attacks made on the integrity of the Police Ombudsman by individual MLAs.

(AQO 7052/11-15)

Mr Ford: All parts of the justice system continually strive to maintain confidence in it, none more so than the Office of the Police Ombudsman. The very positive recent report from the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice, confirming the Ombudsman's independence, is a measure of their success in that regard.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice when Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 will be implemented.

(AQO 7053/11-15)

Mr Ford: I remain keen to give effect to the will of the Assembly that, under Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, police widows remarrying after 1 January 1989 should retain, or have reinstated, their pensions.

My officials are continuing to work to urgently resolve some outstanding matters, including eligibility, financial implications and affordability. While I am not yet in a position to give a definite timescale for resolution, I am working with a view to commencing payments at the very earliest opportunity.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the use of the Royal Prerogative of Mercy.

(AQO 7054/11-15)

Mr Ford: I remain keen to give effect to the will of the Assembly that, under Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, police widows remarrying after 1 January 1989 should retain, or have reinstated, their pensions.

My officials are continuing to work to urgently resolve some outstanding matters, including eligibility, financial implications and affordability. While I am not yet in a position to give a definite timescale for resolution, I am working with a view to commencing payments at the very earliest opportunity.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice what is the annual cost of ensuring that criminal justice system processes are compliant with Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

(AQO 7055/11-15)

Mr Ford: Article 2 of European Convention on Human Rights covers the right to life. It imposes duties on the state to: protect people against the risk of harm from the activities of public authorities: investigate suspicious deaths; protect people against threats to their lives; and provide arrangements to secure legal accountability for those responsible for a death.

Given the wide ranging nature of the duties imposed by Article 2, much of the costs of the police, prison and court services can be attributed, directly or indirectly, to the cost of Article 2 compliance and it is not practical to differentiate between these and other costs.

In the field of legacy of the past issues, the best figure available on costs of Article 2 compliance is provided in Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland report: 'A Review of the Cost and impact of Dealing with the Past on Criminal Justice Organisations in Northern Ireland'. This estimated that the annual cost of dealing with legacy matters was £30.6m, or £183.5m over the next following five years.

Department for Regional Development

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how much training are Roads Service engineers receiving on the provision of adequate cycling infrastructure.

(AQW 37742/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): In June 2012, my Department facilitated a short training seminar on cycling for TransportNI engineers, as part of a round of visits to Northern Ireland by the CTC and the Cycling Embassy of Denmark to promote new design concepts. More recently, my Department hosted a very successful conference in Belfast to promote cycling. As part of this conference TransportNI engineers attended a training workshop with Transport for London to discuss and debate new standards for cycling design.

Officials in my Department's Cycling Unit are currently considering the content of the draft London Cycling Design Standards and the Welsh Design Guidance (2014), together with many other design guides, to ensure that appropriate engineering standards are adopted to deliver cycling networks which will encourage more people to adopt cycling as an everyday mode of travel.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the average cost of repairing a faulty streetlight.

(AQW 37916/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The average cost of repairing a faulty street light is approximately £40. The actual cost of a repair is dependent upon site-specific factors such as the type and wattage of the faulty light, extent of work required, location and type of road and the type of equipment used.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development what measures he will put in place to encourage shoppers into town centres in the lead up to Christmas.

(AQW 38015/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am presently considering the introduction of a range of temporary measures to assist traders and shoppers in the run-up to Christmas and plan to make an announcement in the near future.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to increase the resources available to his Department's cycling unit.

(AQW 38019/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I established my Department's Cycling Unit in November 2013 which received its full complement of eight members of staff by February 2014.

The Member will be aware of the current budgetary constraints affecting my Department and in light of that there are no immediate plans to increase Cycling Unit resources at present.

However, work is ongoing to secure European funding through the Interreg V programme. In addition my Department will continue to consider cycling where appropriate as part of its overall objective of creating a cycling culture in Northern Ireland.

This will include design and implementation of schemes by Transport NI, either as specific cycling schemes or as part of overall transport measures.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are any plans to introduce (i) cycle lanes; and (ii) bicycle boxes at traffic lights in Ballymena.

(AQW 38021/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is committed to providing safer roads for vulnerable road users such as pedestrians and cyclists, with considerable investment already targeted at improving the cycling infrastructure, as set out in the Sub Regional Transport Plan 2015.

I can also confirm that the provision of cycling/pedestrian measures is routinely considered in the design process for all road schemes, including traffic schemes. However, due to restricted road space and signal phasing of traffic lights, it is not always possible to provide this type of facility without severely disrupting traffic progression and as such, my Department has no immediate proposals to implement cycle lanes and cycle boxes (advance stop lines) at traffic signals in Ballymena.

However, I can assure you that consideration will be given to this type of measure when any road scheme or upgrade of traffic signals is being programmed in the future.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the issues discussed, and the resulting benefits, from the recent Changing Gear conference.

(AQW 38022/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I welcome the Members attendance at and continued interest in the 'Northern Ireland – Changing Gear' seminar. The event took place on 16th October 2014 and was attended by around 180 people. A host of international speakers shared their cycling expertise and experiences at the event including: Klaus Bondam from Danish Cyclists Federation, Brian Deegan from Transport for London, Ola Gustafsson from Gehl Architects, Copenhagen and Sjors van Duren from Arnhem Nijmegen City Region, the Netherlands.

Speakers covered topics including 'Doing it the Danish way .... the importance of political buy in', 'Design & Safety', 'The human dimension' and 'Fast cycling routes – Experiences in the city region'.

All presentations delivered at the seminar are publically available on the Department for Regional website: (http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/sustainable\_transport\_branch/presentations-from-ni-changing-gear-seminar.htm)

The seminar was one of a series of events organised by my Cycling Unit to raise awareness of and encourage participation in the consultation process for the draft Bicycle Strategy for Northern Ireland. The event was also intended to harness Northern Ireland's interest in cycling and explore possibilities to transform Northern Ireland into a modern, vibrant, healthy cycling society.

The seminar which promoted understanding of, and buy-in to, the key themes of the draft Bicycle Strategy will enable my Department and our partners to successfully implement the strategy over a 25 year time frame.

Feedback from those who attended the seminar has been very positive with many people commenting on the quality of the presentations and the interesting topics covered. It is important that we build on this momentum and continue to work to create a society where everyday cycling is the norm, where cycling is an attractive, accessible and safe form of transport and that is what I am leading my Department in doing.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total miles of cycle lanes in each constituency.

(AQW 38023/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not hold this information in the format requested.

Mr I McCre asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total amount of grants paid from the Rural Transport Fund to deliver rural transport services, in each of the last four completed financial years.

(AQW 38089/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The total amount of grants paid from the Rural Transport Fund to deliver rural transport services, in each of the last four completed financial years is as follows:

Financial Year	Level of Rural Transport Fund Support
2010-2011	£3.64M
2011-2012	£3.52M
2012-2013	£3.19M
2013-2014	£3.48M

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will review the criteria for the provision of disabled parking spaces in locations where a resident is disabled, but provision has been refused on the grounds that nearby parking is already available, but is normally fully occupied.

(AQW 38102/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The degree of difficulty finding a parking space is one of a number of aspects that my officials examine when considering whether there is a need for an accessible parking bay. My Department needs to be satisfied that applicants have a genuine need for the bay.

Applicants must be a blue badge holder and, if under sixty-five, confirm that they are in receipt of the higher rate of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance. Anyone over sixty-five only needs to be a Blue Badge Holder.

Whereas accessible bays are normally only provided for drivers with a blue badge, bays may be provided for a blue badge holding passenger who cannot be left alone, for example a child under sixteen who lives at the same address as the proposed driver. When the passenger is over sixteen, my Department will require evidence of the need for constant attendance in the form of a letter from a Consultant Doctor.

A bay will only be provided where there are significant parking difficulties outside the applicant's house. As part of the assessment process parking levels will be checked using information provided by the applicant. A bay will not normally be provided where the applicant has access to a driveway, or a garage, or other off-street parking.

Bays will be located as near as possible to the applicant's home or place of work. Bays cannot be located where there are other waiting or parking restrictions or where it could create a road safety problem, but officials will consider a suitable alternative location close to the applicant's home.

When establishing if there is a parking problem officials will survey the location up to five times. If a parking problem is identified in two of the surveys then a bay, subject to other requirements outlined above, may be provided. I consider this to be a reasonable approach and that a further review of the criteria would not be warranted at this time.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38152/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Public Sector Reform Division, within the Department of Finance and Personnel, was established in October 2013. To date no efficiencies have been realised in my Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the current occupancy and usage rates at the Cairnshill Park and Ride facility.

(AQW 38204/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Park and Ride site at Cairnshill has been an outstanding success. With a dedicated 10 minute service running to Belfast's Great Victoria Street bus station during the peak hour and a cost of £3.80 per return journey, or £11.50 for a week, more and more commuters are seeing the benefits of switching to public transport, which is afforded priority over other traffic on the bus lanes on Saintfield Road and Ormeau Road.

The existing site has capacity for 720 vehicles and currently attracts approximately 550 vehicles per day, with usage figures showing steady growth.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Enterprise Refurbishment Programme.

(AQW 38213/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Work is ongoing to finalise all design areas and advance some outstanding procurement issues. The various work streams within the project are working in a co-ordinated way to deliver the project on time against its original completion date of December 2015.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department's policy of priority secondary salting for rural schools will be in operation this winter.

(AQW 38214/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that my Department's winter service policy of priority secondary salting for rural schools will be in operation this winter.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development what his Department is doing to ensure maximum safety on the roads in the winter months, particularly those with difficult topography.

(AQW 38215/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is well prepared for the coming winter season. Staffing arrangements are in place, pre-season checks on winter service equipment have been undertaken and salt stocks have been replenished. TransportNI has approximately 300 people on standby ready to salt main roads. Contracts are also in place to enable contractors and farmers to help to clear roads during periods of prolonged snowfall.

TransportNI's winter service policy and procedures, which set out the criteria for the salting of roads, are based on the well-established practice of targeting the limited resources available for this service on the busier main through routes. TransportNI salts main through routes carrying more than 1,500 vehicles per day. In exceptional circumstances, roads with difficult topography carrying between 1,000 and 1,500 vehicles per day will also be salted. The application of this policy ensures that 28% of the total road network, which carries around 80% of traffic, is salted.

In addition, small settlements in rural areas containing 100 dwellings or more also have salted links to roads on the main salted network and, priority "secondary" salting is provided to around 50 rural schools that are most affected by the adverse weather conditions. Salting may also be undertaken in urgent situations such as to provide access for the emergency services, unforeseen occurrences such as funerals or to help get fuel or feed stocks to farmers.

In addition, approximately 4,800 salt bins and almost 50,000 grit piles are provided on public roads for use by the public on a self-help basis.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 25681/11-15, how many additional cycle storage spaces have been provided by Translink over the last twelve months.
(AQW 38218/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that in the last twelve months, additional to the 208 Northern Ireland Railways station cycle storage spaces and 128 bus station cycle storage stations previously reported, Translink has created an additional 27 spaces as below:

- Bangor bus and rail station - 20 additional spaces
- Antrim bus and rail station - 4 additional spaces
- Sydenham rail halt - 3 additional spaces

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development how many cycle hoops or stands have been installed in each council area over the last twelve months.
(AQW 38219/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Over the last twelve months, my Department has installed 181 cycle loops and stands in the following Council areas:

- Belfast – 95;
- Lisburn – 59;
- Newtownabbey – 10;
- North Down – 7;
- Limavady – 7;
- Castlereagh – 2; and
- Carrickfergus - 1

In addition, Councils and the Department for Social Development, as part of public realm works, may have also installed cycle loops or stands during this period, details of which are not maintained by my Department.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment to detail any legislative provisions for the regulation of pavement kerb heights.
(AQW 38222/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm there is no legislative provision for the regulation of pavement kerb heights.

The height of a kerb for a pavement will vary depending on its location and purpose. Kerbs may be introduced for a number of reasons, for example, to provide definition in separating the footway from the carriageway, to add structural stability to a carriageway edge, or to address a flooding or drainage problem, and each circumstance requires consideration of the specific characteristics of the site.

The Department's main design guide, the Design Manual for Roads and Bridges, therefore gives only general guidance on the 'standard' height of the kerb, which ranges from 100-125mm in urban situations to 75-100mm in rural situations.

Lower kerb heights are used at pedestrian crossing points where the kerb should ideally be flush with the carriageway but can range from 0mm to +6mm, and a 10mm kerb height may be used in exceptional circumstances where the lack of kerb could present a ponding issue on the footway. A 25mm kerb height is used for vehicular accesses.

I am also aware that kerb heights, which are less than the 'standard' height outlined above, have been used in Public Realm schemes jointly promoted by the relevant local Council and the Department for Social Development.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the timescales applicable for streets currently under consideration for parking constraint under the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan.

(AQW 38255/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The principal areas identified within the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan 2015 for parking restraint are those lying within Belfast and Lisburn city centres. Both of those areas are largely subject to existing forms of parking control, including controlled parking zones (on-street Pay and Display parking), limited waiting, and single or double yellow line parking restrictions.

The streets within these areas that currently do not have some form of parking restraint are either not routinely used for parking, or lie within residential areas where the most appropriate form of parking restraint is considered to be a residents' parking scheme.

Officials are presently actively engaged in taking forward residents' parking schemes in two areas within Belfast, one of which (the College Park Avenue/Rugby Road area) lies within the area identified for parking restraint. Should the outcome of these consultations be positive, it is envisaged schemes could be implemented on the ground early within the 2015/2016 financial year.

The Plan also proposed that on-street parking controls are introduced in Bangor, and these have already been introduced in the town centre. The town centre has also been identified as an area of Parking Restraint within the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan, although not to the same level as Belfast city centre.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the proposed timescale for consideration of residents' parking schemes in areas outside those identified in his Department's first consultation.

(AQW 38256/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently finalising the draft legislation for a residents' parking scheme in the Rossville Street Area of Londonderry, prior to progressing to the public consultation stage. The public consultation period is planned to commence in January 2015.

The timeline for the delivery of the scheme will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation and nature of any objections. In the absence of significant objections, the scheme should be delivered in spring 2015.

In addition my officials continue to engage with residents and others on the potential for the implementation of residents' parking schemes in a number of areas across Northern Ireland. Progress on scheme development will depend on a number of factors, such as the successful implementation of the first schemes currently being consulted upon.

Therefore I am not currently in a position to outline a timescale for the implementation of Residents' Parking Schemes other than the one noted above.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the proposed timescale for consideration of residents' parking schemes in areas identified in his Department's first consultation.

(AQW 38257/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My officials are currently engaged in formal consultation on the implementation of residents' parking schemes in the Lower Malone, and College Park Avenue/Rugby Road areas in South Belfast

The consultation period started on 29 October 2014 and runs to 19 November 2014. Following this, officials will consider and deal with any responses or representations received, and assuming no significant objections are received, will complete the remaining part of the legislative process. Officials estimate the very earliest a scheme could be implemented on the ground would be early within the 2015/2016 financial year, although this very much depends on a positive outcome to the consultation process.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the timescale for further consideration of streets that could be subject to parking constraint under the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan, once the current list of streets have been considered.

(AQW 38258/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My officials consider the most appropriate means of parking restraint within those remaining areas identified within the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan 2015 would largely be through the implementation of residents' parking schemes.

Progress on schemes will depend on a number of factors, such as the successful implementation of the first series of schemes currently progressing through the legislative process. This being the case I am unable to outline a timescale for future development at present.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Regional Development how many street lights in each constituency are in need of repair.

(AQW 38259/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This information is not available in the format requested as my Department does not maintain its street lighting records by constituency boundaries.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the location of the NI Water treatment works operating at 80 per cent or more capacity; and what plans are in place to upgrade treatment works.

(AQW 38261/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the wastewater treatment works (WWTWs) that are operating at 80% or greater capacity has been supplied by NI Water and, because it is a lengthy document, is available in the Library for the Member to consult. It does not directly relate to the priority of works planned to be upgraded in any funding period. NI Water notes that the estimate of 80% capacity is based on the design capacity of the works recorded in the NI Water Annual Information Returns (AIR 14 Design PE) compared with estimated population and trade served, termed the population equivalent (PE), (AIR 14 Actual PE).

There is an ongoing capital and operational programme to maintain existing assets. NI Water also has a prioritised capital programme to address quality and growth issues at wastewater treatment works. This prioritisation is based on quality compliance and operational need and is undertaken jointly between NI Water and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) and delivered from within the available budget.

Subject to funding, NI Water plan to commit £84m during the 6 year PC15 period in addressing quality and growth issues through the upgrade of 64 WWTWs.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the annual income generated by Department owned car parks in North Down.

(AQW 38267/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are currently thirteen chargeable car parks owned by my Department in the North Down Council area. The total income generated from these car parks in the financial year 2013/14 was £445,401.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development what outstanding land issues are still to be resolved pending a successful upgrade and passing loop on the Belfast-Derry railway.

(AQW 38276/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise you that the design for a passing loop at Bellarena is complete. The construction contract is ready to be awarded subject to the acquisition of land. It is hoped that a settlement with the relevant landowner can be successfully concluded.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there have been any disciplinary consequences within Translink over Phase 2 of the Coleraine to Londonderry Rail Track Project.

(AQW 38291/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In my statement to the Assembly on 3 November 2014, I expressed my extreme displeasure with the way in which Translink has managed this important project, given the particular importance that I attach to it and its Programme for Government status. I went on to say that I expect the Translink Board and the new Chief Executive to review the organisation's failings comprehensively. I have communicated this directly to the Translink Chair and new Chief Executive who has agreed to produce a comprehensive lessons learned report and follow up actions in the near future.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the A5 Western Transport Corridor project is still a key priority in the Programme for Government 2011-15, given the current budget cuts; and when construction will commence.

(AQW 38298/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware that the A5 Western Transport Corridor scheme has been taken forward as a result of an agreement between the Executive and the Irish Government. Both the Executive and the Irish Government remain committed to the scheme.

Work to address the one area of concern identified in the judicial review is well advanced. This relates to undertaking Appropriate Assessments under the Habitats Directive of the impact of the A5 proposals on designated environmentally sensitive sites. Work is also well advanced on the new Environmental Statement and new draft Statutory Orders.

Subject to the successful completion of statutory procedures, construction of this scheme will be dependent upon funding being made available by the Executive and the Irish Government in future budget settlements.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration is given to the assessment of people with fluctuating conditions, such as Parkinson's disease, when applying and being assessed for the Blue Badge parking scheme.

(AQW 38309/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A specific disability, such as Parkinson's disease, does not automatically qualify an applicant for a Blue Badge. All applications for Blue Badges are assessed on an individual basis and a Blue Badge will be awarded if one of the criteria outlined below is met.

- receipt of the higher rate of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance;
- registered blind;
- receipt of a War Pensioner's Mobility Supplement;

- have a permanent and substantial disability which means the applicant cannot walk, or have very considerable difficulty walking - in this case the applicant's doctor may be asked to answer a series of questions to confirm eligibility for a badge;
- drive a vehicle regularly, have a severe disability in both arms and are unable to operate, or have considerable difficulty operating, all or some types of parking meter; and
- children under the age of two, if they have a disability due to a medical condition and need to travel with bulky equipment, or to be close to a vehicle for emergency medical treatment, may be eligible for a badge

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are any current proposals to put the Lisburn-Antrim railway line back into use, including a connection to Belfast International Airport.

(AQW 38310/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Re-opening the Antrim to Knockmore line is one of two possible solutions identified in the Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy to remove potential longer term bottlenecks to more frequent timetabling and shortening of journey times of services on the Northern Line between Antrim and Belfast. The other option is dualling of the existing single line track between Bleach Green and Antrim. The economic cost and benefit of each of the options will be considered in further work to be undertaken by Translink.

The Strategy also notes that re-opening of the Antrim to Knockmore line could present an opportunity to establish a spur to Belfast International Airport, although such investment is less likely to be economically viable until annual passenger numbers through the airport rise to around 10 million. As passenger throughput in 2013 was just over 4 million, a detailed feasibility study would be expected as passenger numbers grow towards 10 million by 2030 as predicted by the airport operator.

The extent to which these proposed projects can be supported will depend upon the availability of significantly greater amount of railways capital grant from the Executive's budgets over the next 20 years.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the car parks in North Down owned by his Department that are surplus to requirements.

(AQW 38341/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has no car parks in North Down that are surplus to requirements.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department has been approached in relation to purchasing departmental controlled car parks in North Down.

(AQW 38342/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has not been approached in relation to purchasing departmental controlled car parks in North Down.

Arrangements for the future maintenance and operation of the Park & Ride facilities in Bangor are currently being considered, including the possibility of transferring responsibility for Dufferin Avenue and Abbey Street car parks to Translink.

All other Departmental car parks in the North Down area will be transferred to the new North Down and Ards Council on 1 April 2015 by virtue of Transfer Schemes, provided for by Section 122 of the Local Government Act 2014.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the road projects cancelled in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 38344/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would advise the Member that no road projects have been cancelled in the last three financial years.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38375/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Equality Unit currently employs two staff, both of whom also carry out duties in areas other than Equality. The proportion of staff resources devoted to Equality issues equates to 1.35 full-time staff.

In the 2013/14 financial year, the cost of the Unit's staffing resources allocated to Equality issues amounted to £59,717.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether footpath reconstruction is planned for Springhill Avenue, Bangor.

(AQW 38397/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am pleased to advise the Member that work is currently underway on the reconstruction of footways in Springhill Avenue, Bangor.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed new sewage pumping station for Millisle, including when the works will begin.

(AQW 38401/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The site required for the new wastewater pumping station is presently split between two owners - Ards Borough Council and the Crown Estate. Before NIW can acquire the entire site, Ards Borough Council must first acquire a strip of land from the Crown Estate. Matters in relation to this initial acquisition are still ongoing and outside NIW's direct control. NIW's legal department have sought regular updates from the external parties and we understand legal processes are progressing.

I understand that an agreement has now been reached between the land owners. The project will be brought to construction as soon as possible following completion of the necessary land acquisitions.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cut in the 2014/15 budget allocation for the replacement of street lights; and what the cut will be in 2015/16.

(AQW 38433/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's budget allocation for the replacement of street lights in 2014/15 has not been cut. Replacement of street lights is funded from capital expenditure whereas the repair of street lights is funded from resource expenditure. The initial 2014/15 allocation for replacement of street lights was £5 million.

Budget allocations for 2015/16 have still to be agreed.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what streets in North Down are under consideration for parking constraint under the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan.

(AQW 38434/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The main streets identified within the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan 2015 for parking restraint in the North Down area are those lying within Bangor town centre. This area is already largely subject to existing forms of parking control, including limited waiting, and single- or double-yellow line parking restrictions.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development whether cyclists are required to use cycle lanes where available, particularly during rush hours.

(AQW 38477/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Highway Code for Northern Ireland contains a specific section entitled 'Rules for Cyclists' and these rules are in addition to subsequent sections of the code, which apply to all vehicles.

It advises cyclists to use facilities such as cycle lanes, cycle tracks and cycle routes where provided but states that their use by cyclists is not compulsory.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what was the total tonnage throughput in the last financial year for (i) Belfast; (ii) Warrenpoint; and (iii) Londonderry ports.

(AQW 38549/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Belfast Harbour Commission reported tonnage throughput of 22.7m tonnes in their Annual Report for the year ended 31 December 2013.

Both Warrenpoint Harbour Authority and Londonderry Port and Harbour Commissioners Annual Reports cover the year ending 31 March 2014. Their tonnage figures are 3,021,444 and 1,879,684 respectively.

This information is drawn from the organisations' Annual Reports which are published online.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Regional Development what action his Department will take to improve driver safety on the A29 Armagh to Keady road.

(AQW 38591/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A number of improvement schemes have been completed in recent years along the Armagh to Keady Road, most notably at the Bachelors Walk junction and from the Dundrum Road to Girvan's Bridge. Further sites at Ballyards Crossroads and at Ballyards Lodge have benefitted from the provision of additional warning signs and road markings.

However, my officials are aware of recent collisions occurring along the A29 and officials will be assessing the reports from the PSNI in respect of these collisions. Officials will be carrying out additional technical assessments and a review of the current signing, to determine if further road safety improvements are required along this route.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the current condition of Donaghadee Harbour.

(AQW 38596/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Department received its bi-annual underwater survey, commissioned on its behalf by Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) in May 2014. This report, which also examined the harbour structure above the water line, did not highlight any significant defects but did make some recommendations for work to be done in relation to weed killing, joint filling and the need to continue to monitor movements in the harbour wall. All the recommendations made in the report have now been carried out.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many people hold blue badges.
(AQW 38636/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As at 31 October 2014, the total number of badge holders in Northern Ireland was 110,574. This number changes on a daily basis as new badges are issued and others expire.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the criteria used to ensure that public safety is not compromised when deciding not to repair malfunctioning street lights.
(AQO 7065/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I readily acknowledge that, since street lighting is provided as a road safety measure, delays in the repair of malfunctioning street lights have the potential to lead to safety issues for road users during the hours of darkness.

In order to deal with the public safety implications, I have set priorities for dealing with street lighting faults with contractors still being employed to deal with faults that present an electrical or structural hazard to members of the public despite the prevailing funding pressures.

For other street lighting defects, where there is no electrical or structural hazard, my Department's Operations and Maintenance staff are able to provide around twenty five per cent of the usual resource required to fix street lighting faults, and they will endeavour to repair as many lights as possible, with large groups of lights which are out being dealt with first followed by individual lights that have failed. In present circumstances it will take longer to fix individual outages.

Regrettably, the impact of the cuts will mean that, in all likelihood, a large number of street lights will be out over the winter months. Currently, almost 15,000 lights are out across Northern Ireland. This is not the service that I would like to provide, but is the inevitable consequence of the budgetary pressures my Department is facing.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Regional Development what assurances he can give that he will uphold the commitment that no water charges will be introduced during this Programme for Government period.

Mr Kennedy: Decisions on water funding are cross-cutting, because of their significant public expenditure implications and the Executive has given a commitment that for householders it will ensure no additional water charges during this Programme for Government.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the timescale and the financing of the upgrade of the Derry/Londonderry - Belfast railway line.
(AQO 7062/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In my Statement to the Assembly on 3 November I confirmed that I remain fully committed to the completion of Phase 2 of the upgrade of Londonderry to Belfast Railway Line.

As outlined in my Statement, the detailed design work now suggests that overall costs could be of the order of £40m, with the additional cost of Phase 2 being in the region of £15-£20 million. This estimate is subject to the completion of the procurement process for the signalling element of Phase 2. Final procurement is expected in the early part of next year. I will be making this a priority in the deployment of my capital budget over the next two years.

My Department is working at present to secure approval to a revised Business Case. Assuming this happens soon the overall project timetable may be only marginally delayed. The signalling procurement process has already begun, with the issue of a Pre-Qualification Questionnaire, which does not commit Translink to expenditure. As set out last year in my communication on this issue a timetable of the end of 2016 is in place. This remains the case.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Regional Development what instruction or guidance his Department has provided to Transport NI staff, particularly in the Newry and South Down offices, regarding employing private contractors to empty gullies and drains in circumstances where heavy rainfall is expected and localised flooding is inevitable.
(AQO 7063/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Despite starting the year with a significant funding shortfall and submitting bids for additional funding as part of the June and October monitoring rounds process, my Department's Resource budget, used to fund the day to day maintenance operations, is under significant pressure.

As a result, I have had no option other than to stop issuing new work instructions to our external contractors who would have undertaken around one quarter of our essential work, in the following areas: footway and carriageway patching including potholes, grass cutting/environmental maintenance, gully emptying, road marking maintenance/renewal and traffic sign maintenance/replacement.

My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff are endeavouring to keep the road network in as safe a condition as possible. However, as they only have resources to complete around three quarters of the total workload, they will not be able to provide the service the public would expect in normal circumstances.

In circumstances where heavy rainfall, is expected such as when a weather warning has been issued, TransportNI staff have been instructed to prioritise the available resource in areas of known flooding. I can assure you that our staff will endeavour to carry out works, including out of hours cover, to ensure that the road network continues to be fully available and safe throughout all areas including Newry and Mourne and South Down.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Regional Development, further to his statement to the Assembly on 21 October 2014, to outline the prioritisation of car parking facilities due to be handed over to local councils in 2015.

Mr Kennedy: In April 2013, the Executive concluded that district councils should become responsible for the future provision, ownership and management of off-street car parks, except park and ride and park and share car parks, which will remain the responsibility of my Department.

The Off-Street Parking (Functions of District Councils) Bill, which is currently going through the Committee Stage, has a single clause to achieve the vision of the Executive.

There is no prioritisation of car parks transferring to the new councils. The aim is that any off-street car park that is owned by my Department will transfer, by way of formal transfer schemes, to each new council, with effect from 1 April 2015. A number of car parks are already owned by the councils and my Department's leases for these car parks will simply be terminated by the relevant council on 31 March 2015.

The Member may be interested to know that, at this stage, it is my intention to transfer 39 free and charged car parks to the new Fermanagh and Omagh District Council.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development why Translink has not made any comment on Phase 2 of the Coleraine to Londonderry track improvements.
(AQO 7066/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink is free to make comment on this project. I am aware also that last Wednesday Translink representatives gave evidence to the Committee for Regional Development.

The new Translink Group Chief Executive has commenced a lessons learned review and will share this with me in due course.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development what resources are in place to address recurring flooding concerns on the A2 dual carriageway at Hollywood and Craigdarragh Road, Helen's Bay.
(AQO 7067/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Despite starting the year with a significant funding shortfall and submitting bids for additional funding as part of the June and October monitoring rounds process, my Department's Resource budget, used to fund the day to day maintenance operations, is under significant pressure.

My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff are endeavouring to keep the road network in as safe a condition as possible. However, as they only have resources to complete around three quarters of the total workload, they will not be able to provide the service the public would expect in normal circumstances.

The flooding on A2 dual carriageway at Hollywood and Craigdarragh Road, Helen's Bay, on the 6 November, was caused by leaves covering some of the gully tops. The period of heavy rain at this time consequently caused flooding over one lane of the carriageway. In addition, it was also reported that a lorry had broken down on the road adding to the problems. These two issues quickly caused a build up of traffic. My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff attended the location and removed the leaves from the gully tops, which allowed the flood water to clear rapidly.

In circumstances where heavy rainfall is expected such as when a weather warning has been issued, my Department has been instructed to prioritise the available resource in areas of known flooding. I can assure you that our staff will endeavour to carry out works, including out of hours cover, to ensure that the road network continues to be fully available and safe throughout all areas including the A2 dual carriageway at Hollywood and Craigdarragh Road, Helen's Bay.

Mr Moutray asked the Minister for Regional Development how he will ensure that the 60 plus smartpass will not be affected by departmental cuts.
(AQO 7069/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Concessionary Fares is an Executive commitment and I have already made public my view that Concessionary fares should be fully funded by the Executive. I hope it will not be necessary to make this the subject of monitoring bids.

I have received £9.5m for concessions this year which has helped maintain the scheme in this financial year. We are still considering the implication of the budget settlement for 2015/16 currently. I continue to prioritise Concessionary Fares going forward and I have no plans to change existing entitlement.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Regional Development what assessment has been made of public safety issues resulting from his decision to reduce maintenance of grass verges and street lighting.

(AQO 7070/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Despite starting the year with a significant funding shortfall and submitting bids for additional funding as part of the June and October monitoring rounds process, my Department's Resource budget, used to fund the day to day maintenance operations, is under significant pressure.

As a result, I had no option but to suspend the issuing of new works to external contractors for a range of activities including grass cutting and street lighting. There is no doubt this reduction in service has the potential to impact on road safety.

I can assure you that public safety concerns are not disregarded by my Department. In order to deal with the health and safety implications, I have established priorities which take account of the budgets I have available.

My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff have the resources to complete around three quarters of routine maintenance activities and one quarter of the street lighting work, normally completed by external contractors. Officials are prioritising this work to keep the network in as safe a condition as possible, for example, street lighting faults that present an electrical or structural risk to the public continue to be fixed.

This is not the level of service that the public would expect in normal circumstances. However, I have had to take some difficult decisions and I simply cannot spend money that I do not have.

I can also confirm that my Department has received legal advice on how to meet its statutory duty under Article 8 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993.

In this regard, my Department will continue to inspect roads and footways in accordance with its established inspection regime and all defects will be recorded as normal. My Department's Operations and Maintenance staff will continue to carry out repairs to keep the network as safe as possible, however, due to the current financial constraints, defects may not be repaired as quickly as normal, but all repairs will be prioritised on the basis of safety.

My Department will continue to actively investigate and defend public liability claims with every case turning on its own facts. However, it will ultimately be up to the courts to decide if the reduced standards comply with my Department's statutory duty.

Department for Social Development

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail any planned environmental improvement schemes in North Down.

(AQW 37620/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): My Department is currently undertaking two major environmental improvement schemes in Bangor and Holywood in North Down in partnership with North Down Borough Council amounting to a total investment of £10.5 million. The contribution from my Department is £4.5 million.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the total number of claimants for Job Seekers Allowance (JSA) in each local government district in (a) May 2007; and (b) September 2014 and in each case, what percentage of the working age population was accounted for by JSA claimants.

(AQW 37751/11-15)

Mr Storey: The most recently published Jobseekers Allowance statistics refer to May 2014. Figures for August 2014 will be published at the end of November 2014. Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the number of people that have benefited from the extra statutory scheme set up in 2013 for contributions based Employment Support Allowance (ESA) and extended in 2014 to include income based ESA, which allows claimants to continue to receive ESA when they move between Northern Ireland and Great Britain; and (ii) how much income has been generated for claimants as a result of the scheme.

(AQW 38014/11-15)

Mr Storey:

- (i) The number of Employment and Support Allowance claimants moving from Great Britain to Northern Ireland and paid under the extra statutory scheme since its introduction in October 2012 to 30 September 2014 is 239*.
- (ii) The total amount of Employment and Support Allowance paid under the extra statutory scheme for the period October 2012 to September 2014 is approximately £672,000*.

* These are not statistics provided by the Department's Analytical Services Unit. They have been taken from management information collected by the Employment and Support Allowance Centre for the periods stated.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the amount of money paid for compensation events issued by the 'All Trades' contractors in each Northern Ireland Housing Executive District Area, since the start of the 2012 contract.

(AQW 38037/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive has advised that their local offices are now structured on a Regional/Area basis. Therefore, they have provided the information in relation to the amount of money paid for compensation events since the start of the 2012 contract by Housing Executive Region/Area, as detailed below: -

Belfast Region

North Belfast Area	£529.11
South & East Belfast Area	£232.45

South Region

South West Area	£1,794.97
South Area	£190.37

North Region

South Antrim Area	£670.50
East Area	£565.61
Causeway Area	£565.61

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Social Development what efforts are being made to re-tender the contracts that were returned to Direct Labour Organisation 'All Trades' after a number of the 2012 contracts collapsed.

(AQW 38038/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive is currently reviewing the provision of response maintenance services with the aim of developing a new procurement strategy to enable the renewing of contracts when they expire in August 2016. Until the strategy is complete, the nature of the procurement will not be known.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of whether the consultations on housing association mergers meets the legal standards set for bona fide consultations in R v Brent London Borough Council, ex p Gunning, (1985) 84 LGR 168 and in R v London Borough of Haringey [2014] UKSC 56.

(AQW 38057/11-15)

Mr Storey: Responsibility for carrying out consultation prior to a housing association merger rests with the housing association concerned. As the regulatory body, the Department is keen to ensure that proper consultation takes place in the eventuality of a merger however any issues arising as to the lawfulness of such exercises, is a matter in the first instance for the relevant housing association to address and ultimately perhaps a court of competent jurisdiction.

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development what consideration was given to An Droichead's neighbourhood renewal development project for the Ormeau Road, when the decision was made to transfer the site for development by another organization.

(AQW 38113/11-15)

Mr Storey: In May 2014, officials from my Department met with representatives from An Droichead to advise of the impending transfer of the site at 20-32 Ormeau Road, Belfast to the Department of Education. The representatives raised some concerns regarding their previous proposal and were advised to forward any new proposals for the site to the Department.

No further proposals were received and in July 2014 An Droichead was advised that the Department would proceed with the disposal of the site to the Droichead

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development what alternative plans his Department has to progress the An Droichead neighbourhood renewal development project.

(AQW 38115/11-15)

Mr Storey: My officials have met with representatives of An Droichead and discussed alternative sites for their development project that are in my Department's ownership. To date, no alternative proposal from An Droichead have been presented to the Department.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 37625/11-15, whether he will consider updating information sent to General Practitioners and other health professionals, when they are asked to provide medical reports about a benefit claimant, so that it includes advice as to the location of guidance about completing such reports on his Department's website.

(AQW 38122/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Social Security Agency is working with its Medical Service Provider to include information on the documentation requesting an Employment and Support Allowance medical report signposting Healthcare Professionals to the guidance available on the Department's Website, about completing such reports.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in each constituency received letters to alert them to the importance of checking their benefits.

(AQW 38162/11-15)

Mr Storey: During 2014/15, approximately 25,000 letters will be issued to older people to encourage them to find out about benefit entitlement. Letters have been issued from 20 October 2014 and will continue through to January 2015.

A breakdown of the information is not available at constituency level but is available for each Local Government District.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding for new builds his Department has awarded to each housing authority over the last three financial years.

(AQW 38170/11-15)

Mr Storey: I assume the Member is referring to the Housing Association Grant. The table attached, provided by the Housing Executive, details the total Housing Association Grant awarded/allocated for the social housing schemes which started in each of the last three financial years, broken down by Housing Association.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development how many tenants in each constituency are in receipt of Housing Benefit for homes where the landlord is a family member.

(AQW 38183/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information requested cannot be provided as the Housing Executive does not hold this detail on the Housing Benefit system.

Whilst the Housing Benefit application form asks applicants whether he/she is related to the Landlord, the answer is not transferred to the Housing Benefit system because if the claimant is a close relative of the landlord and resides in the same property as the landlord, he/she is not entitled to Housing Benefit and the claim would therefore not be put onto the live Housing Benefit System. Conversely, if the claimant lives at a different address from a family member who is the landlord, there is no such bar on him/her claiming Housing Benefit and there is therefore no need for the relationship to be recorded.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the capital receipts generated by his Department since 2011, including how the capital was generated.

(AQW 38200/11-15)

Mr Storey: The capital receipts generated within the department since 2011 are detailed in the table below:

Year	Capital Receipts (£m)	How generated
2011-12	94.96	House & land sales/
2012-13	98.71	Housing loan & grant repayments
2013-14	101.37
2014-15 (year to date Oct 2014)	52.85
Total	347.89

Mr McCallister asked Minister for Social Development to detail the efficiencies that have been realised in his Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

(AQW 38233/11-15)

Mr Storey: To date there have been no efficiencies realised in my Department as a direct result of the work of the Public Sector Reform Division.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.

(AQW 38241/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department for Social Development participates in the NICS Cycle to Work Scheme. The NICS Cycle to Work Scheme was launched by the Department of Finance and Personnel in June 2012 and it is open to all NICS staff all year round.

As the Scheme is a NICS scheme it does not extend to NDPBs, for whom the NICS is not the employer. However, DFP as the lead Department on the Scheme provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of cycle to work schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development what research has been undertaken to measure the effect on the construction industry of the consultation on 'Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing'.

(AQW 38245/11-15)

Mr Storey: When developing policy on the introduction of Developer Contributions in Northern Ireland, a draft partial Regulatory Impact Assessment was drawn up, setting out the economic, social and environmental costs and benefits of options for the introduction of developer contributions. This partial Regulatory Impact Assessment was published for consultation as part of my Department's draft Developer Contributions for Affordable Housing paper and the Department of the Environment's (DOE) draft Planning Policy Statement 22 Affordable Housing.

The draft Regulatory Impact Assessment acknowledges that whilst some economic modelling/cost benefit analysis has been conducted, a further Small Business Impact test will be undertaken following consideration of the responses received during the consultation and prior to any preferred policy option being implemented.

My officials are currently considering the 75 responses received through the public consultation and are liaising further with DOE officials in relation to the responses received to their consultation. Along with the Minister of the Environment, I intend to take account of all of the views received before considering how to move forward with the proposals for affordable housing.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the level of reserve funds provided by his Department and held by each Housing Association for new build housing.

(AQW 38252/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department does not provide Housing Associations with funding that they can hold as reserve funds for the building of new houses.

Housing Association reserves are accumulated from any surplus made on their operational activities. In general Housing Associations do not maintain reserves as cash balances, but merely accounting entries. Reserves are often reinvested in housing stock, to manage cash flow to minimise borrowing costs and meet their short term liabilities.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 37065/11-15, whether he will hold discussions with Housing Associations regarding how they are dealing with the increase in the number of tenants being subjected to court proceedings for anti social behaviour.

(AQW 38270/11-15)

Mr Storey: The increasing number of housing association tenants being subjected to court proceedings for anti social behaviour indicates the commitment of housing associations to tackling this difficult issue, an approach which has my full support. It is my aim to continue to build the capacity of social landlords to deal with anti social behaviour and I am currently seeking the agreement of Executive colleagues to draft a Bill that would extend the range of options currently open to social landlords. When these proposals were published for consultation at the end of last year, the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations and a number of individual associations responded. The consensus view of these associations was that successful court action depends on access to information about the individuals involved in anti social behaviour and my officials have therefore been encouraging the PSNI to agree an information sharing protocol with the NI Federation of Housing Associations.

The consultation paper included proposals for a new form of social housing tenancy (the "short tenancy") for tenants who have been involved in anti social behaviour. The landlord would be required to provide whatever support services the tenants may need but, if the tenant's conduct does not improve, the tenancy can be brought to an end within a fixed period. The paper also outlined proposals to clarify existing legislation for dealing with anti social behaviour by homeless applicants who have been placed in temporary accommodation. Following the consultation, I intend to propose that the Bill should also provide for a power of arrest without warrant to be attached to the injunctions against anti social behaviour, which are currently available to landlords, as well as the creation of a statutory basis for information sharing.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what procedures are in place to avoid perceived conflicts of interest for departmental officials dealing with Neighbourhood Renewal Grants.

(AQW 38300/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Northern Ireland Civil Service Code of Ethics and Handbook provide guidance on duties and responsibilities of all civil servants including the need to avoid conflicts of interest arising as part of their job. In addition, procedural guidance addressing potential conflicts of interest for officials processing funding applications including Neighbourhood Renewal grants is in place within the Urban Regeneration Group. That guidance explains what a conflict of interest is, incompatible outside interests, the responsibilities of staff and includes declarations for officials to complete as appropriate.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether a conflict of interest was declared by any departmental official dealing with the Lurgan Golf Club Neighbourhood Renewal Grant application.

(AQW 38301/11-15)

Mr Storey: No. My Department recently learned that an official who was involved in the project did not declare a conflict of interest in this case. Staff have been reminded of the need to comply with guidance on declaring potential conflicts of interest and this issue is being dealt with through the normal HR processes.

Whilst the decision to approve funding was made by an independent panel an investigation of the project file is underway to ensure that the application for funding has been fully and properly assessed. This review will be independently verified by the Department's Internal Audit Unit to ensure that all funding decisions were in order.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development for an update in relation to the review of the Housing Executive.

(AQW 38351/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Social Housing Reform Programme has a mandate to explore the potential for reform of housing structures in NI. The Programme is currently in its second phase. This involves detailed work to present through the first half of 2015 a range of proposals for consultation. These will include a draft strategy for tenant participation, options for the development of a social housing rent policy, proposals for the future nature of inspection and regulation, and proposals for structural reform, if required.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Affordable Warmth Scheme.

(AQW 38352/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department introduced the Affordable Warmth Scheme on 15 September 2014. This is a targeted area based scheme which will improve the energy efficiency of the homes of people most affected by fuel poverty. Eligible households will be contacted by their local Council. The Affordable Warmth Scheme is currently being ramped up to replace the Warm Homes Scheme which is due to end on 31 March 2015.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what funding was provided by his Department or the Social Security Agency to the Citizens Advice Bureau in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38354/11-15)

Mr Storey: Direct funding provided by the Department for Social Development to the Citizens Advice Bureau in each of the last five years is detailed in the attached Annex.

In addition the Citizens Advice Bureau NI (Regional Office) benefited from Departmental funding to the Northern Ireland Advice Consortium. Funding to the Consortium for the period 1 October 2012 to 31 March 2013 was £738,451 and for the period 1 April 2013 to 31 March 2014 was £1,448,488. Details of specific allocations to the individual members of the Consortium are not available.

The Department also provides funding for frontline advice services of approximately £1.6m through local councils, who provide additional funding. Local councils then commission services and allocate funding from a range of advice providers including the Citizens Advice Bureau. Details of specific allocation to these organisations by local councils are not available.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail what action has been taken by The Appeals Service (TAS) senior management to date in order to effectively balance and manage the workload of both TAS sites; and whether TAS senior management considered the possibility of certain tasks being downgraded to a lower grade due to the simplicity of the tasks.

(AQW 38365/11-15)

Mr Storey: The volume of work within The Appeals Service (TAS) is continually monitored by TAS senior management. Staff complement in both TAS offices is kept under review to ensure appropriate staffing levels are maintained in line with business requirements, current workloads and future projections. DSD has approved a review of TAS processes, roles and responsibilities and loading and weighting of graded posts. This will be carried out by Business Consultancy Services (DFP) and will commence in the near future. This will further ensure that staffing levels are at an appropriate level to meet business requirements.

Mr Copeland asked Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 36154/11-15, whether he is aware of policy 1.07 of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Handbook; and if so, whether the temporary transfers as described in section 1.07 be used to ensure The Appeals Service offices are operating with only the necessary number of staff.

(AQW 38366/11-15)

Mr Storey: The on-loan provisions referred to in the question govern a formal agreement between NICS departments relating, for example, to the delivery of a service e.g. the majority of staff in the Appeals Service are formally on-loan from DSD to the Department of Justice. As such, the on-loan provision is not an appropriate mechanism by which to seek to address an ad hoc, temporary, post-loading issue within a business unit.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38427/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department's Equality Unit consists of one member of staff at Deputy Principal level and one member of staff at Executive Officer 1 level. The Deputy Principal is also responsible for other Departmental functions.

The Annual total cost of staff in the Equality Unit is £54,217.00.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of Northern Ireland Housing Executive households in Foyle with (i) gas; (ii) oil; and (iii) solid fuel as a primary heating source, broken down by District Office.

(AQW 38439/11-15)

Mr Storey: The heating systems in Housing Executive homes in the Foyle Parliamentary constituency, broken down by local office area is as follows: -

Local Office	Gas	Oil	Solid Fuel*
Collon Terrace	826	1,502	13
Waterloo Place	810	1,253	68
Waterside	756	1,501	62

There are a further 150 NIHE dwellings in Foyle with other forms of heating.

* includes gravity fed boilers, open fire back boilers, open fires and room heaters.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the objective of building ten new Shared Neighbourhood Developments under the Together: Building a United Community strategy.

(AQW 38517/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has identified ten sites which provide the potential for development as shared neighbourhoods and is working to identify further potential sites.

Construction works on 1 site have been completed and site or construction works have commenced on 3 further sites.

All new social housing, including on potential shared neighbourhood developments, will be allocated on the basis of housing need and in accordance with the Housing Executive's Housing Selection Scheme. This means that while sites will be earmarked for development as shared neighbourhoods, this status cannot be confirmed until all the social housing within a development is allocated.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Social Development what actions his Department has taken to advance the Together: Building a United Community objective of reviewing housing provision to bring forward recommendations on enhancing shared neighbourhoods.

(AQW 38518/11-15)

Mr Storey: There is already a substantial body of research, evidence and literature on shared housing. As a first step, my officials are working on producing a review of this to identify key gaps. It is then my intention to commission a study in the next financial year, resources permitting, which aims to build further our understanding on how we can further enhance the provision of shared neighbourhoods.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people on the housing waiting list, broken down by Housing Executive District Office, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38663/11-15)

Mr Storey: Table 1 attached details the number of people on the Common Waiting List for each Housing Executive District Office area in each of the last five years. Table 2 attached details the number of people in Housing Stress for each Housing Executive District Office area in each of the last five years.

* NIHE advises that:-

1. Figures for 2011/12 were extracted on 1 May 2012, due to the implementation of a new electronic Housing Management System.
2. Due to the introduction of the new Housing Management System and a change to the annual renewal process for applicants, the number of waiting list applicants for 2011-12 are not directly comparable with previous years.

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister for Social Development, following a recent Republic of Ireland announcement that it is seeking European Investment Bank funding to assist in the provision of social housing, what is his Department's position in relation to accessing such funding to deliver social housing.
(AQO 7072/11-15)

Mr Storey: I am happy to consider all possible means of accessing funding which may assist in the delivery of social housing while providing value for money to the taxpayer.

The European Investment Bank has delivered financial assistance in the past for major road infrastructure and social housing projects. The Finance Minister and DFP officials have had several discussions with the European Investment Bank during the last year on how the Bank may play a greater role in financing infrastructure projects in Northern Ireland. These discussions also included the potential to establish a NI Investment fund.

My Department has already engaged with the Department of Finance and Personnel to consider the potential for European Investment Bank funding for social housing.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the need for continuing development in the Causeway Coast area.
(AQO 7075/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department continues to work with the Local Council authorities in the Causeway Coast area in order to identify and help deliver regeneration initiatives that will help to develop this area.

The announcement that Royal Portrush Golf Club will host the Open Championship as early as 2019 represents a unique opportunity not only for Portrush but for the whole Causeway Coast and the wider Northern Ireland economy. A ministerial sub- group has met and agreed to work together with all stakeholders to take forward a programme of major infrastructure projects in the Causeway Coast area over the next number of years. A number of projects are at the development stage which will help deliver this vision include –

- Re-developing the harbour to provide a marina attracting luxury cruise boats and the surrounding lands;
- Re-locating the train station and providing a transport hub with the bus/coach station;
- Identifying a suitable location and providing opportunities for a potential development of a 4 star hotel; and
- Providing a major upgrade of the public realm for the town centre.

Officials from my Department are currently drafting a paper on this regeneration programme which will outline the level of investment and benefits to the Causeway Coast and Northern Ireland.

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the positive impact the Boiler Replacement Scheme has had amongst older people.

(AQO 7080/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Boiler Replacement Scheme has been a very popular and very successful scheme. Since the Scheme was launched in September 2012 the Housing Executive has received almost 50,000 enquiries. There have been 22,653 formal applications and the Housing Executive has issued 21,551 approvals to commence boiler replacement works. Up until 31 October 2014 the scheme has helped 16,446 households to install a new boiler of which 1,258 replacement boilers have been in the Lagan Valley constituency.

The Scheme has been particularly popular amongst older people, almost 50% of applicants who had new boilers installed were aged over 66 and another 34% were aged between 51 and 65.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the most recent number of applicants on the Common Waiting List in North Antrim deemed to be in housing stress.

(AQO 7073/11-15)

Mr Storey: At 1st October 2014 there were 2,130 applicants on the waiting list in the North Antrim Parliamentary Constituency, of which 1,180 were in housing stress. There were 445 allocations in the preceding twelve months.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development, with particular reference to training and expertise, to outline the discussions he has had with the Minister of the Environment to ensure a smooth transfer of powers to the new councils in April 2015.

(AQO 7079/11-15)

Mr Storey: As I announced to the Assembly on 11 November, the commencement date for the transfer of powers for urban regeneration and community development is now April 2016. I have already had preliminary discussions with the Minister of the Environment and we plan to meet again in the future. My officials will continue to engage in discussions with each of the new Councils and with officials in the Department of the Environment to support training and capacity building to ensure the smooth transfers of powers to the new Councils from April 2016.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in the Foyle constituency are currently on the Housing Executive waiting list.

(AQO 7082/11-15)

Mr Storey: At 1 October 2014 there were 3,316 applicants on the waiting list in the Foyle Parliamentary constituency, of which 2,298 were in housing stress. The breakdown of the waiting list is as follows:-

- Single                    1,581 with 1,059 in Housing Stress
- Small Adult            114 with 67 in Housing Stress
- Small Family          1,045 with 792 in Housing Stress
- Large Adult            27 with 24 in Housing Stress
- Large Family          187 with 121 in Housing Stress
- Older Person          362 with 235 in Housing Stress

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on his Department's Empty Homes Strategy in Fermanagh and South Tyrone.

(AQO 7083/11-15)

Mr Storey: Within the constituency of Fermanagh and South Tyrone the Empty Homes Unit in the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has recorded 31 empty properties reported to date. These properties consist of seven former Housing Executive properties and 24 other properties, of which, 10 are located in the wider Dungannon area and 21 in County Fermanagh.

Eight cases have since been closed as the properties are either for sale/for rent/or already occupied. One former Housing Executive property is being considered for inclusion in a pilot scheme; however this is subject to the condition of the property and value for money. 22 other properties are registered as being in the wider Empty Homes Strategy.

As part of the Department's five year Empty Homes Strategy and Action Plan issued in September 2013 officials will continue to work with the Housing Executive on a number of initiatives and incentives to assist in bringing some of the empty homes back into use, subject to business cases being approved.

I am determined to maximise all opportunities to bring empty homes back into use.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQO 6903/11-15, to outline how much his Department has spent on town regeneration projects in South Antrim in the last two years.

(AQO 7084/11-15)

Mr Storey: The total amount spent by the Department on town regeneration schemes in the South Antrim constituency in the last two financial years in 2012/13 and 2013/14 is £1,755,548.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many social homes are required across Northern Ireland in the next financial year.

(AQO 7085/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has the statutory responsibility for assessing housing need. Their evidence comes from two main sources: the Common Waiting List for social housing and the Net Stock Model.

The Net Stock Model is a robust, academically based modelling tool. It takes into account a range of key drivers of the housing market, including population growth, the quality of the stock and the level of homelessness.

The Net Stock Model currently estimates a need for 1,200 new social homes per annum in each of the next five years. The Housing Executive has also built in an extra provision of 800 per annum to take account of the cumulative backlog that has developed over the past decade. It concludes that going forward we need to be building 2,000 new social housing units per annum.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Copeland asked the Assembly Commission for a breakdown of how its budget has been spent in each of the last seven years.

(AQW 38198/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): "To ask the Assembly Commission for a breakdown of how its budget has been spent in each of the last seven years."

The Assembly Commission's total budget covers a range of categories of expenditure including financial support for Members.

The Assembly Commission's expenditure is recorded annually in the Annual Report and Resource Accounts. These Accounts are audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General. Copies of the Accounts for each of the past seven years can be found on the Northern Ireland Assembly website at <http://www.niassembly.gov.uk/ABOUT-THE-ASSEMBLY/Corporate-Information/Publications/Resource-Accounts/>.

The presentation of expenditure in the Annual Accounts follows a prescribed format. In addition, internal management accounting information is maintained which shows expenditure by category. Table 1, over, shows the detail of how expenditure has been incurred within each of the budget categories for the past seven years. A forecast of the expenditure for 2014/15 has also been included.

* The Secretariat Salaries figure for 2010/11 included payments to staff under a comprehensive grading and pay benchmarking exercise that had been in train since before the restoration of the Assembly in 2007 and payments as part of the Commission's settlement of the NICS Equal Pay claims.

Mr Copeland asked the Assembly Commission what correspondence it had with the Minister of Finance and Personnel and his Department before the approval of the Draft 2015/16 Northern Ireland Budget.

(AQW 38199/11-15)

Mrs Cochrane (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission considered the 2015/16 budget at its meeting in June 2014. The Clerk / Chief Executive subsequently wrote to the Permanent Secretary of the Department of Finance and Personnel in July 2014 to update him on the progress made by the Commission in developing the 2015/16 budget. Further engagement took place between officials during the Summer Recess relating to this and the proposed 2014/15 budgetary reductions. The former Speaker, William Hay MLA wrote to the Minister for Finance and Personnel on the latter issue and received a reply to this correspondence. No further correspondence was issued or received regarding the 2015/16 Draft Budget.

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission, given that the Assembly is a political institution, does it have any plans to review the restrictions on political expression at events in Parliament Buildings organised by Members and political parties.
(AQO 7095/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission met last week to discuss this matter. There have been many disparate policies in place covering events since the Commission agreed the interim criteria in 2008. The Commission have subsequently approved, although not unanimously, the new policy.

The agreed policy takes account of developments and trends since 2008 and reflects the current business needs of Members and the Assembly Commission. In terms of restrictions on political expression at events held at Parliament Buildings, the decision taken by the Commission at its meeting on 5 March 2008 remains. This includes the requirement for events to be sponsored by at least 3 Members to demonstrate cross designation support. The Commission have further agreed that the politically sensitive elements of the policy would need to be considered and reviewed in more detail as part of their wider discussion on Good Relations.

Mr Kinahan asked the Assembly Commission for its assessment of the situation on sittings days, that staff and visitors to Parliament Buildings must resort to parking on Prince of Wales Avenue.
(AQO 7097/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission recognises the problems experienced by Parliament Buildings users with regard to car parking space, particularly on sitting days, and acknowledges that some users of Parliament Buildings are required to park on Prince of Wales Avenue on those busier days. Facilities Management have however been able to ease the pressure within the Lower East car park by some physical realignment and staffing of this car park, and by the provision of an additional overspill car park that came into service in 2011.

Those measures provided the Assembly with an additional 40 parking spaces, and this has been well received by many car park users. The conclusion of the Parliament Buildings Roof Project will also provide a small number of additional car parking spaces at the rear of the building.

Assembly senior management have already looked into the possibility of further developing the provision of car park spaces for users of Parliament Buildings, and have already been involved in discussions with DFP in that regard.

At present however, there is little likelihood of obtaining further spaces for car parking, although naturally Facilities Management will continue to meet with DFP as appropriate.

Mr McNarry asked the Assembly Commission why it has taken no action to extend its control over a greater area of the Stormont estate.
(AQO 7099/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Stormont Estate is owned and managed by the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) and the Assembly Commission has responsibility for Parliament Buildings and its immediate environs. The land which currently falls under our control is delineated by the security fences to the north, east and west sides and by the metal railings surrounding the front lawns.

Officials representing the Commission liaise regularly with colleagues in DFP on a range of matters including ground maintenance, security, car parking and traffic management. The Assembly Commission has no current plans to make representations to extend its control over a greater area of the estate.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the parity of the monitoring of spending as between small and large beneficiaries of Victims and Survivors Service funding.

(AQW 36353/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Victims and Survivors Service (VSS) currently vouch and verify 100% of expenditure by all groups funded under the Victims Support Programme.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the North West Gateway Initiative has met its initial aims and objectives to socially and economically improve the North West area, since 2006.

(AQW 38281/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The North-West Gateway Initiative (NWGI) was established to encourage a more integrated and joined up approach to economic growth in the north-west for the mutual benefit of the entire region. The extent to which this objective has been advanced has formed part of a review of the North-West Gateway Initiative (NWGI) on which the views of stakeholders in the north-west were sought.

Responses received were positive and stakeholders have in particular welcomed the focus on the north-west by both the Northern Ireland Executive and the Republic of Ireland Government which the initiative has facilitated. The findings of the stakeholder consultation are now being considered and discussed with relevant departments as the next phase of the review.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many projects have been developed in Limavady through the North West Gateway Initiative since its inception.

(AQW 38282/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The North-West Gateway Initiative has no dedicated funding for specific projects but aims to derive synergy through effective co-ordination of existing public expenditure by a range of departments and other bodies. A number of projects have been taken forward by individual departments, which have contributed to the aims of the initiative and which will benefit the entire north-west region.

These include significant EU funding provided to the region for projects such as Project Kelvin, the North-West Science Park, the Peace Bridge and other Environmental and Health projects. Other major projects include the establishment of a new radiotherapy centre at Altnagelvin and the continuing commitment to deliver on major infrastructural improvement through the upgrade to the A5 road.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the total cost of sending a delegation to the global summit to end sexual violence in conflict in London in June 2014.

(AQW 38330/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The total cost to OFMDFM to send a delegation to the Global Summit to End Sexual Violence in Conflict, which was held in London in June 2014, was £6,856.46.

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the electronic Property Information Mapping Service (ePIMS) has been rolled out in its full form to all Departments and public bodies; and for an update on the work of ePIMS.

(AQW 38451/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Electronic Property Information Mapping Service (ePIMS) database has been rolled out in its full form to departments and their Arm's Length Bodies (ALBs) over the period since September 2011.

Currently ePIMS captures cost and utilisation information for the fully administrative office estate. This data is updated annually by departments.

This information has been used to publish the State of the Estate report, which highlights how Government uses its office estate and the annual running cost of the estate.

This information is being used to plan for the more efficient use of the office estate through maximising the use of our owned estate and vacating leases as they expire, where it is value for money to do so.

The ePIMS database also contains high-level records of other land and property assets, not captured in any other departmental/ALB asset database. This overall picture of the government estate will, for the first time, facilitate the development and delivery of asset management opportunities based on a full understanding of current assets.

Ms Fearon asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the British government's refusal to include Kincora House in the child sexual abuse panel inquiry.

(AQO 6975/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: On 30 September this Assembly unanimously agreed that allegations of cover up by intelligence services and MI5 relating to abuse in Kincora boys' home should be investigated by the Westminster independent inquiry panel into institutional failures in respect of child sexual abuse. So naturally we are disappointed that the Home Secretary has decided not to include it.

However, we are pleased that the Home Secretary and the Secretary of State are committed to a full investigation into any and all aspects pertaining to abuse at Kincora Boys' Home by the Inquiry into Historical Institutional Abuse here.

It is too soon to be sure that the Inquiry will find itself able to deal satisfactorily with allegations of cover up by the Ministry of Defence or the Security Services, but we are heartened to note that consideration can be given at any time to bring it into the remit of the Westminster inquiry panel.

It is, of course, of paramount importance that we consult with Sir Anthony Hart, chairperson of the Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry, on the practicalities of carrying out an investigation into the full range of issues surrounding victims and survivors of Kincora Boys' Home.

Ms McGahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Delivering Social Change Nurture Unit Signature Programme.

(AQO 6981/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Nurture Units Programme is one of the six initial Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes, announced by us in October 2012.

All of the proposed twenty additional Nurture Units are now fully operational and have completed their first academic year.

Latest figures indicate that a total of 135 children have attended the Units, and eleven of which have already been reintegrated back to mainstream classroom. In addition, approximately just over 90% of the parents whose children are within the Units have begun to or have continued to be engaged and / or participate with the schools.

These developments are a very positive reflection of the impact and quality of support the Units are already delivering.

Mr B McCrea asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what percentage of their Department's DEL is spent on salaries; and how they intend to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38688/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The core Department, excluding Arm's Length Bodies, spends 25% of its DEL resource budget on salaries. The Department is working to reduce this spend through careful management of vacancies arising from normal staff turnover, a review of organisational structures within the Department and also through central initiatives being examined by the Executive in light of budget constraints resulting from cuts to the Block grant from Westminster.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps her Department take in instances where a farmer held 93 cattle on their herd book but at a time of compulsory testing, presented only 15 cattle.

(AQW 38496/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): In the north of Ireland, official cattle identification and movement details are recorded and maintained on the Department's Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS). It is in the interests of farmers and the entire industry that the details on APHIS are accurate, as that is the basis for our renowned animal traceability that underpins both disease control and international trade.

If, during a Department inspection of a farmer's cattle or herd book record, a discrepancy is discovered with the official APHIS record, Department staff will investigate the circumstances. If there is a legitimate explanation and the discrepancy can be satisfactorily reconciled (eg a movement notification being processed by the Department) then no further action will follow.

If however the discrepancy cannot be satisfactorily explained or reconciled, there may be a number of consequences depending on the type and scale of discrepancies. These consequences may include the application of statuses and/or the imposition of restrictions on the individual animal or herd; the application of Single Farm Payment penalties on the farm business; and, in serious cases, the referral of the case to Veterinary Service Enforcement Branch to conduct a criminal investigation.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures her Department is taking to tackle the current market difficulties being experienced on local farms, to ensure that cashflow does not become an issue for dairy farmers during the high cost winter months.

(AQW 38519/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since the 2003 EU CAP Reform, it has been clear that the dairy industry would face greater volatility in milk prices as it traded in global markets and there is no way to avoid this happening. Farmers therefore need to embrace volatility as a feature of the dairy industry and plan accordingly.

There will be times when the market delivers record prices followed by times when prices are low. In this scenario the challenge for farmers is to manage their business and cash flow over a longer period than the monthly milk cheque.

To assist farmers, my Department's dairy advisers disseminate relevant information on managing cash flow and other issues to dairy farmers. Briefing on steps to assist with cash flow management has also been provided to the Ulster Farmers' Union and they have used this in recent weeks. At farm level, producers should know their production costs and plan their winter feeding programme so as to maximise feed efficiency. There is also a need to focus on other costs, including whether or not it makes business sense to proceed with a planned approach, to assess borrowing requirements and prepare a realistic cash flow plan for the winter period.

My Department is fully supportive of the dairy industry and will continue to do what it can to assist producers at a difficult time. If necessary we are prepared to act as an advocate with the grain trade, banks and other creditors. But with good forward planning by producers I would hope that any issues can be managed.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, given the present difficulties being experienced by dairy farmers over market milk price volatility, how her Department is encouraging stakeholders to consider long term approaches such as hedging or insurance cover.

(AQW 38520/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Following the 2003 EU CAP reform, milk price volatility was identified as an issue that our dairy industry would have to address. In the interim my Department's dairy advisers have encouraged farmers to consider various matters that would help to mitigate risk. These include: an efficient production system linked to farm resources; business and financial management through benchmarking; prudent expenditure; a good cash flow plan covering all of the year; and hedging contracts for feed, fertiliser and milk supply.

I appreciate that hedging contracts and insurance cover are used by the dairy industry in other countries but so far there does not seem to have been an appetite by our industry to go down this road. However, I can advise that this matter is still on the table for consideration. I understand that hedging contracts were among the issues identified by the Agri-Food Strategy Board Dairy Sub-Group for consideration in the medium term. The members of this Group agreed that the industry needs to build resilience to cope with the peaks and troughs of the dairy market and flagged in Going for Growth the need for better integration along the supply chain and effective sharing and mitigation of risk. Hedging contracts would not, however, lead to an overall increase in the price received by farmers.

As this is a commercial matter you will appreciate that my Department cannot engage on discussions between individual milk purchasers and producers on taking this matter forward. This is something that only the various industry interests can do. Nevertheless, I do believe that it is something that individual milk producers may wish to explore further with their milk purchaser.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is taking to ensure that agricultural premises and businesses who employ casual workers are fully appraised of the dangers and illegalities of engaging unlicensed gangmasters; and to ensure that employers are aware of how to check that a gangmaster is legitimate.

Mrs O'Neill: My Department currently supports enforcement of the Gangmasters (Licensing) Act 2004 by providing funding for two full-time Gangmasters Licensing Authority (GLA) officers based here in the north of Ireland. Those officers undertake a range of enforcement and awareness raising measures, including attendance at agricultural meetings and site visits to labour users. For example, this year the GLA carried out visits to those horticulture farmers who had previously used workers under the Seasonal Agriculture Workers Scheme (SAWS) in order to establish how they were obtaining their work force following the abolition of the SAWS system in January 2014.

At these agricultural meetings and farm visits, labour users are advised of their responsibilities under the Act and provided with a leaflet detailing the work of the GLA, how to check if a labour provider possesses a GLA licence and how to contact the GLA. In addition, information and advice for labour users is also available on both my Department's and the GLA's websites.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) her Department; and (ii) each of her Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38701/11-15)

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) what percentage of Departmental Expenditure Limits is spent on salaries; and (ii) how she intends to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38736/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Staff costs are around 55% of net Departmental Expenditure Limits for the Core Department, rising to 70% when AFBI is factored into the calculation.

My Department's Draft Budget 2015-16 proposals include a staff reductions option of £5.6m which forecasts the reduction of around 300 posts next year from the Core Department. The reduction in staff numbers will be managed through the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme. Further details are set out in my Department's Draft Budget 2015-16 consultation document which is on the DARD website.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much her Department has spent on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss, in the last five years.

(AQW 38763/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The total spend incurred by the Department in relation to interpreting services for people who are deaf or have hearing loss, in the last five financial years can be summarised as follows:

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15*	Total
Spend on Customers	-	£4,332	£8,026	£2,129	-	£14,487

Total	£581	£5,705	£9,280	£2,562	£606	£18,734

* Data for 2014/15 is for the year to date up to 18th November 2014.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the effect that the number of landowners, who are now re-designating themselves as active farmers, will have on agricultural production.

(AQW 38851/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Direct Payments Delegated Regulation (EU) No 639/2014 makes clear that from 2015, the allocation of entitlements under the Basic Payment Scheme, and in turn direct payments, should go only to those who can demonstrate that they satisfy the requirement of enjoying the decision making power, benefits and financial risks in relation to the agricultural activity being undertaken on the relevant land.

A letter was issued in March 2014 to all SFP entitlement holders highlighting this requirement and its implications for 2015. Subsequently, some 11,800 applications were made to the Department to transfer SFP entitlements and approximately 6,700 fewer Single Application Forms were received by the Department in 2014 compared with 2013.

More recently, my Department conducted a review of all farm businesses claiming SFP in 2014, identifying approximately 7,000 whose records indicate that they may not meet the above requirement in 2015 and, therefore, would not be allocated entitlements unless they take action. We wrote to these businesses and so far, only 1,900 have responded indicating that they will be in a position to meet the requirements of the new regime and intend to apply in 2015.

Therefore, based on this evidence, it appears that most non-farming landowners have already taken the decision to exit the support regime. However, the position will not be clear until applications are received to the Basic Payment Scheme in May 2015.

Consequently, at this stage, I do not expect to see a significant impact on gross agricultural production linked specifically to this issue.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what recent discussions she has had with the Minister of the Environment on improving safety on rural roads.

(AQW 38863/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Minister of the Environment has primary responsibility for road safety policy and I have not held any recent discussions with him regarding improving safety on rural roads. That said, I am however, aware of the increased number of deaths on our roads this year, many of which have occurred in rural areas.

As Minister with responsibility for rural affairs, I realise the importance of partnership working between government departments and how rural communities can benefit from this.

To that end the Rural White Paper Action Plan contains a wide range of actions aimed at dealing with rural issues across all government departments. The Department of the Environment lead on a number of actions, one of which relates directly to road safety. This action aims to understand the cause of, and reduce the number of, collisions on rural roads.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what training will be provided to landowners who declare themselves as active farmers, to ensure they are fully conversant with all European regulations and to ensure that the Department does not leave itself liable to fines from Europe due to farmers not complying with legislation.

(AQW 38865/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: All those who intend to apply for the Basic Payment Scheme, the Greening Payment and, if appropriate, the Young Farmers' Scheme must satisfy themselves that they can meet the requirements of the Schemes in full. To assist in this, all applicants will have access to a range of Departmental guidance, web material and literature which will set out specific scheme rules and standards.

My Department's Farm Advisory System will also provide information and advice to farmers on cross compliance, greening, certain measures provided under the Rural Development Programme, requirements arising from the Water Framework Directive and use of plant protection products.

In keeping with its obligations, the Department will have in place a range of control mechanisms aimed at ensuring that EU funding is allocated in compliance with EU Regulations.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether it is acceptable during an inspection for cattle to have a double tag in one ear and a half tag in the other ear; and if not, why this is the case, given that this authenticates identity.

(AQW 38868/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Under Regulation (EC) No. 1760/2000 all cattle must be identified by two approved ear tags within 20 days of birth, or before the animal leaves the holding, whichever is the earlier. Each tag must bear the same unique identification number and be applied to each ear. All lost or illegible ear tags must be replaced.

If an animal is noted at a cattle identity inspection as having a complete tag in one ear and half a tag in the other, the inspector would check both ears for signs of tag tampering. The inspector would also check that the animal matches its description as recorded on DARD's Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS).

If no discrepancies are noted then no breach would be applied, however, the inspector would point out to the keeper that the animal is incorrectly identified and advise that a matching replacement ear tag must be obtained and applied within 28 days, or before the animal leaves the holding, whichever is the earlier.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of how representative the three chosen venues are for the Newry and Down Public Meetings of the new Local Action Groups; and whether she has any plans to for additional venues for these meetings.

(AQW 38904/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The process for setting up new Local Action Groups (LAG) is through LEADER ie the bottom up approach. The LEADER Cluster Network Group agreed at the request of my officials to set up facilitation groups in each 10 new LAG areas, drawing volunteers from current LAG's to help inform the LAG formation process for social partners. The groups are facilitated by Rural Network for NI and the local Rural Support Networks in each of the areas. Members of the groups were nominated from the current LAG's and include current LAG Board members and Council representatives.

The purpose of the groups is to support the development of a local engagement and communication plan, helping to identify suitable venues for public meetings, agreeing dates to ensure no obvious clashes with other events and supporting the dissemination of promotional materials locally.

The Newry, Mourne and Down facilitation groups members include SOAR LAG Board members, DRAP LAG Board members and a Newry & Mourne Council Officer.

In the case of Newry, Mourne and Down, because of the large geographical area to cover, it was initially agreed to have three public meetings. The group members discussed the geography of the area and opted to have the following public meetings:-

- 25th November – St Patrick's Centre, Downpatrick
- 27th November – Downshire Arms, Hilltown
- 1st December – Crossmaglen Community Centre, Crossmaglen

The Downpatrick and Crossmaglen venues are both Council run facilities and the Hilltown venue is a hotel.

A number of representations were made to my officials that there needed to be a further event in the Killeel area and therefore a fourth public meeting has been arranged for:-

- 3rd December – Kilmore Arms Hotel, Killeel

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when Carnlough River was last dredged or cleaned.
(AQW 38989/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Rivers Agency completed channel works and removed bushes and trees in August 2013. Further maintenance was completed in March 2014. The trash grille downstream of Cashel Close is inspected monthly and was cleared on a number of occasions between 11 and 15 November 2014, in response to a series of weather warnings.

Mr Ó Muilleoir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline any contingency planning to prevent the spread of African Swine Flu.
(AQO 7124/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is taking a number of measures to prevent the spread of African Swine Fever. The first is surveillance including monitoring the global situation particularly in Eastern Europe; conducting portal and airport controls for incoming pigs and pork products; and sampling any suspect pigs. Secondly the department has a generic contingency plan for major emergencies (the Major Emergency Response Plan – MERP) and a specific contingency plan for swine fever. Thirdly my officials have tested and exercised the African Swine Fever plan in a major British and north of Ireland exercise in 2013 (Exercise Walnut) and more recently in a communications exercise held with Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine (DAFM) counterparts in Newry on 6 November 2014. Finally my officials have been liaising with the pig industry, including a stakeholders meeting that my Chief Veterinary Officer hosted in September and through the distribution of biosecurity advice to pig farmers.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what are the four areas subjected to remote sensing this year; and what support are those areas receiving from her Department.

Mrs O'Neill: The four zones that were selected for inspection by Control with Remote Sensing (CwRS) in 2014 were in North West Tyrone, in South Antrim / North Down, in East Armagh / West Down and in South East Fermanagh.

The process has been supportive of farmers in those areas in a number of ways. All inspected cases received a letter in early November informing them that they had been subject to an inspection. It is also anticipated that all inspected cases will be paid much more quickly than has been achieved in the past, as a direct result of the use of remote sensing. It is likely that this will be a record year in terms of the proportion of claimants paid in December and in terms of the pace of paying inspected cases.

I expect that the final inspection cases will be paid in March which is approximately one month earlier than last year's record outcome. All inspections are already completed in the field, other than a relatively small number of checks that arise at the final stage of processing for some claims and which will be processed in the early weeks of the New Year.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department supports horse racing in Northern Ireland.
(AQO 7122/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department provides funding to Downpatrick and Down Royal racecourses through the administration of the Horse Racing Fund which is maintained through charges on bookmakers. The funding is used to provide or supplement prize money, to improve technical services or services for the operation of racing, and for the purpose of ensuring the safety of spectators or the proper conduct of racing.

The Horse Racing (Charges on Bookmakers) Order 2010 increased the Horse Racing Fund charge for off-course bookmakers from £1,123 to £2,000 per annum over a five year period for specific investment. This period ends on 31 December 2014. The on-course charge has remained at £99. From 2010 to 2014 this has resulted in just over £1.4 million additional funding to the racecourses.

The off-course bookmakers charge will revert to £1,123 on 1 January 2015. My officials have met with representatives of the bookmakers and the racecourses separately on two occasions over the last two months to discuss the level of future funding. My Department will shortly commence a review of the Horse Racing Fund which will consider the level of future charges on bookmakers. Engagement with the racecourses and bookmakers will continue during the review.

My Department also supports Horse Racing in the north through CAFRE at its Enniskillen Campus. The equine breeding, equitation, farriery and racing units at Enniskillen Campus provide excellent resources to support delivery of its learning provision. The Campus Horse Racing and Equestrian Clubs are also used to support equine programme delivery. Students regularly compete in point-to-point races and other equine competitions including the Balmoral Show.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proposals she has to deal with the ongoing implementation of the Nitrates Directive (91/676/EEC) in relation to farming practices in Northern Ireland.
(AQO 7123/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The EU Nitrates Directive is implemented across the north of Ireland by an Action Programme of measures which was first introduced in 2007. The purpose of the Action Programme is to prevent water pollution and ensure that manures and chemical fertilisers are used efficiently.

The Nitrates Directive requires action programmes to be reviewed and, as necessary, revised every four years. A review of the current programme and public consultation on the proposed programme for 2015-2018 has been carried out by my Department and the Department of the Environment.

I am pleased to confirm that we have recently secured EU Commission agreement for our proposed Action Programme for the next 4 year period.

The Action Programme for 2015 to 2018 should not require any significant changes to current farming practices. The majority of the measures in the current programme are being carried forward. Key measures, such as the dates of the closed period for spreading slurry, remain unchanged.

There are some changes which are based on scientific evidence, technical and policy developments or have been requested by the European Commission.

My Department will continue to provide a comprehensive range of guidance, training and advisory support for farmers in relation to the Action Programme. The existing guidance documents will be updated in consultation with industry representatives. Press articles and the Farm Advisory Service "Helping You Comply" Bulletin will also continue to be used to ensure that farmers are aware of the requirements and have the necessary information.

Scientific evidence shows that the Action Programme is delivering better water quality and significant improvements in farming practice. More efficient use of manures and trends in chemical fertiliser use are very encouraging. I commend farmers for the effort they have made and encourage them to keep up the good work to ensure continued progress.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what mechanisms are in place for Rivers Agency to engage with local communities and angling clubs to ensure that works completed on rivers are coordinated with the sport of angling. (AQO 7125/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Rivers Agency provides notice of works it intends to carry out through advertisements in the local press, usually in January or early February of each year. Prior to the start of the fishing season, the Agency provides details of the watercourses it intends to consider for maintenance in the coming year. This is done through a Service Level Agreement, between the Agency and the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure's Inland Fisheries, who act as liaison between Rivers Agency, statutory fisheries bodies, fishery owners, angling clubs and other bodies or individuals with an interest in fishing. Where it is considered necessary, Inland Fisheries advise those interested, in writing, of the nature, extent and timing of the proposed works, including proposals to mitigate any impact on fish or fish habitat and invite comment on those proposals.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the recent fisheries stakeholders event. (AQO 7126/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A stakeholder event was held in Belfast on 29 October at which fisheries stakeholders from Britain and the north were able to discuss priorities for the forthcoming December Fisheries Council with the four Fisheries Administrations. This was the first opportunity to discuss the Commission's proposals for Total Allowable Catches since their publication. Unfortunately the scientific advice, and therefore proposals for the Area VII prawn stock which is very important to us, were not available. However the scientific advice has since been published and whilst better than last year we still expect the Commission to propose a quota cut of around 14-15%. I will press for a rollover using the established argument that we and the south are at a disadvantage from a TAC that matches the scientific recommendations, because France and Spain do not fish their full allocations.

For Irish Sea herring a modest reduction of 8%, consistent with maintaining the stock at Maximum Sustainable Yield (MSY) levels has been proposed and will be accepted. A further cut of 20% in Irish Sea cod quota has been proposed and the case was made that more cuts will result in discards, which is contrary to the recent commitment to implement a landing obligation. A cut of 20% in Irish Sea Haddock has been proposed due to data limitations that prevent a full analytical assessment. It was suggested that qualitative stock trends are positive and a case can be made for a rollover. The Administrations advised that all proposals for cuts in "data limited" stocks, such as Irish Sea haddock and plaice, will be resisted where a case can be made that qualitative trends in the stock are positive.

Finally stakeholders were advised that no proposals about fishing effort (Days at Sea) had yet been made but Administrations would support a further rollover.

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the public meetings being held on the new Local Action Group animation process. (AQO 7127/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As you know the animation process to form new Local Action Groups or LAG's started at the beginning of November. So far 12 events have been held and these have been attended by 523 people and we already have 210 people completing an expression of interest form to be a LAG member. A further 16 meetings are already scheduled with more to come. The timescales for forming the LAG's are tight, but I believe it is essential that we have the LAG's in place and ready to go as soon as the necessary EU processes have been completed regarding approving the Operation Plan that my Department has submitted. I want to see LAG's which are much more representative with more women and young people on them. I know some of the members here have already attended some of the events and I would encourage all rural MLA's to get involved in their LAG.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proposals her Department has agreed with the Department of Trade, Enterprise and Investment on the implementation of the Going for Growth strategy for the Agri-food sector. (AQO 7128/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Going for Growth is the report of the Industry led Agri-Food Strategy Board (AFSB), and contains 118 recommendations addressed to both the Industry and Government bodies. The Executive Response to Going for Growth was published on 16 October 2014. It includes a detailed plan, setting out actions to address over 80 recommendations that Government has agreed to lead on. Development of the Executive Response was coordinated by officials from both Departments. It was signed off jointly by me and the Minister for Enterprise, Trade and Investment and agreed by the Executive on 26 June 2014.

As we move into the implementation phase, senior officials from DARD, DETI and InvestNI will continue to be part of the AFSB and will work with the Chair and industry members to advise on delivery of agreed actions. Senior officials from both Departments also jointly chair an Inter-Departmental Steering Group, which includes representatives from all Departments/agencies with a role to play in the implementation of the Executive Response. This Group will be monitoring progress made against the action plan and will provide Ministers and the AFSB with regular updates.

In addition, my officials, and colleagues from DETI/InvestNI will continue to provide policy and advisory support to the AFSB and its sub-groups and, where, appropriate officials from DARD and DETI will work jointly to implement agreed actions.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she is ensuring that Northern Ireland does not lose out to the Republic of Ireland on the opportunities presented by the Chinese market. (AQO 7129/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: China offers lucrative export opportunities for Agri-Food products from across Europe due to its vast size. The north already has access to China for dairy products, and I am pleased to note that it is a growing market.

I was disappointed that the planned inspection to approve our pork plants to export to China in October was cancelled at short notice. In order to secure a new date I have availed of the contacts I made during my visits to China asking them to use their influence with the Chinese authorities to agree a new date. One of my senior official veterinarians accompanied the lead Defra veterinarian to China last week where they met a range of Chinese officials to discuss a new date for this inspection. We await the outcome of these meetings. Mindful that the momentum on this issue must be maintained I have also written to the Defra Secretary of State, Elizabeth Truss MP, and asked that she also prioritises agreeing a new inspection date during her visit at the beginning of December. I remain hopeful that these efforts will prove fruitful.

In respect of beef the recent signing of the TSE Memorandum of Understanding between the north and Britain and China as well as the establishment of a TSE working group are important steps. This is similar to the process adopted by the south and will pave the way to begin market negotiations. We must be mindful though that unlike the south we were subject to the beef ban which means our access to this important trade opportunity will take us longer. Nevertheless I remain committed to doing all I can to attain access for our beef and pork exports.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail (i) the City of Culture Legacy capital projects that will be funded by the £2.8m allocation in the October Monitoring Round; and (ii) the funding allocated to each. (AQW 38459/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Building on DCAL's significant investment in the North West to date, I bid to the Executive in this financial year for additional funding to maximise ongoing development of a social and economic legacy from City of Culture 2013.

£2.8 million in capital funding was allocated to my Department in the October Monitoring Round to support a strategic development programme in the North West.

The funding, which includes allocations for the North Coast Sports Village, boxing projects and a community cultural development programme, seeks to achieve the following:

- Provide support for identified sporting and cultural facilities which align with my Department's key objectives;
- Provide equipment for community and festival organisations to contribute to longer term sustainability;
- Provide creative, cultural and sporting equipment for communities to increase skills and encourage social enterprise;

As business cases for the programme are still being finalised, I will be making further announcements in due course.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) total amount of funding allocated to City of Culture Legacy; (ii) projects funded by City of Culture Legacy; and (iii) funding allocated to each project.

(AQW 38461/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I secured over £2m for the January to March 2014 period to support continuation of key projects from the City of Culture's cultural programme and to prevent the loss of key benefits, partnerships and momentum after December 2013. This included strategic investment for sports facility development.

Supported projects included:

- Music projects, for example key elements of the Music Promise project and the return of Other Voices to Derry in February 2014;
- Digital projects, for example continuation of the Portrait of a City project and digital skills provision;
- Literacy skills projects, for example the Disobey Gravity programme;
- Community projects delivered under Community Cultural Strategies developed for neighbourhood renewal areas;
- A pilot creative voucher scheme, which included a focus on the North West, designed to stimulate new collaborations between creative enterprises and businesses from a diverse range of other sectors;
- Expansion of the Nerve Centre's Fab Lab with a wider North West emphasis;
- Walled City Tattoo; and
- Sports facility development in Coleraine.

In addition I made funding available for the purchase of Eamonn O'Doherty's Armoured Pram, Lumiere's Stitch in Time piece and a portable Marquee which will be used as a community venue.

I have secured an additional £3.8m to support a Cultural and Sporting Programme in the North West in the current financial year.

The strategic interventions supported by this programme have been selected because they present opportunities to build on the success of City of Culture 2013 and deliver long term sustainable impacts.

DCAL's support will be allocated and spent by March 2015, however, the Programme is designed to create a lasting impact for communities in need.

The Programme is focussed on delivering:

- Capacity building for the most deprived communities across the North West;
- Building sustainable infrastructure with contributions to key cultural and sporting refurbishment projects;
- Developing festival activity with events delivery equipment like staging, lighting and barriers to reduce the costs of delivering community based festivals for many years to come;
- Expanding the services of existing community facilities with creative and digital equipment such as iPads, 3D printers and equipment to assist the growth of social enterprises within communities.

As business cases for the programme are still being finalised, I will be making further announcements in due course.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many individuals or companies tendered for the Audit of Traditional Music; and what criteria were used by the Arts Council of Northern Ireland in selecting a person or company to undertake this work.

(AQW 38464/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Arts Council received 4 tenders for the audit of the Traditional Music Sector. All bidders had their applications assessed against the criteria listed below.

Qualitative Criteria (Quality)	Weight
Experience	10%
Method Statement	60%

Quantitative Criteria (Price)	Weight
Pricing	30%

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list the (i) books; (ii) CDs; and (iii) DVDs produced by National Museums of Northern Ireland during the last ten years.

(AQW 38465/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The list of books and DVDs produced by National Museums during the last ten years is set out at Annex A. National Museums has not produced any CDs during this period.

(AQW 38466/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Foras na Gaeilge has provided funding since to Nós 2012 and the amounts are detailed in the table below:

2012	£24,000
2013	£12,000
2014	£38,447

Year	Amount
2015	£68,800
2016	£68,800

The Arts Council has never received an application for, or made an award of, funding to Nós magazine.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding the television production company Tobar has received from the Irish Language Broadcast Fund.

(AQW 38467/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Irish Language Broadcast Fund has awarded a total of £1,612,918.00 to Tobar Productions and £ 278,458.00 to Tobar Co-Productions since 2005, broken down as follows;

■	Total:	£1,891,376.00

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) City of Culture Legacy projects that will be funded by the £1m allocation in the October Monitoring Round in (a) Derry; (b) Dungiven; (c) Coleraine; (d) Limavady; and (e) Strabane; and (ii) funding allocated to each project.

(AQW 38481/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have secured an additional £3.8m to support a Cultural and Sporting Programme in the North West in this financial year. This includes allocations of £1m for resource and £2.8m for capital.

The resource programme includes a suite of projects which take forward key strands of the City of Culture 2013 Cultural Programme and seeks to maintain momentum in community cultural activity, capacity building and key events in Derry. It also seeks to extend the momentum, learning and networks established as part of 2013 to the wider North West, with support for key cultural events in Coleraine, Limavady, Strabane and Draperstown.

The strategic interventions supported by this programme have been selected because they present opportunities to build on the success of City of Culture 2013 and deliver long term sustainable impacts.

DCAL's support will be allocated and spent by March 2015, however, the Programme is designed to create a lasting impact for communities in need.

As business cases for the programme are still being finalised, I will be making further announcements in due course.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what annual budget her Department, and its arm's-length bodies, set aside for translation and interpreter services for foreign nationals.

(AQW 38507/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: No annual budget is set aside specifically for translation and interpreter services for foreign nationals though, in recent years, angling guides have been published in Polish, German and Irish (at a total cost of £4,072) and Libraries NI has procured translation services costing £206.

The Department's arm's length bodies are able to procure these kinds of services as and when required.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) whether the portraits of Ulster-American presidents by Frank McKelvey are currently on view in the Ulster Museum, or elsewhere within National Museums Northern Ireland; (ii) if not, when they were last on view and for what period of time; (iii) for what period of time they have been on view in the past ten years; and (iv) when, and on what basis, they were initially acquired by the Ulster Museum.

(AQW 38524/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: National Museums has informed me that the 13 portraits that it holds of Ulster-American presidents by Frank McKelvey are not currently on display at the Ulster Museum or at any other of its sites. However, copies of 10 of the portraits are on display in 'back of house areas' at the Ulster American Folk Park in Omagh.

The portraits, which were donated by Thomas McGowan to the Belfast Museum & Art Gallery in 1931 (later the Ulster Museum), have not been on display in the last 20 years. National Museums has received no requests for them to be lent to other institutions during this period.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37821/11-15, (i) what are the priorities of the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund; (ii) who set the priorities of the fund; and (iii) what work was undertaken in determining the priorities.

(AQW 38525/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The current priorities of the Ulster-Scots Broadcast fund (USBF) are attached at Annex A. The priorities are set and reviewed by the USBF Committee.

This information is used to identify genres that are under-served by USBF funding and any specific points that should be reinforced with the production companies.

Annex A

Priorities (extracted from the USBF Second Call 2014/15 document)

1. The USBF Investment Committee welcomes applications to the second call of 2014/15 (twelfth round of funding overall). Once again applications for television programmes will require a letter of support from a broadcaster.
2. In addition to the general Priorities detailed below, the Committee would make the following specific points;
  - The quality of research is a key factor in the Committee's decisions. The most successful programming supported by the USBF has been underpinned by high quality research;
  - The Committee re-emphasises the importance of engaging with appropriate consultants in a substantive and meaningful way;
  - Priority will be given to projects that have ambition, scale and editorial depth; for example, An Independent People. As well as making a greater impact, it is much clearer that these projects are additional, or over and above, programming that the broadcaster might otherwise have produced and financed itself;
  - In heritage, culture and history programming, advisers and on screen experts should not be limited to political historians but should also include social and community historians;
  - Language remains underserved in the proposals presented to the Committee;
  - There is flexibility in relation to funding ratios where projects have a relevance to the USBF but the subject matter requires a broader focus that would preclude the Committee from funding at the maximum 75%.

General comments on the priorities

The following comments should be noted:

- All programmes should appeal to a North of Ireland audience.
- Programmes that promote awareness/increased understanding of Ulster-Scots heritage, culture and/or language are the priority of the fund.
- The USBF does not require that all of its programming is presented in the Ulster-Scots language.
- The USBF will seek to facilitate new and innovative approaches to the development of educational resources about Ulster-Scots language informed by best/developing practice and academic research.
- The USBF requires programming which describes the context and development of Ulster-Scots, its contemporary expressions, and which reflects the linkages between Ulster and Scotland. It will place less emphasis, at least in the initial calls, on programming about the Ulster-Scots Diaspora.
- Within the overall mix, content designed to reach children of primary school age will be very welcome.

The Priorities

This is a list of genres of programming and themes that the USBF is most interested in funding in this round. This information is provided as guidance to the applicant only. The USBF Investment Committee is not bound by this guidance if the general Assessment Criteria are strongly met by proposals that fall outside this guidance.

Documentary-style Programmes and Series

Applications are welcomed for documentary programmes and series which, for example:

- Describe and explore the development of Ulster-Scots culture and language;
- Reflect and showcase Ulster-Scots music, literature and poetry;
- Explore historical themes and/or the contemporary linkages between Ulster and Scotland - social, religious, economic and artistic;
- Challenge misconceptions about the nature of Ulster-Scots and which describe its role/relevance for local communities;
- Facilitate new research and informed debate about Ulster-Scots history, culture and language;
- Explore the meaning and nature of Ulster-Scots identity;
- Record, and facilitate wider access to, extant forms of Ulster-Scots language use - with a particular focus on the creation of programmes with archival value/significance;
- Reflect and explore Ulster-Scots in both urban and rural environments and involving people from different socio-economic and community backgrounds;
- Examine the ways in which Ulster-Scots culture and language has impacted on wider society;

- Are educational in the broadest sense, and which facilitate informal learning.

Landmark Programmes

Applications are welcomed for programmes with scale and ambition which, for example:

- Describe and explore significant historical themes or events;
- Utilise anniversaries to maximise relevance and appeal to audiences;
- Profile people who have made a significant and lasting difference to Ulster-Scots - in all its different forms/diversity;
- Make academic research about Ulster-Scots heritage, culture and language accessible to a generalist audience and in ways that are innovative and engaging;
- Celebrate the value and impact of Ulster-Scots, its history and continued relevance;
- Facilitate informed debate about/increased understanding of key people and events associated with Ulster-Scots.

Learning Resources

Applications are welcomed for curriculum-related programmes or resources which, for example:

- Describe and explore cultural diversity themes, with a particular focus on Ulster-Scots language and culture;
- Facilitate increased awareness of Ulster-Scots heritage - including people and events;
- Reflect Ulster-Scots in its developing/contemporary forms and involving local children and young people;

Entertainment and Event Programmes

Applications are welcomed for entertainment-style programmes which, for example:

- Showcase Ulster-Scots music, performing talent and themes for a generalist audience;
- Involve studio or event-based performances which celebrate creative excellence in Ulster-Scots music and culture;
- Explore the ways in which Ulster-Scots influences/and is inter-related with wider culture and society ;
- Engage younger audiences with Ulster-Scots themes and using formats and approaches which appeal to/involve them.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, how the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund committee assess how a proposal contributes to increasing awareness and understanding of Ulster-Scots heritage, culture or language.

(AQW 38526/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The following factors can be taken into consideration when carrying out such an assessment:

- Whether the proposed subject matter sufficiently explores the Ulster-Scots heritage, culture or language;
- Whether the focus is on a topic that has not been previously explored through Ulster-Scots programming;
- How well the proposal and subject matter have been researched;
- The audience appeal and scope, for example, whether or not the proposal could attract a new audience;
- The potential audience reach of the broadcaster;
- Whether the key contributors have sufficient expertise in their area and will they appeal to a wide audience; and
- The quality of the proposal and the experience of the production company.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, how the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund committee assess the quality of a proposal; and what factors they take into account.

(AQW 38527/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: In considering the quality of a proposal, assessors will take the following factors into account:

- The quality of the written application;
- The feasibility of the project; and
- The perceived quality of the end product -
  - The appropriateness of the proposed contributors and presenters for the subject matter;
  - the level of Ulster-Scots content;
  - the suitable experience of the production team to deliver high quality content; and
  - the programme's appeal to the proposed audience.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, how the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund committee assess the audience appeal of a proposal; and what factors they take into account.

(AQW 38528/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is not possible to be prescriptive in answering this question. Broadly, in considering the audience appeal of a proposal, assessors will take the following factors into account:

- Who the broadcaster is and does the proposal sit naturally in their schedule and with their audiences;

- What is the suggested scheduling for the proposal;
- Is the proposal part of a wider range of Ulster-Scots programming e.g. a BBC series; and
- Is the content accessible to a wide audience and will it be informative and/or entertaining.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, how the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund committee assess value for money; and to detail the factors they take into account.

(AQW 38539/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Budgets for each application are assessed by NI Screen's Head of Finance and the Ulster Scots Broadcast Fund to ensure that they are in line with industry tariffs. Different genres require different tariffs, for example drama is more expensive than reversioned animation or straightforward documentaries. Factors taken into account include the need to balance awards made amongst the different genres to ensure that the audiences for the different genres can be catered for within the resources available.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, (i) to explain the meaning of maximising audience aspects; (ii) how the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund committee assess maximising audience aspects; and (iii) what factors they take into account.

(AQW 38540/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Maximising audience aspects refers not only to maximising actual audience numbers for the funded content but, within this, also seeking to diversify audience types to ensure the content has a broad appeal where appropriate.

The Ulster Scots Broadcast Fund committee can take the following factors into account in assessing the potential audience reach of the proposed content: whether the content has a broadcaster attached; whether the proposed slot will allow for maximum audience access; and how the content will be marketed to ensure maximum audience awareness.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, (i) to explain what is meant by additionality aspects and match funding arrangements; (ii) how these relate to, or differ from, value for many aspects; (iii) how the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund committee assess additionality aspects and match funding arrangements; and (iv) what factors they take into account.

(AQW 38541/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Additionality refers to whether the proposed content is new and additional to existing content already available to viewers. In terms of value for money, additionality is taken into account in assessing whether the proposed content is over and above programming that the broadcasting organisation might otherwise have produced itself.

In assessing additionality aspects, the committee takes the following factors into account: the number of hours of Ulster-Scots programming previously transmitted by the broadcaster; the value of the broadcaster's Ulster-Scots independent production commissions within the North of Ireland and the overall quality of the Ulster-Scots programming previously transmitted by the broadcaster.

All projects submitted to the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund (USBF) must also evidence a level of match funding. The USBF will provide up to a maximum of 75% of the overall agreed project costs. The relevant broadcaster or applicant company must then provide the balance.

The level of match funding can have an impact on the value for money, as a project with 50% match funding in place may offer better value for money than a similar project with 25% match funding in place.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, to explain what is meant by the Ulster-Scots independent production sector and infrastructure.

(AQW 38542/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster-Scots independent production sector refers to production companies working on Ulster-Scots content within the independent production sector in the North of Ireland. Infrastructure means expertise and resources other than the production companies themselves which are important to the production of television programmes.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37281/11-15, what weighting is given to each of the eight criteria in assessing an application to the Ulster-Scots Broadcast fund.

(AQW 38543/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: No specific weighting is afforded to the eight criteria. Assessment is based on an objective analysis of how an application meets the criteria which are made known to potential applicants in advance.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the nature of the Together: Building a United Community Sports Connect initiative.

(AQW 38544/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department leads on one of the seven headline actions from the Executive's Together: Building a United Community (TBUC) Strategy namely the development of a Cross Community Youth Sports Programme.

A pilot project for the programme will be delivered over a twelve week period starting in January 2015 and will be aimed at 11-16 year olds in the Action Zones of the Lower Falls and Greater Village areas. The programme will aim to enhance good relations through the transformative power of sport.

The Sport Connects initiative is the training programme for the pilot project's Young Leaders (aged 16-24). This initiative will give Young Leaders the opportunity to understand and learn how to communicate good relations messages and acquire coaching and creative industries qualifications and experience alongside the improvement of softer skills such as confidence and motivation which will improve employability prospects.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in her Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38559/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has no employee, paid on either the Industrial or Non Industrial pay scales, that earn less than £7.20 per hour.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what support she has given to the Ulster Orchestra during their current financial difficulties.

(AQW 38597/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I met with representatives of the Orchestra to explore the nature of the problems faced and the work it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. I also discussed the matter with other stakeholders including BBC Officials and Lord Tony Hall, Director General.

Officials from my Department, together with the Arts Council, continue to liaise with the Orchestra and its sponsors to develop and refine potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms which would enable the Orchestra to safeguard its future.

All parties are in close contact and will remain so during the crucial weeks ahead, with a view to bringing discussions to a close as soon as possible.

If a new sustainable operating model emerges from this current, iterative process, I will give it serious consideration and, subject to receiving assurance that it can be delivered, I will engage with Executive Colleagues to assess how the Executive might support it.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37279/11-15, which of the 37 projects listed as being supported by the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund had a substantial Ulster-Scots language element and thereby contributed to increasing awareness and understanding of the Ulster-Scots language.

(AQW 38649/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The following projects had a substantial language element and sought to increase awareness and understanding of the Ulster-Scots language;

1. Santer Series 2
2. Santer Series 3
3. An Ode to Burns
4. Reader of Rabbie
5. Stumpy's Brae
6. The Gaitherin
7. Five Fables
8. Five Fables app
9. Minding our Language

Going forward the Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund Committee is intending to support projects that have a more substantive language element.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 37279/11-15, which of the 37 projects listed as being supported by the Ulster-Scots Broadcast fund were broadcast on (i) BBC in Northern Ireland only; (ii) BBC in Northern Ireland and nationally across the United Kingdom; and (iii) UTV.

(AQW 38650/11-15)

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the process by which the previous director of marketing and communication in Waterways Ireland was recruited, including (i) when and how the post was advertised; (ii) how many people applied for the post; (iii) how many people were shortlisted; (iv) how many people were interviewed; and (v) who was on the interview panel.

(AQW 38652/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The previous Director of Marketing and Communications was appointed by the former Chief Executive of Waterways Ireland with effect from April 2002. The appointment was made in line with the relevant provisions in the British Irish Agreement Act 1999, which allowed for the designation and transfer of the member of staff from the former Department of Arts, Heritage, Gaeltacht and the Islands. The appointment was not made through an open competition.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in her Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38657/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There is currently 1.60 full time equivalent (FTE) staff employed in my Department's Equality Unit.

Details of the grades of staff and salary ranges are contained in the table below.

Grade	FTE	Salary Range
DP	1	£35,190 - £39,675
SO	0.6	£28,500 - £31,135

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on her Department's capital build programme, including stadia.

(AQO 7137/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I will begin with stadia since these form the largest part of the current capital budget.

UBIRFU. The Ravenhill project is progressing very well with all 3 stands now complete. The official opening of the Stadium took place on 2 May 2014. Completion of the remaining phases of construction work around the education and heritage facilities is planned for early 2015.

IFA. Construction works at Windsor Park commenced on site on 6 May 2014 after the Irish Cup Final and work is progressing well. Provided that significant delays around any legal issues are avoided, then the Windsor Park development can remain on programme with completion of the construction works planned for November 2015.

UCGAA. Design development by the contractor is complete. However construction work at Casement Park is currently delayed temporarily due to a Judicial Review against DOE's planning approval for the Casement Park project. If a favourable outcome to the JR is achieved, it is likely that the contractor could commence construction on site in January 2015 with a planned completion date of November 2016.

Turning now to stadia-associated capital projects, the £567k capital allocation for the purchase of minibuses (Community Minibus Scheme) and the redevelopment of community facilities in the Lower Falls area are on target for spend within this financial year.

I will now briefly summarise progress on other capital projects:

Libraries. £4m will be invested this year. The Lisnaskea library re build is now complete and the project to replace Moira Library is now at tender stage. The work to replace Libraries NI's IT infrastructure successfully completed in year.

City of Culture legacy. £2.8m will be invested this year. £1.3m of this budget has been allocated to Phase 1 of the North Coast Sports Village which is now complete. Refurbishment of seven boxing clubs and extension to the FabLab space in the Derry Nerve Centre is also planned.

Other sporting activity. £1.8m will be invested this year.

Facilities will be modernised at Lisburn Racquets Club. Two handball alleys will be completed at Colaiste Feirste.

Ulster Scots sector. £305k will be invested in the Ulster Scots Hub at Corn Exchange, website development and grants.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what impact her Department's 2015/16 budget will have on funding for local museums.

(AQO 7132/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department's financial support to local museums is primarily through the NI Museums Council's grants programme. In addition the Somme Heritage Centre receives funding to support work aligned to the Decade of Centenaries programme.

Without prejudging the outcome of the ongoing budget consultation process it should be possible to maintain our level of combined direct and indirect financial support to the local museums sector in 2015/16 at, or close to, the current level.

The Museums Council has provided my Department with a draft Savings Delivery Plan which shows that it will seek to make internal efficiencies to meet its 2015/16 savings target of eleven point two percent, equating to thirty thousand pounds. This Plan proposes that its grant programme will be protected from these cuts and will remain at the level of approximately twenty five thousand pounds per annum.

In relation to the Somme Heritage Centre, and the approaching anniversary of the Battle of the Somme, it is my intention to continue to provide programme funding to this local museum in 2015/16. The amount of this funding has yet to be confirmed.

My Department, in common with departments across the Executive, is addressing the impact of significant budget reductions in 2015/16. I am working hard to ensure we minimise the impact of these cuts on frontline services. However, the current budgetary situation is undoubtedly challenging.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline how much money, and other resources, she intends to allocate to the promotion of the Irish language between now and April 2016.

(AQO 7138/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Executive's draft budget for the 2015/16 proposes a reduction to DCAL's baseline in Current Expenditure of 10% (before inflation) compared to 2014/15. A high level assessment of the impacts of the proposed budget on DCAL's spending and savings plans for 2015/16 has been published for public consultation.

DCAL's plans for expenditure on the promotion of Irish cover three broad areas - sponsorship of Foras na Gaeilge, Liofa and leading the implementation of the the Gaeltacht Quarter Plan.

The budgets for Foras na Gaeilge for the calendar years 2015 and 2016 have not yet been agreed. An indicative budget of approximately three million pounds (£3m) is proposed for 2015 in line with the required 8% efficiency savings for the period 2014 to 2016.

The planned expenditure on Líofoa from 1 November to 31 March 2015 is one hundred and thirty three thousand and eighty three pounds (£133,083).

From 1 November 2014 to 31st March 2015, two hundred and eighty three thousand, seven hundred and five pounds (£283,705) has been allocated to Gaeltacht Quarter projects.

During 2014/15 the DCAL North West team also provided An Gaeláras with a capital grant of up to one hundred and fifty thousand pounds (£150k) to contribute towards the refurbishment of "The Manse", the building adjacent to Derry's Irish language Centre, An Culturlann.

The budgets for Líofoa and the Gaeltacht Quarter for 2015/16 will be considered in the context of the findings from the public consultation.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many jobs will be created by the re-development of Windsor Park and the surrounding sporting village.

(AQO 7134/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is estimated that there will be 270 direct job years associated with the Windsor Park re-development project.

In addition Specific clauses have been included in the IST Contract for Windsor Park. They require the employment of 17 Long Term Unemployed workers, 8 new apprenticeships and 2 student placements there is also a 5% apprenticeships requirement for contractors/sub contractors with over 20 employees.

The contractor, O'Hare and McGovern, have committed to providing over and beyond the numbers specified in the contract and have identified opportunities for 32 Long term unemployed workers and 19 apprenticeships.

In addition to this social clauses have been included in the IST contracts for the redevelopment of Olympia Leisure Centre. These will also provided further opportunities for Long term unemployed and apprentices throughout the construction stage.

Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the redevelopment of Windsor Park.
(AQO 7139/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Funding Agreement was issued to the IFA and the successful contractor (O'Hare and McGovern) was appointed in December 2013.

Design development by the contractor is complete and the release of the Construction Notice by the IFA was made on 2 May 2014. Construction works commenced on site on 6 May 2014 after the Irish Cup Final.

Construction work is on-going and progressing well, with the Phase 1 works (construction of the pitch) completed on time for the European Championship Qualifier on 11th October 2014.

Provided that significant delays around any legal issues are avoided, then the Windsor Park development can remain on programme with completion of the construction works planned for November 2015.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, following the recent decision of the Danish Parliament to prevent the abolition of the Danish National Chamber Orchestra, for an update of her plans in relation to the future of the Ulster Orchestra.
(AQO 7140/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have met with representatives of the Orchestra to explore the nature of the problems faced and the work it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. Officials from my Department, together with the Arts Council continue to engage with the Orchestra and its sponsors to develop and refine potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms which would enable the Orchestra to safeguard its future.

If a new sustainable operating model emerges I will give it serious consideration and, subject to receiving assurance that it can be delivered, I will engage with Executive Colleagues to assess how the Executive might support it.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline any library closures as a result of annual reductions to the block grant available to the Executive.

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am working with Libraries NI to ensure that no branch libraries will be required to close permanently in the current, or next, financial year as a result of the annual reductions to the Executive's block grant. Achieving the level of savings required is extremely challenging for my Department and its arms length bodies, including Libraries NI.

The Member may be aware that it was previously proposed that my Department's resource budget for 2015/16 should be cut by 13%. It is now expected that the Department will be subject to a 10% overall reduction, although this is subject to consultation as part of the draft budget process. As part of the budget settlement, I am keen that protection should be offered to Libraries NI in order to avoid library closures. This reflects my clear recognition of the essential role that libraries play within communities, especially in socially deprived areas.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the long-term curation and storage of archaeological archives.
(AQO 7142/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: On 6th November 2014 representatives from both the Environment Agency and National Museums provided the Culture, Arts and Leisure Committee with an updated position on a range of significant issues around the management of archaeological finds. This position remains unchanged.

The joint Environment Agency / National Museums Working Group has determined the approximate size and amount of the material held by private archaeological firms. In quantity, this is roughly equivalent to the size of National Museums' existing collections. It is approximately five times the amount of archaeological material currently held by National Museums.

Significantly, the Group has also identified a number of other Government Departments and public bodies that should have an input into the resolution of this matter. These include departments who are involved in large-scale infrastructure projects relating, for example, to water, roads and social housing.

Previously the focus of the Group was on private sector developers and archaeologists. However, more clarity is needed as to how archaeological artefacts owned by these public sector bodies are being stored, and at what cost to the Taxpayer.

A report summarising the Group's findings will, in due course, be submitted to both the DOE Minister and me for consideration. The report will make recommendations as to possible solutions towards resolving the many issues surrounding archaeological archives.

In line with a commitment previously made by former Minister Alex Attwood during an Assembly debate in July 2012, I anticipate that the Environment Minister may wish to present a paper to the Executive on this matter.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, given the important role of the Ulster Orchestra in Northern Ireland, to outline the actions she has taken since September 2014 to support the orchestra in its current difficult financial situation. (AQO 7143/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have met with representatives of the Orchestra to explore the nature of the problems faced and the work it is undertaking to identify possible solutions. Officials from my Department, together with the Arts Council continue to engage with the Orchestra and its sponsors to develop and refine potential operating models and alternative funding mechanisms which would enable the Orchestra to safeguard its future.

If a new sustainable operating model emerges I will give it serious consideration and, subject to receiving assurance that it can be delivered, I will engage with Executive Colleagues to assess how the Executive might support it.

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to provide an overview of her Department's sports proposals, as part of the 'Together: Building a United Community' Strategy. (AQO 7144/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has responsibility for one of the seven headline actions in the Together: Building a United Community Strategy – namely the development of a cross community youth sports programme.

A pilot project for the programme will be delivered over a twelve week period starting in January 2015 and will be aimed at 11-16 year olds in the Action Zones of the Lower Falls and Greater Village areas. The pilot project will see participants from each of the Action Zones having the opportunity to collectively take part in a wide range of sporting and creative industry based activity led by elite coaches with support from Young Leaders (aged 16-24) from their areas.

The programme will aim to build community capacity, improve employability prospects and enhance good relations through the transformative power of sport.

The programme's proactive approach to encouraging participation from females, ethnic minorities and disabled people will contribute to tackling inequality and promote social inclusion.

The community is fully engaged in the current development phase of the programme and will continue to be fully involved as the pilot goes live in January. A range of statutory and other partners are also working with the Department on the programme design and delivery. I believe that the pilot is hugely exciting, will be of high quality and genuinely transformative for those taking part.

Department of Education

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education for a breakdown of the amount of funding provided to each sectoral body for the 2009/10 to 2013/14 financial years. (AQW 38177/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The amount of funding provided to Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta (CnaG) and the NI Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) for the 2009-10 to the 2013-14 financial years is as follows:

£'000		2009-10 £'000	2010-11 £'000	2011-12 £'000	2012-13 £'000	2013-14 £'000

Notes: Figures are based on the final budget allocations for each body in each of the financial years.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the staffing levels of (i) each Education and Library Board; and (ii) the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, in each of the last five financial years. (AQW 38227/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The staffing levels (headcount) of (i) each Education and Library Board; and (ii) the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, in each of the last five financial years is as follows:

	As at 31/3/10	As at 31/3/11	As at 31/3/12	As at 31/3/13	As at 31/3/14
BELB	473	460	414	414	428

The headcount figures in the table above include:

- Part-time staff;
- Headquarter staff and out centre staff; and
- Permanent staff and temporary staff who may be covering permanent posts.

School based staff are not included in these headcount figures, and figures can fluctuate during the year due to leavers and new starts.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to detail the current (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38377/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of staff employed in the Department of Education Equality Team equates to 2.6 full time equivalent officers. In 2013/2014, the Administration Salary Cost for the officers was £102,491.

In addition to equality of opportunity and good relations issues the staff covers topics such as UNCRC and other conventions, Department's Action Plans:- Racial Equality, Disability and Gender and supports the development of policy.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to provide a breakdown of the funding provided to each sectoral body in the last five years.[R]

(AQW 38437/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The amount of funding provided to Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta (CnaG) and the NI Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) for the 2009-10 to the 2013-14 financial years is as follows:

£'000		2009-10 £'000	2010-11 £'000	2011-12 £'000	2012-13 £'000	2013-14 £'000

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 38044/11-15, given that school attendance is recorded electronically, why it takes a further ten months to provide a breakdown of levels of absenteeism by ward.[R]

(AQW 38651/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Attendance data are collected via the annual School Census, which is conducted on the Friday of the first full week of October each year. This means that attendance data for the school year 2013/14 were collected via the 2014/2015 school Census (10 October 2014). Due to the nature of the Census exercise, it is often the end of November before all Census returns have been made. The following few weeks are taken up by validation of the data and creation of the final datasets.

Publication of initial analysis occurs at the end of January, while publication of detailed statistics occurs at the end of February. Both of these publications are National Statistics, and as such are subject to the Code of Practice for Official Statistics – it is not possible to provide any statistical breakdown of the attendance data until these reports have been published. Therefore a breakdown of absenteeism by ward for school year 2013/14 is not possible until March 2015 at the earliest. See below processes and timescales:

Process	Timescale
Census planning and preparation e.g. end of year procedures from C2K, update syntax in SRT	June - August
School census documentation issued	September
Schools complete, check and upload data to web exchange	October - December
SRT convert files from csv to SPSS for analysis and merge into one file for each school type	November – December
SRT run validations on attendance data and create final datasets	December
Initial analysis and publication of summary statistics	End of January
In-depth analysis and publication of detailed statistics	End of February

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education to detail the percentage cut in budget that schools will be required to implement for the 2015/16 financial year.

(AQW 38705/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As part of the Draft 2015-16 Budget outcome, Education's 2015-16 Resource Budget is facing cuts, in cash terms, of 4.9% (£94.4 million) compared to the 2014-15 baseline budget.

My officials are currently progressing work on identifying the inescapable pressures facing the education budget next year. Until this work is completed and I have had an opportunity to review fully the implications of the draft budget settlement for Education it would be premature for me to provide details of cuts to schools budgets at this stage.

I have addressed my concerns with the Finance Minister and I am intent on enhancing the funds available to Education in the 2015-16 Final Budget.

I remain fully committed to protecting front-line services where possible and to ensuring that the resources available for education are allocated effectively to achieve maximum impact for our children.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education what steps he is taking to protect and promote the ethos of the four voluntary maintained church managed primary schools (a) Seagoe Primary School; (b) Drelincourt Infants School; (c) Desertmartin Primary School; and (d) Kilcoan Primary School.

(AQW 38718/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Responsibility for determining and maintaining the ethos of Seagoe Primary School, Drelincourt Infants School, Desertmartin Primary School and Kilcoan Primary School rests with the Board of Governors of each school and the trustees who are represented on the school Board.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Education how much his Department has spent on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss, in the last five years.

(AQW 38765/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's expenditure in the last five financial years on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss was £1,317.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Education to detail his Department's level of support for The Buddy Bear School in Dungannon; and for his assessment of the criticism from parents and the school community regarding inadequate funding to meet the educational requirements of children who suffer from Cerebral Palsy and other motor disorders and who benefit from this form of conductive education.

(AQW 38773/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have assured DE that the needs of a significant number of children with Cerebral Palsy and other motor disorders are successfully met in a range of grant-aided schools, including special schools and Learning Support Centres attached to mainstream schools where the full range of medical interventions and therapeutic support from medical professionals is available. The educational facility agreed for the child depends largely on the needs of the child and is informed by parental choice.

My department has formally recognised Buddy Bear School as suitable for the admission of children with special educational needs. Therefore should an ELB decide, as a result of a statutory assessment, to place a child in Buddy Bear school, it will pay the child's fees in regard to attendance and may pay other costs in relation to transport and accommodation. In this context my department is providing a tangible level of support to the school.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education what percentage of children in (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary education attend Irish-medium schools or Irish-medium units.

(AQW 38788/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below. The information provided relates to the 2013/14 school census, the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October this year, provisional figures will be available in December, finalised figures in February.

Pupils enrolled in Irish medium schools or units, 2013/14

Notes:

- (i) Figures for primary include nursery, reception and year 1 - 7 classes.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education whether there are any legal obstacles that may prevent a nursery school transforming to integrated status.

(AQW 38821/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are no legal obstacles to prevent a nursery school transforming to integrated status.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of surplus places in the (a) controlled; (b) maintained; (iii) integrated; and (iv) Irish-medium sectors, broken down by primary and post-primary schools, since 2011.

(AQW 38822/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below. The information provided is based on the 2011/12 – 2013/14 school censuses. The 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October this year and unfilled places data for this year will be available in April.

Unfilled places in primary schools, 2011/12 - 2013/14

Notes:

- Figures for primary include reception – year 7 classes only.
- Maintained includes Catholic Maintained and Other Maintained schools
- Integrated includes Controlled Integrated and GMI schools
- It is not possible to separate out unfilled places and approved enrolments for Irish medium units, so the data for Irish medium is based on IM schools only.

6. Irish medium schools have been excluded from their respective management types.
7. Voluntary schools have been excluded.
8. The percentage is the number of unfilled places relative divided by the total approved enrolment

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Education whether he has considered introducing performance related pay for post-primary school teachers to improve academic performance.
(AQW 38830/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Boards of Governors have a legal responsibility to ensure that teachers' performance is reviewed annually in accordance with the negotiated Performance Review and Staff Development (PRSD) Scheme. Review statements agreed under the Scheme form part of the evidence used to determine pay progression on the Leadership and Upper Pay Scales. Depending on their position on the pay scale, teachers progress up the pay scale either annually or biannually.

The PRSD Scheme came into operation on 1 September 2005 and is well embedded in schools and has become integral to performance management, staff development and overall school improvement.

Discussions are on-going with teaching unions regarding linking performance to pay.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education whether he will, in conjunction with the Southern Health and Social Care Trust, assist with the funding of a Specialist Autism Support Worker to assist children at the nine schools offering autism specific classes.
(AQW 38846/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Southern Education and Library Board provides Autism Specific Classes in ten primary schools and two post-primary schools. The Board has been made aware that the Southern Health and Social Care Trust is seeking to recruit specialist therapy assistants to support the work of Speech and Language Therapists and Occupational Therapists in some of the primary-based Key Stage 1 autism-specific classes. The Board understands that the Trust is experiencing recruitment difficulties.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education why autism specific support is not provided to pupils from Key Stage 2 onwards; and for his assessment of the impact of the non-provision of support to pupils who have received assistance during Key Stage 1.
(AQW 38847/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Autism specific support is provided, as appropriate, to all children and young people with Autistic Specific Disorder across the age range (0-19 years).

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education how many primary schools from the maintained sector have transferred to the integrated sector, in the last ten year.
(AQW 38867/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: No primary schools from the maintained sector have transferred to the integrated sector in the last ten years.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the effectiveness of Education Scotland in improving educational standards of pupils in Scotland; and what lessons can be learnt from this in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 38876/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is too early to make a properly informed objective assessment of the effectiveness of Education Scotland in improving educational standards of pupils in Scotland. We look forward to seeing a formal evaluation of the arrangements in due course.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how many schools who exited the Formal Intervention Process have re-entered the process.
(AQW 38877/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: One school that had exited the Formal Intervention Process subsequently re-entered the Process.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, in the light of the Chief Inspector's comments on poor school attendance amongst pupils in receipt of free school meals, what additional action is he considering to improve attendance amongst these pupils.
(AQW 38878/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: School attendance and achievement are inextricably linked. My expectations for children and young people entitled to free school meals are no less than for any other child.

The NI Audit Office (NIAO) and the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) published reports on Improving Pupil Attendance earlier this year. The Memorandum of Reply, published on 4 August 2014, sets out a programme of work for my Department and the Education and Library Boards. This includes the development of a Pupil Attendance Strategy. My Department has already started to engage with stakeholders and to develop the strategy which will be in place by the 2015/16 school year.

My Department alone cannot address the underlying issues of non-attendance. Key to the new Attendance Strategy will be the role and responsibilities of parents, schools, the Education and Library Boards, young people themselves, the community, other government Departments and agencies in addressing poor attendance.

The Education Works campaign continues to engage with parents and supports the work on improving attendance by stressing the value of education to families and communities, particularly those from disadvantaged communities.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail the minimum number of pupils that a school is required to have to be accepted on the Shared Education Campus Programme.

(AQW 38886/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The protocol document for the Shared Education Campus Programme details the criteria which each application will be assessed against. These include the endorsement of the relevant Planning Authority (the local Education & Library Board) who will have to provide assurance that each school involved in the proposal meets the criteria in my Department's Sustainable Schools Policy. Where this is not the case, the Planning Authority will have to provide a rationale for its endorsement of the proposal, including an explanation as to how the proposed scheme will contribute to the delivery of sustainable education provision in the local area in the years to come.

The Shared Education Campuses Programme protocol document can be found on my Department's website via the following link - http://www.deni.gov.uk/shared\_education\_campuses\_programme\_-\_second\_call\_for\_expressions\_of\_interest\_-\_protocol\_document.pdf

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education what steps he took to avoid real, perceived or potential conflict of interest in the appointment of Northern Ireland's Qualification Regulator as a member of the Board of Governors of Antrim Grammar School.

(AQW 38962/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The DE governor posts in controlled and maintained school sectors are nominations and are not classified as Ministerial appointments. The education and library boards are the appointing authorities in the case of controlled schools.

Applicants for DE governor posts have to declare any conflicts of interest. Conflicts of interest are not always a barrier to the offer of a school governor post. In this case, the school's scheme of management provides for any member of the Board of Governors to declare a conflict of interest in a matter which is under consideration by the governors and to withdraw from the meeting and any discussion and vote taken in relation to that matter. I am satisfied that this is sufficient to provide for the effective operation of school business by the members of the Board of Governors of Antrim Grammar School.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to define the term "international best practice" as referred to in the Final Report "Aspiring to Excellence" by the International Review Panel on Initial Teacher Education in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 39071/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Aspiring to Excellence: the Final Report of the Initial Review Panel on the Structure of Initial Teacher Education in Northern Ireland was conducted on behalf of the Minister for Employment and Learning. Terminology within that report would therefore be a matter for the Minister for Employment and Learning.

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of Education to outline his Department's position on the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's (OECD) PISA-Based Test for Schools.

(AQO 7152/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I agreed earlier this year that, the OECD PISA-Based Test Schools should be available to our post primary schools, should they wish to use it to support self-evaluation and school development planning.

I have written to all local post primary schools to alert them to the fact that this useful and credible OECD assessment is now available to them to use as a tool for self-improvement. It is for each school to decide if they wish to participate in the test.

The OECD PISA-Based Test assesses the application of skills in reading, maths and science as well as attitudes to learning and is potentially a very useful tool for schools.

The assessment examines not only what is learned but also the application of that knowledge in the real world and as such sits well alongside the curriculum.

If a school takes part in the PISA test, they receive a report on their pupils' performance which will provide schools with a tool to support self-evaluation and enable them to benchmark their performance in an international context.

This new PISA-Based assessment complements but is not part of the PISA studies undertaken every three years, the next study is PISA 2015 planned for next year.

These international comparisons when used as part of the self evaluation that schools already undertake, can only serve to assist schools in raising standards and closing the performance gap between the highest and lowest achievers.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education to outline the impact of budget cuts on the Education Welfare Service.
(AQO 7155/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Resourcing of the Education Welfare Service is a matter for the Education and Library Boards (ELBs). The ELBs fund the Education Welfare Service through their block grant allocation and this is supplemented by my Department.

If there are any resourcing pressures it is expected that the ELBs would bring the matter to the attention of officials.

The Chief Executives of each ELB have reported that there have been no budgetary cuts to the EWS in the current financial year.

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus.
(AQO 7151/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Steady progress has been made on the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus Programme and it is on target to meet the PFG commitment to initiate the first phase of construction by 2014/15.

Demolition has now been completed on the area of the site earmarked for Arvalee School & Resource Centre. The tender process for the construction contract for Arvalee has begun and it is intended that the construction contract will commence early 2015 and completed by mid 2016.

Demolition for the remainder of the site is out to tender and work on site is due to commence before the end of the year.

Planning of future phases of the Programme is progressing and procurement options are currently being considered.

The Strathroy Link Road project, which is essential to the campus delivery, is being taken forward by the Department for Regional Development – Roads Service and remains on schedule for completion early in 2018.

The current delivery schedule estimates completion of the Lisanelly Shared Education Campus by 2020, with a view to schools coming into operation in September of that year.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education how his Department's resource baseline, not including ring-fenced resource, was calculated for the 2015/16 Draft Budget.
(AQO 7153/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department's draft budget outcome for non ring-fenced resource totalled £1,849.3 million. This resulted in a £94.4 million reduction from the 2014-15 baseline. In setting Departmental baselines for 2015-16, the 2014-15 opening position was substantively rolled forward, with the removal of certain time-bound allocations. The Executive agreed to a level of reductions from this baseline to provide funding for central and strategic pressures, along with an amount to be allocated in support of key public services.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Education what impact the recent Review of Irish-medium Post-primary Education will have for Irish-medium post-primary education in the Derry City Council area.
(AQO 7154/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In August 2013, I set up an Advisory Group to focus on the development of practical and deliverable solutions to increase access to Irish-medium post-primary education and to address the challenges facing the future development of sustainable provision. The Advisory Group presented its findings and recommendations to me in April 2014, which I subsequently considered.

I accepted the group's vision of Irish-medium education and their pathway to creating educationally sound post-primary provision which enhances the significant benefits provided through the medium of the Irish language.

I have noted comments in relation to the need for a standalone school in Derry City. I am satisfied that the framework now exists more than ever before to facilitate development towards an Irish-medium post-primary school in Derry and the wider Foyle constituency.

Of course such a Development Proposal must still meet robust criteria around future demand and sustainability. If that is not possible within prevailing circumstances and subject to parental wishes, I also accept the Advisory Group Report proposal which suggests moving in the direction of travel towards stand-alone schools by building a clear pathway incrementally from smaller units in high quality existing schools towards stand-alone provision. This has been balanced with the need for excellent teaching to ensure learning and pupil attainment are not put at risk.

I would point out that all developments in the Irish-medium sector are taken forward within the context of area planning, the Sustainable Schools Policy and my Department's duty to encourage and facilitate Irish-medium education.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Education to outline how the ongoing post-primary area planning process takes into account the effect that Development Proposals to expand a school in one sector can have on the sustainability of schools in other educational sectors.

Mr O'Dowd: Development Proposals brought forward should be consistent with the Area Plans published by the planning authorities. Any proposed change must support the delivery of the vision for education provision in the area and meet the identified needs of the pupils.

Development Proposals relate to specific schools and are considered within the area context and in line with the Department's Sustainable Schools Policy, which sets out six criteria for assessing the viability of a school. In addition the Department is required to consider the impact that a proposal may have on another grant-aided school. The Department assesses the likely impact that a proposal will have on other schools' ability to remain sustainable and again this is assessed in line with the Sustainable Schools Policy.

I can assure you that before I make a decision on any proposal I take account of all pertinent information. However, my primary focus is always on the needs of pupils and not institutions.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Education what procedures are in place to ensure that pupils remain safe should school patrol personnel be absent from work.

(AQO 7157/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Responsibility for the safety of pupils when on foot in the vicinity of schools rests with their parents. School crossing patrols are provided to assist parents with their responsibility.

When the absence of a school crossing patrol person is known in advance schools should bring this to the attention of parents. When a patrol is absent at short notice, a member of a school's personnel may fulfil the role on a temporary basis and Boards will provide training for those persons such that they will be in a position to replace the patrol if required.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he plans to remove Royal Navy, Army or Royal Air Force literature from Jobs and Benefits offices.

(AQW 38480/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): I have no plans to remove Royal Navy, Army or Air Force literature from Jobs and Benefits Offices or indeed from JobCentres across Northern Ireland. There is a network of 35 offices across Northern Ireland, which includes 8 JobCentres and 27 Jobs & Benefits offices. Currently there is a range of information leaflets and posters displayed across the offices.

In common with many other employers, my Department has a longstanding arrangement to promote recruitment opportunities within the Armed Forces in general.

Each Jobs and Benefits office and JobCentre has access to a dedicated Armed Forces Liaison Officer which has helped to promote good working relationships.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38561/11-15)

Dr Farry: No employee of the Department for Employment and Learning, is paid below £7.20 per hour.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much his Department has spent on research grants to (i) Queen's University Belfast; and (ii) University of Ulster for work on energy storage and efficiency research projects.

(AQW 38615/11-15)

Dr Farry: The majority of research funding provided by my Department is distributed by reference to quality, as assessed by performance in the most recent Research Assessment Exercise. This is known as Quality-related Research (QR) funding and is used to cover the underpinning research infrastructure necessary for our universities to maintain a dynamic and responsive research base. It also encourages ground breaking basic research with the potential to drive future innovation and respond quickly to changes in the external environment.

This enables our universities to apply for research funding for specific projects from external bodies such as the UK Research Councils, Invest NI, industry, charities and the EU.

However, on occasion, and when suitable funding is available, my Department has supplemented this core funding with a number of special initiatives, some of which have provided funding for energy related research projects. There have been a number of such projects over the last five years representing a total investment of £8,517,658, consisting of £5,187,689 for Queen's University Belfast (QUB) and of £3,329,969 for the University of Ulster (UU). These are summarised below:

US-Ireland R&D Partnership

Under the US-Ireland Research and Development Partnership, the Department is currently funding five QUB projects with a total value of £1,503,267, and one UU project with a total value of £319,854, all in the thematic area of Energy / Sustainability.

Strengthening the all-Island Research Base Programme

£1.15m to QUB for a project on "Improving the Sustainability of Transport using Advanced Composites and Digital Manufacturing" and £1.54m to UU for an "Energy Storage" project.

Sustainable Research Fund

For the academic years 2009/10 and 2010/11 my Department provided funding for areas that encompass the theme of sustainability, particularly research which related to alternative/renewable energy sources or green technology. QUB received £2,534,422 and UU received £1,470,115 from this Fund.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, when considering issues such as the renaming of a university that has had difficulties attracting students from a section of the community, what equality impact assessments would be made regarding the worsening of recruitment if the renaming were to proceed.

(AQW 38639/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides funding to the Higher Education Institutions for teaching and learning and research purposes. The Universities are responsible for their own policies and procedures, including those relating to renaming.

Both Queen's University, Belfast and the University of Ulster have been established under Royal Charter and any name change would need to be approved by the Privy Council. In considering renaming, a university would be expected to consider its obligations under its own statutes and charters and any Section 75 obligations.

It would then be for the university to carry out any required equality impact assessments.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38656/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department for Employment and Learning currently has two Civil Servants who are employed on a full-time basis in the Department's Equality Unit. Salary costs have been provided in terms of pay bands as release of the information requested would result in a breach of the Data Protection Act 1998, in particular the first data protection principle of the Act.

Civil Servants employed in Equality Unit	Grade	Pay Band at 1 August 2014
1	Deputy Principal	£35,190 - £39,675
1	Staff Officer	£28,500 - £31,135

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the number of training suppliers providing services for young people in East Londonderry participating in the Training for Success Programme.

(AQW 38671/11-15)

Dr Farry: There has been no change to the number of training suppliers providing services for young people in East Londonderry participating in the Training for Success Programme since my response to the original question (AQW 36046-11-15) in September 2014.

The Training for Success Programme continues to be delivered across Northern Ireland by 32 contracted training suppliers of which 11 hold contracts to provide training in East Londonderry. The 11 contracted suppliers are listed at

Annex A.

Contracts for the current Training for Success Programme were awarded in June 2013 and will run until March 2016.

The full list of Training for Success suppliers and the areas in which they are contracted to deliver can be found on the nidirect website. <http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/trainingforsuccess>

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what percentage of his Department's DEL is spent on salaries; and how he intends to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38694/11-15)

Dr Farry: The 2014-15 salaries budget for the Department is £70,799k. This is 9.3% of the total non-ringfenced resource Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) budget of £760,306k.

The Department is in the process of developing a Workforce Plan for 2015-16 which will set out the scope for reducing the number of posts to make required efficiency savings. This work will be taken forward in the context of the NICS-wide Voluntary Exit Scheme on which DFP is taking the lead.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) each of his Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 38712/11-15)

Dr Farry:

The Department also has responsibility for 3 Tribunal Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs): the Industrial Tribunal, the Fair Employment Tribunal and the Industrial Court for Northern Ireland. These NDPBs have jurisdiction in a specialised field of law and are supported by staff from the Department and do not have their own budgets. The staff who provide this support have already been included in the overall staff numbers relating to the Department at point 1.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of students from each European Union country, excluding the United Kingdom, studying at (i) Queen's University; and (ii) the University of Ulster, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38785/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department is committed to widening access and promoting educational opportunities for all individuals across Northern Ireland. The Further Education colleges offer a variety of courses throughout their network of campuses.

My Department has also put in place a number of initiatives, delivered by the Further Education Colleges, to make education more accessible to all throughout Northern Ireland. These initiatives include the Learner Access and Engagement Programme, Care to Learn Scheme and Additional Support Fund.

The Northern Regional College (NRC) has responsibility for delivering further education courses in the North Antrim area and has campuses based in Ballymena, Ballymoney and Coleraine. NRC operates the following initiatives to help increase the number of people from North Antrim enrolling in further education courses:

Learner Access and Engagement (LAE)

NRC took the decision to focus LAE on four council areas, Moyle, Larne, Newtownabbey and Carrickfergus. In Moyle, NRC has partnered with Larne Enterprise Development Company to engage learners onto this programme which has resulted in an increase of 44% of community classes in Moyle.

Creating Pathways to Success

NRC has in place a programme funded by Department for Social Development (DSD) Neighbourhood Renewal called Creating Pathways to Success. This programme offers mentoring support to those students from the designated Neighbourhood Renewal areas in North Antrim.

The programme ensures that students undertaking any course at NRC who come from a Neighbourhood Renewal area are offered specialist mentoring support to encourage retention and progression.

Community Access to Lifelong Learning (CALL)

NRC has also drawn down £98k in funding from DSD to offer accredited and non accredited learning opportunities to youth and the wider community in the Neighbourhood Renewal areas of Ballymena under the NRC delivered CALL project.

Community Outreach in North Antrim

NRC is working with community partners to deliver learning opportunities outside of its campus infrastructure. In 2013/14 NRC engaged with a total of 37 community groups in the North Antrim area. This engagement resulted in the delivery of 81 courses in the North Antrim area with over 800 individual enrolments. From 2012/13 to the year 2013/14, NRC noted an increase of 83% in its overall community provision.

Entitlement Framework in North Antrim

NRC has an extensive Entitlement Framework provision involving three learning communities in North Antrim. In 2013/14 over 1,000 students from 21 post-primary schools engaged in an accredited course as part of this programme. For example, a young person may attend NRC one day a week from any of the local post primary schools and at the end of an academic year gain a CCEA qualification in Occupational Studies in a range of vocational and technical areas. Some of these students will then decide to progress to full-time further education programmes or enrol on a Training for Success/Apprenticeship provision at NRC.

NRC also works with Coleraine Girls' High School, Coleraine Inst, Cross and Passion, St Josephs High School and Ballycastle High School using integrated delivery combining classes from across these schools, delivering sub diplomas in Engineering and Construction.

The Entitlement Framework offered in the Ballymoney campus includes CCEA Occupational Studies in Digital Technology, Construction, Technology and Innovation, Hairdressing and Beauty Therapy, and Catering and also sub diplomas including Engineering, Sports Studies, Health and Social Care.

This outreach to post primary school students and to the wider community demonstrates NRC's commitment to encourage and increase the number of learners engaging in further education courses.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department is taking to increase the number of people from North Antrim enrolling in Further Education courses.

(AQW 38852/11-15)

Mr McCausland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the drop-out rate for students who are at the end of their first year in (i) Queen's University; and (ii) the University of Ulster.

(AQW 38883/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) has provided the information attached at Annex A.

The latest available information is for 2011/12 entrants who are no longer in higher education in 2012/13. Non-continuation rates are only available for Full-Time Undergraduate entrants no longer in Higher Education following entry in the previous year.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the cost of the Final Report Aspiring to Excellence by the International Review Panel on Initial Teacher Education in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 38949/11-15)

Dr Farry: Aspiring to Excellence is the report produced by the International Review Panel under the stage 2 review of Initial Teacher Education infrastructure in Northern Ireland. The fees and expenses of the International Review Panel for this assignment totalled £119,518.81.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of staff employed (i) directly by his Department; and (ii) by it's agencies, who currently earn less than the living wage.

(AQW 39031/11-15)

Dr Farry: No employee of the Department for Employment and Learning is paid below the current UK Living Wage of £7.85, as published by the Living Wage Foundation. This calculation is based on net figures. The Department for Employment and Learning does not have agencies.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what annual budget her Department, and its arm's-length bodies, set aside for translation and interpreter services for foreign nationals.

(AQW 38508/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): Invest NI set aside a specific budget for translation and interpreter services which is currently £1,000. For the rest of DETI and its NDPBs these costs are not met from a specific budget.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the Financial Capability Strategy.

(AQW 38514/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In accordance with Programme for Government commitment number 48, a Financial Capability Strategy for Northern Ireland consumers was developed by 31 March 2013, Departmental Financial Capability Action Plans to support the delivery of the Strategy were developed by 31 March 2014, with many of the key actions already having been implemented or underway before this date.

The combined Strategy and Action Plans were considered by the Enterprise Trade Investment Committee on 20 February 2014, before being submitted to the Executive for final clearance at a future meeting.

A report assessing the impacts of the Strategy's implementation will be produced by March 2015.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when Ballycastle electricity sub-station will receive the upgrade it requires to facilitate further green energy connections.

(AQW 38592/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The connection of generation to the grid is a matter for NIE operating under a regulatory framework determined by the Utility Regulator.

The Utility Regulator approved investment in some 40 lower cost 33kV investments totalling £2.3m in October 2013. Ballycastle substation was not one of the 40.

In its final determination of the regulatory price control, the Competition Commission decided that levying further costs of 33kV investment on the general customer base to support small scale renewables was not in the public interest.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to provide details and timescales of the planned repairs to the Moyle Interconnector.

(AQW 38611/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Mutual Energy is working on proposals to permanently repair the Moyle Interconnector by 2017. This will involve laying new low voltage cables alongside the existing Moyle cables. The project is making good progress with the procurement process nearing completion.

In the interim, Mutual Energy had been examining a range of possible options for effecting a temporary solution, including a seabed repair to the existing low voltage cable fault. While this engineering process did yield some positive results it has, ultimately, not produced a satisfactory outcome. As of November 2014 Mutual Energy has decided to discontinue this work and focus fully on the cable replacement project, which provides a permanent solution.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) her Department; and (ii) each of her Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38698/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The full time equivalent number of staff in DETI and in each of DETI's arm's-length bodies is detailed in the table below. The figures shown are as at the 31 March for each of the last 5 years.

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
DETI	483.56	483.17	450.05	460.45	462.76
Health & Safety Executive NI	118.50	121.49	117.12	114.01	119.00
Invest NI	577.74	555.93	549.08	545.69	555.51
Consumer Council for NI	47.2	46.4	47.3	43.6	42.3

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
NI Tourist Board *	159	157	152	163	166

*NI Tourist Board figures are actual headcount as they do not hold FTE for their staff.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what assessment has been made of the impact on the viability of important sporting events, such as the Armoy Racing Club's annual 'Race of Legends', of the Northern Ireland Tourist Board's decision not to open the Tourism Events Fund to new applications in 2015/16; and whether she will ensure the decision is reviewed due to the impact on key tourism related events.

(AQW 38750/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In 2013/14 a total of 43 events including the Armoy Road Race, were supported by NITB through the Tourism Events Funding Programme.

Evidence indicates that events such as these generate a positive economic impact. Previous evaluations, such as for the NI 2012 events, indicated a direct economic impact of £2.6 for every £1 invested by the public sector.

Since NITB assumed responsibility for the events function in 2010 there has not been a Budget exercise to allow for an appropriate dedicated budget baseline to be established for events. As a result, NITB has always relied on in year monitoring to meet its commitments for events funding. The decision of NITB not to open the Events Fund is solely due to the fact that it does not currently have the funds required to do this.

The draft budget allocations for 2015/16 for my Department mean that significant savings will need to be identified. My Department is currently engaging with all its arms length bodies, including the Tourist Board, on savings which will need to be made and I can confirm that the availability of funding support for events is currently being reviewed as part of that work.

Department of the Environment

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current staff complement of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (i) Crime Enforcement Team; and (ii) Licensing Team.

(AQW 38443/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): At 1 November 2014, staff complement of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency's Crime Enforcement team, known as the Environmental Crime Unit, was 34.4 (full time equivalent), and in the Waste Licensing Team, the staff complement at 1 November 2014 was 17.6 (full time equivalent).

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38664/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No employee in my Department, paid on either the Industrial or Non Industrial pay scales, is paid below £7.20 per hour.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the budget allocated for planning enforcement; and (ii) how much was spent on planning enforcement in each local council area in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38685/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Enforcement expenditure is reported on an Area Planning Office basis and therefore it is not possible to provide enforcement expenditure for each local council area. There is no specific budget allocated for planning enforcement in each Area Office. The table below sets out enforcement expenditure for each Area Planning Office for the last three years.

It is only possible to provide information for 2011/12 from October 2011 to March 2012, as the analysis code to record enforcement expenditure separately was only set up in October of that year.

Enforcement expenditure largely comprises of legal costs. Enforcement action can be a lengthy, protracted and complex process and as a result there can be variations in expenditure on legal costs between financial years.

Enforcement expenditure for each Area Planning Office <sup>(1)</sup>

Area Planning Office	Financial Year
	2011/12 <sup>(2)</sup>	2012/13	2013/14
Belfast	6,121.93	14,025.33	5,951.20
Northern	13,469.31	9,417.44	36,814.49

	2011/12 <sup>(2)</sup>	2012/13	2013/14
South Antrim	2,964.01	13,031.54	22,530.88
Southern	22,388.21	32,857.64	40,295.20
Downpatrick	12,518.80	29,433.21	23,320.76
Western	30,068.98	24,765.20	23,592.29

- (1) The majority of the expenditure is for legal costs. Staff costs are not included.
- (2) Spend from October 2011 to March 2012

Mr B McCreagh asked the Minister of the Environment what percentage of his Department's DEL is spent on salaries; and how he intends to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38690/11-15)

Mr Durkan: For 2014/15 forecast salaries spend is expected to be approximately 58.5% of my Department's current net resource DEL.

In relation to reducing spend on salaries my Department has already taken action in-year by suppressing vacant posts, putting in place controls over use of temporary promotion and a reduction in overtime.

Additionally, work is ongoing to further reduce the overall size of my Department's salary spend as part of the wider Public Sector Workforce restructuring strategy.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment what measures are in place to (i) ensure that local councils abide by legal obligations under waste legislation to prevent environmental damage; and (ii) to encourage waste contracts where waste can be traced from source to final destination.

(AQW 38730/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Under the Waste Operational Plan I published in October, the Department is focussing on working in strong partnership with Councils on all waste management issues. In terms of the Council's legal obligations, it is a requirement of Northern Ireland waste legislation that a waste authorisation must be obtained, from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA), to be able to operate a waste facility. Like any other operator, councils have to comply with waste legislation, and with any waste authorisations that they hold.

NIEA inspect all waste management facilities, including Councils, which hold a waste authorisation issued by NIEA. The areas inspected are set out in the conditions of the waste authorisation and agreed working plan for the site. The inspection frequency depends on the type of site, and the potential risks that it poses to the environment and human health.

The majority of planned site inspections are unannounced, however NIEA also carry out pre-announced site audits. NIEA also inspects all waste management facilities in response to complaints received, or as part of wider investigations.

When an operator is in breach of their licence conditions, NIEA will take regulatory and/or enforcement action, in accordance with The NIEA Enforcement and Prosecution Policy. The regulatory and enforcement tools available to NIEA range from warning letters for minor breaches, to harsher penalties for more serious breaches- including corrective notices, suspension or revocation notices, the issue of fixed penalty notices, passing enforcement investigation files to the Public Prosecution Service, and High Court injunctions.

In addition, The Waste and Contaminated Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 (the Order) imposes a duty of care on anyone who handles controlled waste, including the transfer of waste only to someone who is authorised to take it.

It is an offence for anyone to fail to comply with the requirements of the duty of care legislation, and the enforcement tools that NIEA may apply are considered in accordance with the NIEA Enforcement and Prosecution Policy and include, for example, issuing warning letters, fixed penalty notices or passing enforcement investigation files to the Public Prosecution Service.

A Joint Working Group between Local and Central Government was established in November 2013 to develop a holistic approach to the control and monitoring of municipal waste including procurement, contract management and Duty of Care.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37480/11-15, why a private taxi operator was permitted to dispose of booking records after six weeks and no action was taken in relation to a breach of regulations; and to detail who decided that no action would be taken.

(AQW 38795/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would refer the member to my response to AQW 37480/11-15.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 37736/11-15, why this question has not been answered. (AQW 38931/11-15)

Mr Durkan: AQW 37736/11-15 was answered on Wednesday 19 November 2014.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) who authorised a departmental official from the Vehicle Policy Branch to compose and distribute a letter headed "TAXI (NORTHERN IRELAND) 2008 PROPOSED NEW TAXI PLATES"; (ii) the date this was authorised or decided it would be sent; (iii) the date it was sent and to whom; (iv) why there has been a denial that this correspondence was sent; and (v) whether he will order an internal investigation into this matter.

(AQW 39000/11-15)

Mr Durkan: This correspondence issued in February 2014 to a range of public hire and private hire taxi operators, along with the Inclusive Mobility and Transport Advisory Committee (IMTAC), the Consumer Council and Disability Action. It was part of routine policy development in connection with the implementation of the Taxis Act (NI) 2008. Its content and issue were approved by Departmental officials. The responses to the correspondence shaped my Department's proposed specification for the roof sign and new taxi plate.

There has been no denial that this correspondence issued and I see no requirement to order an internal investigation into the release of this public document nine months ago.

Mr Agnew asked Minister of the Environment why planning application Z/2014/1473/F, which proposes to increase the waste burning capacity of the energy from waste incineration at Bombardier from 120,000 to 180,000 tonnes, has not been accompanied by a new environmental impact statement.

(AQW 39027/11-15)

Mr Durkan: On receipt of a planning application my officials are required to determine whether a proposed development is EIA development in accordance with The Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (NI) 2012. In relation to planning application Z/2014/1473/F, my officials are currently completing their determination on whether an Environmental Statement (ES) is required to accompany the application.

Planning applications can therefore be submitted without an ES. The issue of why this application was not accompanied by an ES is a matter for the planning applicant.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in relation to the RUC George Cross Widows Association, whether his Department determined that the Association's classification as being in the private sector and was therefore not a function of government, which resulted in the loss of annual Department of Justice funding.

(AQW 33972/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): Government departments are responsible for ensuring that bodies that they help to establish or have an ongoing relationship with are correctly classified and accounted for. The independent Office of National Statistics (ONS) makes decisions on which sector or sub-sector actual or proposed bodies are in. More straightforward cases may be settled by HM Treasury or, for Northern Ireland bodies, by Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP). Decisions are currently made in accordance with international guidelines set out for European Community member states in the European System of Accounts (ESA95).

As part of the review of Arm's-Length Bodies (ALBs) commissioned by the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister (OFMDFM), the Department of Justice (DOJ) provided information relating to a number of their bodies, including the RUC George Cross Widows' Association. My officials considered this information in terms of the ONS classification guidelines. This clearly indicated that the RUC George Cross Widows' Association should be classified as a Private Sector body. My officials wrote to DOJ officials in April 2013 to notify them of the determination.

This determination did not result in the loss of annual Department of Justice funding. Decisions regarding the funding and governance arrangements of the RUC George Cross Widows' Association rest with DOJ. It should be noted that while a change in classification may require a review of funding and governance arrangements, it should not adversely impact on the provision of funding to the body.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update of the impact of the current budgetary crisis across the Northern Ireland Executive.

Mr Hamilton: The Executive is facing significant level of budget pressures both in the remainder of this year and in 2015-16.

A 4.4% reduction to departmental baselines has been agreed in the 2014-15 Monitoring Rounds. This addressed Executive commitments in June Monitoring and the £87 million cost of not implementing Welfare Reform in October Monitoring. In addition there have been a large number of inescapable pressures emerging in departments this year. My statement to the Assembly on 13 October 2014 provided details of the allocations agreed by the Executive along with the mechanism agreed with HM Treasury for funding them.

My statement to the Assembly on 3 November 2014 set out the Executive's draft Budget position for 2015-16, including the significant pressures being faced and the Executive's response to these.

It is now for individual Ministers to determine what this will mean for their departments and to publish details for consultation. Public consultation ends on 29 December 2014, after which I will bring a paper to the Executive on the final Budget position for 2015-16.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any Joint European Resources for Micro and Medium Enterprises Programmes operational in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 37099/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: No.

The Joint European Resources for Micro and Medium Enterprises Programmes (JEREMIE) are not operational in Northern Ireland, however Invest NI's Access to Finance suite of funds emulates the features of JEREMIE, addressing market failure in access to finance. The Access to Finance initiative was approved by the Invest NI Board, DETI and DFP in 2011.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the input his Department will have in setting the district rate for ratepayers in new super-councils where there is disparity between the existing councils.

(AQW 37359/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department will have no input in relation to the setting of district rates for councils following the reorganisation of local government.

The setting of district rates is entirely a matter for the new councils.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the increased rate payments which are likely to affect businesses and householders in Coleraine, as a result of local government restructuring from April 2015.

(AQW 37361/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In terms of the effects of local government restructuring, given that Coleraine will be joining with Ballymoney, Limavady and Moyle Councils, all which have a higher district rate, it is likely that the convergence effects will increase rate bills. However, any such increase which occurs as a result of convergence will be phased in incrementally due to the support package agreed by the Executive which has a cost of up to £30m.

You should note however that a number of other factors may lead to changes to individual rate bills that will issue in April 2015 to individual householders and businesses. These include the level of district rates set by the councils next February, which will reflect their forthcoming spending plans, the changes occurring as a result of the non-domestic revaluation exercise and the future of the Small Business Rate Relief Scheme.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel when he expects the results of the public consultation on a subsidy scheme for rate payers under the new local government structure to be published; and what plans are in place to increase public awareness of relevant changes for rate payers.

(AQW 37373/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The report on the consultation exercise was published on the DFP website and issued to the Finance Committee earlier this month. I will be publishing the final details of the scheme shortly.

My Department only recently completed its financial modelling. This had to await receipt of information from LPS about the latest revaluation position, as this affects the costing of the scheme. I have received the required advice within the last few days and am currently considering the matter.

On the issue of publicising the scheme, LPS has a communications strategy and plan in place, which will include meeting with key groups and raising awareness of the scheme in the run up to bills issuing next year.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration has been given to developing of an App for iOS and Android devices allowing members of the public to access government forms, transactions and tools such as booking a MOT test, calculate entitlement to benefits and pay a rates bill.

(AQW 37381/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: All 'Digital First' services delivered by NI Direct through the '16 by 16' Digital Transformation programme are being developed as 'responsive websites' to work on mobile devices such as smartphones and tablets as well as on desktop systems.

The development of standalone mobile apps will be considered once these services are fully deployed.

NI Direct will also cooperate with private sector organisations that wish to develop and release their own apps that can add value to NI Direct services.

Mr Agnew asked Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) for a breakdown of his Department's bids in the forthcoming October monitoring round; (ii) which bids for funding are inescapable or required to meet the Department's statutory obligations; and (iii) whether he will deposit a copy of his Department's bid in the Assembly Library for scrutiny ahead of the Assembly debate. (AQW 37450/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department submitted bids of £0.7m for inescapable pressures arising from legal cases and £2.3m for depreciation costs, both of which are deemed to be inescapable.

The bids are scrutinised by the Committee for Finance and Personnel, and the final decision is made by Executive members. I therefore do not propose to deposit a copy in the Assembly Library.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the cost of calls to directory enquiries from land line telephones from all Departments, in each of the last five financial years. (AQW 37453/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The table below includes expenditure by the Northern Ireland Assembly as well as Northern Ireland government departments.

Financial year	Expenditure
2009/10	Information not held
2010/11	£8,117
2011/12	£7,238
2012/13	£12,697
2013/14	£15,591

On the basis of knowledge of previous expenditure, I decided at the end of 2013/14 to ensure that directory enquiry calls should only use best value for money providers. The implementation of my decision has already impacted on the cost of using directory enquiries - expenditure for the first 6 months of the 2014/15 financial year is £2,567.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the cost of calls to the Speaking Clock from land line telephones from all Departments, in each of the last five financial years. (AQW 37455/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The table below includes expenditure by the Northern Ireland Assembly as well as Northern Ireland government departments.

Financial year	Expenditure
2009/10	Information not held.
2010/11	£1,327
2011/12	£1,355
2012/13	£2,336
2013/14	£2,714

On the basis of knowledge of previous expenditure, I decided at the end of 2013/14 to bar calls to the speaking clock across all departments.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what are the regulations in relation to the proximity of oil tanks to residential housing. (AQW 37460/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The regulations in relation to the proximity of oil tanks to residential housing are set out in The Building Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 (as amended), Part L- Combustion appliances and fuel storage systems, Regulation 75 – Protection of liquid fuel storage tanks, "Reasonable provision shall be made to ensure that a liquid fuel storage tank and connecting pipe work is so constructed and separated from adjacent buildings and the boundary of the premises as to reduce to a reasonable level the risk of the fuel contained inside it igniting in the event of a fire occurring in adjacent buildings or premises."

These regulations are available in the Assembly Library.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the total (i) domestic; and (ii) non-domestic rates revenue generated in the last five years.

(AQW 37503/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The total (i) domestic; and (ii) non-domestic rates receipts for each of the last five years is provided in the table below.

Domestic and Non-Domestic Receipts 2009/10 to 2013/14

Financial Year	Domestic Receipts	Non-Domestic Receipts
2009/10	£472,090,403	£533,525,810
2010/11	£497,797,021	£564,917,208
2011/12	£519,660,402	£574,730,510
2012/13	£545,098,392	£591,394,059
2013/14*	£572,433,720	£598,199,929

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what were the ten most frequented visitor attractions in 2013; and what was the change in visitor numbers from 2012 for each facility.

(AQW 37512/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Visitor numbers to visitor attractions are collected by the Northern Ireland Visitor Attraction Survey. This is a voluntary survey and the findings are thus based solely on the respondents choosing to participate. Visitor numbers for the top ten most frequented visitor attractions and the top ten most frequented country parks/parks/forests and gardens in 2013, their visitor numbers in 2012 and the percentage change is shown in the attached table.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the volume of (i) exports; and (ii) imports through local ports in each of the last five years.

(AQW 37617/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The tonnage of goods through ports in Northern Ireland for the last five years is provided in the attached table. This includes goods transported to and from Great Britain.

Table: Tonnage of goods through the principal ports in Northern Ireland

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, given the current budgetary constraints and that leavers cases appear to be resolved, whether he can provide an indication on the progress regarding the resolution of equal pay claims for PSNI and former Northern Ireland Office staff, further to his engagement with the Minister of Justice.

(AQW 37627/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As I have previously stated, it has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement, although I hope the paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before the summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff. However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure will require the approval of the Executive. I await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the measures his Department has taken in the October Monitoring Round specifically aimed at providing a boost to the construction industry; and (ii) any spending allocations in the next monitoring round which will support the construction industry.

(AQW 37629/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Written Statement to the Assembly on the October Monitoring Round detailed the Capital DEL allocations agreed by the Executive. This included a number of allocations that will benefit the construction sector.

The Executive has not yet considered the January Monitoring Round. However, I will advise the Assembly on its outcome once agreed.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what communication his Department has had with HM Revenue and Customs regarding a reduction in the rate of VAT for the hospitality sector.

(AQW 37640/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I believe a reduced VAT rate for the hospitality industry would bring a much needed boost not only to the hospitality industry, but also the wider tourism sector as a whole. That is why I brought a Motion to the NI Assembly in September 2012 that called on the Executive to pursue a separate VAT rate for the tourism/hospitality sector in Northern Ireland with HM Treasury. The previous Minister of Finance and Personnel subsequently raised this issue with the former Exchequer Secretary, David Gauke MP. The then Exchequer Secretary responded that any reduction in VAT would need to apply across the United Kingdom as a whole and that, in his view, the cost of lowering the rate of VAT for the hospitality sector would be too high. I have no indication that the Treasury position on this has changed.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people in (i) Northern Ireland; and (ii) East Londonderry are employed in the hospitality sector.

(AQW 37644/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is not possible to provide a comprehensive estimate of how many people in Northern Ireland and East Londonderry are employed in the hospitality sector. This is because the hospitality sector includes categories that are not separately identified within the UK Standard Industrial Classification system (SIC2007) used to classify business activity.

However, for information, the number of employee jobs in “accommodation and food service activities” as well as “convention and trade show organisers”, which is a broad definition of the hospitality sector, is provided in the attached Table 1 for the year 2013 (the latest available).

Table 1 Number of Jobs in Hospitality Sector

Year	Number of Employee Jobs in “Hospitality Sector” in East Londonderry	Number of Employee Jobs in “Hospitality Sector” in Northern Ireland

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the annual cost of welfare related spending by Executive Departments in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 37680/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The table attached at Annex A reflects the annual welfare related spending in each of the last ten years. Please note that the amounts provided for the years 2003-04 to 2012-13 are final outturn while the expenditure for 2013-14 is based on provisional outturn.

One caveat I would like to add is that the figures provided for the years 2003-04 to 2006-07 have been extracted from a former financial management system. However, every effort has been made to ensure comparability with the expenditure in the later years.

Annex A

Annual Cost of Welfare Related Spending from 2003-14 to 2013-14:-

	Benefits	Social Fund	Total
2003-04	3,466.0	73.8	3,539.8
2004-05	3,631.8	77.7	3,709.5
2005-06	3,711.6	77.5	3,789.0

2009-10	4,667.4	103.9	4,771.3

2011-12	5,039.3	71.5*	5,110.8

2012-13	5,298.5	68.4	5,367.0
2013-14	5,321.5	62.3	5,383.8

* The reduction in Social Fund expenditure in 2011-12 is largely due to a decrease in the amount of Winter Fuel Payment per household in that year combined with a reduction in the Cold Weather Payments due to a milder winter.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has any plans to introduce full parental leave pay for Civil Service employees.

(AQW 37741/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: No consideration has yet been given to whether to offer enhanced contractual pay to NICS employees who avail of shared parental leave.

The Work and Families Bill, which is currently progressing through the NI Assembly and has just completed its Committee Stage, will establish shared parental rights to leave from work and statutory shared parental pay in Northern Ireland. Subject to the Assembly process, it is anticipated that Northern Ireland's working parents will be able to avail of these rights in respect of children expected to be born, or adopted, from April 2015.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide a breakdown by Department on the monies surrendered since 2011 in each monitoring round due to budget and accountancy rules.

(AQW 37758/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The main principles which apply to the in-year monitoring of public expenditure in the 2014-15 financial year are set out in the guidance published on the DFP website. A link to this guidance is provided for ease of reference.

<http://www.dfpni.gov.uk/in-year-monitoring-of-public-expenditure-2014-15-guidelines.pdf>

Reduced requirements declared by departments are a consequence of departments complying with this guidance. All reduced requirements declared are detailed, by department, in the tables which accompany my Statements to the Assembly following each monitoring round.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in the event of a voluntary redundancy scheme for civil servants, how many employees in the 55-65 age group are likely to be eligible to apply.

(AQW 37780/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Northern Ireland Executive has asked the Department of Finance and Personnel to bring forward a range of proposals for strategic personnel interventions to effect a pay bill reduction including a voluntary exit scheme. It is important to stress that a voluntary exit scheme is only one of a range of measures to be considered.

DFP is beginning the process of engaging with departments to secure the information necessary to develop this range of proposals in more detail. The actual scale and scope of the required interventions will only be known once departmental budgets are agreed for 2015-16. At this early stage therefore, it is not possible to provide information on the detail of any exit scheme, including the eligibility of staff to apply.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much money is estimated to be in dormant bank accounts.

(AQW 37850/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Unclaimed Asset Register (UK) estimates that there is approximately £400m of unclaimed funds in UK banks and building societies.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much money from dormant bank accounts has been distributed to good causes in each of the last five years.

(AQW 37851/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: To date, none of the available funding from the Dormant Accounts Scheme has been distributed to local causes, as agreement is still required on the identified spending priorities.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35728/11-15 and AQW 36956/11-15, whether he will now answer the questions that have been asked.

(AQW 37853/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have nothing to add to my previous answers.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 36878/11-15, to detail each of the inescapable pressures which his officials had identified in each Department in preparation for the October Monitoring Round.

(AQW 37872/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Executive agreed to support a number of inescapable Resource DEL pressures in the October Monitoring Round, and full details are set out in my Statement to the Assembly on 13th October. The pressures deemed 'inescapable' and supported are consistent with my recommendations to the Executive which were based upon my consideration of the advice received from my officials.

Details of the Capital DEL bids and allocations agreed by the Executive as part of the October Monitoring Round were set out in my Written Statement to the Assembly on 28th October 2014.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his estimation of the revenue that would be generated from a 1 per cent increase in the regional rate in the next financial year.

(AQW 37958/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is likely that in the region of at least £7m additional revenue would result from a 1% increase to regional rate revenue.

Almost the same amount of additional revenue would result from a 1% increase to district rate revenue when estimated at a Northern Ireland level.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much additional resource the Executive would receive should the cap on household rates be removed.

(AQW 37959/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The removal of the maximum capital value would provide additional rates revenue for the Executive of just over £4 million a year.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how the incoming INTEREGG programme will benefit rural villages, particularly those located close to the border that may be eligible for any cross border co-operation measures.

(AQW 37971/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The draft INTERREG VA Programme worth €282m was submitted to the European Commission on the 22nd September. It is currently under review by the Commission, which will be followed by a negotiation stage with Member States, which may take up to six months.

The programme has identified its priority objectives as Research and Innovation, Environment, Sustainable Transport and Health.

It is anticipated that the first calls for funding will be announced in Spring 2015, when all stakeholders, including those in rural and border areas, will have an opportunity to apply for support from the programme.

Mr Attwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline any recent discussions she has had on the reinstatement of the Northern Ireland Aggregates Levy Credit Scheme.

(AQO 6995/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I wrote to the Exchequer Secretary, Priti Patel MP, on 11th September 2014 following the European Commission's announcement of its final decision on the Aggregate Levy Credit Scheme (ALCS). As the Commission found that the ALCS was compatible with the Environmental Aid Guidelines that applied at the time, I asked the Exchequer Secretary to agree that her officials work with their Northern Ireland counterparts to explore if and how a new scheme could be introduced. The Exchequer Secretary has agreed to this work being taken forward.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether consideration will be given to a rates relief scheme for traders who have been affected by disruption from the public realm works in North Down.

(AQW 37982/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have no plans to introduce a special relief scheme.

Under the existing rating system, however, ratepayers can apply to the District Valuer in LPS to reassess an individual valuation. Temporary allowances can be given if the works are of sufficient severity and duration to directly cause a loss of trade that is sufficient to affect annual rental values in the vicinity.

In practice this means that the works need to last for a considerable period of time (more than a few months) and ratepayers will have to apply and in most cases produce evidence of cause and effect. Each situation is treated on its own merits and the outcome will depend on the degree of disruption. For example, temporary allowances were given in Donegall Place, Belfast for the major Streets Ahead project but not for the public realm works in Strabane, Ballynahinch, Newcastle and Omagh.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he plans to introduce a single occupancy discount scheme, similar to those operated by some councils in Great Britain.

(AQW 37999/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: A single occupant discount was given detailed consideration by the Executive in 2007 and was rejected because it was adjudged that such a widespread discount was difficult to justify on grounds of cost, need and vulnerability to fraud.

I think these same considerations apply today and therefore I have no plans to introduce such a scheme.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on plans for a Northern Ireland Civil Service wide redundancy package, or voluntary exit scheme, in 2015.

(AQW 38118/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Northern Ireland Executive agreed a draft Budget on 30 October 2014. At this stage, departments are considering the impact that a range of strategic personnel interventions can effect towards a reduction in the NICS payroll.

The Department of Finance and Personnel, in close collaboration with other NI departments has begun the process of establishing the overall size of the pay bill reduction that needs to be delivered by the NICS and how this is to be achieved.

The Northern Ireland Executive asked the Department of Finance and Personnel to bring forward a range of proposals for strategic personnel interventions to effect a paybill reduction including a voluntary exit scheme. It is important to stress that a voluntary exit scheme is only one of a range of measures to be considered.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how his Department monitors the reliability of the Cavity Insulation Guarantee Agency scheme.

(AQW 38171/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department does not monitor the reliability of the Cavity Insulation Guarantee Agency scheme (CIGA).

CIGA is an independent organisation and its operations in Northern Ireland are limited to providing a guarantee for the retro-fitting of insulation into masonry cavities in existing properties.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many complaints on Cavity Insulation Guarantee Agency schemes his Department has received in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38172/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department is not aware of any complaints received about the Cavity Insulation Guarantee Agency (CIGA) Scheme in the last five years.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the average daily spend by tourists over the last five years.

(AQW 38202/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The average daily spend on overnight trips of (i) NI residents; (ii) non-NI residents and (iii) NI and non-NI residents combined over the last four years are detailed in the attached table. Figures prior to July 2010 are unavailable.

Table: Average daily spend (£) on overnight trips of (i) NI residents; (ii) non-NI residents and (iii) NI and non-NI residents combined.

Annual Period	(i) Average daily spend NI residents	(ii) Average daily spend non-NI residents	(iii) Average daily spend NI and non-NI residents combined

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the ratio of success to failure of new business start-ups in East Londonderry, in the last three years.

(AQW 38216/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This data is not currently available from the Office for National Statistics for parliamentary constituency area (PCA). However, the requested information is provided overleaf for those local government districts (LGD), which fall at least in part within the East Londonderry PCA, for the most recent three years available.

- 1 A business is deemed to have survived if having been a birth in year t or having survived to year t; it is active in terms of employment and/or turnover in any part of t+1
- 2 A birth is identified as a business that was present in year t, but did not exist in year t-1 or t-2.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the reasons for the lack of provision for future penalties, or for the development of an IT system, for Welfare Reform in the draft Budget 2015-16
(AQW 38225/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The draft Budget does not account for any future penalties, nor is there any cover for the development of a bespoke welfare IT system for Northern Ireland. The cost of doing both those things would have been around £200 million in 2015-16 alone which is an additional burden on departments that would not have been manageable.

The draft Budget sets aside £70 million for a package of measures to mitigate the impact of Welfare Reform. These measures will be refined as part of the ongoing talks and final Budget processes. This will ensure we can implement Welfare Reform, keep welfare payments happening in Northern Ireland and avoid the worst effects of Welfare Reform as they have happened across the water.

This approach of dealing with Welfare Reform as part of the talks process and simultaneously providing a package of measures within the draft Budget that will go a long way in mitigating the worst effects of Welfare Reform, is the right way to proceed.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what impact the reform of the public sector will have on pension provisions for arm's-length bodies.
(AQW 38226/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The reform of the public sector will have no impact on pension provisions for arm's length bodies.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) whether his Department operates a cycle to work scheme; (ii) whether staff can join the scheme at any time over a twelve month period; and (iii) whether the scheme is extended to non-departmental public bodies.
(AQW 38240/11-15)

Mr Hamilton:

- (i) DFP participates in the NICS Cycle to Work Scheme.
- (ii) The NICS Cycle to Work Scheme is open to all NICS staff all year round.
- (iii) The Scheme is a NICS Cycle to Work Scheme and therefore does not extend to NDPBs for whom the NICS is not their employer. However DFP, as the lead department on the NICS Scheme, provides advice and guidance to NDPBs on the establishment and operation of cycle to work schemes. This has included meeting with, giving advice and providing documentation to a number of NDPBs.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the total spent on capital and other projects which have not proceeded, broken down by each project and the loss, since May 2007.

(AQW 38299/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department incurred costs of £3.2m on Non-Domestic Revaluation 2007, which did not proceed due to market conditions in 2010.

This response is provided for the Department of Finance and Personnel only as the information for all departments is not held centrally. The Member should contact individual departments for their information.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 31802/11-15, whether the work of the panel has been completed; and if so, to detail (i) when; (ii) the outcome; and if not, when it will be completed.

(AQW 38302/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The work of the independent panel was completed on 2 May 2014. The outcome is not a matter for the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to list the publicly owned land and buildings which have been notified to Land and Property Services as being surplus to requirement over each of the last five years; and what is the current status of each asset.

(AQW 38450/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Land & Property Services (LPS) has been notified of 840 surplus land and property assets in the five years from November 2009 to November 2014.

A summary by year of notification to LPS is contained in Table 1. The full list of the surplus assets notified to LPS is contained at Table 2.

Information on the current status of each of the properties is not readily available and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost. Nevertheless, LPS has provided the status of these properties as it currently understands it. Where the status is unknown this has been indicated in Table 1.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he is aware of the concern of local companies, including small and medium-sized enterprises, regarding payment delays under the Property Management Plan Government Collaborative Framework Agreement 2014; and to outline how he proposes to address these concerns.

(AQW 38470/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department is not aware of any concerns having been raised regarding payment delays under the Property Management Plan Government Collaborative Framework Agreement 2014.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the resource spend in each of the last four financial years; (ii) the planned resource spend for 2014/15; (iii) a breakdown of the spend by annual management expenditure to departmental expenditure limit recategorisations; and (iv) the real terms spending figure, taking into account Treasury Gross Domestic Product deflators.

(AQW 38479/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The table below shows Final Outturn reported for 2010-11 to 2012-13, Provisional Outturn for 2013-14 and Forecast Outturn for 2014-15 for all Resource Expenditure in both AME and DEL. Resource expenditure adjusted to 2014-15 prices using GDP deflators is also detailed in the table below.

£m	2010-11 Final Outturn	2011-12 Final Outturn	2012-13 Final Outturn	2013-14 Provisional Outturn	2014-15 Forecast Outturn
Resource DEL	9,963.6	9,856.2	10,035.6	10,160.9	10,251.1
Resource AME	3,146.9	7,516.3	7,769.6	7,547.3	8,472.9
Total Resource	13,110.4	17,372.5	17,805.2	17,708.3	18,723.9
Real Terms Resource*	14,121.6	18,383.4	18,532.4	18,097.8	18,723.9

* with 2014-15 as the reference year

Totals may not add due to rounding

Resource AME spend in 2010-11 is significantly lower than in subsequent years as a consequence of the UK government decision to change from using the Retail Prices Index (RPI) to the Consumer Prices Index (CPI) for calculating uplifts to public sector pensions. This change resulted in a downward adjustment to Resource AME spend in 2010-11.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on progress being made on proposals from May 2014 to resolve outstanding issues related to the Civil Service Equal Pay Settlement.

(AQW 38523/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I refer the Member to my response given in AQW 37447/11-15.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38586/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel currently employs one part-time member of staff (0.65 full-time equivalent) in its Strategic Equality Branch.

The staff member is a Deputy Principal and the salary range for a full-time staff member at this grade is £35,190 - £39,675.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the Terms of Reference for the research on the economic impact of Welfare Reform, as suggested by his Department and the Executive.

(AQW 38620/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There has been much public debate in recent months around the economic costs and benefits of implementing or alternatively not implementing the welfare reforms contained within the Welfare Reform Bill. In order to provide further clarity, I have commissioned a study to examine this issue in greater detail.

The study is underway and I expect a report to be completed in the near future.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38665/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: No DFP employee, paid on either the Industrial or Non Industrial pay scales, is paid below £7.20 per hour.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how the public will be made aware of the relevant changes for rate payers under the new local government structure.

(AQW 38673/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The reform of local government in Northern Ireland presents a once in a lifetime opportunity for the new councils to better serve the communities they represent and it will be up to the new local councils to make their ratepayers aware of the benefits that will result. However, decreasing the number of councils from 26 to 11 will present immediate challenges, including the issue of the convergence of district rates. The Member may already be aware that I announced the final details of a scheme to manage this issue on 20th November.

Now that the final make-up of the Scheme has been announced, my Department will be making ratepayers aware of the support being provided to help ease the transition. The Scheme provides an automatic subsidy to domestic and non domestic ratepayers located in areas where district rates are relatively low. There is no need for anyone to apply for this, help and details will be provided in the rating leaflet that issues with the 'turn of year' rate bills. In advance of this, DFP will be producing an online factsheet and publicising details of the Scheme on its website.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the public consultation on a subsidy scheme for rate payers under the new local government structure.

(AQW 38674/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: On 19 November 2014 I announced the final detail of the scheme to manage the issue of rates convergence arising out of the new council structures.

The scheme will see the effects of rates convergence phased in over the full council term with an 80% subsidy applied next year (2015/16). This will remove 80% of the amount which has been identified as the "convergence" effect. That support will then be gradually phased out over the 4 year term and will be applied at increments of 60%, 40%, and 20% over the remaining years of the scheme.

These discounts will be automatically applied to the district rate shown on the rate bill from next year for the life of the scheme and therefore there is no need for anyone to claim it.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) each of his Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38713/11-15)

Mr Hamilton:

Number of Full Time Equivalent Staff

Year	Dept of Finance & Personnel	Special EU Programmes Body
2009/10	3125.29	65
2010/11	3313.79	65
2011/12	3305.28	65
2012/13	3240.15	65
2013/14	3349.37	57

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what progress has been made on resolving the issue of equal pay for Department of Justice and former Northern Ireland Office staff.

(AQW 38768/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I refer the Member to my response given in AQW 37447/11-15.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much his Department has spent on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss, in the last five years.

(AQW 38803/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The amount spent by the Department of Finance and Personnel on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss is contained in the table below.

Financial Year	Total Cost
2009/10	£1,296
2010/11	£1,500
2011/12	£3,416
2012/13	£2,535
2013/14	£2,672

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 37672/11-15, how in practice is the Utility Regulator held accountable to the Assembly.

(AQW 38869/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Utility Regulator is accountable to the Northern Ireland Assembly through financial and annual reporting obligations. The work of the Utility Regulator is subject to scrutiny by Assembly Committees and its office is accountable to a Board, whom I am responsible for appointing. The Utility Regulator also publicly consults on its work plan each year and publishes an annual report which is laid in the Assembly.

In accordance with the requirements of relevant European Directives the Utility Regulator, like equivalent regulatory authorities, is legally distinct and functionally independent from any other public or private entity.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how he plans to safeguard the highest skilled workers following the voluntary redundancy schemes that will be introduced as part of public sector reforms.

(AQW 38957/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Northern Ireland Executive has asked the Department of Finance and Personnel to bring forward a range of proposals for strategic personnel interventions to effect a pay bill reduction including a voluntary exit scheme. It is important to stress that a voluntary exit scheme is only one of a range of measures to be considered.

The Department of Finance and Personnel, in close collaboration with other Northern Ireland Civil Service Departments, has begun the process of establishing the overall size of the pay bill reduction that needs to be delivered by the Northern Ireland Civil Service and how this is to be achieved.

The selection criteria for any voluntary exit scheme has yet to be decided.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the rationale for using public money to subsidise all free prescriptions for people who indicate they would be able to afford them, at a time when frontline health and social care services are under such significant pressure.

(AQW 38254/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The decision to abolish prescription charges from 1 April 2010 was supported by all the parties in the Assembly. Since the charge was abolished the number of prescription items has increased from 33.4million items in 2009 (the last complete calendar year before charges were abolished) to 38.7million items in 2013. This increase is within the normal historical rate of increase.

However, the ingredient cost per prescription has decreased and as a result the overall cost of prescription drugs has decreased by 9% since 2010/11.

However, I have indicated that in light of the current financial position I am considering the reintroduction of a prescription charge which could be used to support frontline services and new treatments. Any proposal to reintroduce prescription charges would be subject to the agreement of the Executive and would be subject to a full public consultation.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a detailed breakdown of the £600,000 of savings, as referred in the Assembly on Monday 3 November 2014, that will arise as a result of the temporary closure of Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle.

(AQW 38292/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Trust expects to make the following savings as a result of the temporary closure of 12 MS Respite beds and 20 Intermediate Care beds in Dalriada Hospital. The savings plan will apply until 31 March 2015.

Cost Savings for Intermediate Care (Inc MS Respite) – Dalriada Hospital

Nursing Costs	405
Goods & Services Costs of Ward	31

Ward Costs	Cost Savings for 4 months from 01/12/2014 £'000

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the £8.5m allocation in the 2014 October Monitoring Round will support the Infrastructural Support Programme.

(AQW 38396/11-15)

Mr Wells: The £8.5m allocation, which is part of the £80m allocated to my Department in the June and October Monitoring Rounds, is being used to fund a range of Departmental priorities:

£1.4m will be made available for Northern Ireland's contribution to a number of nationally-led schemes, such as NHS Blood/Organ Transplant and the National Institute of Biological Standards and Control (part of MHRA).

£3m will be made available for grants to voluntary and community sector bodies and the Family Fund.

£4.1m will be made available for a range of other priorities, such as providing additional funding to support GMC training needs, enabling a programme of innovative pharmacy initiatives, such as Phase 1 of the SBRI project, Departmental reviews (including the Child Sexual Exploitation Inquiry and the review being led by Sir Liam Donaldson), Departmental input to the Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry and support for the provision of health visiting.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether funding has been sought or received from the Commissioning Group for additional staff in the Emergency Department in the South West Acute Hospital since it opened.

(AQW 38408/11-15)

Mr Wells: The allocation of funding for health and social care services is a matter for the Health and Social Care Board, as service commissioner, in discussion with the Health and Social Care Trusts. The Western Health and Social Care Trust is developing a business case for investment in nursing and medical staff which will be presented to the commissioner when completed.

The Trust has not considered opening an additional ward in the South West Acute Hospital to reduce waiting times in the emergency department; there are escalation processes in place to manage any increase in emergency care demand. The emergency department of the South West Acute Hospital is the highest performing Type 1 emergency department in Northern Ireland; in September 2014, 96.5% of patients were treated and discharged, or admitted to a ward, within four hours and no-one waited longer than 12 hours.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what specialist resources, including staff, are available at the Robinson Community Hospital, Ballymoney, for Multiple Sclerosis patients and their families.

(AQW 38429/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are currently no Multiple Sclerosis (MS) specialist services provided at Robinson Community Hospital. However, two staff members have previously worked within the MS respite centre in Dalriada Hospital. Any equipment resources that are not already available within Robinson Hospital could be transferred from Dalriada as necessary.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consultation his Department had with patients of the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre at Dalriada Hospital, and their families, prior to and following its temporary closure.

(AQW 38430/11-15)

Mr Wells: Following my budget statement on Thursday 30 October 2014, the Northern Health and Social Care Trust contacted MS service users and families from the Northern Trust area to advise them: of the temporary closure of 12 Multiple Sclerosis respite beds in Dalriada Hospital; and, that relevant key workers would be in contact to arrange appointments to meet and discuss options for their future respite care.

These initial meetings have now been completed and the Trust continues to liaise with service users as required. The Trust has also liaised with the Western Trust and Belfast Trust regarding the change.

Senior Management of the Trust attended Dalriada Hospital on Thursday 30 October and engaged with patients and staff. The Trust further met with Moyle Council representatives on Monday 3 November and attended a public meeting on the same evening. Ongoing communication is also taking place with the MS Society.

The Trust will continue to do all it can to communicate with all stakeholders to ensure everyone understands the service options now available to them.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has funded the opening of beds in community hospitals in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust for the services of Multiple Sclerosis patients, since 1 November 2014.

(AQW 38431/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is the Northern Health and Social Care Trust which is responsible for services in its area and their funding.

Those who require MS respite continue to have access to a range of respite options including a hospital bed if indicated.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how long his Department will provide funding for the reopening of four beds at Robinson Hospital, Ballymoney.

(AQW 38432/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board commissions an intermediate care service from the Northern Health and Social Care Trust which is largely provided in local community hospitals and also in some residential and nursing homes. One facility offering intermediate care is the Robinson hospital in Ballymoney. There are currently 21 beds on the Robinson site.

Prior to November 2013, there had been 25 beds on the Robinson site. However, in light of improvements to length of stay, the Trust was able to reduce the bed complement to 21 at that time.

There are no plans at present to re-open four beds on the Robinson site.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) each of his Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38454/11-15)

Mr Wells: The full time equivalent number of staff in my Department and each of my arm's length bodies, at 31st March in each of the last five years are detailed below:

2. Departmental figures are shown as Full Time Equivalent (FTE) at 31 March each year and have been sourced from Departmental HR records.
3. HSC figures are also shown as FTE at 31 March each year and Information Analysis Directorate, NISRA statisticians have provided the data for the HSC bodies.
4. NIFRS do not hold FTE figures for retained employees therefore this figure is a headcount figure at 31 March each year.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37650/11-15, why the original answer to AQW 36829/11-15, irrespective of the distinct processes for referring patients, did not reference the surgery that took place at providers outside of the Health Service.

(AQW 38469/11-15)

Mr Wells: The answer to AQW 36829 provided information on the number of patients referred for treatment through the Extra Contractual Referral process, which is the Health and Social Care Board's primary mechanism for providing specialist treatment in the UK or abroad where it cannot be provided locally. This information is held centrally by the Health and Social Care Board and can readily be interrogated.

Information on the number of patients referred for treatment as part of the independent sector/waiting list initiative is held at specialty level. Although the Western Health and Social Care Trust has provided this information at sub-specialty level, the Health and Social Care Board has advised that this information could only be provided, primarily by the Belfast Trust, at disproportionate cost.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many referrals were made to the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle in each of the last ten years, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38474/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of referrals made by each Health and Social Care Trust to the Multiple Sclerosis Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital is not collected centrally.

Information is however available on the number of admissions to Dalriada Hospital with a primary diagnosis of respite care by the patient's trust of residence, which is detailed in the table below.

Notes:

Figures relate to admissions rather than individuals as such an individual may be admitted to hospital more than once during the year or across years and will be counted for each admission.

Cell sizes less than 5 have been recoded to 3 to protect patient confidentiality.

- 1 Admissions are estimated using deaths and discharges.
- 2 Respite Care has been defined using the International Classification of Disease (revision 10) code Z75.5, in only the primary diagnostic position.
- 3 HSC Trust of residence refers to the patient's Local Commissioning Group which is based on the patient's postcode.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the services that will be cut by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust as a result of the £5m shortfall in the current budget.

(AQW 38483/11-15)

Mr Wells: The main services which are expected to be affected as a result of the £5m shortfall in the current budget are as follows:

- There will be temporary closure of 6 beds in Ward 14 in Lagan Valley Hospital
- There will be temporary closure of 9 beds in Downe Hospital, and medical and cardiology beds within the two remaining twenty bed wards will be consolidated.
- There will be temporary closure of 20 beds in Bangor Community Hospital.
- The Bangor Minor Injuries Unit in Bangor Community Hospital will be temporarily closed and will be consolidated at the Minor Injuries Unit at Ards Community Hospital.
- A new nurse led weekend Minor Injuries service scheduled to commence in Autumn 2014 at Lagan Valley Hospital has been postponed.
- Elective care treatments will be focused on urgent procedures.
- There will be a reduction in domiciliary care places, as the Trust will now replace only 2 out of every 3 domiciliary care packages. This change has been risk assessed and patients with the highest needs will be prioritised.

These contingency plans are to apply until the end of March 2015. The decisions taken by the Trust reflect what is achievable in maintaining safety and minimising costs between now and the end of the financial year.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to Bangor Community Hospital, to detail the cost of (i) maintenance; (ii) new capital works; and (iii) all associated operational costs, such as utilities, in 2013/14.

(AQW 38487/11-15)

Mr Wells: In 2013/14, the maintenance costs for Bangor Community Hospital were £40,000, the new capital works costs were £659,000 and all associated operational costs were £140,695.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what work is being completed to retain and expand maternity services in the South West Acute Hospital.

(AQW 38493/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust is committed to the development of maternity services at the South West Acute Hospital in line with my Department's Regional Maternity Strategy and will continue to work closely with the Health and Social Care Board to develop this service. The delivery of safe quality maternity services is a key part of the Hospital's overall portfolio of services.

The Trust submitted an "Options Paper to Ensure Sustainable Medical Staffing of the Obstetric and Paediatric Units at the South West Acute Hospital" to the Health and Social Care Board and Public Health Agency in January 2014. The Trust was then asked to provide a further paper, and a follow-up paper was submitted in July 2014 and is currently awaiting a decision from the Board.

While this decision is pending, the Trust has funded temporary and agency medical staff to ensure compliance with the Safety and Quality Learning Letter.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the required savings to be made by each Health and Social Care Trust to ensure they are brought within budget by March 2015.

(AQW 38500/11-15)

Mr Wells: As both these questions relate to savings to be made by each Health and Social Care Trust, a combined response has been provided.

Below is the list of contingency plan proposals for each of the Trusts. These lists exclude measures to contain goods and services expenditure and administration costs which are being managed locally within Trusts in order help achieve break even and also their original savings proposals from the start of 2014/15, as their contribution to the overall Departmental savings target of £170m. It is expected that there will be an element of movement in these plans, as implementation progresses.

Note 6 – Roe Valley to continue to provide services; savings will be delivered through elective care spend reductions

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 38061/11-15, what steps the Northern Health and Social Care Trust are putting in place to ensure that the staff who are “temporarily” relocated from the Dalriada Hospital, return to the same post, when it reopens in 2015.

(AQW 38505/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am advised by the Northern HSC Trust that all staff affected by the service change have been asked to complete a displaced officer proforma. This enables staff to state their preference of employment base for the duration of the temporary change.

A database is then retained of all staff which includes their band, hours and permanent base and where they are transferring to for the duration of the service change. This will enable staff to be easily identified to return to Dalriada Hospital.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what annual budget each of the Health and Social Care Trusts set aside for translation and interpreter services for foreign nationals at GP practices.

(AQW 38510/11-15)

Mr Wells: Following the regional Review of Language Interpreting and Translation Services in 2013 the funding of language interpreting services for patients requiring access to all health and social care services, including GP Practices, is provided by the HSCB.

The HSCB has set aside a budget of £2.8m in 2014/15 to fund this service. There is no specific budget set aside for GP Practices.

In addition, there is no annual budget set aside for written translation services as all HSC organisations, including GP Practices, pay for written translations as required.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) how the recent budget cuts will impact on the levels of elective surgery at Downe Hospital; (ii) whether these budget cuts will impact on any elective surgery has been scheduled to be performed at Downe Hospital after 1 December 2014.

(AQW 38581/11-15)

Mr Wells: This is a temporary closure of 9 beds in the Downe Hospital, in line with other changes taking place across Northern Ireland due to the ongoing financial pressures. The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust is putting additional measures in place at the Ulster Hospital to address the increase in demand that happens naturally over the winter period and these additional measures will help to absorb any impact from the bed reductions in the Hospital. While there will be a reduction of 1 elective theatre list cardiac and medical services will continue to be provided in the Downe. My priority is to ensure that the services provided continue to be safe and effective and the Trust has provided assurances that their services will remain so.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of how the proposed reduction of services at Downe Hospital will affect service quality provided to the people of South Down and North Down.

(AQW 38582/11-15)

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment on how the closure of nine beds in Downe Hospital will impact on the Ulster Hospital; and whether additional resources and beds have been made available in the Ulster Hospital.

(AQW 38583/11-15)

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what how his Department will ensure that any individual affected by the closure of the Independent Living Fund in June 2015 has access to free independent advocacy and advice.

(AQW 38599/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department provides funding to a range of voluntary sector organisations, including Disability Action, who provide information and advice to people on disability related issues.

More widely, my Department published Developing Advocacy Services – A Guide for Commissioners in May 2012, together with an associated Action Plan. The guide aims to help commissioners better understand and develop advocacy services in Northern Ireland, by introducing a number of principles and standards to underpin future commissioning and delivery. Independence is one of the key principles and this is also reflected in the standards.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to ensure there is adequate public access to minor injury units; and how many of these units will remain open to the public.

(AQW 38617/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Trusts' contingency and savings plans include proposals for the temporary closure of the minor injuries units at Bangor Community Hospital, Whiteabbey Hospital and Armagh Community Hospital. The minor injuries units at Ards, Mid Ulster, South Tyrone and Tyrone County Hospitals will remain in operation. A weekend minor injuries service operates at the Downe Hospital. People who are unable to access a minor injuries unit can contact their GP or the GP Out of Hours service or attend their local emergency department.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department carries out any assessment of productivity levels within the Health Service; and if so, to detail how productivity levels (i) have changed over the last ten years; and (ii) compare with the private health sector.

(AQW 38619/11-15)

Mr Wells: In relation to productivity levels for the Health Service in Northern Ireland, my Department feeds into UK statistics compiled by the Office of National Statistics, the latest version of which was published in December 2012.

<http://www.ons.gov.uk/ons/rel/psa/public-sector-productivity-estimates--healthcare/2010/index.html>

Year	UK Healthcare Productivity Index (1995=100)
2000	100.2
2001	102.6
2002	100.5
2003	101.5
2004	102.2
2005	104.6
2006	107.7
2007	107.1
2008	108.4
2009	107.2
2010	106.2

There is no comparable figure for the private health sector.

My Department has participated in previous reviews such as those undertaken by PEDU, Professor Appleby and McKinseys. The Department has achieved £490 million of savings over the last three years, with a further £170m anticipated in 2014/15.

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether an assessment has been completed on the number of 'unnecessary' visits to Emergency Departments and GP practices each year; and how his Department is encouraging alternatives or more responsible use of these services.

(AQW 38621/11-15)

Mr Wells: No data is held on the number of 'unnecessary' visits to Emergency Departments and GP practices. However, more responsible use of Emergency Departments and GP Practices is encouraged through various initiatives such as the Choose Well Campaign, the Ask the Pharmacist Week, the Self Care Week and the quality and productivity service domain within the Quality and Outcomes Framework that GP Practices can contract to provide as part of their General Medical Services contract.

More responsible use of Emergency Departments and GP Practices is encouraged through various initiatives such as the Choose Well Campaign, the Ask the Pharmacist Week, the Self Care Week and the quality and productivity service domain within the Quality and Outcomes Framework that GP Practices can contract to provide as part of their General Medical Services contract.

The Choose Well campaign aims to create a better understanding among the general public of what medical care services are available to them, how and when to access these services appropriately. If people pick the service most appropriate to their symptoms, it means they get the right treatment and this also helps to manage finite health and social care services resources. An omnibus survey was carried out at the end of the 13/14 campaign to assess the effectiveness of the advertising across Northern Ireland. The evaluation demonstrated that:

- 87% of people felt that the advertising performed very well on 'communicating clearly';
- 77% of people felt aware of full range of medical care services; and
- 76% of people felt more able to choose appropriate medical care service.

In terms of attitude change, the evaluation demonstrated that advertising had been very successful in changing attitudes on the subjects of trying to 'use a pharmacy for quick advice on minor issues'; 'only use the GP out of hours service for urgent matters' and 'phone 999 if I had chest pains or breathing difficulties'.

The Choose Well campaign will run again this year building on the awareness raised during last year with a targeted focus on self care/pharmacy; GP Out of Hours service; Minor Injuries Units and appropriate use of Emergency Departments. It will also raise awareness around mental health and where to seek support and help. A mass public information campaign will be publicised via a wide range of media such as TV, advertising posters, distribution of leaflets across various public bodies and facilities, adverts in the press and supported with the use of NI Direct website and social media.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a breakdown of (i) the day bed cost for an intermediate care bed in (a) Dalriada Hospital in Ballycastle; (b) Robinson Hospital in Ballymoney; and (c) Inver Hospital in Larne; (ii) the day bed cost of an intermediate care bed in a care home with no nurses; and (iii) the cost of an acute hospital day bed and amount spent on day beds in Emergency Departments.

(AQW 38627/11-15)

Mr Wells:

- (i) The cost per patient day in Dalriada, Robinson and Inver hospitals in 2012/13 and 2013/14 is:

	2012/13	2013/14
Dalriada	£267	£322
Robinson	£260	£284
Inver	£395	£310

(2013/14 costs have yet to be validated)

- (ii) Although the cost of any individual residential home placement can vary significantly between different homes or different programmes of care and depends upon individual case complexity, the average cost per social care placement in residential homes in 2012/13 was:

	Per week	Per day
Statutory residential homes	£1,399	£200
Independent residential homes	£ 538	£ 77

Approximately 85% of all residential social care home packages are in the independent sector. Intermediate placements may have different cost characteristics than social care placements

- (iii) The average cost per patient day in an acute hospital, across all clinical specialties, was £647 in 2012/13. The average cost per patient day in accident and emergency departments in 2012/13 was £652 and total inpatient expenditure in A&E was £4,924k. These costs include all healthcare inputs (including the cost of any operations) and overheads.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the annual budget of each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38660/11-15)

Mr Wells: The annual budget of each Health and Social Trust for current and capital expenditure in each of the last three years is detailed below:

Current Expenditure	2013/14 £'m	2012/13 £'m	2011/12 £'m
Northern HSC Trust	593.0	602.6	581.5

Southern HSC Trust	45.5	26.8	20.7
NIAS	4.2	3.9	3.4
South Eastern HSC Trust	46.6	23.5	24.5

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38666/11-15)

Mr Wells: No DHSSPS employee is paid below £7.20 per hour;

No Health and Social Care (HSC) employee is paid below £7.20 per hour.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 37834/11-15, to detail the range of measures which are in place to minimise medicines and supplies wastage in each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38675/11-15)

Mr Wells: Each of the HSC Trusts has a number of measures in place to minimise medicines wastage. These include, for example, a One Stop Dispensing system whereby a patient's own drugs are assessed and if suitable for use will be used during the hospital stay. On discharge the medicines will, if appropriate, be returned to the patient. Trust dispensed medicines not required by the patient at discharge are returned to the hospital pharmacy and are assessed for reuse. If it is safe to do so they can be put back into stock and be used again. Hospital pharmacies also have measures in place to manage their stock of medicines to ensure that the volume of medicines passing their expiry date is kept to a minimum.

My Department is currently developing a Medicines Optimisation Quality Framework. One of the key challenges which the framework seeks to address is medicines wastage and the framework will set objectives for monitoring and reducing waste across various care environments. It is hoped to issue the framework for consultation early in the New Year.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration has been given to the establishment of an acute coronary care unit at South West Acute Hospital in Enniskillen.

(AQW 38678/11-15)

Mr Wells: There is an acute coronary care unit in the South West Acute Hospital.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether beds have been closed in Loane House or recommendations made to divert patients to other facilities from 1 May to 31 October 2014; and if so, why this was permitted prior to the closure of the consultation.

(AQW 38707/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Southern Health and Social Care Trust has not closed any beds in either Loane House or Lurgan Hospital. During the summer period this year there were a number of empty beds in both hospitals due to decreased demand, however at no time were beds closed to admissions.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the differing levels of support available for patients with prostate cancer in each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38714/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) commissions a range of treatment from HSC Trusts for patients with prostate cancer. The specific treatment and support will vary according to the individual patient and the stage or severity of their disease. Treatments include surgery, radiotherapy, chemotherapy, hormone therapy as well as follow up, palliative and supportive care.

It is the responsibility of the HSCB and HSC Trusts to ensure that prostate cancer services are up to modern quality levels. Trusts continue to work closely with both the statutory and voluntary sectors to ensure that regional and national recommendations for improving services for prostate cancer are supported.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he or his officials have had any discussions in relation to relocating General Practice services currently located in Bangor town to the site of Bangor Community Hospital. (AQW 38726/11-15)

Mr Wells: While the South Eastern Local Commissioning Group has agreed that there should be a primary care “hub” to serve the population of Bangor and this is reflected in the Strategic Implementation Plan (SIP) for the Primary Care Infrastructure Development Programme, the location of any such “hub” has not yet been determined.

The SIP is currently under consideration and along with meeting other capital priorities will be dependent on the outcome of future budget exercises and confirmation of value for money.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what funding his Department, and its arm’s-length bodies, have provided to support programmes which train people with a disability on issues related to sexual health and general wellbeing.

(AQW 38733/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally. Health and Social Care organisations commission a range of services for people with a disability and a range of programmes to promote sexual health and wellbeing, many of these services are accessible to people with a disability. Examples of specifically funded relevant services include: a funding allocation of £57,160 in 2013/14 to support the Family Planning Association’s ‘Just Ask’ programme, which aims to improve the sexual health of people with learning difficulties; funding of approximately £10,000 for the “Health for Youth through Peer Education” group to deliver sexual health programmes to 122 young people with learning disabilities studying at Belfast Metropolitan College; and funding of £5,000 to deliver a training programme on ‘Personal and Sexual Relationships’ to staff working with those with a learning disability.

Furthermore, in line with the objectives of my Department’s Physical and Sensory Disability Strategy and Action Plan 2012-2015, the Public Health Agency is leading on action to ensure the needs of people with disabilities are considered in the design and development of health promotion programmes and campaigns. Trust-funded programmes include, for example, staff working with adults with a learning disability and assisting them in accessing a range of health and wellbeing programmes such as sports and healthy cookery programmes.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessments or assumptions have been made of the additional impact of patients staying longer in the Ulster Hospital, as a result of the temporary closure of twenty beds in Bangor Community Hospital.

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust is putting additional measures in place at the Ulster Hospital to address the increase in demand that happens naturally over the winter period and these additional measures will help to absorb any impact felt from the temporary bed reductions in the Bangor Hospital.

My priority is to ensure that the services provided continue to be safe and effective and the SEHSCT has provided assurances that their services will remain so.

The Trust will ensure that they closely monitor all plans and their impact on an ongoing basis.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessments or assumptions have been made of the additional cost to the Ulster Hospital as a result of displacement arising from the temporary closure of the twenty beds at Bangor Community Hospital.

(AQW 38743/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Trust has assessed that on average, 10 to 12 patients who no longer require an acute hospital bed, but who do require a few days to complete their treatment, are transferred from Ulster Hospital to Bangor Community Hospital per week. The Ulster Hospital has put a range of measures in place to help manage this change, including:

- Using winter pressures funding to provide additional temporary beds which will address increases in winter activity;
- Piloting a frail elderly assessment facility to improve management of this group of patients through the hospital system; and
- Continuing with ongoing work to improve efficiency of both hospital and community services to deal with year on year increases in demand.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what are the funding consequences of the current austerity measures for the various diabetes care and support programmes; and how a common standard of service will be assured.

(AQW 38748/11-15)

Mr Wells: The increasing number of people diagnosed with diabetes presents a challenge to Health and Social Care to ensure that services are in place that support high quality treatment and care for those living with the condition. Patient education programmes, both condition-specific and generic, continue to be provided during the current year to support people with long term conditions.

Existing Diabetes services for both children and adults, such as the CHOICE structured patient education programme, will continue to be funded. In addition the HSCB has recently approved funding for a series of Integrated Care Partnership initiatives to improve care for diabetes patients across Northern Ireland. A range of initiatives is currently planned across LCG areas, including:

Diabetic and pre diabetic case finding and management in primary care in Southern Trust; and Implementation of diabetic foot care pathway in the Western Trust.

Proposed service developments for 2015/16 and beyond will however be subject to further scrutiny and consideration in the context of their relative priority in comparison to other service proposals and the overall funding position in the next financial year.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many foot protection teams are operative in each Health and Social Care Trusts in regard to treatment for patients with diabetes; and whether there is a common standard of provision across Northern Ireland.

(AQW 38749/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are currently no dedicated foot protection teams for clients with diabetes within the HSC Trusts. Podiatrists in Northern Ireland work with clients with a wide range of conditions, including diabetes. All podiatry services follow agreed care pathways for the treatment of clients with diabetes and access to podiatry is prioritised and based on clinical need. Some podiatrists work with clients as part of a multi-disciplinary team, while others work as part of a virtual team to ensure the needs of diabetic clients are met as deemed necessary for the stage of their condition.

The headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE) numbers of podiatrists employed by each Health and Social Care Trust is shown in the table below.

Trust	Headcount	WTE
Belfast HSC Trust	66	53.3
Northern HSC Trust	60	47.5
South Eastern HSC Trust	40	32.3
Southern HSC Trust	38	28.9
Western HSC Trust	37	32.0
Total	241	194.1

Source: Human Resources, Payroll, Travel & Subsistence system

Notes:

1. These figures are as at 31st March 2014, and exclude bank staff, members of staff with a WTE of less than 0.03, and those on career breaks.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide a complete breakdown of contingency plans spread across all Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 38752/11-15)

Mr Wells: A list of Contingency Plan proposals, put forward by each Health and Social Care Trust (excluding NI Ambulance Service) has been included in the Publications section of the Department's website which can be accessed at <http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/hsc-contingency2014-15.pdf>.

These lists of proposals exclude measures to contain goods and services expenditure and administration costs, which are being managed locally within Trusts in order to help achieve break even. They also exclude the original savings proposals from the start of 2014/15, which were part of the Trusts' contributions to the overall Departmental savings target of £170m.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what input the Health and Social Care Board had in determining where cuts would be made in relation to implementing contingency plans across all Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 38753/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSCB (in conjunction with the PHA) has reviewed, analysed and revised as appropriate the contingency plan proposals submitted by the Trusts, prior to consideration by the Department.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether an Equality Impact Assessment was conducted in relation to the contingency plans put forward by Health and Social Care Trusts to ensure the vulnerable and disadvantaged do not face discrimination.

(AQW 38754/11-15)

Mr Wells: Trusts are carrying out equality screenings on the individual local decisions within their contingency plans. Where the evidence of a screening indicates that an EQIA is necessary it will be completed in accordance with each Trust's Equality Scheme and the Equality Commission's guidance.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he is taking to ensure that recent contingency plans announced by Health and Social Care Trusts do not unduly disadvantage new applicants seeking domiciliary care packages.

(AQW 38755/11-15)

Mr Wells: Domiciliary care packages are provided on the basis of a full professional assessment of the needs of the individual, which is carried out by fully trained health and social care professionals.

Trusts are reviewing their current domiciliary care provision to ensure the highest priority needs are met within the current resources. Day to day implementation decisions will be taken based on individual assessed need and risk assessment.

Following the conclusion of the October Monitoring Round, £8m has been allocated to Transforming Your Care implementation for 2014/15. These monies will support a range of measures which will help to meet the care needs of our growing and ageing population and enhance the provision of care closer to home, and will allow HSC Trusts to sustain increases in levels of domiciliary care provided.

The safety and quality of care provided to vulnerable people remains one of my highest priorities.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the impending cuts to the Fire Service, what action he is taking to ensure that these cuts will not negatively impact on response times.

(AQW 38756/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) has been asked as part of the Department's planning process for 2015/16 to develop a range of savings proposals that could deliver the best possible outcomes under three scenarios, 5%, 10% and 15% reductions.

NIFRS will be required to risk assess and prioritise these proposals on the basis of those that minimise the impact on service delivery.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much his Department has spent on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss, in the last five years.

(AQW 38762/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total spend by this Department on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss, in the last five years, is set out in the table below, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

	2013/14 £	2012/13 £	2011/12 £	2010/11 £	2009/10 £

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he intends to publish a strategy for children's palliative care.

(AQW 38778/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department's Strategy for Children's Palliative and End-of-Life Care in Northern Ireland is in its final drafting stage, and I am aiming to publish it by the end of this year.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can provide an assurance on the future retention of Ards Fire Station.

(AQW 38796/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) has been asked as part of the Department's planning process for 2015/16 to develop a range of savings proposals that could deliver the best possible outcomes under three scenarios, 5%, 10% and 15% reductions.

NIFRS will be required to risk assess and prioritise these proposals on the basis of those that minimise the impact on service delivery.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can provide an assurance on the retention of three fire engines in Knock Fire Station, Belfast.

(AQW 38797/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) has been asked as part of the Department's planning process for 2015/16 to develop a range of savings proposals that could deliver the best possible outcomes under three scenarios, 5%, 10% and 15% reductions.

NIFRS will be required to risk assess and prioritise these proposals on the basis of those that minimise the impact on service delivery.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the respite services provided by each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38811/11-15)

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he can confirm that The Cottages adult respite facility in Derry City will remain operating as a residential facility.

(AQW 38812/11-15)

Mr Wells: I can confirm that the Adult Respite Cottage will remain operational as a residential respite facility for adults with a learning disability.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether care parents and carers of children with complex disabilities is a 'life-saver' to the Health Service and should have fair access to respite facilities.

(AQW 38813/11-15)

Mr Wells: I readily acknowledge the very significant role that families and carers have, along with healthcare professionals, in caring for children with complex disabilities. Clearly fair access to respite services provides a vital level of support to carers and this presently take place on the basis of individually assessed need.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety To detail the number of (i) Health Service; and (ii) privately operated care homes in East Londonderry, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38823/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA). Their response can be found in the table below.

Table 1. Number of Registered Cares Homes in the East Londonderry Constituency by Sector<sup>1</sup>

Date	Sector	Nursing Homes	Residential Care Homes	Total
Nov-12	Private	12	6	18
	Statutory	0	2	2
Nov-13	Private	12	7	19
	Statutory	0	2	2
Nov-14	Private	11	7	18
	Statutory	0	1	1

- 1 RQIA does not record information by parliamentary/ NI Assembly constituency area. Therefore, the breakdown provided is based on town and postcode information.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how often the Regulation Quality and Improvement Authority (RQIA) are required to complete individual inspections of private care homes; and for his assessment of the rationale behind care homes being given prior notice of impending RQIA inspections.

Mr Wells: Under the Regulation and Improvement Authority (Fees and Frequency of Inspections) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005, RQIA is required to conduct a minimum of two inspections in every 12 month period at nursing, residential care and children's homes. These inspections may be announced or unannounced.

Whilst the majority of RQIA's inspections are unannounced, announced inspections provide RQIA an opportunity to receive information from the service in advance of inspection, which is then validated through inspection. These also provide friends, family members, residents/patients and visiting professionals an opportunity to be present in the home during an inspection and to share their experiences of the service with the inspector.

Where RQIA is following up concerns or disclosures, including those raised by whistleblowers, the associated inspections are unannounced.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the assessment process for patients with Dementia who require to be located in a care home with Elderly Mentally Interfered provision, to ensure that they are placed in the most appropriate environment to cater for their individual needs.
(AQW 38828/11-15)

Mr Wells: All people with dementia are given a person centred assessment. Decisions relating to the most appropriate placement for an individual are based on professionally assessed need. A medical recommendation is sought from a Consultant Psychogeriatrician to decide whether the older person would need to be placed in an EMI Residential or EMI Nursing Home in order to meet their assessed needs.

Many people with dementia may be suitably placed in general nursing and residential settings and that the guiding principle is one of least restriction. Over time, people's care needs may alter and a transfer to a different setting may have to be considered. This again will be on the basis of professionally assessed need and any move will be fully discussed at a formal Care Management review with the individual and family.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the reasons for the cancellation of the pilot project of self-referral to physiotherapy, given its importance to Transforming Your Care.

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board is working with providers to address increasing waiting times for physiotherapy and other Allied Health Profession services. When the current waiting time challenge has been addressed, the HSCB has indicated that it will seek to immediately introduce the proposed self-referral arrangements for physiotherapy.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 10910/11-15, for an update on the status of Bangor Hospital Diabetes Clinic.

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that Bangor Hospital Diabetes Clinic runs every Wednesday and alternative Thursdays. There are currently no plans to change this service.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the level of prescription drug use; and to outline the steps his Department is taking to address prescription drug addiction.
(AQW 38888/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of prescription items recorded per head of population in Primary Care in Northern Ireland is higher than in England and Scotland but is lower than the figures for Wales.

The Health and Social Care Board has put a range of measures in place to tackle prescription drug addiction. For example, the Board has established a Prescription Drug Misuse Group which was set up to share information and best practice in relation to the management of patients prescribed drugs which have the potential for abuse. Medicines Management Advisers address the issue of medicines with the potential for addiction or abuse in their regular visits to GP practices. The Board has also developed Prescribing Audits, Reviews and Guidelines to support GP practices in reducing the inappropriate prescribing of analgesics.

Each of the five Health and Social care Trusts has Community Addiction teams and substitute Prescribing Teams in place to work with patients who require support to withdraw safely from prescribed medication.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the proposed establishment of primary care talking therapies hubs in each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38889/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board is at the start of a five year plan to establish Primary Care Talking Therapies Hubs across each Trust area. The Hubs will focus on providing a range of psychological therapies (such as counselling, cognitive behavioural therapy and psychotherapy) and lifestyle support for people who are experiencing common mental health problems. The Hubs are being developed around General Practice and when fully developed will improve access to earlier support and care.

An initial investment of £1.4m has been made to support the establishment of the Hubs, which will extend the range and scope of psychological therapies available across mental health services.

A pilot in west Belfast demonstrated real benefits to this approach, and is now being rolled out across the city. All other Trusts are in the process of applying the lessons learned from this pilot in order to bring these benefits to all parts of Northern Ireland.

It is intended to strengthen the links between these developing Primary Care Talking Therapy Hubs and existing Family Support Hubs, which will create real opportunities to strengthen both family and community-based approaches to good mental health and wellbeing.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust in receipt of (i) residential care packages; (ii) meals service care packages, and (iii) home help care packages, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 38890/11-15)

Mr Wells:

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps his Department is taking to encourage a culture of awareness and early intervention in mental ill-health in young people, in order to promote alternatives to pharmacological interventions.

(AQW 38891/11-15)

Mr Wells: A Regional Model for Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) was published by my Department in 2012. It focuses on early intervention and is currently being implemented. Progress includes the recent establishment of Primary Mental Health Teams in each Trust area to promote the emotional health of children, young people and families in the community. These teams identify mental health and developmental problems in children and young people early in their development and work across boundaries to develop a coordinated response for children's mental health between agencies.

The Public Health Agency (PHA) commissions and supports a range of services to promote better mental health at an individual and community level. This activity includes the design and delivery of mental health public information campaigns, often with a focus on young people, to address mental health stigma, improve awareness of mental health issues, and encourage help seeking behaviour.

Recent investment has also been focused on the establishment of Primary Care Talking Therapy and Wellbeing Hubs across the region in order to improve access to low intensity psychological care and help deliver more effective intervention at an early stage which, in turn, should reduce reliance on pharmacological interventions.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will ensure that dementia patients with challenging behaviour will continue to be cared for at Ash Villa at the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital; and that dementia patients with less challenging behaviour, or who are being assessed, will be cared for in separate but suitable accommodation within the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital in line with current provision in Oak Villa.

(AQW 38896/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust have advised me that they are driving forward the reform and modernisation of their Older People's Mental Health services. The main aims of the reform programme include the prevention of unnecessary hospital admissions and maintaining older people in their home as long as possible, in keeping with both the regional Dementia Strategy and Transforming Your Care.

As part of this work, the Trust have introduced a community-based challenging behaviour service, which has led to a significant reduction in occupancy rates and demand for in-patient beds at the Tyrone & Fermanagh Hospital. On the 14th October 2014, the occupancy rate in the in-patient dementia challenging behaviour facility (Ash Villa) was 20% (4 patients and 16 vacancies).

To meet the changing needs of patients and carers, it is proposed that the Assessment Centre at Oak Villa will transfer to Ash Villa where the number of assessment beds will increase from 10 to 12 beds, with staffing levels adjusted accordingly.

Ash Villa has a more spacious environment, in keeping with dementia design principles and will improve the patient experience for those who require hospital admission.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail any lessons which he may have learned from his visit to Cuba as the then Deputy Chairperson of the Committee for Health, Social Services and Public Safety; and whether, in his capacity as Minister, he will apply any of the lessons learned, including how to achieve better health outcomes whilst protecting front line services.

(AQW 38897/11-15)

Mr Wells: A report on the study visit to Cuba, undertaken by the then Chair and myself as Deputy Chair of the Health Committee, is contained in the Health Committee's Review of Health Inequalities report dated January 2013. This report with its nine recommendations in turn helped to inform the development of the strategic framework for public health "Making Life Better."

Whilst the broader socio-economic contexts, cultures and health systems of Northern Ireland and Cuba differ, some general comparisons with the Cuban system are reflected in the strategic direction provided by both Making Life Better and Transforming Your Care, for example – the emphasis on giving every child the best start, greater focus on prevention and early intervention, shifting services from hospitals to more treatment and support in primary care and local communities.

The health and social care system is a key health determinant, and a key lesson from Cuba is the need to maximise the potential of the front line health and social care workforce in relation to public health. This is reflected in Making Life Better which has "prevention embedded in services" as one of the key long term outcomes.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to ensure the new neonatal ward in Antrim Area Hospital meets Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority standards for infection control.

(AQW 38919/11-15)

Mr Wells: The project planning team for the new extension to the Neo Natal unit in Antrim Area Hospital has included advice and expertise from the Infection Control Nursing Team and Clinical Neonatologists. Plans for the unit have included, at all stages of the design and construction, recommendations from the Regional Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) Report following the Public Enquiry in to the spread of Pseudomonas in Belfast and Altnagelvin.

The existing unit has been, and continues to be, audited internally against these standards by the Infection Control Team and validated externally by the RQIA Hygiene Inspection Team. This RQIA audit tool provides on-going clinical and environmental standards that will be transferred to the new build.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients have had a urological diagnostic biopsy procedure cancelled at the Causeway Hospital in November 2014 due to a surgeon not being available to carry out the procedure; and to detail what he is doing to address this.

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that earlier this month due to unexpected staff leave 12 diagnostic biopsy procedures were cancelled. The Trust will be advising these patients when their appointments will be rescheduled as soon as possible. The Northern Trust is currently working in partnership with the Western Trust to create further capacity for Northern Trust urology patients to avoid any future cancellations.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail any changes in the Minor Aliments Scheme in the last three years.

(AQW 38924/11-15)

Mr Wells: The operation of the Minor Aliments Scheme is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care Board. I have been advised that within the last three years, the scheme has been extended to include the treatment of Cold Sores, Mouth Ulcers and Inflammation, Oral Thrush and the removal of Ear Wax.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, considering the recent report highlighting that the use of anti-depressant drugs are the highest in Northern Ireland compared to the rest of the UK; what action his Department will take to promote alternatives to drug therapy.

(AQW 38926/11-15)

Mr Wells: National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) guidelines state that psychological therapies are an effective way of managing depression and anxiety – conditions for which antidepressants are commonly prescribed. In line with this, the Psychological Therapies Strategy, published in 2010, recommended that psychological therapies should be a core component of mental health services. At present, around £6.5m is invested on dedicated psychological therapies. Recent investment has been focused on the training of existing staff in psychological therapies and the establishment of Primary Care Talking Therapies Hubs.

Primary Care Talking Therapies Hubs bring together GPs, Mental Health Clinicians and Third Sector Providers into a single service consortium. These primary care hubs will improve access to low intensity psychological care and help to deliver more effective intervention at an early stage with the aim of reducing reliance on pharmacological interventions. The HSC Board is committed to incrementally developing these hubs as a new way of working over the next three years.

It is important, however, to prevent people from developing a mental illness in the first place. Much of the work being undertaken by the Public Health Agency to promote positive mental health in childhood will help prevent the onset of mental illness in adolescence and adult life. This includes parenting programmes for vulnerable families, together with school-based interventions to promote empathy, eliminate bullying, and develop stronger mental resilience.

Finally, my Department also provides funding, through the mental health promotion and suicide prevention strategies, to provide non-pharmacological support and recovery services for people who are in psychological crisis, including a number of mental health awareness and support initiatives for young people in each Trust area.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to introduce universal alcohol screening for people who attend appointments with healthcare professionals.

(AQW 38927/11-15)

Mr Wells: Research has shown that screening and brief interventions for alcohol misuse in healthcare settings is effective in helping individuals to reduce their consumption and harm, and therefore supporting the roll-out of these is a key outcome in my Department's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2. The Public Health Agency and the Health and Social Care Board lead on the implementation of this outcome and they have indicated that, rather than a universal programme of screening, international best practice is now indicating that targeted approaches are more effective.

I have already put in place a clinical priority for the provision of brief interventions for alcohol misuse in Primary Care settings. This has led to almost 80,000 people being screened for alcohol misuse in 2012/13 and 2013/14, and those that are identified as having a problem are then provided with a brief intervention or referral to appropriate services.

My Department is also supporting the roll-out of Substance Misuse Liaison Services in acute hospitals. These help to identify those who attend with conditions that are not necessarily alcohol related but where substance misuse is the underlying cause and provide them with appropriate support to change their behaviours. It is anticipated that the additional funding for this service will enable work to be undertaken on screening within Emergency Departments, although the budget position is limiting potential roll-out.

All pregnant women are asked about alcohol intake at their booking clinic and given advice regarding alcohol in pregnancy. If a woman reveals excess alcohol consumption she will be referred to the appropriate services. The Public Health Agency is also developing a screening and brief intervention programme in partnership with the Probation Board for Northern Ireland and this is expected to begin in early 2015.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the policy on vacancy control in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 38932/11-15)

Mr Wells: Recruitment matters and associated policies are the responsibility of Health and Social Care Trusts, as employers.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that all vacant posts require to be examined in light of the current financial position. All posts assessed as business critical will be approved and will be processed through normal recruitment, all other posts will either be delayed or remain unfilled.

The Trust has provided an assurance that in all circumstances it will prioritise the filling of vacancies to ensure that patient/client care is not compromised.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average bed occupancy rate in (i) Ards Community Hospital; and (ii) Bangor Community Hospital, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38933/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the average bed occupancy rate in Ards Community Hospital and Bangor Community Hospital is published on an annual basis in the Northern Ireland Hospital Statistics: Inpatient and Day Case Activity publication (Table 2a) and is available to view or download from:

<http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/hospital-activity/inpatient-and-day-case-activity.htm>

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many jobs have been filled by the South Eastern Health Trust in each of the last twelve months, broken down by (i) Administrative and non-medical jobs; and (ii) medical jobs.

(AQW 38934/11-15)

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) when he sought Executive agreement to commission and fund the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland to develop an e-safety strategy and action plan; (ii) what response he has received; and (iii) what deadline he has set for implementation to commence.

(AQW 38953/11-15)

Mr Wells: In accordance with the protocol governing the confidentiality of Executive business, I am unable to respond to the questions asked. I look forward to progress on this issue shortly.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the training provided to Emergency Department staff in recognising the signs of post-traumatic stress disorder.

(AQW 38956/11-15)

Mr Wells: There is no specific training for Emergency Department staff with regard to Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). However, as part of professional development, staff working in Emergency Departments can access a number of courses relating to Mental Health, including the provision of psychological care for people with PTSD.

If an acute episode occurs during a patient's attendance at an Emergency Department the action taken will include consultation with colleagues in Mental Health and referral to Mental Health teams for further assessment and follow-up.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he is aware of the significant demand for, and usage of, palliative care beds at Tyrone County Hospital; and whether his Department will intervene to ensure that the number of palliative care beds will be retained at ten and not reduced to six.

(AQW 38976/11-15)

Mr Wells: My priorities are to ensure the services provided by Health and Social Care are safe and effective and to ensure that my Department achieves financial balance, as is required of all Ministers. To achieve these aims, Health and Social Care Trusts have produced a range of contingency proposals to achieve financial break even. Each Trust has provided assurances that their services will remain safe and effective.

The Western Health and Social Care Trust has advised that its decision to temporarily reduce the number of beds in the palliative care ward in Tyrone County Hospital from ten to six reflects current usage.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the financial commitment his Department will undertake in relation to implementing the recommendations in the Marshall Report.

(AQW 38982/11-15)

Mr Wells: A Response Team is being established to consider the recommendations from the Marshall report in detail. As part of that consideration, I have asked for an assessment of the cost of delivering those recommendations, which relate to Health and Social Care.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has entered into discussions with the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to determine the likelihood of temporary reductions in services at Downe Hospital becoming permanent; and if so, for an assessment of his findings.

(AQW 39021/11-15)

Mr Wells: There has been ongoing dialogue between officials of my Department and the South Eastern Trust since the Trust announced its contingency plans, which includes the reduction in beds at Downe Hospital. The contingency plans are to apply until the end of March 2015. In the interim consideration will be given to plans for 2015/2016 in the context of the overall budgetary position.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the Western Health and Social Care Trust is conducting a consultation on the proposed redesign of older people's mental health inpatient and day care services in the southern sector, when staff were informed on 18 November 2014 that the Ash Ward is closing on 7 December 2014, regardless of the consultation.

(AQW 39051/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised me that the consultation document for staff affected by the proposed redesign of older people's mental health services includes a proposed date of 7th December 2014 for change of use for Ash Villa.

As this consultation process does not close until 3rd December 2014, the Western Trust cannot make any further comment until after this time.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, since admissions ceased at Dalriada Hospital, how many extra beds have been used at (i) Causeway Hospital; and (ii) Altnagelvin Area Hospital; and to detail the extra cost these admissions have entailed compared to if they had been admitted to Dalriada Hospital.

(AQW 39052/11-15)

Mr Wells: It has not been possible to identify how many extra beds have been used at (i) Causeway Hospital or (ii) Altnagelvin Area Hospital since admissions ceased at Dalriada. However, we do know that there have been no patients transferred from Dalriada Hospital to either Causeway Hospital or Altnagelvin Area Hospital since 1st November 2014.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when local charities will receive outstanding infrastructural funding.

(AQW 39072/11-15)

Mr Wells: Due to financial pressures, the allocation of core funding made to voluntary and community organisations earlier this year has been less than had been allocated in previous years. The interim letter of offer made it clear that any additional funding depended on the absence of any other constraint, whether of a policy, financial or other nature.

Now that the budget for 2014/15 is agreed, I hope to be able to make and communicate a final decision on core grant funding to voluntary and community sector organisations shortly.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail any plans for the future of Slievemore Nursing Unit in Derry.

(AQW 39083/11-15)

Mr Wells: My predecessor asked the Western Trust to engage in a mediation process with the families of patients in Slievemore Nursing Unit patients in April 2014, following a proposal to close the facility as part of the Trust's redesign of older people's mental health services.

This mediation process remains ongoing and to maintain the confidentiality of discussions between the Trust and patients' families, I am unable to comment further until the process is complete.

I understand that the Trust will make a statement about the outcome of this process in due course.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of how budget constraints will impact the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS); and what communication he has had with the NIFRS regarding the constraints.

(AQW 39093/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) has been asked, as part of the Department's planning process for 2015/16, to develop a range of savings proposals that could deliver the best possible outcomes under three scenarios, 5%, 10% and 15% .

NIFRS has been asked to risk assess and prioritise their savings proposals to minimise the impact on service delivery.

My officials are engaged in ongoing communications with NIFRS.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of recorded incidences in (i) Northern Ireland; and (ii) East Londonderry, which have been attended by the Fire and Rescue Service, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 39094/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of mobilisations by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue in Northern Ireland and East Londonderry in each of the last three years was:

	Northern Ireland	East Londonderry
2013/14	24,049	1,186
2012/13	24,308	1,232
2011/12	27,150	1,478

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the use of electronic cigarettes; and to detail what impact the growing use of electronic cigarettes is having on the prevalence of smoking of traditional cigarettes.

(AQW 39108/11-15)

Mr Wells: There have been relatively few studies into the health effects of electronic cigarettes (e-cigarettes) and those studies that have been undertaken have provided inconsistent and contradictory results. Furthermore, due to the relatively recent development and use of e-cigarettes, there are no research findings on their long-term health impact. Therefore, no firm conclusions can be drawn on the safety of these products and they cannot be regarded as safe, even though they may be less harmful than tobacco cigarettes.

The e-cigarette market is currently unregulated; this is a concern because the use of those products could cause nicotine addiction in children. Consequently, to prevent children and young people from accessing these products, my Department has included provisions in the draft Health (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill which will provide regulation-making powers to prohibit the sale of e-cigarettes to under 18s.

There are currently around 2.1 million e-cigarette users in the UK. The first results of the 2013/14 Northern Ireland Health Survey show that one-third (33%) of current smokers or recent ex-smokers had used e-cigarettes. Of those respondents, 12% said that e-cigarettes had helped them to quit smoking, while 44% used them to reduce the number of traditional cigarettes smoked.

However, the evidence remains clear that a combination of specialist smoking cessation services and licensed nicotine replacement therapy is the most effective means of quitting smoking.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) when; and (ii) how he became aware of each Health and Social Care Trust's financial contingency plan for the remainder of 2014/2015.

(AQW 39109/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have been aware about the financial challenges within Trusts since I took up office and I was advised of the final contingency plans for the Health and Social Care Trusts on 27 October.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why dementia care was downgraded in the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital.

(AQW 39149/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised me they are driving forward the reform and modernization of their Older People's Mental Health Services. The main aims of the reform programme include the prevention of unnecessary hospital admissions and maintaining older people in their home as long as possible in keeping with both the Regional Dementia Strategy and Transforming Your Care.

An alternative community based challenging behaviour service which has been in place in the southern sector of the Trust since June 2012 has led to a significant reduction for the need for inpatient beds.

To meet the changing needs of patients and carers, it is proposed that the Assessment Centre at Oak Villa will transfer to Ash Villa where the number of assessment beds will increase from 10 to 12, with staffing levels adjusted accordingly.

Ash Villa has a more spacious environment, in keeping with dementia design principles and will improve the patient experience for those who require hospital admission.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to the Multiple Sclerosis (MS) patients who are booked in to the MS Respite Centre in Dalriada Hospital from January to March 2015, whether their bookings are secure; and to clarify what is deemed a new admission.

(AQW 39308/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust advise that for those patients who had already been booked in for respite care at the MS Respite Centre after the temporary closure of the unit, suitable alternative arrangements are being identified. These include the use of direct payments, local independent sector provision for individuals, or local bed-based group provision to facilitate groups of friends. In-reach services provided to service users whilst they receive respite at Dalriada, such as podiatry, dentistry, and physiotherapy will continue to be provided in the alternative setting decided upon.

There will be no new admissions to the MS Respite centre itself after 30 November 2014 however respite services to MS patients will continue to be provided and everyone who requires respite will receive it.

Department of Justice

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of staff employed in his Department broken down by grade; and (ii) the total salary for each grade, for each financial year since 1 April 2010.

(AQW 35513/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I am writing to correct an error contained in my answer of 19 September 2014 to an Assembly question which you tabled in relation to the number of staff employed in my Department broken down by grade, namely AQW/35513/11-15. Our response referred to 2471.43 staff in the DOJ and its Agencies at 12 April 2010. This should have read 2372.93 staff.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Justice how much it costs to have a PSNI presence at the Short Strand, Belfast.

(AQW 38608/11-15)

Mr Ford: The PSNI has advised that officers are policing the East Belfast interface on a nightly basis, but has not been able to provide a cost breakdown in the allocated timeframe. At present, however, the area is covered each evening by one sergeant and five constables. That is being kept under review and can fluctuate depending on the circumstances.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37316/11-16 whether he will investigate this further and raise the matter with the Public Prosecution Service and the PSNI with a view to establishing how much income in total was gained, including what was paid by those to whom the workers were supplied.

(AQW 38642/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is clear to me from the exchanges I have had with the PSNI and the Gangmasters' Licensing Authority that the issue of income and assets was considered.

A meeting took place on 20 November between my Department, PSNI, Gangmasters Licensing Authority and the Public Prosecution Service to discuss a range of general issues relating to this type of case.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) how a person deemed dangerous under the 2008 NI Act is managed and monitored in the community; (ii) how their management differs from non-dangerous categorised offenders; and (iii) which agencies are involved in monitoring and management, including who takes the lead role.

(AQW 38644/11-15)

Mr Ford: Offenders sentenced under provisions in the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2008 are supervised on release by Probation Board for Northern Ireland (PBNI) in accordance with the offender's licence requirements.

All offenders assessed, under PBNI's Risk of Serious Harm Policy and Procedures, as posing a significant risk of serious harm to the public will have their risk level and their response to risk management interventions regularly reviewed throughout the licence period, until such time as they are assessed as no longer posing such a risk.

Those who have been convicted of offences which meet the eligibility criteria for assessment and risk management under the multi-agency Public Protection Arrangements (PPANI), are also assessed and reviewed by the Local Area Public Protection Panels which may comprise agencies listed in Article 49(1) of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2008.

In those PPANI cases, PBNI will remain as the lead agency until the expiry of the licence period. If, at that point, an individual continues to be subject to sex offender notification or Sexual Offences Prevention Order requirements, PSNI will become the lead agency for ongoing risk management.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many new intake prison officers were employed in each month of the last two years.

(AQW 38647/11-15)

Mr Ford: The total number of new prison grade staff employed in the last two years is 331 broken down as follows:

Month Appointed	Custody Prisoner Officer	Prisoner Custody Officer	Custody Prisoner Officer	Prisoner Custody Officer
	2012/2013		2013/2014

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the (i) number; and (ii) annual cost of staff employed in his Department's Equality Unit.

(AQW 38654/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice does not have an Equality Unit. Statutory and other equality responsibilities and duties are co-ordinated for the DOJ by the Information Services Division. The DOJ's Personnel and Office Services Division leads on diversity for the Department. Equality issues will also feature in day to day HR operational matters. Equality and diversity issues are therefore delivered by a number of staff alongside other duties. An estimated figure of £40k per year would cover the staffing costs to deliver on our equality commitments.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Justice how many ex-serving soldiers are currently serving prison sentences in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 38684/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently four sentenced prisoners in custody, who have self-declared their previous occupation, recorded on the Prison Record Information System as "Protective Service – Armed Forces". The system does not record whether or not the prisoners are ex-serving soldiers.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) each of his Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38700/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice came into existence on the 12 April 2010 and information can only be provided from this date.

The information requested can be found in the table attached at Annex A.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the Sexual Offences Prevention Orders terms imposed on John McDermott following his release from prison and sex offender categorisation.

(AQW 38709/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Data Protection Act 1998 gives individuals certain rights in relation to personal information held on them by public authorities. The information regarding sex offender classification cannot be provided as disclosure of sensitive personal data would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Sexual Offences Prevention Orders (SOPOs) are civil orders applied for to the court by police. Information about SOPOs is therefore a matter for the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board. You may therefore wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the cost to date in legal aid in respect of the case of 14/10965 at Dungannon Crown Court and formerly at Dungannon Magistrates Court, including any mixed committal proceedings, broken down by solicitor and counsel.

(AQW 38710/11-15)

Mr Ford: Case 14/10965 does not refer to a case listed in Dungannon Crown Court. It appears that the appropriate case is 14/109656.

To date, no costs have been paid in respect of the Crown Court proceedings.

In respect of the magistrates' court proceedings, a total of £2,998.14 has been paid to five solicitors. Whilst legal aid was extended to allow representation by junior counsel at the magistrates' court, no costs have yet been paid. Legal aid was granted to a total of nine separate solicitors and nine junior counsel were instructed in the course of the proceedings in the magistrates' court.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Justice (i) what percentage of Departmental Expenditure Limits is spent on salaries; and (ii) how he intends to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38737/11-15)

Mr Ford: The percentage of cash Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) spent on salaries, including national insurance and pension costs, in the Department of Justice in 2013-14 was 71.4%. This includes Executive Agencies but excludes Executive Non Departmental Public Bodies. Judicial salaries and temporary agency staff costs are included in the calculation.

An exercise has been commissioned across the Core Department and its four agencies in relation to paybill budget reductions and associated reductions in posts and people. In addition to asking for robust estimates of anticipated staff surpluses by grade and the timescales for staff to be released to inform planning for a Northern Ireland Civil Service wide voluntary exit scheme, a number of other measures are also being carefully considered. The measures include permanent suppression of funded vacancies, postponement of recruitment and promotion and reduction of overtime costs.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37422/11-15, whether he will bring forward legislation to revise the criteria for leave to proceed with a judicial review, particularly given the costs in legal aid, and with closer scrutiny paid to the validity of a case at the earliest possible stage in proceedings in all instances.

(AQW 38780/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are no plans to revise the criteria for leave to proceed with judicial review, which are set by both statute and case law. It is for the judge dealing with the application to scrutinise the validity of the leave application and whether the applicant has presented an arguable case.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many new intake prison officers have (i) resigned; (ii) been dismissed; and (iii) gone on long term sick leave, in each month of the last two years.

(AQW 38781/11-15)

Mr Ford: The total number of Custody Prison Officers (CPO) and Prisoner Custody Officers (PCO) who have resigned in the last 24 months is 64.

Three CPO's were dismissed and 91 CPO's and PCO's have been on long term sickness absence during the last two years.

The table below details the sickness absence and resignation figures for the period between 1 November 2012 and 31 October 2014.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the seizure and forfeit of an uninsured vehicle goes along with court penalties and not instead of reduced penalties or as financial mitigation toward these penalties.

(AQW 38782/11-15)

Mr Ford: Police powers to seize uninsured vehicles and court powers to deal with the offence of driving without insurance are separate provisions in law. Police may seize an offender's vehicle where proof of insurance cannot be provided and may issue an endorsable fixed penalty notice. If a vehicle is seized and a fixed penalty notice issued then the offender must pay the release fee (if the offender wishes the vehicle to be returned) as well as the fixed penalty sum.

Alternatively the offence can be prosecuted in Court. Driving without insurance attracts a sentence of between 6 and 8 penalty points; a fine of up to £5000; and/or 6 months imprisonment on summary conviction, with a discretionary disqualification from driving.

If a vehicle has been seized the release fee does not reduce the fixed penalty sum nor any fine imposed by the Court.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Justice how much his Department has spent on interpreting services for people who are deaf or have a hearing loss, in the last five years.

(AQW 38804/11-15)

Mr Ford: Expenditure on interpreting services is not always recorded in a way that makes it possible to separate potential sign language expenditure from other interpreting expenditure without incurring disproportionate cost.

Identified expenditure on interpreting services for the Department of Justice (DOJ) including its Executive Agencies but excluding its Executive Non Departmental Public Bodies since its formation in April 2010 is shown in the table below.

The table also includes the amounts recouped from the Department of Employment and Learning (DEL) under a scheme called 'Access to Work'. This scheme provides financial support to enable people with disabilities to gain work or remain in employment. Under the scheme the DOJ can recover the costs of sign language interpreters from DEL.

Financial Year	Spend £	Recouped from DEL £	Net Spend £
2010/11	14,573	(6,945)	7,628
2011/12	19,041	(3,638)	15,403
2012/13	19,644	(3,995)	15,649
2013/14	8,269	(840)	7,429

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice what information his Department holds on the number of illegal immigrants convicted in local courts of criminal offences; and what liaison his Department maintains with the Immigration Office on the illegal immigrants that are subsequently deported.

(AQW 38817/11-15)

Mr Ford: The prosecution and conviction datasets held by the Department of Justice do not currently contain information in relation to the immigration status of the defendant.

The deportation of illegal immigrants is a reserved matter and as such my Department does not have any liaison with United Kingdom Visas and Immigration (UKVI) on this issue.

UKVI is, however, represented on the Immigration and Human Trafficking sub-group of the Organised Crime Task Force (OCTF) and the Department does maintain close liaison with UKVI in the context of the work of that sub-group, whose main focus is tackling human trafficking.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many people, including young people, have been categorised as dangerous as per the 2008 NI Act; and to list each conviction that led to this categorisation.

(AQW 38834/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since the commencement of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2008 there have been 31 indeterminate custodial sentences and 200 extended custodial sentences on the basis of the dangerousness of the offender.

Across the same period, four discretionary, and 71 mandatory life sentences have also been imposed.

Provision of information on the charges relating to each of these convictions would incur disproportionate costs.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the reasons for the bar on an appeal of the sentence handed to Dwayne Mullan.

(AQW 38843/11-15)

Mr Ford: Section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 allows the Director of Public Prosecutions to seek leave from the Court of Appeal to review a sentence as being unduly lenient.

The legislation applies to cases in which sentences have been passed on people convicted of offences heard only on indictment (that is, by a Judge and jury at the Crown Court); or cases in which sentences have been passed on people convicted of other offences specified in orders under section 35 of the 1988 Act.

I am in the process of reviewing the legislation in this area and plan to issue a consultation document in the New Year.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 37161/11-15, to provide a copy of any reports on this matter, or place a copy in the Assembly Library.

(AQW 38849/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Youth Justice Agency is currently reviewing this case and is due to report to me shortly. Following this, I will write to you regarding this matter.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice whether he was (i) aware of; and (ii) gave permission for the contract by which drug testing is conducted in prisons was continued beyond its expected end date of September 2013.

(AQW 38872/11-15)

Mr Ford: The operation of the drug testing contract was a matter for the Scottish Prison Service. NIPS was informed of the contract extension and was agreeable to this. This contract has now been issued for re-tender.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice when Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 will be implemented.

(AQO 7053/11-15)

Mr Ford: I remain keen to give effect to the will of the Assembly that, under Section 30 of the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, police widows remarrying after 1 January 1989 should retain, or have reinstated, their pensions.

My officials are continuing to work to urgently resolve some outstanding matters, including eligibility, financial implications and affordability. While I am not yet in a position to give a definite timescale for resolution, I am working with a view to commencing payments at the very earliest opportunity.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the use of the Royal Prerogative of Mercy.

(AQO 7054/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Royal Prerogative of Mercy is an ancient power originally exercised by the reigning monarch to enable the withdrawal of the death penalty, but today Government Ministers exercise the prerogative to show mercy towards an offender by mitigating or removing the consequences of his conviction by way of 'pardon'.

I have not used the Royal Prerogative.

Generally requests may be made by prisoners who believe they are wrongly convicted. The use of the prerogative would only be a real possibility if new evidence came to light which demonstrated conclusively that a prisoner did not commit the offence and if the criminal justice system itself failed to deliver a just outcome in those circumstances.

Any modern use in such cases would more than likely come on the advice of the Criminal Cases Review Commission, which is empowered by section 16 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 to recommend the use of the prerogative or to respond to requests from me on issues relating to it.

Prisoners may also request a remission pardon to reduce their sentence, perhaps due to a mistake surrounding their release date. In such cases I would weigh a duty to ensure the full completion of every sentenced prisoner's term of imprisonment against the reasonable expectations of each individual prisoner and his family.

Relevant factors would include the length of time the prisoner was misled as to his release date, the length of time by which a sentence would be reduced if the prerogative was granted and the plans he and his family had made based on the original release date.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice what savings will be realised annually by closing Holywood PSNI station to the public. (AQW 39156/11-15)

Mr Ford: Management of the police budget and police estate are operational matters and therefore the responsibility of the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Policing Board. I must respect the operational autonomy and independence of the Chief Constable.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development, for an update on the answer to AQO 6558/11-15, in light of any legal advice received.

(AQW 37158/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): My Department has received legal advice on this issue. My Department will continue to inspect roads and footways as per the normal inspection regime and defects will be recorded as normal. However, due to the current financial constraints, defects may not be repaired as quickly as normal with repairs being prioritised on the basis of safety.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what cash reserves are held by the Belfast Port Authority.

(AQW 38169/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Belfast Harbour Commissioners indicate a current cash balance of £10 million. It is anticipated that this money will fund a number of Harbour development schemes, subject to Board approval.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether signage must be in place to highlight fixed speed detection cameras.

(AQW 38266/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There is no legal requirement to place signage to indicate that speed cameras are ahead.

However, the current practice is to provide signs for reasons of visibility, to give motorists the opportunity to slow down and observe the speed limits at the locations in question. This is in line with the overall intention of providing safety cameras, which is to change driver behaviour by reducing speed and thereby reducing the number and severity of collisions.

Where signs are provided, they must either comply with the Traffic Signs Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1997, or be authorised for use in accordance with the Road Traffic Regulation (NI) Order 1997.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of compensation claims for (i) personal injury; and (ii) damage to motor vehicles in the last ten years.

(AQW 38277/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the cost of compensation for (i) personal injury; and (ii) damage to motor vehicles, in the last ten years, are set out in the table below:

	Personal Injury	Vehicle Damage
2004/2005	£1,567K	£154K
2005/2006	£1,629K	£162K
2006/2007	£1,332K	£136K
2007/2008	£1,942K	£136K
2008/2009	£1,635K	£166K
2009/2010	£1,674K	£215K
2010/2011	£1,921K	£314K
2011/2012	£1,926K	£345K
2012/2013	£1,882K	£128K
2013/2014	£2,084K	£231K

	Personal Injury	Vehicle Damage
Total	£17,590K	£1,987K

The amount of expenditure paid in any specific year does not necessarily relate to claims received in that year, as there may be a time delay between the date a claim is received and the date it is settled.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are plans to resurface roads in (a) Silverstream Crescent; (b) Silverstream Drive; and (c) Silverstream Avenue, Bangor.

(AQW 38345/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Unfortunately, my Department's programme of works has been curtailed due to budgetary constraints arising from the outcome of the June and October monitoring process which is administered by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Whilst Silverstream Crescent, Silverstream Drive and Silverstream Avenue, Bangor are not currently included in my Department's 2014/15 resurfacing programme for the North Down area, this programme may be subject to change if additional funding becomes available.

Should additional funding become available, my officials will continue to assess the relative priority of these locations alongside others when identifying schemes to be brought forward into the works programme.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what additional preparations have been made in advance of any exceptionally severe weather this winter to ensure smooth traffic flow on the salted road network.

(AQW 38547/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is well prepared for the coming winter. All salt stocks have been replenished, staffing arrangements are in place and pre-season checks on all winter service equipment have been undertaken. TransportNI has approximately 300 people on standby ready to salt main roads and contracts are also in place to enable contractors and farmers to help to clear roads during periods of prolonged snow.

In addition, my Department holds an additional resilience salt stock of around 50,000 tonnes, at strategic locations as a contingency against prolonged spells of severe wintry weather. My Department has also enhanced its contractual arrangements to increase the supplementary stocks of salt available during the winter period, if necessary.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) why employees within NI Water, who were moved from the Civil Service, have not yet had their equal pay claims met; (ii) how many staff are affected; and (iii) why resolution of their claims is being linked to the NIO/PSNI/DOJ issue.

(AQW 38593/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by NI Water that (i) qualifying NI Water employees have had equal pay claims settled and paid during 2013 following completion of negotiations with NIPSA, and (ii) NI Water has settled with 298 former and existing employees. In reference to (iii), there is no direct link to the NIO/PSNI/DOJ issue.

You will be aware that the Minister of Finance and Personnel has circulated a paper to Executive colleagues in which he has outlined a recommendation which, if agreed by the Executive, will result in a successful resolution for the PSNI/NIO staff excluded from the NICS Equal Pay settlement.

This has not yet been considered by the Executive.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many disabled parking bays there are in North Down.

(AQW 38637/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are currently 98 accessible parking bays in North Down.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any road safety reports or assessments that his Department has commissioned or produced on the A29.

(AQW 38640/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My officials have carried out assessments on the A29 Armagh Keady Road, at the locations listed below, as part of normal reviews of collision data received from the Police Service of Northern Ireland, or in response to representations:

- Bachelors Walk junction
- Dundrum Road/Tassagh Church Hall
- Girvan's Bridge
- Beechill/Ballyards
- No.119 Keady Road

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any road safety concerns over the A29 that were raised with his Department over the last six years.

(AQW 38641/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has received representations and taken the following actions at the locations listed below on the A29 Armagh Keady Road in the last 6 years:

Year	Location	Action Taken
2009	Bachelors Walk junction	Additional signs provided.
2012	Dundrum Road/Tassagh Church Hall	Road realignment scheme completed.
2012	Girvan's Bridge	Additional chevron signs, high visibility bend warning signs and edge of carriageway studs provided.
2012	Beechill/Ballyards	A technical review was carried out which indicated that any potential improvement scheme would be significant in terms of cost. Additional high visibility warning signs with reduce speed now plates were then provided. A request to reduce the speed limit was assessed but did not accord with current policy. Details of concerns about speeding were passed on to the Police Service of Northern Ireland.
2013	Bachelors Walk junction	Road widened, superelevation improved, carriageway markings and road studs provided.
2013	119 Keady Road	Request for vehicle restraint received and assessed but relevant criteria not met.
2014	200 Keady Road	Commitment given to review and assess this location.

I would also advise that reviews of the route are carried out as and when collision data is received from the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Regional Development what replanting scheme is planned to replace hedgerows and native trees removed during the current A8 dual carriageway project.

(AQW 38645/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The replanting for the A8 Dual Carriageway scheme includes new and replacement hedgerows, trees and shrubs. The purpose of this planting is to integrate the scheme into the landscape and to provide visual mitigation, where appropriate.

The hedgerow specification follows the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development's guidance and, as of mid-November 2014, approximately 20,000 linear metres of the total anticipated 54,000 linear metres of hedgerow had been planted.

In addition, a mixture of native woodland and shrub planting will be provided along the scheme.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of employees in his Department that earn less than the living wage of £7.20 per hour, as calculated by Oxford Economics for the Northern Ireland Commission for Voluntary Action (NICVA) Centre for Economic Empowerment.

(AQW 38668/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No Northern Ireland Civil Service employee in my Department, paid on either the Industrial or Non-Industrial pay scales, earns less than £7.20 per hour.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development when he first became aware of any significant increase in the anticipated expenditure, beyond the £22m estimate, in relation to the passing loop provision on the Londonderry to Coleraine railway line.

(AQW 38728/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As I outlined in my statement to the Assembly on 3 November 2014 and in my responses to the Committee for Regional Development on 12 November and at Oral Question Time on 18 November 2014, my Department was alerted to the situation regarding escalation in the cost estimates for Phase 2 of the Coleraine to Londonderry project at the end of June 2014. That was confirmed in late July by the Translink board. In early August I commissioned a special review, or project assessment review (PAR), which was completed during September. Its recommendations were made available to me by the end of September, and I had to conclude on those and agree necessary actions with Translink. We were then in a position to inform the House which I did in my statement of 3 November.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development what strategies have been put in place by his Department to address the transport needs of people with a disability, to enable full participation within the community.

(AQW 38732/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department published the Accessible Transport Strategy in 2005. This is a 10 year strategy to address barriers to older people and people with disabilities in using public transport and in travelling.

The Strategy has been implemented via a series of Action Plans, the fourth and latest of which covers the period 2012-2015.

I am committed to bringing forward a new Accessible Transport Strategy and work has already started to engage with representatives of the age and disability stakeholders in developing this.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the criteria used to determine installing a dropped kerb.

(AQW 38740/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Dropped kerbs, along with appropriate tactile paving, are provided at all at-grade crossing points in all new works including footway resurfacing/reconstruction schemes.

On existing footways where new works, including maintenance, are not planned, provision of crossing points and graded access can be considered as part of a pedestrian route strategy.

Dropped kerbs are also provided along with general on-street accessible parking bays to allow wheelchair users to move from the footway to the carriageway in the vicinity of their vehicle. Blue Badge Holders, who have had an application for an accessible parking bay outside or near to their home approved, can also request a dropped kerb. This will be considered where the applicant is dependent upon the use of a wheelchair and there are no other dropped kerbs in the vicinity or, exceptionally, where an applicant, who is not dependent on the use of a wheelchair, can provide evidence of severe mobility difficulty.

Requests for dropped kerbs or graded pedestrian accesses, which are not covered by the above, will only be provided after assessing the level of provision in the general vicinity and where it is considered that a number of people would benefit from such provision.

Fuller details of the Department's approach to providing dropped kerbs can be viewed by accessing our 'Provision of Dropped Kerb' policy document via the following link <http://www.drni.gov.uk/index/publications/publications-details.htm?docid=9159>

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development what factors officials in Transport NI considered prior to the commencement of the current road works on Sandown Road, Belfast, due to conclude at the end of November 2014.

(AQW 38745/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: When assessing any street, including Sandown Road, for resurfacing, a number of criteria are taken into consideration. These include the general condition of the existing surfaces, the volume and nature of vehicular and pedestrian traffic, enquiries from members of the public and elected representatives, and public liability claims.

When planning the works, my officials will consider what traffic management arrangements are most appropriate and how each element of the scheme is to be programmed and implemented. This is done in liaison with the appointed contractor, the PSNI and other service providers, such as Translink and the statutory utility companies. In addition, they write to the residents in the area that are likely to be affected by the works. Traffic management arrangements are also updated on the Trafficwatchni website and details are provided to the media.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister for Regional Development how many light bulbs for street lights are currently stockpiled in the Western Division.

(AQW 38761/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's TransportNI currently has 1,214 bulbs (lamps) in stock within the Western Division area.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of parking tickets issued in the vicinity of the Clogher livestock mart, Co. Tyrone, on each Saturday in the last twelve months.

(AQW 38816/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are three locations in Clogher where Parking restrictions are enforced, only two of which Station Road and Tullybroom Road, are in the vicinity of the livestock market.

During the period 1 November 2013 to 31 October 2014, there were 28 Penalty Charge Notices issued on Station Road, and 22 on Tullybroom Road. More detailed analysis is set out in the table below.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the current level of leakage from the water infrastructure system; and how this compares with three years ago.

(AQW 38870/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Northern Ireland Water's Annual leakage figures are assessed at the end of each financial year and placed in the public domain after they have been audited by the Reporter and submitted to the Utility Regulator.

The level of leakage for 2010/11 was 176.97 MI/d. The current level of leakage, i.e. relating to 2013/14, is 167.21 MI/d. This exceeded the target of 169 MI/d set by the Utility Regulator.

Mr Ó Muilleoir asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the extent of parking in south Belfast and the impact of recent and repeated flooding in the streets around the Lisburn Road, whether he will consider the potential for clearing gullies during off peak times.

(AQW 38980/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Wherever possible, TransportNI aims to complete its gully emptying operation during normal working hours.

However, in areas where there is difficulty in accessing the gullies due to the presence of parked cars, consideration is given to attending the sites during off-peak times. In such circumstances TransportNI seeks the co-operation of local residents to keep the street clear of parked cars and then programmes the work to be completed at off-peak times, generally beginning at approximately 6am. Department for Social Development

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development what steps he has taken to ensure the continuation of neighbourhood renewal programmes beyond their current remit.

(AQW 36773/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The Executive had decided that from 1 April 2015 responsibility for urban regeneration and community development would transfer from the Department for Social Development to the new Councils which are being established as part of the Reform of Local Government.

This was to have been achieved by conferring DSD's regeneration powers to the Councils, so a draft Regeneration and Housing Bill was prepared for consideration by the Executive and subsequent introduction to the Assembly. The Executive has just now agreed for the Regeneration Bill to proceed to Introduction, but unfortunately, this agreement has come too late for the legislation to get through the Assembly as originally planned for. As a result, the Executive has decided that the best course of action is to defer the transfer of powers and responsibilities for one year until April 2016.

The Department is still fully committed to the Reform of Local Government and the transfer of those key powers and responsibilities to the new Councils. However, the Executive's decision means that the Department will continue to be responsible for administering urban regeneration and community development in 2015/16.

Therefore my officials are continuing to review all existing Neighbourhood Renewal contracts. The outcome of these reviews will enable my Department to take informed decisions about arrangements for 2015/16.

My officials will continue to work closely with the Councils to assist them in putting in place effective arrangements to meet the needs of their communities when the transfer of powers and responsibilities takes place April 2016.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current waiting time for a family seeking to remain together in social housing in (i) Belfast City; and (ii) Lisburn City council areas.

(AQW 37424/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Member has clarified that this question is about the average waiting times in the Belfast and Lisburn Council areas by all household groups. The Housing Executive has provided the information as follows: -

Table 1 attached sets out details of the waiting list and average waiting times in the Belfast and Lisburn Council areas by all household groups as at the end of September 2014. The table gives details of the mean average calculation and the median average calculation by household group. It is felt that the median average calculation gives a better perspective.

It should also be noted that how long an applicant is on the waiting list depends on a number of factors, including their level of points, their areas of choice and the availability of the type of accommodation they require. In light of this the Housing Executive has also provided details of allocations for both the Belfast and Lisburn Council areas at Table 2 attached, which gives an indication of the limited number of properties that become available in these areas.

Table 1 – Waiting List at 30 September 2014

The average waiting time in relation to social housing may be calculated by an analysis of mean and median average months, both for the waiting list at a snapshot in time and for those applicants who have been successful in receiving an allocated property over a selected period of time. The mean is the arithmetic average. The median is a measure of central tendency. The reason that both mean and median averages are provided is that the mean may be skewed by applicants who have been on the waiting list for a number of years. Social housing is allocated according to greatest housing need, and table 2 shows the waiting time for those in sufficient need to receive an allocation over the year to 30 September 2014.

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development what public funding has been spent on An Droichead's neighbourhood renewal project to date; and to outline the reasons for transferring this designated neighbourhood renewal site to a school. (AQW 38114/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Strategic Investment Board (SIB) provided support for An Droichead's Gnolann Project as follows:

■	2009/10	£ 90,000
■	2010/11	£128,835
■	2011/12	£ 460
■	Total	£219,295

This funding was used to procure consultancy support for this project.

The Department of Social Development (DSD) provided no funding for this project.

The Department of Education (DE) contacted my Department in December 2013, through the Belfast Regeneration Office (BRO) to advise that the accommodation at Scoil an Droichid was no longer fit for purpose and two of the existing classrooms at Scoil an Droichid had been deemed unsuitable for use from a health and safety perspective with extensive structural work required to repair the roof.

Given the extent of the work required, it was suggested that the only way forward was to replace the defective mobiles with new steel framed modular accommodation. As a result of the restriction within the site, DE identified a potential location for the new mobiles on the adjoining DSD site at 20-32 Ormeau Road. Use of this site would allow the school to continue to operate with minimal disruption.

My officials considered the proposal and advised that in view of the health and safety issues pertaining to the existing mobiles the Department would agree to dispose of the site to the Department of Education.

This will bring the site into active use and will provide significant benefits to the school's existing accommodation and improve options for its future development.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the monies allocated to improving energy efficiency in social housing in each constituency since 2011/12.

(AQW 38488/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not collate this expenditure by Parliamentary Constituency. However, they have provided the tables attached detailing expenditure on improving energy efficiency in Housing Executive homes by Regional Office for the last three years. They advise that this expenditure relates to double glazing, heating and external insulation projects.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development what annual budget is set aside by his Department, and its arm's-length bodies, for translation and interpreter services for foreign nationals.
(AQW 38509/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the 2014/15 financial year, the Social Security Agency allocated a total of £37,000 to its operational business areas for the purpose of providing translation and interpretation services, if required, to benefit claimants whose first language is not English. The SSA is the only departmental business area that allocates budget for this specific purpose.

The Housing Executive's annual budget for Communication Support Services in 2014/15 is £40,000, which is to provide linguistic and disability (or other, for example, age) related communication support to staff. There is no delineation between linguistic support and disability support, but in recent years a significant proportion of the budget has been to support linguistic communications.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many boilers he estimates will be replaced by 31 March 2015 as a result of the Boiler Replacement Scheme.
(AQW 38565/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Boiler Replacement Scheme was launched in September 2012 and is due to end on 31 March 2015. The aim of the scheme was to assist 24,000 private homeowners to replace old and inefficient boilers over the period of the scheme. As at 31st October 2014 the Housing Executive has issued 21,550 approvals for boiler replacements and 16,445 households have had new boilers installed. This has proven to be a very popular scheme and I expect over 24,000 approvals to be issued by 31st March 2015, however, the onus is on householders to then go ahead and replace the boiler.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Social Development how many social housing units are planned for Dromore, County Down in the next five years.

(AQW 38589/11-15)

Mr Storey: There are currently no social housing schemes programmed for Dromore, County Down in the next five years.

However, a need for the provision of six units for older people has been identified. Housing Associations are currently exploring the potential to purchase a number of existing properties for social housing in order to meet housing need.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many temporary staff are currently employed by the Housing Executive; and of these employees, to detail the community background, broken down by (a) number; and (b) percentage.

(AQW 38625/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that it currently employs a total of 86 temporary staff. The community background number and percentage is detailed in the table below.

Religion	Number	Percentage
Protestant	41	47.7
Roman Catholic	42	48.8
Not Known	3	3.5
Total	86	100

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development how many immigrants currently claim benefits.

(AQW 38687/11-15)

Mr Storey: The payment of benefits in Northern Ireland is administered via IT systems which are owned and maintained by the Department for Work and Pensions. As these systems do not have the facility to record the nationality of claimants, the requested information is therefore not available.

In support of changes made to the Regulations introduced for European Economic Area nationals and returning UK nationals claiming income based Jobseekers Allowance from 1 January 2014, the Social Security Agency is currently gathering clerical information on the number of applications for income based Jobseekers Allowance from European Economic Area nationals. Based on the current data available, 2,168* European Economic Area nationals claimed income based Jobseekers Allowance during the period 1 January 2014 to 30 September 2014. During this period a total of 892 European Economic Area nationals had their claim to Jobseekers Allowance disallowed:

- 773 claimants were disallowed having failed the Habitual Residence Test which required them to prove that they have a right to reside in the UK and also be habitually resident, and
- 119 claimants were disallowed having failed a Genuine Prospect of Work Assessment, a further change to Home Office Immigration regulations introduced in July 2014.

*The Department for Social Development's Analytical Services Unit is unable to provide the statistics that have been requested. The details provided have been taken from clerical data collected by Decision Makers during the dates stated. The management information provided is limited to standard reports with no facility to interrogate the system.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development how many immigrants currently claiming benefits send their payments outside of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 38692/11-15)

Mr Storey: The payment of benefits in Northern Ireland is administered via IT systems which are owned and maintained by the Department for Work and Pensions. As these systems do not have the facility to record the nationality of claimants, the information requested is therefore not available.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development how many immigrants have been refused benefits, including housing, since immigration reforms.

(AQW 38693/11-15)

Mr Storey: Changes to Home Office Immigration regulations were first introduced in Northern Ireland in January 2014. While the current social security IT systems functionality does not record the nationality of claimants, limited statistics on the number of European Economic Area nationals claiming benefit have been captured clerically. No statistics are available for non European Economic Area nationals.

From January to September 2014, a total of 2,168 European Economic Area nationals claimed income based Jobseeker's Allowance. During this period a total of 892 European Economic Area nationals had their claim to Jobseekers Allowance disallowed:

- 773 claimants were disallowed having failed the Habitual Residence Test which required them to prove that they have a right to reside in the UK and also be habitually resident, and
- 119 claimants were disallowed having failed a Genuine Prospect of Work Assessment, a further change to Home Office Immigration regulations introduced in July 2014.

A further measure which restricted access to Housing Benefit for European Economic Area nationals with Jobseeker residency status was introduced in April 2014. Since 1st April, 129 housing benefit claims have been made ineligible on the grounds that the claimant was a Person from Abroad.

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the full time equivalent number of staff in (i) his Department; and (ii) each of his Department's arm's-length bodies, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 38696/11-15)

Mr Storey: The number of full time equivalent staff for the Department for Social Development and its arm's length bodies for the years requested are shown in the table below:

Year	Number of Full Time Equivalent staff
	Department for Social Development	Charities Commission for Northern Ireland	Northern Ireland Housing Executive
2010	7261.04	0	3184
2011	6903.63	5	3124
2012	6824.98	13	3100
2013	6904.97	14	2994
2014	6910.02	25	3125

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many complaints his Department have received regarding breaches of the Caravans Act (Northern Ireland) 2011.

(AQW 38724/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has not received any complaints regarding breaches of the Caravans Act 2011. However, issues around the sale of caravans on residential sites have been raised, by elected representatives.

Where there is evidence that a person who lives in a caravan as their main residence is being harassed or threatened with illegal eviction, the person can approach the Council which may instigate court proceedings. Caravan site owners and caravan owners can agree to the use of an arbitrator where they cannot settle disputes or to take court action via the County Court.

To date since the introduction of the Caravan Act seven cases spanning four council areas have been reported by residents in relation to eviction and harassment. None of these seven cases required prosecution by the councils.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the range of options available to people with a disability who are seeking to live independently within their community.

(AQW 38729/11-15)

Mr Storey: There are a range of options available that my Department funds to enable people with a disability to live independently within their community. They include:

Disabled Facilities Grants

Within the private sector, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE) can offer a Disabled Facilities Grant to home owners, landlords and private sector tenants. The grant process begins with a recommendation from an Occupational Therapist from the Health and Social Services Board recommending works which would benefit the disabled applicant to remain at home; such works may include ramped access to the dwelling, replacing a bath with a suitable shower facility, extending the dwelling to incorporate a downstairs bedroom and bathroom. The maximum grant available is £25,000 although this can be extended to £50,000 with the approval of the NIHE where the works are deemed necessary.

In the 2013/14 financial year, the NIHE approved 1,177 Disabled Facilities Grants, completed 1,113 and spent £10.84m and continues to be committed to enabling persons with a disability to remain in their home.

Supporting People

The Supporting People (SP) programme came into effect in Northern Ireland on the 1st April 2003. It provides a single funding framework, for a range of housing support services, aimed at helping vulnerable people to live independently in the community. These include people with disabilities or who are vulnerable due to old age, learning disabilities or mental health needs.

Supporting People funded services enable the client to live independently in their own home by supporting them with a range of eligible housing related tasks. These include advice on security and safety in the home, maintaining the physical environment of the home, building on life skills, personal budgeting, benefits advice and Debt counselling.

Social Security Agency

The Social Security Agency provides a range of help through the benefits system to support people with disabilities to help them live independently in the community.

Community Care Grants which are available under the Discretionary Social Fund scheme are primarily intended to help vulnerable people live as independent a life as possible in the community. In the 2013/14 year the Agency made 20,121 Community Care Grant awards with a total expenditure of £13.69m. Claimants who are receiving Income Support, Income-Based Jobseekers Allowance, Income-Related Employment and Support Allowance, State Pension Credit because they are moving out of care can be considered for a Community Care Grant. There is no requirement to repay a Community Care Grant.

Employment and Support Allowance provides financial help to people who are unable to work because of illness or disability. It also provides personalised support to those who are able to work by giving them access to a specially trained Employment Service Adviser and a wide range of further services including employment, training and condition management support. This is to help people manage and cope with their illness or disability at work. The amount of Employment and Support Allowance a person is entitled to depends on their individual circumstances.

Disability Living Allowance is a tax-free social security benefit for people with an illness or disability who need help with getting around, or help with personal care, or help with both of these. Disability Living Allowance consists of two separate components. The mobility component is payable at higher / lower rate. The care component can be payable at three different rates, high, middle and low. People can be receiving either the mobility component or care component or a combination of both. At May 2014 there were 198,310 recipients of Disability Living Allowance.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the measures his Department is taking to ensure that additional strains are not placed on people with a disability through the Severe Disability Premium which will be introduced by Universal Credit.

(AQW 38731/11-15)

Mr Storey: Currently there are seven different components within the system of benefits and Tax Credits associated with disability. These are paid at different rates, have different qualifying conditions and are for different purposes. A claimant qualifies for the Severe Disability Premium if they are in receipt of a qualifying benefit and satisfy certain conditions.

The current proposals for the introduction of Universal Credit will see the reform system of multiple disability premiums and additions in Tax Credits and create a much simpler and fairer system for claimants that will ensure support is targeted to those that need it most.

Disabled claimants will be supported through two elements under Universal Credit, the limited capability for work element and for more severely disabled claimants, the limited capability for work and work related activity element. Furthermore my Department aims to raise the level of support for those who have been assessed as having a limited capability for work and work related activity that is currently provided to reflect the extra costs of longer durations on benefit.

Under Universal Credit a disabled person will also be eligible for a higher earnings disregard when working out their Universal Credit payment to reflect a claimant's personal circumstances.

Those claimants who are subject to migration onto Universal Credit will also be eligible for Transitional Protection. Transitional Protection is a commitment to ensure that no one moving directly onto Universal Credit will experience a reduction in the benefit they are receiving, where their circumstances remain the same at the point of change. This will also apply to those claimants receiving the Severe Disability Premium.

The Welfare Reform Bill also includes provision to exclude some groups of claimants from the benefit cap - it is intended that this will include households in receipt of the limited capability for work and work related activity element of Universal Credit. This is in recognition of the additional financial costs that can arise from disability.

A package of measures has been designed to ameliorate the worst impacts of Welfare Reform in Northern Ireland. My predecessor listened to the concerns expressed by different groups in Northern Ireland about the impact of welfare reform and the package of measures was developed with the Department for Work and Pensions and HM Treasury. This package is the envy of both Scotland and Wales.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development (i) what percentage of Departmental Expenditure Limits is spent on salaries; and (ii) how he intends to reduce this spend in order to make efficiency savings.

(AQW 38738/11-15)

Mr Storey: On average there are 7,000 staff employed in DSD. Salary costs account for approximately 39% of the total resource DEL cost. My Department is still working through the impacts of the budget reductions for 2015/16. Any staff reductions required to enable the Department to live within its 2015-16 budget will be managed in line with NICS policies, including the voluntary exit scheme announced by the Executive.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 38161/11-15, to detail (i) data sets used; (ii) filters applied; and (iii) other additional factors used.

(AQW 38751/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information to determine those individuals to be targeted is obtained from the benefit payment system for State Pension. To that broad base of State Pension claimants, the following filters are applied to select those potentially missing out on benefit.

To include claimants:

- getting Housing Benefit, but not getting State Pension Credit/Income Support;
- not getting State Pension Credit/Income Support, with/without a partner;
- getting State Pension Credit but not getting Attendance Allowance/Disability Living Allowance;
- not getting Attendance Allowance/Disability Living Allowance; and
- with an appointee, but not getting Attendance Allowance/Disability Living Allowance and no disability premiums in payment.

Other factors used were:

- age; people aged 74 or over were selected, and
- lack of an occupational pension.

Co habiting couples getting Attendance Allowance, not getting Carers Allowance and not receiving a disability premium were also included.

The focus of the targeted exercises is those older people not getting the main older people benefits of State Pension Credit and Attendance Allowance. The criteria are developed using learning from previous uptake work and knowledge of benefit interdependencies.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development to detail his plans for new build social housing and co-ownership, assuming the final allocation of funding announced in the draft budget for his Department remains unchanged.

(AQW 38866/11-15)

Mr Storey: The draft budget for 2015/16 announced earlier this month indicated general provision for both new build social housing and co-ownership housing within the overall Departmental Budget. The exact amount of individual allocations, within the overall allocation for the Department, is still under consideration and will be reviewed in the context of the financial constraints we all have to face.

Once the specific allocations for new build social housing and co-ownership are agreed, I will be ensuring that appropriate key performance targets are set for 2015/16.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail his Department's proposals to secure the future of Aughnacloy street market and to mitigate the potential reduction in footfall in Aughnacloy should the market close; and whether he has had any engagement with Monaghan County Council on this matter.

(AQW 38955/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department for Social Development urban regeneration is not responsible for taking forward regeneration proposal for towns with a population of under 4,500 persons. The population of Aughnacloy is 801 persons and it is defined by NISRA as a rural settlement and therefore falls under the remit of DARD.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's review of the provision of bungalows within the social housing programme.

(AQW 38968/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has been taking forward a review for the provision of bungalow accommodation.

My Department's officials have engaged with the Housing Executive on this matter and I expect to receive firm proposals for consideration by the end of the calendar year.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister for Social Development when the Collaboration Agreement was signed between the relevant private parties and his Department in relation to the Northside Project.

(AQW 38978/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Northside Regeneration Scheme has the potential to significantly change Belfast City Centre for the better: it will see an area of the city which is run-down and neglected, transformed in terms of architecture, services and connections to the neighbourhoods around it. It is also important to recognise the boost this scheme will give to the local economy: up to £300 million will be invested and a possible 1500 jobs created. The Collaboration Agreement which is an early step in the relationship between my Department and Northside Regeneration Limited (NRL) (the Developer) was signed on 4 September 2014.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister for Social Development for a breakdown of the number of properties under the ownership of his Department that are situated within the Northside Project site.
(AQW 38979/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department owns 2 sites situated within the Northside Regeneration Scheme development area: an area between Carrick Hill and Stephen Street and another area bordering Clifton Street/Regent Street and Stanhope Street.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister for Social Development how many properties in the Northside Project site it is envisaged will be compulsory purchased.
(AQW 38981/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has no plans to vest any properties in the Northside Project site. A decision to vest properties and businesses to progress a comprehensive development is only taken as a last resort. It is always my Department's preference that land and properties if required would be transferred by voluntary agreement or sale between the relevant parties.

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development how many people lost their entitlement to Incapacity Benefit between 2007 to 2011.
(AQW 38985/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table below shows the total number of claims where entitlement to Incapacity Benefit ceased between January 2007 and December 2011. For some claimants Incapacity Benefit may have ceased on more than one occasion.

Year	Number of Claimants leaving Incapacity Benefit
2007	30,860
2008	23,290
2009	18,660
2010	9,080
2011	13,590

* The figures provided have been derived from scans of the Department's Matching Intelligence Database Analysis and General Matching Service systems and include cases where a claimant has been found fit for work, has failed to attend a medical assessment or has not provided the required information. The figures also include claims where entitlement has ceased following changes in a claimant's circumstances including when a claimant returns to work, claims an alternative benefit or the death of a claimant.

The figures include a number of claims where the claimant was not receiving payment of Incapacity Benefit but a weekly National Insurance credit.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the potential for a crisis in the private rented sector should the value of residential property rise and private landlords sell their houses resulting in private tenants facing eviction and a shortage of alternative rented accommodation; and to detail (i) what discussions he has had with the sector on this matter; and (ii) what plans he has in place to deal with it.
(AQW 38996/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Repossessions Taskforce's evidence paper illustrated that house prices in Northern Ireland remain nearly 50 per cent below their 2007 peak. A return to unsustainable house prices is neither expected nor desired.

The Housing Strategy underlines my Department's commitment to help create the right conditions for a stable and sustainable housing market. Flowing from the Strategy, my officials are examining the opportunities and barriers to entering and remaining within the private rented sector, examining the regulatory regime and looking at options for initiatives and incentives which will help grow and improve the sector. The Department will consult with interested parties as proposals are developed.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development when the Community Investment Fund will open for applications.
(AQW 39144/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department for Social Development has no plans to open the Community Investment Fund for applications.

In light of the deferral of Reform of Local Government it is intended to consider existing projects for funding in 2015/16, subject to budget availability.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr A Maginness asked the Assembly Commission, following the introduction of new laptops for Members, will the IS office be developing a series of training courses to assist Members in furthering their skills.
(AQO 7098/11-15)

Ms Ruane (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): Le deireannas, ghlac Oifig na gCóras Faisnéise (CF) seacadadh ar ríomhairí glúine nua le haghaidh Comhaltaí agus a bhfoireann. Tá an Oifig CF ag cumrú na ngléasanna úra agus is gairid go mbeidh sí ag cur tús leis an bhfeidhmiú céimneach leis an gcéad dhá ghrúpa píolóta, lena n-áirítear baill de Choimisiún an Tionóil agus foireann Tacaíochta na bPáirtithe. Cuirfear tús an leis an bpríomh-fheidhmiú céimneach do Chomhaltaí ina dhiaidh sin.

Information Systems (I.S.) Office has recently taken delivery of the new laptop computers for use by MLAs and their staff. I.S. Office is currently configuring the new devices and will shortly commence the rollout with two initial pilot groups including Assembly Commission Members and Party Support staff. The main rollout to Members and staff will commence thereafter.

Members should already be familiar with the operating system as the new laptops use the same Windows 8 technology as the tablet computers issued in 2013. As with the tablet computer rollout, IS Office will provide short one-to-one training sessions for MLAs and staff as part of the handover of the new equipment.

I.S. Office has also identified relevant internet-based training material, and links to these websites will be included in the initial training sessions and in the handover guidance.

Cuireann CF treoracha traenála céim ar chéim i gach Feidhmchlár Deisce de chuid Microsoft Office, agus tá siad seo ar fáil ar inlíon an Tionóil (AssISt). Tugann na treoracha seo comhairle ar bhun-fheidhmeanna Word, Exel, PowerPoint agus Outlook; is féidir teacht orthu ó gach ríomhaire Tionóil, lena n-áirítear oifigí toghlaigh. Má shléann Comhaltaí nó foireann an Tionóil go bhfuil cúrsaí struchtúrtha eile ag teastáil uatha, ba chóir dóibh fáil i dteagmháil leis an Oifig CF sa chéad ásc.

I.S. Office provides step-by-step training guides in all of the Microsoft Office Desktop Applications and these are available on the Assembly intranet (AssISt). These guides provide advice on the basic functions of Word, Excel, PowerPoint and Outlook and can be accessed from all Assembly computers including constituency offices. Should Members or staff feel that they require further structured training courses they should contact I.S. Office in the first instance.

Notes

1. Fleming Fulton provides the use of its swimming pool to other schools. The extra costs associated with maintaining a swimming pool have been provided for in BELB's funding; however this means the funding per pupil is higher.
2. Jordanstown was built for 100 pupils. Only 51 pupils were in attendance in 2013-14; resulting in higher costs per pupil. The school caters for children with sensory impairments. As such the ratio of teaching staff to pupils is higher due to higher/complex needs.
3. Ardmore House Pupil numbers can range from 0 – 12 at any point in time. At the time of the October 2013 Census Ardmore House had 2 pupils explaining higher funding per pupil.

The framework will be submitted for outline planning permission in autumn 2014.

Motion – BBC Spotlight Programme 14 October 2014

Proposed:

That this Assembly expresses concern at the contents of the investigation by the BBC Spotlight programme broadcast on Tuesday 14 October into allegations of sexual abuse perpetrated by members of the Provisional IRA and covered up within the IRA, implicating senior members of Sinn Féin; believes that the scale of the abuse perpetrated by members of the republican movement needs to be determined with accountability, both by those responsible and those with knowledge, and that victims be given individual and emotional support; notes Ms Jennifer McCann's admission that she was informed about the abuse that Ms Máiría Cahill suffered, yet inexplicably did not report it to the lawful authorities; further notes that Ms McCann, in her role as junior Minister in the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister, has responsibilities in relation to policy relating to historical institutional abuse and children; and calls for a full inquiry into the junior Minister to establish any impropriety as well as any breach of the Ministerial Code of Conduct.
