Code of practice issued under section 303Z25 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Recovery of Cryptoassets and Related Items – Search Powers

Officers must be aware of their mandatory obligations under the legislation and act in accordance with these duties. This is an absolute requirement regardless of any interpretation of this Code or any other document or guidance.

This Code should be made available for reference by officers using the powers and by members of the public. It should be available in particular at police premises and at ports where the powers are likely to be used. Government departments and other bodies who have Accredited Financial Investigators operating these powers should also make arrangements for the Code to be available, if practical, at their public offices. The Code is also available at Codes of practice issued under Proceeds of Crime act 2002 published 2024 | Department of Justice \(justice-ni.gov.uk\).

Abbreviations used in this Code

AFI	Accredited Financial Investigator
PACE (NI)	Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989
POCA	Proceeds of Crime Act 2002
CFA	Criminal Finances Act 2017
ECTE	Economic Crime (Transparency and Enforcement) Act 2022
ECCT	Economic Crime and Corporate Transparency Act 2023

Proceeds of Crime Act 2002

This Code has been made to take account of amendments made to POCA by the ECCT Act 2023 with respect to cryptoassets.

Introduction

1. The purpose of this Code is to guide officers in relation to the exercise of certain powers under Part 5 of POCA. The Code should not be regarded as a complete or authoritative statement of the law. Only the courts can give an authoritative interpretation of the legislation, and the contents of this Code may be affected by subsequent judicial decisions and changes to the legislative provisions referred to in this document.

Definitions

2. In this Code:
 - a. A reference to a statutory provision is to a provision of POCA unless otherwise stated.
 - b. “Cryptoasset” means a cryptographically secured digital representation of value or contractual rights that uses a form of distributed ledger technology and can be transferred, stored or traded electronically.¹
 - c. A “cryptoasset-related item” means an item of property that is, or that contains or gives access to information that is, likely to assist in the seizure of cryptoassets that are recoverable property or intended for use in unlawful conduct.²
 - d. A “crypto wallet” means software, hardware, a physical item, or any combination of these, used to store the cryptographic private key that allows cryptoassets to be accessed.
 - e. “Judicial officer”, in relation to Northern Ireland, is a lay magistrate.³
 - f. “Enforcement officer” includes an officer of Revenue and Customs, an immigration officer, a constable, a Serious Fraud Office officer and an AFI unless otherwise specified.
3. This code of practice is made in connection with the exercise of the search powers conferred by section 303Z21 on the following officers only, constables and AFIs.⁴

¹ Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, section 303Z20(1)(a). Non-fungible tokens, stablecoins, and privacy coins are examples of the various cryptoasset technologies in use that meet the definition of a cryptoasset.

² Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, section 303Z21(2). That definition would cover several different types of property. For example, it could include pieces of paper that have a cryptoasset recovery seed phrase written on them, an electronic hardware wallet (these tend to be similar in appearance and operation to a USB pendrive); or a piece of electronic hardware such as a mobile phone, tablet computer, laptop computer or desktop computer that has relevant information on it; or which has an application which gives the user control over a software cryptoasset wallet.

³ Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002, section 10.

⁴ An AFI is an individual who is trained, accredited and monitored under section 3 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 as a financial investigator. Accreditation may be limited to specified purposes as set out in an order made by the Secretary of State under section 453 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

Legislative context

4. This Code is made by the Department of Justice under section 303Z25. Subject to paragraph 5, below, the Code applies to all searches made under the powers in section 303Z21 and to the application by officers for “prior approval” (from either a judicial officer or a senior officer) under section 303Z23 in order to exercise the search powers. The expectation is that the provisions of the Code will apply to all searches carried out under this Code. However, any decision not to follow the Code should be carefully considered and noted.
5. There is a separate code of practice made by the Secretary of State relating to the exercise of the powers by officers of Revenue and Customs in England and Wales; Northern Ireland and Scotland; officers of the Serious Fraud Office in England and Wales and Northern Ireland; constables in England and Wales; and AFIs in England and Wales. There is a separate code of practice relating to the exercise of the powers by constables in Scotland.
6. The Code does not apply to searches carried out under any other provisions in POCA, or other legislation. If such searches result in cryptoasset-related items being seized under section 303Z26, the provisions of this Code do not apply to that search. However, if an officer is exercising an additional and separate function or power, for example, investigation powers under Part 8 of POCA, the officer should have regard to any code connected to the exercise of that function or power.
7. Where an officer fails to comply with any provision of this Code, they would not, by reason only of that failure, be liable to any criminal or civil proceedings. This Code is admissible as evidence in such proceedings. A court may take account of the Code, in determining any question(s) in the proceedings.⁵
8. The Code should be made available for reference by officers using the powers and by members of the public. It should be available in particular at police premises and at ports where the powers are, or are likely, to be used. Government departments and other bodies who have AFIs operating these powers should also make arrangements for the Code to be available if practicable at their public offices.

General

9. The right to respect for private and family life and the protection of property under the European Convention of Human Rights (ECHR) are safeguarded by the Human Rights Act 1998. Powers of search may involve significant interference with the privacy of those whose premises and persons are searched and therefore need to be fully and clearly justified before they are used. In particular, officers should consider at every stage whether the necessary objectives can be achieved by less intrusive means. In all cases officers should exercise their powers fairly, courteously, responsibly, respectfully and without unlawful discrimination and in accordance with any statutory duties placed on them. Officers should ensure that in the exercise of their functions, they have regard to the need to safeguard and promote the welfare of all persons under the age of 18 years in compliance with obligations under Article 3 of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

10. The officer should take special care and have particular regard to an individual's vulnerabilities and possible difficulties when conducting a search. This is particularly relevant in the case of a search of a person who is a juvenile or persons with a mental or physical disability.
11. If there is reason to believe that the use of the powers covered by this Code might have an adverse effect on relations between law enforcement and the community, the local police / community liaison officer should be consulted before action is taken, or in particularly urgent cases, as soon as possible thereafter.
12. The officer should consider whether any consultation could jeopardise an ongoing wider operation or investigation. In such circumstances consultation may not be advisable, but generally it is best practice to consult where possible and if considered necessary.
13. A refusal by a person to allow a search of a person, premises or a vehicle may in some instances, constitute an offence (including but not limited to) wilful obstruction of an officer in the exercise of a power or execution of a duty.⁶ This would be a criminal matter and is not an issue for, or subject to, this Code. Officers should be aware of other legislation and codes applicable in these circumstances.

Scope of the power to search

14. Section 303Z21 provides powers for relevant officers to search for cryptoasset-related items: items of property that are, or that contain or give access to information that is, likely to assist in the seizure under Part 5 of POCA of cryptoassets that—
 - (a) are recoverable property, or
 - (b) are intended by any person for use in unlawful conduct.⁷
15. This power is available where the officer is lawfully on any type of premises (for example when a constable is exercising his powers of entry under PACE), and has reasonable grounds for suspecting that there is on the premises a seizable cryptoasset-related item — a physical item that is, or that contains or gives access to information that is, likely to assist in the seizure of any cryptoasset.⁸

⁶ See Section 66 Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 (in relation to constables) and section 453A of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (in relation to AFIs).

⁸ Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, section 303Z21(1).

16. Section 303Z26 provides officers with the power to require a person to provide information which is stored in electronic form. The information in question must be accessible from the premises. Officers can make such a requirement for the purposes of either determining whether an item is a cryptoasset-related item or for enabling or facilitating the seizure of a cryptoasset. The person must provide the required information in a form in which it can be taken away and in which it is visible and legible (or from which it can readily be produced in a visible and legible form). If a person fails to comply with a requirement, then they may have committed an obstruction offence. The relevant offence will depend on which type of officer has made the requirement. Those offences are set out in POCA and other enactments, where relevant.
17. The power to search premises includes the power to search a vehicle subject to the conditions set out in section 303Z21, subsections (3) to (5):
 - that the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that there is a seizable cryptoasset-related item in the vehicle;
 - that it appears to the officer that the vehicle is under the control of a person who is in, or in the vicinity of, the vehicle;
 - that the vehicle is at a place at which the public or any section of the public has access, on payment or otherwise, as of right or by virtue of express or implied permission, and any other place to which at that time people have ready access but which is not a dwelling; and
 - if the vehicle is in a garden or yard or other land occupied with and used for the purposes of a dwelling, the relevant officer may exercise the powers conferred only if the relevant officer has reasonable grounds for believing—
 - (a) that the suspect does not reside in the dwelling, and
 - (b) that the vehicle is not in the place in question with the express permission of the person who resides in the dwelling.⁹
18. Section 303Z21(6) contains the power to require a suspect to permit entry to a vehicle and for that vehicle to be subject to a search.
19. Section 303Z21(7) also allows for the power to search a person, and any article carried, if the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that he or she is carrying a seizable cryptoasset related item or cryptoasset.
20. Under section 303Z21(8) the power to permit entry and search of a vehicle, and to search a person and any article being carried by them should only be used where necessary or expedient.

⁹ Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, section 303Z21(5).

Limitations

21. Where a vehicle is not on private premises, on which the relevant officer is lawfully present, the search powers in relation to a vehicle only apply where the vehicle is in a place to which the public has access (such as on the street), or is within the environs (surroundings) of a dwelling, and the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the person does not reside in that dwelling, and that the vehicle is there without the permission of the person who resides there. Otherwise the vehicle is on private property and the power to search premises is relevant instead.
22. The powers conferred are civil in nature and exercisable only so far as is reasonably required for the purposes of finding a seizable cryptoasset-related item.
23. A refusal by a person to permit a search of their person, of premises or of a vehicle may in some instances constitute an offence, including but not limited to wilful obstruction of an officer in the exercise of a power or execution of a duty. This would be a criminal matter and is not an issue for, or subject to this Code.¹⁰

Reasonable grounds for suspicion

24. In order to exercise the search powers a relevant officer must have reasonable grounds for suspecting that a relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item is on the premises, in a vehicle or being carried by a person.
25. All relevant officers should recognise that searches are more likely to be effective, legitimate and secure public confidence when their reasonable grounds for suspicion are based on a range of objective factors. The overall use of these powers is more likely to be effective when up to date and accurate intelligence or information is communicated to officers and they are well informed about local crime patterns. Local senior officers have a duty to ensure that those under their command who exercise search powers have access to such information, and the officers exercising the powers have a duty to acquaint themselves with that information.
26. Whether there are reasonable grounds for suspicion will depend on the circumstances in each case. There should be some objective basis for that suspicion based on facts, information and/or intelligence, which are relevant to the likelihood that the seizable cryptoasset-related item in question will be found, so that a reasonable person would be entitled to reach the same conclusion based on the same facts and information and/or intelligence.
27. The relevant officer should take into account such factors as how the person(s), vehicles(s) or premises were identified; previous intelligence regarding the person(s), vehicles(s) or premises; previous law enforcement involvement with the person(s), vehicles(s) or premises; and suspected links with criminal activities, whether in the UK or overseas. Relevant officers should therefore be able to explain the basis for suspicion by reference to intelligence or information about, or some specific behaviour by, the person concerned.

28. Reasonable suspicion can never be supported on the basis of personal factors alone without reliable supporting intelligence or information or some specific behaviour. For example, a person's race, religion or age, could not be used alone or in combination with other personal factors as the reason for establishing suspicion. Reasonable suspicion cannot be based on generalisations or stereotypical images of certain groups or categories of people being more likely to be involved in criminal activity.
29. This means that unless a relevant officer has information or intelligence which provides a description of a person suspected of carrying a seizable cryptoasset-related item, the following cannot be used, alone or in combination with each other, or in combination with any other factor, as the reason for searching any individual, including any vehicle:
 - a person's physical appearance with regard to, for example, a person's racial group, age, gender, disability, religious belief, political opinion, marital status, sexual orientation or dependants;
 - the fact that the person is known to have a previous conviction; and
 - generalisations or stereotypical images that certain groups or categories of people are more likely to be involved in criminal activity.
30. Reasonable suspicion should normally be linked to accurate and current intelligence or information. It can sometimes exist without specific information or intelligence and on the basis of some level of generalisation stemming from the behaviour of a person. Reasonable suspicion cannot be founded retrospectively.

Prior approval to search for cryptoasset related items

31. Section 303Z23 requires the relevant officer to obtain prior 'appropriate approval' before the exercise of any of the search powers under section 303Z21, unless in the circumstances it is not practical to obtain that approval before exercising the power.¹¹
32. 'Appropriate approval' means approval from a judicial officer or (if that is not practical in any case) from a 'senior officer'.¹² A 'judicial officer' is, in relation to Northern Ireland a lay magistrate.¹³
33. Prior approval could be impractical because of the immediacy of the circumstances of the case. This is more likely to be the case in relation to the search of a person or vehicle than the search of premises, but officers should assess each case on its merits. There should be no assumption that approval is impractical for all searches. Officers should carefully consider and record the reasons for any decision not to obtain prior approval.

¹¹ Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, section 303Z23(1).

¹² Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, section 303Z20(4)(b).

¹³ The functions of justices of the peace (including their functions as members of a court) are transferred to lay magistrates under section 10 of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002.

34. The officer will need to explain that the search is necessary because they have reasonable grounds to suspect that there are cryptoasset-related items that are recoverable property, or are intended for use in unlawful conduct. If, after obtaining prior approval and when it comes to the time to conduct the search, the grounds on which the officer obtained the prior approval could no longer apply, the officer may not exercise the powers (section 303Z21(3)).

Seeking judicial approval

35. In order to obtain approval from a judicial officer, an officer will need to make contact with the chief clerk for a magistrates' court in Northern Ireland to arrange a hearing which can be held without notice and in private.
36. The usual reason to hold an application without notice and in private would be to avoid alerting persons connected to the seizable cryptoasset-related item (or cryptoassets to which it may give access) that such action is being considered. Being so alerted could have the effect of the person(s) seeking to move the seizable cryptoassets, thereby frustrating the operation of the powers. If there is no concern that the seizable cryptoassets could be moved, then the person(s) connected to the asset should normally be notified of the intention to make an application for prior approval to search.
37. The officer will need to:
 - identify themselves to the judicial officer (giving name, seniority, any warrant or other identifying number, and home station or place of work);
 - lodge a written application (having checked that the information on which the application relies is accurate, complete, recent and not provided maliciously or irresponsibly);
 - explain to the judicial officer the reasonable grounds for suspicion for undertaking the search;
 - identify the person(s), premises or vehicle(s) to be searched; and
 - answer any relevant questions that the judicial officer may have.

Seeking senior officer approval

38. If it is not practical to seek prior judicial approval, appropriate approval may be given by a 'senior officer'. A 'senior officer' is:

- in relation to a search undertaken by a police officer, of at least the rank of inspector; and
 - in relation to a search undertaken by an AFI, who is not a member of the civilian staff of a police force in Northern Ireland, an AFI who falls within a description specified in an order made by the Secretary of State under section 453 for this purpose. These officers are known as senior appropriate officers and not AFIs.
39. The relevant officer should explain to the senior officer the reasonable grounds for suspicion for undertaking the search. The senior officer should only give approval when satisfied that the relevant conditions are met. The senior officer should make a written record of the decision and the basis for making it. An oral approval should be supported by written approval as soon as is reasonably practical. In addition, the written approval should set out why it was necessary to seek and then give oral approval in the first instance.

Issues of approval

40. A prior approval to a search given by a judicial officer will continue in force for a period specified, set according to the circumstances of the case. A senior officer approval should only continue in force for the time period required for the urgency of the case.

Refusal of prior approval

41. If an application for prior approval is refused (either by a judicial officer or a senior officer) the relevant officer should not undertake a search or make a fresh application for a search of the same person(s), premises or vehicle(s) unless there are new reasonable grounds for suspicion. The officer, on any new application, should inform the judicial officer or the senior officer of the prior refusal and the reasons. They should also detail any prior approval granted that did not lead to a search.

Prior approval impracticable

42. If prior approval by a senior officer for a search is impractical, a search may be conducted without approval. It is unlikely that approval by a senior officer will be impractical unless, for example, there is some problem in making contact with the senior officer. If a search is conducted without any prior approval from a senior officer, the officer should explain to a senior officer the reasons for the search and for not obtaining prior approval as soon as that is reasonably practical and, in any event, no later than 24 hours following the exercise of the power. The senior officer should make a written record of those reasons.
43. If prior approval has been obtained for one search power, that approval does not apply to other search powers. For example, if prior judicial or senior officer approval was obtained for the search of a person and during that search the officer decides to undertake the search of a vehicle that the person is in control of, separate prior approval is required for that power.

Reports to the 'appointed person'

44. If a search under section 303Z21 is conducted without prior judicial approval, irrespective of whether senior officer approval has been obtained, the relevant officer must prepare a report in the following circumstances:
- if no cryptoasset-related item is seized; or
 - a cryptoasset-related item is seized and detained for no more than 48 hours (calculated in accordance with section 303Z27).
45. However, this duty does not apply if, during the course of exercising the powers conferred by section 303Z21, the relevant officer seizes cash by virtue of section 294 or a listed asset by virtue of section 303J and the cash or listed asset so seized is detained for more than 48 hours (calculated in accordance with section 295(1B) or 303K(5)). The relevant officer is the officer who exercised the power.
46. The written report must detail the information and circumstances which led the relevant officer to believe that the search powers were exercisable and that it was not practical to obtain prior judicial approval.¹⁴
47. These factors could include:
- why the relevant officer was on the premises when the search took place;
 - the reasonable grounds for suspicion; and
 - why there was a need for a search without prior judicial approval.
48. If senior officer approval is obtained, the report should also state which senior officer gave their approval together with the senior officer's reasons.
49. If no senior officer approval was obtained, this should be set out in the report together with the reasons for the approval not being obtained as well as which senior officer was subsequently informed and when.
50. A report is required in relation to each exercise of the powers. In some cases, multiple searches from one investigation are carried out simultaneously in different locations, or multiple persons are searched at the same time, or a single search may be carried out by several officers. For the purposes of reporting to the 'appointed person' in such cases, officers should consider whether a single report or multiple reports is the most appropriate way of making the report to the 'appointed person'. The information should be presented in the way which is most helpful to the 'appointed person', but which is transparent about the facts pertaining to the case, and the decision-making process. Where appropriate, cross references to linked reports or relevant information appearing elsewhere in the report should be highlighted to bring it to the attention of the 'appointed person'.

51. For simultaneous searches at multiple locations, the justification for searching each location without prior judicial approval should be considered in relation to each location separately. For simultaneous searches of multiple persons, the justification for searching each person without prior judicial approval should be considered separately. However, there may be an overarching justification underlying the decision to conduct the searches, for example, to prevent the destruction of evidence at other locations owned by the same person; or in the case of a group of persons suspected of a common enterprise. In such cases, one report might be more appropriate. However, the justification for searching each location or each person without prior judicial approval should be set out separately. If there is no thread of common justification relating to the searches, separate reports would be more appropriate.
52. Where a single search is carried out by several officers, a single report to the 'appointed person' would be appropriate. Such a situation may arise as the result of a decision by one officer that prior judicial approval is not practicable, and other officers are asked to assist because of the size of the search. In such cases the officer who took the decision to proceed should make the report. It is less likely that several different officers working on an investigation will have come to separate independent decisions about carrying out a search. If that were the case, then each officer should make their own report. If there were separate justifications, because of different strands of investigation carried out by different officers, then those justifications should be set out separately in the report or reports.
53. The written report should be submitted to the 'appointed person' at:

OCB.enquiries@justice-ni.gov.uk

Where it is not possible to send reports via email, please post reports to:

The Appointed Person for Northern Ireland
c/o Organised Crime Branch
Department of Justice
Block B, Castle Buildings
Stormont Estate
BELFAST

54. Written reports should be returned using the standardised reporting template issued by the Home Office. All written reports should be submitted as soon as is reasonably practical and, in any event, no later than 14 days following the exercise of the power.
55. Following submission of the written report, the relevant officer should co-operate, facilitate and assist the 'appointed person', wherever possible, so that the 'appointed person' can effectively discharge their role and responsibilities.
56. Any request by the 'appointed person' for supplementary information should also be submitted by the officer within 14 days.

57. The officer and 'appointed person' should keep a copy of the report and any supplementary information in a safe and secure place in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1998.

Search of a person

58. Where the power to search a person is exercised under section 303Z21(6), the relevant officer may, so far as they think necessary or expedient for the purposes of searching for a seizable cryptoasset-related item, require the person:

- to permit a search of any article with the person; or
- to permit a search of the person.

59. A refusal to permit a search may in some instances constitute an offence (including but not limited to) wilful obstruction of an officer in the execution of a duty or exercise of a power.¹⁵ This would be a criminal matter and is not an issue for, or subject to, this Code. Officers should be aware of other legislation and codes applicable in these circumstances.

60. The relevant officer may detain the person to carry out the search but the intrusion on the person's liberty should be for no longer than is necessary, unless the person is arrested or detained under another power.

Steps prior to search of a person

61. If the relevant officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person has a seizable cryptoasset-related item concealed on their person, the relevant officer should:

- give the person their name or other identifier, such as a warrant card,
- the name and location of the office or station to which the officer is attached;
- inform the person that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that they are carrying a seizable cryptoasset-related item on their person which is likely to assist in the seizure of cryptoassets which are recoverable property or intended for use in unlawful conduct;
- give the person a clear explanation of the reasonable grounds for this suspicion;
- inform the person that they can be required to permit a search under section

303Z21 for the purposes of finding such a seizable cryptoasset-related item; and

- (where applicable) warn that failure to comply could amount to a criminal offence.

62. The relevant officer should also:

- give or show the person any document authorising the search (if applicable);
- ask the person to confirm or deny whether they have a relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item on their person;
- allow the person the opportunity to produce and hand over the relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item; and
- inform the person of their entitlement to a copy of the record of the search.

63. These steps do not necessarily have to be followed in the above order. The officer will have flexibility depending on the circumstances of an individual case, but all of the steps should be undertaken prior to the search.

64. Relevant officers not in uniform should show their warrant cards or other suitable form of identification.

65. If the person to be searched does not appear to understand what is being said or the officer has doubts as to the person's ability to speak and/or understand English, or that the person is deaf or has difficulty with hearing or speaking, the officer should take reasonable steps to ensure that the person understands. Where desirable and practicable someone who can act as an interpreter should be identified. If no such person can be identified, the search may not proceed if the officer cannot determine whether the person understands. In all cases, the officer should record any difficulties encountered and the reasons for proceeding with any search or for abandoning one.

Conduct of searches – persons

66. The power to search a person should be used fairly, courteously, responsibly, respectfully and without discrimination against the person concerned. Every reasonable effort should be made to minimise the embarrassment that a person being searched may experience. The person should be searched by a person of the same sex unless the contrary has been specifically agreed by the person to be searched. This agreement should be obtained in writing. The co-operation of the person to be searched should be sought in every case, even if the person initially objects to the search. A forcible search may be made only if it has been established that the person is unwilling to co-operate. If the relevant officer believes they will be in danger undertaking the search, they should take appropriate precautions.

67. A relevant officer who has reasonable grounds for suspicion may detain the person only for so long as is necessary to carry out the search.¹⁶ Before carrying out the search the officer may ask questions about the person's behaviour or presence in circumstances which gave rise to the suspicion.
68. As a result of questioning the detained person, the reasonable grounds for suspicion necessary to detain that person may be confirmed or, because of a satisfactory explanation, be eliminated. However, reasonable grounds for suspicion cannot be founded retrospectively, the suspicion should exist prior to the questioning.
69. If, as a result of questioning before a search, or other circumstances come to the attention of the relevant officer, there ceases to be reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person is carrying relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item that is intended for use in unlawful conduct, no search of the person may take place.
70. In the absence of any other lawful power to detain, the person in such circumstances is free to leave and should be so informed. There is no power to detain a person under POCA so that grounds can be identified for a search. If reasonable grounds for suspicion emerge during an encounter with a person, the relevant officer may search the person, even though no grounds existed when the encounter began. If a relevant officer detains someone for the purpose of a search, they should inform the person as soon as the detention begins.
71. The length of time for which a person may be detained should be only for so long as is necessary for the exercise of the search.¹⁷ The thoroughness and extent of a search will depend on the type and amount of relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item that is suspected of being carried. If the person is being detained under some other power, this aspect of the Code may not apply to that.
72. A person may be searched only to the extent necessary to achieve the object of the search.¹⁸ A search may not continue once the relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item has been found and no search may continue once the relevant officer is satisfied that the relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item is not on the person. This does not prevent a further search, with prior approval if practical, if new information comes to light justifying such a search.
73. This search power under section 303Z21 does not extend to requiring a person to undergo an intimate search or strip search. An intimate search is one involving a physical (and not just a visual) examination of a person's body orifices. A strip search is any search that is not an intimate search but involves the removal of an article of clothing that is being worn (wholly or partly) on the trunk; and is being so worn either next to the skin or next to an article of underwear.
74. If a search reveals an item reasonably suspected of being or containing a relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item, but this is in an article of clothing being worn on the trunk and next to the skin or next to an article of underwear which is next to the skin (for example USB stick) the relevant officer can only invite the person to remove it. If the person refuses, there is no power to force the person to remove it.

75. A person should not be asked to remove any article of clothing in public other than an outer coat, jacket or gloves. A search in public of a person's clothing that has not been removed should be restricted to a superficial examination of outer garments. This does not, however, prevent a relevant officer from placing their hand inside the pockets of the outer clothing, or feeling round the inside of collars, socks and shoes if this is reasonable in the circumstances. Subject to the restrictions on the removal of headgear, a person's hair may also be searched in public. Particular sensitivity should be exercised where the person being searched is wearing items of clothing which the person says, or the relevant officer believes, are of religious significance.
76. If, on reasonable grounds it is considered necessary to conduct a more thorough search this should be undertaken out of the view of the public.
77. Any search involving the removal of more than an outer coat, jacket, gloves, headgear or footwear may only be conducted by an officer of the same sex as the person searched. The search may not be made in the presence of anyone of the opposite sex unless the person being searched specifically agrees. This agreement should be obtained in writing.
78. If the officer discovers a relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item during a search they should give the person who has possession of it an opportunity to provide an explanation for its ownership, origins, purpose and destination. If, in a particular case, the questioning covers whether the person has committed an offence, it is likely to constitute questioning outside the scope of this Code that requires a caution.

Recording requirements – searches of a person

79. A relevant officer who has carried out a search under section 303Z21 should make a written record of the search at the time, unless there are exceptional circumstances that could make this impractical. If such a written record is not made at the time then the relevant officer should do so as soon as is reasonably practical thereafter and also set out the reasons for the delay in making the written record. There may be situations in which it is not practical to obtain all the information necessary to complete a written record, but the relevant officer should make every reasonable effort to do so and, if necessary complete a partial record.
80. The following information should always be included in the search record even if the person does not wish to provide any personal details:
 - the name, address and date of birth of the person searched, (if provided) and, in appropriate cases, their estimated height, weight, build, clothing and distinguishing features;

- ethnic background (if provided);
- the date, time, duration and place that the person was first detained;
- the date, time and place the person was searched (if different);
- the names and details of any witnesses;
- the grounds for conducting the search;
- whether the prior approval of a judicial officer or senior officer was obtained. If a search is conducted without prior judicial approval, the reason for not obtaining such approval;
- the outcome of the search (for example seizure of a seizable cryptoasset-related item, no further action);
- a list/description of the seized cryptoasset-related item (if any), preferably signed by the person;
- any explanation given by the person as to the ownership, origins, purpose and destination of the seizable cryptoasset-related item found;
- details of any damage to property or injury to person caused;
- the identity of the officer or other identifier and others present; and
- any other relevant information.

81. For the purposes of completing the search record, there is no requirement to record the name, address and date of birth of the person searched or the person in charge of a vehicle which is searched. The person is under no obligation to provide this information and they should not be asked to provide it for the purpose of completing this record.

82. A record is required for each person searched. The record of the grounds for making a search should explain, with sufficient detail, the reasonable grounds for suspecting the person concerned was carrying a seizable cryptoasset-related item by reference to the person's behaviour and/or other circumstances. If a person is detained with a view to performing a search, but the search is not carried out due to the reasonable grounds for suspicion being eliminated as a result of speaking to any person, a record should still be made.

83. A copy of any written record made at the time should be given immediately to the person who has been searched unless it is impractical to do so or would jeopardise a wider ongoing operation or investigation. If a record is not made at the time, the person should be told of the reasons and also how they can apply for a copy of the record once it is made. The relevant officer should ask for the name, address and date of birth of the person searched, but there is no obligation on a person to provide these details and no power of detention if the person is unwilling to do so.

84. When a relevant officer makes a record of the search electronically and is unable to produce a copy of the form at the time of the search, the relevant officer should explain how the person can obtain a full copy of the record of the search and give the person a receipt which contains:
- a unique reference number and guidance on how to obtain a full copy of the report;
 - the name of the officer who carried out the search; and
 - the power used to search them.
85. In the case of searches undertaken by constables the record of the search should be made, copied or referred to in the search register. In the case of searches undertaken by other officers the record of the search should be maintained in a suitable form, i.e. the record should be easily accessible, retrievable and subject to reasonable rules for storage, in particular in relation to the length of time before the record is destroyed.
86. In order to promote public confidence in the use of the powers, bodies using these powers should make the records available (anonymised as necessary) to be scrutinised by representatives of the community, and to explain the use of the powers at a local level in response to a reasonable request.

Search of private premises (including vehicles located on those premises)

87. No right of entry is conferred by section 303Z21 in order to search private premises for a seizable cryptoasset-related item. A relevant officer should already be lawfully on the premises and, unless it was not practical to obtain it, should have prior approval to conduct the search under section 303Z23. This could include a search of premises undertaken with the consent of a person entitled to grant entry to the premises. It could also include a search carried out where a relevant officer has exercised a power of entry conferred by a search warrant or power of entry conferred under some other legislation.
88. A refusal to allow a search of premises may in some instances constitute an offence (including but not limited to) wilful obstruction of an officer in the execution of a duty and exercise of a power.¹⁹ This would be a criminal offence and is not an issue for, or subject to, this Code. Officers should be aware of other legislation and codes applicable in these circumstances.

¹⁹ See section 66 Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 (in relation to constables) and section 453A of the proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (in relation to AFIs).

89. The term “premises” has the same meaning as in section 25 of the Police and Criminal Evidence (NI) Order 1989. This includes any place and, in particular, would include any vehicle located on the premises, but note that there is a separate power under section 303Z21(3) providing a power to search vehicles where the vehicle is not situated on private premises.
90. If the officer proposes to search premises with the consent of a person who is entitled to grant entry to the premises, the consent should be secured in writing before the search takes place. It is for the relevant officer to make any necessary enquiries in order to be satisfied that the person is in a position to give consent. The relevant officer should record their enquiries, together with any responses, in writing.
91. Before seeking consent the relevant officer in charge of the search should explain to the person the purpose of the proposed search and its extent. This information should be as specific as possible. The person concerned should be clearly informed and should clearly understand that they are not obliged to give consent and that any consent given can be withdrawn at any time, including before the search starts or while it is underway. The relevant officer should record what information they provided to the person, together with any responses, in writing.
92. Before undertaking a search the relevant officer should make reasonable enquiries to:
 - establish if anything is known about the likely owner(s) or occupier(s) of the premises or someone else entitled to grant entry and the nature of the premises themselves;
 - establish if the premises have been searched previously and when this occurred; and
 - obtain any other relevant information.
93. A relevant officer cannot enter and search premises or continue to search premises if they entered with consent (and not under any other power) and that consent was given under duress or misrepresentation, is withdrawn, or it becomes known that the person who gave consent was not actually in a position to do so. If the search ends because of those reasons, the relevant officer should record this in writing.

Steps prior to search of premises

94. If the relevant officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a seizable cryptoasset-related item is on the premises, the officer should take the following steps:
 - give the person who is entitled to grant entry to the premises their name or other identifier, such as a warrant card,

- the name and location of the office or station to which the officer is attached;
- inform the person that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that the premises contains a seizable cryptoasset-related item which is likely to assist in the seizure of cryptoassets which are recoverable property or intended for use in unlawful conduct;
- give a clear explanation of the reasonable grounds for suspicion;
- inform the person of the power to search the premises under section 303Z21 for the purposes of finding such a seizable cryptoasset-related item and (where applicable) warn that failure to comply could amount to a criminal offence.

95. The relevant officer should:

- give or show the person any document authorising the search (if applicable);
- ask the person to confirm or deny whether there is a seizable cryptoasset-related item on the premises which is likely to assist in the seizure of cryptoassets which are recoverable property or intended by any purpose for use in unlawful conduct;
- allow the person the opportunity to produce and hand over the relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item; and
- inform the person of their entitlement to a copy of the record of the search.

96. The relevant officer should ideally provide this information to the person who gave consent to entry to the premises searched, or if consent was not required, to the person in charge of the premises searched, being the owner or occupier as appropriate.

97. These steps do not necessarily have to be followed in the order presented. The officer will have flexibility depending on the circumstances of an individual case, but all of the steps should be undertaken prior to the search of the premises.

98. Relevant officers not in uniform should show their warrant cards or other suitable form of identification.

99. If the person to be searched does not appear to understand what is being said or the officer has doubts as to their ability to speak and/or understand English, or to hear and/or speak, then the officer should take reasonable steps to ensure that the person understands. Where desirable and practical someone who can act as an interpreter should be identified. If no such person can be identified, the search may not proceed if the officer cannot determine whether the person understands. In all cases, the relevant officer should record any difficulties encountered and the reasons for proceeding with any search or for abandoning one.

Conduct of searches – premises

100. A search should be made at a reasonable hour, for example, in the case of domestic premises, outside of normal sleeping hours and in the case of business premises during normal business hours, unless this might frustrate the purpose of the search. If a search takes place at an unreasonable hour, the officer should record their reasons for doing so formally in writing.
101. A person is not required to be cautioned prior to being asked questions that are necessary solely for the purpose of furthering the proper and effective conduct of a search. Examples would include questions to discover who is the owner, occupier or person entitled to grant access to specified premises, to find a key to open a locked drawer or cupboard, or to otherwise seek co-operation during a search or to determine whether a cryptoasset-related item is liable to be seized.
102. Premises may be searched only to the extent necessary to achieve the object of the search. A search may not continue once the relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item has been found and no search may continue once the officer in charge of the search is satisfied that the relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item is not on the premises. This does not prevent a further search, with prior approval if practical, if new information comes to light justifying such a search.
103. Searches should be conducted with due consideration for the premises and privacy of the owner or occupier and with no more disturbance than is necessary.
104. The person should be asked whether they would like a friend, neighbour or other person to witness the search. However a search need not be unreasonably delayed for this purpose (unless the relevant officer is relying on the person's consent to conduct the search, in which case the person is entitled to refuse consent until a friend, neighbour or other person arrives to witness the search). The person nominated should be allowed to witness the search unless the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the presence of the person asked for would significantly hinder the search, any connected investigation or endanger other officers or people.
105. A record of the action taken, including the grounds for refusing a request, should be made on the premises search record. This requirement also relates to business and commercial premises if practical, as well as private addresses.

Leaving the premises

106. The relevant officer should, before leaving the premises, be satisfied that they are secure either by arranging for the owner or occupier or person entitled to grant access or their agent to be present or by any other appropriate means.

Recording requirements – search of premises

107. A relevant officer who has carried out a search under section 303Z21 should make a written record of the search at the time, unless there are exceptional circumstances that could make this impractical. If such a written record is not made at the time then the relevant officer should do so as soon as is reasonably practical thereafter and also set out the reasons for the delay in making the written record. There may be situations in which it is not practical to obtain all the information necessary to complete a written record, but the officer should make every reasonable effort to do so and, if necessary complete a partial record.
108. For the purposes of completing the search record, there is no requirement to record the name, address and date of birth of the person searched or the person in charge of a vehicle which is searched. The person is under no obligation to provide this information and they should not be asked to provide it for the purpose of completing this record.
109. The following information should always be included in the search record:
- the address of the premises searched, and if relevant and possible, the part of those premises searched (where a vehicle is searched because it is on the premises, the location of the vehicle);
 - the date, time and duration of the search;
 - the name of the relevant officer and the names of any other persons involved in the search;
 - the grounds for conducting the search;
 - the prior approval of a judicial officer or senior officer. If a search is conducted without prior judicial approval, the reason for not obtaining such approval;
 - the names and dates of birth of any people on the premises if they are known;
 - if appropriate, the written consent to undertake the search together with what information was given to the person about the search and their responses;
 - the name and details of any witness;
 - any grounds for refusing the person's request to have someone present during the search (if the consent of the person is not the basis for conducting the search);
 - any explanation given by the person as to the ownership, origins, purpose and destination of any relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item found;

confirmation that the premises were left secure and by what means;

- details of any damage to property or injury to persons caused during the search and the circumstances in which it was caused;
- the outcome of the search (for example, seizure of a seizable cryptoasset-related item, no further action);
- a list/description of a seized cryptoasset-related item (if any) preferably signed by the person; and
- any other relevant information.

110. When a relevant officer makes a record of the search electronically and is unable to produce a copy of the form at the time of the search, the officer should explain how the person can obtain a full copy of the record of the search and give the person a receipt which contains:

- a unique reference number and guidance on how to obtain a full copy of the report;
- the name of the officer who carried out the search; and
- the power used to search the premises.

111. Unless it is impractical to do so or it would jeopardise a wider ongoing operation or investigation, a copy of a record of the grounds for making the search should be given immediately to the person who gave consent to entry to the premises searched, or if consent was not required to the person in charge of the premises searched, being the owner or occupier as appropriate. If a record is not made at the time the person should be informed how they can apply for a copy of the record once it is made. If the search is not carried out due to the reasonable grounds for suspicion being eliminated as a result of speaking to any person, a record should still be made.

112. In the case of searches undertaken by constables the record of the search should be made, copied or referred to in the search register. In the case of searches undertaken by other officers the record of the search should be maintained in a suitable form, i.e. the record should be easily accessible, retrievable and subject to reasonable rules for storage, in particular in relation to the length of time before the record is destroyed.

113. In order to promote public confidence in the use of the powers, bodies using these powers should make the records available (anonymised as required) to be scrutinised by representatives of the community, and to explain the use of the powers at a local level in response to a reasonable request.

Search of Vehicles – Section 303Z21

General

114. A relevant officer has no power to forcibly enter a vehicle. Where the officer has lawful authority to be present on private premises on which a vehicle is located and has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a vehicle contains a relevant seizable cryptoasset-related item that may be seized under section 303Z21, and it appears to the officer that the vehicle is under the control of a person who is in or in the vicinity of the vehicle, the officer may require that person to permit entry to, and a search of, the vehicle.
115. In these circumstances, the search power applies only where the vehicle is in a place to which the public has access, or is within the environs (surroundings) of a dwelling, and the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the person does not reside in that dwelling, and that the vehicle is there without the permission of the person who does reside there. Otherwise, the vehicle is considered to be on private property and the power to search premises is relevant instead (see section 303Z21(1)).
116. A refusal to permit entry to the vehicle may in some instances constitute an offence (including but not limited to) wilful obstruction of an officer in the execution of a duty or exercise of a power.²⁰ This would be a criminal offence and is not an issue for, or subject to, this Code. Relevant officers should be aware of other legislation and codes applicable in these circumstances.

Steps prior to search of a vehicle

117. If the relevant officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a vehicle contains a seizable cryptoasset-related item, the officer should take the following steps:
- the relevant officer should give the person in control of the vehicle their name or other identifier, such as a warrant card;
 - the person should be given the name and location of the office or station to which the officer is attached;
 - the person should be informed that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that the vehicle contains a seizable cryptoasset-related item which is intended by for use in unlawful conduct;
 - the person should be given a clear explanation of the grounds for suspecting that the vehicle contains a seizable cryptoasset-related item;
 - the person should be given a clear explanation of the grounds for ²⁰ See section 66 Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 (in relation to constables) and section 453A of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (in relation to AFIs).

reasonable suspicion that the cryptoasset which the item would be used to seize is recoverable property or is intended for use in unlawful conduct;

- the person should be informed that the vehicle can be searched under section 303Z21 for the purposes of finding such a seizable cryptoasset-related item and (where applicable) warned that failure to comply could amount to a criminal offence; and
- the relevant officer should give or show the person any document authorising the search (if applicable).

118. The relevant officer should ask the person to confirm or deny whether there is a seizable cryptoasset-related item in the vehicle.
119. The relevant officer should allow the person the opportunity to produce and hand over any seizable cryptoasset-related item; and the officer should inform the person in control of the vehicle of their entitlement to a copy of the record of the search.
120. These steps do not necessarily have to be followed in the order presented. The officer will have flexibility depending on the circumstances of an individual case, but all the steps should be undertaken prior to the search of the vehicle.
121. Relevant officers not in uniform should show their warrant cards or other suitable form of identification.
122. If the person to be searched does not appear to understand what is being said or the officer has doubts as to their ability to speak and/or understand English, or to hear and/or speak, then the relevant officer should take reasonable steps to ensure that the person understands. Where desirable and practical someone who can act as an interpreter should be identified. If no such person can be identified, the search may not proceed if the officer cannot determine whether the person understands. In all cases, the relevant officer should record any difficulties encountered and the reasons for proceeding with any search of for abandoning one.

Conduct of searches – vehicles

123. Vehicles may be searched only to the extent necessary to achieve the object of the search.²¹ A search may not continue once the object of the search has been found and no search may continue once the relevant officer is satisfied that a seizable cryptoasset-related item is not in the vehicle. This does not prevent a further search, with prior approval if practicable, if new information come to light justifying such a search.
124. Searches should be conducted with due consideration for the vehicle and the person in control of it. Searches should be conducted with no more disturbance than is necessary. The relevant officer should, before leaving the vehicle, be satisfied that it is secure by arranging for the person in control of the vehicle to be present or by any other appropriate means.

Recording requirements – search of vehicles

125. A relevant officer should make a written record of the search, at the time of the search, unless there are exceptional circumstances that could make this impractical. If such a written record is not made at the time then the officer should do so as soon as is reasonably practical thereafter and also set out the reasons for the delay in making the written record. There may be situations in which it is not practical to obtain all the information necessary to complete a written record, but the officer should make every reasonable effort to do so and, if necessary, complete a partial record.
126. For the purposes of completing the search record, there is no requirement to record the name, address and date of birth of the person searched or the person in charge of a vehicle which is searched. The person is under no obligation to provide this information and they should not be asked to provide it for the purpose of completing this record. The following information should always be included in the search record even if the person does not wish to provide any personal details:
- the location of the vehicle searched;
 - the vehicle registration number;
 - the date, time and duration of the search;
 - the name of the relevant officer and the names of any other persons involved in the search;
 - the grounds for conducting the search;
 - the prior approval of a judicial officer or senior officer. If a search is conducted without prior judicial approval, the reason for not obtaining such approval;
 - the names and dates of birth of any person(s) in control of the vehicle if they are known;
 - the names and details of any witnesses;
 - if appropriate, the written consent to undertake the search together with what information was given to the person(s) in control of the vehicle and their responses;
 - details of any damage to property or injury to person(s) caused during the search and the circumstances in which it was caused;

- the outcome of the search (for example, seizure of a seizable cryptoasset-related item, no further action);
 - a list/description of the seized cryptoasset-related item (if any) preferably signed by the person(s) in control of the vehicle;
 - any explanation given by the person(s) in control of the vehicle as to the ownership, origins, purpose and destination of any seizable cryptoasset-related item found;
 - confirmation that the vehicle was left secured and by what means; and
 - any other relevant information.
127. When a relevant officer makes a record of the search electronically and is unable to produce a copy of the form at the time of the search, the relevant officer should explain how the person can obtain a full copy of the record of the search and give the person a receipt which contains:
- a unique reference number and guidance on how to obtain a full copy of the report;
 - the name of the officer who carried out the search; and
 - the power used to search the vehicle.
128. Unless it is impractical to do so or it would jeopardise a wider ongoing operation or investigation, the person(s) in control of the vehicle should be provided with a copy of the record. If a record is not made at the time the person should be told how they can apply for a copy of the record once it is made. If the search is not carried out due to the reasonable grounds for suspicion being eliminated as a result of speaking to any person, a written record should still be made.
129. In the case of searches undertaken by constables the record of the search should be made, copied or referred to in the search register. In the case of searches undertaken by other officers the record of the search should be maintained in a suitable form, i.e. the record should be easily accessible, retrievable and subject to reasonable rules for storage, in particular in relation to the length of time before the record is destroyed.
130. In order to promote public confidence in the use of the powers, bodies using these powers should make the records (anonymised as required) available to be scrutinised by representatives of the community, and to explain the use of the powers at a local level in response to a reasonable request.
